29. from the east, and . . . west, &c.—see on Mt. viii. 11, § 28, p. 220.

30. last which shall be first—see Mt. xix. 30, § 75, p. 230.

31. Herod will kill thee—Herod had before killed John the Baptist, Mt. xiv. 3—11, § 40, p. 305—He had been perplexed respecting Jesus, 'and he desired to see him,' Lu. ix. 7—9, § ib. p. 304.

32. that fox—Zep. iii. 3, 'Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves;' &c.

Behold, I cast out devils, &c.—Herod, who was desirous of a long season to see Jesus, because he had heard many things of him, 'hoped to have seen some miracle done by him,' ch. xxiii. 8, § 90, p. 447.

NOTES.

Lu. xiii. 25. I know you not, &c. See on Mt. vii. 21—3, § 19, p. 140. That is, I never approved, loved, or regarded you as my friends.—See Ps. i. 6; 1 Co. viii. 3; 2 Ti. ii. 19.

[26. We have eaten and drunk, &c. Many who partake of the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's supper, and live but for their own gratification, will find their outward profession only the more aggravates their shame when they are counted with the workers of iniquity, 'The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God,' Ps. ix. 17. 'It is an awful consideration, that many a man of eminent gifts, whose talents are a source of public utility, should be only as a way-mark or finger-post in the way to eternal bliss, pointing out the road to others, and yet neglecting to walk in it himself.'—A. Clarke.]

28. Weeping and gnashing of teeth. Words expressive of grief, envy, and rage, at their hopeless condition.—See next paragraph.

And you yourselves thrust out. The Jews supposed themselves the children or members of 'the kingdom of God,' to the exclusion of the Gentiles.

28, .9. See on Mt. viii. 11, .2, § 28, p. 220.

[30. There are last, &c. The first in profession; and, in the opinion of themselves and of their fellow-creatures, the first for purity and virtue, shall be last in God's esteem. The Jews, once the first and most distinguished people of God, will reject the gospel and be rejected; and nations who had then no name among the living, who were 'Lo-ammi,' Gentiles, will be brought to the knowledge of the truth, and become the first, the chief, and the most exalted people of God.—See Mt. xix. 30, § 75, p. 230; xx. 16, § 76, p. 233.—Comp. Je. iii. 11—8, ... Eze. xi. 15—20.]

31. Herod. This was Herod Antipas, a son of Herod the Great; he ruled over Galilee and Perea.—See on Mt. xiv. 1, § 40, p. 304.

Will kill thee. θέλει σε ἀποκτεῖναι, 'intends,' or rather, 'is determined to kill thee.'

32. Go ye, and tell that fox. The fox is an emblem of cunning, slyness, and of artful mischief. But let us carefully distinguish between those things wherein Christ is our pattern, and those which are peculiar to his office. His extraordinary office justified him in

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Let us have fellowship with Christ now, if we desire to be united with him in glory hereafter.

[Lu. xiii. 26, .7. It is not our participation of Christian privileges, such as the Lord's supper, and the very teaching of Christ, which marks men out as being of the saved; but it is their being saved from their sins, and their ceasing to be workers of iniquity. If they who can plead that Christ has taught in their streets, are to be thrust out, what must become of those who refuse him even that privilege?]

28 ver. When we think of the number of the redeemed, we are not to limit our view to our own sect, or land, or nation, or time. The cause of God is one from the beginning, and extends to every clime. And all, from the patriarchs downward, who have feared God, and wrought righteousness, will be found one in the kingdom of God.

28, .9 ver. It is not natural descent, any more than being given religious privileges, which will save us. Many of the children of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, will be thrust out; and multitudes who counted not their descent from the fathers, and had as little trust in their being made sons of God by the will of man, are, from all the ends of the earth, to be gathered together into glory.]

30 ver. Let us not boast of being the first in privi-

* 'It is probable that Jesus was at this very time in Galilee; and it is certain that he must have been somewhere in Herod's dominions. It must be evident, likewise, that the effort which he was now making, and still should make, to gather the children of Jerusalem together, was the last effort of the kind; upon the failure of which, this house would be left unto them desolate.'—Greswell, Vol. II. Diss. xxxi. p. 533.

HOW MUCH WISER ARE THEY WHO ENTER WHILE THE DOOR IS YET OPEN, THAN THOSE WHO DELAY TILL IT IS SHUT, WHEN ALL THEIR KNOCKING WILL BE IN VAIN.

LUKE xiii. 33—.5.

fox, Behold, I-cast-out devils, and I-do cures ιασεις επιτελω to-day and to-morrow, and 33 the third day I-shall-be-perfected τελειουμαι. Nevertheless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following for it-can-not-be that-a-prophet perish out of Jeru-34 salem. O-Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that-are-sent unto thee; how-often would-I have-gathered-thy children-together, as a-hen doth 35 gather her brood under her wings, and ye-would not! Behold, your house is-left unto-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiii. 32—5. to-day and to-morrow—Jesus intimates that if Herod was to have his desire as above, he must come now; if he stayed away beyond the third day, he would be too late, for then he would have finished his working, and have resigned himself to his sufferings. Herod did soon see Jesus, but beyond the time appointed—he was accordingly disappointed, ch. xxiii. 9, § 90, 'Then he questioned with him in many words; but he [Jesus] answered him nothing.'—Herod's case was thus in some measure illustrative of the parable, ver. 25, p. 178.

33. Nevertheless I must walk, &c.—The three days, during which Jesus might have been seen working miracles, as ver. 32, supra, were to be also three days spent in journeying to Jerusalem; so that if Herod would have what he desired, he must follow Jesus—see on ver. 32, supra.

34. gathered thy children, &c.—As prophesied by Caiaphas, the high priest, Jno. xi. 49—52, § 58, pp. 132, 3, Jesus laid down his life, that he might gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad; who had been lost as a people, but were to be found 'sons of the living God,' Ho. i. 10—'The twelve tribes . . . scattered abroad,' Ja. i. 1—unto whom the seal of the living God was more especially sent, Rev. vii. 2—4—and who are at length to be seen standing with the Lamb upon the mount Sion, having his Father's name written in their foreheads, xiv. 1.

ye would not!—With regard to their own case, Jesus had testified, 'Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life,' Jno. v. 40, § 23—and as to their brethren, 'all the house of Israel wholly,' so far from desiring that for which Jesus was about to lay down his life, the inhabitants of Jerusalem had said unto them, 'Get you far from the Lord: unto us is this land given in possession,' Eze. xi. 15—The Lord's will, however, was very different from theirs; he meant to gather the outcasts unto himself, into 'a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come,' ver. 16—When for this purpose the Lord sent forth his word, as Mt. xxviii. 19, 20, § 86, ... the Jews would, if possible, have prevented the word of reconciliation from being preached to the outcasts, 1 Th. ii. 16, 'Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'—Nay, even those Jews who were willing to receive salvation for themselves, had, with very great difficulty, their hearts enlarged to the purpose of God, with regard to the Gentiles: Ac. xi. 19, 'they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.'—Few indeed could enter into the spirit of the inquiry made by the Lord, in the ears of Jerusalem, Je. xiii. 20, 21, 'where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock? . . . I have seen thine adulteries, and thy neighings, the lewdness of thy whoredom, and thine abominations on the hills in the fields. Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! wilt thou not be made clean? when shall it once be?'

NOTES.

using that severity of language, when speaking of wicked princes and corrupt teachers, to which we have no call. Jesus here speaks as a prophet; and indeed this is what he calls himself when speaking of what was about to befal him at Jerusalem.—Wesley.

[Lu. xiii. 32. To-day and to-morrow, and the third day. 'A Hebrew form of expression, which both in this and in the next verse, does not denote three days, but an indefinite period of time. Instances of similar forms of expression occur in Ge. xxxi. 2; Ex. iv. 10; De. xix. 6; Jos. iii. 4; 1 Sa. xix. 7; 1 Chr. xi. 2; Ho. vi. 2.'—Lonsdale. 'There may be an allusion in this number of days to the three years of our Lord's personal ministry.'—Greswell.]—But see SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

33. Cannot . . . . perish out of Jerusalem. See on Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40.

34. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, &c. 'This pathetic apostrophe was produced by the prospect of approaching death. The effort which he was now making, and should still make, to gather the children of Jerusalem together, was the last effort of the kind; upon the failure of which, their house should be left unto them desolate. Besides which, it is declared that they should not see him again until the time should come when they should say, Blessed is he who is coming in the name of the Lord; a declaration which a comparison with Mt. xxiii. 39, proves not to have been fulfilled merely when Jesus entered Jerusalem in triumph, xxi. 9, § 82, p. 264, but to belong to some period much later even than that. As now delivered, it was clearly prophetically delivered; and if this present occasion of the journeyings to Jerusalem was the last occasion of all, the prolepsis itself is naturally accounted for. The whole journey . . . . from first to last, was directed to a single purpose, that of producing by a final effort the conversion and repentance of the Jews; at the end of which, if it failed, ... might be said with great propriety, Ye shall see me no more again, as ye have seen me heretofore, until ye shall be prepared to say, Blessed is he who is coming in the name of the Lord.'—Greswell.

['After the triumphal entry into Jerusalem had taken place, we find our Lord still, as in Mt. xxiii. 39, pointing to the words of Ps. cxviii. 26, as being yet to be fulfilled, which shall be the second and glorious appearing of our great High Priest, who is now for us present into the heavens.'—Greswell.—See on Mt. xxiii. 37, § 85.]

As a hen doth gather her brood, &c. In the east, birds of prey are continually on the wing; hence it is difficult to rear chickens, because at every moment they are in danger of being pounced on and carried off. Hence, the eye of the mother is continually looking up, to watch the foes, and no sooner does she see them skimming along, than she gives a scream, and the brood, for protection, run under her wings.—And see on Mt. xxiii. 37—9, § 85, p. 320.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

lege, but see that we be not the last on account of our gross misimprovement of the unparalleled means of grace that are given us to enjoy.

[Lu. xiii. 32. It is not he who prepares external means of defence, who is the city's true defender. One Herod might build the temple, and another surround Jerusalem with walls that seemed to be impregnable, yet the entire race of Herods might well be designated foxes, in reference to the children of Jerusalem; to whom they proved as crafty beasts of prey, decoying them into destruction; occupying their minds with the empty forms of religion in place of the reality, and leading them to trust in mere creature power, in place of seeking deliverance and rest under the shadow of the God of Israel.]

32, 3 ver. The three days that remained of Jesus' journeying to Jerusalem, were like those which preceded, days in which he went about doing good, giving us, to the last, an example that we should follow his steps.

[Herod was appointed three days in which he might witness the miracles of Christ. He seems to have thought that he might, at his own convenience, procure some notable thing to be done by Jesus; but like those who stay away till the door is shut, he came too late. Herod could command the murderer's arm, but not the finger of God.]

34 ver. He who would, and who only could defend Jerusalem, wept over it, denouncing its crimes, and pronouncing its doom. No strength of walls, not even the tears of the Redeemer, could save Jerusalem as remaining unrepentant and unbelieving you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

LUKE xiii. 35.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiii 35 desolate—as had been threatened in the law, Le. xxvi. 31, 'And I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will not smell the savour of your sweet odours.'—And by the prophets, Eze. vii. 22, 'My face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place: for the robbers shall enter into it, and defile it.'—Mi. iii. 10—2—

'They build up Zion with blood,
And Jerusalem with iniquity.
11, The heads thereof judge for reward,
And the priests thereof teach for hire,
And the prophets thereof divine for money:
Yet will they lean upon the LORD,
And say, Is not the LORD among us?
None evil can come upon us.
12, Therefore shall Zion for your sake be ploughed
And Jerusalem shall become heaps, [as a field,
And the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest.'

Ye shall not see, &c.—alluding to the name Jerusalem, 'the seeing of peace'—I had now nothing but the name, having refused to see Jesus as her Peace, He. ii. 3, 9, 17—Eph. ii. 14—7, 'For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition . . . 15, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; 16, and that he might reconcile both unto God,' &c.—And see the better temple, which is now being built together 'for an habitation of God through the Spirit,' 18—22.

Blessed is he that cometh, &c.—Ps. cxviii. 26—these words were afterwards made use of by the multitudes at his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, Mt. xxi. 9, § 82, p. 284—but after that event he repeats the saying, xxiii. 39, § 85, p. 321, which see.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

The will of man must be brought into accordance with the will of God, in order to man's enjoyment of salvation.

The abuse of the greatest favours indicates that the heaviest doom is approaching.

[Lu. xiii. 35. Let those who would domineer in the house of God, be warned by the case of the Jews. They had their wish; that house was made theirs; but in having the house without the Inhabitant, it was indeed left to them desolate, even as the nominal church would be, if without the Spirit of the living God. Let church rulers beware of seeking to make the church their own; lest by their success it cease to be the dwelling-place of the Most High, and thus come to be worse than valueless. Jerusalem can never become worthy of its name, until it receive the messengers of God in peace.]

When the Jews in Jerusalem, in place of cursing the Nazarene, are seen welcoming him that cometh in the name of the Lord, they are not far from the termination of their long time of trouble, which cannot end, but by their seeing and acknowledging HIM WHO IS OUR PEACE.

ADDENDA.

COMPARISON OF LUKE xiii. 23—35, WITH PORTIONS OF OUR LORD'S DISCOURSES AS GIVEN BY MATTHEW.

	LUKE xiii.	MATT. vii.
22	And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.
23	Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them,
24	Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.	Enter ye in at the strait gate: 13 because strait is the gate, 14
25	When once the Master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us: and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:	for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, 21 shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.
26	then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.	Many will say to me in that day, 22 Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?
27	But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are: depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.	And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.
28	There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets,	And I say unto you, viii. 11 That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.
29	And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.	But the children of the kingdom 12 shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
30	And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.	But many that are first shall be last; xix. 30 and the last shall be first.
	(☞ Ver. 31—3, see p. 178, supra
31	O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!	O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, xxiii. 37 thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!
35	Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.	Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. 38 For I say unto you, 39 Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

THOU WILT KEEP HIM IN PERFECT PEACE, WHOSE MIND IS STAYED ON THEE: BECAUSE HE TRUSTETH IN THEE.—Isa. xxvi. 3.

LORD, THOU WILT ORDAIN PEACE FOR US: FOR THOU ALSO HAST WROUGHT ALL OUR WORKS IN US.—Isa. xxvi. 12.

SECTION 67.—(G. 38—40.)—[Lesson 62.]—JESUS, WHILE EATING BREAD ON THE SABBATH DAY IN THE HOUSE OF A CERTAIN RULER, A PHARISEE, HEALS A MAN OF THE DROPSY. AFTER THIS, HE GIVES SUITABLE ADVICE TO THE GUESTS, AND ALSO TO HIS HOST; AND IN ANSWER TO AN OBSERVATION OF ONE OF THE GUESTS, DELIVERS A PARABLE RELATING TO THE MYSTERIES OF THE KINGDOM. HE WARNS THE MULTITUDES, WHO WERE FOLLOWING HIM IN HIS JOURNEYINGS, OF THE SELF-DENIAL, FORESIGHT, AND PERSEVERANCE, NECESSARY FOR THOSE WHO WOULD BECOME HIS DISCIPLES.—Luke xiv.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xiv. 1—6. Jesus on the sabbath day goes into the house of a chief Pharisee to eat bread, and is watched;—heals a man of the dropsy, and boldly vindicates his conduct. His enemies are silent, giving him an opportunity of improving the occasion by suitable discourse.

—— 7—11. Seeing the guests choose the chief places, Jesus takes occasion to address them upon the impropriety of their conduct, advising them to take the lowest place; and not the highest, except upon invitation.

—— 12—.4. Jesus next addresses his host, telling him, that when he makes a dinner or supper, he should not invite the rich, but those who cannot recompense him; and for the kindness shewn to whom, he will be truly blessed, in being 'recompensed at the resurrection of the just.'

—— 15—24. One having said, 'Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God,' Jesus takes occasion to deliver the parable of a Great Supper: shewing how little the blessedness referred to is appreciated by the wealthy; and how, after the poor of the people have been invited, the gospel is sent unto Gentiles, by whom the house is to be filled, to the rejection of those who were first invited.

Lu. xiv. 25—.7. Great multitudes go with Jesus; he turns, and tells them of the only terms upon which any can become his disciple: he must deny himself to all that is dear to him, and be prepared for shame, and for suffering even unto the death.

—— 28—30. Jesus, from the case of a man who began to build and was not able to finish, shews the propriety of counting the cost, before professing to be his disciple.

—— 31, .2. He farther illustrates the same subject, from the case of a king going to make war.

—— 33. Except a man know his own poverty, so as to forsake all that he hath, he cannot be Jesus' disciple.

—— 34, .5. Under the figure of salt that has lost its savour, and which is then good for nothing but to be cast out, Jesus describes the case of those who, after having made profession of godliness, cease to manifest the power of the truth.

No. 67.—(G. 38.)—Jesus, while eating bread on the sabbath day in the house of a certain ruler, a Pharisee, heals a man of the dropsy.—Luke xiv. 1—6.

1 And it-came-to-pass, as he went into the-house of-one of-the chief Pharisees to-eat
2 bread on-the-sabbath-day, that they watched ησαν παρατηρουμενοι him. And, behold, 3 there-was a-certain man before him which-had-the-dropsy. And Jesus answering spake 4 unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is-it-lawful to-heal on-the sabbath-day? And they held-their-peace. And he-took επιλαβομενος him, and-healed him, and let-him-go;
5 and answered them, saying, Which of-you shall have an-ass or an-ox fallen into a-pit, 6 and will-'not straightway'-pull-'him'-out on the sabbath day? And they-could not answer-'him'-again to these-things.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiv. 1. watched him—see Is. xxix. 20, .1, and on Lu. vi. 7. § 25, p. 195, 'the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him.'

3. Is it lawful, &c.—Jesus here asks the question which was put to himself when about to heal the man with the withered hand, Mt. xii. 10, § ib., p. 196, and which he then also put in another form, saying, ch. vi. 9, ib., 'Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?'

4. held their peace—so upon the occasion referred to, supra—see Mk. iii. 4, ib.

took him, and healed him, &c.—In the former case, he spake and it was done, Lu. vi. 10, § ib. p. 197.

5. an ass or an ox—In the case of the withered hand, the allusion was to a sheep—see Mt. xii. 11, .2—The law required that a brother's ass or ox fallen down by the way should be helped up again, De. xxii. 4—nay, even one belonging to an enemy, Ex. xxiii. 5, 'If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.'—When about to cure the woman that had an infirmity eighteen years, Jesus said, 'Doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass,' &c., Lu. xiii. 15—.7, § 65, pp. 175, .6.

6. could not answer—so ch xiii. 17, § ib., 'all his adversaries were ashamed:'

NOTES.

Lu. xiv. 1. Eat bread. 'It appears from ver. 7—16, that this was a set feast, and that our Lord, from the circumstances in which he was placed, gave various lessons and admonitions; first, to the guests in general, inculcating not only a lesson of humility, but a rule of good manners, ver. 7; next, to the host, ver. 12: and lastly, to one of the guests in particular, to whom he addressed the parable of the great supper, ver. 16.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

3. Answering spake. Spake with reference to the present occasion. This expression is often used in the gospels. It implies a reference either to something which has been done or said just before, or to something passing in the mind either of the speaker, or of those to whom he is speaking.—See Mt. xvii. 4, § 51, p. 54; xxii. 1, § 84, p. 291; xxviii. 5, § 98; Mk. ix. 38, § 52, p. 75; xi. 14, § 83, p. 275; Lu. xiii. 14, § 65, p. 175.

Is it lawful. The law did not forbid it, but Jesus gave them an opportunity to object if they pleased, that they might be without excuse afterwards.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xiv. 1. Let us beware of professing religious zeal, or of exercising hospitality, in the spirit of 'the accuser of the brethren.']

3, 4 ver. Let the followers of Christ make the Lord's day a day of deliverance for the distressed, of shewing mercy to the afflicted, as well as of receiving blessing for themselves.

5, 6 ver. Let us be at least equally ready to seek the salvation of men, as we would be to deliver from destruction the inferior animals. Let us ever be ready both to do, and to defend, the right.

6 ver. Jesus, before proceeding with his discourse, procured a quiet audience for himself, by confounding the adversaries. It is often the truest prudence boldly to maintain the cause of justice, mercy, and truth.

LET US NOT, LIKE THE PHARISEES, WATCH FOR EVIL; BUT, LIKE OUR LORD, FOR OPPORTUNITIES OF DOING GOOD.

BE THAT RULETH OVER MEN MUST BE JUST, RULING IN THE FEAR OF GOD.—2 Sam. xxiii. 3.

(G. 39.)—Jesus gives suitable advice to the guests, and also to his host; and in answer to an observation of one of the guests, delivers a parable relating to the mysteries of the kingdom.—Luke xiv. 7—24.

7 And he-put-forth a-parable to those which-were-bidden, when-he-marked επεχων how 8 they-chose-out the chief-rooms; saying unto them, When thou-art-bidden of any man to a-wedding, sit-not-down in the highest-room; lest a-more-honourable-man than-9 thou be bidden of him; and he that-bade thee and him come and-say to-thee, Give this-10 man place; and thou-begin with shame to-take the lowest room. But when thou-artbidden, go and-sit-down in the lowest room; that when he that-bade thee cometh, he-may-say unto-thee, Friend, go-up προσαναβηθι higher ανωτερον: then shalt-thou-have 11 worship in-the-presence of-them that-sit-at-meat-with thee. For whosoever exalteth himself shall-be-abased; and he that-humbleth himself shall-be-exalted.
12 Then said-he also to-him that-bade him, When thou-makest a-dinner or a-supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest 13 they also bid-thee-again, and a-recompence ανταποδομα be-made thee. But when 14 thou-makest a-feast δοχην, call the-poor, the-maimed, the-lame, the-blind: and thou-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiv. 8. sit not down in the highest.—so Pr. xxv. 6, 7, 'Put not forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men: for better it is that it be said unto thee, Come up hither; than that thou shouldest be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.'—Ph. ii. 3, 'In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.'

11. whosoever exalteth himself.—1 Sa. xv. 17, 'And Samuel said, When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel?'—Of those who seek to be at peace with God, submitting themselves to his instruction and guidance, Elihaz says, Job xxii. 29, 'When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person.'—And in Ps. xviii. 27, David, addressing the Lord, says, 'For thou wilt save the afflicted people; but wilt bring down high looks.'—Pr. xv. 33, 'The fear of the LORD is the instruction of wisdom; and before honour is humility.'—ch. xxix. 23, 'A man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit.'—Ho. xiii. 1, 'When Ephraim spake trembling, he exalted himself in Israel; but when he offended in Baal, he died.'—See Mt. xxiii. 12, § 85, p. 316; Lu. xviii. 14, § 73, p. 217.—Ja. iv. 6, 'God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.'

12. nor thy rich neighbours.—God hath said, Pr. xxii. 16, 'He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich shall surely come to want.'

lest they also, &c.—so the very thing which men naturally seek after, the Christian is to endeavour to avoid—He is to sow in time, that he may reap in eternity—see ch. xii. 33, § 63, p. 166.

13. call the poor, &c.—Ne. viii. 10, .2, 'send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared:' &c.—Job reckoned himself to be well deserving of curse, if he had eaten his morsel himself alone, and if the fatherless had not eaten thereof with him, Job xxxi. 17.

Of kindness to the poor, God himself hath given us example, Ps. lxviii. 10, 'Thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.'—Is. lv. 1, 'He that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.'—Mary sang in anticipation of Messiah's reign, Lu. i. 53, § 2, p. 12, 'He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.'—With pronouncing blessing upon the poor Jesus commenced his sermon on the mount, Mt. v. 1—3, § 19, p. 120—and his sermon in the plain, Lu. vi. 20, § 27, p. 207—and when replying to the messengers of John, he concludes by saying, Mt. xi. 5, 6, § 29, p. 223, 'The poor have the gospel preached to them. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.'

NOTES.

Lu. xiv. 7. Chief rooms. 'The highest places.' 'The principal seats.'

To take the highest place when not our due is public vanity; obstinately to refuse it when offered is another instance of the same vice, though private and concealed. Humility takes as much care to avoid the ostentation of an affected refusal, as the open seeking of a superior place.

10. Worship. 'Respect, honour, reverence.

11. Whosoever exalteth himself, &c. This is the conduct of God in his dealings with men.—See Da. iv. 30—7; 1 Sa. ii. 1—8; Lu. i. 46—55, § 2, p. 11, SCRIP. ILLUS., supra. The saying was proverbial with reference to worldly interests, but our Lord has applied it to the great concern of religion. The apostles James and Peter have strongly enforced this great lesson of their Master, Ja. iv. 10; 1 Pe. v. 5, 6.

12. Call not thy friends, &c. It is here implied that we should be sparing in entertaining those who need it not, in order that, with what is saved from needless entertainments, we may assist those who do need.

Christ by no means condemns friendly and festive intercourse among acquaintance. He himself sanctioned this by his example. But we must not make such entertainments to the neglect of the poor, the maimed, &c. On the contrary, he encourages us chiefly to devote our substance to the support of such; and if in this we are influenced by love to God and man, he assures us that great shall be our reward, Mt. xxv. 31, &c., § 86, p. 351.

13. Call the poor, &c. May allude to religious feasts made by the Jews on the sabbath.

'This was an admonition to his host, and through him to all such as the providence of God has blessed with ability, what selection to make of the objects of their hospitality, as fittest and meetest, and in the hope of what return, as most consistent with the true spirit of benevolence.'—Grotwell.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xiv. 7. Pride, no less than cunning, characterizes the opposers of Christ: but let his disciples humbly follow him in the manifestation of truth and love.]

[8—10 ver. At our meals, as well as upon every other occasion, let us seek by our conversation to glorify God and benefit our neighbour. It may not always become us to take the lead, but we may at least endeavour to prompt and encourage others to what is useful. The presence of enemies who watch for our halting, should not be allowed to prevent us from duty.]

Jesus hath done that to which he directs others. He humbled himself and took the lowest place: and is therefore highly exalted far above all. Like him, let us give an example in ourselves, of that which we require in others.

[11 ver. Let the risings of pride warn of approaching dishonour. Be humbly submissive to the will of God, in being now the servant of all.

[12 ver. In distributing that wherewith he is entrusted, let the Christian feel that he is in the hand of God, and let him give as in the view of eternity.]

LUKE xiv. 15—20.

shalt-be blessed; for they-can not recompense thee: for thou shalt-be-recompensed at the resurrection of-the just.

15 And when-one of-them that-sat-at-meat-with him heard these-things, he-said unto-16 him, Blessed is he-that shall-eat bread in the kingdom of God. Then said he unto-him, 17 A-certain man made a-great supper, and bade many: and sent his servant at supper
18 time to-say to-them that-were-bidden, Come; for all-things are now ready. And they-all with one consent απο μιας began to-make-excuse παραιτεισθαι. The first said unto-him, I-have-bought a-piece-of-ground, and I-must needs εχω αναγκην go and see it: I-19 pray thee have me excused παρητημενον. And another said, I-have-bought five yoke of-20 oxen, and I-go to-prove δοκιμασαι them: I-pray thee have me excused. And another

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiv. 14. And thou shalt be blessed; for, &c.—It is probably in allusion to such a saying as this, that Paul speaks of our Lord Jesus, 'how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive,' Ac. xx. 35.

recompensed at the resurrection—Jesus will then recompense those who have given to the poor, as if he were rewarding a favour done to himself, Mt. xxv. 34, 40, § 86, p. 352.

resurrection of the just—There is to 'be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust,' Ac. xxiv. 15—In Rev. xx. 4, the resurrection of the just is spoken of as being a thousand years before the general resurrection.

15. Blessed is he that shall eat bread—In allusion to what Jesus had just said, respecting the blessedness of being recompensed at the resurrection of the just, ver. 14, supra; and also to the circumstance of their eating bread in the Pharisee's house, ver. 1, p. 181. They might now have known the blessedness desired; for the king was present with them, instructing both the guests, ver. 7—11, and their entertainer, ver. 12—4—Jesus had before said, ch. xi. 28, § 62, p. 154, 'Blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.'—And x. 23, § 60, p. 145, 'Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see;' &c.—Rev. xix. 9, 'And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God.'

16. a great supper—Jesus here still farther improves the occasion of their sitting together at meat, and also the saying of one of the persons present—see on ver. 15, supra, and comp. Mt. xxii. 2—10—see ADDENDA, p. 186, 'The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,' &c.—and Rev. xix. 7, 'Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come,'—This feast had been the subject of ancient prophecy, Is. xxv. 6, 'In this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things,' &c.

17. sent his servant— Of 'wisdom' it is said, Pr. ix. 3, 'She hath sent forth her maidens: she crieth upon the highest places of the city, 4, Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither: as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him, 5, Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled. 6, Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding.'

Come; for all things are now ready—see ch. xvi. 16, § 69, p. 199, 'The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.'

18—20. all with one, &c.—There are here three different excuses, as there were three kinds of unprofitable ground, in the parable of the sower, Mt. xiii. 19—22, § 33, p. 254.

make excuse—Mt. xxii. 3, § 84, p. 292, 'they would not come.'—Jno. i. 11, 'He came unto his own, and his own received him not.'—v. 40, § 23, p. 180, 'Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.'

NOTES.

Lu. xiv. 14. Blessed. μακαριος, 'Happy.' See ver. 15.

At the resurrection of the just. So in Jno. v. 29, § 23. The Pharisees believed in two resurrections; one to take place at the coming of the Messiah (who would thus establish an earthly kingdom, to which the Pharisee here evidently alludes by 'the kingdom of God'); the other, the final resurrection, to be followed by a state of retribution.

15. Blessed is he that shall eat, &c. The Jews had gross and carnal notions of a splendid feast at Messiah's coming; these notions this man seemed to have imbibed. The paraphrase is, 'They are blessed indeed that shall share in the privileges and pleasures of Messiah's kingdom upon earth, and shall be admitted to all the delightful entertainments of the heavenly world at the resurrection of the just.' To eat bread, was a usual phrase for a whole meal, whether of common or delicious provisions, 2 Sa. ix. 7; xii. 17.

17. Sent his servant. From this it would seem that it was the custom to announce to those invited, the time when the feast was just ready. It is a remarkable fact, that the Chinese give three or four invitations to an entertainment before it is thought to be sincere.

To them that were bidden. Thus the Jews who had for ages been prepared to expect the kingdom of the Messiah, received notice of its actual coming by the mission of John the Baptist, and by the preaching of Christ and his apostles.

18. With one consent. απο μιας, 'Straightway,' or 'with one voice.'

Began to make excuse. One of them pleads only his own will, I go; another, a pretended necessity, I must needs go; the third, impossibility, I cannot come. All of them perish by things in themselves lawful.

A piece of ground. Rather, 'a farm,' as the original word is translated in the parallel passage, Mt. xxii. 5, § 84, p. 292.

I must needs go. The most urgent worldly affairs frequently fall out just at the time when God makes the freest offers of salvation.

19. Bought five yoke, &c. The orientals employ oxen for all agricultural labour, and the purchase of them

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xiv. 14. It is indeed blessed to meet with the reward of a grateful heart, but we have the assurance of our Lord, that it is even more blessed to give without receiving any reward whatever from man. Forgetfulness of this saying of our Lord occasions no small portion of that disappointment and weariness in well doing, which are apt to beset even those who look for a heavenly reward.

Let us ever act with a regard to the recompense at the resurrection of the just, and we shall be the better able to bear the ill return we may sometimes receive from men in the present time.

[15, 6 ver. In our use of things temporal, let us have an eye to things eternal; and for this purpose be ever ready to improve the suggestions of others, however imperfect their views, or from whatever motive presented.]

18 ver. Let us beware of following the multitude in treating with indifference the gospel invitation.

LUKE xiv. 21—.7.

21 said, I-have-married a-wife, and therefore I-can not come. So that servant came, and-shewed his lord these-things. Then the master-of-the-house being-angry said to his servant, Go-out quickly into the streets and lanes-of-the city, and bring-in hither the 22 poor, and the-maimed, and the-halt, and the-blind. And the servant said, Lord, it-is-23 done as thou-hast-commanded, and yet there-is room. And the lord said unto the servant, Go-out into the highways and hedges, and compel ἀναγκασον them to-come-in, 24 that my house may-be-filled. For I-say unto-you, That none of those men which were-bidden shall-taste of my supper.

(G. 40.)—Jesus warns the multitudes, who were following him in his journeyings, what was necessary to any one desiring to become his disciple.—Luke xiv. 25—35.

25 And there-went-'great multitudes-with him: and he-turned, and-said unto them, 26. If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and 27 brethren, and sisters, yea, and his-own life also, he-can not be my disciple. And who-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xiv. 20. married a wife—see ver. 26—1 Co. vii. 29, 32, 33. 'But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none. . . . 32. But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord: 33, but he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.'

21. angry—Ps. ii. 12, 'Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.'

Go out, &c.—see on Mt. xxii. 9, § 84, p. 293.

the poor—1 Sa. ii. 8, 'He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory:'—so Ps. cxiii. 7, 8—Zep. iii. 12, 'I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the LORD.'—Zec. xi. 7, 'I will feed the flock of slaughter, even you, O poor of the flock.'—ver. 11—'and so the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the LORD.'—And see on ver. 13, p. 182, and Mt. xi. 5, § 28, p. 223.

halt—Mi. iv. 6, 7, 'In that day, saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted; and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.'—He. xii. 13, 'And make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed.'

the blind—Rom. xi. 25, 'For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.'—1 Co. xiii. 9, 'For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.'—ver. 12, 'For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.'

23. and yet there is room—Ps. cxxx. 7, 'Let Israel hope in the LORD: for with the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption.'

23. compel—such compulsion as was used to the king of Israel, by his servants, when they compelled him to eat, 1 Sa. xxviii. 23—Jesus himself was constrained to go in with the two disciples at Emmaus, Lu. xxiv. 29, § 94—such force as Paul put forth, 2 Co. v. 11, 20, 'Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; 20, Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.'—And to which he exhorts Timothy, 2 Ti. iv. 2, 'Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine.'—And which he presents as an example to the Ephesian elders, Ac. xx. 31, 'Watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.'

24. none of those men—Pr. i. 24—6, 'Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;' &c.—Mt. xxi. 43, § 84, 'The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.'—ch. xxii. 8, 'The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.'—Ac. xiii. 46, 'seeing ye put it from you: . . . . lo, we turn to the Gentiles.' He. xii. 25, 'See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:'

26. If any—The law required that the nearest and dearest relatives should be denied, if they sought to entice away to the worship of other gods, De. xiii. 6—8.

yea, and his own life—Jesus had before said, Mt. x. 39, § ib. 'He that findeth his life shall lose it: and is a serious matter. Neighbours and friends are employed to judge of them, and their fitness for the plough is tried in every way.

NOTES.

'The principle, indeed, which ran through these various excuses was a contempt of the feast, by a decided preference to other avocations.'—Bloomfield.

Lu. xiv. 23. Compel them to come in. The original word here means not to 'compel by force,' but 'to press earnestly.' It is used in a similar sense in Ga. ii. 3, 14; vi. 12; in the last it is 'constrain.' They were to compel with all the violence of love, and the force of God's word. Such compulsion, and such only, in matters of religion, was used by Christ and his apostles.

25. Went . . . . with him. Accompanied him as he journeyed toward Jerusalem.—Comp. ch. xiii. 22, § 66, p. 177.

He turned, and said, &c. Thus warning them of the sacrifice those must make who become his disciples.

26. And hate not, &c. Strictly speaking, this would be unnatural, and contrary to the genius of the gospel; but in scripture, one thing is said to be loved and another hated, when the former is much preferred, and the latter neglected and forsaken.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xiv. 21. Let messengers of the gospel remember that their mission requires dispatch; and that now it is not so much to those who can make a reward to them in time, but to those whom the world is too apt to treat with neglect, and in whose behalf they must labour only as to God.]

Let us pray that all who have to communicate to others the gospel message, may labour as those that must give in their account; and may they now have much communion with God, regarding the progress of their work.

[23 ver. May the preacher of the gospel remember that it is as much his duty to go out, as for those that are without to come in; and that he has not yet fulfilled his ministry, if he has delivered his message to those only who come to him. May he be urgent in overcoming, by moral means, all obstacles to belief of the message, and compliance with its invitation. Let soever doth not bear βαστάζει his cross, and come after me, can not be my disciple.

Luke xiv. 28—34.

28 For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the 29 cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foun-
30 dation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock ἐμπαίζειν him, say-31 ing, This man began to build, and was not able to finish. Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able 32 with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand? Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and desireth 33 conditions of peace τα προς ειρηνην. So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh ἀποτάσσεται not all that he hath, he can not be my disciple.
34 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.'—Paul could say, Ac. xx. 24, 'But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy,'—And of those that overcome, it is said, Rev. xii. 11, 'They loved not their lives unto the death.'—And of such are they who enjoy the first resurrection, ch. xx. 4.

Lu. xiv. 27. bear his cross—see Mt. x. 38, § 39, p. 302, and on Mt. xvi. 24, § 50, p. 42.

28. build a tower, &c.—Pr. xxiv. 27, 'Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field; and afterwards build thine house.'

31. going to make war, &c.—Pr. xx. 18, 'Every purpose is established by counsel: and with good advice make war.'

32. conditions of peace—Is. viii. 12, 3, 'Say ye not, A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid. Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread.'—Eph. vi. 10—20, 'Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armour of God,' &c.—1 Ti. vi. 12—'Fight the good fight of faith,' &c.—Peter, in his own strength, rashly encountered the enemy, and was induced to accept unworthy conditions of peace, Lu. xxii. 31—4, 54—61, §§ 87, 9, pp. 376,425, which brought him into bitter anguish, ver. 62—He afterwards knew where strength is to be found, and he directs accordingly, 1 Pe. v. 6—9.

33. all that he hath—Paul had thus counted the cost, Ph. iii. 7, 8, 'But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord:' &c.

34. Salt is good—Mk. ix. 50, § 52, p. 78—see also on ver. 49, ib.

his savour—see Mt. v. 13, § 19, p. 122—Paul uses another figure, but the same word, in expressing the same idea, 2 Co. ii. 14—6.

NOTES.

When we read, Rom. ix. 13, 'Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated,' the meaning simply is, I have loved Jacob, the Israelites, more than Esau, the Edomites; and that this is no arbitrary interpretation of the word hate, but one agreeable to the Hebrew idiom, appears from what is said in Ge. xxix. 30, 31, where Leah's being hated is explained by Rachel's being loved more than Leah.—See also De. xxi. 15—7; Mt. vi. 24, § 19, p. 134.

Religion is a work of soberness, of calm and fixed purpose, and no man can properly enter on it who does not resolve by the grace of God to fulfil all His requirements, and make it the business of his life. It will cost the mortification of sin, and a life of self-denial, and a conflict with our lusts, and the enmity and ridicule of the world. It may cost us our lives and liberties, and all that is dear to us. Paul says, Ph. iii. 7, 8, 'But,' &c.—See Scrip. Illus., ver. 33.

Lu. xiv. 28. Intending to build a tower. See Mt. xxi. 33, § 84, p. 267. A tower was a place of defence or observation, erected on high places, or in vineyards. It was made high, so as to enable to see an enemy when he approached, and strong, so that it could not be easily taken. Upon elegant turrets and kiosks the eastern people of fortune spend a considerable part of their time.

By these parabolical comparisons, Christ counsels them (and all of us of future ages), before we enter on the christian life, to seriously weigh the difficulty of the duties required of us, the sacrifices to be made, and the temptations to be resisted; so that knowing them beforehand, and having sought and obtained the necessary strength from above, we may not afterwards be moved by them to abandon our christian course.

32. Or else. The sense of the original is, 'And if he be not able.'

An ambassage. Persons to treat with an enemy, and propose terms of peace.

33. So likewise, &c.—The application of the two comparisons contained in verses 28—32 is this:—'As no man can hope to accomplish any important work, or to succeed in any hazardous enterprise, unless he has first considered well whether he be provided with the means which are necessary to carry it into effect, so no man can be my stedfast disciple, and "endure unto the end," unless he have first considered well whether he be prepared to meet the difficulties with which my followers will have to contend, and to make the sacrifices which will be required of them.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

him labour and pray that he may be the happy means of moving the heart to an accordance with the grace of God, without which none can partake of the gospel feast.]

Lu. xiv. 24. However rich and free the grace of God under the gospel, let none flatter himself that he may neglect the time of God's good pleasure, and come when it suits his own convenience.

[As we would be blessed in Christ, let Him have the highest place in our hearts. Let us prefer the Author of our salvation above all the gifts of his providence. Practical religion must begin with denying even ourselves, and upon such considerations and principles, as will dispose us to endure all things for his sake, who hath borne the curse for us.]

28—30 ver. We cannot begin well, much less can we finish, if we think that of ourselves we have wherewith to build for eternity. Let us give ourselves to God, and He will give us all that is needful.

31, 2 ver. Our enemy is stronger than we are, but God is stronger than our enemy. Let us put our trust in the Captain of our salvation; and, in humble obedience to Him, we shall never be put to shame.

32 ver. Let us beware of being frightened into conditions of peace with the enemy; rather let us flee for refuge to the hope set before us: and taking to us, and using manfully, the whole armour of God.

[34 ver. Salvation does not consist with a man's having given himself up to be a prey to corruption; or even with ceasing to diffuse the savour of salvation around him.]

34, 5 ver. No people are so absolutely lost as those who have been given the gospel, and from whom the power thereof hath departed.

LUKE xiv. 35.

35 It is neither fit εὔθετον for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

LU. xiv. 35. men cast it out—Thus had it been with ancient Israel; and thus also were the Jews threatened, Je. vii. 5—16, 'Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. 9, Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; 10, and come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations? 11, Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD. 12, But go ye now unto my place which was in Shiloh, where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel. 13, And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the LORD, and I spake unto you, rising up early and speaking, but ye heard not; and I called you, but ye answered not; 14, therefore will I do unto this house, which is called by my name, wherein ye trust, and unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, as I have done to Shiloh. 15, And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim. 16, Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.'

The Roman church was also threatened with a like excision should they refuse to continue in the Lord's goodness, Rom. xi. 17, 22, 'And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert graffed in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree; 22, Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.'—He. x. 26, 'For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, 27, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. 38, Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. 39, But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

He that hath ears—ch. viii. 8, § 32, p. 244—see on Mt. xi. 15, § 29, p. 225; xiii. 9, § 32, p. 244; ver. 43, § 33, p. 260; Mk. iv. 23, § ib. p. 259; vii. 16, § 44, p. 8.

ADDENDA.

THE PARALLELISM OF THE PARABLES OF THE GREAT SUPPER, LUKE xiv. 16—24, pp. 183, ..4, AND OF THE MARRIAGE FEAST, MATT. xxii. 1—10, § 84, p. 291.

LUKE xiv.		MATT. xxii.
		And Jesus answered	1
		and spake unto them again by parables, and said,
16	Then said he unto him, A certain man	The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king,	2 made a great supper, and bade many:	which made a marriage for his son, 17	And sent his servant at supper time	and sent forth his servants	3 to say to them that were bidden,	to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.
	Come;	Again, he sent forth other servants, saying,	4
		Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage.
	for all things are now ready.
18	And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.	But they made light of it, and went their ways,	5
		one to his farm,
19	And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.	another to his merchandise:
20	And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.
		And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.	6
21	So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.	But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth:	7 and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.
22	And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.	Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.	8
23	And the Lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.	Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.	9
24	For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.
		So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.	10

LORD, HEAR MY VOICE: LET THINE EARS BE ATTENTIVE TO THE VOICE OF MY SUPPLICATIONS.

IF THOU, LORD, SHOULDEST MARK INIQUITIES, O LORD, WHO SHALL STAND?—Psalm cxxx. 2, 3.

SECTION 68.—(G. 41, .2.)—[Lesson 63.]—JESUS DEFENDS HIMSELF AGAINST THE EXCEPTIONS OF THE SCRIBES AND PHARISEES, FOR RECEIVING AND EATING WITH PUBLICANS AND SINNERS. HE DELIVERS THE PARABLES OF THE LOST SHEEP, THE LOST PIECE OF MONEY, AND THE PRODIGAL SON.—Luke xv.

INTRODUCTION.

The three following parables, the recovery of the Lost Sheep, the Lost Piece of Money, and the Lost Son, possess a sameness of character, as describing God's readiness to receive repenting sinners; yea, his delight over them as restored to the enjoyment of his goodness. These parables manifest the Divine grace to the sinner, that he may be encouraged to return to God; and they shew to the servants of God the propriety of their exerting themselves to the utmost, in order to restore the wandering, to discover that which was lost, and to receive back into favour and fellowship, those who had entirely departed from the ways of wisdom, purity, and peace.

These parables have been understood, especially the last, as being in some measure prophetic, with regard to the reception of the Gentiles into the favour of God. But if we regard the prodigal son as representing the mere Gentile, there is nothing answering to some of the characters introduced, such as the servants in his father's house; they of course would be Gentiles also; so that the original position of the prodigal would be the same as theirs, which is far from being the case. On the contrary, he is described as having been, equally with the Jew, a son and heir, who having demanded his portion, a thing which no mere servant could claim, had wandered away from the enjoyment of privileges he previously possessed in common with the Jew; and having, even in his own esteem, lost his original standing, he is content to be received back as a mere servant, that is, as a common Gentile.

Now there is something corresponding to all this broadly written upon the page of prophecy, throughout the whole of the Old Testament scriptures, and abundantly developed in the history of our race.

We should ever bear in mind that the Son of man came 'to seek and to save that which was lost;' and that he was emphatically sent unto 'the lost sheep of the house of Israel;' and that when all Israel are recovered, they will recognise not only a small portion of the flock as having wandered, but will say, 'All we like sheep have gone astray.' The rejoicing in heaven, and on earth, because of this recovery, is spoken of in prophecy; but in the meantime, however little noticed the event may be upon earth, there is at the repenting of even one sinner joy in heaven among the angels of God. It seems evident that this parable must in some measure be understood as containing not mere analogy; this, like many of our Lord's parables, contains much forcible contrast.

This principle of interpretation seems to be equally needed in the second and third, as in the first of these three parables, Lu. xv. The lost piece of money would have been worth searching for, if it had been used as a personal ornament in the head-dress, to which custom there may be an allusion, Rev. xii. 1, where the woman is said to have 'upon her head a crown of twelve stars.' If even one of the sparkling ornaments accustomed to appear so conspicuously, in symmetrical array, were lost, the loss would be felt; and much search would be made in order to recover and have it restored to its place; how much more if the whole ten had been lost! But wherefore ten here, rather than twelve, or any other number? Because this was the very number which had been lost. Jerusalem, which lay between the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, and which was the great rendezvous of the children of Levi, was, beside these, given ten other tribes, which she should have endeavoured to preserve in shining beauty, as her best ornaments; in place of which she defiled them with her uncleanness, loosed them from their attachment to her person, and by her pride and oppression, drove them far from her; and never, but by violence, to which the Lord refused his sanction, did she seek their recovery, 1 Kl. xii. 21—4. And when they were entirely gone from her view, she seems never to have thought of trimming the lamp of prophecy, and of seeking for them in the direction, and in the circumstances, so expressively indicated by the God of Israel.

The ten lost tribes have indeed been occasionally spoken of, but they have been given up as irrecoverably lost; or, they have been supposed hid in some undiscovered corner of the world; or, it has been presumed that, after all, they were never lost, but returned with the Jews from Babylon, of which we have not the slightest evidence. Few have thought of looking for them in the north-west, to which we are pointed both by Old Testament prophecy, and by all the divinely recorded journeys and inspired epistles of those who were sent to fill up the mission of Him, who came 'to seek and to save that which was lost.' Few seem to have believed that they were cast far off among the nations, and scattered throughout the countries, and that they were to be given refuge in the Lord, as their 'Little Sanctuary,' or most holy place, 'in the countries into which they should come;' that they were to be found in Christ, from whom alone they can receive their lustre; that they were never to be forgotten of God, however lost sight of by man; that although unworthy of their privileges, and often requiring severe correction, they were to be found in possession of unprecedented privileges, as are the modern nations of Europe: whose ancestors came from the same quarter, the neighbourhood of the Caspian Sea, where the ten tribes, when carried away, were located by the Assyrians. The conduct of Jerusalem, in refusing to be guided by the word of the Lord; and in taking the treasure from the house of the Lord, and the king's house, in order therewith to induce the Assyrians to come upon the ten tribes, and effect their removal, is directly the contrast of the conduct to be expected of her, as described in the woman of the parable, who lighted her candle, and swept the house, and sought diligently for the one missing piece, until she found it.

Among the ten lost tribes, there was one, who, although not naturally the firstborn, was, by adoption, through grace, given the birthright. This was Ephraim, descended from Joseph, who had been sold into Egypt, at the instigation of Judah; but whom Judah did not know, when he found him in the very circumstances indicated by the dreams, on account of which Joseph had been hated.

Jacob, also, his father, came down into Egypt, and there, 'by faith, . . . when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph,' transferring the birthright from his own sons, Reuben and Simeon, and giving it to Ephraim and Manasseh: the latter was the elder of the two; but he 'set Ephraim before Manasseh.' Upon both, however, the blessings of providence and grace were largely bestowed. In them were to be fulfilled the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, so that they were to be types of blessing to all Israel.—See He. xi. 21; Je. xxxi. 9; 1 Chr. v. 1, 2; Ge. xlviii.

Ephraim, when in the land, never came to inherit anything like what was, through the cross, promised to him in the blessing of Jacob. Still he came to exercise considerable influence in the kingdom of Israel; so much so that Ephraim's departing from Judah, is the language in which the separation of the ten tribes from the two is spoken of, Is. vii. 17.

Ephraim, as described in the Prodigal Son, did desire to be his own master. Notwithstanding the serious remonstrances of Him who has indeed been a Father to Israel, he would be free from the restraints of the Theocracy. God gave Ephraim his desire. He allowed him to have a king like the nations around him; and afterwards He allowed him to separate from the throne of David, and become the head of the ten tribes, as Judah was of the remnant. Jeroboam the Ephrathite was made king over Israel at the time of the separation; and Samaria, in the tribeship of Ephraim, became ultimately the capital of Israel, as Jerusalem was the capital of the kingdom of Judah. The Lord's possession in the land was divided into two portions, and Ephraim had amply his share. Not long after this partition, Ephraim separated himself entirely from the house of his Father. He went wandering after the lusts of his own evil heart, and his Father was at length heard to say of him, 'Ephraim is joined to idols: let him alone.' The prodigal stopped not in the career of folly and of sin until he had spent all; he came to be reduced to the greatest straits; but then, in place of reading his sin in his punishment, and turning to the Lord, he went and joined himself to the Assyrian, becoming his vassal. And this imperious master, without any regard to Ephraim's dignity or previous habits, used him for his own purposes, sending him away to the back of his dominions, to Halah and Habor, the river Gozan, and the cities of the Medes. Analagous to the case of the prodigal, who was sent into the fields to feed swine, Ephraim was left to eat unclean things in the land of Assyria; yea, the word was fulfilled, Is. vi. 8, 'Within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people.' Ephraim was lost; he was lost even to himself: and it is worthy of remark, that the prodigal son was not first discovered by his brother; he came to himself. The Jews may not be expected to discover the long lost children of Ephraim; it is likely they will first come to themselves, and be acknowledged of their Father. They will say, 'I will arise, and go to my Father:' and truly we can say, as in Is. lxiii. 'Doubtless thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: thou, O Lord, art our father, our redeemer; thy name is from everlasting.' We are found as the posterity of Joseph were to be found, blessed through the cross, and in the name of the Redeemer of Israel; also, with natural and providential blessings, as promised unto the fathers. And it is worthy of remark, that the English race, in whom is so remarkably fulfilling the destiny of Ephraim, came from the very quarter where Ephraim was lost: our best historians tracing the Anglo-Saxon race back, eastward, to the borders of the Caspian Sea, in which neighbourhood our Israelitish ancestors were located by the Assyrians. Thence the English race came, who, having renewed their strength in these islands, have gone out to encompass the globe. They are given a position which never before was given to any, and with which no other people have been favoured.* Joseph's dreams are being fulfilled, and yet his posterity have been almost as little recognised by the Jews, as Judah recognised his brother Joseph, our ancestor, in the ruler of Egypt.

Yes, while we were yet a great way off, the Father has had compassion upon us, and met us with his paternal embrace. Glad were we to be received as servants, as common Gentiles, but we have been dealt with as sons; the best robe has been given us for clothing, the robe of Christ's righteousness; and he hath put shoes on our feet, the preparation of the gospel of peace; and the ring, the token of authority, has been put upon our hand. And of this people which were made 'not a people,' Is. vii. 8, 'Lo-ammi' (not my people), Ho. i. 9, are now 'the sons of the living God,' ver. 10. Truly we can say, 'He hath not dealt so with any people.' When the Father proceeds in his purposes of love with regard to us, should Judah be angry, and refuse to come in, we will come out, and in our Father's name beseech him to be reconciled. We will shew him that he is not the poorer because we are made rich; but that all is his, as it is ours; and the same love will we shew to the Gentiles with whom we have so long been identified. In us the middle wall of partition has been broken down, that both might be made one in Christ. Be it ours, not to struggle for a proud supremacy, but to manifest a brother's love to all, both Gentile and Jew. Knowing that we can never repay our Father's forgiveness and kindness, let us earnestly seek to do good, at all times, to all men, but especially unto those who are of the 'houshold of faith.' To us the grace of God hath been wondrously displayed, that by us it should be manifested, both by word and by deed, to all the human race.—See 'Our Israelitish Origin,' or Wilson's 'Lectures on Ancient Israel, and the Modern Nations of Europe, tracing their Identity.'

ANALYSIS.

Lu. xv. 1, 2. Many publicans and sinners having come to Jesus for the purpose of hearing him, the Pharisees and scribes accuse him of keeping company with sinners.

—— 3—7. Jesus delivers the parable of 'the Lost Sheep,' which intimates that, even supposing the sinner were one of a hundred, he is to be sought for till found, and cared for till fully recovered; and that there is in heaven more joy over that one repentant sinner, than over ninety and nine that need no repentance.

—— 8—10. Jesus delivers a second parable, that of 'the Lost Piece of Silver,' shewing (see SCRIP. ILLUS., p. 190) that if only one piece, in place of all the ten given to Jerusalem, had been lost, her duty would have been to take in her hand the 'light that shineth in a dark place,' and make diligent search until she found it, and then call others to rejoice with her upon the occasion of its recovery; so is there joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

—— 11—32. Our Lord proceeds to deliver a third parable to the same effect, illustrative of the case of Ephraim, so frequently referred to throughout Old Testament history and prophecy; he to whom the birthright was given, and of whom was to come a multitude of nations or Gentiles.

In this parable are to be considered,—

12—6. The history of him who is here called the younger son, until he is utterly lost.

17—20. Conduct of the lost son upon coming to himself.

20—4. The father's kind reception of his son, who 'was dead, and is alive again.'

25—8. The ungracious conduct of Judah, called here the 'elder son.'

29—32. The father's discourse with the elder brother.

'For the sublime, the beautiful, the pathetic, and the instructive, the history of Joseph in the Old Testament, and the parable of the prodigal son in the New, have no parallels either in sacred or profane history.'—A. Clarke.

(G. 41.)—No. 68.—Jesus defends himself against the exceptions of the scribes and Pharisees, for receiving and eating with publicans and sinners.—Luke xv. 1—10. Eastward.

1 Then drew near Ησαν δε εγγιζοντες unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xv. 1. publicans and sinners—A very similar occurrence is recorded, Mt. ix. 10, 11, § 36, p. 277—Jesus was called a friend of publicans and sinners, xi. 19, § 29, p. 226—Repenting sinners go into the kingdom of heaven rather than self-righteous Pharisees, xxi. 31, 32, § 84, p. 265—The publicans, in place of justifying themselves, 'justified God,' Lu. vii. 29, § 29, p. 225—1 Ti. i. 15, 'This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners;'

to hear him—The decree on the holy mount was, 'Hear ye him,' Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55—His discourse was interesting to the people generally, Mk. xii. 37, § 55, p. 307—and even the officers sent to apprehend him were constrained to acknowledge, 'Never man spake like this man,' Jno. vii. 46, § 55, p. 96.

* See Sharon Turner's History of the Anglo-Saxons, b. ii. ch. i. &c.

LET US HAVE NO FELLOWSHIP WITH SINNERS IN THEIR EVIL DEEDS; BUT, LIKE JESUS,

BY KINDNESS INDUCE THEM TO LISTEN TO THAT WORD WHEREBY THEY MAY LEARN TO HAVE FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD.

LUKE XV. 2—7.

2 him. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This-man receiveth προσδεχεται sinners, and eateth-with them.
3 And he-spake this parable unto them, saying, 4, What man of you, having an-hundred sheep, if he-lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety-and-nine in the wilderness, and 5 go after that επι το which-is-lost, until he-find it? And when-he-hath-found it, he-6 layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. And when-he-cometh home, he-calleth-together his friends and neighbours, saying unto-them, Rejoice with me; for I-have-found my 7 sheep which was-lost. I-say unto-you, that likewise joy shall-be in heaven over one sinner that-repenteth μετανοουντι, more than over ninety-and-nine just-persons δικαιοις,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xv. 2. the Pharisees and scribes murmured—They are described, Is. lxv. 5, 'Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou. These are a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day.'—God shewed Peter that he 'should not call any man common or unclean,' Ac. x. 28.

4. an hundred sheep—see Mt. xviii. 12, .3, § 53, p. 82.

if he lose one—The whole flock had gone astray, Is. liii. 6, 'All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.'

go after that which is lost—Eze. xxxiv. 11, .2, .6, 'For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. 12, As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. 16, I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment.'—So also, Jno. x. 16, 'And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.'

5. when he hath found, &c.—Eze. xxxiv. 13—.5, 'And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. 14, I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. 15, I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.'

6. sheep which was lost—Ps. cxix. 176, 'I have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek thy servant;' &c.—1 Pe. ii. 10, 25, 'Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy. 25, For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.'

7. joy shall be in heaven—When the Lord declares his remembrance of Israel, his forgiveness of their transgressions and sins, and his willingness that they should return to him as his redeemed people, Is. xliv. 21, .2, the invitation is given, ver. 23, 'Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.'—So, when their gathering from far; and

NOTES.

Lu. xv. 1. All. i. e., some of all the different classes.

Publicans and sinners. τελωναι και αμαρτολοι, tax-gatherers and heathens; the latter being persons who neither believed in Christ nor in Moses.—See on 'Publicans,' Lu. iii. 12, § 7, p. 53.

2. The Pharisees and scribes. See § 7, p. 56, ADDENDA, 'Pharisees,' and § 25, p. 199, 'Scribes.'

Receiveth. The original word means, 'to receive readily and kindly;' and is so used, Rom. xvi. 2. The Pharisees' rule was to abandon the profligate. Our blessed Lord came to call sinners to repentance. The real motive to the exception taken by the Pharisees was, ... a secret expectation, that by drawing attention to this part of his conduct, and appealing to certain popular prejudices against it, they should lower his credit with the people. . . . .

3. This parable. This and the two following parables justify his friendly intercourse with sinners, and make known the joy there is in heaven when even a single sinner repents.

7. Joy, &c. 'The sum is, as a father peculiarly rejoices, when an extravagant child, supposed to be utterly lost, comes to a thorough sense of his duty; or as any other person who has recovered what he had given up for gone, has a more sensible satisfaction in it, than in several other things equally valuable, but not in such danger; so do the angels in heaven peculiarly rejoice in the conversion of the most abandoned sinners. Yea, and God himself so readily forgives and receives them, that he may be represented as having part in the joy.'—Wesley.

One sinner that repenteth. One who, casting himself upon the mercy of God, through Him who loved us and gave himself for us, becomes thoroughly changed in heart and life.

Just persons. δικαιοις, righteous persons. The same word is translated 'righteous,' Mt. xxv. 46, § 86, p. 354.

[The declaration in question may be supposed to convey (as Mr. Greswell shews) an oblique but pointed censure of the censurers themselves; since δικαιοις cannot mean simply the righteous, nor ουτινες ου χρειαν εἰχουσι μετανοιας; those who need no repentance; but the expressions are to be taken with a certain turn of meaning, called forth by the occasion, and connected with irony. Thus by δικαιους are to be understood, 'those who think themselves such,' are such in their own conceit; in short, the self-righteous. As examples of which mode of expression it may suffice to refer to, Mk. ii. 17; Lu. v. 32 (§ 22, p. 168), ουκ ἠλθον καλεσαι δικαιους, αλλ' αμαρτωλους εις μετανοιαν; id. x. 21 (§ 60, p. 144).—Bloomf.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xv. 1. The words of our Lord were spoken in the hearing of all, and should also be read by all. Let all the publicans and sinners—let even the vilest and most abandoned, have free access to Him who can save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, He. vii. 25. Let us remember that it is not only one or another that hath been lost; but that 'all we like sheep have gone astray,' &c.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., on ver. 4, supra.

2 ver. See margin.

[3, 4 ver. The christian pastor, that has the heart of the chief Shepherd, will direct his most earnest endeavours for the salvation of such as are ignorant and out of the way.]

6 ver. Let us rejoice with those who are successful in their efforts to recover the lost. Let the success of each be counted the gain of all.

7 ver. Let the christian missionary think of the importance of his work upon earth. His successful

LUKE xv. 8—12.

8 which need no repentance ου χρειαν εχουσι μετανοιας. Either what woman having ten pieces-of-silver, if she-lose one piece, doth-not-light a-candle, and sweep the house,
9 and seek diligently till she-find it? And when-she-hath-found it, she-calleth-her friends and her neighbours-together, saying, Rejoice-with me; for I-have-found the piece
10 which I-had-lost. Likewise, I-say unto-you, there-is joy in-the-presence-of-the angels of God over one sinner that-repenteth.

(G. 42.)—Jesus takes occasion from the same occurrence to deliver the parable of the elder and the younger brother; or, as it is commonly called, the parable of the prodigal son.—Luke xv. 11—32. Eastward.

11 And he-said, a-certain man had two sons: 12, and the younger of-them said to-his-father, Father, give me the portion of goods that-falleth to me. And he-divided διελεν also from the north, and west; and from the land of Sinim, is spoken of, Is. xlix. 12, it follows, ver. 13, 'Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for the LORD hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.'—When the innumerable multitude, the flock of the Lamb, are found before the throne, ascribing salvation to God and the Lamb, there is joy in heaven, Rev. vii. 11, .2, 'And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

LU. XV. 8. ten pieces of silver—Israel was chosen to be the Lord's 'peculiar treasure,' Ex. xix. 5—Ps. cxxxv. 4, 'For the LORD hath chosen Jacob unto himself, and Israel for his peculiar treasure.'—But not only was one of the pieces lost to Jerusalem; all the ten were lost, 1 Ki. xi. 31, .2, 'And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee: (but he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)'—and of Jerusalem, it is said, Is. i. 21, .2, 'How is the faithful city become an harlot! it was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers. Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water:' &c.

light a candle*—The word of the Lord is a lamp unto the feet, and a light unto the path, Ps. cxix. 105—It throws light upon all the working of God, Am. iii. 7, 'Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.'—His word may especially be expected to cast light upon the case of the lost treasure—Israel, the work of his hands, Is. xlv. 11, 'Thus saith the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me.'

sweep the house, &c.*—so far were the inhabitants of Jerusalem from doing this, with the view of recovering that which had been lost, that they rejoiced in the sweeping away altogether of Israel, saying, Ezc. xi. 15, 'Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this land given in possession.'

9. Rejoice with me—see the joyful surprise of Sion, upon the recovery of her lost children, Is. xlix. 14—21, ...—and the call to her that was termed desolate, Is. liv. 1, 'Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD.'—Is. xlix. 18, 'Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all,' &c.

10. joy in the presence of the angels of God, &c.—The angels are represented as rejoicing over those who had been lost, but are redeemed by the precious blood of the Lamb, Rev. v. 11, .2—see on ver. 7, supra.

11. had two sons—see the same two sons, Ephraim and Judah, described in another parable, Mt. xxi. 28—32, § 84, p. 285.

12. the younger of them, &c.—If the case of the younger might be expected to excite interest, much

NOTES.

LU. XV. 8. Ten pieces. δραχμας δεκα, or drachmas, each being the fourth part of a shekel, and of the same value with a Roman penny, that is, sevenpence halfpenny, so that the ten amounted to six shillings and threepence.

'The women in Syria, and throughout the east generally, wear pieces of silver, as ornaments, upon their heads, these being secured upon their tarboosh, or red skull cap, by means of holes bored in them. The rich have gold; the poorer, silver. These have all been presents; the first given at the birth of the child, and the rest added one by one, as particular events occurred in the wearer's life. Now I think it not unlikely, that the ten pieces of silver alluded to by our Saviour, were those which formed the wreath round the woman's forehead. The loss of one of these coins would be considered, as indeed it is, a serious misfortune; and we can easily imagine the diligence with which a woman would light a candle, and sweep the house, and search for one of these missing pieces of silver; and when she had found it, how she would call upon her neighbours to rejoice with her at finding what, from long possession, she had become so much attached to. It is to be observed, that it does not appear to be the loss of the mere value of the coin, so much as the loss of that particular piece of silver, which leads the woman to be so active in her endeavours to find it again. The pieces of silver thus worn are seldom, if ever, spent, but descend as heirlooms from mother to daughter, and hence from their antiquity would come to acquire, in the eyes of the woman, a worth for which no equivalent could be found. At this day, the women's heads are almost entirely covered with these coins; but this is natural, from the necessary accumulation of successive generations; and beside, money was not so plentiful then as now. Probably at the time our Lord spake his parable, few had more than ten pieces to their portion. I have never heard this explanation given, but on mentioning it to my fellow-travellers in the east, they seemed struck with its probability; and if it prove that coins were formerly, as now, worn by the women as ornaments—and in these lands, where customs are so permanent, there is every probability that they were—I shall have little doubt of the correctness of the criticism.' —Rev. Joseph W. Ayre, Diary of Eastern Travel, pp. 64, .5.

Light a candle.* The houses of the lower ranks were anciently very dark; some of those in Herculaneum and Pompeii had no windows at all, and others only loop-holes.

11. A certain man. The history of the prodigal son has always been considered pregnant with reli-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

labours, in restoring fallen man, increase the joy of even the inhabitants of heaven; and men shew themselves of a heavenly spirit, in as far as they are partakers of that joy, and are zealously desirous of promoting it.]

[LU. XV. 8. If for one piece of silver the woman might have been expected to search diligently till she had found it, how much more should she if the whole ten pieces had been lost? Israel were chosen to be the Lord's peculiar treasure, above all the na-

LUKE xv. 13—.5.

13 unto-them his living τον βιον. And not many days after the younger son gathered-all-together, and-took-his-journey into a-far country, and there wasted διεσκορπισε his sub-
14 stance with-riotous living ζων ασωτως. And when-he-had-spent all, there-arose a-15 mighty famine in that land; and he began to-be-in-want υστερεισθαι. And he-went and-joined-himself to-a citizen of-that country; and he-sent him into his fields to-feed swine.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

more should that of the firstborn, and this was Ephraim, the lost son—comp. Jer. vii. 15, 'And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim.'—xxxi. 9, 'I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn,' &c.—see on ver. 18, p. 192.

Lu. xv. 12. portion of goods, &c.—It is said, Ge. xxv. 5, 'And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac,' to whom pertained the birthright. 6, 'But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto the east country.'

divided unto them—When Israel asked to be freed from the immediate government of God, he warned them of their danger, but granted their request, 1 Sa. viii.—When Ephraim, and all Israel, departed from the house of David, the Lord allowed it, dividing their inheritance in the land into two great portions—the kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of Judah, 1 Ki. xii. 1—24. It was not without an effort that the Father was prevailed on to give Ephraim up to follow his own course.—Ho. xi. 8, 'How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee, Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim? mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together.'

13. not many days after, &c.—Immediately after the division of the kingdom into two portions, Ephraim took counsel to separate himself altogether from the house of the Lord, 1 Ki. xii. 25—33.

took his journey into a far country—This wandering away from the Lord is strikingly described in Jer. ii.—The principle of it is described, ver. 31, 'Wherefore say my people, We are lords; we will come no more unto thee?'

wasted, &c.—see the description of such, Am. vi. 3—7—Those servants who are watching for their Lord's return, are counselled, Lu. xxi. 34, § 86, 'And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.'—And Rom. xiii. 13, 'Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.'

14. began to be in want—Of this Ephraim was forewarned, Am. viii. 11, 12, 'Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD: and they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it.'

15. joined himself to a citizen—Ho. v. 13, 'When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to king Jareb: yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound.'—The Lord foresaw the farther evil into which Ephraim was casting himself, ver. 14—and waited to be gracious to the returning prodigal, ver. 15, 'I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me early.'—Again, vii. 11, 12, 'Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria.

NOTES.

gious uses, and full of comfort to serious and penitent minds. The case of the prodigal, from first to last, is in too many respects an exact picture of every moral agent; and each of us stands only in too much need of all the instruction, all the consolation, all the encouragement, which the analogy of his history, whether real or fictitious to our own actual situation, can supply. The disposition of the father in the parable, may be truly regarded as a counterpart of that of God himself; the tender reception, the gracious and affectionate treatment, which this disposition inclined him to grant to an offending, and before his repentance, an unworthy son, may justly authorize the presumption of what may be expected by any of his children, from the benevolence of their heavenly Father, who, though they have forfeited his favour by their sins, yet throw themselves entirely on his forgiveness.—Gresswell, Vol. III. p. 546.

[Lu. xv. 12. The portion . . . that falleth to me. τὸ ἐπιβάλλον μέρος. Supply μοι from the preceding, 'the portion which falleth to me;' namely, after fair and equitable partition. The Jewish law did not, any more than the Roman, permit to a father the arbitrary disposal of his whole property. It was entailed on the children, after his death, in equal portions; except that the firstborn had a double share. Such distribution, however, was sometimes made by a parent to his children during his lifetime, with a reservation of what was necessary to the support of himself and his wife, if alive.—Bloomf.]

Among the ancient Romans and Syrophenicians, it was customary when a son came to maturity, if he demanded his part of the inheritance, for the father to give it to him. This the son might claim.

13. And took his journey into a far country. Far from God; God was not in all his thoughts.

Riotous living. ζων ασωτως, a course of life that led him to spend all; from α, 'not,' and σωω, 'I save.'—A. C.

15. To feed swine. The basest and vilest of all employments; and, to a Jew, peculiarly degrading. Herodotus informs us, that in Egypt no swineherd was permitted to mingle in civil society, nor to appear in the worship of the gods.

16. He would fain . . . . with the husks. The word rendered husks, signifies the fruit of the carob tree, or St. John's bread, a tree common in the Levant.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

tions of the earth: let us have a sympathy with the apostolic church, in her earnest endeavours, not only for the salvation of their own people, the Jews, but of the whole twelve tribes that were scattered abroad; nor should we neglect the word of prophecy, which is as a light that shineth in a dark place—see 2 Pe. i. 19—and may be expected to assist in shewing where are the outcasts to whom that word is so expressively addressed.]—Ver. 9, 10, see margin, p. 190.

Lu. xv. 11, .2. Let young men beware of seeking to free themselves from the wholesome restraints of parental authority. Let us be more desirous of pleasing our heavenly Father with what he hath committed to our care, than of pleasing ourselves in the possession of fancied independence.

Let us beware of thinking that all is well because God has been pleased to grant our requests. Let us rather pray that He may refuse what we ask, if it be not for his glory, our own true good, and the benefit of others.

[15 ver. When Israel of old thought to become independent of God, they were left to become the servants of men; so not unfrequently has it been with the nations called by the name of Christ. But if chastisement lead us to look only to man for help, in place of causing us to return to God, we are only going farther out of the way, and sinking deeper in misery. Let us be warned by the case of Ephraim; called even by the God of Israel his 'dear son,' his 'pleasant child;' he, by indulging his own waywardness, went farther and farther away from God until utterly lost.]

LUKE xv. 16—20.

16 And he would fain επεθυμει have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's 18 have bread enough and to spare περισσευονται αρτων, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against

19 heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one 20 of thy hired servants. And he arose, and came to his father.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

When they shall go, I will spread my net upon them; I will bring them down as the fowls of the heaven; I will chastise them, as their congregation hath heard.'—See also xii. 1, 'Ephraim feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind: he daily increaseth lies and desolation; and they do make a covenant with the Assyrians, and oil is carried into Egypt.'—Judah was warned not to fear, so as to enter into such a ruinous confederacy as Ephraim had done, Is. viii. 11, .2—comp. vii. 3—9—Yet Judah did join himself to the Assyrian, in order to be relieved from the danger from which the Lord offered to deliver, 2 Ki. xvi. 8, 9—Neither did Ephraim nor Judah get good by joining themselves to the Assyrian—The Assyrian utterly carried Israel away captive, represented in the parable by the citizen sending the prodigal into the fields to feed swine: and he only by the miraculous interposition of God was prevented from doing the same by the Jews, as predicted, Is. x. 5—34—comp. ch. xxvi., vii.

Lu. xv. 16. the husks that the swine did eat—Hosea, speaking of Israel as having in spirit and practice departed from the Lord, and become defiled, says, ch. ix. 3, 'They shall not dwell in the Lord's land; but Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria.'—See also ver. 16, .7—and again, xii. 1—he might say, as in Ps. lxxiii. 23, 'So foolish was I, and ignorant: I was as a beast before thee.'

17. when he came to himself—It was promised to Israel that when they brought to mind God's promises and threatenings, in the lands into which they should be scattered, that then God would bring them back to their own land, De. xxx. 1—6.

18. I will arise—See the call, Je. xxxi. 6—9, 'For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. 7, For thus saith the Lord; Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel. 8, Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither. 9, They shall come with weeping, and with supplications [Marg. favours] will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.'—And Eph. v. 14, 'Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.'

and will say unto him—see the words of Elihu, Job xxxiii. 27, .8, 'He looketh upon men, and if any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not; he will deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall see the light.'—Also Lam. iii. 40, .1, 'Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord. Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.'—1 Jno. i. 9, see border.

20. came to his father—see the invitation to the lost house of Israel to return to God as a Father, and words wherewith to return, Ho. xiv. 1—3, 'O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. 2, Take with you words, and turn to the Lord: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips. 3, Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.'—And the Lord's promise of a most gracious reception, ver. 4—7, 'I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him. 5, I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. 6, His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. 7, They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon.'—Ephraim is especially concerned in the prophecy, ver. 8, 'Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found.'—Importance of understanding these things, ver. 9, 'Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein.'

NOTES.

This fruit still continues to be used in feeding swine. It is the pod or husk only that is eaten. It is said to be mealy, and of a sweet taste; and as it grows in common hedges, is sometimes eaten by the poor.

'The original for the word husk is κερατιον, and might be applied to fruits that grow in a husk or shell, with beards or spikes attached; like that, for example, which encloses the fruit of the horse-chestnut.'—Greswell.

Lu. xv. 17. And when he came to himself. For till then he was beside himself, as all men are, so long as they are without God in the world.

'Excess of pleasure, like intemperance in wine or strong drink, inebriates the soul, and steeps the faculties, both of mind and body, in an unnatural lethargy, which the expressive language of scripture compares, while it lasts, to a living death. Adversity and privation, solitude and reflection, dissipate the stupor, sober the understanding, and restore the powers, both of mind and of body, to their former tone and vigour.'—Greswell, Parables, Vol. III. p. 511.

18. I will arise. This is a common expression among the Hebrews, to denote entering on a piece of business.

Against heaven. εις τον ουρανον, that is, against God. The Jews often make use of this periphrasis to avoid using the reverend name of God.

'This is placed first, since men's sins are chiefly against God, even when also against their fellow-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xv. 17. Before resolving upon a return to God, the sinner comes to a knowledge of himself. He knows the misery into which he has fallen, and his inability to recover himself, except by returning to his Father, in whose power to provide for all who depend upon Him he has the fullest confidence; and he thinks of renouncing that independence, which before was the object of his ambition and the subject of his prayers.

17—20 ver. Let the sinner cast himself upon the mercy of God: let him not look to himself for the ground of his confidence, but to the compassion and love of his Father in heaven. Let him not, as if he were still his own master, think of making terms with God, but entirely submit himself to his grace, to be, or to do, whatever infinite wisdom and goodness may appoint.

LUKE xv. 21—.4.

But when-·he·-was yet a-great-way-off, his father saw him, and had-compassion, and 21 ran, and-fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto-him, Father, I-have-sinned against heaven, and in-·thy·-sight, and am no-more worthy to-be-called thy son.
22 But the father said to his servants, Bring-forth the best robe, and put-it-on him; and 23 put a-ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet: and bring-hither the fatted calf, and-kill 24 it; and let-us-eat, and-be-merry εὐφρανθωμεν: for this my son was dead, and is-alive-again; he-was lost, and is-found. And they-began to-be-merry.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xv. 20. great way off—The children of promise are so recognised on the day of Pentecost, Ac. ii. 39, 'For the promise is toall that are afar off,' had compassion, &c.—Is. lxiii. 7, 8. . . . .—see the parallel case of Ephraim, the returning prodigal, Je. xxxi. 18—20, 'I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the LORD my God. 19, Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth. 20, Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: therefore my bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD.'

21. Father, I have sinned—Ps. xxxii. 5, 'I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid. I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah.'

in thy sight—Ps. li. 4, 'Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.'

am no more worthy, &c.—see on Mt. xv. 27, § 45, p. 15, 'Truth, Lord:'

22. best robe—When 'their seed shall be known among the Gentiles,' then will be heard this song, Is. lxi. 10, 'I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.'—This kindness of the Lord to the penitent outcast seems to have been represented by the case of Joshua, Zec. iii. 3—5, 'Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and stood before the angel. 4, And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment. 5, And I said, Let them set a fair mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by.'

ring— This sign of conferring power was very ancient. Pharaoh, when conferring the vice-royalty of Egypt upon Joseph, took off his ring and put it upon Joseph's hand, Ge. xli. 42—When power over the Jews was given to Haman, the king gave him his ring, Est. iii. 8—10—and afterwards it was taken from him and given to Mordecai, viii. 2.

23. fatted calf—Ge. xviii. 7; 1 Sa. xxviii. 24.

24. dead, and is alive again—So Israel, Eze. xxxvii. 11—.4. . . . .—so with regard to believers, Rom. vi. 11—3, 'Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. 12, Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. 13, Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.'—Eph. ii. 1, 'And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;'—v. 14, 'Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.'—See on ver. 18, supra, p. 192.

was lost—He had wandered away from home, and had been lost, even to himself—see ver. 13—.7, p. 191, supra.

merry—see the call to heaven and earth to rejoice, because the Lord hath redeemed his people, Is. xliv. 23—(see on ver. 7, supra)—xlix. 13, (ib.)—and also men. Insomuch that David, Ps. li. 4, while conscious of having deeply injured man, yet says, 'Against thee, thee only, have I sinned;' or, as it ought to have been rendered, especially or particularly. For it is the best evidence of the genuineness of a man's repentance, when it is accompanied with the strong feeling of the heinousness of his offences as regards God.'—Bwomf.

NOTES.

Lu. xv. 20. When he was yet a great way off, &c. 'Possibly clothed in the rags and tatters of poverty, foot sore, and galled with travel, broken down by want and privations, emaciated, perhaps, by the consequences of former riot and intemperance. When the form of a traveller, journeying towards him, appeared in the distance, so sharpsighted is paternal tenderness, or such are the secret sympathies which connect us with the objects of our dearest affections, he discovered in that distant view, the accomplishment of his fondest hopes; he recognised in the form of that traveller, so indistinctly seen, his long lost and unheard-of son.'—Greswell.

Fell on his neck (Ge. xlv. 14; Ac. xx. 37), and kissed him. κατεφιλησεν αυτον, 'kissed him again and again.' Overwhelmed him, as it were, with kisses.

21. Am no more worthy, &c. It is remarkable that the son does not here conclude his address as he had intended, ver. 18, .3, by a request to be made one of his father's 'hired servants.' His father's tenderness of heart cuts short his tale of self-reproach, by giving him the most plenary assurances of his pardoning love.

22. Best robe, or 'long robe.' Την στολην την πρωτην, 'the first best,' or 'principal robe;' the garment laid by, and used only on festival occasions.

A ring on his hand. See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

Shoes on his feet. Servants were not permitted to wear shoes. When therefore the father commanded them to put shoes on him, it expressed his wish that he should not be treated as a servant, but as a son.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xv. 20. Change of mind is followed by change of conduct. The sinner has not only in heart, but in conduct, departed from God; and, if he is sincere in his repentance, it will be seen in his life. He will feel that he may well be ashamed of his former departure from God, but not of retracing his steps to the home of his Father.]

Let not the repentant sinner doubt of his Father's love. The Father is as willing to receive us as we can be to come to Him. We were outcasts. We had no claim but upon his compassion, yet hath he beheld us when we were still a great way off. He hath made speed to help us in returning, and hath welcomed us with all a Father's love.

[22 ver. It is altogether of the free favour of God that we, who were once lost, have been privileged as we are. Glory, dominion, and defence, have been given our people: in as far as we have made an effort at returning to God, he hath hitherto wondrously established our goings. He hath not dealt so with any people. Unto us more especially hath he made manifest the riches of his grace. As was contem-

WE MAY WELL CONFESS BEFORE GOD OUR PAST SINFULNESS AND PRESENT UNWORTHINESS, AND BE CONTENT TO OCCUPY EVEN THE MEANEST PLACE IN OUR FATHER'S HOUSE.

LUKE XV. 25—31.

25 Now his elder son was in the-field: and as he-came and-drew-nigh to-the house, he-26 heard music and dancing. And he-called one of-the servants, and-asked what these-27 things meant. And he said unto-him, Thy brother is-come; and thy father hath-killed the 28 fatted calf, because he-hath-received him safe-and-sound. And he-was angry ωργισθη, and would not go-in:
29 therefore came his father out, and-intreated him. And he answering said to his father, Lo, these-many years do I-serve thee, neither transgressed I at-any-time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a-kid, that I-might-make-merry ευφρανθω 30 with my friends: but as-soon-as this thy son was-come, which hath-devoured thy living 31 with harlots, thou-hast-killed for-him the fatted calf. And he said unto-him, Son, thou

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

the joy of the people, when this redemption will be consummated, Je. xxxi. 12—4. . . . 'Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all. 13, Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow. 14, And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.'—See on ver. 7 and 10, p. 189, supra.

Lu. xv. 25. Music and dancing—Miriam celebrated the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egypt, in dances as well as songs, Ex. xv. 20—David danced before the ark, 2 Sa. vi. 14—It was common at feasts, Ju. xxi. 19—24—and in public triumphs, Ju. xi. 34—and at all seasons of mirth and rejoicing, Ps. xxx. 11—It is promised in Israel's restoration, Je. xxxi. 4, 'Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.'—Ps. cxlix. 3—cl. 4, 'Praise him with the timbrel and dance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.'

28. angry—The Jews murmured against Christ and his disciples for eating with publicans and sinners, Lu. v. 30, § 22, p. 168—against Peter, Ac. xi. 2, 3, 'And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him, saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.'

would not go in—The Jews would neither go in themselves, nor would they suffer others to do so, Mt. xxiii. 13. 'But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.'—1 Thess. ii. 14—6. 'For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews, 15, who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men: 16, forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

NOTES.

[These images are beautifully thrown in to fill up the narrative, and to express with more beauty and force the general truth that God will treat returning penitents with mercy and with love.]

[*] All this may be considered a lively portraiture of that preliminary sanctification of a corrupt nature; of that change and renovation of the inner man, to the recovery of the original image of righteousness and true holiness wherein he was created, without which it is not possible to see God, nor to become capable of everlasting happiness hereafter, by admission even to the present enjoyment of the privileges of his gospel. That ring, which we contemplate on the finger of the prodigal son, enriched with gold of the finest quality, or sparkling with diamonds of the clearest lustre; that costly garment of exquisite texture, and corresponding tincture, which invests his limbs with purple; what are they but those gifts and graces from above, which clothe the soul of the regenerate Christian?'—Greswell, Vol. III. p. 593.]

Lu. xv. 23. The fatted calf. In allusion to the feasts and liberal entertainments of friends, whereof the fatted calf made a considerable part.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

24. Was dead. Thus the sinner, as long as he continues in sin, is, even while living, dead and lost in the sight of God.

29. Lo, these many years, &c. The word translated 'serve,' means 'to perform the part of a slave.' The elder son, while he overrates the obedience which he himself had rendered to his father, exaggerates, at the same time, his brother's guilt.—Comp. ver. 30 with ver. 13.—Lonsdale.

31. Son, thou art ever with me, &c. 'The father labours to remove the jealousy which the son had conceived of his brother, as if the marks of favour and good will just shewn to him implied any doubt of his own rights and privileges, or could be construed into an injury done to him, assuring him that all which he had belonged to him, and would sometime be his. Lastly, he endeavours to awaken in his breast the dormant feeling of brotherly piety; reminding him that the person whom he had so contemptuously called, This son of thine, was still his brother, and that common humanity, much more paternal tenderness and brotherly attachment, required them both, and the rest of the family besides, to join in rejoicing and making merry upon so unexpected and so auspicious an event, as the recovery of one so near to them all, not merely from the condition of an outcast and alien, to his natural place and relation as an inmate of his father's house, but from a state of intellectual and moral degradation, worse than death, to the ascendency of reason, religion, and virtue over him again, as if raised to life from the dead.'—Greswell.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

plated by Moses, in the blessing of Joseph, 'the good will of him that dwelt in the bush,' hath been shewn unto us. While we remember our own unworthiness, and are humble, let us also think of his exceeding goodness, and be thankful; be won by his love, to a zealous devotedness to his holy service.]

Lu. xv. 25—8. Let us beware of taking offence, like the Jews, at the free grace of God, bestowed upon others, who we may think are less deserving than ourselves.

[28, 9 ver. Let us admire the forbearance of our God, who so persevered in his kind beseeching of that people, who would have prevented the gospel being preached to the outcasts of Israel, and who, because these were received, were angry, and would not go in. Even believing Jews have been reluctant to share the feast with the returning prodigal.]

29, 30 ver. Let us beware of a self-righteous, self-laudatory spirit; it leads to the greatest unrighteousness, that of grieving at the good of others, and repining against the free grace of God.

[31 ver. The same grace, the same rich inheritance, and everlasting life, is free to the Jew and to the Gentile, and ALL is theirs who are willing to have God for their portion. One is not impoverished because another is made rich. All is theirs who are willing to have all as sons of God in Christ.]

LUKE XV. 32.

32 art ever with me, and all that I-have is thine. It-was-meet that-we-should make-merry, and be-glad · for this thy brother was dead, and is-alive-again ; and was lost, and is-found.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

LU. xv. 32. It was meet that we should make merry, &c.—see the Lord's invitation to be glad because of his people who had been lost, Is. lxv. 18—25. . . . —They had been lost, as the natural Israel, but have found a Father in the Redeemer, lxiii. 16, 'Doubtless thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: thou, O LORD, art our father, our redeemer; thy name is from everlasting.'—They have confessed their utter unworthiness, and submitted themselves entirely to the mercy of God their Father, lxiv. 6—8. . . . —and the Lord has received them in preference to a self-righteous people, lxv. 1—7. . . . —The joy upon the discovery and restoration of the lost children of Zion is again referred to, Is. lxvi. 7—14. . . . . Is. xxxv. 10, 'And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness,' &c.

NOTE.

LU. xv. 32. 'A thousand of these delicate touches in the inspired writings escape an inattentive reader. In ver. 30, the elder son had unkindly and indecently said, This thy son. The father mildly reproves him, and says, This thy brother. Amazing intimation, that the best of men ought to account the worst of sinners their brethren still; and should especially remember this relation, when they shew any inclination to repentance.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

'Our Lord in this whole parable shews, not only that the Jews had no cause to murmur at the reception of the Gentiles (a point which did not at that time so directly fall under consideration), but that if the Pharisees were indeed as good as they fancied themselves to be, still they had no reason to murmur at the kind treatment of any sincere penitent. Thus does he condemn them, even on their own principles, and so leaves them without excuse.

'We have in this parable a lively emblem of the condition and behaviour of sinners in their natural state. Thus when enriched by the bounty of the great common Father, do they ungratefully run from him, ver. 12. Sensual pleasures are eagerly pursued, ver. 13; and while these continue, not a serious thought of God can find a place in their minds. And even when afflictions come upon them, ver. 14, still they will make hard shifts, before they will let the grace of God, concurring with his providence, persuade them to think of a return, ver. 15, 16.

'When they see themselves naked, indigent, and undone, then they recover the exercise of their reason, ver. 17; then they remember the blessings they have thrown away, and attend to the misery they have incurred. And hereupon they resolve to return to their father, and put the resolution immediately in practice, ver. 18—20.

'Behold with wonder and pleasure, the gracious reception they find, from Divine, slighted goodness! When upon a prodigal comes to his father, he sees him afar off, ver. 20. He pities, meets, embraces him, and interrupts his acknowledgments, with the tokens of his returning favour. He arrays him with the robe of a Redeemer's righteousness, with inward and outward holiness, adorns him with all his sanctifying graces, and honours him with the tokens of adopting love, ver. 21, 22. And all this he does with unutterable delight, in that he who was lost is now found, ver. 23, 24.'—Wesley.

But how much more joy, it is implied, will there be, when not merely the one sheep, but the whole scattered flock of Israel, will be gathered into the one fold? When not merely one piece of money, but the whole ten tribes of Israel that are spoken of as God's 'peculiar treasure,' will be recovered? When not merely the younger son, but the firstborn, Ephraim, that was dead, is alive again, and that was lost, is found; and together with Judah that would not go in, is brought with rejoicing into the house of his Father, being recovered from all his backslidings; blessed and blessing all around?

'It is no disparagement to the excellence of the rest of the parables, to say that the parable of the prodigal son, ... is the masterpiece of all; that among the many specimens of lively and picturesque narration, of genuine pathos, of unaffected simplicity, of justness of conception and felicity of expression, which the historians of our Saviour's parables have transmitted to us, there is none more perfect in its kind, or which abounds in a greater variety of beauties.'—Gresswell, Vol. III. p. 493.

ADDENDA.

QUERIES ON THE SUBJECT OF THE ISRAELITISH ORIGIN OF THE ENGLISH

1. Is not the house of Israel, and especially the tribe of Ephraim, clearly distinguished from that of Judah, in both the historical and prophetical parts of scripture? 1 Chr. v. 2; Je. iii. 11. Were not of Ephraim especially to come the many heirs of the promises made unto the fathers, just as of Judah was to come the One Heir, from whom the blessing was immediately to descend? Ge. xlviii. 15—20; xlix. 8—12.

2. Were not the lost tribes of Israel to be found in these, the last days, as 'a seed the Lord hath blessed?' Ho. ii. 14—23; Is. xxix. 17—23; lxi. 9, 10; lxvi. 8—14; Je. xxxi. 1—10; Eze. xi. 15—20; Ho. i. 10, 11. Do the signs of the times, as well as the prophetic dates, indicate the time to be come when God will have 'accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people?' Da. xii. 4—7; Is. vi. 11, 12, &c.

3. Have not all previous attempts to find the lost tribes of Israel proved abortive, especially as to the accounting for Ephraim, the heir of the promises made unto the fathers, and of which was to come the promised 'fulness of the Gentiles,' or 'multitude of nations?' Ro. xi. 25; Ge. xlviii. 19; Is. xli. 25—9. Does not the scripture declare, that the previous non-discovery of Israel has been occasioned by Israel's blindness, and not by God's failing to fulfil his word? Is. xlii. 18—25; xliii. 1—13; xlv. 17—21. Does not the scripture expressly recognise our present condition as being that in which Israel was to be found? And do they predict matters respecting Israel, which can only be fulfilled in these nations? Is. xxvii. 6—10; Je. xxxi. 10, 11; Mi. vii. 16; Je. iii. 18; Eze. xi. 16, &c.

4. Is it likely that the God of truth would utterly cast away the people unto whom the promises were made; and out of the same place bring forth quite a different people to have fulfilled to them the promises freely made unto Israel, and so solemnly confirmed to them by oath? Lu. i. 68—75; Rom. xv. 8; Mi. vii. 18—20; Is. xxv. 1—7; Ps. cv. 10. Could it thus be said that 'the gifts and calling of God are without repentance?' Rom. xi. 29; Is. xli. 8, 9.

5. Are not the mental and physical characteristics of the English exactly those that were to be expected of the nations promised to come of Ephraim? Can our ancient religious rites, political institutions, manners, and acquirements, better be accounted for than as having been derived from our ancient Israel? Do not the favours bestowed upon these nations in the north-west, and the whole course of God's dealings with the English nation, indicate clearly their being under the kindness and care of the good Shepherd of Israel? Ge. xlix. 22—6; Ps. lxxx. 1—3; cxlvii. 19, 20.

6. If this view of our Israelitish origin unfolds the great plan of Divine Providence, the mystery of Israel among the Gentiles; if it shews the exceeding goodness of God, and our responsibility; if it gives the loudest call to repentance for the past, and vigorous efforts for the future, is it not for the increase of true fear and love to God that this subject should be duly considered?—See Wilson's Lectures on Ancient Israel.

BETTER IS THE END OF A THING THAN THE BEGINNING THEREOF: AND THE PATIENT IN SPIRIT IS BETTER THAN THE PROUD IN SPIRIT.—Eccles. vii. 8.

SECTION 69.—(G. 43.)—[Lesson 64.]—JESUS SUBJOINS TWO MORE PARABLES, BOTH MORAL, OR RELATING TO THE RULE OF LIFE: THE PARABLE OF THE UNJUST STEWARD, AND THE PARABLE OF THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.—Luke xvi.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xvi. 1—7. Jesus teaches his disciples by the parable of the man who, when about to be put out of his stewardship, sought to make friends to himself of his lord's debtors, by forgiving in part the sums due by them to his master.

—— 8, 9. The Lord commends the wisdom of the unjust steward; and the disciples are exhorted to act also with forethought, using their wealth, as appointed by God, for the benefit of others.

—— 10—.3. Faithfulness and injustice are shewn in little things as well as in great. If men are unfaithful in temporal concerns, is it likely that God will entrust to them spiritual treasure, or bestow upon them as their own the everlasting inheritance? No servant can serve two masters.

—— 14. The Pharisees, being covetous, deride Jesus, on account of these sayings.

—— 15. Jesus reminds them, that although they may justify themselves before men, God knoweth their hearts.

—— 16, .7. He warns them that their monopoly of religious knowledge is fast passing away; but that sooner may heaven and earth pass away, than one tittle of the law fail.

—— 18. Jesus applies the law respecting adultery, so as to justify John in reproving Herod, in whose dominions Jesus now is.

Lu. xvi. 19—31. Jesus delivers the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

—— 19—21. The condition of the rich man, contrasted with that of Lazarus, in the present life.

—— 22, .3. The condition of Lazarus, contrasted with that of the rich man, in a future state.

—— 24. Prayer of the man in hell to Father Abraham for the very least favour.

—— 25, .6. Abraham's refusal, exposing the folly of the man having chosen his portion in the present life, after which no change can be made.

—— 27, .8. The man prays that Lazarus may be sent to his five brethren, to warn them against following the course of him who lived only for himself.

—— 29. Abraham refers them to the law and the prophets —— 30. The man says 'Nay,' and supposes that something more efficient than the scriptures may be had for their spiritual good.

—— 31. Abraham expresses himself decidedly against the ghostly advice of the church of Rome, as expressed by the man in hell; and intimates that the use of the scriptures is sufficient to teach the way of salvation.

No. 69.—Jesus delivers the parable of the unjust steward.—Luke xvi. 1—18.

1 And he-said also unto his disciples, There-was a-certain rich man, which had a-2 steward; and the-same was-accused unto-him that he-had-wasted his goods. And he-called him, and-said unto-him, How-is-it-that I-hear this of thee? give an account of-3 thy stewardship; for thou-mayest-be δυνηση no longer steward. Then the steward said within himself, What shall-I-do? for my lord taketh-away from me the stewardship: I-4 can ισχυω not dig; to-beg I-am-ashamed. I-am-resolved εγνων what to-do, that, when 5 I-am-put-out of-the stewardship, they-may-receive me into their houses. So he-called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and-said unto-the first, How-much owest-thou

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 1. wasted—This parable is related to the foregoing, which described the case of the son who 'wasted his substance with riotous living,' ch. xv. 13, 30, pp. 191—.4; but we are to consider that what we waste is not our own—at best we are only stewards, 1 Pe. iv. 10, 'As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.'

2. give an account—Ec. xii. 14—see border—Rom. xiv. 12, 'Every one of us shall give account of himself to God.'—Lu. xii. 42, § 63, p. 167, 'And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his houshold, to give them,' &c.—1 Co. iv. 2, 'It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.'—1 Pe. iv. 5, 'Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.'—See on Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43, and ADDENDA, p. 46.

no longer steward—This was to be the case of the Jews, represented in the preceding parable by the elder son—they had been entrusted with a high stewardship, the keeping of 'the oracles of God,' Rom. iii. 2—but they would neither enter the kingdom of God themselves, nor suffer others to enter, Lu. xi. 52, § 62, p. 157—And now it was to be taken from them, 'and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof,' Mt. xxi. 43, § 84, p. 290.

3. What shall I do?—The like question is put to a people, upon their having abused a most important stewardship with regard to the poor, Is. x. 3, 'And

NOTES.

[Lu. xvi. 1. As the preceding parable had been addressed especially to the Pharisees and scribes, so this was addressed to the disciples at large, including, doubtless, some of the lately converted publicans and rich men; for whom, indeed, it should seem, it was especially intended; as meant to set forth the danger of the love of money, and the impossibility of 'serving God and mammon;' also to shew the right use of wealth, and how it ought to be so employed, that being 'rich in this world,' they might also 'be rich in good works,' 1 Ti. vi. 17, .8.—Bloomf.]

A steward. Οἰκονομος, from οικος, a house, or οιμι, a family, and νεμω, I administer; one who superintends domestic concerns, and ministers to the support of the family, having the products of the fields, business, &c., put into his hands for this very purpose.

Wasted his goods. Had been profuse and prodigate, and had embezzled his master's property.

3. To beg I am ashamed. But not ashamed to cheat. This was a sense of honour!

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xvi. 1. Let us remember that the blessings we possess in the present life, are entrusted to us as stewards; and that we are to use them, not according to our own pleasure, but as directed by Him whose servants we are, and whom we ought to serve.

2 ver. Our time of reckoning may come at an earlier hour than we look for. Let us ever so act as that we may be able to give in our account with joy, whensoever we are called upon to resign our stewardship.

GOD SHALL BRING EVERY WORK INTO JUDGMENT, WITH EVERY SECRET THING, WHETHER IT BE GOOD, OR WHETHER IT BE EVIL.—Ecclesiastes xii. 14.

LUKE xvi. 6—10.

6 unto my lord? And he said, An-hundred measures of-oil. And he-said unto-him,
7 Take thy bill, and sit-down quickly, and-write fifty. Then said-he to-another, And how-much owest thou? And he said, An-hundred measures of-wheat. And he-said
8 unto-him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore. And the lord commended επηνεσεν the unjust της αδικιας steward, because he-had-done wisely φρονιμως: for the children of-this world αιωνος are in their generation εις την γενεαν την εαυτων wiser than υπερ the children of light του φωτος.
9 And-I say unto-you, Make to-yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; 10 that, when ye-fail, they-may-receive you into everlasting habitations σκηνας. He that is what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation which shall come from far? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory?'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 8. the lord—Some have supposed that 'the lord' here referred to is the rich man, called by the steward 'my lord,' ver. 3, 5, p. 196—It is doubtful, however, whether the evangelist would call him absolutely 'the Lord,' a title he usually gives to Jesus —see ch. xvii. 5, 6, § 70.

because he had done wisely—It was only in respect to worldly wisdom that his conduct could be commended—the Lord is far from commending unfaithfulness—see ver. 10—8.

children of light—Jno. xii. 36, § 82, p. 269, 'While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light.'—Eph. v. 8, 'Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light:'—1 Th. v. 5, 8, 'Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: . . . . Let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on,' &c.

9. Make to yourselves friends—see Mt. vi. 19, § 19, p. 134, 'Lay not up,' &c.—Lu. xi. 41, § 62, p. 186, 'But rather give alms,' &c.—1 Ti. vi. 17—9, 'Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches,' &c.

they may receive you—The angels of the Lord's little ones do always behold the face of his Father in heaven, Mt. xviii. 10, § 53, p. 82, and may be expected to welcome into heaven those who have been serviceable to their charge upon earth. Yea, we know that our Lord himself will say to them, as xxv. 34, § 86, 'Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:'—40, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'

NOTES.

Lu. xvi. 6. An hundred measures of oil. Called 'baths,' in the Old Testament rendering, 1 Ki. vii. 26; 2 Chr. ii. 10; Ezr. vii. 22.—Doddr. According to Godwin, the bath held four gallons and a half, so that 100 baths contained 450 gallons, some think more; the largest measure of capacity among the Hebrews, except the homer, of which it was the tenth part.—See Eze. xlv. 11, 14. It is equal to the ephah, that is, 'seven gallons and a half' of our measure. —A. C.

Oil. Oil of olives, or sweet oil. It was much used for lamps, as an article of food (Ex. xxix. 2), and also for anointing.

Bill. γραμμα. The 'accompt,' the writing in which the debt was specified, together with the obligation to pay so much at such and such times.

7. Measures of wheat. κορους, or 'cors of wheat,' [כֹּר, Heb.]; the same with 'homers,' Eze. xlv. 14. Godwin states that this measure held five bushels and five gallons, making the whole 560 bushels and a half.—Gill.

8. And the lord commended, &c. Because he had used timely precaution; so that, though the dishonesty of such a servant be detestable, yet his foresight, care, and contrivance, about the interests of this life, deserve our imitation, with regard to the more important affairs of another.

The children of this world. Those who seek no other portion than this world.—See Ps. xvii. 14.

In their generation, &c. They turn their connection with others to good account, and make it subserve their worldly interests, while Christians often fail to use the world in such a manner as to subserve their spiritual interests.

[Now to discern the force of εις την γενεαν, 'in their generation,' we must consider its purpose, which, as Bishop Sanderson and Mr. Greswell point out, is that of limitation or qualification. 'The children of this world,' observes Mr. Greswell, 'are not affirmed to be superior to the children of light in the possession of the faculty of worldly prudence, the providently adapting means to an end (for such is the force of the expression φρον), but in the use of it, and that with a view to a special purpose, namely, unto or for their own generation.'—Bloomf.]

Are . . . wiser. Not absolutely, for they are, one and all, egregious fools; but they are more consistent with themselves: they are truer to their principles; they more steadily pursue their end.

Than the children of light. Men 'who walk by the light of Divine truth,' and who therefore may be expected to act with both wisdom and honesty.

9. Make to yourselves friends, &c. The things of the world, which many make to be the enemies of all righteousness, do ye so use according to the will of God, by whom riches are bestowed, that you may prove faithful stewards, doing good unto all as you have opportunity.

Mammon. See Note, § 19, p. 134.

Of unrighteousness. Or 'of deceit,' or 'unfaithfulness,' as the word αδικιας may be rendered, because of the manner in which it is either used or employed, or on account of its being so apt to fail the expectation of the owners.

When ye fail. When ye lose your earthly stewardship.

They may receive you, &c. It is said of such as 'die in the Lord,' 'their works do follow them.' And the angels of those little ones whom they have befriended upon earth will gladly welcome them into glory.

Everlasting habitations. In opposition to the deceitfulness of riches, which are so transitory,—which make themselves wings and flee away.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvi. 4—7. Let us rejoice, that, in providing for the future, by bestowing upon others, we are in a happier situation than the unjust steward: we are acting honestly as well as wisely. It was for the very purpose of exercising forgiveness, and of being bountiful to others, we were put into the stewardship.]

[8 ver. True wisdom is the making our present means productive of the greatest advantage in the future. Worldly wisdom looks only to time, and the children of light are too often caught by prevailing example, so as to have their view of heavenly and eternal things darkened, and their efforts correspondently slackened, to their incalculable loss.]

9 ver. Money hoarded, as an object of trust, is dishonouring to God, in whom should be all our confidence. Let us part with it in time, that we may have the gain of it in eternity.

faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the-11 least is unjust also in much. If therefore ye-have-not-been faithful in the unrighteous
*i*2 mammon, who will-commit-to your-trust the true riches? And if ye-have-not-been faithful in that which is another-man's, who shall-give you that which is your-own?
13 No servant can serve two masters: for either he-will-hate the one, and love the other; or-else he-will-hold-to ανθεξεται the one, and despise the other. Ye-can not serve God and mammon.
14 And the Pharisees also, who-were covetous φιλαργυροι, heard all these-things. and 15 they-derided εξεμυκτηριζον him. And he-said unto-them, Ye are they which-justify

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 10. faithful in that which is least—To such the Lord will say, as Mt. xxv. 21, § 86. 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.'—See also Lu. xix. 17, § 80, p. 249.

11. commit to your trust the true, &c.—When his people have proved themselves faithful, as acting according to the law of love, in the use of temporal wealth and power, the Lord will bestow upon them abundance of spiritual blessing, Is. lviii. 6—8.

12. another man's—Israel were tried with a temporary possession of the land under the law, De. xxviii. 58, 63—having proved unfaithful, they were cast out of the inheritance, 2 Ki. xvii. 7—23. . . . . —Neither they nor the Jews were given possession of it as their own, according to the everlasting covenant made with the fathers, as Ge. xiii. 15; xvii. 8—but when Israel prove faithful in their stewardship out of the land, and especially with regard to the sabbath, then shall they be given possession of their own inheritance—' Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it,' Is. lviii. 10—4.

your own—ch. x. 42, § 61, p. 150. 'But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.'—1 Co. iii. 21, .2, 'Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are your's;' &c.—Rev. xxi. 7, 'He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.'—xxii. 5, 'And they shall reign for ever and ever.'

13. No servant can serve, &c.—see on Mt. vi. 24, § 19, p. 134, 'No man,' &c.

14. covetous—They had been described by the prophet, Je. vi. 13, 'From the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.'—Our Lord had before warned against covetousness, Lu. xii. 15—21, § 63, p. 164—He afterwards exposes that of the Pharisees, Mt. xxiii. 14, § 85, 'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses,' &c.

derided—Is. liii. 3, 'He is despised and rejected of men;' &c.—He. xii. 3, 'Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.'

NOTES.

Lu. xvi. 10. He that is faithful, &c. An adagial saying, to be understood only of what generally happens, and adverting to the principle on which masters act, who, after proving the fidelity of servants in small matters, at length confide more important business to their care. It is by habituating himself to act uprightly in little things, that a man acquires the gracious habit of acting with propriety and fidelity in matters of the greatest concern.

10—2. The connection is, 'Be faithful stewards of wealth. Take care also that ye be not enslaved by it.'

[11. If. . ye have not been faithful, &c. If ye have not been faithful in that worldly wealth which you know must soon be parted with, how can you expect that God will commit to you those spiritual blessings in which alone true riches consist? Or, again, if ye have not been faithful in your stewardship of that which is entrusted to you for a season by another, namely, by God, how can ye expect that he will give you an inheritance which will be your own for ever? Lonsdale and Hale.]

If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's. None of these temporal things are yours; you are only stewards of them, not proprietors; God is the proprietor of all: he lodges them in your hands for a season; but still they are his property. Rich men, understand and consider this. If your steward uses any part of your estate (so called in the language of men) any farther or any otherwise than you direct, he is a knave; he has neither conscience nor honour. Neither have you either one or the other, if you use any part of that estate, which is in truth God's, not yours, any otherwise than he directs.

12. Another man's. Rather, another's, that is, God's. There is nothing in the original that answers to the word 'man's.'—See on ver. 11.

That which is your own. Grace and glory. Heaven, which when you have it, will be your own for ever.

[13. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. God is a God of love, doing good unto all men. Mammon is the God of this world, whom so many worship and gratify, at the expense, and to the disadvantage and contempt, of all others. If we serve God truly, we shall love him, and do good to his creatures. If self is only thought of, then we serve mammon, and heap up riches for our selfish gratification, and banishment from Him who is the source of all blessing. If we love God, we must hate selfishness; for God is 'LOVE.' You cannot be faithful to God, if you trim between God and the world; if you do not serve him alone.—See on Mt. vi. 24, SCRIP. ILLUS., § 19, p. 134.]

14. The foregoing discourse was addressed, indeed, to the disciples, but the ground of it was the covetousness of the Pharisees, who were within hearing.

derided him. Ἐξεμυκτήριζον, 'sneered at him.' Μυκτηρίζειν (from μυκτὴρ, the nose), properly signifying to turn up the nose, is, by a metaphor common to most languages, used to designate derision. Their avarice made them ridicule the doctrine that they were only stewards of wealth, and ought to distribute thereof to those that need.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xvi. 10. Let us be faithful in that which we have, if we would have more committed to our care.

[11 ver. Let us make that use of temporal good which God has designed, if we desire to be put in trust with the true riches, and made the rich dispensers of spiritual blessing.]

12 ver. Let us be faithful in that which is committed to us for time, as we expect to possess that inheritance which is to be ours for eternity.

13 ver. Let not the children of God debase themselves by serving the world; rather let them make this world subservient to their eternal interests, by employing it in the service of God.

14 ver. When our Saviour was upon earth, the rules of heavenly wisdom were, by the greatest professors of religion, accounted foolishness. May it not be so in our day? yet it is often hard to convince even the followers of Christ, that the wealth they possess is not their own, but given them in trust, to be altogether used for the glory of God and the good of their fellow-creatures.

LUKE xvi. 16—.9.

yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly-esteemed ὑψηλὸν among men is abomination in-the-sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets were until John: since that-time the kingdom of God is-17 preached, and every-man presseth βιάζεται into it.* And it-is easier for-heaven and earth to-pass, than one tittle of-the law to-fail.

18 Whosoever putteth-away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth-adultery and whosoever marrieth her-that-is-put-away from her husband committeth-adultery.

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus.—Luke xvi. 19—31.

19 There-was a-certain rich man, which was-clothed in-purple and fine-linen, and-fared

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 15. justify yourselves — ch. x. 29, § 60, p. 146, 'But he, willing to justify himself,' &c.—see the boasting of the Pharisee even when professing to approach God in prayer, ch. xviii. 11, § 73, p. 217.

knoweth your hearts—Ps. vii. 9, 'Oh let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but establish the just: for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.'—Je. xvii. 10, 'I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins,' &c.—see on Jno. ii. 25, § 12, p. 82, 'He knew what was in man.'

esteemed among men—Ps. xlix. 6, 'They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches; 13, This their way is their folly: yet their posterity approve their sayings. 18, While he lived he blessed his soul: and men will praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself.'

abomination in the sight of God—Pr. xvi. 5, 'Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the LORD:' &c.—Am. v. 21—3. . . . . 'I hate, I despise your feast days,' &c.—1 Ti. vi. 10, 'For the love of money is the root of all evil:' &c.

16. law and the prophets—see on ch. xxiv. 27, § 94.

until John—The last of the Old Testament prophets, at the close of his prophecy, pointed to John, Mal. iii. 1. . . . . iv. 5, 6. . . . —on the preaching of John, see § 7, pp. 49—54.

the kingdom of God is preached—Mt. iv. 17, § 16, p. 108, 'From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.'—xi. 12, .3, § 39, p. 225, 'From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.'

17. easier for heaven and earth to pass—see on Mt. v. 18, § 19, p. 123—Is. li. 6, 'Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.'—Mk. xiii. 31, § 86, p. 310, 'Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.'—1 Pe. i. 25, 'But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.'

18. Whosoever putteth away his wife—see on Mt. v. 32, § 19, p. 126—Herod, in whose dominions Jesus now was, Lu. xiii. 31, § 66, p. 178, had both put away his own wife, and married the wife of his brother Philip; on account of reproving him for which, John the Baptist had been put to death, Mk. vi. 17—29, § 40, pp. 205—.8—The same prophet who so expressly predicted the preaching of John, was equally expressive in denouncing putting away, Mal. ii. 14—.6.

19. purple and fine linen—both are mentioned among the riches of Tyre, Eze. xxvii. 7—The mother of harlots, Rev. xvii. 4, 'And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden,' &c.

fared sumptuously—like the rich man described in a former parable, ch. xii. 19, § 63, p. 165.

NOTES.

Lu. xvi. 15. Justify yourselves. Literally, 'making yourselves appear just,' arrogating to yourselves a virtue and sanctity not really yours.

Knoweth your hearts. Knoweth your hypocrisy, and that you do all to be seen of men, and not from love to God or for his glory.

That which is highly esteemed among men. Those worldly possessions, on account of which man is much thought of by man, if maintained by selfishness, in opposition to the claims of benevolence, are abominations in the sight of God.

16. The law and the prophets. See on Mt. xi. 12, .3, § 29, p. 225.

17. See on Mt. v. 17, .8, § 19, p. 123.

18. See on Mt. v. 32, § ib., p. 126, and xix. 3, 4, 8, § 74, p. 218.

[19. It has been disputed whether the following narration be a real history, or merely a story, or something composed of both, i. e., founded on fact, but adorned with colouring and imagery, in which the abuse of riches is forcibly contrasted with the struggles of poverty. This compound, however, would involve some incongruity. The first mentioned view is adopted by Mr. Greswell.

'The design of our Lord in this parable was to impress on their minds, by example, the foregoing precepts, as presented in another historical picture, like that with which he introduced the subject. In this he not only gives the substance of what had been previously said by him on the use of riches, but withal a most impressive warning as to the highly penal consequences of their abuse. In short, the design of our Lord (as Dr. Campbell observes), is 'to admonish us not that a monster of wickedness (such as many commentators unwarrantably and injudici-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvi. 15. It is not enough that we can, according to the maxims of the world, justify ourselves before men. Let us ever remember that God knoweth our hearts, that he requires truth in the inward parts, and that the law of his kingdom is LOVE;—that heaping up wealth to ourselves which makes man be valued by his fellow-men, is abomination in the sight of Him, who has given it for distribution among the poor and needy.]

[16 ver. Let us rejoice that 'the Law and the Prophets' are no longer exclusively possessed by the comparatively rich—that the kingdom of heaven is set open for the very poorest to enter, and that those who have nothing but their hearts and their lives to give unto God, may yet possess the very highest consolations of religion, and the very best means of spiritual edification.]

[17 ver. If the Pharisees had considered that the requirements of the law are strict and unalterable, and that Christ is the end of the law for righteousness,—they would have known their own poverty, and the riches of the grace of God; by which we are taught that 'love which is the fulfilling of the law.']

[18 ver. Neither station nor wealth can give a dispensation for breaking the commandments of God: although in the dominions of Herod, our Lord here affirms the judgment of the Baptist upon that monarch, on account of which John, at the instigation of the adulteress, was put to death.]

* The same declaration occurs Mt. xi. 12, .3, § 29, p. 225, Greswell, Vol. I. Diss. iii. p. 229.

LUKE xvi. 20—3.

20 sumptuously εὐφραινομενος λαμπρως every day: and there was a certain beggar named 21 Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full-of-sores, and desiring to-be-fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich-man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his 22 sores. And it-came-to-pass, that-the beggar-died, and was carried by the angels into 23 Abraham's bosom: the rich-man also died, and was buried; and in hell τῳ ᾅδῃ he-lift-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 20. laid at his gate—Ac. iii. 2. 'And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;'

full of sores—so Job, ch. ii. 7, 8, 'So went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with sore boils from the sole of his foot unto his crown. And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and he sat down among the ashes.'

22. Abraham's bosom—Mt. viii. 11, § 28, p. 220, 'Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.'

the rich man also died—Ps. xlix. 6—15.

23. being in torments—Of him who worships the beast, &c., it is said, Rev. xiv. 10, 11, 'He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast.'

NOTES.

only here suppose) shall be severely punished in the other world; but that the man who, though not chargeable with doing much ill, does little or no good, and lives, though not perhaps an intemperate, a sensual life; who, careless about the condition of others, exists only for the gratification of himself, the indulgence of his own appetites, and his own vanity, shall not escape punishment. It is to show the danger of living in the neglect of duties, though not chargeable with the commission of crimes; and particularly the danger of considering the gifts of providence as our own property, and not as a trust from our Creator, to be employed in his service, and for which we are accountable to him.

'In the latter part of the parable, ver. 27—31, our Lord intimates to his hearers, that they are sufficiently assured of the sinfulness and danger of sensuality and selfishness, by those writings of Moses and the prophets, which were continually in their hands, and which they acknowledged to be of Divine authority; and that, if they would not attend to them, the testimony even of one risen from the dead would fail of persuading them to amend their course of life.'—Bloomf.]

Lu. xvi. 19. A certain rich man. Very probably a Pharisee, and one that justified himself before men. A very honest, as well as honourable gentleman.

Rich man. The word 'dives' being the Latin for 'rich,' has occasioned this to be called the parable of 'Dives and Lazarus.'

Which was clothed in purple and fine linen. And doubtless esteemed on this account (perhaps not only by those who sold, but by most that knew him) as encouraging trade, and acting according to his rank or station.

[Fared sumptuously, εὐφραινομενος καθ' ἡμεραν λαμπρ. Render, 'enjoying himself sumptuously (i. e., in expensive luxury) day by day.'—See ch. xii. 19; § 63, p. 165. Here, however, the expression may have reference to more than food, &c., and (as Grotwell observes) extend to every pleasure, satisfaction, and convenience, of dress, gaiety, &c., which wealth can supply, to minister to the daily enjoyment, amusement, and self-satisfaction, of a rich voluptuary; in short, whatever is comprehended in the description of St. John, 1 Ep. ii. 16, 'For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.'—Bloomf.]

20. A certain beggar. πτωχος. Render, not 'a beggar,' but 'a poor destitute person,' as the usus loquendi and the contrast require. The word very frequently occurs in the New Testament; and except here, and in ver. 22, is always rendered poor.

Named Lazarus. Lazarus, לְעָזָר is a contraction of the word אֶלְעָזָר Eliezer, which signifies the help, or assistance of God. A name properly given to a man who was both poor and afflicted, and had no help but that which came from heaven.

Full of sores. ἑλκωμενος. As persons of this destitute condition often are (partly from the cutaneous disorders produced by meagre diet and bad living).

21. Desiring to be fed. See on ver. 19, supra. From the circumstance afterwards introduced of the rich man asking for Lazarus to administer relief to him in his torments, it should seem that he regarded himself, in some measure, as a benefactor to him, in having relieved him with the scraps from his table; yet he was undoubtedly guilty of the neglect here intimated, of omitting to make himself acquainted with the miserable condition of Lazarus, so as to effectually relieve his sufferings, and restore him to health and strength.

22. Into Abraham's bosom. So the Jews styled paradise; the place where the souls of good men remain from death to the resurrection.

Abraham's bosom. A Jewish mode of speaking. The entertainments of heaven are described as a magnificent banquet with Abraham and the other patriarchs.—Comp. Mt. viii. 11, § 28, p. 220, and Lu. xxii. 30, § 87, p. 376. The phrase bears allusion to the custom at Jewish feasts of several guests lying on one couch, the head of one being placed near the bosom of another.—See Jno. xiii. 25. The meaning is, that the beggar was received into a state of happiness, and admitted to a place of peculiar honour.

The rich man also died, and was buried. Doubtless with pomp enough, though we do not read of his lying in state.

23. In hell. ἐν τῳ ᾅδῃ. 'The place of departed souls.' Both the rich man and the poor man are here described as being in the same neighbourhood, but separated by an impassable gulf from each other; the one in a state of peace, the other in a state of suffering.—See ADDENDA, p. 209, 'Hades.'

['It is commonly supposed that the word here signifies hell, the place of torment. And so Pro-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xvi. 19—21. Let him who is clothed consider the case of him who is naked; and let him who is fed abundantly, remember that there may be at his very gate those to whom the crumbs of his table would be a feast. Let him fear to meet the reproaches of those whom he hath in such circumstances left to perish.

How contrary was the case of Lazarus to that of the rich man! The one had the best, and abundance of both food and clothing; of the other, it is not said that he was fed, but that he desired to be fed, not merely of that which was left by the rich man, but of the crumbs which fell from his table. He is not said to have had any home upon earth, and so destitute was he of clothing, that his sores were kept continually open by the tongues of the dogs.

22, 23 ver. As contrary were the cases of the two men after death. The beggar died—what became of

LET US NOT LOVE IN WORD, NEITHER IN TONGUE; BUT IN DEED AND IN TRUTH.—1 John iii. 18. GOD IS LOVE; AND HE THAT DWELLETH IN LOVE DWELLETH IN GOD, AND GOD IN HIM.—1 John iv. 16.

Luke xvi. 24—.8.

up his eyes, being in torments, and·seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.
24 And he cried and·said, Father Abraham, have·mercy·on me, and send Lazarus, that he may·dip the tip of·his finger in·water, and cool my tongue; for I·am·tormented
25 οδυνωμαι in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst απελαβες thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil·things: but now he is· 26 comforted, and thou art·tormented. And beside all this, between us and you there·is·a·great gulf·fixed εστηρικται: so·that they which·would pass from·hence to you can not;
27 neither can·they·pass to us, that would come from·thence. Then he·said, I·pray ερωτω
28 thee therefore, father, that thou·wouldest·send him to my father's house: for I·have five brethren; that he·may·testify·unto διαμαρτυρηται them, lest they also come into this

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS

Lu. xvi. 24. Father Abraham—Job v. 1, 'Call now, if there be any that will answer thee; and to which of the saints wilt thou turn?'

this flame—Mk. ix. 44, § 52, p. 77, 'Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.'

25. Son—The man in hell had called Abraham 'Father,' ver. 24—Abraham does not deny the natural relationship, but he denies that it can be of the least service to him who died in the midst of his riches—see ver. 26, &c.

in thy lifetime, &c.—Job xxi. 13, 'They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave.'—Ps. lxxiii. 12, &c., 'Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.'—19, 'How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.'—Lu. vi. 24, § 27, p 208, 'But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.'

he is comforted—Is. lvii. 2, 'He shall enter into peace: they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.'—Rev. xiv. 13, 'Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord,' &c.

NOTES.

fessor Stuart, in his Exegetical Essays on words denoting future punishment, assigns this sense; though he admits that this is the only passage in which the word bears that import. Others, however, as Wetstein, Rosenmuller, Campbell, Kuinoel, and Mr. Greswell, Parab, take it in the usual signification to denote the place of departed souls, Sheol, or Hades (see Ac. ii. 27, and Note on Mt. xi. 23), which the Jews, as well as the Greeks, supposed to be divided into two parts, Paradise and Gehenna, contiguous to each other, but separated by an impassable chasm [thus Hor. Carm. ii. 13, 23, sedesque discretas plorum]; so narrow, however, that there was a prospect of one from the other; nay, such that their respective inmates could converse with each other. Thus both the rich man and Lazarus would be equally in Hades, though in different parts.

'This latter view seems preferable, because it is better to avoid supposing any such unusual signification as the above; and the ordinary one is far more agreeable to what precedes. Indeed, if ἐν βασάνοις be meant, as Kuinoel thinks, to qualify ἐν τῷ ᾅδῃ (meaning, 'in the place of torment'), that would of itself decidedly prove that ᾅδης must be taken in the usual sense; otherwise, according to the signification hell, no such qualification could have been necessary. Ἐν βασάνοις may be rendered, 'under torture,' namely, such as was suited to the τάρταρος, or prison of Hades, called Tartarus (where spirits are reserved for judgment, see 2 Pe. ii. 4); but, properly speaking, not Gehenna, the lake of fire, the second death. —See Rev. xx. 14.

'This parabolical representation is, indeed, accommodated to Jewish ideas, and the invisible state is described by images derived from the senses. But it is going too far to say, with Dr. Jortin (in D'Oyly and Mant), that "we are only to infer from hence the doctrine of a future state of rewards and punishments." It must surely be concluded from hence, that there is an intermediate state before the general resurrection; since that is far too prominent a feature of the representation to be numbered with circumstances merely ornamental. On which subject, see Mr. Greswell.'—Bloomf.]—See infra, p. 202, ADDENDA, 'Hades.'

Lu. xvi. 24. Father Abraham. The Jews rested much for forgiveness in the blessing of Abraham.

Dip the tip, &c. This shews the greatness of his distress. The sufferings of the rich man are, therefore, represented as producing burning thirst; so much so, that even a drop of water would be refreshing to his tongue.

Flame. May, as Mr. Greswell shews, be regarded as a figurative expression, to represent the acutest suffering of which an immaterial nature is susceptible, by a material image of misery the most dire.

25. Abraham said, Son. Abraham acknowledged the rich man as his descendant, but shewed that natural relationship is no guarantee for the pardon of sin. Lazarus was destitute of worldly riches, but had heavenly rest. The rich man lived slothfully and selfishly, and 'in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments.'

He is comforted. God often tries his children in this life with poverty, that through faith in Christ they may be made rich in eternity.

Thou art tormented. The selfish rich, unlike the godly poor, have their portion in this life. The little success that the rich man had in praying to even the father of the faithful, seems to give but small encouragement to the practice of praying to the saints, even when backed by abundant power of paying for masses; and that for one who does not appear to have been any remarkable criminal, but merely a self-indulgent man, who gave of the overflowings of his table to the poor, and who had also all the advantage of being a natural descendant of Abraham.

The remembrance of the good things possessed in this life, and to be enjoyed no more for ever, together with the remembrance of grace offered or abused, will be a bitter portion in the perdition of the ungodly.

26. χάσμα μέγα ἐστήρικται. 'A great chasm is fixedly placed.' 'The word,' says Wetstein, 'is especially used of a space extending from an upper to a lower situation, especially fissures from earthquakes.'

28. Lest they also come into this place. He might justly fear lest their reproaches should add to his own torment.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

his body is not said: but he is borne by heavenly messengers to the feast of the blessed; and is given the most desirable place in paradise—the bosom of the father of the faithful. Of the rich man, it is not only said that he died, but that he was buried. Nothing, doubtless, was wanting of those religious rites which may be had for money; but whatever benefit these may have been to the performers, they seem to have been of no service to him; for 'in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments.'

Lu. xvi. 24—.6. Here we have perhaps the only example in scripture of prayer to a departed saint. It is that of a man in hell to the father of the faithful: but although for the very least favour to a son of Abraham, it is altogether unsuccessful.

Let us be sure that worldly wealth and ease give no passport to heaven; and that neither is it a sign that we are neglected of God when we are subjected to suffering in the present life.

LUKE xvi. 29—31.

29 place of torment. Abraham saith unto-him, They-have Moses and the prophets; let-30 them-hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from 31 the-dead, they-will-repent. And he-said unto-him, If they-hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will-they-be-persuaded, though one rose from the-dead.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvi. 29. Moses and the prophets—see ver. 16, p. 199.

let them hear them—Is. viii. 20, 'To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.'—Jno. v. 39, § 23, p. 180, 'Search the scriptures;' &c.

31. neither will they be persuaded—So far were the chief priests from being persuaded when a Lazarus was actually raised from the dead—they 'consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death; because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus,' Jno. xii. 10, 11, § 81, p. 257.

NOTES.

Lu. xvi. 30. Nay, . . . but if one went, &c. Here we find the like wilfulness that led this man to reject God's time and way of salvation for himself; with true Roman Catholic audacity he opposes the Bible; and says 'Nay,' to the suggestion of Abraham, that his brethren still on earth should attend to the written word of God, in order to escape the like fearful end. The folly of the rich man was the more inexcusable, when it is considered that he must have known that Abraham had lived in the world at a time when Moses and the prophets were not; and could not, therefore, be supposed to speak from prejudice in their favour. But still greater is the impudence of the church of Rome, that after this fearful warning, continues its prayers to the dead, and these procured by the rich man for money; and at the same time opposes, with the presumption and pertinacity of this inhabitant of hell, the free circulation of those holy writings of which our Lord hath said, 'Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.' We are to hear these witnesses as testifying of Christ: so do we escape that place of torment, which we never can by our own doings and sufferings, or by the masses or intercessions of others. It may be observed that a Lazarus did return from the dead, and that this, so far from staying the enmity of the Jews, only stirred it up the more: and the more fixed them in their desire to slay Him through whom alone we can obtain life.

31. If they hear not Moses, &c. Though this be only a parable, yet our Lord would not by it have taught error. Plainly, therefore, it teaches the immortality of the soul, and its passing instantly after death into a state of bliss or awful misery.

[Neither will they be persuaded. The design of the parable was to impress all the truths He had just taught them more vividly on the mind, and to shew the Pharisees that with all their boasted righteousness, and external correctness of character, they might be lost amidst all their wealth. Accordingly, He speaks of no great fault in the rich man, no external degrading vice, no open breach of the law; but leaves us to infer, that the mere possession of wealth is dangerous to the soul; and that a man, surrounded with every temporal blessing, may perish for ever.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvi. 27, 28 ver. Although the man in hell seems to have been so far like the Roman Catholics as to have supposed that a departed saint might do something for his benefit, yet he was not so foolish as to expect that by any services his brethren might perform for him, he could be delivered from his torments—he only thought he might do them service, by getting them forewarned of the miserable end of those who live merely for themselves.]

29 ver. 'The law and the prophets' are both to be possessed and studied by the people, and not alone by the clergy—as they pretend who trust in burial services and prayers to saints, for deliverance after death from the place of torment.

[The openly profane, who care nothing for the words of God, are not the only persons that are in danger. At a time when the possession of the scriptures indicated a willingness to be at much expense on account of religion, these five brethren had Moses and the prophets: yet they were in danger of eternal perdition.]

30 ver. Here we have an example of one of the great controversies between the Protestant and Roman Catholic communions—the former holding with Abraham, that the scriptures are to be freely circulated and attentively studied, and strictly followed; but the latter saying with the man in hell, 'Nay'—and this not only to father Abraham, but to the Saviour himself, who hath said, 'Search the scriptures.'

[31 ver. They who possess the scriptures, which shew the whole providence of God witnessing to the truth of his holiness and grace, which by such a variety of instrumentality lay hold upon all the means of affecting the human heart, and melting it to love, and moulding it after the Divine image—that those, having the scriptures, resist the Holy Ghost, who thereby exerts his power, are not likely to be benefited by the ministrations of any other spirit. No! not even by a Lazarus risen from the dead.]

ADDENDA.

ON THE EXISTENCE AND LOCALITY OF HADES.

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus.—'The first part of the history . . . . requires no other evidence but its own probability at once to convince us that the transaction which it relates is not only possible, but may be real; in which case the remainder of the narrative, which is in fact merely the sequel of the former, the second part of one and the same account, it may well be presumed, is real also. It would be manifestly incongruous for one part of the same continuous detail of things to be matter of fact, the rest (and the most important part of the whole) to be purely imaginary and fictitious.'

Mr. Greswell states the following propositions, supporting each by the necessary scriptural proof in its order.

FIRST. That the soul of man does not continue united to the body of man after death, but that an actual separation of the soul from the body is produced by death.

SECONDLY. That the soul in its disembodied state passes directly into the hands of God.

THIRDLY. That the soul in its disembodied state, by passing into the hands of God, becomes added or joined to a certain society, company, or congregation of disembodied souls like itself.

FOURTHLY. That this society, company, or congregation of disembodied souls, is not anywhere existent, or after any manner, but in a determinate locality, the proper name of which, considered as the receptacle of all the souls of the dead indiscriminately, is Hades in general.

IN THIS THE CHILDREN OF GOD ARE MANIFEST, AND THE CHILDREN OF THE DEVIL: WHOSOEVER DOETH NOT RIGHTEOUSNESS IS NOT OF GOD, NEITHER HE THAT LOVETH NOT HIS BROTHER.—1 John iii. 10.

With respect to the first proposition — That the actual separation of the soul from the body is produced by death—from the parable this is deducible. The body of Dives was buried, yet Dives himself immediately after was in Hades. Now he could not be there himself while his body was in the grave, except in a disembodied state; that is, except in his soul, but not in his body.

The same is deducible from the words of our Saviour to the thief on the cross, Lu. xxiii. 43, 'Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.'

The expiration of our Saviour on the cross is a case in point upon this question of what takes place at death in the separation of the soul from the body. Two of the evangelists, St. Mark, xv. 37, and St. Luke, xxiii. 46, § 91, express the act of this expiration by ἐξέπνευσεν; the proper meaning of which word is, 'breathed forth,'—in which sense it is often used as tantamount to our own, of expiring, for the simple act of dying—without implying the mode of the fact, viz., the breathing out, as it were, of the soul—the actual rendering up of the ghost or spirit. But that it means more in each of these instances, especially in the instance of St. Luke, than the mere act of dying—that it involves moreover the precise nature of the mode of dying, viz., by the actual separation of the soul from the body—may justly be inferred from the fact that this act of our Saviour, by which he expired, was preceded almost directly, in point of time, by the exclamation, Πάτερ, εἰς χεῖράς σου παραθήσομαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου: upon which observes the evangelist, ἐξέπνευσεν, (Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἐξέπνευσεν,) 'And having said these words he expired.' The act of the expiration following upon such a declaration, must have implied something more than the mere fact of his dying, viz., the mode of the fact, by the parting of his soul from his body, to be committed to the hands of the Father. . . . .

In proof of the second proposition—That the soul in its disembodied state passes directly into the hands of God. From the parable it appears that the soul of Lazarus, immediately after death, passed into the hands of the angels; this is, to pass into the hands of God, of whom the angels, under all circumstances of their agency, are but the instruments and ministers.

The commendation of his spirit by our Saviour into the hands of the Father, Lu. xxiii. 46; Ps. xxxi. 5, is an argument of the truth of this proposition. And so of the commendation of his spirit to our Saviour by St. Stephen, Ac. vii. 59. Each implies alike, that the soul, the moment it is separated from the body, passes at once into the hands of God.—See also 1 Pe. iv. 19. It is plainly affirmed, Ec. xii. 7, 'Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.'

In proof of the third proposition, viz.—That the soul in its disembodied state, by passing into the hands of God, becomes added or joined to a certain society, company, or congregation of disembodied souls, like itself.'

The phrases 'Go to thy fathers,' 'Gathered to his people.' 'Sleep with thy fathers,' used in reference to the disposal of such and such persons after death, as Ge. xv. 15, and xxv. 8, in reference to Abraham; of Ishmael, xxv. 17; of Isaac, xxxv. 29; and of Jacob, xlix. 29, 33.—See Ac. xiii. 36. 'Gathered unto his fathers,' used by St. Paul of David. This gathering unto, going unto, sleeping with his or their fathers, could not be the aggregation of the whole individual to his fathers, for that would be not of the dead individual, but of the living one. It could not be a gathering to the bodies of their fathers. The bodies of the ancestors of Abraham, for example, doubtless rested in Ur of Chaldæa, and his father's body in Haran, beyond the river, when his own was sleeping in Machpelah.

It must be understood of being 'gathered to his fathers' by the event of his dying, in his soul, distinct from his body; both because the soul, though apart from his body, may still be the same individual as before (the same individual out of the body, who was before in the body), if the soul retains its consciousness and personality out of the body, as well as in it; and because, if the souls of the dead are formed into a common society, complex, or congregation by themselves, any particular soul may be, and must be, added to that complex in its turn, as soon as it is dead. And thus the words of David concerning the death of the child born to him by Bathsheba, 2 Sa. xii. 23, must be understood.

The same truth is still more plainly implied by the words of Samuel to Saul, 1 Sa. xxviii. 19, 'And to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me:' this could not be said of the bodies of Saul and his sons. —See 1 Sa. xxxi., and 2 Sa. xxi. It must be understood of the soul of Saul, as soon as he had fallen in battle.

The fourth proposition is—That this society, company, or congregation of disembodied souls, is not anywhere existent, or after any manner, but in a determinate locality, the proper name of which, considered as the receptacle of all the souls of the dead indiscriminately is Hades in general.

The name Hades is borrowed directly from the Greek language. Custom has appropriated it not to any intermediate state, but to the sense of the proper locality which is destined to receive such and such portion of the dead after the general judgment.

The meaning of the word in Greek is, the region of departed spirits; the proper locality which was supposed to comprehend the souls of all mankind who had ceased to live; a region divided into distinct quarters, appropriated to distinct inhabitants, and subject, both in general and in particular, to its proper presiding divinities; the Dii Manes, or Inferi, bearing to the lower world the same relation as the Dii Superi, or Cœlicolæ, to the upper.

The word in Hebrew, for which the version of the Septuagint almost invariably substitutes the Greek term Hades, is שְׁאוֹל, or Sheol.—See Lu. xvi. 23; Mt. xi. 23; xvi. 18; Lu. x. 15; see also 1 Co. xv. 55, where St. Paul employs it; and Rev. i. 18; vi. 8; xx. 13, 14, where it is used by the author of that book.

Sheol is sometimes rendered the grave, the pit, hell; for numerous instances, see Greswell, Par., Vol. IV. p. 291.

The following passages would perhaps be as appropriate as any to shew that in the language of the prophets, Sheol, or Hades, is the supposed common receptacle of all who die—the great or the little, the high or the low, the rich or the poor; not as simply synonymous with the grave, but as a locality sui generis, and comprehending all in common, which no grave does.—See Is. v. 14; xiv. 9; Eze. xxxi. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18; xxxii. 18, 19, 21, 22, 24, 26, 29, 30, 31; Job xvii. 13—16; xxxiii. 18, 22, 24, 28, 30; Pr. i. 12; v. 5; ix. 18; xxvii. 20; Ec. iii. 20; Is. xxviii. 15, 18; La. iii. 6; Eze. xxvi. 20.

The testimony of the parable may be appealed to in proof of the proposition, in this instance, as well as in the others, for both Lazarus and Dives are no sooner perceived to be dead, than they are seen to be in Hades, and Abraham, the common father of both, is seen to be there before them; all which, being literally understood, goes directly to prove that Hades is the common receptacle of the dead.

OF THE LOCALITY OF HADES.

There are good grounds, on the authority of scripture, to conclude, first, that the locality of Hades is within the earth; and secondly, that the locality of Hades is the deepest point within the earth.

Among the phrases of frequent occurrence in the scripture of the Old Testament, one is, the 'lower,' or 'nether parts of the earth.' In this latter form it occurs, Is. xliv. 23; Eze. xxxi. 14, 16, 18; xxxii. 18, 24. The phrase, 'the lower parts of the earth,' occurs in Ps. lxiii. 9; and a similar phrase, Eze. xxvi. 20, 'the low parts of the earth.' In all these instances, the context demonstrates that each of these phrases is but a circumlocutory description for Hades, the proper locality of souls after death, and consequently that Hades is below the earth. See Is. xiv. 9, 'Hell FROM BENEATH is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming.' Mr. Greswell, for further proof, dwells much on the narrative respecting the fate of Korah, &c., Nu. xvi., and on the appearance of Samuel to Saul, 1 Sa. xxviii. 8—19.

For confirmation of the next proposition—That the locality of Hades is not only within the earth, but the deepest point under the earth.

WORLDLY POSSESSIONS, WITHOUT THE LOVE OF GOD, CAN NEVER CONFER SOLID HAPPINESS; MUCH BETTER IS POVERTY WITH THE FRIENDSHIP OF GOD, THAN ALL THAT THE WORLD CAN BESTOW.

Many passages in the Old Testament speak of Hades as the place of darkness, κατ' ἐξοχήν—of darkness, the intensity of which was not to be judged of by any comparison of the utmost degree of darkness known upon earth, but involved no less than the utter privation of light. Such places are Job x. 21, 22; xii. 22; xvii. 13; xxiv. 17; Ec. vi. 4; Ps. lxxxviii. 6, 12; cxliii. 3, &c. . . . These very descriptions, common as they are in the Old Testament, and exaggerated as they may appear, when rightly explained, are resolvable into what may be truly the property of Hades, in respect to human apprehension; viz., that it is the lowest conceivable point underneath the earth.

Again, one of the names of Hades, both in the Old Testament and in the New, is the ἄβυσσος, or depth without bottom: which term implies, that nothing can be so characteristic of Hades, as depth or profundity.—See Job xxviii. 14, 'The depth saith, It is not in me: and the sea saith, It is not with me;' Is. vii. 11; Lu. viii. 31; Rom. x. 6, 7.

Again, according to the idiom of scripture, Heaven and Hades are classed as ἀντίστοιχα, or co-ordinates of each other; the one as the extreme of height above, the other as the extreme of depth below.—See the blessing of Joseph by Jacob, Ge. xlix. 25, 'Blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under.' And in like manner, Pr. xv. 24, 'The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath.'—See also Is. xliv. 23, 'Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth;' of which this phrase, 'the lower parts of the earth,' is but a paraphrase for Hades; so that the sense would be, 'Sing, O heavens; and shout, O Hades, for the LORD hath done it;' and equally so Rom. viii. 39; Am. ix. 2; Job xi. 7, 8, 9; Ps. cxxxix. 7, 8, 9, 10.—Comp. Is. lvii. 9; Pr. xxv. 3.

In all these instances, which are passages communis generis, it is manifestly the object of the inspired writers to oppose to each other things distinguished by the extreme degree of contrary properties on either hand, and therefore strictly ἀντίστοιχα. The same phraseology occurs twice in the New Testament.—See Mt. xi. 23; Lu. x. 15.

The substance of the foregoing will be, upon the testimony of scripture, that the souls of men are detached from their bodies at their death; that the souls of men, so detached, pass directly into the hands of their Creator; that the souls of men, by so passing, are added or joined to a certain society of souls like themselves, previously dead; that this society exists not anywhere, but in a determinate locality called Hades, in the general sense of the common receptacle of the souls of the dead; that Hades, understood in this sense, is not situated in any part of space, indifferently, but within the compass of the same earth on which the same souls existed in their living state: and as to the locality of Hades, even within the earth, it is not anywhere beneath the earth, but within that part of it below, which is at the extreme point, or greatest depth beneath the surface of the earth.—P. 328.

OF HADES DIVIDED INTO REGIONS.

Among the scriptural proofs that Hades, the proper receptacle of the souls of the dead in common, is divided into regions, the testimony of the parable, literally understood, deserves to be considered as direct and decisive as any; for from this it appears that the souls of some of the dead are received into one part of Hades, and the souls of others into another. . . . And that one of these regions of Hades is separated from the other by an intermediate barrier, which the parable calls a mighty gulf or void (χάσμα μέγα), and a barrier which cannot be passed—a gulf or void firmly fixed (χάσμα μέγα ἐστηριγμένον), so that the separation thereby effected is nothing arbitrary and precarious, but something necessary and immutable.

Of passages which speak of the lowest, or nethermost Hades, proving that Hades itself is divided into regions, relatively situated as a higher point in respect of locality would be to a lower.—See De. xxxii. 22; Ps. lxxxvi. 13; lxxxviii. 6.

Secondly, though the souls of all men pass into Hades by death, as the common receptacle of the dead, they do not all pass into the same locality in Hades.

Nothing being clearer than from the parable, that the souls of Dives, of Lazarus, of Abraham, being all in Hades, as the common receptacle of the dead in general, the soul of Dives was in one locality of it, and the souls of Lazarus and Abraham in another, in particular; each in his own proper locality.

The same conclusion is implied, Ac. i. 25.

Thirdly, the souls of the saved are received into one locality in Hades, and the souls of the bad into another.

On this point also the testimony of the parable would be as express to the purpose as on any other. The soul of Dives was received into one part of Hades, and the soul of Lazarus into another. The locality of the soul of Lazarus in Hades was the locality of the soul of Abraham also; which is so far an argument that the locality of all the souls of all the good in Hades in general is one and the same.—See Abraham's words, 'between us and you,' &c.

The same is implied in Is. lvi. 1, 2. The context shews that the prophet is speaking in this passage of the disposal of the souls of the righteous by death: 'The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come. He shall enter into peace: they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness.' These words describe the resting of the good in the intermediate state; during which it is possible for them both to rest in their beds, and to walk in their uprightness.

The testimony of Ps. xlix. 19, 'He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light,' strongly leads to the conclusion, that the souls of the wicked, as they die, follow the generation of their fathers; that is, become part of a society or company of souls like themselves already dead.

In Rev. vi. 9—11, the souls of the martyrs are represented to be congregated on one spot. In like manner, He. xii. 23, 'the spirits of just men made perfect' are represented as forming one society.

Fourthly, the name of the part of Hades appropriated to the reception of the souls of the bad may be doubtful; but the name of the quarter appointed for the reception of the souls of the good, in the christian scriptures at least, is PARADISE. For proof that the souls of the good pass by death into Paradise, and that Paradise is part of Hades—

First, that the souls of the good pass immediately by death into Paradise, may be collected from the words of our Saviour to the penitent thief, Lu. xxiii. 43, 'This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.' Before the end of the day both were dead. The body of our Saviour was committed the same day to the grave; and so we may presume was the thief's also. This assurance of our Lord to the thief on the cross, could only be fulfilled by his being with our Lord after his death in his soul, and not in his body, and that could be only by the soul passing into its proper locality, that is, in these two instances, the locality of the good, which is here clearly called PARADISE.

Secondly, that Paradise is part of Hades, may be inferred from the juxta-position of these two statements, both of them equally matter of fact, that the soul of our Saviour by dying passed into Hades, and that the soul of our Saviour by dying passed into Paradise; the former proved by Ps xvi. 8, 9, 10; Ac. ii. 25—31; xiii. 35—7; Rom. x. 7; Eph. iv. 9, 10; and other texts already considered: the latter by this passage, Lu. xxiii. 43.

We have the assurance of Peter, Ac. ii. 34, that David was not ascended, by his death, into Heaven. If so, Paradise is no locality in Heaven, or synonymous with all or part of Heaven; and consequently we may presume it is some locality in Hades, and synonymous with all or part of Hades.

The same conclusion is still more strongly implied by St. Paul's account of his double rapture, 2 Co. xii. 2, 4, which he describes to have been once, ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ,* and the second time, εἰς τὸν παράδεισον,† for unless it should be contended that this second rapture was but a repetition of the former, or unto the same locality as the former, under a different name —the third Heaven in the one instance, and Paradise in the other—it is a necessary inference from the fact of this double rapture, each to a proper locality of its own, that Paradise is locally distinct from the third Heaven, and the third Heaven from Paradise.

* UP TO, or UNTO, the third Heaven.

† INTO Paradise.

Of the condition of the soul in the intermediate state. It would seem that the souls of the good, by being received after death into a proper locality of their own, are received into the enjoyment of a proper happiness of their own likewise; the souls of the bad, by passing into a proper habitation of their own in Hades, pass also into the endurance of a proper kind of misery. . . . The intermediate state is not like that of the present life, a state of probation, but it is a state of retribution, as its very name implies; a state in which the proper subjects of a retributive dispensation, whether for good or for evil, are supposed to be rewarded according to their deserts, and to be existing, while it lasts, in a state of happiness, or a state of unhappiness.

We may appeal to the parable for testimony on this point. Lazarus, by passing immediately on his death into his proper locality in Hades, passed also into the immediate enjoyment of a certain comfort; and Dives, by passing into his, passed into the sufferance of a certain torment.

The name given to the locality which received the soul of Lazarus, is Abraham's bosom; a denomination which naturally carries with it the ideas of rest, repose, and tranquillity. Although it is not a literal but a metaphorical Paradise intended, yet the name of Paradise could not have been given even metaphorically to the proper locality of the souls of the good in Hades, except on account of some real analogy and resemblance between the literal Paradise and the figurative. The literal Paradise was the garden of Eden; and the garden of Eden was the garden of delights, the chosen locality of every embellishment which creative Omnipotence might be pleased to lavish on his favourite production, and of every enjoyment which the perfection of his creatures, in their state of innocence, and of unreserved communion with their Maker, might reasonably be empowered to taste of, and might naturally expect from his bounty. Something of this kind must hold good of the paradisiacal locality of the intermediate state, which agrees to the notion of the literal Paradise in being, like that, the habitation of none but the good, and of those who are at peace and in communion with their Creator. We learn from 2 Co. v. 6—9, that the saints, when actually still in the body, are actually still absent from the Lord; so when actually no longer in the body, they are actually present with the Lord.—See also Phil. i. 21—4; Rom. xiv. 7—9.

With the light which these passages contribute to throw on the fact of that immediate enjoyment of some kind or other, accruing to the souls of the faithful believers, as soon as they are released from the flesh, by passing at once into the society of their Redeemer, and of their fellow-believers, we shall better be able to understand the following texts of John, xii. 26; xiii. 33, .6, .7; xiv. 2, 3, 4; xvii. 24, which relate probably to one a. d the same subject—the reception of the souls of faithful believers, immediately on their death, into Paradise, and into the enjoyment of their Redeemer, after some manner or other. This truth seems most clearly intimated at ch. xiii. 33, .6, where our Lord tells the apostles, at the last supper, that whither he was going they could not follow him then, but should follow him hereafter; and by ch. xiv. 2, 3, which tells them that in his Father's house were many mansions; and that he was going to prepare a place (which must be understood of a place there) for them. No doubt, the allusion in this last instance may be first and properly to those various μοναὶ, or chambers, which surrounded the lower part of the ναὸς, or sanctuary, the proper habitation of the Deity, in contradistinction to the rest of the temple. It should be remembered that our Saviour says these things to his disciples just before his own death, that is, just before his own departure to the proper locality of the souls of the good after death; and when he tells them at such a time, that whither he was going then, they could not follow him as yet, but should follow hereafter, the very necessity of the case seems to require that we should understand him to mean, that they could not follow him into the proper locality of departed spirits yet, because the time was not yet come when they were to die, as he was, but that they should follow him hereafter.

St. Paul's raptures, 2 Co. xii. 2—4, may be understood to mean, that he had been rapt into Paradise (whether in the body, or whether out of the body, he could not tell), that is, into the locality of departed spirits, and had heard words there, but words unspeakable; words which it was not possible for man to utter. In other words, he had heard the language of Paradise, the language of disembodied spirits, by which they carried on their intercourse with each other, which it was as impossible to utter with human organs of speech, as to imitate or represent by any human language. It would seem from this that the inhabitants of Paradise have a language; have a mode of conversing with each other, but not by speech, not through the medium of the organs of speech, properly so called.

With respect to the other member of the proposition, the fact that the souls of the bad, by passing into their proper locality in Hades, pass into the endurance of a proper kind of punishment, it is not only presumptively proved by the instance of Dives in the parable, and by the general necessity of the case, that whatever is true of the good as such, under the circumstances of the intermediate state, the contrary must hold of the bad, but by this special consideration, viz., that Hades, or the part of it appointed for the abode of the bad, may be supposed to contain Gehenna, the place of the future punishment both of evil angels and evil men, under the proper name of the abyss. Ἄβυσσος, or the bottomless pit, occurs repeatedly in the book of Revelation, ix. 1, 2, 11; xi. 7; xvii. 8; xx. 1, 3, in which sense it is synonymous with the λίμνη τοῦ πυρός, also repeatedly mentioned in that book, xix. 20; xx. 10, .4, .5; xxi. 8; and with the κάμινος τοῦ πυρός, Mt. xiii. 42, 50. It appears, too, from these allusions to the abyss in the book of Revelation, that its locality is supposed to be within the earth, as much as that of Hades in general; and it is described in four instances, ix. 1, 2, under the peculiar notion of the φρέαρ τῆς ἀβύσσου; which may lead to the inference that it is a particular locality in Hades as a place of punishment—an abyss, as it were, within the abyss itself. That a common fire is appointed for the reception of the devil, his angels, and reprobate men, sometime or other, we learn from Mt. xxv. 41; 2 Pe. ii. 4; iii. 7; Jude 6, 7, which fire is called the fire of Gehenna, in a variety of instances almost too numerous to cite, Mt. v. 22, .9, 30; x. 28; xviii. 9; xxiii. 33; Mk. ix. 45, .7; Lu. xii. 5; Ja. iii. 6. The prayer of the demons, not to be sent away into the abyss, Lu. viii. 31, § 35, p. 271, might be a prayer not to be sent into this abyss, in its proper sense, that is, into the place of their proper punishment.—Comp. Mt. viii. 29, [Mk. v. 7 8; Lu. viii. 28, .9,] § 35, p. 270.

RECAPITULATION.

To recapitulate the substance of these further inquiries not merely into the generic, but also into the specific character and constitution of Hades, considered as the common receptacle of the souls of the dead, it has thus been shewn, upon scriptural testimony, that HADES itself is divided into regions, two at least in number, separated from each other after some manner, which serves as an effectual barrier against all passage from one to the other; that the souls of the good are collected into one of these regions, and the souls of the bad into the other; that the proper locality of the former is called PARADISE, of the good, within their proper locality, during the intermediate state, enjoy a happiness peculiar to themselves, and proper to that state; the souls of the wicked, under the same circumstances, endure a misery or unhappiness peculiar also to their class, and equally proper to the intermediate state.—Abridged from Gresswell's Exposition of the Parables, Vol. V. Part 2, Appendix, chap. x. pp. 261—406.

SECTION 70.—(G. 44, .5.)—[Lesson 65, ℣ 70, .1.]—WHILE JESUS IS DISCOURSING ON THE SUBJECT OF OFFENCES, AND ON THE FORGIVENESS OF INJURIES, THE APOSTLES ASK FOR THE INCREASE OF FAITH: JESUS' REPLY. HE HEALS TEN LEPERS; ONE OF THEM BEING A SAMARITAN.—Luke xvii. 1—19.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xvii. 1, 2. Jesus tells his disciples that it is impossible but that offences come, but that this necessity will not exculpate him by whom the offence cometh.—See Margin.

—— 3, 4. The disciples are exhorted to take heed to themselves; and are directed how to deal with an offending brother.

—— 5, 6. The apostles having asked the Lord to increase their faith, He takes occasion to speak of the supplanting power of living faith.

—— 7—9. By a parable, we are taught not to think we have nothing to do but please ourselves, when we enter the household of faith; we are to be ready for any work our Lord may appoint us to in his more immediate presence.

—— 10. As merely avoiding offence, we are but unprofitable servants; and as using our best endeavours for the reformation of offenders, freely and frequently forgiving those that repent, we are only doing that which it is our duty to do.

Lu. xvii. 11. Jesus, in his journey to Jerusalem, passes along the border, between Samaria and Galilee.

—— 12, .3. Is met by ten lepers, who cry to him for mercy.

—— 14. He directs them to go shew themselves to the priests; and as they are going they are cleansed.

—— 15, .6. One of them, a Samaritan, when he sees that he is cleansed, turns back, glorifying God with a loud voice; and falling at the feet of Jesus, gives thanks unto him.

—— 17—9. Jesus recognises this stranger as the only one of the ten who has returned to give glory unto God. He bids him arise, and go his way; telling him that his faith hath made him whole.

(G. 44.)—No. 70.—While Jesus is discoursing on the subject of offences, and on the forgiveness of injuries, the apostles ask for the increase of faith: Jesus' reply.—Luke xvii. 1—10.

1 Then said-he unto the disciples, It-is impossible ἀνενδεκτον but-that offences will-
2 come: but woe unto him, through whom they-come! It-were-better λυσιτελει for-him that a-millstone were-hanged about his neck, and he-cast into the sea, than that he-3 should-offend one of-these little-ones. Take-heed to-yourselves: If thy brother trespass
4 against thee, rebuke επετιμησον him; and if he-repent, forgive him. And if he-trespass against thee seven-times in-a day, and seven-times in-a day turn-again to thee, saying, I-repent; thou-shalt-forgive him.*

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvii. 1. It is impossible—see on Mt. xviii. 7, § 52, p. 77, 'it must needs be,' &c.—1 Pe. i. 6, 7.

2. It were better for him, &c.—Mt. xviii. 6, 'But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him,' &c. [Mk. ix. 42, § 52, p. 76.]

3. Take heed to yourselves—Mt. xviii. 10, § 53, 'Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels,' &c.

If thy brother trespass, &c.—see the manner in which reconciliation is to be sought, and the terms upon which forgiveness is to be exercised, Mt. xviii. 15—,7, § ib., 'Moreover if thy brother shall trespass,' &c., and the parable enforcing the duty of forgiveness, ver. 23—35, § ib. pp. 84, .5.

rebuke him—Lev. xix. 17—Pr. xvii. 10—xxv. 9.

4. seven times in a day—and even until seventy such days, forgiveness is to be exercised, Mt. xviii. 22, § 53, p. 84—'Seven times in a day' is by some supposed to be a proverbial expression for 'many times'—Ps. cxix. 164, 'Seven times a day do I praise thee because of thy righteous judgments.'—Pr. xxiv. 16, 'For a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief.'

thou shalt forgive him—see on ver. 3, and on Mt.

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 1, 2. Offences. Hindrances to faith and obedience. See on Mt. xviii. 6, 7, § 52, p. 76.

2. A millstone, &c. This was a common proverb. Thus when Rab. Samuel said, 'A man may marry, and after that addict himself to the study of the law;' Rab. Jochanan replied, 'Not shalt he addict himself to the study of the law with a millstone about his neck?'

Cast into the sea. See on Mt. xviii. 6, § 52, p. 76, ADDENDA, 'Drowned,' &c., p. 81.

Little ones. Weak believers.

3, 4. See on Mt. xviii. 15—22, § 53, p. 83.

3. Take heed to yourselves. These words may be understood as a caution to the disciples against neglecting the warning contained in ver. 1, 2. They are also connected in the interpretation with what follows; for we may not attempt to reprove others, without first taking heed to ourselves. 'Take heed to yourselves' that ye neither stumble, nor cause others to stumble.

Thy brother. One who believes in Christ as the only hope of salvation.

Rebuke him. Tell him his fault privately, 'between thee and him alone:'—see on Mt. xviii. 15, § 53, p. 83. Try to convince him, or make him sensible of his having done wrong.—See on Jno. viii. 46, § 55, p. 106, SCRIP. ILLUS.

4. Seven times, &c. See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra, and on Mt. xviii. 22, § 53, p. 84, 'Until seventy times seven.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvii. 1. It is vain to attempt such an organization of society as will be free from offences. The utmost we can do is to avoid them; and, in dependence upon Divine help, prepare ourselves and others for meeting them. Although offences must come, let us not imagine we can be safe in participating in them: Woe unto him, through whom they come!'

3 ver. Let us take heed to our own ways, before we attempt to lead others. Having removed the beam from our own eye, then we may see clearly to pull the mote out of our brother's eye.

* 'Alludes to the question of Peter in Matt. xviii. 21, § 53, p. 84.' Greswell, Vol. I. Diss. i. p. 24.

IT WERE BETTER TO PERISH BY A VIOLENT DEATH, THAN TO LIVE SO AS TO CAUSE ONE OF CHRIST'S LITTLE ONES TO STUMBLE.

LET US NEVER IMAGINE THAT WE ARE, IN THE PROVIDENCE OF GOD, SO SHUT UP AS THAT WE MUST DO EVIL.

Luke xvii. 5—9.

5 And the apostles said unto-the Lord, Increase our προσθες ἡμιν faith. 6, And the Lord said, If ye-had faith as a-grain of-mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycaminetree, Be-thou-plucked-up-by-the-root, and be-thou-planted in the sea; and it should 7 obey you. But which of you, having a-servant plowing or feeding-cattle, will-say unto- 8 him by-and-by, when-he-is-come from the field, Go and-sit-down-to-meat? And will-not-rather-say unto-him, Make-ready where-with I-may-sup, and gird-thyself, and-serve me, till I-have-eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt-eat and drink?
9 Doth-he thank that servant because he-did the-things that-were-commanded him?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

vi. 12, .4, .5, § 19, p. 133; Mk. xi. 25, .6, § 84, p. 282, 'And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.'—Lu. vi. 37, § 27, p. 209, 'Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:'—xi. 4, § 62, p. 152—Col. iii. 13, 'Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.'

Lu. xvii. 5. Increase our faith—Jesus said unto the father of the child that was demoniac, Mk. ix. 23, .4, § 51, p. 60, 'If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.'—It is as having faith in the Divine forgiveness that we are enabled to forgive others, and exercise towards them long-suffering and mercy, Eph. iv. 31, .2—see border.

6. faith as a grain of mustard seed—see Mt. xvii. 20, § 51, p. 61—The power of faith in removing mountains is again spoken of in connection with the barren fig tree, and the exercising of forgiveness, which is one of the proper fruits of faith in God, Mk. xi. 20—.6, § 84, p. 281—In 1 Co. xiii. 2, Paul speaks of a faith sufficient to remove mountains, which, unless accompanied by charity, would be utterly unprofitable—'Though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.'

7. by and by—see on Mk. vi. 25, § 40, p. 307.

when he is come from the field—The Christian is not only to busy himself in the world, by doing good to all men, as he has opportunity; he is to be active in doing good, more especially unto the household of faith, Gal. vi. 10—Our Lord predicted that after bearing persecution from the world, the disciples would have much occasion for patience in the removal of offences, and in the exercise of mutual forbearance and forgiveness, Mt. xxiv. 10—.3, § 86, p. 328.

8. Make ready wherewith I may sup—Inasmuch as we minister unto even the least of Jesus' followers, we are ministering to our Lord, Mt. x. 42, § 39, p. 303; xxv. 34—40, § 86—The Christian has duties to perform in the house of God, Rom. xii., as well as out of it, xiii.

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 5. Increase our faith. The natural disposition of the corrupt heart is revenge; and so hard did this virtue of forgiveness of injuries seem even to the believing disciples, that they knew their own insufficiency, and that nothing but an increase of faith in the goodness and power of God could constrain them to follow the example of their blessed Lord; that so they might forgive, and neither offend nor be offended. Christ is called 'the Author and Finisher of our faith,' He. xii. 2.

6. As a grain of mustard seed. A faith that thrives and increases.—See Mt. xiii. 32, § 32, p. 248, and xvii. 20, § 51, p. 61.

Sycamine tree. I. e., the ficus sycamorus of Linnæus, a tree found in Egypt and Palestine, and so called as resembling the fig tree (συκη) in its fruit, and the mulberry (μορεα) in its leaf.

'From this we may conclude that our Lord was in Lower Galilee at this time. If the distinction laid down by rabbinical writers be true, sycamine trees were to be found in Lower Galilee only; and where they first began to grow, discriminated Lower Galilee from Upper Galilee itself.'—Greswell, Vol. II. p. 536.

Be thou plucked up, &c. He that has faith will get through every difficulty. It is a proverbial form of speech which no Jew could misunderstand, and with which no Christian ought to be puzzled.

7. By and by. Formerly meant 'immediately.' It is here contrasted with 'afterward.' Jesus by this parable shewing his disciples, 1st, That they should surely be rewarded. 2nd, That this was not the first thing; that there was a proper order of things, and thus it might be delayed, as a servant should be provided for, but at the proper time, and at the pleasure of the master. And 3rd, That this reward was not to be expected as a matter of merit, but would be given at the good pleasure of God, for they were but unprofitable servants. The parable may, however, be better viewed as intimately connected with the preceding discourse, and as teaching us not only to be prepared for suffering affliction from the world, and walking blamelessly before men generally, but also for labouring for the removal of offences from among the children of God, and for acting with forbearance, forgiveness, and kindness, in the house of God itself.

8. Gird thyself, &c. See on ch. xii. 35, .7, § 63, p. 166.

9. Doth he thank, &c. Does he account himself obliged to him?

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[The direction seems plain, that when a Christian brother offends, we are not to consult our own peace and safety by separating from him. We are first, in all sincerity, and with prayerful earnestness, to seek his recovery: and if he repent, we are to treat him as if he had not sinned against us.]

Lu. xvii. 4. We are not to be discouraged by even oft-repeated failures in those we seek to benefit; but are to persevere in the use of kind admonition and reproof, and in the exercise of forgiveness, according to the precept and after the example of our blessed Redeemer.

5 ver. Let us have faith in the Divine forgiveness and love, so that we may truly learn to forgive and love those that may trespass against us.

6 ver. Let us seek that faith in Christ may be in us a living and progressive principle—so as to uproot and cast out whatever is inimical to our growth in grace, to our manifestation of Christian holiness and love.

[7, 8 ver. Let us not think that by acting our part well in the world we do all that is expected of us: when we enter the house of God let us be prepared for further service—and let us especially be careful to avoid giving or taking offence. Let us never forget that whatever is done according to the command of our Lord for the benefit of his people, is done unto Him; and that what he especially requires of us is, that we avoid all needless offence, and that we forgive the offences of others.]

LUKE xvii. 9—16.

10 I trow not. So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: [a] we have done that which was our duty to do.

[a] ὅτι.

(G. 45.)—Jesus heals ten lepers; one of them being a Samaritan.—Luke xvii. 11—.9. In Galilee, before crossing into Peræa.

11 And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of 12 Samaria and Galilee. And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men 13 that were lepers, which stood afar off: and they lifted up their voices φωνην, and said, 14 Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.
15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice 16 glorified God, and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvii. 10. all those things—Taking heed so as to avoid giving offence to our fellow-believers, and forgiving them when they offend us; using all christian means for their recovery when they go astray—see ver. 1—4, p. 206.

unprofitable servants—When we have been merely avoiding offence, bearing and forbearing, and doing no evil to any one, we are but in the case of the unprofitable servant, whose reward see, Mt. xxv. 30, § 86, p. 350—Of Onesimus, whose name means 'profitable,' Paul says, when writing to his master, Philemon, ver. 11, 'which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me:'

our duty to do—When we have not only avoided causing offence as exhorted, ver. 1—3, p. 206, but when we abound in forgiveness of others' offences, having sought to recover them therefrom, and are unweariedly continuing to do good as exhorted, 3—8, p. ib.—we have only done that which it was our duty to do—see the reward of this active service to the Lord, Mt. xxv. 34—40, § 86, p. 352.

11. as he went to Jerusalem—in completion of his purpose, ch. ix. 51, § 59, p. 135.

Samaria and Galilee—along the border between the two, where the Jews and the Samaritans were partially mingled, especially the outcasts belonging to both sects—see ver. 16.

12. lepers—see on Mt. viii. 2—4, § 21, p. 159.

stood afar off—Le. xiii. 46, 'He (the leper) is unclean: he shall dwell alone; without the camp shall his habitation be.'—2 Ki. xv. 5, 'And the LORD smote the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house. And Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land.'

14. Go shew yourselves unto the priests—so did he direct the leper, Mt. viii. 4, § 21, p. 160, as required in the law, Le. xiii. 2; xiv. 2, 3, 'This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing: He shall be brought unto the priest: and the priest shall go forth out of the camp; and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be healed in the leper; &c' as they went—In the former instance the cleansing was effected before the leper was sent to the priest, ch. v. 13, § 21, p. 160.

16. he was a Samaritan—one with whom the Jews, in ordinary life, had no dealings, Jno. iv. 9, § 13, p. 92—see ADDENDA, pp. 98, .9, 'the Samaritans.'

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 9. I trow not. I think not; or I suppose not.

10. We have done, &c.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

11. Passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. 'It should seem that our Lord did not proceed by the direct way (namely, through Samaria) to Jerusalem; but, upon coming to the confines of Samaria and Galilee, he diverged to the east; so as to have Samaria on the right and Galilee on the left. Thus he seems to have passed the Jordan at Scythopolis (where there was a bridge), and to have descended along the left bank, on the Peræan side, until he again crossed the river, when he came opposite to Jericho. The reason which induced him to take this circuitous route, was probably to avoid any molestation from the Samaritans, and at the same time to impart to a greater number of Jews the benefits of his gospel.'—Bloomfield. And see Greswell, Vol. II. Diss. xxxi. pp. 528, .9, as quoted in this book, § 59, p. 139, first paragraph and second column.

12. Ten . . . lepers. Concerning lepers and leprosy, see on ch. v. 12, § 21, p. 159, NOTE, and ADDENDA, p. 161, 'Of the locality,' &c.

Which stood afar off. To avoid spreading the infection, they were by law separated from the society of their brethren.

13. They lifted up their voices Being companions in suffering, so were they companions in prayer.

[14. Go shew yourselves. To obtain permission from the priest to mingle again in society. It may be observed, that this required no small measure of faith on their part. So sinners, defiled with the leprosy of sin, should exercise faith in the Lord Jesus, and obey his commandments, with the fullest confidence that he is able to heal them, and that he will do it.]

And . . . . as they went, they were cleansed. In this spirit of implicit faith they were cleansed. God highly honours this kind of faith, and makes it the instrument in his hand of working many miracles.

15. One of them . . . . glorified God. He does not seem to have gone to the priest; but experiencing the cleansing power of Jesus, he turned immediately back to give public honour and praise to him by whom he had been cleansed.

16. He was a Samaritan. One with whom the Jews would have no fellowship, but one who proved himself more grateful for the mercy received than they.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvii. 9, 10. Let us not think that we have performed some work of supererogation when we have sacrificed all that we honestly can to avoid causing offence, or when we have reclaimed a backslider, or forgiven an offender: and, until we have done all this, we cannot say that we have done that which it was our duty to do.]

[11—.3 ver. The ten tribes were anciently dwellers in Galilee and Samaria, but, because of their sins, were, like these ten lepers, made outcasts.—Soon may they be found convinced of their uncleanness worse than leprosy, acknowledging Jesus as their Master, and submitting themselves to the mercy of the Redeemer.]

14 ver. It is not anything that the priest can do that actually cleanses—cleansing is effected through faith in the word of Jesus.

15, .6 ver. Let us, with the Samaritan, glorify God and do homage to the Redeemer—because of his abundant mercy exercised towards us.

LUKE xvii. 17—.9.

17 Samaritan. And Jesus answering said, Were-there- not ten -cleansed? but where-are 18 the nine? There-are- not -found that-returned to-give glory to God, save this stranger.
19 And he-said unto-him, Arise, go-thy-way: thy faith hath-made- thee -whole.
[Ch. xvii. 20, § lxxii. p. 210.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvii. 17. where are the nine? — Ps. cvi. 13, 'They soon forgat his works;'

19. go thy way—so to the centurion, Mt. viii. 13, § 28, p. 220—and to the Syrophenician woman, Mk. vii. 29, § 45, p. 15—and also to the man who had received sight, x. 52, § 79, p. 244.

thy faith—the same to the woman who had an issue of blood twelve years, ch. viii. 48, § 36, p. 282.

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 17. Where are the nine? Our Lord may have said this to draw attention to the despised Samaritan, and thereby to bring the Jews to a more charitable judgment towards the Samaritans.

18. This stranger. This 'alien.' The word here thus translated means, 'a person of another race.'

19. Thy faith, &c. Thy faith hath been the medium of that influence by which thou hast been cleansed.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xvii. 17, .8. Only those who honour the Son do really glorify God the Father.

19 ver. Let us see that our faith is not mere profession; but that it works by love, and purifies the heart, making us morally clean, as truly as his faith made the leper whole.

SECTION 71.*—(G. 46.)—[Lesson 65, continued.]—JESUS PASSES OUT OF GALILEE INTO PERÆA.†

No. 71.—Crossing Jordan at the ford opposite Scythopolis. S.E. corner of Galilee

MATT. xix. 1, 2.
[Ch. xviii. 35, § liii. p. 85.]

1 And it-came-to-pass, that when Jesus had-finished these sayings, he-departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judæa beyond Jordan;
2 and great multitudes followed him; and he-healed them there.
[Ver. 3, § lxxiv. p. 218.]

MARK x. 1.
[Ch. ix. 50, § lii. p. 79.]

1 And he-arose from-thence, and-cometh into the coasts of Judæa by διὰ the farther-side of Jordan: and the-people resort συμπορεύονται unto him again; and, as he-was-wont, he-taught them again.
[Ver. 2, § lxxiv. p. 218.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 1. had finished these sayings—The sayings of Jesus recorded by Matthew, immediately before, in ch. xviii. § 53, pp. 82—.5, are on the same subject as those in Lu. xvii. 1—4, § 70, p. 204.

Mk. x. 1. from thence—the last locality mentioned by Mark was Capernaum, ix. 33, § 52, p. 72.

Mt. xix. 1. coasts of Judæa beyond Jordan—It was in a place beyond Jordan where John at first baptized, Jno. x. 40, § 57, p. 125.

followed him—see Jno. x. 40, .1, § 57, p. 125.

Mk. x. 1. as he was wont—It is likely that he had been accustomed to teach them upon his former visit after the feast of dedication, when he escaped to that quarter out of the hand of the Jews, Jno. x. 39—42, §§ 56, .7, pp. 123—.5.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 1. Let us never forget the sayings here referred to: the last recorded sayings of Jesus in Galilee, before going up to Jerusalem to suffer, were on avoiding offences and exercising forgiveness.

Mk. x. 1. Till reaching the place of suffering Jesus gave us example, not only of forgiveness, but of active goodness—both healing and instructing the people: not forgetful of their bodies while mindful of their souls. And to those who have derived their commission from him he hath said, 'Freely ye have received, freely give.'

ADDENDA.

'HE DEPARTED FROM GALILEE.'—Matt. xix. 1.

'The omission of these last six months,‡ in the gospel of St. Mark, is a natural consequence of their omission in the gospel of St. Matthew; and their omission in the gospel of St. Matthew may be accounted for on various grounds.

'First, a great part of the time was spent in Judæa, and in residing at Capernaum or at Ephraim; which St. Matthew either summarily supposes, or omits to notice only in common with St. Luke.

'Secondly, some portion more of it was occupied by the mission of the Seventy; an incident, both in its cause, in its design, and in its effect, so similar to the previous mission of the Twelve, that one who had given so minute and particular an account of the * Sections lxxi—vi. are events in Peræa, E. of Jordan, on Jesus' last circuit, in his way to Jerusalem.

† 'At the time of the performance of the miracle upon the ten lepers, the exordium of the account shews that our Lord was still in Galilee; and at the time of the subsequent discourses, wheresoever he was, he was in some one place; for all of them were consecutively delivered.'—Greswell, Vol. II. Diss. xxxi. p. 512. On the Omission of the last six months' ministry in the gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, see ibid. Vol. II. p. 540—And ADDENDA, supra.

‡ Matthew discontinues the history of our Lord's ministry at ch. xviii. 35, § 53, p. 85, and Mark at ch. ix. 50, § 52, p. 79.

IT IS AS LITTLE AS MAY BE EXPECTED OF HIS FOLLOWERS, THAT WHILE THEY LOOK TO HIS ATONEMENT FOR SALVATION, THEY LISTEN TO HIS VOICE AND LEARN TO FOLLOW HIS EXAMPLE.

latter, might well be excused from taking any notice of the former.

'Thirdly, even after our Lord's circuit in person was begun, a great part of its events, and consequently of what must have entered into a regular historical account of it, as it may be seen from St. Luke, consisted of matters which had transpired before, and been related by St. Matthew in their proper place previously. I do not mean that these were identical, which is far from being the case, but merely that they were similar; and consequently that, whether actions or discourses, there was no necessity, a priori, why they should be repeated by St. Matthew.

'It is a singular coincidence, however, that the precise point of time, at which St. Matthew and St. Mark do each resume the proper thread of their accounts, is with the passage of Jesus from Galilee into Perœa, as such. The renewal of his ministerial duties, and consequently their implicit suspension since the last return to Capernaum (which was prior to the feast of tabernacles) is also specified at the same time; Καὶ συμπορεύονται πάλιν ὄχλοι πρὸς αὐτόν, καὶ ὡς εἰώθει πάλιν ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς, Mk. x. 1. This was, in fact, to resume the proper thread of the account as soon as the scene of our Saviour's ministry was become, strictly speaking, new, or could be said to have got upon ground not absolutely familiar to their gospels; and such was the case when it had once passed into Perœa.

'The time of this passage is intimated by Mt. xix. 1, 2, and by Mk. x. 1; the most likely position of both which, as it appears to me, is between Lu. xvii. 19, and xvii. 20—xviii. 14. For, at the time of the performance of the miracle upon the lepers, the exordium of the account shews that our Lord was still in Galilee; and at the time of the subsequent discourses, wheresoever he was, he was in some one place; for all of them were consecutively delivered.

'It is no difficulty, that St. Matthew says, He came εἰς τὰ ὅρια τῆς Ἰουδαίας, πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου: that is, he came on the other side the Jordan; to the confines of Judæa; not as some commentators and writers on the geography of Palestine have supposed, to the confines of Judæa beyond the Jordan; as if there were a Judæa, πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου. The boundary of Judæa and of Perœa, in the vicinity of Jericho, was the Jordan: and one who had reached the Jordan in that direction on the eastern side, might truly be said to have come to the confines of Judæa on the western. St. Mark, however, as if on purpose to explain St. Matthew, expresses himself without ambiguity as follows:—Ἔρχεται εἰς τὰ ὅρια τῆς Ἰουδαίας, διὰ τοῦ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, on which no construction but one can possibly be put.'—Greswell, Vol. II. Diss. xxxi. p. 540. And see ADDENDA, § 59, p. 138, supra, 'On the supplementary relation of Luke ix. 51—xviii. 14, to the two first gospels.'

SECTION 72.—(G. 47.)—[Lesson 66.]—THE PHARISEES ASK JESUS, WHEN THE KINGDOM OF GOD SHOULD COME? JESUS REPLIES TO THEM, AND THEN ADDRESSES HIS DISCIPLES IN A DISCOURSE WHICH SERVES AS A PRELUDE TO THE PROPHECY AFTERWARDS DELIVERED FROM MOUNT OLIVET.—Luke xvii. 20—37.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xvii. 20, .1. The Pharisees having asked Jesus when the kingdom of God should come, he replies, by intimating that their expectations of the kingdom were likely to be disappointed; the kingdom, at the first advent of Christ, does not come with outward show; nor is the enjoyment thereof confined to any particular locality. It is already in their midst; and in order to their being partakers of its blessedness, it must be within them.

—— 22. Jesus next addresses his disciples, those in whom the kingdom of grace is already commenced, and represses vain expectations in them also, intimating that evil days are coming, when they will be deprived of his personal presence upon earth.

—— 23, .4. He warns them not to be deceived by false reports of his personal presence upon earth: for his coming will be as the light; and be so manifest to all, as that none can mistake.

—— 25. Again he warns them, that he must first suffer, and be rejected of the present generation.

—— 26, .7. As it was in the days of Noah, when the world of the ungodly was destroyed by a flood, 'so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.'

Lu. xvii. 28—30. As it was in the days of Lot, when Sodom was destroyed by fire from heaven, so shall it be when the apocalypse of the Son of man takes place.

—— 31, .2. He warns them to be ready to depart, so soon as the sign is given, and not look behind.

—— 33. Are not to expect their reward previous to the resurrection; when those who have been willing to die for his sake, will be found in the possession of life eternal.

—— 34—.6. Speaks of the separations which will be made at his coming, of those who previously may have been in the same outward condition of life, on the same couch, or at the same labour, in the house, or in the field.

—— 37. Jesus having spoken, ver. 31, .2, of flight from a locality, which was to be as remarkably destroyed as was Sodom, the disciples ask, 'Where, Lord?' when Jesus alludes to the sign which was to be given his disciples to escape from Jerusalem,—the gathering together of the Roman eagles around the body of the Jewish people.

No. 72.—In Perœa, East of Scythopolis.

[Ch. xvii. 19, ‖ lxx. p. 209.]

20 And when-he-was-demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should-come ἔρχεται, he-answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with obser-

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 20. Was demanded of the Pharisees. The religion of the Pharisees consisted in vain traditions, and scrupulous formality in religious rites and ceremonies.

When the kingdom of God should come. The Pharisees believed in the reign of God; or, the kingdom to be established when the Messiah appears. They however trusted in their own righteousness for the chief place in that kingdom.

Cometh not with observation. The signs of the coming of the promised kingdom are known only to those who are being prepared to enjoy it; and the sign chiefly consists in real inward readiness, which is unobserved by the world.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Lu. xvii. 20, .1. Let us clearly distinguish between what belongs to the first, and what to the second advent of Christ; between the kingdom of God in GRACE, and the same kingdom in GLORY; between our giving him the throne of our affections now, and the Redeemer's giving us to sit with him upon his throne hereafter; when those who now accept the salvation of their souls, through faith in Him, will be also given deliverance to their bodies from the bondage of corruption.

THE LORD IS SLOW TO ANGER, AND GREAT IN POWER, AND WILL NOT AT ALL ACQUIT THE WICKED:
THE LORD HATH HIS WAY IN THE WHIRLWIND AND IN THE STORM, AND THE CLOUDS ARE THE DUST OF HIS FEET.—Nah. i. 3.

LUKE xvii. 21—.5.

21 vation μετα παρατηρησεως: neither shall-they-say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you εντος ὑμων εστιν.
22 And he-said unto the disciples, The-days will-come, when ye-shall-desire to-see one 23 of-the days of-the Son of man, and ye-shall-not-see it. And they-shall-say to-you, See 24 here; or, see there: go-not-after them, nor follow them. For as the lightning, that lighteneth out-of the-one part under heaven, shineth unto the-other part under heaven;
25 so shall-also the Son of man-be in his day. But first must he suffer many-things,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvii. 21. Lo here! or, lo there!—Mt. xxiv. 23, § 86, p. 334, 'Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.'

the kingdom of God is within you (marg. among you).—Christ, who was among them, Jno. i. 26, § 10, p. 69, had, on 'the Holy Mount,' been already declared King—see on the Transfiguration, Mt. xvii. 1—8, &c., § 51, pp. 51—6—The three were among them who had been 'eyewitnesses of his majesty,' 2 Pe. i. 16—so also were the apostles generally, who were appointed to 'sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel,' Mt. xix. 28, § 75, p. 229—His believing people are such as have the kingdom of God within them: Rom. ii. 28, 29, 'For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh: but he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God.'—xiv. 17, 'The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.'—Ps. xlv. 13, 'The king's daughter is all glorious within: '—1 Jno. iii. 2, 'Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.'—The Pharisees needed to be reminded that the kingdom of God must first be within them: for all their works they did 'to be seen of men:' while within they were 'full of extortion and excess,'—of 'hypocrisy and iniquity,' Mt. xxiii. 5, 25—8, § 85, pp. 313, ..7, ..8.

22. The days will come, &c.—He had before said to his disciples, Mt. ix. 15, § 36, p. 278, 'Can the children of the bridechamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast.'—And see in his intercessory prayer, Jno. xvii. 12, 'While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name:'

23. See here; or, see there—Mt. xxiv. 26, § 86, p. 335, 'Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.'

24. For as the lightning, &c.—Mt. xxiv. 27, § ib., 'For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.'

25. But first must he suffer, &c.—See on Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40.

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 21. Lo here! or, lo there! Perhaps the Pharisees thought that the Messiah was kept secret, in some place known only to a few of their rulers; and that by and by he should be proclaimed, as Joash was by Jehoiada the priest.—See 2 Chr. xxiii. 1—11. Or the passage may have reference to the custom of the pretended Messiahs, who appeared in this manner. They said that in this place or in that, in this mountain or that desert, they would shew signs that should convince the people of their Messiahship.—Comp. Ac. v. 36, 37.

Is within you. The kingdom of God; the blessedness of Messiah's kingdom is theirs, who have Christ formed in them the hope of glory. It is now in the midst of you: it is come, it is present in the soul of every true believer; it is a spiritual kingdom, an internal principle. Wherever it exists it exists in the heart.

22. And he said unto the disciples. Our Lord gives here a beautiful example of speaking to every man according as his case may require. To the Pharisees, who looked merely to outward things, He spoke of that kingdom of grace which cometh not with observation; and which must be established within men before they can be ripe for the kingdom of glory. Jesus having thus addressed the Pharisees, turned to his disciples; and as if to warn them against the supposition that the prophecies would not be accomplished with regard to the outward kingdom, He spoke to them of his appearing in glory, after being rejected of that generation; and after still more disconsolate days which were to follow, suddenly and certainly He would come upon the world, visible as the light, to accomplish those great changes that are to accompany the setting up of his kingdom.

The days will come. Days of trouble were about to come, when they would have to pass through a fiery trial, first as being persecuted by their own countrymen, and then of all nations, for his name's sake.

One of the days of the Son of man. Days compared with which, those they had enjoyed with the Son of man, during his sojourn upon earth, would be remembered as days of comparative peace, which it would be desirable again to see.

23, 24. And they shall say, &c. Many false Christs, according to Josephus, appeared about that time, attempting to lead away the people.—See NOTES on Mt. xxiv. 23—7, § 86, p. 334.

As the lightning, &c. His second and glorious appearing will, like that of the natural sun from the east, be sufficiently manifest to all. His people, who are looking for his appearing, shall be caught up and be for ever with the Lord: the wicked he will destroy with the breath of his mouth: and Satan shall be cast into the bottomless pit, and be bound a thousand years.—See Rev. xx. 1, 2.

In his day. When he shall come in power and great glory.

25. But first must he suffer, &c. The words of this verse are, as Mr. Greswell says, parenthetic, and not connected with the prophecy before and after. With this intimation compare the more plainly expressed assurances at Mt. xvi. 21; [Mk. viii. 31; Lu. ix. 22;] § 50, p. 40.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

It is of little use to inquire about the time to which a prediction refers, unless we also inquire into the import of the prediction itself; otherwise we are likely to be disappointed in its fulfilment—as were the Pharisees, in expecting a mere human Messiah in glory, at the time our Divine Redeemer appeared to fulfil all righteousness, and, according to the scriptures, suffer for our sins.

[Lu. xvii. 22. The knowledge of the disciples, as well as that of the Pharisees, was imperfect. They had not calculated upon their Lord's absence from the earth, between his appearing in grace and his appearing in glory. They required to be prepared for the patient waiting for Christ in his coming glory, as much as the Pharisees needed the knowledge of a suffering Saviour.]

[23, 24 ver. When Christ comes the second time, he will not require to be pointed to in order that he may be seen and known of men; and until he thus openly appears in glory, should any say, 'See here; or, see there;' as if Christ were to be seen in some corner of the earth—they by so doing prove themselves to be either deceived or deceivers—and those who go after or follow them are guilty of disobedience to the Lord. And all are thus guilty that follow the Romish priesthood, in the sacrifice of the mass.]

25 ver. Let us be content to follow our Lord through suffering into glory.—See the border.

Luke xvii. 26—34.

26 and be-rejected αποδοκιμασθηναι of this generation. And as it-was in the days of Noe, 27 so shall-it-be also in the days of-the Son of man. They-did-eat, they-drank, they-married-wives, they-were-given-in-marriage, until the-day-that Noe entered into the ark, 28 and the flood came, and destroyed them all. Likewise also as it-was in the days of-Lot;
29 they-did-eat, they-drank, they-bought, they-sold, they-planted, they-builded; but the-same day-that Lot went-out of Sodom it-rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and 30 destroyed them all. Even thus κατα ταυτα shall-it-be in-the day when-the Son of man-
31 is-revealed. In that day, he-which shall-be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let-him-not-come-down to-take-it-away: and he that is in the field, let-him-
32 likewise not-return back εις τα οπισω. Remember μνημονευετε Lot's wife. 33, Whosoever shall seek to-save his life shall-lose it; and whosoever shall-lose his-life shall-pre-34 serve ζωογονησει it. I-tell you, in-that night there-shall-be two men in one bed; the

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xvii. 25. be rejected, &c.—see their rejection of him, ch. xxiii. 18—23, § 90, p. 451—and of his gospel, 1 Th. ii. 14—6, 'For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: 15, who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men: 16, forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

26. as it was in the days of Noe—Ge. vi., vii.—see again, Mt. xxiv. 38, .9, § 86, p. 341.

28. Lot—Ge. xix.

29. Sodom—The destruction of the cities of the plain is referred to, De. xxix. 23; Is. xiii. 19; Je. l. 40; Eze. xvi. 49; Ho. xi. 8; Am. iv. 11; Zep. ii. 9; 2 Pe. ii. 6; Jude, ver. 7.

30. when the Son of man is revealed—When the Jews had consummated their rejection of Jesus as the Christ, and his predictions with regard to them began to be fulfilled, then was the truth of his Messiahship made to appear—Thus he had said to the Jews, Jno. viii. 28, § 55, p. 103, 'When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he,' &c.—Then the beloved disciple was given the Apocalypse promised, i. 51, § 10, p. 73—see NOTES on Nathanael, p. 72, and comp. with the Apocalypse, 'The Revelation of Jesus Christ,' Rev. i. 1, &c.—He who was then revealed in word, will in person, 2 Th. i. 7—10, be 'revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, 8, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: 9, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; 10, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe,' &c.

31. In that day—The day when, by the fulfilment of the threatened judgment upon Jerusalem, it was made manifest that he who was rejected of that generation, was indeed the Christ—see on ver. 30, supra.

upon the housetop, &c.—Mt. xxiv. 16—8, § 86, p. 332, 'Then let them which be in Judæa flee into the mountains: 17, let him which is on the housetop not come down to take any thing out of his house: 18, neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.'

32. Lot's wife—Ge. xix. 26, 'His wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.'

33. Whosoever shall seek, &c.—So when preparing his disciples for the transfiguration, he said, Mk. viii. 35, § 50, p. 42, 'Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 25. Be rejected of this generation. The chief priests, scribes, and Pharisees then living, accused him to Pilate the governor, and prevailed with the people to demand of Pilate that Jesus should be crucified, saying, 'His blood be on us, and on our children.'

26. As it was in the days of Noe, &c. God commanded Noah to build an ark for his family; and Noah, for 120 years, while he was building the ark, warned the people of the wrath of God that was coming on the world; but the people regarded him not, until the flood came and swept them all away.

So shall it be also, &c. So the Lord, by the sure word of prophecy, has been warning the world of the destruction that is coming on those who are not prepared for his appearing.

29. The same day that Lot went out, &c. As soon as righteous Lot departed, the wicked cities were destroyed, and all the inhabitants, and that which grew upon the ground: and the DEAD SEA now covers the site of the cities of the plain that before was well watered and fruitful.

It rained fire and brimstone. Ge. xix. 24, justifies the insertion of the pronoun he, as implied in the verb εβρεξε; for it is there said that 'Jehovah rained brimstone and fire out of heaven.'

31. In that day. When ye shall see Jerusalem encompassed with armies.

He . . . upon the housetop. The houses of the Jews, as well as those of the ancient Greeks and Romans, were flat-roofed, and usually formed terraces for exercise, terminating at the gates of the city.

32. Remember Lot's wife. See Ge. xix. 17, 26. She looked back—she delayed—perhaps she desired to take something with her; and God made her a monument of his displeasure. Jesus directed his disciples when they saw the calamities coming upon the Jews, to flee to the mountains, Mt. xxiv. 16. He here charges them to be in haste—not to look back—not to delay—but to escape quickly, and to remember that by delaying the wife of Lot lost her life.

33. Whosoever shall seek to save his life, &c. See on Mt. x. 39, § 39, p. 302. The sense of this and the following verses is:—Yet as great as the danger will be, do not seek to save your life by violating your conscience; if you do, you will surely lose it: whereas if you should lose it for my sake, you shall be paid with life everlasting. But the most probable way of preserving it now is to be always ready to give it up; a peculiar providence shall then watch over you, and put a difference between you and other men.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xvii. (26, .7, see the border) 28, .9. The removal of the Lord's people from among the wicked, so far from being a cause of triumph to the latter, is rather to be regarded as a sign of their fast approaching destruction. So was it in the case of the old world, and of Sodom; so also in the case of Jerusalem.

30 ver. The Apocalypse of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, was given for our use about the time the kingdom was taken from the Jews. By the fulfilment of our Lord's predictions respecting Jerusalem, let us be assured that Jesus is indeed the Christ, and that all he hath promised shall also be fulfilled.

33 ver. Let us beware of loving our lives unto the death; of preferring earthly enjoyment to heavenly blessedness. It is well to have our lives now hid with Christ in God, so that when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, we also may appear with him in glory, Col. iii. 3, 4.

LUKE xvii. 35—.7.

35 one shall-be-taken παραλημφθησεται. and the other shall-be-left αφεθησεται. Two women 36 shall-be grinding together; the one shall-be-taken, and the other left. Two men shall-37 be in the field; the one shall-be-taken, and the other left. And they-answered and-said unto-him, Where, Lord? And he said unto-them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will-the eagles-be-gathered-together.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

and the gospel's, the same shall save it.'—And again, when arrived at Jerusalem, immediately before his decease, Jno. xii. 25, § 82, p. 267, 'He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.'—Of those that overcome, it is said, Rev. xii. 11, 'They loved not their lives unto the death.'

Lu. xvii. 34. in that night—when the truth of the prediction in ver. 33, will be made manifest—it will then be to the unprofitable servant the blackness of night, Mt. xxv. 30, § 86, p. 350.

35, .6. one shall be taken, &c.—Nearly the same words, Mt. xxiv. 40, .1, § 86, p. 342—1 Th. iv. 17, 'Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [the raised saints] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.'

Wheresoever the body is, &c.—Speaking of the eagle, the Lord saith, Job xxxix. 30, 'Where the slain are, there is she.'—He had said to Israel, in the case of their refusing to hearken unto the voice of the Lord, De. xxviii. 26, 'Thy carcase shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.'—He had also forewarned the Jews of their destruction by the Romans, ver. 49. 'The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth;' &c.—See also, Mt. xxiv. 28, § 86, 'Wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together.'

NOTES.

Lu. xvii. 34. Two men in one bed. 'Upon one couch.' That is, sitting together at supper, which was also in the night season.

35. Two women shall be, &c. Women alone are still employed in grinding the corn in the East; and when dispatch is required, or the upper millstone is heavy, a second woman is added. See Exod. xi. 5; and Is. xlvii. 2.

37. Wheresoever the body is, &c. Wheresoever those who are to suffer these things shall be found, thither those who are appointed to afflict them shall be 'gathered together.' This appears to be a proverbial saying, as Job xxxix. 30. See SCRIP. ILLUS.—Comp. Hab. i. 8.

Our Lord here applies it to that general slaughter of the Jews which was about to take place, not only in Judæa, but in other countries also, during the last years of their existence as a nation; and of which Josephus has given very full accounts.—Comp. Lu. xxi 24, § 86, p. 334. There may here be an allusion to the Roman ensign, the eagle; led on by which their armies hunted the corrupt Jews in every place. Instruments of destruction will never be wanting when the work of destruction is to be accomplished; as it must be where wickedness and impenitence prevail, to the utter rejection of the Lord's message, and the murder of his messengers. Our Lord, indeed, we may suppose, was not, in all that he then said, understood at the time, but he was afterwards.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xvii. 34—6. As lowliness of earthly condition does not prevent reception into the family of God, and kingdom of heaven; so neither does it give a claim to future happiness: in the same humble circumstances will be found many of both sexes, part of whom will be carried into glory, and part of whom will be left in the darkness of that night, which will be known as a morning of joy to the children of God.]

37 ver. It is vain for a guilty people to think of escaping the stroke of Divine justice, except as taking refuge in him whom the Jews rejected. Wherever the Jewish people were, whether in their own land or out of it, there the Roman eagles were gathered together to devour.

[Self-indulgence in sensual gratifications is a common forerunner of fearful and sudden destruction. And none are more certainly exposed than hardened apostates, who refuse to take warning from the calamities of others before them. But, if men will not heartily part with the world as their portion, they must perish with it. In great wisdom and mercy the spread of God's vengeance among the obstinate Jews was made a mean of spreading the gospel among, and of saving, the Gentiles. Fearfully he resents the injuries done to his faithful servants, and pities and rewards them that suffer for his sake. Yea, marvellously he distinguishes them in his protections here and his eternal glories hereafter.]

PARALLELISM OF LUKE xvii. 23—.7, 30, AND MATTHEW xxiv. 26, .7, 37—.9, § 86, p. 335.

	LUKE xvii.		MATT. xxiv.
23	And they shall say to you, See here; or, see there: go not after them,		Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.	26
24	nor follow them. For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.		For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. (Comp. ver. 28 with Luke xvii. 37.)	27
25	But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation.
26	And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.		But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be	37
27	They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.		For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away;	38 / 39
28, .9	. . . . .
30	Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.		so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

SECTION 73.—(G. 48, .9.)—[Lesson 67.]—JESUS DELIVERS THE PARABLE OF THE UNJUST JUDGE, AND THE IMPORTUNATE WIDOW: AND WITH REFERENCE TO CERTAIN WHO ACCOUNTED THEMSELVES RIGHTEOUS AND DESPISED OTHERS, HE DELIVERS THE PARABLE OF THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN.—Luke xviii. 1—14.

INTRODUCTION.

Lu. xviii. 1. Our Lord had, in the preceding section, Lu. xvii. 20—37, distinguished between the coming of the kingdom of grace, which is now among men, ver. 21; and the coming of the kingdom of glory, when a separation will be made between the righteous and the wicked, however intimately they may previously have been blended, ver. 34—6. § 72, p. 212. He now, in two parables regarding prayer, teaches the use we are to make of these two grand key-doctrines of Divine revelation—his first and second advents. He here takes up the last first. By believing, persevering prayer, the church is to wrestle for the coming of the Son of man, to establish his kingdom of righteousness and peace: as much opposed to the injustice and oppression that have prevailed among men, as the character of the unjust judge is to that of the righteous Judge, our blessed Redeemer, Lu. xviii. 1—8.

In the parable of the Pharisee and publican we are next taught the manner of coming into the enjoyment of the kingdom, as it must now be within us. It is as humbly confessing ourselves to be sinners, and as pleading the propitiation for sin, typified by the sacrifices offered under the law, and accomplished for us by Christ in his first advent; when, by his one offering up of himself, he put away sin, and was declared to be the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, ver. 9—14.

ANALYSIS.

Lu. xviii. 1. Design of the first parable.
—— 2. Character of the unjust judge.
—— 3. The widow's suit.
—— 4, 5. Her importunity prevails with the unjust judge.
—— 6, 7. Implied contrast of the widow's case to that of God's elect.
—— 8. Notwithstanding the Lord's faithfulness in avenging his people speedily, will the Son of man, even at his second advent, really find faith on the earth?
—— 9. The 2nd parable, to whom addressed.
Lu. xviii. 10. Two men go up to the temple to pray.
—— 11. The Pharisee's manner and form of prayer. He thanks God that he is not as, &c.
—— 12. With regard to his religious duties, he boasts of his fasting and giving tithes of all, &c.
—— 13. The publican's manner of prayer: he supplicates the reconciling grace of God to himself a sinner.
—— 14. Our Lord pronounces upon the case of the one and the other, and declares the general rule of judgment.

No. 73.—(G. 48.)—The parable of the unjust judge, and the importunate widow. Luke xviii. 1—8.

1 And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not
2 to faint; saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xviii. 1. Always to pray—so again, ch. xxi. 36, § 86, p. 341. 'Watch ye therefore, and pray always.'—Soon after Pentecost, the twelve proposed the election of deacons, who should take charge of the temporal affairs of the church, the apostles saying, Ac. vi. 4, 'We will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.'—When the kingdom of God was opened to the Gentiles, Cornelius, who was chosen to hear from Peter the words of salvation, was one that 'prayed to God alway,' x. 2—The exhortation of Paul to believers is, that they be 'patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer,' Rom. xii. 12.—And again, Eph. vi. 18, 'Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints;'—Ph. iv. 6, 'Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.'—Col. iv. 2, 'Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving;'—1 Th. v. 17, 'Pray without ceasing.'

not to faint—so Jacob wrestled with the Angel of the covenant until he prevailed, saying, Ge. xxxii. 26, 'I will not,' &c.—Our Lord had already exhorted to importunity in prayer, as Lu. xi. 5—9. § 62, p. 152.

2. a judge, &c.—Jesus himself, when on earth, experienced in his own case what it is to suffer by unrighteous judges, Mt. xxvi. 63—8; xxvii. 24—6, §§ 89, 90, pp. 426, 452—But as Paul declared to the men of Athens, Ac. xvii. 31, God 'hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance [marg. "offered faith"] unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.'

feared not God—The contrast of Christ, the righteous Judge, who could say, as Jno. xiv. 31, § 87, p. 386, 'As the Father gave me commandment, even so I do.'

neither regarded man—In this also he was the contrast of Christ, who loved the people, De. xxxiii. 3, so as, at the command of the Father, to lay down his life for them, Jno. x. 11—8, § 55, p. 115.

NOTES.

[Lu. xviii. 1. A parable. See Vol. I. p. 243. This parable, like many others, is one of contrast. Our God is not an unjust Judge, but the Faithful and True. The supplicant is not a poor widow, but his own chosen bride, for whom he hath laid down his life. He does not, like the unjust judge, want to get rid of those who call upon him, but he desires to make them most blessed in his house for ever.]

2. A judge, which feared not God, &c. A proverbial form, expressive of the most unblushing wickedness. Even among the heathen this was the character of a man totally abandoned to all evil. So Dion Cassius says of Vitellius, that 'he neither regarded gods nor men.'

3. Avenge me of mine adversary. ἐκδικησόν με ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀντιδίκου μου, 'do me justice on my adversary.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Lu. xviii. 1. Between the period when the predictions of our Lord began to be fulfilled, and his own glorious return, the time is long: so that many have almost lost sight of the object of the believer's hope, and have become weary in waiting; but we ought always to pray and not to faint. It is to a praying people, longing for his return, that our Lord will appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation.]

LUKE xviii. 3—8.

3 ἐντρεπομενος man: and there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying,
4 Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while: but afterward he said
5 within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary ὑπωπιαζῃ me.
6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust της αδικιας judge saith. 7 And shall not God avenge ποιησει την εκδικησιν his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though 8 he bear long with επ' them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xviii. 3. widow God, 'the Judge of the widows,' gives commandment to plead for the widow, Ps. lxviii. 5; Is. i. 17—To her who is exhorted to prosecute her cause before the righteous Judge, it is said, Is. liv. 4, 5, 'Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy Maker is thine husband; the LORD of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called,' &c.—Her glorious rest is spoken of, ver. 11—3—Established in righteousness, she is to be triumphant over all her adversaries, ver. 14—7.

Avenge me of mine adversary, &c.—see 1 Pe. v. 6—10; Rev. xii. 10, 11, 'And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night. And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.'

5. troubleth me, &c.—The contrary is the case with the Lord, who saith, Is. xliii. 22, 'But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.'—26, 'Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.'—Compare, Hag. i. 1—3, 'Behold, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: 2, but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear. 3, For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness. 4, None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth,' &c.

6. And the Lord said, Hear, &c.—This is somewhat like that other saying of our Lord, Mt. vii. 11, § 19, p. 139, 'If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?'

7. which cry day and night, &c.—The Lord hath appointed, saying, Is. lxii. 6, 7, 'I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the LORD, keep not silence, and give him no rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.'—Then will the Lord be found true to his word, ver. 8, 9, 'The LORD hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, Surely I will no more give thy corn to be meat for thine enemies; and the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured: but they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the LORD; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness.'—See the cry for the rending of the heavens and coming of the righteous Judge, lxiv. . . . . —see also the invitation to prayer, Joel ii. 15, 17, 'Gather the people, sanctify the congregation,'—and the answer, 18—20, 'Then will the LORD be jealous for his land, and pity his people. Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith: and I will no more make you a reproach,' &c.

though he bear long with them—The Lord hath been longsuffering to his people, during their comparatively prayerless state, Is. xliii. 23, 4. . . . . 'Thou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices. I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense. Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices: but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.'—Their prayers have rather been a mockery of his majesty, than supplications for his mercy, lviii. 1—5—When the sincerity of their prayers is evidenced by their conduct being in accordance with the great law of LOVE, then will the Lord hear and answer, 6—14.

8. speedily—Upon that very generation the Lord avenged the blood of his servants, as predicted, Mt. xxiii. 34—6, § 85, p. 319—Afterwards the cry was heard of those who, by the Romans, were slain, for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, Rev. vi. 10, 'And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?'—And the Lord did avenge them on Pagan Rome; and never since has he been slack to vindicate the cause of his servants, according as they were able to bear his interference in their behalf, 2 Pe. iii. 9, 'The Lord is not slack,' &c.

Nevertheless, &c.—Notwithstanding the Lord's speedy and frequent avenging of his people, and his longsuffering kindness towards them, they are slow in believing his word, and reposing their confidence

NOTES.

Lu. xviii. 5. Weary. Ὑπωπιάζῃ με.

['This word is peculiar, and occurs only once more in the New Testament, 1 Co. ix. 27, where St. Paul is speaking of keeping under his body. Ὑπώπιον, whence the verb is derived, denotes the appearance produced by a blow on the face, properly under the eye, caused by the extravasation of the small blood vessels, and what we should call a black eye. . . . . It is manifest that ὑπωπιάω, denoting to give or to cause ὑπώπια in this proper sense, may be used to describe the effect of any disagreeable personal importunity, any reiterated application, productive of weariness, fatigue, and irksomeness, like that of the widow in the parable.'—Greswell.]

7. Shall not God avenge his own elect? Shall not God, who is a Father to all who call upon him, execute his wrath upon those who oppress his children, and grind the faces of the poor and defenceless?

His own elect. Christians chosen out of the world to be the peculiar people of God.

[Though he bear, &c. μακροθυμῶν, which is here translated though, is commonly rendered and; it might as well have been so here. The sense is, that God will both speedily avenge his own elect, and be long-suffering toward them. He bears long with the infirmities and waywardness of his children, who cry unto him continually; but he that toucheth them, toucheth the apple of his eye.]

8. He will avenge them speedily. He did speedily avenge them upon their Jewish persecutors; and he does and will avenge speedily all those of his people who cry day and night unto him. Men have but dimly traced the operation of his hand, but still he hath, both in justice and in mercy, been working deliverances for his people.

Nevertheless, &c. Notwithstanding that God doth

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xviii. 4—6. If the unjust judge was prevailed upon to avenge the quarrel of the poor widow, shall the Lord refuse to hear the cry which he hath put into the mouth of his redeemed—'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly'?]

[7, 8 ver. Although the Lord be longsuffering toward his people, yet is he quick in avenging their cause; and when they do realize his promises, and with united hearts plead them, it will indeed be seen that he doth 'avenge them speedily.']

IN IMPORTUNITY CAN PREVAIL WITH AN UNJUST JUDGE, WHAT MUST IT DO WITH A JUST ONE?

NONE CAN HAVE EVIDENCE THAT HE IS CHOSEN OF GOD, WHO IS NOT A MAN OF PRAYER.

LUKE xviii. 9—11.

less when-' the Son of man'-cometh, shall-he-find faith την πιστιν on the earth?

(G. 49.)—Jesus delivers the parable of the Pharisee and the publican, with reference to certain who accounted themselves righteous, and despised others.—Luke xviii. 9—14.

9 And he-spake this parable unto certain which-trusted in themselves that they-were 10 righteous, and despised others εξουθενουντας τους λοιπους: Two men went-up into the 11 temple to-pray; the one a-Pharisee, and the other a-publican. The Pharisee stood and-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

in him—so was it with ancient Israel, Ps. lxxviii. 38—41, 'But he, being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath. 39, For he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again. 40, How oft did they provoke him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert! 41, Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.'—cvi. 42—5, 'Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand. 43, Many times did he deliver them; but they provoked him with their counsel, and were brought low for their iniquity. 44, Nevertheless he regarded their affliction, when he heard their cry: 45, and he remembered for them his covenant, and repented according to the multitude of his mercies.'

Lu. xviii. 8. when the Son of man cometh—At the time of Christ's second advent, the Lord will avenge them of their great enemy, Antichrist, Da. vii. 11—4. . . . —Then also will their great adversary, the Devil, be bound, Rev. xx. 1—4; and then will those who have waited for the Lord's appearing, be given rest from all that have troubled them, 2 Th. i. 7, 8, 'And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:'

NOTES.

so speedily vindicate the cause of his elect that cry unto him, as that those who have eyes to see might well see that God is worthy of being trusted in, and will at length fully accomplish all that he hath promised with regard to the establishment of his kingdom of righteousness and peace; notwithstanding all the continually accumulating evidence of his truth and faithfulness, shall he, even down to the period of the coming of the Son of man, find upon the earth those who have in truth been believing his word, and pleading his promises? The question is the more important, as it is unto such, and for the deliverance of such, that the SON OF MAN is to come in his second and glorious appearing.

Lu. xviii. 8. The Son of man. See on Mt. viii. 20, § 34, p. 265.

When the Son of man cometh. To require the produce of the seed of the kingdom sown among his people.

Shall he find faith on the earth? αρα ευρησει την πιστιν επι της γης; 'will he find this belief in the land?'

It may be noticed that our Lord does not himself answer the question as to whether, at his coming, he will indeed find us watching and waiting his appearing; as having faith to go forth to meet him, saying, 'Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.'

9. Trusted in themselves. Thought themselves so good and holy, that they had no need of pardon from God.

That they were righteous. 'Rabbi Simeon, the son of Jochai, said—The whole world is not worth thirty righteous persons, such as our father Abraham. If there were only thirty righteous persons in the world, I and my son would make two of them; but if there were but twenty, I and my son would be of the number; and if there were but five, I and my son would be of the five; and if there were but two, I and my son would be those two; and if there were but one, myself should be that one.'

9. trusted in themselves, &c.—Pr. xxviii. 26, 'He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool:'—Of the Pharisees, Jesus had said, Lu. xvi. 15, § 69, p. 198, 'Ye are they which justify yourselves before men: but God knoweth your hearts:'—In opposition to those who trust in themselves, the apostle of the Gentiles says, Ph. iii. 3, 4, 'We are the circumcision, which worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.' &c.

despised others—Those who thus despised others, were they whom the Lord despised; and on whom he had said he would be avenged, both because of their own sins, and the sins of their idolatrous fathers, Is. lxv. 5—7, 'Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou. These are a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day. 6, Behold, it is written before me: I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom, 7, your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD, which have burned incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore will I measure their former work into their bosom.'

10. Pharisee—see § 7, p 56, ADDENDA, and § 44, p. 4, § 47, p. 28.

publican—see ch. iii. 12, § 7, p. 53, and xix. 2—10, § 80, p. 246.

11. The Pharisee stood—It was the custom to stand when praising God in the temple, Ps. cxxxv. 1, 2,

NOTES.

Despised others. This was the character of the Pharisees. They trusted in their outward conformity to the observances of the law. This sect always affected to dread pollution from the touch of those whom they considered to be their inferiors in piety. Those who trust in God for righteousness, feel that they are in themselves poor, and miserable, and guilty, and they are willing to admit that others may be much better than themselves.

10. Two men. These two persons may (as Mr. Greswell suggests) be considered, not as individuals, but as representatives of the two classes in question, Pharisees and publicans. In the same point of view may the prayers of each be considered as a specimen of the prayers used by each class respectively.

Into the temple. Into one of the courts of the temple, the court where prayer was commonly offered.—See on Mt. xxi. 12, 3, § 83.

[From the necessity of constant prayer, &c. (taught in the preceding parable, ver. 1—8), our Lord now turns to the kindred duty of humility, placing before his hearers in the following parable (to use the words of Mr. Greswell) 'a fine moral example, levelled against three capital errors in practical religion, in each of man's threefold relations, to himself, his Maker, and his fellow-creatures: the want of sobriety of judgment in his estimation of himself; an ignorance or dissimulation of his true moral position in respect to God; and an equal injustice and uncharitableness in his estimate of others, whose situation in all moral respects is the same with his own.' —Bloomf.]

To pray. The word pray here is used in an extended sense, and includes thanksgiving as well as prayer. The devotion of the Pharisee, it appears, consisted of thanksgiving alone.

Pharisee. See on Mt. iii. 7, § 7, p. 52, 'Pharisees,' § 40. p. 56, ADDENDA.

Publican. See on Mt. iii. 12, § ib. p. 53.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xviii. 8. Notwithstanding the many wonderful interpositions of the Lord on behalf of his people, both individually and collectively, faith in his promise is but feebly realized, and the cry of believing prayer for his glorious return is but faintly heard from his Bride.

[Let us not, in reply to the question of our Lord, presume to say, No, he shall not find faith on the earth. Let us rather say, Yes, dearest Lord, Thou wilt find faith. Such fulness of promise, and abundant evidence of thy truthfulness, must not be in vain. Thy people will at length awake from their long slumber, realize thy promise, and long for thy appearing.]

LET US NOT TRUST IN OURSELVES, BUT IN JESUS, FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

LET US NEITHER THINK TOO HIGHLY OF OURSELVES, NOR DESPISINGLY OF OTHERS.

LUKE xviii. 12—4.

prayed thus with himself, God, I-thank thee, that I-am not as other οἱ λοιποι των men 12 are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I-fast twice in-the week, 13 I-give-tithes of-all that I-possess κτῶμαι. And the publican, standing afar-off, would not lift-up so-much-as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be-14 merciful ἱλασθητι to-me a sinner. I-tell you, this-man went-down to his house justified rather than the-other: for every-one that exalteth himself shall-be-abased; and he that-humbleth himself shall-be-exalted. [Ch. xviii. 15, § lxxiv. p. 220.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

'Praise ye the LORD. Praise ye the name of the LORD; praise him, O ye servants of the LORD. Ye that stand in the house of the LORD, in the courts of the house of our God,'—Solomon, at the dedication of the temple, kneeled in prayer, 1 Ki. viii 54; 2 Chr. vi. 13—Ezra also kneeled, when confessing sin, and supplicating mercy, Ezr. ix. 5—so Daniel in private prayer, Da. vi. 10—the disciples, Ac. xx. 36.

Lu. xviii. 11. I am not as other men, &c.—Rev. iii. 17—9, 'Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: 18, I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. 19, As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.'

12. I fast twice in the week—Fasting, afflicting the soul, was commanded under the law, Le. xxiii. 27, .9, and practised under the gospel, Ac. xiii. 2, 3—but not in every case pleasing to God, Is. lviii. 1—3. . . . . 'Cry aloud,' &c.

I give tithes—Abraham paid tithes, Ge. xiv. 20; He. vii. 4—9—Jacob promised to pay a tenth to the Lord, Ge. xxviii. 22—The tenth of the produce of the land was to be devoted to the Lord, Nu. xviii. 21—7, to be spent in journeying to and from the house of the Lord, and in feasting while there—also in gifts to the Levites, and in support of the poor, De. xiv. 22—9.

13. afar off—he stood apart from ordinary worshippers, as the lepers 'stood afar off' from other society, ch. xvii. 12, § 70, p. 208.

smote upon his breast—Ephraim is, in prophecy, represented as somewhat like this penitent, Je. xxxi. 18, 'Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.'

be merciful—The verb here used (ἱλασθητι) is the same with that which, as a noun, expresses mercy-seat in the Gr. of the Septuagint; it has in it the idea of propitiation, or reconciliation: thus, speaking of Christ, it is said, Rom. iii. 25, 'Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation ἱλαστηριον through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;'—comp. also He. ii. 17, 'Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation ἱλασκεσθαι for the sins of the people.'—1 Jno. ii. 2, 'And he is the propitiation ἱλασμος for our sins: and not for our's only, but also for the sins of the whole world.'—iv. 10, 'Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation ἱλασμον for our sins.'

to me a sinner—1 Jno. i. 8, 9, 'If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.'

14. every one that exalteth himself—Our Lord afterwards repeats this saying, when exhorting his disciples to avoid the conduct of the scribes and Pharisees in striving for the masterv, Mt. xxiii. 12, § 85, p. 315.

NOTES.

Lu. xviii. 11. The Pharisee stood, &c. See Mt. vi. 5, § 19, p. 131. Σταθεις, προς ἑαυτον ταυτα προσηυχετο, 'standing by himself, prayed thus.'

I thank thee, &c. The Pharisee here describes the righteousness of his sect. It was twofold:—1. It consisted in doing no harm to others. 2. In attending all the ordinances of the Jewish religion.

Extortioners, ἁρπαγες, unjust, ἀδικοι. Ἁρπαξ, one who injures another by force; ἀδικος, one who overreaches him by fraud, or under a semblance of justice.

12. I fast twice, &c. The Pharisees are said to have fasted regularly on the second and fifth days of every week; the first because Moses then ascended the mount, and the latter because he came down on account of the worship paid to the golden calf. These fasts were kept only during a part of each of these days. This was in addition to the public day of fasting required in the law of Moses.

Of all that I possess. Or, of all I acquire, κτωμαι. The Pharisee's meaning may be, 'As fast as I gain anything, I give the tenth part of it to God's service.'

13. The publican, standing afar off. The publican stood also by himself, but from a very different motive; conscious of being unable to justify himself, he pleads only for mercy, that God would be propitiated towards him through a sacrifice, which is the force of the original expression here used by the publican.

Smote upon his breast, &c. A token of excessive grief, practised in all nations. It seems to intimate a desire in the penitent to punish the heart, through the evil propensities of which the sin deplored had been committed.

God be merciful, &c. ἱλασθητι. Render, 'be propitiated,' or 'propitious to me.' The significancy and propriety of which expression is shown at large by Mr. Greswell, vol. iv. p. 317, sqq.

Be propitious toward me through sacrifice, or let an atonement be made for me: I am a sinner, and cannot be saved but in this way.—See the use of the word in the Sept., Ps. lxv. 3, 4; lxviii. 38; lxxix. 9.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xviii. 10—.3. From what different motives may the same actions proceed! Both the Pharisee and publican went into the temple, and both for the purpose of prayer, and each of them prayed by himself. The Pharisee stood by himself because he despised others. His prayer was a laudation of himself, and condemnation of others; as if he would tell his fellow-worshippers how much he was better than they, and how greatly he had made God his debtor. Although his trust was in his own observance of the law, he gave no evidence whatever of possessing that supreme love to God, and loving his neighbour as himself, which the law requires. The publican stood afar off, because he thought himself unworthy to mingle with the worshippers. His prayer was a confession of his sinfulness, and a supplication for the mercy of God, upon the ground of a propitiatory sacrifice. His charity was such that he thought his fellow-worshippers much better than himself; and his love to God was expressed by his prayer for reconciliation with Him against whom he had sinned.

14 ver. Let us humble ourselves before God, gladly embracing the reconciliation provided for us by the first coming of our Lord, and so be found prayerfully waiting for his second and glorious appearing; when those who have humbled themselves to be saved by the sovereign grace of God, and to be partakers of the sufferings of Christ, shall be exalted to a full participation of his glory.

SECTION 74.—(G. 50, .1).—[Lesson 68.]—THE PHARISEES QUESTION JESUS CONCERNING THE LAWFULNESS OF DIVORCE FOR EVERY CAUSE;* HIS ANSWER TO THEM IN PUBLIC; AND LIKEWISE TO HIS DISCIPLES IN PRIVATE. LITTLE CHILDREN ARE BROUGHT UNTO JESUS. HE REPROVES HIS DISCIPLES FOR REBUKING THOSE THAT BROUGHT THEM.—Matt. xix. 3—15; Mark x. 2—16; Luke xviii. 15—.7.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xix. 3. Mk. x. 2. The Pharisees question Jesus regarding the law of divorce.

——— — x. 3. Jesus asks them, 'What did Moses command?'

——— — x. 4. They answer, that Moses suffered the woman to be put away, the husband giving her a bill of divorce.

——— — x. 5. Jesus accounts for the temporary permission given by Moses.

— xix. 4—6. — x. 6—9. He shews that from the beginning one woman was appointed to one man; that the marriage union was such, that for it other relationships, even the most endeared, were to be relinquished; that where marriage has been consummated, none but God himself should be allowed to separate.

— xix. 7, 8. ——— Jesus repeats his statement respecting the temporary nature of the permission given by Moses, and the perpetuity of the marriage covenant as appointed at the beginning.

— xix. 9. ——— He repeats what he had said in the Sermon on the Mount, and also more recently, on the sinfulness of putting away.

——— — x. 10—.2. In the house, he repeats to his disciples what he had just said to the Pharisees.

Mt. xix. 10. Mk. ——— His disciples object, that if the law be so, it is not good for a man to marry.

— xix. 11, .2. ——— Jesus acknowledges that there are some cases in which marriage ought not to be contracted, or if formally contracted, is not binding; but he affirms that, where no such impediment does exist, the law as he has stated it is to be observed.

— xix. 13. — x. 13. Lu. xviii. 15. Little children are brought to Jesus, that he may lay his hands on them, &c.; the disciples rebuke those that bring them.

— xix. 14. — x. 14. — xviii. 16. Jesus is displeased with his disciples, and commands that they suffer little children to come to him, saying, 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven.'

——— — x. 15. — xviii. 17. He repeats what he had said on a former occasion, that no one can enter the kingdom of God, saving he who receives it as a little child.

— xix. 15. — x. 16. ——— Jesus takes the children in his arms, puts his hands on them, and blesses them.

No. 74.—(G. 50.)—The Pharisees question Jesus concerning the lawfulness of divorce for every cause; his answer to them in public; and likewise to his disciples in private.

MATT. xix. 3—12.
[Ch. xix. 2, § lxxi. p. 209.]

3 •The Pharisees also came-unto him, tempting him, and saying unto-him, Is-it-lawful for-a-man to-put-away his wife for every cause?ᵇ

MARK x. 2—12.
[Ch. x. 1, § lxxi. p. 209.]

And the Pharisees came-to him, 2 and asked him, Is-it-lawful for-a-man to-put-away his wife?

tempting him.

• And he answered and-said unto-them, 3 What did-Moses-command you?

And they said, Moses suffered to-write a-bill 4

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 3. Is it lawful, &c.—Jesus had, in an early part of his ministry, declared the law on this subject, v. 31, .2, § 13, p. 126; and again, more recently, Lu. xvi. 18, § 69, p. 199.

Mk. x. 4. Moses suffered, &c.—De. xxiv. 1, 'When a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.'—After having espoused Mary, Joseph had, upon suspicion, thought of thus putting her away, but was prevented by Divine interposition, Mt. i. 18—25, § 2, p. 13.

NOTES.

Mt. xix. 3. The Pharisees. They seem to have been the foremost in endeavouring to entangle our blessed Lord in his talk, that they might find accusation against him; and are to be seen with him throughout his public ministry, either finding fault with him, or with his disciples.—See § 7, ADDENDA, p. 56.

Tempting him. Trying what answer he would give to a question, which however decided by him, would expose him to censure.

[To put away, &c. Two celebrated schools had divided opinions on this question; that of Shammah, or Sammai, taught that it could only be done for adultery; that of Hillel, on the most trifling occasions of dispute, &c. The insidious motive of this question is apparent by a comparison of this with the parallel passage in Lu. xvi. 18, § 69, p. 199, where the judgment of Christ respecting the unlawfulness of divorce is given in illustration of his assurance, that the law should endure for ever. Christ's wisdom frustrated their cunning, and he effectually thwarted their aims by an appeal to their great Lawgiver. It is to be considered that Jesus was still in the dominions of Herod, who was guilty in the respect so directly condemned by our Lord; and with whom the Pharisees would doubtless be glad to embroil him. They could not have forgotten the case of the Baptist, who, for reproaching Herod's licentiousness, had been first imprisoned, and afterwards beheaded.]

Mk. x. 3. What did Moses, &c. The account given by Matthew and Mark are not contradictory. Matthew records what was said in one part of the conversation, and Mark what was said in another.

* 'It is probable that Jesus was arrived at the borders of Judæa, or within a day's journey of being so, when the Pharisees put their question concerning divorce.'—Greswell, Vol. II. Diss. xxxi. p. 543.

'Their question was put from insidious motive; either to elicit a declaration which they knew would be repugnant to the mandate of the law, or render Jesus obnoxious to the people. .. The license of polygamy, allowed by the doctors of the law, and practised by the Jews everywhere, was almost unlimited.'—Ibid. Vol. III. Diss. xxxvi. pp. 41, .2.

GATHER NOT MY SOUL WITH SINNERS, NOR MY LIFE WITH BLOODY MEN: IN WHOSE HANDS IS MISCHIEF, AND THEIR RIGHT HAND IS FULL OF BRIBES.—Psa. xxvi. 9, 10.

MATT. xix. 4—9.

4 And he answered and-said unto-them,

[c] Have-ye-not-read, that [d] he-which made them at the-beginning made them male and female,
5 [e] and said, For-this-cause shall-a-man-leave father and mother, and shall-cleave-to his wife: and they twain shall-be one flesh εἰς σαρκα μιαν?
6 Wherefore they-are no-more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath-joined-together συνεζευξεν,
let-not man-put-asunder χωριζετω.
7 They-say unto-him, Why did-Moses then-command to-give a-
8 writing of-divorcement, and to-put-her-away? He-saith unto-them, Moses because-of προς the hardness-of-your-hearts suffered you to-put-away your wives: but from the-beginning it-was not 9 so. And I-say unto-you, Whosoever shall-put-away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall-marry another, committethof-divorcement, and to-put-her-away.

MARK x. 5—9.

And Jesus answered and-said unto-them, 5
For προς the hardness-of-your-heart he-wrote you this precept.[a]
But 6
[d] from the-beginning of-the-creation κτισεως
God made them male and female.[d]
For-this-cause shall-a-man- 7 leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;
and they twain shall-be one flesh 8
εἰς σαρκα μιαν:
so-then they-are no-more twain,
but one flesh.
What therefore God hath-joined-together 9
συνεζευξεν,
let-not man-put-asunder χωριζετω.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. x. 5. hardness of your heart, &c.—De. ix. 6; xxxi. 26, 27; Eze. ii. 4.

6. made them male and female—Ge. i. 27, 'So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.'

7. leave his father and mother—Ge. ii. 23, 24, 'And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.'

8. they twain, &c.—1 Co. vi. 16, What? know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh.'—vii. 2, 'Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.'—Eph. v. 31, 'For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.'

9. let not man put asunder—1 Co. vii. 10, 11, 'And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: . . . and let not the husband put away his wife.'

Mt. xix. 7, 8. Moses, &c.—Mk. x. 4—6, supra.

9. Whosoever shall put away—see on ver. 3, supra.

NOTES.

[Mk. x. 4. Bill of divorcement. See on Mt. i. 19, § 2, p. 13. The Jews having greatly abused that provision of the law of Moses, De. xxiv. 1—4, which permitted a man under certain circumstances to give his wife 'a bill of divorcement,' our Lord, at Mt. v. 31, 32, § 19, p. 126, revokes that permission, and allows no cause of divorce, except 'fornication.'—See on Mt. xix. 9, infra.]

[5. Hardness of your heart. Israel, whom the Lord had espoused to himself, according to the covenant made with them when he brought them up out of Egypt, had become so backsliding from him that he had given her a bill of divorce, and sent her away, Je. iii. 8. Only the Jews remained, and they were so hardened in heart, that the word of the Lord to them was, ch. iv. 4, 'Circumcise yourselves to the Lord, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem: lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.' By the last of their prophets, Mal. ii. 11—16, Judah is severely rebuked, and warned to take heed to his spirit, in regard to the wife of his youth.]

[6. From the beginning. ἀπο δε ἀρχης κτισεως. In this rare phrase κτισις signifies 'the creation,' the world, or universe, as ch. xiii. 19, § 86, p. 333. 2 Pe. iii. 4, 'Saying, ... all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.' The argument in this and the verse following is, that 'God, at the beginning of the world, created man and woman, in order that they should live together in perfect union; and that hence married persons are to be regarded, not as two, but one; and therefore, by the Divine law, no divorce can be permitted.'—See Ge. i. 27; v. 2.]

[made them male and female. αρσεν και θηλυ, 'a male and a female.' The will of God, as in the beginning, continues to be declared, in respect to marriage, by the two sexes being upon the whole produced in nearly equal proportions. That arrangement of God in nature and in providence has been abundantly confirmed by the word of revelation; and it is worthy of remark, that from the beginning the will of God was so plainly declared, by its being said that these (one man and one woman) shall be one flesh. By making them one man and one woman, he condemned polygamy; by making them one flesh, he condemned divorce.]

Mt. xix. 8. Moses. 'Moses,' observes Grotius, 'is named as the promulgator, not of a common, primeval, and perpetual law, but of one only Jewish, primeval, and given in reference to the times.' The sum of Christ's words, Theophylact observes, is this: 'Moses wisely restrained by civil regulations your licentiousness, and permitted divorce only under certain conditions, because of your brutality, lest you should perpetrate something worse, namely, make away with them by sword or poison.'

9. Committeth adultery. Comp. ch. v. 32, where this

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. x. 2—5. Let us consider the design of the Lawgiver, and the spirit as well as the letter of the law.]

6, 7 ser. Let us be thankful for the domestic blessings enjoyed under Christianity, which has done so much to restore woman to her place in society.

[Mt. xix. 6. Let us admire the condescending grace of the Lord of glory, who deigned to enter into the most intimate relation with us, to make us one with himself, according to a covenant never to be broken.]

As in the church relation, so in the domestic, let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works, rather than contrive how we may be quit of the obligation to comfort and assist each other.

9 ser. Let us beware of taking advantage of the letter of the law, in order to break it in the spirit.

MATT. xix. 10—.2. MARK x. 10—.2.

adultery: and whoso marrieth her-which-is-put-away doth-commit adultery.f f And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. And he-saith unto-them, Whosoever shall-put-away his wife, and marry another, committeth-adultery against her. And if a-woman shall-put-away her husband, and be-married to-another, she-committeth-adultery.g

10 g His disciples say unto-him, If the case ἡ αἰτια of-the man be 11 so with his wife, it-is-not-good συμφερει to-marry. But he said unto-them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to-whom 12 it-is-given. For there-are some eunuchs, which were-so-born from their mother's womb: and there-are some eunuchs, which were-made-eunuchs of men: and there-be eunuchs, which have-made-themselves-eunuchs for the kingdom of-heaven's sake. He that-is-able to-receive χωρειν it, let-him-receive χωρειτω it.

(G. 51.)—Jesus reproves his disciples for preventing the bringing of little children to him.

MATT. xix. 13—.5. MARK x. 13—.6. LUKE xviii. 15—.7. [Ch. xviii. 14, § lxxiii. p. 217.]

13 a Then were-there-brought-unto him little-children, 13 And they-brought-young-children-to him, 15 And they-brought-unto him also infants,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. x. 11. Whosoever, &c.—Mt. xix. 9, p. 219.

12. if a woman shall put away—Rom. vii. 3, 'So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.'—See also 1 Co. vii. 39.

Mt. xix. 10. not good to marry—In 1 Co. vii. 25—37, the apostle Paul gives it as his private opinion, that on account of the then present distress, and in order that men might be at greater liberty for the Lord's work, it was good for those to remain unmarried who were under no kind of necessity to marry, and who had so decreed in their heart. But he expressly states, that concerning this matter, he had 'no commandment of the Lord:' shewing plainly that Paul did not regard our Lord's commandment, Mt. xix. 12, as having a reference to this saying of his apostles, viz., 'it is not good to marry.'—See NOTE on 'He that is able to receive it,' &c.—So far from supposing that our Lord had commanded that saying of his disciples to be received, by all that are able to receive it, Paul himself, 1 Ti. iv. 3, speaks of 'forbidding to marry,' as among the most prominent marks of the great apostacy.

[12. eunuchs—After king Hezekiah had shewn all his treasures to the messengers of the king of Babylon, Isaiah said unto him by the word of the Lord, 2 Ki. xx. 18, 'And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.'—The same word (סָרִיסִים) is translated 'chamberlains,' Est. i. 12; iv. 4—When the truthfulness of God, in multiplying his people, according to the promises made unto the fathers is made evident, the eunuch, who may seem to be left out of the blessing, is not to complain, saying, 'Behold, I am a dry tree,' Is. lvi. 3—The reason is given, ver. 4, 5, 'For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant; even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.'] for the kingdom of heaven's sake—The apostle Paul supposes that, in certain circumstances, the unmarried state may be preferable to the married; but this he says, not by command, but permission, 1 Co. vii. 25—40—see on ver. 10, supra, and NOTE, infra.

13. brought unto him little children—Jesus had before called a little child, and taken him in his arms, Mt. xviii. 2; Mk. ix. 36, § 52, p. 75.

NOTES.

is said of the woman, 'Whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery:' i. e., puts her in the way of unlawfully marrying again, and so of committing adultery; for she is still the wife of her former husband, if her marriage have not been lawfully dissolved.

Mt. xix. 10. If the case of the man. τον ανθρωπον, 'of a husband.' Our word husband comes from the Anglo-Saxon hus and band: the bond of the house, anciently spelt house-bond.—A. C.

12. For the kingdom of heaven's sake. For the sake of being enabled thereby to devote themselves more entirely to the service of God. The Essenes, a sect of the Jews, may be referred to. They abstained from marriage, and adopted the children of the poor.

[He that is able to receive it, &c. By some commentators it has been supposed, that our Lord here refers to the saying of his disciples, when objecting to the view he had given of the law of marriage, that 'if the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry,' that is, it is not good to marry according to the marriage law as established at the beginning, and as to be observed under the christian dispensation. But this would be to make our Lord contradict himself. He had said, ch. xi. 30, § 29, p. 228, that his yoke was easy, and his burden was light. It would have been very inconsistent with this, for him to say here, that his yoke, with regard to the most intimate and continuous of human relationships, was so oppressive, that it was better not to marry at all, than to submit to such bondage. If our Lord had now, upon any grounds, acquiesced in the saying of his disciples, 'it is not good to marry,' the apostle Paul could not have said, respecting this very matter, he had no commandment of the Lord, 1 Co. vii. 25; and this the apostle says, when giving us his private opinion, that because of the then present distress, it was not good to marry. If he could have

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 9; Mk. x. 10—.2. The True Witness did not testify against the sins of the people only; he had no respect of persons. Although still in Herod's dominions, he here again bears that testimony against the connection between Herod and his brother Philip's wife, on account of which the forerunner of Jesus had suffered death.

[The vices of those in high station require to be particularly testified against, in order that others may be deterred from following their example.]

[Mt. xix. 10—.2. The rule regarding the performance of the marriage relation is not binding where it does not apply as in the cases referred to by our Saviour.]

All capable of sustaining the marriage relation ought to marry, and to preserve the marriage vow inviolate.

TEACH ME THY WAY, O LORD, AND LEAD ME IN A PLAIN PATH, BECAUSE OF MINE ENEMIES.—Psa. xxvii. 11.
THE LORD WILL GIVE STRENGTH UNTO HIS PEOPLE; THE LORD WILL BLESS HIS PEOPLE WITH PEACE.—Psa. xxix. 11.

Matt. xix. 14.	Mark x. 14, 5.	Luke xviii. 16, 7.
that he should put his hands on them, and pray: [5] and the disciples	that he should touch them: and his disciples	that he would touch them: [5] but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.	rebuked [6] those that brought them.	rebuked [6] them.
14 But Jesus	14 But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased,	But Jesus 16
said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.	and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. 15 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God	called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, 17 Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 13. rebuked—It was as rebuking his disciples for striving which of them should be greatest, that in the former instance he took a child and set him in the midst of them, Mk. ix. 34—6, § 52, pp. 74, 5.

Mk. x. 14. was much displeased—He had said to them, ch. ix. 37, § ib., 'Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me:' &c.

Suffer the little children—see on 'little child,' Mt. xviii. 2, § ib., p. 75.

of such is the kingdom — Of the time when the name of the Lord shall be excellent in all the earth, it is said, Ps. viii. 2, 'Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger.'—A pledge of the time when the little ones shall bear so conspicuous a part, in declaring the praise of the Redeemer, was given upon Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem, Mt. xxi. 15, .6, § 82, p. 266.

15. Whosoever shall not receive, &c.—May each of us be able to say, as in Ps. cxxxi. 1, 2, 'Lord, my heart adduced the words of our Lord to the same effect, he surely would have done so; whereas he expressly states that he had not the Lord's authority, but only his permission, for saying that, on account of present circumstances, it was well not to marry. The meaning of our Lord's words seems simply to be this—Every disciple of Christ who has the power of contracting marriage, ought to receive the law of marriage as laid down by his Master. That except in the cases noticed, ch. xix. 11, .3, all ought to marry as appointed at the beginning. When God made male and female, he as much intimated his pleasure that every man should have his own wife, as that he should have only his own wife. It was the appointment of God that the twain (that every twain) should be 'one flesh.' So far from recommending that this appointment of God should be evaded by all who are able to resist the inducements to marriage, he commands that the original appointment be adhered to; that where no impediment, such as is noticed, exists, marriage be contracted according to the original design, and that the marriage covenant be regarded as inviolate.]

NOTES.

Mt. xix. 13. Should put his hands on them, and pray. Should pray for a blessing upon them, comp Mk. x. 16, solemnly laying his hands upon them, according to custom. Imposition of hands was a rite which, from the earliest ages, see Ge. xlviii. 14, had been in use on imploring God's blessing upon any person, and was especially employed by the prophets, Nu. xxvii. 18; 2 Ki. v. 11; but sometimes by elders, or men noted for piety. These children, therefore, were brought to Christ for his blessing; and, it should seem, to be admitted into his discipleship, though not by baptism.—See on Mk. x. 16, infra.

Mk. x. 14. Much displeased. It is worthy of remark, that one of the few instances in which Jesus expressed displeasure with his disciples, was when they would have prevented little children being brought unto him.

Suffer the little children, &c. It was a devotedness highly gratifying to him, and the disciples interfered very improperly.

[For of such. τῶν τοιούτων, &c. Render, 'for to them belongeth,' &c. Such as are of simple, gentle, and innocent minds.]

The kingdom of God. Our Lord shortly after speaks of the regeneration, Mt. xix. 28, when he will sit on the throne of his glory, and when his twelve apostles shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel: and in which those shall be found, who, in this life, acknowledge their unworthiness, and their need of the Divine blessing to make them meet for everlasting life.—Mt. xix. 24—.9.

15. Whosoever shall not receive . . . . as a little child. As totally disclaiming all worthiness and fitness. All must, like little children, acknowledge their ignorance and inability, who would be accepted of God, and be prepared by his Spirit for the kingdom of heaven.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 13. Let us, like those of old, bring our little children to Jesus, that they may receive the benefit of his all-powerful intercession in their behalf.

[Let us not think the time wasted which is spent in introducing to Jesus those who, if they live, are to be the men and women of the coming generation; and who, if they die early, may be among the first to welcome us to our heavenly home.]

14 ver. So far as we can, let us remove every obstacle out of the way of little children being brought unto our blessed Redeemer: who, now that he is in heaven, loves them as when he was upon earth.

[Let us give thanks unto God that he has so plainly revealed to us his purpose of love with regard to little children. And for those that he is pleased to take from us in their infancy, let us not sorrow as those that have no hope.]

Let us not be proud of our superior attainments, but ever remember that if we would be partakers of the kingdom of heaven, we must be characterized by childlike simplicity, humility, confidence, and love.

[Mk. x. 15. Let us receive the kingdom of heaven, not as the reward of anything we have done, or can do; but as a child receives a gift from his father, so let us receive the free gift of God, which is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.]

MATT. xix. 15.	MARK x. 16.	LUKE xviii. 17.
	as a-little-child, he-shall-not-enter therein.	as a-little-child shall-in-no-wise-enter therein.
	16 And he took them up in his arms,
15 And he laid his hands on them,	put his hands upon them, and blessed ηυλογει them.[d]

[d] and-departed thence.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: neither do I exercise myself in great matters, or in things too high for me. Surely I have behaved and quieted myself, as a child that is weaned of his mother: my soul is even as a weaned child.'—Then will it be said to us, as in ver. 3, 'Let Israel hope in the LORD from henceforth and for ever.'—Jesus had before said to Nicodemus, Jno. iii. 3, 'Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.'—And to his disciples, Mt. xviii. 3, § 52, p. 75, 'Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.'—Paul exhorts, 1 Co. xiv. 20, 'Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men.'—And Peter, 1 Ep. ii. 1, 2, 'Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby:'

NOTES.

[Mk. x. 16. Put his hands upon them, and blessed them. See the blessing of Joseph's children by Jacob, Ge. xlviii. 1—12, 'And it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph. Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim. 2, And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed. 3, And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me, 4, and said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession. 5, And now thy two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine. 6, And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance. 7, And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Bethlehem. 8, And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these? 9, And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them. 10, Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see. And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them. 11, And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face: and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed. 12, And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.']

[Israel, unto whom the two sons of Joseph were brought, blessed them through the cross, ver. 13, 4; he blessed them, see ver. 15, .6, in the name of the God before whom his fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, and also in the name of the God of Providence, and of the all-sufficient Redeemer of Israel. He bestowed upon them the blessings contained in his own name, and in the names of his fathers, Abraham and Isaac (see on Lu. i. 73, § 3, p. 17); and he prays that they may increase as fishes do increase 'in the midst of the earth.' He farther declares, ver. 19, that Manasseh, the elder, should be a people, and should be great, but that 'truly his younger brother shall be greater than he,' and that his seed should become 'a multitude of nations,' or, as Paul expresses it, Rom. xi. 25, 'the fulness of the Gentiles.' The children of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh, were to be made types of blessing for their brethren; after the same manner as they were blessed, were all Israel to be saved: and so it follows, Ge. xlviii. 20, 'And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.' This blessing of the children of Joseph is in the New Testament recognised as one of the great acts of faith performed by Jacob: thus it is said, He. xi. 21, 'By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.' Or rather, worshipped the Head of his rod, or tribe; he by faith did homage to Christ, the Rod that was to come out of the stem of Jesse, and to which the branch of Joseph was to be added, so as to obtain the blessing, which can alone come through the cross, from Him who is the Head over all things for his body the church. In Ge. xlvii. 31, the words are, 'And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.' The word which is here translated bed, is in He. xi. 21, staff, both meaning something to lean upon: the same word is translated 'rod,' or 'tribe.' He who laid his hands upon the little children, and blessed them, was to be emphatically for blessing unto the children of Joseph; thus were they to be made heirs according to the promise. Jacob again refers to this matter in the blessing of Joseph, Ge. xlix. 26, 'The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.'—See also the words of Moses, De. xxxiii. 16, 'And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.']

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. x. 15. Let us beware of trusting in ourselves, that we can purchase that which is above all price; else we can never enter that kingdom in which endless praise is due unto God from all that are led into its enjoyments: at the same time let us, with all the earnestness of gratitude and love, seek to be made 'meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light,' Col. i. 12.]

It is indeed a delightful trait in the character of our Redeemer, that he loves little children; and it surely becomes his disciples that they be like him in this, as in all his imitable perfections.

16 ver. May we know the love of Christ, so as to be filled with all the fulness of God.

[Let us lay the lambs in his bosom, pray with and for them, and wait patiently for his blessing, which he will not deny to those who ask it of him in truth.]

WE MUST FILL THE VESSELS WITH WATER, AND BESEECH CHRIST TO TURN IT INTO WINE.
I SAID, I WILL BE WISE; BUT IT WAS FAR FROM ME.—Eccles. vii. 23.

HONOUR THE LORD WITH THY SUBSTANCE, AND WITH THE FIRSTFRUITS OF ALL THINE INCREASE:—Prov. iii. 9.

SO SHALL THY BARNS BE FILLED WITH PLENTY, AND THY PRESSES SHALL BURST OUT WITH NEW WINE.—Prov. iii. 10.

SECTION 75.—(G. 52, .3.)—[Lesson 69.]—JESUS ANSWERS THE QUESTION OF A RICH YOUNG RULER, REGARDING WHAT HE SHOULD DO TO INHERIT ETERNAL LIFE. JESUS TAKES OCCASION, FROM THE CASE OF THIS YOUNG MAN, TO SPEAK OF THE DANGER OF RICHES, AS HINDERING AN ENTRANCE INTO THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN: PETER, IN THE NAME OF THE APOSTLES, INQUIRES WHAT SHOULD BE THEIR PORTION WHO HAD FORSAKEN ALL TO FOLLOW HIM.—Matt. xix. 16—30; Mark x. 17—31; Luke xviii. 18—30.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xix. 16. Mk. x. 17. Lu. xviii. 18. When Jesus renews his journey, a rich young man, who is a ruler, approaches him in haste, and kneeling unto him, says, 'Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?'

— xix. 17. — x. 18. — xviii. 19. Jesus questions the ruler's motive for calling him 'good,' and intimates that the young man needs to be taught the very first principles of religion; that he requires to be led into a truer knowledge of himself, and so into a better appreciation of the Divine goodness in the gift of eternal life. Jesus says, 'If thou will enter into life, keep the commandments.'

— xix. 18, 9. — x. 19. — xviii. 20. The ruler having asked 'Which?' Jesus makes no reference to the ceremonial law, but points to the decalogue; omitting, however, the first four commandments, relating to our duty to God: He accordingly directs him to the second table of the law, beginning with the seventh and sixth commandments, and ending with the fifth and tenth.

— xix. 20. — x. 20. — xviii. 21. The ruler, still unconscious of his deficiency, and of his need of Divine forgiveness and grace, answers, 'All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?'

— xix. 21. — x. 21. — xviii. 22. Jesus, looking upon him, loves him; and replies by directing him to sell all that he has, and distribute to the poor, and he shall have treasure in heaven. He is also invited to come, take up his cross, and follow Jesus; to shew thus that he loves his neighbour as himself, and is willing to keep the first and great commandment, to love God supremely.

— xix. 22. — x. 22. — xviii. 23. The young man, unwilling to make the required sacrifice of his idols, his 'great possessions,' goes away 'very sorrowful.'

— xix. 23. — x. 23. — xviii. 24. Jesus, looking round, says to his disciples, 'How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!'

——— — x. 24. ——— The disciples being astonished at his words, Jesus continues, 'Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!'

Mt. xix. 24. Mk. x. 25. Lu. xviii. 25. Alluding probably to the trust which the young man had manifested in his supposed spiritual riches, Jesus proceeds to say, 'It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.'

— xix. 25. — x. 26. — xviii. 26. The disciples are 'exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?'

— xix. 26. — x. 27. — xviii. 27. Jesus acknowledges that it is impossible for a man to be saved, as being rich in himself, but it is possible with God to save him; for 'with God all things are possible.'

— xix. 27. — x. 28. — xviii. 28. Peter calls attention to the fact that he and his fellow-disciples had done that which the ruler was unable to do, and asks, 'What shall we have therefore?'

— xix. 28. — x. 29. — xviii. 29. Jesus replies by telling the twelve, that 'in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory,' they which have followed him 'shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.'

— xix. 29. — x. 29, 30. — xviii. 29, 30. Jesus further adds, that every one who for his sake and the gospel's leaves whatever men count dear unto them, whether earthly relations, or worldly possessions, shall, even in the present time, receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

— xix. 30. — x. 30, .1. ——— The conclusion of the present discourse introduces the subject of the succeeding parable, 'Many that are first shall be last; and the last first.' Words which also find their illustration from the case of the rich young ruler, who by his comparative innocence from infancy, his early acquaintance with the scriptures, his desire to be taught by Jesus, (of whose goodness he speaks, and whose greatness he acknowledges by kneeling before him,) gave much promise of being among the most eminent of Jesus' disciples. He has also come to Jesus with seeming eagerness, and as expressing himself ready to do whatever is enjoined. Although a self-deceiver, he does not appear to be intentionally insincere. He is amiable—the Saviour looks upon him with love. Surely this young man is one of the first for the kingdom of God: but no; he may have been one of the very last to enter, if he entered at all.

No. 75.—(G. 52.)—Jesus answers the question of a rich young ruler, regarding what he should do to inherit eternal life.

MATT. xix. 16—22.	MARK x. 17—22.	LUKE xviii. 18—23.
	17 [a]And when-[b] he'-was-gone-forth into the-way, there-came-[b] one'-running, and kneeled-to him,[b]
16 And, behold, one came
[b] and-said unto-him, Good Master,	and-asked him, Good Master,	And a-certain ruler 18 asked him, saying, Good Master,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 16. Good Master.—Jesus was rightly called the Master or Teacher: he had been so acknowledged by Nicodemus, Jno. iii. 2, § 12, p. 83—by Martha, xi. 28, § 58, p. 130—This was the title given to him by the twelve, and which he recognised as due to him, xiii. 13, .4, § 87, p. —.—Jesus was the 'Good Master'—it is in him that the Divine goodness is manifested, 1 Jno. iv. 10, 'Herein is love, not that we

NOTE.

Mt. xix. 16. Good Master. The young man accosts our Lord by a title usually employed by the Jews to their most eminent rabbis, and of which they were very proud. Hence, before he replies, he takes occasion (without rejecting the title good) to indirectly censure the adulation of the persons addressing, and the arrogance of those addressed. At the same time he proceeds upon the notion entertained of him by the young man; who evidently only regarded him in the light of an eminent teacher.

Matt. xix. 17, .8.	Mark x. 18, .9.	Luke xviii. 19, 20.
what good thing shall-I-do, that I-may-have eternal life?[c]	what shall-I-do that I-may-inherit eternal life?	what shall-I-do to-inherit eternal life?
17 And he said unto-him, Why callest-thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: [d]but if thou-wilt enter into life, keep τηρησον the commandments.	18 [c]And Jesus said unto-him, Why callest-thou me good there is none good but one, that is, God.[d]	And Jesus said unto-him, 19 Why callest-thou me good? none is good, save one, that is, God.
18 He-saith unto-him, Which? Jesus said,[e]	19 [e]Thou knowest the commandments,[f]	Thou-knowest the 20 commandments,
[f]Thou-shalt-do-not-murder, Thou-shalt-not-commit-	Do-not-commit-	Do-not-commit-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.'—And by him the Divine goodness is declared, Jno. i. 17, .8, § 7, p. 48—He 'went about doing good,' Ac. x. 38—It is through him that goodness is bestowed upon men, Jno. i. 16, § 7, 'And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.'—Herein more especially was the goodness of Christ manifested, in 'that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich,' 2 Cor. viii. 9—in that although he was in the form of God, yet he made himself of no reputation, and humbled himself for our sakes, even unto the death of the cross, Ph. ii. 4—8.

Mt. xix. 16. what good thing shall I do?—Jesus had before been asked a similar question by those who had no will to follow his instructions, Jno. vi. 28, § 43, p. 327—Had this young man known the goodness of God in Christ, he would not have asked how his own good works were to procure for him eternal life, Rom. iii. 20—3—Salvation is not by works, it is of grace through faith, 24—8; xi. 6; Ga. ii. 16; Eph. ii. 8, 9—being given eternal life, we are the workmanship of God, 'created in Christ Jesus unto good works,' ver. 10; Ph. i. 6; ii. 12, .3; 2 Ti. i. 9.

17. Why callest thou me good?—Jesus does not deny his being good; he had before declared that he was the good Shepherd, Jno. x. 11, .4, § 55, p. 115; but he questions the motive of the young man for calling him 'Good Master'—so in his discourse in the plain, Lu. vi. 46, § 27, p. 210, he said, 'And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?'—There were of old those concerning whom the Lord said to the prophet Ezekiel, ch. xxxiii. 30, .1, they 'speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the Lord. And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness.'

none good but one, &c.—God alone is the Good Teacher—thus, when he made known his way unto Moses, Ex. xxxiv. 6, 'The Lord passed by before him, and proclaimed, The Lord, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth.'—Job xxxvi. 22, 'Behold, God exalteth by his power: who teacheth like him?'—Ps. xxxvi. 9, 'For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light.'—Blessed are they who submit to the instructions of this Good Teacher, xxv. 8—14; xxxii. 8—11; Is. xlviii. 16, .7—It is as having tasted that the Lord is good, that we are qualified for the reception of Divine truth, so as to grow thereby, 1 Pe. ii. 1—3, 'Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,' &c.

but one, that is, God—1 Sa. ii. 2, 'There is none holy as the Lord: for there is none beside thee: neither is there any rock like our God.'—Mi. vi. 8, 'He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?'—Had the young man known Him whom he addressed, he would have known him to be God manifest in the flesh, 1 Ti. iii. 16, come to bring man into the enjoyment and manifestation of the Divine goodness, Jno. xvii. 20—.3, § 87—This subject is largely opened up in Christ's consolatory address, and intercessory prayer, xiv.—xvii. § ib.

keep the commandments—see the first table of the law, containing the first four commandments, relating to our duty to God, Ex. xx. 2—11—The second table, containing our duty to our neighbour, ver. 12—.7, is that to which our Lord now directs the attention of this professed disciple, Mt. xix. 18, .9—Although it is not by our keeping the commandments we are saved, yet are we saved unto keeping the commandments; 'and in keeping of them there is great reward,' Ps. xix. 11—By obedience discipleship is proved to be sincere, Jno. xiv. 21—.4, § 87—The necessity of obedience to the commandments, and at the same time salvation by grace are both plainly stated, 1 Co. vi. 8—11.

One of the last sayings of Jesus given in the New Testament is, Rev. xxii. 14, .5, 'Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.'

NOTES.

Mt. xix. 16. What good thing shall I do? He thought it was in his own power to do some good work that would be acknowledged by God as meriting eternal life.

May have eternal life. No man can inherit eternal life as a right by good works: it is all of grace; all of the free gift of God, to such as trust for acceptance with him in the merits of Christ alone. It is the gift of God for Christ's sake.

17. If thou will enter into life. According to the original, 'if thou willest, or art disposed, to enter into life.' If you desire to work righteousness in order to procure a title to eternal life, you must perfectly keep all the commandments of God.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 16. It is good to make haste in coming to Christ, and meekly to bow before him; acknowledging him as Teacher, and as truly Good: but let us not trust in our own goodness whilst we speak of his; and if we know not the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ in procuring for us that which we did not deserve—the gift of eternal life—our calling him 'Good Master' is but taking his name in vain.

[17 ver. Let us ask ourselves why we call Jesus 'good.' Have we really tasted that the Lord is gracious? Do we know him to be 'God manifest... in TEACH ME TO DO THY WILL; FOR THOU ART MY GOD: THY SPIRIT IS GOOD; LEAD ME INTO THE LAND OF UPRIGHTNESS.—Psa. cxliii. 10.

MATT. xix. 19—21.	MARK x. 20, .1.	LUKE xviii. 21, .2.
adultery,	adultery,	adultery,
Thou-shalt-·not·-steal,	Do-·not·-kill,	Do-·not·-kill,
Thou-shalt-·not·-bear-false-witness,[g]	Do-·not·-steal,	Do-·not·-steal,
	Do-·not·-bear-false-witness,	Do-·not·-bear-false-witness,
	[g] Defraud not.
19 Honour thy father and thy mother:	Honour thy father and mother.[h]	Honour thy father and thy mother.
[h] and, Thou-shalt-love thy neighbour as thyself.
20 The young-man saith unto-him,[i]	20 And he answered and-said unto-him,	And he said,	21
	[i] Master,[k]
[k] All these things have-I-kept from-·my youth·-up: what lack-I yet?[l]	All these have-I-observed from my youth.	All these have-I-kept εφυλαξαμην from-·my youth·-up.
τι ετι υστερω
21 Jesus said unto-him,	21 [l] Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto-him, One thing thou lackest[m]	Now when-·Jesus heard·-these-things, he-said unto-him, Yet lackest thou one thing	22
	εν σοι υστερει:	εν σοι λειπει:
[m] If thou-wilt be perfect[n]
τελειος, go and-sell that thou-hast,	[n] go-thy-way, sell whatsoever thou-hast,	sell all that thou-hast,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 20. All these things have I kept—Like the Pharisee who said, Lu. xviii. 11, § 73, p. 216, 'God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.'—Or like Paul before his conversion, Ph. iii. 6, 'touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.'

Mk. x. 21. One thing thou lackest—Jesus had said to Martha, Lu. x. 42, § 61, p. 150, 'One thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.'—And to this young man he had said, ch. xviii. 19, p. 224, 'None is good, save one, that is, God.'—The young man did not yet possess that one good thing of which the apostle speaks, when he says, Ph. iii. 7—10, 'But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. 8, Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, 9, and be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: 10, that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;'—see also ver. 13, .4—It is to the enjoyment of this one good thing that Jesus immediately after invites—see infra.

Mt. xix. 21. sell that thou hast, &c.—Jesus had before said, ch. vi. 19, 20, § 19, p. 134, 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:'—and Lu. xii. 33, § 63, p. 166, 'Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not

NOTES.

Mt. xix. 20. All these things have I kept from my youth up. απο νεοτητος μου, 'from my childhood.' So he imagined, and perhaps he had, as to the letter, but not as to the spirit, which our Lord immediately shews.

[What lack I yet? τι ετι υστερω. At τι sub. κατα, 'In what am I yet behindhand, or wanting?' This readiness to undertake more than he had yet done, shewed at least that he was well disposed.—Bloomf.]

21. If thou wilt be perfect. Our Lord puts a case which tried the young man as to the whole substance of the law, which is summed up in these two commandments love to God, and love to man.

Sell that thou hast. He who reads the heart, saw his bosom sin was love of the world; and knew he could not be saved from this, but by literally renouncing it. This commandment, which, in Luke xii. 33, § 63, p. 166, we find given to Christ's disciples in general, was peculiarly suited to the con-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the flesh' for our redemption? It is the return of a grateful heart for benefits received, that our Divine Redeemer delights in. There is but one Teacher who is truly good, and every word of his is good, through whatsoever instrumentality it may come.]

[Mt. xix. 17—9. Our Lord, in effect, told the young man that he was ignorant of the very first commandment—knowing God and loving him supremely—as trusting in his wealth, he was guilty of idolatry: he had broken the third commandment by taking the name of the Lord in vain, calling him 'Good Master,' without having any adequate sense of his goodness, and without being really willing to submit to his instructions; and he evidently had not entered into the spirit of the fourth commandment, by ceasing from his own works, and resting in the perfect work of God the Saviour: he had thus failed as to the first table of the Law.]

Our Lord now directs to the second table, which contains commandments, the breach of which is more palpable to the natural man; and accordingly to these the attention of the young ruler is now directed, that so he may be the more easily convinced of sin, and brought to see his need of the goodness of God in Christ Jesus.

[20 ver. This young man seems to have been almost equally ignorant of himself as he was of the Saviour; and indeed we can never know the Redeemer's goodness, until we know something of the evil from which he came to redeem.]

21 ver. The young man was now given an opportunity of shewing that his profession of obedience was not feigned but real; that he loved his neighbour as himself, and was willing to take God for his God.

OUR BENEVOLENCE SHOULD SEEK THE POOR, BEFORE THE POOR SEEK OUR BENEVOLENCE

LIBERALITY DOES NOT CONSIST ONLY IN GOOD WORDS, BUT MORE IN GOOD WORKS.

MATT. xix. 22, 23.	MARK x. 22—4.	LUKE xviii. 23, 24.
and give to-the-poor,	and give to-the poor,	and distribute unto-the-poor, and thou-shalt-have treasure	and thou-shalt-have treasure	and thou-shalt-have treasure in heaven: and come	in heaven: and come,	in heaven: and come, take-up the cross,
and-follow me.	and-follow me.[c]	follow me.
22 [a] But when-the-young-	22 And he was-sad at	And when-[a] ☒ man-heard that saying,	that saying,	he-heard this,
he-went-away sorrowful:	and went-away grieved:	he-was very-sorrowful:
for he-had great possessions.	for he-had great possessions.	for he-was very rich.

(G. 53.)—Jesus takes occasion, from the example of this young man, to speak of the danger of riches, as hindering an entrance into the kingdom of heaven: Peter, in the name of the apostles, inquires what should be their portion who had forsaken all to follow him.

MATT. xix. 23—30.	MARK x. 23—31.	LUKE xviii. 24—30.
23 Then	23 And	[a] And when-Jesus-saw 24 that-he was very-sorrowful,[b] [b] Jesus looked-round-about, said Jesus unto his disciples,	and-saith unto-his disciples,[c]	he said,
[c] Verily I-say unto-you,[d]
That a-rich man shall-	[d] How hardly δυσκολως shall-	How hardly δυσκολως shall-hardly δυσκολως enter	they that-have riches-enter	they that-have riches-enter into the kingdom of heaven.	into the kingdom of God!	into the kingdom of God!
	24 And the disciples were-astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and-saith unto-them, Children,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.'—The first Christians literally conformed to the rule, Ac. ii. 45; iv. 34, 5.

Mt. xix. 21. treasure in heaven—Of this good portion the prophet speaks, La. iii. 24—7, 'The LORD is my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him. 25. The LORD is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. 26, It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD. 27. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.'

come—ch. xi. 28, § 29. 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give,' &c.

Mk. x. 21. take up the cross, &c.—so before the transfiguration, when foretelling his sufferings, and about to reveal his glory, he said to his disciples, Mt. xvi. 24, § 50. 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.' —Paul had counted the cost, Ph. iii. 10, 11, 'That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.'

and follow me—Ph. iii. 13, 14, 'Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.'

Mt. xix. 23. he went away sorrowful—shewing that in thinking he had really kept the commandments, he had deceived himself: for had he known God his Redeemer, and loved him supremely, as required in the first table of the law, ch. xxii. 36—8, § 85, p. 304, he would have willingly parted with all for his sake; and had he loved his neighbour as himself, as required in the second table of the law, ver. 39, 40, § ib., he would have desired the poor to have a sufficiency rather than that he himself should have great possessions.

Mk. x. 23. How hardly, &c.—Israel was forewarned of the danger of riches, as weaning the heart from God, De. xxxi. 20; xxxii. 15—Jesus mentions 'the deceitfulness of riches,' as among the things that 'choke the word,' Mt. xiii. 22, § 33, p. 256—and the apostle says, 1 Ti. vi. 8, 9, 'Having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.'

NOTES.

dition of his first followers, and accordingly was practised by them in its full extent.—See Ac. ii. 44, 5; iv. 34—7. It is still so far applicable to Christians, as it teaches them that they must be ready to part with everything in this world, if such a proof of their heavenly-mindedness, and of their attachment to the service of their heavenly Master, should be required from them.

Mt. xix. 21. Treasure in heaven. See on ch. vi. 20, § 18, p. 134, SCRIP. ILLUS.

Mk. x. 21 Take up the cross, &c. Relinquish all worldly grandeur, and be content to be counted a disciple of the despised Nazarene.

Follow me. To follow Jesus then meant to be a personal attendant on his ministry; now it means—1st. To obey his commandments; 2nd. To imitate his example, and to live like him.

Mt. xix. 23. Shall hardly. δυσκολως for χαλεπως. 'He will scarcely be persuaded to become a Christian.' The possession of riches is not to be sought for by the children of God. Those who have riches committed to them, need pray for abundance of GRACE, that they may be found faithful stewards of the Lord's bounty. Of such the Lord will expect that they have clothed the naked, fed the hungry, sheltered the houseless, visited those that are sick and in prison, and promoted the glory of God in providing for the instruction of the ignorant, and in training little children for the kingdom of heaven.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 22. Let us rejoice at being given an opportunity of evincing the truth of our discipleship, being willing to part with all for the sake of Christ. The joy of possessing such an inestimable treasure compensates abundantly for the loss of any earthly possessions, when the ALL WISE wills it so.

23 ver. Let us not envy the possessor of riches, nor think that our being in his case would facilitate our course heavenward. We have the testimony of the FAITHFUL WITNESS that it is not so; that wealth is a hindrance rather than a help into the kingdom of God.

HOW CAN WE EXPECT POUNDS TO BE GIVEN US, IF PENCE ARE NOT BESTOWED BY US?

BE THAT TRUSTETH IN HIS RICHES SHALL FALL: BUT THE RIGHTEOUS SHALL FLOURISH AS A BRANCH.—Prov. xi. 28.

MATT. xix. 24—.6.	MARK x. 25—.7.	LUKE xviii. 25—.7.
24 'And again I-say unto-you, It-is easier for-a-camel to-go διελθειν through the-eye of-a-needle, than for-a-rich man to-enter into the kingdom of God.	25 It-is easier for-a-camel to-go διελθειν through the eye of-a needle, than for-a-rich man to-enter into the kingdom of God.	For it-is easier for-a-camel 25 to-go εισελθειν through a-needle's eye, than for-a-rich man to-enter into the kingdom of God.
25 When-his disciples-heard it, they-were-exceedingly-amazed, f saying, Who then can be-saved?	26 f And they were-astonished out-of-measure περισσως, saying among themselves, Who then can be-saved?	And they that- 26 heard it said, Who then can be-saved?
26 But Jesus beheld them, and-said unto-them With men this is impossible;	27 And Jesus looking-upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God·	And he 27 said, The-things which are impossible with men

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. x. 24. trust in riches—Job xxxi. 24, .5, .8, 'If I have made gold my hope, or have said to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence; 25, if I rejoiced because my wealth was great, and because mine hand had gotten much;—28, this also were an iniquity to be punished by the judge: for I should have denied the God that is above.'—Ps. xlix. 6, 11, .2, 16—20, 'They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;—11, their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names. 12, Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.—16. Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased; 17, for when he dieth he shall carry nothing away: his glory shall not descend after him. 18, Though while he lived he blessed his soul: and men will praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself. 19, He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light. 20, Man that is in honour, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish.'—See the parable of the rich man whose ground 'brought forth plentifully,' Lu. xii. 16—21, § 63, p. 165—Rich men require to be earnestly reminded of the danger they are in of leaning upon earth in place of building upon the Good Foundation, 1 Ti. vi. 17—9, 'Charge them,' &c.

Mt. xix. 24. again I say unto you, It is easier, &c.—The young man was not only rich in worldly possessions; in his own esteem he was spiritually rich—see ver. 16, 20, pp. 223, .5—so long as he was in this case, it was impossible for him to enter into life—see Rom. iii. 20—.8; Ga. iii. 11—.4—It is only in Christ that men can be truly rich unto eternal life, 2 Co. viii. 9; Rev. iii. 17, .8, 'Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.'

Mk. x. 27. With men it is impossible, &c.—It is impossible with man to save himself, Rom. vii. 18—24;

NOTES.

Mk. x. 24. How hard is it for them that trust, &c. This does not shut out from the kingdom of God all that are rich, but the kingdom of God is shut to all who trust to their riches, and not to the redemption wrought out for us by the death and resurrection and intercession of our glorified Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

25. It is easier for a camel, &c. The Jewish rabbis would say of what appeared an impossibility, 'It will not happen before a camel or an elephant has crept through the eye of a needle.' The camel being the largest animal they were acquainted with in Judæa, its name was proverbial for denoting anything remarkably large, and a camel passing through a needle's eye became proverbial for expressing a difficulty.

A camel. A beast of burden, much used in eastern countries. It is about the size of the largest ox, with one or two hunches on its back, with long neck and legs, no horns, and with feet adapted to the hot and dry sand. They are capable of carrying heavy burdens; will travel sometimes faster than the fleetest horse; and are provided with a stomach which they fill with water, by means of which they can live four or five days without drink. They are very mild and tame, and kneel down to receive and unload their burden. They are chiefly used in deserts and hot climates, where other beasts of burden are with difficulty kept alive.

Lu. xviii. 25. A needle's eye. Some suppose that our Lord here refers to the small side gate for foot passengers, which it is said was in the east called a needle's eye, and through which it was impossible for a camel to pass, especially if loaded, as this young man appears to have been both temporally and spiritually. Like the camel, he came kneeling to have his load increased, but nothing would induce him to part with it, and receive the easy yoke of Christ.

[Mt. xix. 26. But Jesus beheld. ἐμβλέψας, 'fixing his eyes upon them.' There is a similar use at Mk. x. 21, .7; xiv. 67, § 89, p. 431; Lu. xx. 17, § 84, p. 290; and Jno. i. 36; in which places the word must not (with many recent commentators) be regarded as merely pleonastic, or as having the sense turning towards, but must retain its full force, denoting extreme earnestness. Also Ac. xvi. 18, ἐπιστραφεὶς εἶπε. —Bloomf.]

[With men this is impossible. It is observable he does not retract what he had said; no, nor soften it in the least degree, but rather strengthens it.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. x. 24. The great evil of riches is, that men are apt to trust in them; to look to that which usually commands all other earthly means of acquiring or communicating blessing, in place of looking up to Him 'from whom cometh down every good and every perfect gift,' according to whose will every gift should be used, and unto whom all thanksgiving is due.

[25 ver. It is hard for a man rich in worldly goods to enter into the kingdom of God; but it is impossible for a man trusting in his own supposed spiritual riches; one who thinks that he can purchase it by his own good deeds. We must neither trust in external wealth, nor in our own supposed worthiness, but alone in the living God, through the merits of Jesus.]

CHRIST HATH REDEEMED US FROM THE CURSE OF THE LAW, BEING MADE A CURSE FOR US: FOR IT IS WRITTEN, CURSED IS EVERY ONE THAT HANGETH ON A TREE:—Gal. iii. 13.

Matt. xix. 27, .8.	Mark x. 28, .9.	Luke xviii. 28, .9.
but with God all-things are possible.	for with God all-things are possible.[c]	are possible with God.
27 [c] Then answered Peter and-said unto-him, Behold, we have-forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall-we-have therefore?	28 Then Peter began to-say unto-him, Lo, we have-left all, and have-followed thee.	Then Peter 28 said, Lo, we have-left all, and followed thee.
28 And Jesus said unto-them, Verily I-say unto-you, That ye which have-followed me, in the regeneration παλιγγενεσιᾳ when	29 And Jesus answered and-said, Verily I-say unto-you,	And he said 29 unto-them, Verily I-say unto-you,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

but that which it was impossible for man to do, God has done, Rom. viii. 3, 4, 'For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.'

Mk. x. 27. with God all things are possible—see on the words of the angel to Mary, when she was given a pledge of the incarnation of the Son of God, Lu. i. 37, § 2, p. 10, 'With God nothing shall be impossible.'

Mt. xix. 27. forsaken all—this in Peter's case was after the miraculous draught of fishes, when he was called for the third time, Lu. v. 11, § 20, p. 155, 'And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him.'

and followed thee—alluding to the command given to the young ruler, Lu. xviii. 22, p. 225, and which he seems for the present to have resisted, ver. 23.

what shall we have?—When Jesus had invited them to follow him, he told them what they were to do, not what they should have, ch. iv. 19, § 16, p. 108, yet on this point he was very explicit in the commencement of his first published discourse, ch. v. 3—12, § 19, pp. 120—2—after this he says, Jno. xii. 26, § 82, p. 267, 'If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.'—He dwells much upon this subject, Jno. xiv. &c. § 87.

28. in the regeneration—When coming down from the mount of Transfiguration, ch. xvii. 10, .1, § 51, p. 57, his disciples asked him, saying, 'Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things.'—Israel and Judah are both to be restored and made anew the Lord's people, according to the new covenant, Je. xxxi. 27—34—By the Word and Spirit of God 'the whole house of Israel' are to be raised as from the dead, Eze. xxxvii. 1—14, and, together with the house of Judah, who will also have been born again, they shall be made one nation to the Lord, 15—23—Then, under the One Shepherd, they are to be made one kingdom upon the mountains of Israel, 24—8—Then seems to be the time referred to by Peter, Ac. iii. 19—21: repentance and conversion having come to Israel, their sins shall be blotted out, 'when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; 20, and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: 21, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.'—All these have spoken of the restoration of Israel, and of the land—see the promises made unto the fathers, as recorded in Genesis; and the fall and rising again of Israel in the last days, recorded in the song which Moses commanded to be taught to the children of Israel, De. xxxi. 28—xxxii. — The Psalms are very full of this subject, as cxlvii., ...viii.—see Isaiah throughout, and Jeremiah, xxx.—...iii.; and Ezekiel, more particularly at the end, xxxiii.—xlviii.; also the conclusion of nearly all the minor prophets—see § 51, ADDENDA, pp. 68, 9—Rom. viii. 19, 'For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.'—The full manifestation of the sons of God is reserved for the period of the resurrection, and the glorious appearing of Christ—1 Jno. iii. 1, 2, 'Behold, what manner of love,' &c.

NOTES.

In this narrative we cannot but see the common application it has to most of us. The love of the world, its pleasures, and its riches, are a great hinderance to multitudes who desire to have Christ for their Master, and acknowledge Him to be good; but they cannot 'serve two masters;' they 'cannot serve God and mammon.' They blindly mistake their ignorance of the way of salvation for innocence; and conclude, if they do no murder, if they do not commit adultery, if they do not steal, if they do not bear false witness, if they honour father and mother, and do not defraud their neighbours, they are not so bad as others, and that God will not condemn them. But He, in whose sight the heavens are not clean, declares, that 'whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.' Ja. ii. 10. Observe particularly, that Jesus loved this young ruler, but his love and mercy cannot bias his inflexible justice. It is declared that without holiness, no man can see the Lord, He. xii. 14. However that from our youth we have been honest, industrious, and strict in our attendance on religious ordinances, if there be one thing we love more than Christ, or if we think our works merit salvation, we shall be cast out from his presence. For it is only by humble dependence on the mercy of God, and acknowledgment of our own unworthiness, and by faith in the precious blood of Christ, for the redemption of our souls, that we can be made partakers of HIS HEAVENLY KINGDOM.

Mt. xix. 27. Forsaken all. Peter's all consisted but of nets, boats, and things of small value; yet they were the means of obtaining a decent maintenance; and the same faith which induced him to renounce them for Christ's sake, would have led him to make larger sacrifices, if he had been called to it, as he afterwards was.

28. Ye which have followed me. Have joined yourselves to me in my suffering, in my humiliation.

In the regeneration. 'At the resurrection of the dead.'—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 26. Let us rejoice that what we could not do, God in our nature has accomplished for us. Let us, in the incarnation of our blessed Redeemer, see the assured pledge, that with God nothing is impossible which he hath promised to accomplish.

[28 ver. Let us earnestly long for the promised regeneration, when the earth shall, as it were, be made to bring forth in one day, and a nation be born at once; be born again to a lively hope by the incorruptible seed of the word; when in the place where it was said unto them, 'Ye are not my people,' it shall be said, 'The sons of the living God.'—See Ho. i. 10.

Matt. xix. 29.	Mark x. 30.	Luke xviii. 30.
the Son of man shall-sit in επι the-throne of-his-glory, ye also shall-sit upon επι twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.
29 And every-one that hath-forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for-my name's-sake,[k]	There-is no-man that hath-left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for-my-sake, [k] and the gospel's,	There-is no-man that hath-left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for-the kingdom of God's-sake,
[i] shall-receive an hundred-fold, [k]	30 but he-shall-receive an-hundred-fold [k] now in this time	who shall-not-receive 30 manifold-more in this present-time εν τω καιρω τουτω, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions;	εν τω καιρω τουτω, and shall-inherit	and in the world to come	and in the world to come εν τω αιωνι τω ερχομενω,	εν τω αιωνι τω ερχομενω,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xix. 28. shall sit in the throne of his glory—The throne of the King of Israel is described, Eze. i. 26—.8; x. 1—It is based upon a glorious body of heavenly light, over the heads of the living creatures, i. 22, .6—the four living creatures corresponding to the four standards of the hosts of Israel; the standards of Judah, of Ephraim, of Reuben, and of Dan—see Nu. ii.—and comp. Ge. xlix. 9: Deut. xxxiii. 17, &c.

his glory—Of the time referred to, it shall be said, Is. xliv. 23, 'The LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.'—The purpose of God shall be accomplished, xlv. 25, 'In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.'—xlvi. 13, 'I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory.'—xlix. 3, 'Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.' &c.

ye also shall sit—Rev. ii. 26, 'And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations:'—iii. 21, 'To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.'

thrones, judging, &c.—This promise is repeated, Lu. xxii. 30, § 87, p. 376—Its realization is noticed in connexion with the first resurrection, Rev. xx. 4, where, however, the apostle John, with his accustomed modesty, does not name those who occupied the thrones; he simply notices the fulfilment of the promise, saying, 'And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them:'—It was promised in ancient prophecy, Is. xxxii. 1, 'Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.'

the twelve tribes—The localization of the twelve tribes, in the great restoration, is described, Eze. xlvii., .viii.

Mk. x. 30. an hundred-fold now in this time—Ps. xxxvii. 16, 'A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.'—Mt. vi. 33, § 19, p. 136, 'But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.'—1 Ti. iv. 8, 'Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.'—vi. 6, 'Godliness with contentment is great gain.'—1 Pe. i. 6, 8, 'Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:—8, whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:'—iv. 14, 'If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.'—The advantages enjoyed by the true disciple of Christ are very fully enumerated, Rom. v. 1—5; they are all found in God, through Christ, by our being given the Holy Ghost: they are, justification, peace with God, access to him, through the Son of his love; a true standing, and rejoicing in hope of the glory of God, yea, a glorying even in tribulations; by increased experience, an increased brightness to our hope, and the assured pledge of all good, by our having 'the love of God . . . shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.'

world to come. τω αιωνι τω ερχομενω—Lu. xx. 35, § 85, p. 302, 'But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world του αιωνος εκεινου, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:'—He. ii. 5, 'For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come την οικουμενην την μελλουσαν, whereof we speak.'—vi. 5, 'And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come μελλοντος αιωνος,'

NOTES.

Mt. xix. 28. Judging the twelve tribes of Israel. To whom God made large promises (see ADDENDA, § li., p. 67), which Jesus came not to do away, but to confirm.

29. An hundred-fold. Not a hundred-fold of those advantages which are supposed to be relinquished for the sake of Christ and his religion; for a multiplication of several of these things, instead of a reward, would have been an incumbrance.

The recompense here promised, is that internal content and satisfaction of mind, that peace of God which passeth all understanding, those delights of a pure conscience and an upright heart, those consolations of the Holy Spirit, that trust and confidence in God, that consciousness of the Divine favour and approbation, those hopes of everlasting glory, which it is the privilege of the Christian to experience in the discharge of his duty.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 28. Let us pray that the King of Israel may soon possess the throne of his glory.

Let us endeavour to live unto the glory of Him by whom we live, and in whom alone we may glory.

'It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master,' Mt. x. 25, § 39, p. 300; we may well be contented to suffer with Christ now, earnestly expecting the manifestation of the sons of God, when we shall be given to reign with him in glory.

[Let us earnestly seek that the hosts of Israel may soon acknowledge the Lord's Anointed as their King. It is a willing people that he must have in the day of his power. Then, but not till then, will the King return; and it is not until the King's return that the kingdom can be fully enjoyed.]

MATT. xix. 30.	MARK x. 31.	LUKE xviii. 30.
everlasting life.	eternal life.	life everlasting.
30 But many that are first shall-be last; and the last shall-be first.	31 But many that are first shall-be last; and the last first. [Ch. x. 32, ¶ lxxvii. p. 235.]	[Ch. xviii. 31, ¶ lxxvii. p 235.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xviii. 30. life everlasting—Jno. vi. 40, § 43, p. 329. 'And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.'—Rom. vi. 22, 3, 'But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

Mt. xix. 30. first . . . last, &c.—see ch. xx. 14—.6, § 76, p. 233.

NOTE.

Mt. xix. 30. Many that are first, &c. A sort of proverbial mode of expression, not unfrequently employed by our Lord to check the presumption of the apostles; the sense of which is, 'that many who, in the order of time, were last (brought in last) in the kingdom, shall be first in the rewards; and those who claim to be first shall be last;' i. e., that many of the Jews, to whom the blessings of Christ's kingdom were first offered, would be the last to partake of them; and that many of the Gentiles, to whom they were to be offered after the Jews, would be the first to enjoy them. In order to illustrate and apply this declaration, our Lord subjoined the parable at the beginning of the next chapter; in which the application is not to be limited to the Jews, but left general; being meant for the instruction of all Christians of all ages. —Comp. ch. xx. 16, § 76, p. 233; Lu. xiii. 30, § 66, p. 178.—Bloomf.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xix. 29. Let us be sure that it is for the sake of God, of Christ, of his gospel, that we make the sacrifice, and we need not care how great that sacrifice may be. We shall, even in the present life, be far happier in the enjoyment of the Divine favour, than without this, as possessing all that God would have us to part with. 'Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come,' 1 Tim. iv. 8.

Our place in the world to come will not be according to the reward we meet with from man in the present, but according to the measure we attain of conformity to Christ. Let us be content to be now hid with Christ in God, that 'when Christ, who is our life, shall appear,' we also may 'appear with him in glory,' Col. iii. 4. When the first shall be last, and the last first, may we be found among those that are nearest to the Redeemer.

SECTION 76.—(G. 54.)—[Lesson 70.]—JESUS TAKES OCCASION FROM HIS LAST WORDS TO PETER, TO SUBJOIN A PARABLE RELATING TO THE MYSTERIES OF THE KINGDOM; NAMELY, THAT OF THE LABOURERS IN THE VINEYARD.—Matt. xx. 1—16.*

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xx. 1. In illustration of what was said, respecting rewards, at the close of the former section, Mt. xix. 27—30, Jesus proceeds to deliver the parable of the day labourers, hired to work in a vineyard.

—— 2. Those hired early in the morning agree to labour 'for a penny a day.'

—— 3—5. Others are sent into the vineyard at the third, sixth, and ninth hours, without any certain price being fixed upon their labour: they are to trust to their employer, that what is right he will give.

—— 6, 7. At the eleventh hour, others still are found standing idle. These also are sent to labour upon the terms of free grace.

—— 8. Evening being come, the Lord of the vineyard bids his steward give the labourers their hire, 'beginning from the last unto the first.'

—— 9, 10. Those who were hired at the eleventh hour, receive 'every man a penny.' Those first hired suppose that they should receive more, but they receive only what they had bargained for.

—— 11, 12. These begin to murmur against their employer, complaining that those, who have wrought but one hour, are made equal to themselves, who 'have borne the burden and heat of the day.'

—— 13—15. The Master replies to one of the murmurers, telling him to take what belongs to him, and go. He hints that the complainer is quite out of place, in desiring to control his master in the disposal of his property; and asks, whether the example of the master's generosity should provoke in him a disposition quite the reverse.

Mt. xx. 16. Our Lord concludes the parable with repeating the saying, 'So the last shall be first, and the first last;' and intimates, that of the many who are called, few, as having perfected in them the royal law of love, give evidence of their being appointed unto the kingdom.

The reward spoken of in this parable is different from that to be enjoyed in the world to come.

i. The one is only daily hire—the other an eternal inheritance.

ii. The one is received now in the evening—the other is to be enjoyed in the morning of the resurrection.

iii. This is paid by delegation—that by the Master himself, upon his return.

iv. This is of the same amount to all—that is different in degree, according as the servants have proved profitable in their stewardship.

v. Here there is murmuring at the Master's doing what he will with his own—but there the disciples' prayer is answered, 'Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.'

vi. Here there is discontent at another's good—but there the prayer of our Lord will have been answered, Jno. xvii. 21, 'That they all may be one;' &c.

vii. Here it is said to one of those who receive the penny a day, 'Take that thine is, and go thy way:' which cannot be said to any who are given possession of eternal life; the language to such is, 'Come, ye blessed,' &c.

* 'In Persea, and probably in the morning, for Persea was rich in vineyards; and not the plain of Jericho, where none were planted.'—Greswell, Vol. ii. Diss. xxxi. p. 543. And see Note at foot of next page.

NONE OF US LIVETH TO HIMSELF, AND NO MAN DIETH TO HIMSELF.—Rom. xiv. 7.

EVERY ONE OF US SHALL GIVE ACCOUNT OF HIMSELF TO GOD.—Rom. xiv. 12.

No. 76.—East of Jordan, near the ford opposite to Jericho.—Matt. xx. 1—16.*

1 For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a-man that is an-housholder, which went-
2 out early in-the-morning to-hire labourers into his vineyard. And when-he had-agreed
3 with the labourers for a-penny a day, he-sent them into his vineyard. And he-went-out 4 about the third hour, and-saw others standing idle in the market-place, and-'said'-unto-them; Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I-will-give you. And they

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 1. For, &c. — This marks an intimate connection between the parable which follows, with what our Lord had just before said respecting rewards, xix. 27—9, § 75, p. 228—He had spoken both of a reward in this life, and of another in the life to come; and had concluded with the saying, ver. 30, § ib. p. 230, which, at the close of the parable, is repeated in nearly the same words, ver. 16, p. 233, infra.

early in the morning—To the Jews it was said, Jer. vii. 25, 'Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them:'—The Jews were also the first called under the gospel dispensation, Ac. xiii. 46, 'Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles.'

labourers — The ministers of the gospel, more especially, are labourers in the Lord's vineyard: 1 Co. iii. 9, 'For we are labourers together with God: ye are God's husbandry,'—Christians generally are, as having the hope of a blessed resurrection, to be found diligent in the work of God; xv. 58, 'Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.'—See also He. vi. 9—12.

vineyard—see on Lu. xiii. 6, 7, § 64, p. 174; also the parable of the vineyard let out to husbandmen, Mt. xxi. 33, § 84, p. 286.

2. penny a day—Sufficient, even in a time of famine, to provide daily bread for one or more persons, according to the kind of grain made use of, Rev. vi. 6.

3. the third hour—nine o'clock, a.m. The hour at which our Lord was crucified, Mk. xv. 25, 'And it was the third hour, and they crucified him.' And the same as that in which the Spirit descended on the day of Pentecost, whereby the disciples were enabled to labour in the Lord's vineyard; and declare to all in their various languages, the wonderful works of God, Ac. ii. 15, 'For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.'

idle—Pr. xix. 15, 'Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep; and an idle soul shall suffer hunger.'—Abundance of idleness is mentioned among the characteristics of Sodom, Eze. xvi. 49.

market-place — a place used, it would seem, for idling and play, as well as for business, ch. xi. 16, &c., § 29, p. 226—In that at Athens, Paul employed himself in the work unto which he had been called, Ac. xvii. 17, 'Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him.'

4. Go ye, &c.—Ec. ix. 10, 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might;' &c.—Jesus himself gave an example of diligence, in doing the work of God, Jno. ix. 4, § 55, p. 109.

whatsoever is right—Mt. vi. 33, § 19, p. 136, 'But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.' —He. vi. 10, 'For God is not unrighteous to forget

NOTES.

Mt. xx. 1. The kingdom of heaven is like. That is, the manner of God's proceeding in his kingdom resembles that of an householder. This parable is found, though with a widely-extended application, in the Jerusalem Talmud.

Early in the morning. Correspondent to our six o'clock.

His vineyard. See Scrip. Illus.

2. ἐκ δηναρίου, 'at or for a denarius.' The denarius, which was equivalent to the Greek drachma, was then the usual wages of a labourer, and the pay of a soldier, equal to about sevenpence halfpenny of our money.—See Greswell, Vol. V. p. 383.

In 1351 the price of labour was regulated in this country by parliament: 'corn weeders and haymakers, without meat, drink, or other courtesy demanded,' had one penny per day! In 1314 the pay of a chaplain to the Scotch bishops, who were then prisoners in England, was three halfpence per day. At that time twenty-four eggs were sold for a penny; a pair of shoes for fourpence; a fat goose for twopence halfpenny; a hen for a penny; eight bushels of wheat for two shillings; and a fat ox for six shillings and eightpence! In 1336, wheat per quarter was two shillings; a fat sheep, sixpence; a fat goose, twopence; and a pig, a penny.—A. C.

3—5. The third, sixth, and ninth hour. Answering to our nine, twelve, and three o'clock.

3. Idle. i. e., unemployed.

In the market-place. ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ. 'A place where the markets, judgments, and orations were held, and

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xx. 1, 2. Let us, as invited by God, labour in his vineyard; and we shall assuredly get our wages; we shall experience that in the keeping of his commandments there is great reward, Ps. xix. 11.

[3—5 ver. It may be that we have not only been idle in the work of God, but have been actively engaged in the service of sin. Let us both 'cease to do evil;' and 'learn to do well,' Is. i. 16, 17. And let us especially learn to put confidence in God; to have experience of his grace, and to follow the example of his goodness.]

* 'This is a remarkable occasion of an omission, where St. Mark stops short on the very verge of a long and interesting parable, subjoined by our Lord, in explanation of the last sentence which he does record.'—Greswell, Vol. I. p. 32.

'The scene of this parable was probably Perræa; and the time as probably was morning. For Perræa, which was rich in vineyards (B. Jud. iii. iii. 3); not the plain of Jericho, where none were planted; was much the most likely to suggest the parable on the spot: and the time of the parable itself is laid in the spring of the year, and on the morning of some day; both which things would also be true of our Saviour's journey if he was now only one day's journey distant from Jerusalem, and preparing to renew his progress ἐμπροσθεν, that is, with sunrise in the day.

'I infer, then, that the question of the Pharisees was put towards the close of one day, and that the proceedings of another are specified with the resumption of the journey, and the application of the Ruler directly after. If our Saviour was at this very time at the ford of Bethabara, only 210 stades distant from Jerusalem, or even further off, by setting out in the morning at the ordinary time of commencing a journey in the East, and travelling leisurely at the rate of only two or three miles to the hour, he might yet pass through Jericho, and stop with Zacchæus, before the ninth hour of the day, within three or four Roman miles of Jerusalem . . . . this was the Friday before Passion week; or one day before he actually arrived at Bethany; and seven days, or exactly one week, before he suffered.'—Ibid. Vol. II. p. 543.

EVERY MAN'S WORK SHALL BE MADE MANIFEST: FOR THE DAY SHALL DECLARE IT, BECAUSE IT SHALL BE REVEALED BY FIRE; AND THE FIRE SHALL TRY EVERY MAN'S WORK OF WHAT SORT IT IS.—1 Cor. iii. 13.

MATT. xx. 5—12.

5 went-their-way. Again he-went-out about the-sixth and ninth hour, and-did likewise.
6 And about the eleventh hour he-went-out, and-found others standing idle, and saith 7 unto-them, Why stand-ye here all the day idle? They-say unto-him, Because no-man hath-hired us. He-saith unto-them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is 8 right, that shall-ye-receive. So when-even-was-come, the lord of-the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last 9 unto the first. And when-they-came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they-10 received every-man a-penny. But when-the first-came, they-supposed that they-11 should-have-received more; and they likewise received every-man a-penny. And when-12 they-had-received it, they-murmured against the good-man-of-the-house, saying, These your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.'—Col. iv. 1, 'Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 4. Note that those who were first hired, stipulated for a certain amount of wages, ver. 2. supra; those who are afterwards introduced into the vineyard, are upon the terms of free grace—see ver. 4—7.

5. sixth—the hour at which Peter, upon going on the housetop to pray, fell into a trance, and received a commission to open the kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles, in the case of Cornelius and his company, Ac. x. 9.

ninth hour—'the hour of prayer,' Ac. iii. 1: probably that at which Paul, when praying in the temple, fell into a trance, and heard the Lord saying unto him, xxii. 21, 'Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.'

8. when even was come—The law directed that labourers should be paid their wages at the close of each day, Le. xix. 13; De. xxiv. 15.

steward—In the morning of the resurrection, the reward is not thus given, through another; but by the Lord in person.—See the parable of the Talents, ch. xxv. 14—30, § 86, p. 347—comp. also Lu. xix. 12—27, § 80, p. 248, and 'Parallelism,' ADDENDA, p. 25†.

give them their hire—The Master hath said, Lu. x. 7, § 60, p. 142, 'the labourer is worthy of his hire.'

the last—those hired at the eleventh hour—see ver. 6, 7.

11. murmured—The children of Israel were remarkable for their murmuring, Ex. xvi. 2; xvii. 2; Nu. xiv. 2, 29; xvi. 41; Exe. xviii. 29, 'Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the LORD is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?'—The elder brother, who in the parable represented the Jew, murmured at the kind reception given to the repentant prodigal, Lu. xv. 28—30, § 68, p. 194—Even the Jewish believers murmured, on account of the Gentiles being upon equal terms, admitted into the christian church, Ac. xi. 1—3; Rom. xi. 28—The apostle, in warning against following the example of ancient Israel, says, 1 Co. x. 10, 'Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.'

NOTES.

all the public business was transacted; where especially the idle, and those who were out of employment, assembled in order to procure employment, particularly at the third hour.'—Bloomf.

Mt. xx. 6. And about the eleventh hour. About five o'clock, or just one working hour before the close of the day.

Why stand ye, &c. Before a large mosque in Hamadan, is a maidan or square, which serves as a market-place. Here we observed, every morning before the sun rose, that a numerous band of peasants were collected with spades in their hands, waiting, as they informed us, to be hired for the day to work in the surrounding fields: this struck us as a happy illustration of our Saviour's parable.—Morier.

Those hired at the eleventh hour may represent either the Gentiles, called long after the Jews, or those called late in life.—Benz.

7. Whatsoever is right. Thus all, except the first, trusted their lord's kindness or grace as to wages.

[8. So when even was come. The penny a day does not seem to refer to the reward to be received in the morning of the resurrection, but the necessary daily provision which God now makes for those that are engaged in his service.]

Steward. τῷ ἐπιτρόπῳ. A servant generally answering to the Roman procurator; but as said of agriculture, corresponding to the Latin villicus and our bailiff.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xx. 5. Let us not be as hirelings doing the work of the Lord grudgingly; but be joined unto him according to the terms of free grace.

[6 ver. The question may well be put, 'Why stand ye here all the day idle?' Is there not work enough to be done? Is there not something to learn of the word of God, and of his works in creation and providence? something for not only for the improvement of our own minds, but for the implanting of gracious principles, and the cultivation of the virtues, in our own souls, and in the souls of others? some offences to be removed; some kindnesses to be performed; some little ones that we can cherish; some feeble ones that we can help and encourage; some sorrowful ones that we can sympathise with and comfort? And see margin.]

[7 ver. Few of us can say that no man hath hired us. For a miserable pittance many have sold themselves to work iniquity, and have been rewarded with disappointment and misery; but he who is rightfully our Lord, hath not only been willing to receive us into his service, where we should have been better an hundred-fold; He hath even paid the price of our redemption with his own blood; and though we have often resisted the offers of his grace, he is now at the eleventh hour willing to receive us into his service, preparatory to our enjoyment of his everlasting kingdom. Let us now at last trust him, and learn to do his will.]

[8 ver., &c. The reward here spoken of is not the eternal reward, to be enjoyed in the morning of the resurrection, and to be given by the Master personally. It is his providential dealing with his people—their daily hire, received in this life—that Divine succour, which those who have but lately entered the vineyard, who have the deepest sense of their own unworthiness, and of the Divine grace, are often the first to receive. These stand the most in need; and by shewing extraordinary favour to such, God is trying the tempers of his other servants, who, if they have not learned to follow their Lord, will hardly be able to say in every such case, 'THY WILL BE DONE.' Those that rejoice in seeing others preferred before themselves, and who thankfully receive what, when, and how, the Lord is pleased to bestow; those who have learned to love his service better than their hire; and who love their neighbour as themselves; these are they in whom the Master delights; and to whom he will never say, 'Take that thine is, and go thy way:']

10 ver. Those who make a bargain with God, giving him so much work for so much wages, need not be disappointed should they receive no more than others—no more than what was promised them. The best of us, however, have received a great deal more than we can justly claim.

[11, 12 ver. Let not those who have early and long laboured in the Lord's service, look with an envious

Matt. xx. 13—.6.

last have-wrought but one hour, and thou-hast-made them equal unto-us, which have-13 borne the burden and heat of-the day. But he answered one of-them, and-said, Friend, 14 I-do-thee no-wrong: didst-not-thou-agree-with me for-a-penny? Take that thine is,
15 and go-thy-way: I-will give unto-this last, even as unto-thee. Is-it-not-lawful for-me 16 to-do what I-will with mine-own? Is thine eye evil πονηρος, because I am good? So the last shall-be first, and the first last: for many be called κλητοι, but few chosen εκλεκτοι.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 12. equal unto us—The disciples are, by love, to serve one another, in place of grudging to see others more highly favoured, Lu. xxii. 24—.7, § 87, p. 375.

burden and heat of the day—Paul, who was more abundant in labour and suffering than all the other apostles, 1 Co. xv. 10; 2 Co. xi. 23—.8; xii. 10, had learned in whatsoever state he was, therewith to be content; and found that he could do all things through Christ who strengthened him, Ph. iv. 11—.3—He thought less of what he did and endured, than of the mercy whereby he was saved; and of the honour and blessedness of the service unto which he was appointed, 1 Ti. i. 11—.7.

13. Friend—The same word is used in addressing the guest not having on the wedding garment, ch. xxii. 12, § 84, p. 291—and Judas, xxvi. 50, § 88, p. 419.

didst not thou agree, &c.—This was the distinction in the case of the first hired, ver. 2, p. 231, supra.

14. Take that thine is—There is here a reference to the selfish disposition of the party addressed, as when Jesus afterwards said to the Jews, ch. xxiii. 38, § 85, 'Behold, YOUR house is left unto you desolate.'

15. what I will—Ex. xxxiii. 19; Rom. ix. 14—.6, 20, .1, (see border)—It is the prayer of the disciples, that the will of God may be perfectly done upon earth; as it will be, when the kingdom of God has come, Mt. vi. 10, § 19, p. 132—Then those who are made kings and priests unto God, while ascribing all to the free grace of God, will rejoice in seeing all made use of according to his will, saying, as in, Rev. iv. 11, 'Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.'

mine own—In contrast to 'thine,' in ver. 14, supra.

thine eye evil—an 'evil eye' is expressive of dissatisfaction at the good of another—see De. xv. 9; xxviii. 54; Pr. xxiii. 6; xxviii. 22; Mt. vi. 23, § 19, p. 134; Mk. vii. 22, § 44, p. 10.

good—frequently used to express kindness or liberality, as Ac. ix. 36; 2 Co. ix. 8; Ga. vi. 10—The goodness of the Lord is the burden of many of the songs belonging to the time of the great in-gathering —see Ps. cvii. 1, 8, 15, 21, 31, ... Je. xxxii. 39, 40, .1, .2.

16. many be called, &c.—ch. xix. 30, § 75, p. 230.

chosen—Those who are approved are, as contrasted with the reprobate, described, Ja. i. 23—.5.

NOTES.

[Mt. xx. 13. It should be remembered that, although the words φιλος and Ἑταιρος, which frequently occur in the gospels, are both translated friend, yet in their genuine signification there is but little affinity between them. The former always implies affection and regard; the latter (which is the word used in this verse) does not. The latter, not the former, was employed as a civil compellation to strangers and indifferent persons.

14. Go thy way. Those who, in a mere legal spirit, enter into the service of God, will have what they bargain for, and be sent away; while to the children of grace it will be said, 'Come, ye blessed,' &c.

I will give. This seems to intimate an intention of continuing in employment those last hired, they having already been paid for the day that was past.

[15. Is thine eye evil? The Hebrews applied the word 'evil' to the eye, to denote one envious and malicious; De xv. 9; Pr. xxiii. 6. The eye is called evil in such cases, because envy and malice shew themselves directly in the eye. No passions are so fully expressed by the eye as these. In worldly things 'envy' is as 'rottenness to the bones;' and in spiritual things, even the children of God often think that they have too little, and others too much, of the tokens of God's favour; and that they do too much, and others too little, in the work of the Almighty.]

16. The last shall be first, and the first last. From these words it is evident our Lord meant, that the Gentiles should not only be made equal in gospel privileges and blessings with the Jews; but that many, who were most likely in human estimation to be made partakers of them, should fall short through self-conceit and unbelief; while others, who were much more unlikely, should obtain them through faith, according to God's sovereign grace.

For many be called, &c. The citizens of Rome were all liable in turns to serve as soldiers; this was called (delectum habere) 'choosing them,' because they had always a great many more than they wanted.—See ADDENDA, next page.

[The general sense, as Mr. Greswell observes, is that 'in the dispensations of Divine grace for the good of mankind, the offer of such and such privileges, subject to such and such conditions, is indiscriminate, and made to all; but the acceptance of the offer, subject to the conditions in question, is not indiscriminate, nor equally characteristic of all. Consequently, neither is the actual enjoyment of the promised blessing or privilege alike characteristic of all, nor are the benefits of the offer as general as the intention thereof.'—Bloomf.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

eye upon the favour shewn to others who have but recently been engaged. The Lord may be trying our faith, our hope, and our love. If we cannot trust our Lord that he will do what is right; if our expectation is less fixed upon a permanent engagement than on our present daily hire;—if we have not acquired the mind of Christ so as to look upon the good of our neighbour with equal complacency as upon our own, then we shall murmur: but if we have laboured to any profit in the Lord's vineyard, we shall know that 'godliness with contentment is great gain.' 1 Ti. vi. 6; and will less complain of 'the burden and heat of the day,' than rejoice at being at all employed in such service.]

[Mt. xx. 14. He has but a poor portion who has it said to him by the great Householder, 'Take that thine is, and go thy way:' who has only his daily hire in this life, and is then sent away from before Him in whose presence there is fulness of joy, and at whose right hand are pleasures for evermore.—See Ps. xvi. 11.]

15 ver. Let us love God supremely, so shall we rejoice in seeing him do what he will with his own. Let us each love his neighbour as himself, so shall we not look with an evil eye upon others.

[16 ver. Let us know that we are the last—the least deserving of all—the most entirely dependent upon free grace; that we can never sufficiently express our gratitude to God for calling us into his service. Let us see that we really enter into the Spirit of our Lord; that we esteem his service, and delight in his servants; so that we can happily be received into our Lord's household; be not merely the hirelings of a day, but be as those who are found faithful, chosen to inherit everlasting life. This can only be by our being found in Christ, and Christ in us.]

ADDENDA.

'MANY BE CALLED, BUT FEW CHOSEN.'—Matt. xx. 16, p. 233.

MANY BE CALLED, &c., 'seems to refer to the ancient Roman custom of recruiting their armies. Among this celebrated people, no one was forced to serve his country in a military capacity; and it was the highest honour to be deemed worthy of thus serving it. The youth were instructed, almost from their cradle, in military exercises. The Campus Martius was the grand field in which they were disciplined: there they accustomed themselves to leaping, running, wrestling, bearing burdens, fencing, throwing the javelin, &c.; and when, through these violent exercises, they were all besmeared with dust and sweat, in order to refresh themselves, they swam twice or thrice across the Tiber! Rome might at any time have recruited her armies by volunteers from such a mass of well-educated, hardy soldiers; but she thought proper, to use the words of the Abbe Mably, that the honour of being chosen to serve in the wars should be the reward of the accomplishments shewn by the citizens in the Campus Martius; that the soldier should have a reputation to save; and that the regard paid him, in choosing him to serve, should be the pledge of his fidelity and zeal to discharge his duty. The age of serving in the army was from seventeen to forty-five, and the manner in which they were chosen was the following:—

After the creation of consuls, they every year named twenty-four military tribunes, part of whom must have served five years at least, and the rest eleven. When they had divided among them the command of the four legions to be formed, the consuls summoned to the capitol, or Campus Martius, all the citizens who, by their age, were obliged to bear arms. They drew up by tribes, and lots were drawn to determine in what order every tribe should present its soldiers. That which was the first in order, chose the four citizens who were judged the most proper to serve in the war; and the six tribunes who commanded the first legion chose one of these four, whom they liked best. The tribunes of the second and third likewise made their choice one after another, and he that remained entered into the fourth legion. A new tribe presented other four soldiers, and the second legion chose first. The third and fourth legions had the same advantage in their turns. In this manner each tribe successively chose four soldiers, till the legions were complete. They next proceeded to the creation of subaltern officers, whom the tribunes chose from among the soldiers of the greatest reputation. When the legions were thus completed, the citizens who had been called, but not chosen, returned to their respective employments, and served their country in other capacities. None can suppose that these were deemed useless, or that because not now chosen to serve their country in the field, they were proscribed from the rights and privileges of citizens, much less destroyed, because others were found better qualified to serve their country at the post of honour and danger. Thus many are called by the preaching of the gospel, but few are found who use their advantages in such a way as to become extensively useful in the church; and many in the church militant behave so ill as never to be admitted into the church triumphant. But what a mercy that those who appear now to be rejected may be called in another muster, enrolled, serve in the field, or work in the vineyard! How many millions does the long-suffering of God lead to repentance!'—A. C.

SECTION 77.—(G. 55, .6.)—[Lesson 71.]—JESUS ENTERS JUDÆA; AND A THIRD TIME PREDICTS TO HIS DISCIPLES, THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF HIS SUFFERINGS AND DEATH. JAMES AND JOHN, WITH SALOME THEIR MOTHER, PETITION JESUS FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF SITTING ON HIS RIGHT HAND AND ON HIS LEFT IN HIS KINGDOM: THE TEN BEING OFFENDED THEREBY, JESUS ADDRESSES A DISCOURSE TO THEM ALL IN COMMON.—Matt. xx. 17—28. Mark x. 32—45. Luke xviii. 31—.4. —See foot-note, next page.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xx. 17. Mk. x. 32. Lu. xviii. 31. Jesus goes up to Jerusalem, where his life had been repeatedly threatened, and where, as he had repeatedly intimated, sufferings and death awaited him. He goes before the disciples, who are amazed, and, as they follow, are afraid. He takes them apart, and tells them what things he was to suffer at Jerusalem; assuring them that the things written concerning him by the prophets shall be accomplished.

— xx. 18, .9. — x. 33, .4. — xviii. 32, .3. Jesus foretells seven particulars concerning his sufferings and death:—

1. His betrayal into the hands of the chief priests.
2. His being condemned to death by them.
3. ——— delivered to the Gentiles.
4. ——— mocked.
5. ——— scourged.
6. ——— spitted on.
7. ——— crucified.

He also predicts that on the third day he shall rise again.

——— ——— ——— — xviii. 34. The disciples as yet understand not these things; neither this saying concerning his rising again: nor the things which were spoken by the prophets, which receive their confirmation in the sufferings and resurrection of Jesus our Redeemer.

— xx. 20. — x. 35. The children of Zebedee make, through their mother, an application to the Master, that he would grant them what they are about to ask.

— xx. 21. — x. 36. Jesus asks what they would have him do for them?

— xx. 21. — x. 37. James and John request to be seated, the one on his right hand, and the other on his left, in his kingdom, in glory.

Mr. xx. 22. Mk. x. 38. Jesus answers, that they know not what they ask; and intimates, that to ask for high place in his kingdom, is to ask for a correspondently bitter portion in the present life; and implies a willingness to descend with him now into the lowest depths. He asks them if they are able to go along with him in his sufferings and humiliation?

— xx. 22. — x. 39. The two disciples answer, that they are able.

— xx. 22. — x. 40. Jesus tells them that they shall indeed drink of his cup, and be baptized with the baptism that he is baptized with; but that to sit on his right hand and on his left, he may not be expected to give, but to those for whom it is prepared of his Father.

— xx. 24. — x. 41. The other disciples having heard the request of James and John, are indignant against the two brethren.

— xx. 25—.7. — x. 42—.4. Jesus calls them unto him, and explains, that to have dominion in his kingdom is not as among the kings of this world; that among his disciples, those who would be great must be great in ministering; and that he who would have the highest place must be as the lowest in service.

— xx. 28. — x. 45. Jesus, in conclusion, opens up the great truth connected with his first advent, and gives an application of the doctrine of the atonement to the disciples' state of mind, to which all must attend who desire to be partakers of the kingdom.—They must follow the example of him who 'came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.'

IF THE SPIRIT OF HIM THAT RAISED UP JESUS FROM THE DEAD DWELL IN YOU, HE THAT RAISED UP CHRIST FROM THE DEAD SHALL ALSO QUICKEN YOUR MORTAL BODIES BY HIS SPIRIT THAT DWELLETH IN YOU.—Rom. viii. 11.

No. 77.—(G. 55.)—Jesus enters Judæa; and a third time predicts to his disciples, the circumstances of his sufferings and death.—Matt. xx. 17—.9. Mark x. 32—.4. Luke xviii. 31—.4. *West of Jordan, near the Ford opposite Jericho.

Matt. xx. 17—.9.	Mark x. 32, .3.	Luke xviii. 31, .2.
	(Ch. x. 31, § lxxv. p. 230.)	(Ch. xviii. 30, § lxxv. p. 230.)
17 And Jesus going-up to Jerusalem	32 [a]And they-were in the way going-up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went-before them: and they-were-amazed; and as they-followed, they-were-afraid. And he-took again the twelve,[b]
took the twelve [b]disciples apart in the way,[a] and said unto them,	[a]and-began to-tell them what-things should happen unto-him,	Then he-took-unto him 31 the twelve, and-said unto them,
18 Behold, we-go-up to Jerusalem;	33 saying, Behold, we-go-up to Jerusalem;[d]	Behold, we-go-up to Jerusalem, [d]and all-things that are-written by the prophets concerning-the Son of man shall-be-accomplished.[e]
[c]and the Son of man shall-be-betrayed unto-the chief-priests and unto-the-scribes, and they-shall-condemn him to-death,	and the Son of man shall-be-delivered unto-the chief-priests, and unto-the scribes; and they-shall-condemn him to-death,
19 and shall-deliver him to-the Gentiles[f]	and shall-deliver him to-the Gentiles.	For he-shall-be-32 delivered unto-the Gentiles,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. x. 32. up to Jerusalem—This language seems to have been used in reference to those who went from the country to keep the feasts in Jerusalem—see Jno. vii. 8, § 54, p. 88; ver. 10, § 55, p. 91; xi. 55, § 81, p. 252—Jesus had before predicted his death at Jerusalem, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40.

went before them, &c.—He had said unto his disciples, Mt. xvi. 24, § ib., p. 42, 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.'

what things—He had before said that he should 'suffer many things,' ch. viii. 31, § ib., p. 40—Now he tells them 'what things'—He particularizes seven, beginning with his betrayal, and ending with his crucifixion—comp. x. 33, .4—see Analysis, p. 234.

Lu. xviii. 31. by the prophets—as in Ps. xxii. 1—18, ... Is. liii. . . . . Da. ix. 26, 'And after three-score and two weeks shall Messiah,' &c.—Mi. v. 1, 'They shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.'—Zec. xiii. 7, &c., 'Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man,' &c.

Mk. x. 33. delivered unto the chief priests—He had before predicted this, ch. ix. 31, § 52, p. 71—He was delivered into their hands by Judas—comp. Mt. xxvi. 14—.6, 45—.7, §§ 86, .8, pp. 356, 415.

condemn him to death—under the pretence that he was guilty of blasphemy, Mt. xxvi. 65, .6. [Mk. xiv. 63, 64,] § 89, p. 429; Jno. xviii. 31, § 90, p. 440.

deliver him to the Gentiles—They 'delivered him to Pontius Pilate the [Roman] governor.'—Mt. xxvii. 2, [Mk. xv. 1; Lu xxiii. 1; Jno. xviii. 28,] § 89, p. 435—referred to Ac. iii. 13; iv. 25—.8.

NOTES.

Mt. xx. 17. Apart in the way. Separated them from the multitudes that followed him. The multitude was likely to be very great, for the passover was nigh, and many went up to the feast.

19. Shall deliver him to the Gentiles. That is, because they have not the power of inflicting capital punishment, they will deliver him to those who have—the Roman authority.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. x. 32. It is better to know what is before us, so far as God may be pleased to make it known, than to remain in painful suspense, under the dread of undefined calamity.

Lu. xviii. 31. We may rest assured that, as truly as Jesus went up to Jerusalem to suffer, so truly shall be accomplished all that was predicted respecting his coming in the clouds of heaven, to sit on the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob for ever.—See the annunciation by the angel to Mary, ch. i. 32, .3, § 2, p. 10.

Mt. xx. 18, .9; Mk. x. 33, .4. As the time of his death draws near, Jesus is more minute in foretelling the circumstances thereof.—And see Margin.

* 'The first indication that our Lord had now crossed the Jordan, seems to be supplied at Mt. xx. 17—.9; Mk. x. 32—4; Lu xviii. 31—.4: for this prediction could nowhere have been so well timed, as when he was just entering Judæa, and the term ἀναβαίνομεν, found in each of the accounts, must be some presumptive proof that they were upon the high road between the Jordan and Jerusalem; which was really an ascent, especially after it had arrived at Jericho. The same locality was, therefore, the scene of the petition of the sons of Zebedee, and of the first miracle on the blind man—each before the entrance into Jericho.'—Greswell, Vol. II. p. 543.

'That the Jordan was crossed, to enter Judæa, must be self-evident; and that it was crossed in this instance at the usual ford, called Bethabara, in the neighbourhood of Jericho, may presumptively be collected from our Saviour's proceeding, directly after, through that city. For this was to take the usual course, or to journey by the regular high road from Jericho to Jerusalem.'—Ibid. Vol. III. p. 60.

LET US NOT BE AFRAID TO FOLLOW JESUS, EVEN THOUGH IT MAY BE UNTO SUFFERING, SHAME, AND DEATH.

THERE WAS TO JESUS A FULNESS OF SUFFERING, AND THERE SHALL BE TO OUR REDEEMER A FULNESS OF GLORY.

Matt. xx. 19.	Mark x. 34.	Luke xviii. 33, 34.
to mock, and to-scourge,	34 and they-shall-mock him, and shall-scourge him,	and shall-be-mocked, and spitefully-entreated ὑβρισθήσεται, and shall-spit-upon him,	and spitted-on:
and to-crucify him: and the third day he-shall-rise-again.	and shall-kill him: and the third day he-shall-rise-again.[5]	and they-shall-scourge 33 him, and put him to-death: and the third day he-shall-rise-again.

[5] And they understood none of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken. (Ch. xviii. 35, § lxxviii. p. 240.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS

Mk. x. 34. shall mock him—The Jewish priests made a mock of his being a prophet, Mt. xxvi. 67, 68, § 89, p. 430—His kingly dignity was made a jest of, both by Herod, Lu. xxiii 11, § 96, p. 468, and by the Roman soldiers, Mt. xxvii. 27—31, § 91, p. 435—He was also mocked by all parties as he suffered on the cross, ver. 39—49, § 95—His sufferings were predicted, Ps. xxii. 7, 8, 'All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, he trusted on the Lord that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him.'—Is. liii. 3; Mi. v. 1.

shall scourge him—Lu. xxiii. 16, § 90, p. 449; Mt. xxvii. 26, [Mk. xv. 15,] § 91, p. 453—predicted, Is. l. 5, 6; liii. 5, &c.

shall spit upon him—Thus was he treated both by the Jewish priests, Mt. xxvi. 67, [Mk. xiv. 65,] § 89, p. 430, and by the Roman soldiers, Mt. xxvii. 30, [Mk. xv. 19,] § 91, p. 455—as predicted, Is. l. 6.

Mt. xx. 19. to crucify—He had before predicted his being lifted up on the cross, Jno iii. 14, § 12, p. 85; viii. 28, § 55, p. 193—comp. xii. 32, 33, § 82, p. 268; xviii. 32, § 90, p. 441—see for the accomplishment, Mt. xxvii. 22, 33—36, 39—50, §§ 90, 91, pp. 451, 455—It is frequently spoken of by the apostles, especially Peter and Paul, Ac. x. 39, 'And we are witnesses,' &c.—1 Pe. ii. 24, 'Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness;' &c.—1 Co. i. 17, 18, 23; Ga. iii. 13, 'Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:'

the third day, &c.—When he before predicted his death, he also spoke of his rising again on the third day, Mt. xvi. 21, [Mk. viii. 31; Lu. ix. 22,] § 30, p. 49; xvii. 23, [Mk. ix. 31,] § 52, p. 71—His enemies knew that he had spoken of his resurrection, Mt. xxvii. 62—66, § 92—the fulfilment, xxviii. 1—6, § 93—The resurrection of Christ is referred to as an important confirmation of the gospel, by Peter on the day of Pentecost, Ac. ii. 24—36—by Paul at Antioch, xiii. 32—38—at Athens, xvii. 31—its importance in relation to faith, Rom iv. 23—5, 'Now it was not written for his [Abraham's] sake alone, that it was imputed to him; 24, but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; 25, who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.'—And hope, 1 Co. xv. 16, 17, 'For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.'

Lu. xviii. 34. understood none of these, &c.—so Mary and Joseph, when Jesus said, 'Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?' ch. ii. 49, § 6, p. 42—so the disciples, when on a previous occasion he informed them of his approaching sufferings and death, Mk. ix. 32, [Lu. ix. 45,] § 52, p. 71—and afterwards, when fulfilling the prophecies in his manner of approaching Jerusalem, Jno. xii. 16, § 82, p. 262.

NOTES.

Mt. xx. 19. To scourge. That is, to whip. This was done with thongs, or a whip made on purpose; and this punishment was commonly inflicted upon criminals before crucifixion.

Mk. x. 34. Shall spit upon him. Spitting on another has always been considered a mark of the greatest contempt.

Mt. xx. 19. Crucify him. It was much more probable that he should be privately slain, or stoned to death in a tumult, than that he should suffer the punishment of crucifixion, which was customary among the Romans, but unusual among the Jews. And when he was delivered back by Pilate to the Jews, with permission to judge him according to their law, it is wonderful he was not stoned. 'But all this was done that the scripture should be fulfilled.' —See Jno. xix. 36, § 92.

[Whether we reflect on the danger which the disciples were in of being wholly cast down or oppressed with so severe an affliction as the death of their Master, and the insults and malice of his and their enemies; this forewarning of the events was exceedingly seasonable and kind, to prepare them for so heavy a burden, and to sustain them under it. Or whether we regard the prevailing error concerning the Messiah's first appearance, or the scandal which was likely to arise from a crucified Lord, it was fit to shew that his death was voluntary, and so a demonstration of infinite love, fit to signify by its agreement with the prophecies, that this design and all the parts of it were ordained by the highest wisdom.]

Lu. xviii. 34. They understood none of these things. The literal meaning they could not but understand; but as they were not able to reconcile this to their preconceived opinion of the Messiah, they were utterly at a loss in what paradoxical or figurative sense to take what he said concerning his sufferings. For a like reason there are many who cannot understand the things which are predicted respecting his second and glorious advent.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xviii. 34. We need not wonder that many things, plainly declared in the scriptures, are not generally understood. Jesus repeatedly, and most explicitly, foretold his sufferings, death, and resurrection; and yet even his chosen disciples, unto whom it was given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, did not understand him. It cannot be that they took his words in their plain signification. It is more probable they looked in them for some figurative meaning, thinking it impossible they could be literally fulfilled.]

Seeing that by the sufferings and resurrection of the Son of God, the things that were spoken by the prophets have been so wondrously confirmed, let us grasp, as glorious realities, the objects of our hope to which they point; and let us look forward to their full accomplishment, with assured confidence.

[Let us not, by indulging in the same unbelief and vain imaginings, remain ignorant of that which is foretold respecting the second advent of our blessed Redeemer. He who humbled himself shall reign.]

FOR THE PREACHING OF THE CROSS IS TO THEM THAT PERISH FOOLISHNESS; BUT UNTO US WHICH ARE SAVED IT IS THE POWER OF GOD.—1 Cor. i. 18.

(G. 56.)—James and John, with Salome their mother, petition Jesus for the privilege of sitting on his right hand and on his left in his kingdom: the ten being offended thereby, Jesus addresses a discourse to them all in common.—Matt. xx. 20—8. Mark x. 35—45. Same locality, West of Jordan.

MATT. XX. 20—2.*

20 [a] Then came-to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons,[b]

[c] worshipping him, and desiring a-certain-thing of him.[d]

21 And he-said unto-her, What wilt-thou?

She-saith unto-him, Grant [e]ινα that these my two sons may-sit, the-one on thy right-hand, and the-other on the-left, in thy kingdom.

22 [e] But Jesus answered and-said, Ye-know not what ye-ask. Are-ye-able to-drink-of the cup that I shall drink-of, and to-be-

MARK X. 35—8.

And 35

[b] James and John,[e] the sons of-Zebedee, come-unto him, [d] saying, Master, we-would that thou-shouldest-do for-us whatsoever we-shall-desire.

And he said unto-them, What would-ye 36 that-I should-do for-you?

They said unto-him, Grant [f]or unto-us 37 that we-may-sit, one on thy right-hand, and the-other on thy left-hand, in thy glory.[e]

But Jesus said unto-them, Ye-know 38 not what ye-ask: can-ye drink-of the cup that I drink-of? and be-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 20. mother of, &c.—Salome—comp. ch. xxvii. 56, with Mk. xv. 40. § 92, p. 472.

Zebedee's children—James and John, ch. iv. 21, § 16, p. 109; x. 2, § 27, p. 206—they, along with Peter, had been the most privileged of all the disciples—see on Mt. xvii. 1, § 51, p. 52.

Mk. x. 35. Master—see Jno. xi. 28, § 58, p. 130.

Mt. xx. 21. thy right hand, &c.—The being placed thus near a king was counted a high honour—so when Bathsheba, Solomon's mother, came to speak with him for Adonijah, he caused the king's mother to be seated 'on his right hand,' 1 Ki. ii. 19—in Ps. xlv. 9, the queen is spoken of as standing at the King's (Messiah's) right hand, 'Kings' daughters were among thy honourable women: upon thy right hand did stand the queen in gold of Ophir.'—And Christ himself is invited to sit at the Father's right hand until his foes shall is prepared upon earth, Ps. cx. 1.—In 1 Ki. xxii. 19, Micaiah, in addressing the king of Israel, speaks of 'the LORD sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.'

The disciples had before this been disputing among themselves which of them should be the greatest—see Mk. ix. 33, 4, [Lu. ix. 46,] § 52, p. 72, 4.

in thy kingdom—of which they had recently been given a glimpse on the Holy Mount—comp. ch. xvi. 28, § 50, p. 44; xvii. 1—8, § 51, p. 51; 2 Pe. i. 16—8.—It had just been promised them, that when Christ should sit in the throne of his glory, they, with their fellow-disciples, should sit also upon thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel: Mt. xix. 28, § 75, p. 229—see on the kingdom, vi. 10, § 19, p. 132; xiii. 41—3, § 33, p. 260; Lu. i. 32, 3, § 2, p. 10; xix. 12, § 80, p. 248; xxii. 29, 30, § 87, p. 371; xxiii. 42, § 91, p. 475: Ac. i. 6; 2 Ti. iv. 1; Rev. iii. 21.

22. know not what ye ask—They had not duly considered that 'we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God,' Ac. xiv. 22—and that they who would attain to eminence in the kingdom must be willing to labour and suffer the more—see ver. 25—8, infra.

cup—The cup was so bitter, that even Jesus prayed the Father that if it were possible it might pass from him, ch. xxvi. 38—44, [Mk. xiv. 34—9; Lu. xxii. 42—4; Jno. xviii. 11,] § 88, p. 413—Cup means a portion allotted; and is used in a bad sense, Ps. xi. 6, 'portion of their cup.'—lxxiii. 10, 'waters of a full cup'—lxxv. 8, 'a cup, and the wine is red;'—Is. li. 17, 22, 'cup of his fury; . . . cup of trembling,'—Je. xxv. 15. 7, 28, 'wine cup of this fury,'—see also xlix. 12; li. 7; Eze. xxiii. 31—4; Rev. xiv. 10; xvi. 19, &c.—It is used in a good sense, Ps. xvi. 5—see border—xxiii. 5; cxvi. 13.

All who expect to enjoy the kingdom with Christ, must be willing to suffer with him, Rom. viii. 17, 'And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.'—2 Ti. ii. 11, .2, 'It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him: if we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:'—see also 2 Co. i. 7; Col. i. 24; Rev. vi. 9—11.

NOTES.

[Mt. xx. 20. With her sons. 'This shews that they participated in the petition; and indeed, though they preferred it through the medium of their mother, yet it should seem that they were the principal movers of the affair. Thus Mark is justified in representing them as asking it. And indeed, that Jesus regarded them as the principals, is clear from his addressing the answer to them.'—Bloomf.]

21. Right hand, and . . . . left. Said in allusion to the eastern custom, by which sitting next to the throne denotes the next degree of dignity; and consequently the first situations on the right and left denote the highest dignities. There may perhaps be an allusion in these words to the Ab Bethdim, or Father of the Court, who sat on the right hand of the Nasi, or President of the Sanhedrim; and to the Hacan, or Sage, who sat on the left.

22. Ye know not what ye ask. 'Are not aware what is implied in being advanced in my kingdom, and what is necessarily pre-required in order thereto.'

Are ye able to drink of the cup? &c. An image frequent with the Jews, who usually compared whatever obtained through all the obloquy and suffering that Jesus had foretold.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. x. 35. James and John were two of the three who had accompanied our Lord to the mount of Transfiguration; whatever might be said regarding the sufferings of Christ, they could not forget that they had been eye-witnesses of his majesty. If the others were becoming faint-hearted, now—they may have thought—was a good time to shew that they had an expectation of something beyond, worthy of being sought after; even although it should be

[Mt. xx. 22. Let us consider what we ask, when we ask a high place in the kingdom. We should always be prepared for taking the lowest place here, if we expect to be exalted hereafter; we must lay our account with bearing the cross, if we expect to wear the crown.]

* 'Mark x. 35, compared with Matt. xx. 20, explains Matt. xx. 24.'—Greswell, Vol. I. Diss. i. p. 36.

THE LORD IS THE PORTION OF MINE INHERITANCE AND OF MY CUP: THOU MAINTAINEST MY LOT.—Psa. xvi. 5.
YE THAT FEAR THE LORD, TRUST IN THE LORD: HE IS THEIR HELP AND THEIR SHIELD.—Psa. cxv. 11.

MATT. XX. 23—.5.	MARK X. 39—42.
baptized-with the-baptism that I am baptized-with?	baptized-with the baptism that I am-baptized-with?
They-say unto-him, We-are-able. f	And they said unto-him, We-can.	39
23 And he-saith unto-them,	f And Jesus said unto-them,
Ye-shall-drink-indeed of my cup,	Ye-shall-indeed drink-of the cup that I drink-of; and with-the baptism that I am-baptized-withal shall-ye-be-baptized:
and be-baptized-with the baptism that I am-baptized-with:
but to-sit on my right-hand, and on my left, is not mine to-give, but it shall be given to them for-whom it-is-prepared g of my Father.	but to-sit on my right-hand and on my left-hand is not mine to-give; but it shall be given to them for-whom it-is-prepared. g	40
24 And when the ten heard it, they were-moved-with-indignation against the two brethren. h	And when the ten heard it, they began to-be-much-displeased with h James and John.	41
25 But Jesus called them unto him, and-said, Ye-know that	But Jesus called them to him, and-saith unto-them, Ye-know that	42

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 22. the baptism that I am baptized with—Jesus had before said, Lu. xii. 50, § 63, p. 169, 'I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished!'—In the Psalms, trials, afflictions, and humiliations, are frequently represented by overwhelming waters—see Ps. xviii. 16, 'He sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of many waters.' —lxix. 1, 2, 'Save me, O God; for the waters are come in unto my soul. I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.'—lxxxviii. 7, 'Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Selah.'—See also xlii. 7; cxxiv. 4, 5.

We are able—Peter, who with James and John had been on the mount of Transfiguration, was equally confident with them that he was able, ch. xxvi. 33—.5, § 87, p. 406.

23. Ye shall drink—Of these two, James was the first among the eleven that suffered martyrdom, Ac. xii. 2—John, who is supposed to have lived longer than any other of the apostles, describes himself as a 'brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ,' and as being a prisoner 'in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ,' Rev. i. 9.

is not mine, &c.—'The Father . . . hath committed all judgment unto the Son:' 'and hath given him authority to execute judgment'—Jno. v. 22, .7, § 23, pp. 177, .8—and Christ will exercise power in placing at his right hand, and on his throne, those whom he judges worthy, Mt. xxv. 34, § 86, p. 352; Lu. xxii. 29, § 87, p. 376; Rev. iii. 21—but although he possesses this power, it does not belong to him to exercise it but in righteousness, according to the will of the Father, Jno. v. 19, 30, § 23, pp. 177, .8; Ac. xvii. 31, 'Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.'

prepared of my Father—In the judgment Jesus will say to those who, as having submitted to the royal law of love, are prepared to enter into the kingdom, ch. xxv. 34, 'Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:'—He. xi. 16, 'God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.'

24. moved with indignation—Lu. xxii. 24, § 87, p. 375, 'There was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.'—Pr. xiii. 10, 'Only by pride cometh contention: but with the well advised is wisdom.'—Ph. ii. 3, 'Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.'—See also Ja. iv. 1—3.

NOTES.

is dealt out to men by the Almighty (whether good or evil) to a cup of wine.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

Mt. xx. 22. To be baptized with the baptism, &c. This metaphorical sense of the word baptism, is derived from the figurative expressions of the Old Testament, in which afflictions are represented under the notion of great waters passing over and ready to overwhelm a person.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

[23. Is not mine to give, &c. οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν δοῦναι, ἀλλ' οἷς ἡτοίμασται.—ἀλλὰ with a negative, followed by a noun or pronoun, is generally of the same import as εἰ μὴ, nisi, unless, except. Thus Mk. ix. 8, § 51, compared with Mt. xvii. 8, § ib., p. 56, and Mk. x. 40, supra. The highest honours of his kingdom were not now to be disposed of by him to gratify the worldly ambition of any one. In this sense they were not his to give, as Mediator, save to those for whom they had been prepared of the Father. Christ and the Father are one, and it was not his to follow any inferior bias in the disposing of places in his kingdom: he disposes according to the will of the Father, who hath bid us look for glory and honour and immortality, as following Christ humbly and faithfully to the end. The correct sense is seen by leaving out that part of the verse in Italics, which is not in the original.]

[' The expression argues no defect in the power of Christ, but merely a perfect conformity to the will of his Father.' 'Our Lord (says Bishop Horsley) does not deny his power to give, but only declares who they are who shall receive this honour. His answer, far from intimating anything of that kind, concludes as strongly against it as a negative argument can be supposed to do.'—Bloomf.]

For whom it is prepared. Who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory and honour, and immortality. For these only eternal life is prepared. To these only he will give it in that day; and to every man his own reward, according to his own labour.

24. When the ten heard it, they were moved, &c. None of the disciples imagined that Christ had promised the supremacy to Peter; for then neither would the two disciples have preferred this request, nor would the rest have contended for it afterward. The word 'it' refers, not to what Jesus said, but to their request. When the ten heard the request which they had made, they were indignant.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xx. 23. Let us be faithful to our trust in things of God, even as our Lord hath given us example. He is not biassed by private affection, however opportunely solicited; but gives according to the righteous appointment of God the Father. We must not only be willing to suffer with Christ, but to be found in him obedient children. If we are faithful, nothing can supplant us in the favour of God, or deprive us of our place in the kingdom.]

24 ver. Let us beware of manifesting pride in ourselves, that we may not provoke it in others.

25 ver. Let us not follow the course of the world, in using power for our own selfish purposes.

MATT. xx. 26—8.

the princes of-the Gentiles exercise-dominion-κατακυριευουσιν over them, and they that are great exercise-authority-upon them.
26 But it-shall-`not -be so among you:
but whosoever will be great among you,
let-him-be your minister;
27 and whosoever will be chief among you, let-him-be your servant:
28 even-as the Son of man came not to-be-ministered-unto, but to-minister, and to-give his life a-ransom λυτρον for many.
(Ch. xx. 29, § lxxix. p. 242.)

MARK x. 43—5.

they-which are-accounted δοκουντες to-rule-over the Gentiles exercise-lordship-κατακυριευουσιν
over them; and their-great-ones
exercise-authority-upon them.
But so shall-it-`not -be among you: 43
but whosoever will be great among you, shall-be your minister:
and whosoever of-you will be 44
the-chiefest, shall-be servant of-all.
For even the Son of man came not to-be- 45
ministered-unto, but to-minister, and to-give his life a-ransom λυτρον for many.
(Ch. x. 46, § lxxix. p. 242.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 25. Ye know that the princes . . . exercise dominion — Lu. xxii. 25. § 87. p. 375, 'And be said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.'—See the manner of the king as described, 1 Sa. viii. 5—18.

28. not be so among you, &c.—Lu. xxii. 26, § 87, p. 375, 'But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.'—See also Mt. xviii. 1—4. § 53, p. 75; xxiii. 8—12. § 85, p. 314; Lu. xiv. 7—11, § 67, p. 182; Jno. xiii. 13—7. § 87, p. 36; Rom. xii. 10, .6; Ja. iii 1. see border—1 Pe. v. 3—5, 'Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. 4, And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. 5, Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.'—And see 2 Co. i. 24; 3 Jno. 9.

your minister—your waiting servant—Preachers of the gospel are called ministers, because they are the servants of God and of the church, 1 Co. iii. 5; iv. 1; 2 Co. iii. 6; vi. 4; Eph. iv. 11, .2.

27. servant—Lu. xviii. 14, § 73, p. 217—see border.

28. but to minister, &c.—Lu. xxii 27, § 87, p. 375, 'For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.'—Ph. ii. 5—7, 'Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: 6, who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men:'—and see Jno. xiii. 4, 5, 14, § 87, p. 366; Ac. x. 38.

a ransom—Christ, as foreshadowed by the sacrifices, &c., under the law, and as predicted by the prophets, gave himself up to suffering and death for the redemption of men, Is. liii. 6, 10, .1; Da. ix. 24—.6; Mt. xxvi. 28, § 87; Jno. x. 11, .5—.8, § 55, p. 115; xi. 51, .2, § 58, p. 133; Rom. iii. 24—6, 'Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: 25, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; 26, to declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.'—2 Co. v. 21, 'For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.'—Ga. iii. 13, .4, 'Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.'—Eph. i. 7, 'in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace;'—Ti. ii. 14, 'Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.'—Rev. v. 9, 'And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;'

for many—ch. xxvi. 28, § 87, p. 378; Rom. v. 15—9, 'But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. '—1 Ti. ii. 6, 'Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.'—He. ix. 28, 'So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.'

NOTES.

Mt. xx. 25. The princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion, &c. The several governments both in the east and west in our Lord's time tyrannized and exercised arbitrary power over the people. Christ appears to have spoken these words to abate the envy rising against the sons of Zebedee, among the other apostles.

26. Minister, διακονος—servant, δουλος. There is properly a difference between these terms; the former signifying a servant, like our footman, or valet, and usually a freeman; the latter, a servant of all work, and also a slave. The terms were, however, sometimes interchanged.

The office of a deacon, in the primitive church, was to serve in the agapæ, or love feasts, to distribute the bread and wine to the communicants; to proclaim different parts and times of worship in the churches; and to take care of the widows, orphans, prisoners, and sick, who were provided for out of the revenues of the church. It was the lowest ecclesiastical office. Deacons were first appointed Ac. vi. 1—6.

[28. To give his life a ransom for many. 'In order to determine the sense of this passage (so important by its connection with the distinguishing doctrine of the gospel, the ATONEMENT), it is proper carefully to attend to its scope, and then to ascertain the force of its principal terms, λυτρον, ἀντι, and πολλων. The scope of the passage evidently is, to point out the purpose of Christ's coming into the world. It was δουναι—πολλων. On the sense of ψυχη here there has never been any doubt. It plainly signifies (as often in the scriptures, and even the classical writers) life. Christ came to give up his life as a λυτρον. Now λυτρον properly denotes the ransom paid, in order to deliver any one from death, or its equivalent, captivity, or from punishment in general. More frequently it denotes the piacular victim, כפר, sometimes expressed by ἱλασμα; which Hesych. explains ἀντιλυτρον. It has been satisfactorily proved that, among both the Jews and the Gentiles, piacular victims were accepted as a ransom for the life of an offender, and to atone for his offence. The heathens believed that no atonement was so complete or effectual as that whereby the piacular victim should be a human being; whose life was thus given ἀντι, instead of the life of the other.

'The sense, then, of this passage can be no other than that which has been assigned to it by every interpreter of any consideration in every age, namely, that "our Lord was to give up his life as a piacular victim, a ransom for mankind, that they might not suffer [might be released from] spiritual death." And thus it harmonizes with the doctrine of scripture elsewhere. So in Da. ix. 24, it is predicted, that the Messiah "shall make reconciliation for iniquity;" whence he is called by the Jewish rabbins אי"ש כפר, ἀνηρ λυτρων. Comp. Mt. xxvi. 28; Jno. vi. 52; Eph. v. 2; 1 Ti. ii. 6; He. ix. 14, 25; all declaring the same doctrine, that Christ's death was a sacrifice for the sins of mankind; even that true and substantial sacrifice, which those of the law but faintly shadowed forth in types, symbols, and figures.'—Bloomf.]

MY BRETHREN, BE NOT MANY MASTERS, KNOWING THAT WE SHALL RECEIVE THE GREATER CONDEMNATION.—Jas. iii. 1.

FOR EVERY ONE THAT EXALTETH HIMSELF SHALL BE ABASED; AND HE THAT HUMBLETH HIMSELF SHALL BE EXALTED.—Luke xviii. 14.

SECTION 78.—(G. 57.)—[Lesson 72, §§ 78, 9.] — AS JESUS IS APPROACHING TO JERICHO HE HEALS A BLIND MAN.*—Luke xviii. 35—43.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xviii. 35—8. When, in his last journey to Jerusalem, Jesus draws nigh unto Jericho, a blind man, sitting by the way-side begging, hearing the crowds passing by that accompany Jesus, asks what is meant? Being told that Jesus of Nazareth is passing, the blind man recognises the promised Messiah, and immediately cries out, 'Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me.'

—— 39. The people request him to be quiet; but he cries out so much the more, 'Son of David, have mercy on me.'

Lu. xviii. 40, 1. Jesus stops in his journey; and having commanded the blind man to be brought, asks what he desires to have done for him. He answers, 'Lord, that I may receive my sight.' —— 42. Jesus says, 'Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee.'

—— 43. He that was blind receives his sight, and follows Jesus, glorifying God; and all the people seeing the miracle give praise unto God.

No. 78.—East of Jericho.—Luke xviii. 35—43.

[Ch. xviii. 34, ? lxxvii. p. 236.]

35 And it-came-to-pass, that as he was-come-nigh unto Jericho, a-certain blind-man sat 36 by the way-side begging: and hearing the-multitude pass-by, he-asked what it meant.
37 And they-told him, that Jesus of-Nazareth passeth-by. 38, And he-cried, saying, Jesus, 39 thou Son of-David, have-mercy-on me. And they which-went-before rebuked him, that he-should-hold-his-peace: but he cried so-much the-more, Thou Son of-David, have-40 mercy-on me. And Jesus stood, and-commanded him to-be-brought unto him: and 41 when-he'-was-come-near, he-asked him, saying, What wilt-thou that-I-shall-do unto-42 thee? And he said, Lord, that I-may-receive-my-sight. And Jesus said unto-him, 43 Receive-thy-sight: thy faith hath-saved thee. And immediately he-received-his-sight,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xviii. 35. blind man—The mental blindness of Jesus' own disciples, respecting the object of the present journey, had just before been noticed by Luke, ver. 31—As related by Matthew and Mark, we learn that Jesus had since spoken words well calculated to open the eyes of their understandings to discern the nature of his kingdom, and the great purpose of his approaching death at Jerusalem—see Mt. xx. 25—8, [Mk. x. 42—5,] § 77, p. 238—but it was not until after his resurrection that their eyes were opened, Lu. xxiv. 25—32, 41—5, §§ 94, 5, 8.

37. Jesus of Nazareth—This was the usual designation of Jesus—see Mk. i. 24; Lu. iv. 34; Mk. x. 47; Mt. xxi. 11; Jno. xviii. 5, 7; Mk. xiv. 67; Jno. xix. 19; Mk. xvi. 6; Lu. xxiv. 19—Peter applies it to him in Ac. ii. 22; iii. 6; iv. 10; x. 38—so Stephen, vi. 14—and also Paul, xxii. 8; xxvi. 9.

38. Son of David—In the same manner was he addressed by the two blind men mentioned Mt. ix. 27—31, § 36, p. 285—see also xx. 30, § 79, p. 242—When Jesus asked the scribes, 'What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?' They say unto him, The Son of David,' Mt. xxii. 42, § 85, p. 306—It had been predicted that the Christ should open the eyes of the blind, Is. xlii. 7.

39. so much the more, &c.—He exemplified the truth of our Lord's saying with regard to importunity in prayer, ch. xi. 5—10, § 63, p. 152.

have mercy on me—In the predictions concerning the Son of David, mercy had been greatly spoken of—see Ps. lxxxix. 1, 2, &c.—We read also of the mercies of David,' 2 Chr. vi. 42—' the sure mercies of David,' Is. lv. 3.

40. Jesus stood—It would seem that Jesus had been eagerly pursuing his journey—see Mk. x. 32, § 77, p. 235, in accordance with what he had said, Lu. xiii. 33, § 66, p. 179—but he stops to perform an act of mercy—and again, Mk. x. 49, § 79, p. 243.

42. Receive thy sight—as when he said, 'Let there be light: and there was light,' Ge. i. 3.

thy faith—It is by faith that spiritual vision also is received—Jesus accounted for the previous blindness of the disciples, when he said to the two in the way to Emmaus, 'O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?' ch. xxiv. 25, 6, § 94.

NOTES.

Lu. xviii. 35. As he was come nigh unto Jericho. See ADDENDA, p. 244, 'On the miracles performed at Jericho.'—Comp. ch. xix. 1, § 79, p. 242. From which it is clear that Jesus, after the cure of the blind man, 'entered and passed through Jericho.' And then it was that, according to Mk. x. 46, § ib., 'As he went out of Jericho' Jesus healed 'blind Bartimæus.' These two miracles are recorded together by Mt. xx. 29—34, § ib.

37. Jesus of Nazareth. This was ordinarily applied to Jesus, who was only known to the multitude as the son of Joseph and Mary, who lived at Nazareth.

38. Jesus, thou Son of David. The blind man had probably heard of the miracles of Jesus. There was a general expectation at this time that the promised Messiah would appear, who was to be of the family of David.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xviii. 35—8. It is observable that in the account of our Lord's entry into Jericho, no notice should be taken of the priests and Levites, who so abounded in that city; but only of a blind man, who sat by the way-side begging. It may be, that though occupied in the words of scripture, and the numerous rites of their religion, which pointed to Christ as 'the end of the law for righteousness;' they yet saw not in Jesus of Nazareth the long-promised Redeemer, to whom the law and the prophets gave witness. They may have, many of them, remained in spiritual blindness: not so this poor man; who, immediately when he heard of Jesus of Nazareth, cried out, 'Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me.' It often happens, that those who have fewer means of improvement, make, by a diligent use of these, greater advancement than those who seem to be more favourably circumstanced. Let this consideration, while it gives encouragement to those, lead these to self-distrust and self-examination.]

39—41 ver. The poor man had no plea, but upon the Divine mercy. This plea, however, was, and is, effectual. Let us persevere in earnest supplication for 'the sure mercies of David.'

[42 ver. How precious is that faith which hath its strength from the promises of God in Christ Jesus; and which draws forth the hand of Omnipotence in our behalf! If we would, like this poor man, experience its power, let us ponder deeply the words of God, and be careful observers of what is passing around us, in accomplishment of his revealed will.]

* 'This and the miracle related separately by St. Mark are united into one account by St. Matthew.'—See § 79, ADDENDA, p. 244, 'On the miracles performed at Jericho.'

IT IS A GREAT MERCY TO BE AWAKENED TO PRAYER BY CURIOSITY OR BY ANY OTHER MEANS.

JESUS IS EVER READY TO TAKE NOTICE OF, AND GRANT RELIEF UNDER, ALL OUR TROUBLES.

and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when-they-saw it, gave praise unto God.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xviii. 43. followed him—so also in the case mentioned, Mk. x. 52, [Mt. xx. 34,] § 79, p. 244.

glorifying God—His former cry unto Jesus as Son of David, appears to have been turned into song, and to have given direction to the voice of the multitude—see Mt. xxi. 9, &c., § 82, p. 262—this was the more likely to be the case when two, or perhaps more, as having, in exactly the same circumstances, experienced the very same mercy, were altogether one in gratitude and praise—see § 79, p. 242, ..3.

all the people, . . . gave praise, &c.—so when mercy is obtained to enjoy the light of the Lord's countenance as supplicated, Ps. lxvii. 1, 2—see border—again will the cry be raised, as in ver. 3, 5, 'Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.'—Is. xxix. 18, .9, 'And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the LORD, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.'—Again, xxxv. 5, 6, in connection with the opening of the eyes of the blind, the forthcoming song of joyful praise is mentioned, of which a pledge was given in Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, with hosannas to the Son of David.

It is remarkable that this promised rejoicing in the Lord is spoken of in connection with the valley of Achor; where, or in the neighbourhood of which, Jesus with his disciples must now have been—see the prediction, Hos. ii. 15.

NOTES.

Lu. xviii. 43. And all the people, . . . gave praise, &c. Happy are those to whom Christ has given eyes that they may know him; feet that they may follow him; a tongue that they may praise him; and a heart that they may love him! A true conversion is followed by an edifying life.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xviii. 43. If we have experienced blessing from Jesus, let us evince our gratitude by following him, glorifying God. Let us be equally fervent in praise, as we have been earnest in prayer.

Let us be thankful, not only for the mercies bestowed upon ourselves, but for those which are given unto others. Let our song of gratitude mingle with theirs, declaring that we have the mind of Him, whose power to save we have witnessed. And let us not rest until the prayer is heard and answered. 'Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee,' Psa. lxvii. 3.

'Observe the readiness of Christ to help those who earnestly seek his mercy. Let us act in behalf of our souls as this blind man did in behalf of his sight, and seek salvation in Christ. Let us apply to the Son of David, without losing a moment: he is passing by, and we are passing into eternity, and probably will never have a more favourable opportunity than the present. Great is his compassion in bearing with the infirmities, ignorance, and frowardness of his people. Yea, he is ready to heal such as apply to him for relief in the firm faith of his infinite ability and willingness to save. No meanness, no distemper, can stop the egress of his special love. And if he welcome, no matter how many thousands wickedly discourage us. And if he succour, supply, save, and enlighten soul or body, cheerfully should we follow him in our way to eternal rest.'

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.

JERICHO.—Lu. xviii. 35, p. 240.

JERICHO.—Moses, from the top of Pisgah, in the plains of Moab, on the east of Jordan, had a sight of the valley of Jericho, often mentioned in the Old Testament; and is about seven miles west of Jordan. Near to this city the Israelites crossed the Jordan, when they entered into the land of Canaan, Josh. iii. 16. It was the first city taken from the Canaanites by Joshua, who razed it to the ground, and denounced a severe curse on the person who should rebuild it, vi. 20—6. This curse was literally fulfilled, in the days of Ahab, upon Hiel the Beth-elite, by whom the city was rebuilt, 1 Ki. xvi. 34. After this event it was ennobled by the schools of the prophets, which were established there, 2 Ki. ii. 5; and near it was a large but unwholesome spring, the waters of which rendered the soil unfruitful, until they were cured by the prophet Elisha, ver. 21; and from that time they have become exceedingly wholesome and fertilizing. The neighbouring country is said to have been the most fruitful spot in Canaan, yielding, besides the necessaries of life in great abundance, the best palms—from which it was sometimes called 'the city of palm-trees,' 2 Chr. xxviii. 15; Ju. i. 16; iii. 13—also excellent honey, and the renowned balsam tree, the most precious production of the earth. The air here was exceedingly mild; for when it snowed in the other provinces of Palestine, and was so cold that they were obliged to make use of the warmest clothing, the inhabitants of this district went about clad in linen only. Hence, as Josephus tells us (Bell. v. 4), the territory of Jericho was called θεῖον χωρίον, a heavenly country, resembling paradise for beauty of prospect, fertility of soil, and felicity of climate.

The city was the next in rank in Judæa to Jerusalem, in the reigns of the last kings of Judæa. It was adorned with a royal palace, in which it is supposed Herod the Great died. It had a riding school, in which the Jewish nobility learned to ride; and an amphitheatre, and other magnificent buildings.

It is situated in a bottom, in that vast plain which was named the great plain (which marks the propriety of the expression, went down from Jerusalem, Lu. x. 30), and is about nineteen miles distant from the capital of Judæa. Jericho was one of the cities appropriated for the residence of the priests and Levites, 12,000 of whom dwelt there; and as the way thither from Jerusalem was rocky and desert, it was greatly infested with thieves; this circumstance marks the admirable propriety with which our Lord made it the scene of his beautiful parable of the good Samaritan, Lu. x. 30—7, § 60, p. 146.

Some ruins mark the probable site of ancient Jericho, about half an hour distant from Riha, a modern miserable and filthy village, consisting of houses with merely four walls of stones taken from the ancient ruins, and loosely thrown together, with flat roofs of corn stalks or brushwood spread over with gravel. The flocks and herds are brought into them at night, which render them filthy.

A writer of modern date says, 'The route from Jericho to Jerusalem is in many places fatiguingly steep and difficult; and so shut in by mountain heights and savage crags, that scarcely any breeze can reach the traveller; and when, as in our case, the vertical sun sends down his beams into the narrow passes, the heat reflected from the chalky sides of the ravine scorches like a furnace.'—See 'A Pastor's Memorial,' &c., p. 327.

SECTION 79.—(G. 58.)—[Lesson 72, continued.]—HAVING ENTERED AND PASSED THROUGH JERICHO, JESUS HEALS ANOTHER BLIND MAN.—Matt. xx. 29—34. Mark x. 46—52. Luke xix. 1.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xx. 29. Mk. x. 46. Lu. xix. 1. Jesus passes through Jericho.

— xx. 29, 30. — x. 46, 47. When Jesus is departing from Jericho with his disciples, accompanied by a great number of people, another blind man, Bartimæus, the son of Timæus, receives the same information respecting who is passing, and makes the same application to Jesus.

— xx. 31. — x. 48. Many charge him to hold his peace; but, like the other, he cries out the more, 'Thou Son of David, have mercy on me.'

— xx. 32. — x. 49. Jesus, as before, stands still, and commands the blind man to be called. Some, probably, of those who had witnessed the previous cure, call the blind man, saying, 'Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.'

——————— — x. 50. The blind man, casting away his garment, rises, and comes to Jesus.

— xx. 32, 33. — x. 51. Jesus having asked what he wishes him to do for him, the man answers, 'Lord, that I might receive my sight.'

— xx. 34. — x. 52. Jesus says, 'Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole.' Immediately the man receives his sight, and follows Jesus in the way.

Although the blind man mentioned, Lu. xviii. 35—43, was cured when Jesus was about to enter Jericho, and the other, Mk. x. 46—52, was given sight when Jesus was departing from Jericho, yet the two cures are so remarkably similar in other respects, that they may very well be described together, as it is supposed they are by Matthew.

1. Both the persons cured are blind men.
Mt. xx. 30. Mk. x. 46. Lu. xviii. 35.

2. Both are by the side of the way by which Jesus is passing. — xx. 30. — x. 46. — xviii. 35.

3. Both are begging. — x. 46. — xviii. 35.

4. Both have the same report given them respecting Jesus. — xx. 30. — x. 47. — xviii. 37.

5. Both recognise him as the son of David, and cry for mercy.
Mt. xx. 30. Mk. x. 47. Lu. xviii. 38.

6. Both are rebuked by the multitude.
— xx. 31. — x. 48. — xviii. 39.

7. Both cry the more to Jesus for mercy.
— xx. 31. — x. 48. — xviii. 39.

8. In both cases Jesus commands the blind man to be brought.
— xx. 32. — x. 49. — xviii. 40.

9. Both have the same question put to them by Jesus. — xx. 32. — x. 51. — xviii. 41.

10. Both ask to receive their sight.
— xx. 33. — x. 51. — xviii. 41.

11. Both receive the same gracious answer from Jesus. — xx. 34. — x. 52. — xviii. 42.

12. And upon receiving sight, both follow Jesus.
— xx. 34. — x. 52. — xviii. 43.

The cure of the two blind men, as narrated by Matthew, is supposed to be that of the two, as recorded, the one by Mark, and the other by Luke. Some, however, look upon it as distinct from both;—as a third miracle of the same kind, intended to teach what the Jewish priesthood, who formed a very large proportion of the population of Jericho, required to be taught, that spiritually they were blind to what was passing; that faith in Jesus of Nazareth, as the son of David, the promised Messiah, was needed to open the blind eyes, and turn from darkness unto light. A succession of events of the same kind was calculated to awaken attention. God not unfrequently teaches in the same manner still. By a rapid succession of events similar in character, he draws the attention of the careful observer to some particular law of his moral government, which is in danger of being disregarded; if men are awakened, enlightened, and brought to repentance, then the evil which is threatened may be averted, and the offered good be enjoyed. But if, like the Jewish rulers, men continue obstinately blind, then the things that belong to their peace are hid from their eyes; they stumble on in darkness, and fall, and are broken, and snared, and taken, and destroyed.

No. 79.—West of Jericho.

MATT. xx. 29—34. (Ch. xx. 28, ¦ lxxvii. p. 239.)	MARK x. 46—52. (Ch. x. 45, ¦ lxxvii. p. 239.)	LUKE xix. 1.
	46 And they came to Jericho:	[a] And Jesus entered 1 and passed through Jericho. [b]
29 And as they departed from Jericho,	[b] and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples a great multitude followed him.	and a great number of people,
30 And, behold, two blind	blind Bartimæus, the son of

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 30. blind, &c.—see the discourse of Jesus, upon the spiritual blindness of the Jews, on the occasion of his opening the eyes of a man born blind, when last in Jerusalem, Jno. ix. § 55, p. 109—and again, xii. 35, 6, § 82, p. 269—see also his lament over Jerusalem when it was being given over to judicial blindness, Lu. xix. 42, § ib., p. 264, 'If thou hadst known even thou, at least in this thy day,' &c.

NOTES.

Lu. xix. 1. And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.—See Lu. xviii. 35, § 78, p. 240.

Mk. x. 46. As he went out of Jericho. See Mt. xx. 29, 'And as they departed from Jericho.' Mark did not notice the healing of the blind man before entering Jericho. Matthew appears to have delayed the fact until now, and unites it with the miracle on blind Bartimæus, as recorded by Mark.—See ADDENDA, p. 244, 'On the miracles,' &c.

Blind Bartimæus, the son of Timæus. 'Bar,' in Syriac, sig. 'son,' and is equivalent to 'Ben' in Hebrew; we also find it in Bar-jona and other names; so we affix the word in Johnson, Jackson, &c.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xx. 30; Mk. x. 46. Let us not, like the Jewish rulers, say, 'We see,' when we are spiritually blind. May we know when we are poor, and miserable, and blind; and know also when Jesus is present to heal.

When we perceive much passing in the world, the true character and tendency of which we do not know, let us not be contented to remain in darkness; let us endeavour to ascertain the truth; and espe-

FOR GOD HATH NOT APPOINTED US TO WRATH, BUT TO OBTAIN SALVATION BY OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, WHO DIED FOR US, THAT, WHETHER WE WAKE OR SLEEP, WE SHOULD LIVE TOGETHER WITH HIM.—1 Thess. v. 9, 10.

MATT. XX. 31—.3.	MARK X. 47—51.
men sitting by the way-side,	Timæus, sat by the highway-side begging.
when-they-heard that	And when-he-heard that it-was 47
Jesus passed-by,	Jesus of-Nazareth,
cried-out, saying,	he-began to-cry-out, and say,
Have-mercy-on us, O-Lord,	Jesus, thou son of-David,
thou son of-David.	have-mercy-on me.
31 And the multitude rebuked επετιμησεν	And many charged επετιμων 48 them, because they-should-hold-their-peace:	him that he-should-hold-his-peace:
but they cried the-more, saying,	but he cried the-more a-great-deal,
Have-mercy-on us, O-Lord, thou son of-David.	Thou son of-David, have-mercy-on me.
32 And Jesus stood-still, and-called them,	And Jesus stood-still, and- 49 commanded him to-be-called.
	And they-call the blind-man, saying unto-him, Be-of-good-comfort, rise; he-calleth thee.
	And he, casting-away his garment, 50
	rose, and-came to Jesus.
and said,	And Jesus answered 51
What will-ye that-I-shall-do unto-you?	and-said unto-him,
33 They-say unto-him, Lord Κυριε,	What wilt-thou that-I-should-do unto-thee?
that our eyes may-be-opened.	The blind-man said unto-him, Lord Ραββουνι, that I-might-receive-my-sight.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. x. 46. begging—It had been predicted of Christ, Ps. lxxii. 12, 'He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper.'—cxiii. 5—8, 'Who is like unto the LORD our God, who dwelleth on high, 6, who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth! 7, He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill; 8, that he may set him with princes, even with the princes of his people.'

47. son of David—see on Lu. xviii. 38, § 78, p. 240—This cry of the blind men seems to have given a tone to the voice of the multitude—see Mt. xxi. 9, § 82, p. 264, 'The multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest.'—The cry, 'Hosanna to the Son of David,' was carried even into the temple; where also the blind and lame came unto him, and were healed, ver. 14, .5, § ib. p. 266.

NOTES.

Mk. x. 46. Sat by the highway side begging. Jericho was a very populous city, and being in the direct road from Jordan to Jerusalem, we need not wonder that there should be a blind beggar on each side of the city, through which there was such a constant and great thoroughfare.

47. Thou son of David. It was foretold in the prophets, that when Messiah came, he should give sight to the blind: and by those thus afflicted his coming would be greatly desired: and their belief that Jesus was the very Christ, would be greatly strengthened by his fame, that was everywhere spread abroad.

Mt. xx. 31. The multitude rebuked them, ... And so they will all who begin to cry after the Son of David: but let those who feel their need of him cry the more, otherwise they will come short of a cure.

Mk. x. 49. Be of good comfort. From what they had often witnessed, they knew that Jesus had determined good towards the blind man: they therefore encouraged him.

50. Casting away his garment. That is, his outer garment. He threw it off full of joy and expectation, and in order to reach Jesus the sooner. A graphic trait, evidently proceeding from an eye-witness, like that in Jno. vi. 10, § 40, p. 313, 'Now there was much grass in the place.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

cially let us make application to the great Source of light and life for the opening of our eyes, that we may witness his wondrous working, according to his word; and see to follow Jesus in the way. May we be able to sing, as in Lu. i. 78, 9, 'The dayspring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.'

[Mk. x. 46. Of the three who are specially noticed in connection with this passage of Jesus through Jericho, two were beggars—comp. Lu. xviii. 35, § 78, p. 240; only one was rich, xix. 2, § 80, p. 246, and he had, like the other two, taken up his position by the way side. The power of the Saviour could both bring down the rich man to humble confession and ministration, and raise up the beggar, to lead the song of triumph, 'Hosanna to the Son of David:'

47 ver. It is good to make use of what means of information we have. Had these men not made inquiry with regard to the great subject of prophecy, and had they not compared therewith reports respecting Jesus of Nazareth, we have no reason to suppose that they would have called on him for help.

Mt. xx. 30; Mk. x. 47. Let us be so acquainted with the prophetic scriptures as to be able to recognise their fulfilment, under whatever name the fulfilment is known among men.

[Mt. xx. 31; Mk. x. 48. Let us be diligent in making a practical use of our knowledge. Let us act as if we knew our relation to Christ, the promised Son of David, the Dispenser of mercy. Let us with David say, 'With thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light.' Ps. xxxvi. 9.]

Mt. xx. 31. The prayer of faith made by the blind men unto Jesus as the Son of David, may have been regarded by many as importunate mendicity, which ought not to be encouraged. Let us not be hasty in rebuking the cry of the poor. Those men, whose cry was rebuked by the multitude, seem to have been given to lead their song upon Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Let us persevere in our supplications unto Jesus for the needed mercy, whatever the outward or inward discouragement. And let us know the preciousness of the present opportunity, which may never return.

Mt. xx. 32; Mk. x. 49. Let us, in obedience to his command, use what means we have of coming unto Jesus; and let us make no delay, for Jesus is waiting to be gracious. He waits for us to follow him glorifying God.

[Mt. xx. 32. Is Jesus saying to us, 'What will ye that I shall do unto you?' Ought we to choose that which these blind men had been accustomed to receive, that which the world may either give or take away; or shall we choose that which only Jesus can give, the

MATT. XX. 34.	MARK X. 52.
34 So Jesus had-compassion on-them, and-touched their eyes:	And Jesus 52 and immediately their eyes received-sight, and they-followed him. (Ch. xxi. 1, § lxxxii. p. 260.)	said unto-him, Go-thy-way; thy faith hath-made-thee-whole. And immediately he-received-his-sight, and followed Jesus in the way. (Ch. xi. 1, § lxxxii. p. 260.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xx. 34. compassion, &c., touched, &c.—The motive, 'compassion,' and the external means, his touching their eyes, are noticed only by Matthew; the other two evangelists notice only the instrumentality of faith.

Mt. x. 52. thy faith—said also to the woman who had an issue of blood twelve years, ch. v. 34, § 36, p. 282—and see on Lu. vii. 50, § 30, p. 232—and to the two blind men mentioned, Mt. ix. 29, § 36, p. 285, Jesus said, 'According to your faith be it unto you.'—Without faith matters of the utmost importance, past, present, and future, remain unseen—It is absolutely necessary to spiritual vision, He. xi. 1—3, Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. 2, For by it the elders obtained a good report. 3, Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.'—Faith, when obtained, is to be exercised, xii. 2, in 'looking unto Jesus the author [or, beginner] and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.'

NOTE.

Mt. xx. 34. They followed him. i. e., became his disciples. This was an evident proof of their recovery, and of their gratitude. They did not return home as many had done for whom some miracle had been wrought; but they followed Christ that they might be further edified and confirmed; and for others' sakes, that they might confirm them, by testifying the power and mercy of Jesus: this St. Luke, ch. xviii. 43, calls 'glorifying God.' True faith is ever thankful; and this is the end of our illumination and spiritual healing by Christ, that we may follow him as our Light.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

power to walk in the light of his countenance? It makes little matter what the words of our prayer have been; it is the will that Jesus inquires after. It is good not only to be earnest in our prayers, let us also be definite in our desires unto God for things agreeable to his will.]

Mt. xx. 33. Let us diligently improve the opportunity given us of receiving blessing from Him who came to give the recovering of sight to the blind; and who is exalted that He may shew mercy.

Mk. x. 52. Let us see the importance of faith in coming unto Jesus; faith in these men laid hold upon the promises given with regard to the son of David; faith linked these promises with Jesus of Nazareth; and faith urged them to cry for the promised mercy to Him who had the power and willingness to save.

Mt. xx. 34; Mk. x. 52. Let us not only apply to Jesus for healing, but continue to look unto him as our example, whose steps we delight to follow, glorifying God, and inviting others to join with us in praising our blessed Redeemer

[Let us be profited by the signs of our times, the intimations of his purposes, and of our duty, which God is giving us in the course of his providence. And because of all his wonderful works in behalf of ourselves and others, let us be led to glorify Jesus; praying that soon his mercy may be universally known, and be also gratefully acknowledged by all the people.]

ADDENDA.

ON THE MIRACLES PERFORMED AT JERICHO.

'In the account of these miracles, St. Luke is apparently at variance with St. Mark, and St. Matthew apparently with St. Luke and St. Mark, Lu. xviii. 35—43; Mk. x. 46—52; Mt. xx. 29—34: the former, on the question of place, or as to where the miracle was performed; the latter, on the question of person, or who was the subject of the miracle, whether one person or more.

'St. Luke's language is so clear as to the performance of his miracle, before the procession of Jesus arrived at Jericho, and St. Mark's, as to the performance of his, when the procession had passed through it, that it would be a vain attempt to prove the locality of these two events the same; or that either miracle was performed as Jesus drew nigh to Jericho, or as Jesus was leaving Jericho. It would be equally preposterous to suppose that he made any stay at Jericho, and so might perform one miracle as he first came thither, and another as he finally left it again. The first verse of the nineteenth chapter of St. Luke is decisive that Jesus passed through Jericho without stopping. . . . . The two accounts, then, are still as much at variance as before; relating to the course of one and the same procession from the banks of the Jordan, through Jericho, without interruption, until it stopped for a time with Zacchæus. Or if the miracle in St. Luke is to be considered the same with that in St. Mark, they are even more at variance than before.

'I know no means, therefore, of reconciling either of them with the other, or both with St. Matthew, except one; a mode of reconciliation, handed down from the earliest times, and not more recommended by its antiquity than by its simplicity—which is to suppose two miracles, each at distinct times, and on a different individual; the one as our Lord was approaching to Jericho, the other as he was leaving it again; the former related by St. Luke, the latter by St. Mark, and both by St. Matthew; each, as distinctly related, related in its proper place; and the two, as related conjointly, not absolutely related out of theirs: for one or the other of them, even in St. Matthew, must be regularly related, though the other were not.

'The general conciseness of this evangelist in the account of miracles has been often pointed out already; and on the principle of this conciseness, his blending together the history of two miracles, the same in kind, very similar in their circumstances, and almost contiguous in point of time; if any such events really occurred; was a priori to be expected from him: in which case it is much the most probable that he would connect the history of the first performed with the history of the last; that is, would relate the last performed in its place, and the first out of it, rather than do the contrary. The approach of Jesus to Jericho St. Matthew does not even mention, but the departure from it again he does;

unless therefore he had purposely travelled out of his way, in order to relate the first miracle for its own sake (to do which would not have been consistent with his practice), he had not even an opportunity of recounting that, until the time arrived for the history of the other. Nor when he is proceeding to recount them both, or to give the history of one out of its order, along with the history of the other in it, does he employ any formula of transition which establishes an immediate succession. He ushers in the account by merely his idiomatic expression, καὶ ἰδού, a phrase which, in numberless instances, is simply a note of admonition to the reader, preparing him for something remarkable about to be related, but is no note of time or sequence, as referring him to the order and connection of events.

'It remains, then, that the details of the first miracle, as a part of the general narrative, could be given by St. Luke alone. St. Matthew's account, as to the number of the miracles, was complete; as to their order, was irregular. St. Mark's account, as to the order, was regular; as to the number, was incomplete. St. Luke's serves an equal purpose with respect to both, filling up the deficiency in St. Mark, and reducing to order the irregularity in St. Matthew. . . . . Had St. Matthew affirmed that both his miracles were wrought after Jesus left Jericho, then indeed St. Luke's miracle could not have been one of those, though it might still have been master of fact. Had St. Luke asserted that the name and description of his blind man were Timæus, the son of Timæus, his authority would have been committed recta fronte with St. Mark's. But as it is, each account in particular may be true; and all in common may be consistent with each other.

'The nature of the case is enough to prove that it is by no means an improbable supposition, which merely assumes that two blind men, neither of whom had any means of subsistence, except from the benevolence of private charity, might have been found sitting and begging in the vicinity of a city like Jericho, in point of size only one-third, or not much more, less than Jerusalem (Epiphanius Oper. I. 702; Cuilanichæi, lxxxii.), and containing probably more than 100,000 inhabitants, and upon two such thoroughfares as the road from the Jordan to Jericho, and from Jericho to Jerusalem. But even in this case it is much more likely they would be found apart than in conjunction. The similarity then of the different accounts is no proof of the identity of these occasions to which they belong, for they could not have been otherwise than similar. It was this very similarity which brought them readily within the scope of St. Matthew's plan of conciseness in such details as these, and induced him to blend them both into one narrative. The particulars of the account which he has thus given in reference to both, must have been individually applicable to either of them.'—Greswell, Vol. III. pp. 45—50.

'The writers of these common accounts were too well aware of their mutual agreement and consistency, to be afraid of the effects of an apparent collision; they neither apprehended it themselves, nor supposed it would be objected to them by others. In all such instances they either borrow light, or they communicate it; they are as critically adapted to each other in what they omit, as in what they supply: sometimes presupposing the circumstances already on record, preliminary to their own accounts; at other times connecting, separating, and defining the old, by additional particulars of their own.'—Ibid. Vol. I. pp. 45, 6.

'After the reunion of the three accounts, which is on the way from Jericho to Jerusalem, the miracle on one blind man before the entrance into Jericho; the visit to Zacchæus; the parable of the mine; many circumstances in Passion week, before the last supper; many circumstances at that supper; at the agony in the garden; at the trial of Jesus before the Sanhedrim; at his examination before Pilate; on the way to Calvary; on the morning and evening of the day of resurrection; are peculiar to St. Luke, and include large and integral portions of his account.'—Ibid. Vol. I. p. 21.

SECTION 80.—(G. 59, 60.)—[Lesson 73.]—On the evening of the same day, the sabbath, as it appears, being at hand, Jesus stops at the house of Zacchæus.* While there, Jesus delivers the parable of a nobleman and his servants.—Luke xix. 2—27.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Lu. xix. 2—4. Zacchæus, a rich publican, seeks to see Jesus; obstacles in the way; his manner of overcoming them.

—— 5. Jesus on seeing him says, 'to-day I must abide at thy house.'

—— 6. Zacchæus receives him joyfully.

—— 7. They murmur, saying of Jesus, 'He was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.'

—— 8. Zacchæus evinces his faith by his works; and his willingness to shew mercy and do justly.

—— 9. Jesus says, 'This day is salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham.'

—— 10. The purpose of Christ's first advent.

—— 11. The occasion of Jesus delivering the parable of 'A Nobleman and his Servants.'

—— 12. Jesus likens himself to a nobleman going to 'a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.'

—— 13. He leaves with his ten servants ten pounds, telling them to occupy till his return.

—— 14. His citizens send a message after him, saying, 'We will not have this man to reign over us.'

Lu. xix. 15. Having received the kingdom he returns, and calls his servants to account.

—— 16, .7. The first comes, saying, 'Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds;' he is commended, and given authority over ten cities.

—— 18, .9. The second says, 'Thy pound hath gained five pounds;' he receives the like commendation, and is given the rule over five cities.

—— 20, .1. One who has kept his pound, which had been laid up in a napkin, gives as the reason of his conduct, the fear that he had of his master, as being 'an austere man;' &c.

—— 22, .3. The unprofitable servant is judged out of his own mouth.

—— 24, .5. The pound is taken from him, and given to him who gained the ten.

—— 26. He that hath in reality shall have more; he that hath only in privilege, shall lose what he has.

—— 27. Our Lord foretells the destruction awaiting his enemies, the unbelieving Jews, who would not that he should reign over them.—Comp. ver. 14, p. 248.

* It appears when Jesus had passed through Jericho, he afterwards stopped with Zacchæus. This fact is enough to prove that the house of Zacchæus was somewhere between Jerusalem and Jericho. This was the seventh, preparatory to resting the night of the eighth, Nisan. The reason of his stopping at all was not merely to distinguish the exemplary faith and goodness of disposition displayed by this publican's recent conversion, but also the necessity of observing the sabbatic rest. —Greswell, Vol. III. Dies. xxxviii. pp. 62, .3.

THE GLORY OF THE LORD SHALL ENDURE FOR EVER: THE LORD SHALL REJOICE IN HIS WORKS.—Psa. civ. 31.

FOR AS THE HEAVEN IS HIGH ABOVE THE EARTH, SO GREAT IS HIS MERCY TOWARD THEM THAT FEAR HIM.—Psa. ciii. 11.

No. 80.—(G. 59.)—On the evening of the same day, the sabbath being at hand, Jesus stops at the house of Zacchæus. West of Jericho.—Luke xix. 2—10.

2 And, behold, there was a-man named Zacchæus, which was the-chief-among-the-
3 publicans, and he was rich. And he-sought to-see Jesus who he-was: and could not 4 for the press, because he-was little of-stature. And he-ran before, and-climbed-up into 5 a-sycamore-tree to see him: for he-was to-pass that way. And when Jesus came to the place, he-looked-up, and-saw him, and said unto him, Zacchæus, make-haste σπεῦσας, 6 and-come-down; for to-day I must abide at thy house. And he-made-haste, and-came-
7 down, and received him joyfully χαίρων. And when-they-saw it, they-all-murmured, 8 saying, That he-was-gone to-be-guest with a-man that is a-sinner. And Zacchæus stood, and-said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of-my goods I-give to-the poor; and if I-have-taken-any-thing from-any-man-by-false-accusation ἐσυκοφάντησα, I-restore him

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 2. publicans—The character of a publican was esteemed vile by the Jews; 'an heathen man and a publican' are spoken of as alike cut off from religious communion, Mt. xviii. 17, § 53, p. 83—Surprise was before expressed that Jesus should eat with such, ix. 11, § 36, p. 277.

he was rich—He who had just before been mentioned as having become a follower of Jesus was a poor man, ch. xviii. 35, § 78, p. 240, and § 79, Mk. x. 46.

4. ran before—Thus he got over one obstacle to his seeing Jesus—the press; and by climbing up into a sycamore tree, he overcame the other obstacle—his being 'little of stature,' ver. 3, supra.

5. Zacchæus, make haste—Our Lord was accustomed to refer to the meaning of names—see on Mt. xvi. 17, 8, § 50, p. 37—The name Zacchæus means pure, or righteous, or to make clean; and there may have been something in the look and tone of our Saviour, which told Zacchæus that he was now to be in reality that which his name expressed; that he must make no delay in cleansing himself, for to-day he must have as his guest 'the Holy One of God.'—Looking upon the matter in this light, we may regard the declaration of Zacchæus, in ver. 8, infra, as an answer to this requirement of our Lord, that he should purge himself from his covetousness, and ill-gotten gains; and without any notice of ceremonial cleansing, he is declared to be accepted, ver. 9, infra.

6. And he made haste, &c.—The Lord had said, ver. 5, 'Make haste,' 'and he made haste;' 'come down,' 'and (he) came down;' 'to-day I must abide at thy house;' correspondent to which it is said of Zacchæus, that he 'received him joyfully.'—See the manner in which Abraham received the three men, Ge. xviii. 1—8; one of whom appears to have been the Lord, come down to put the men of Sodom to the test, ver. 20, 1, as He was now about to prove the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Jno. xv. 21—4, § 87.

7. murmured—as before, when the Pharisees had left our Lord's disciples to hunger, they blamed them for plucking and rubbing ears of corn upon the sabbath—see on 'If ye had known,' &c., Mt. xii. 7, § 24, p. 190—No one seems to have offered to receive our Lord when passing through Jericho; so that after having passed through that city of priests and Levites, he had to say to a publican, 'to-day I MUST abide at thy house.' Then, when he had submitted to the necessity of the case, they murmur, saying, 'That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.'—When Levi (Matthew) the publican made him a feast, the scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, 'Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?' Lu. v. 30, § 22, p. 168.

8. Zacchæus stood, and said, &c.—It is likely that Zacchæus had been convinced that Jesus was the true Messiah, partly by the knowledge Jesus had manifested of him when he called him by name: and Zacchæus now declares his willingness to obey the implied call to act worthy of his name—He walks humbly with the Lord in obeying his voice, and in now making his vow before him; he shews mercy in giving the half of his goods to the poor; and he does justly in restoring fourfold to those he had wronged —This sacrifice made by the publican is that which the Lord requires, not the ceremonial cleansings of the Pharisees, nor the sacrifices in which the priests and Levites were engaged, Mi. vi. 6—8, 'Wherewith shall I come before the LORD? . . . . 8, He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?'

give to the poor—De. xv. 11, 'For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.'—See the direction given to the rich young ruler, who seems not to have known that which was revealed to Zacchæus—'what is good,' Mt. xix. 16—22, § 75, p. 223.

taken any thing—The Baptist had said to the publicans who would prepare for the kingdom, 'EXACT no more than that which is appointed you,' ch. iii. 13, § 7, p. 53—see also the exhortation given to believers, 1 Th. iv. 6, 'That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter: because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.'

NOTES.

Lu. xix. 2. A man named Zacchæus. The name Zacchæus is Hebrew, and shews that this man was a Jew. The publicans, therefore, were not all foreigners.

The chief among the publicans. Or, 'a chief publican.'—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

3. To see Jesus who he was. 'To see what sort of a person Jesus was.'

4. A sycomore tree. See on ch. xvii. 6, § 70, p. 207.

7. A man that is a sinner. That Zacchæus was a publican was sufficient reason for his being called a sinner.—See on ver. 2, SCRIP. ILLUS.

8. Stood. Stood forth in the midst of the company, as about to make a solemn declaration of his purposes of charity and restitution.

The half of my goods. This was not a proclamation of his righteousness, nor the ground of his righteousness; but it was evidence of the sincerity of his repentance.

By false accusation. May probably signify any

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xix. 2, 3. There were several obstacles in the way of Zacchæus' coming to Jesus: 'he was rich;' that, however, did not prevent, as he was willing to mingle with the crowd of Jesus' poor followers; then 'the press' was so great, and 'he was little of stature;' but having a willing mind, these obstacles vanished, and he did see Jesus.

4 ver. The means to which this rich man had recourse were such as were equally accessible to the poorest.

5 ver. Jesus, by his omniscience, made himself known to Zacchæus. He called him by name; he discovered his knowledge of Zacchæus' character, and his ability and willingness to entertain him: such knowledge of him by a stranger was well calculated to fix that attention upon Jesus, which had already been drawn to him by curiosity.

6 ver. Is it true that in every poor follower of Jesus requiring refreshment and shelter, our Lord is conferring upon us the same honour that he did upon Zacchæus? and do we 'make haste,' 'come down,' and receive 'him joyfully?'

7 ver. Nothing is said of any entertainment received by Jesus from any of the multitude of priests

BE YE NOT UNWISE, BUT UNDERSTANDING WHAT THE WILL OF THE LORD IS.—Eph. v. 17.

TO DO GOOD AND TO COMMUNICATE FORGET NOT: FOR WITH SUCH SACRIFICES GOD IS WELL PLEASED.—Heb. xiii. 16.

Luke xix. 9—11.

9 fourfold. And Jesus said unto him, This-day is-' salvation'-come to this house', forso-
10 much-as he also is a-son of-Abraham. For the Son of man is-come to-seek and to-save that which-was-lost.

(G. 60.)—Jesus, in the house of Zacchæus, delivers the parable of a nobleman and his servants.—Luke xix. 11—27.

11 And as-' they '-heard these-things, he-added and-spake a-parable, because he was nigh

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 8. fourfold—Under the law, it was appointed that if a man stole a sheep, and killed or sold it, he should give four sheep instead, Ex. xxii. 1—So David, when pronouncing sentence upon the rich man who had taken away the poor man's ewe lamb, 2 Sa. xii. 6, said, 'He shall restore the lamb fourfold.'

9. salvation, &c.—The Son of God was called Jesus, Mt. i. 21, § 2, p. 13, 'for he shall save his people from their sins.'—This salvation Zacchæus had experienced—see ver. 8, supra.—Temporal salvation came to the household of Lot, the kinaman of Abraham, in his exercising hospitality to the strangers, the Lord's messengers, who had come to prove the condition of the cities of the plain, Ge. xix. 1—3, 15—22—see on ver. 6, supra.

to this house—For the sake of righteous Joseph, the house of his Master was blessed, Ge. xxxix. 5—even the prison was favoured for his sake, ver. 22, 23—He was also for the salvation of all Egypt, xlvii. 25—When the Lord opened the heart of Lydia to receive the word of God, not only was she baptised, but her household, and she constrained Paul and his companions to come into her house, and abide there,

Ac. xvi. 14, 15—When the jailor asked what he should do to be saved, he was directed in the way of salvation, not only for himself but his house, ver. 31.

he also—The others mentioned immediately before were the blind beggars, who by their faith had manifested that they were children of Abraham—see §§ 78, 79, pp. 240—4.

son of Abraham—Abraham is 'the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also,' Rom. iv. 11—Ga. iii. 7, 'Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.'—Abraham manifested his faith by his works, Ja. ii. 21—4—Zacchæus acted like his father Abraham, in gladly receiving the Lord as his guest—see on ver. 6, supra.

10. For the Son of man, &c.—see on Mt. xviii. 11, § 53, p. 82.

11. nigh to Jerusalem—Our Lord himself denominates Jerusalem 'the city of the great King,' Mt. v. 35, § 19, p. 126—The subject of discourse on the Holy Mount was His 'decease which he should kind of oppression, especially under the pretence of law. We may judge from this that he had been rapacious and unjust. The word translated, 'to take by false accusation,' is the same with that translated, 'to accuse falsely,' ch. iii. 14, § 7, p. 53.

NOTES.

Lu. xix. 8. I restore him fourfold. This was the measure of restitution required by the law of Moses from one who, having stolen a sheep, had killed or sold it, Ex. xxii. 1; 2 Sa. xii. 6. It was a larger measure than that required in other cases, Ex. xxii. 4; Le. vi. 2—5; Nu. v. 6, 7; and Zacchæus thus shews his readiness to make the most ample amends to all whom he may have wronged.

[Such conduct is required as an evidence of a man's conversion to God. A man who has hoarded ill-gotten gold, if he becomes a Christian, will be disposed to return it, or if that cannot be done, to do good with it. A man who has injured others—who has cheated them, or defrauded them, even by due forms of law—must, if he be a Christian, be willing, as far as possible, to make restoration. Zacchæus might have obtained this property by the decisions of courts of justice; but he now felt that it was wrong, and his conscience told him that in order to his being a true penitent he must make restitution.]

9. This day is salvation come to this house. This family. Christ himself, its author, Is. xlix. 6; Lu. ii. 29, 30, § 4, p. 25; or, as is most usual, the blessings of salvation: Ac. iv. 12; xxviii. 28.—See Prac. Ref.

[And although Zacchæus is just after spoken of in the third person, yet we have only to suppose that the latter clause was addressed to the by-standers, and the former to Zacchæus, whose declaration required some reply. At any rate we may suppose that our Lord's answer was so worded, as that, though directed to Zacchæus, it might also apply to the by-standers; who, indeed, seem alluded to in the reproof implied in the words καθότι, &c., q. d., Rom. iii. 11.—Bloomf.]

[By οἶκος is meant the family, including the master of it, by whose example and precepts all its members would be brought into the way of salvation, Ac. x. 2.]

10. Son of man. No title is more frequently given to the Saviour than this. When he speaks of himself, this is the most common appellation by which he is known. Probably there was a reference to Da. vii. 13. The Saviour chose to adopt an appellation which identified him with ourselves. He. ii. 14—6, 'Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; 15, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. 16, For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham.'

To seek and to save. That cannot be a matter of indifference to any who call themselves Christians, which the Son of God sought by his toils and his death.

11. Spake a parable. This parable is very similar to that of the talents, Mt. xxv. 14—30, § 86, but will be found differing in several interesting particulars.—See Scrip. Illus., infra; also Addenda, p. 251.

Nigh to Jerusalem. Zacchæus probably lived in the high road from Jericho to Jerusalem, which who inhabited Jericho. In their blindness they seem to have allowed the Lord of glory to pass, without offering him one act of hospitality. He must of necessity, self-invited, become the guest of a publican; then doubtless they would be among the first to cry out, 'That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xix. 8. Justice and mercy are the two great claims which the truth makes upon our property; and if these have been openly neglected, it is proper that we as openly confess our fault, and declare our purpose of instant amendment.

9 ver. By works was the faith of Abraham made manifest; and they are the true children of Abraham who have the same living faith made manifest by works. The Lord honoured Zacchæus, as he had honoured Abraham, by becoming his guest. To us may it also be said, 'I was a stranger, and ye took me in.'—See Mt. xxv. 35.

[Let us see what it is that constitutes a man 'a son of Abraham.' It is not ceremonial religion, but heart conversion to God, ever ready to manifest itself 'in newness of life.'—Forasmuch as any man is a son of Abraham, salvation comes to his house, and to-Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should ἀμέλει immediately appear αναφαινεσθαι. He-said therefore, A-certain noble ἐνγένης man went into a-far country to-receive for-himself a-kingdom, and to-return. And he-called his ten servants, and-delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy Πραγμα-ευσασθε till I-come. But his citizens hated him, and sent a-message after him, saying, We-will have this man to-reign over us. And it-came-to-pass, that when he was-returned, accomplish at Jerusalem,' Lu. ix. 31, § 51, p. 54—He had plainly intimated that his death by crucifixion was now to take place at Jerusalem, Mt. xx. 18, .9, § 77, p. 235.

LUKE xix. 12—.5.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 11. kingdom of God—Jesus had been accustomed to discourse to them concerning the kingdom of God, Mk. i. 14, .5, § 16, p. 107; Mt. v. 3—10, § 19, p. 120—..2; Lu. ix. 11, § 40, p. 311.

immediately appear—or shine forth—so after his resurrection the disciples asked him, saying, 'Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?' Ac. i. 6—The apostle Paul had to warn the believers at Thessalonica against being deceived on this point, 2 Th. ii. 1—3—but by Peter we are warned, that in the last days the danger will be rather in the opposite direction, 2 Ep. iii. 3, 4.

12. went into a far country—so the householder who let out his vineyard to husbandmen, Mt. xxi. 33, § 84, p. 286—comp. also with the parable of the talents, xxv. 14—30, § 86, p. 347—comp. Lu. xix. 12—27, with Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43.

to receive for himself a kingdom, &c.—Da. vii. 14, 'And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.'

NOTES.

would leave the distance to Bethany to be travelled the next day, comparatively easy. From the narrative, 'he was nigh to Jerusalem.'

Lu. xix. 11. Jerusalem. The capital of Judæa, and where it was supposed should be the throne of Messiah's kingdom.

That the kingdom of God, &c. The expectation was universal in all the land, and in every part of the world into which any of the Jewish people had been scattered, that about this time a great deliverer would rise up in Judæa, and subdue all the kingdoms of the earth, and make the Jews rulers over all. The fact of such multitudes joining themselves to Jesus would be greatly calculated to fix all hopes in him as the expected Messiah.

This parable was delivered to prepare the minds of his followers for the withdrawal of our Lord for a time from the earth.

[Here it is plainly intimated that the king had first to go and receive for himself the kingdom, before it would be established in the promised peace, blessing, and glory; and that there was, in the interim, to be a time of probation for those who shall be received into the possession of honour and power in the kingdom, at their Lord's return.]

12. A certain nobleman. Represents Christ, the Son of God, who is gone into heaven to receive from his Father the kingdom, and to return with power 'to execute judgment' (Jude 15) upon mankind.—Lonsdale and Hale.

Nobleman. Properly, 'one well born;' noble by birth.

and to return—see the assurance of his return given by two angels at the time of his ascension, Ac. i. 11, 'Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.'—See also Peter's statement in the temple, iii. 19—21—His return was represented by that of the high priest, from the inner sanctuary, He. ix. 24—.8.

13. his ten servants—Only three are mentioned in the parable of the talents, Mt. xxv. 15, § 86. p. 347.

ten pounds—Here all seem to have received alike; whereas, in the parable of the talents, one receives five, another two, and a third only one talent, each according to his several ability, ibid.

Occupy till I come—It is in the view of the coming of our Lord, that we are called upon to exercise diligence and faithfulness with regard to his word—see in both the beginning and in the end of the Apocalypse, ch. i. 3; xxii. 6, 7, 18—20.

14. his citizens—'His own received him not,' Jno. i. 11, § 7, p. 47.

We will not have this, &c.—When Pilate asked them, 'Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?' they prayed him that he should rather release Barabbas, Mk. xv. 9, 11, § 90, p. 450—When he said again unto them, ver. 12, 'What will ye then that

To receive for himself a kingdom. Probably in allusion to the kings of Judæa, who used to go to Rome to receive the investiture of their kingdom from the Roman emperors, and then return to Judæa in the full glory of their character. Herod the Great went the long journey to Rome, to obtain the kingdom of Judæa from Anthony, in which he succeeded; and, having received the kingdom, he afterwards travelled from Judæa to Rhodes, in order to obtain a confirmation of it from Cæsar, in which he was equally successful. Archelaus, the son and successor of Herod, did the same; and to him our Lord most probably alluded.—And see on ver. 14, next page.

13. His ten servants. Rather, according to the original, 'ten of his servants.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Ten pounds. 'Ten minæ.' The mina was equal to sixty shekels. Valuing the shekel, therefore, at half-a-crown, the ten minæ would amount to 75*l.* of our money. The exact amount of it is of no consequence to the application of the parable.

Occupy till I come. πραγματευσασθε ἕως ἐρχομαι, i. e., 'do business with it;' 'trade with it;' 'be busy,' so the word properly signifies.

14. His citizens. Or countrymen; the Jewish people, who professed to be the subjects of the kingdom of God.

And sent a message after him. The word seems to imply, their sending ambassadors to a superior court, to enter their protest against his being admitted to the regal power. In such a solemn manner other members of the family come to be blessed along with him.—Of Abraham the Lord said, 'I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him,' Ge. xviii. 19.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xix. 11. We ought to study well the nature of the Redeemer's kingdom, that we may the better understand our present position, and form just expectations of the future. Our Lord was drawing near to Jerusalem, and his numerous attendants supposed that he, as the long-promised son of David, was about to set up his kingdom in outward splendour; but he would not that his disciples should be deluded with hopes that were not to be realized: he would have their expectations grounded upon the truth of God.]

12 ver. As to his personal presence, Jesus is now absent from the earth; but it will not be always so: as truly as he has gone 'to receive for himself a kingdom,' he will return.

13 ver. See margin.

14 ver. Let us never by disobedience to the commands of our Lord, practically acquiesce in the message of the rebellious Jews.

15 ver. Our Lord will assuredly return, having

LUKE xix. 16—22.

having-received the kingdom, then he-commanded these servants to-be-called unto-him, to-whom he-had-given the money, that he-might-know how-much every-man had-16 gained-by-trading διεπραγματευσατο. Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound 17 hath-gained προσειργασατο ten pounds. And he-said unto-him, Well, thou-good servant: because thou-hast-been faithful in a-very-little, have-thou authority εσθι 18 εξουσιαν εχων over ten cities. And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath-19 gained εποιησε five pounds. And he-said likewise to-him, Be thou also over five cities.
20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I-have-kept εἰχον
21 laid-up in a-napkin: for I-feared thee, because thou-art an-austere man: thou-takest-up 22 that thou-layedst-not down, and reapest that thou-didst not sow. And he-saith unto-him, Out-of thine-own mouth will-I-judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

I shall do unto him whom ye call the king of the Jews?' 13, 'They cried out again, Crucify him.' 14, 'And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.'—When he asked, 'Shall I crucify your king?' the chief priests answered, 'We have no king but Cæsar,' Jno. xix. 15, § 90, p. 443.—In the parable of the talents, Mt. xxv. 14—30, § 86, p. 347, there is no mention made either of the nobleman's receiving a kingdom, or of his citizens' rejecting him.—See ADDENDA, p. 251.

Lu. xix. 15. he commanded, &c.—Our Lord, in other parables as well as in this, and in that of the talents, intimated his design of calling his servants to account, Mt. xviii. 23, § 53, p. 84; Lu. xvi. 2, § 69, p. 196.

16. thy pound—Ps. cxv. 1, 'Not unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake.'

17. good servant! . . . faithful, &c.—so to him who had doubled the five talents it is said, Mt. xxv. 21, § 86, p. 348, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant;' &c.

ten cities—Correspondent to the ten pounds which he had gained, ver. 16, he is given rule 'over ten cities' in the kingdom his Lord had gone to receive, ver. 12—so also, he that had gained five pounds is made ruler over 'five cities,' ver. 18, 19.—There is here a difference in the measure of reward, correspondent to the degree of improvement; whereas in the parable of the talents, no difference is marked, either in the degree of improvement, or the measure of reward, in the case of the faithful servants—Each produces simply a double of what was given him. Mt. xxv. 20, 22, § 86, p. 348, and each receives the same commendation, the same appointment to rule, and the same invitation into the joy of his lord, 21, 23.

20. kept laid up in a napkin—In the parable of the talents, the slothful servant hid his talent in the earth, ver. 24, 25, § ib.

21. feared thee—1 Jno. iv. 18, 'There is no fear in love;'

austere man, &c.—see 'hard man,' &c., Mt. xxv. 24, § 86, p. 349.

22. Out of thine own mouth, &c.—Job xv. 5, 6; Mt. xii. 37, § 31, p. 238—'With the froward thou wilt shew thyself froward,' Ps. xviii. 26.

NOTES.

did the Jews protest, as it were, before God, that Christ should not reign over them.

Our Lord manifestly alludes to the case of Archelaus, who went to Rome to solicit the emperor that he might be reinstated in his father's kingdom; and the Jews sent an embassage, consisting of fifty men, after him, to petition and plead against him. As this fact was fresh in the memory of the Jews, it makes this parable much more striking. He returned to his kingdom, and took ample vengeance on the Jews.

[Lu. xix. 17. Over ten cities. This is to be understood of the kingdom the nobleman had just received. His former trustiest and most faithful servants he now represents as being made governors, under him, over a number of cities, according to the capacity he found in each, which capacity was known by the improvement of the mina.—A. C.]

19. Be thou also over five cities. According as he had proved himself able to do well, so was he appointed to increased usefulness, to enlarged opportunity of blessing others.

[20. Kept laid up in a napkin. A towel. He means by it that he had not wasted it, nor thrown it away, but had been very careful of it. This unprofitable servant, both in his conduct and defence, appears to be well represented in the Romanist, who, under the pretence of fearing to abuse the word of God, wraps it up in the unanimous consent of the fathers, and refuses to make use of it, as commanded by the Giver of every good gift. Nor are those less to blame who, acknowledging the goodness of the word, and our freedom of access thereto, still continue in its neglect, both as to study and practice.]

21. An austere man. αὐστηρός The word signifies, 1, (as applied to feeling) dry, harsh; 2, (as applied to the taste) sour and crabbed. In a metaphorical sense it signifies severe and cynical; or, in another view, hard and griping.—Bloomf.

[Thou takest up, &c. This is exegetical of the preceding; and, like that in Mt. xxv. 24, seems to have been a proverbial mode of expression, to denote a grasping disposition. Hence it well designates that grasping spirit which exacts from others what it does not give to others, as in the case of a slave-master, who requires that personal service of his slave, which he does not give him the power to renreceived the kingdom. Are we ready to be brought before him, to render an account of the use we have made of the good word of his grace?

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xix. 16. Have we so prized and used the whole word of God, as that it has brought forth its fruit in our hearts and lives? Have we exercised ourselves in, and according to, the scriptures, for the advantage of our families, of the church, and of the world? Have we sought to make gain for God of every opportunity we have been given in his good providence? And have we found that our treasure was not spent, but that it increased abundantly, the more we occupied ourselves therein? Have we thereby been enabled, not only to know our duties and our privileges, but also to enjoy his works of creation, the arrangements of his providence; and, above all, the display of his wisdom and goodness in the scriptures themselves?]

17 ver. How blessed to have it said by the righteous Judge, 'Well, thou good servant!' Lord, help us by thy grace, that by our faithfulness we may prove our faith sincere.

[18 ver. As the first said, 'Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds,' so the second speaks not of his own doings, but of that which the pound hath made. It is the Lord's treasure which hath done all. Let the word of God have free course, and good will result.]

19 ver. See margin.

[20 ver. Even the slothful servant had been careful to preserve the pound entire as he had received it; but this did not avail, neither will it with any, to boast that they have been given the keeping of the oracles of God, when they have wrapt them up from those that would gladly have made use of them.]

[21 ver. Let us beware of having hard thoughts of God, and of having low thoughts of the good seed of his word; so as to be, like the poor Romanist, more afraid of abusing our privileges, than desirous of coming by means of the scriptures, into communion with the mind of God.]

THE LORD HATH PREPARED HIS THRONE IN THE HEAVENS; AND HIS KINGDOM RULETH OVER ALL.—Psa. ciii. 19.
EACH FAITHFUL SERVANT WILL, IN HIS DEGREE, HAVE HIS PROPER PLACE ASSIGNED TO HIM IN THE KINGDOM.

Luke xix. 23—.7.

knewest that I was an-austere man, taking-up that I-laid-not-down, and reaping that 23 I-did-not-sow: wherefore then gavest-not-thou my money into the bank τραπεζαν, 24 that at-my coming I-might-have-required επραξα mine-own with usury? And he-said unto-them that-stood-by, Take from him the pound, and give it to-him that-hath ten 25 pounds. (And they-said unto-him, Lord, he-hath ten pounds.) 26, For I-say unto-you,
That unto-every-one which hath shall-be-given; and from him that-hath not, even that 27 he-hath shall-be-taken away from him. But those mine enemies, which would not that-I should-reign over them, bring hither, and slay κατασφαξατε them before me.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 22. Thou knewest, &c.—see also what is said to the wicked and slothful servant, Mt. xxv. 26, .7, § 86, p. 349.

24. Take from him the pound, &c.—so with regard to the unoccupied talent, ver. 28, § ib.

25. he hath ten pounds — Although the king called the servants before him to know 'how much every man had gained by trading,' ver. 15, they appear to have been allowed to retain what they had gained, as well as that they were rewarded.

26. unto every one which hath—comp. Mt. xiii. 12, § 32, p. 245; xxv. 29, § 86, p. 350.

27. those mine enemies—Ps. ii. 4, 5, 'He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the LORD shall have them in derision. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure.—ver. 10—.2, Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. 11, Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling. 12, Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.'—cx. 1, 2, &c., 'The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. The LORD shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.'—2 Th. i. 7—9, 'And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, 8, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: 9, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power;'

slay—This had before been threatened, Is. i. 20, 'But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.'—ver. 28, 'And the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.'—lxvi. 4, 'I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.'—Jude 14, .5, 'And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.'

NOTES.

der. In the application it well represents the language of the murmuring sinner against God, for demanding more of man than he has given him power to perform.—See Rom. ix. 19, 20.—Bloomf.]

Lu. xix. 22. Thou knewest that I, &c. This (as Mr. Greswell observes) 'is an exquisite specimen of irony and refutation at the same time. It meets and exposes his plea on the proper principle of the argumentum ad absurdum, and the argumentum ad hominem, both; admitting apparently the truth of his premises, yet shewing that, even on his own assumptions, they led to a conclusion condemnatory of himself.'—Ibid.

23. Into the bank. τράπεζαν. The word denotes, 1, a table; 2, a money-table, or counter, on which the money-changers did their business. But as those counters were, no doubt, provided with tills for the deposit of money, so τράπεζα came to mean, 3, a place for the investment of money; just as our bank, derived from ἄβαξ, originally only denoted a counter.—Ibid.

With usury. συν τοκῳ, 'with its produce,' i. e., what the loan of the money is fairly worth. But this is no plea for usury, that is, the taking of such interest as implies any degree of oppression or extortion.

[Mr. Greswell has shewn at large that the accessions which should have been made to the trust, under such circumstances, would be as liable to be claimed by the original owner, as the trust itself; and the mere non-use of his trust, according to his intentions, would be as much a violation of his rights, and as contrary to his wish, as its positive abuse in any conceivable way.—Bloomf.]

26. Every one which hath. I.e., every one that hath gained, and vice versa. This seems to be a proverbial expression. It means, whosoever rightly improves what is committed to him, shall receive more, or shall be rewarded.

27. But those, &c. By the punishment of those who would not that he should reign over them, is denoted the ruin that was to come upon the Jewish nation for rejecting the Messiah, and also upon all sinners for not receiving him as their King.—See on the parable of the talents, in Mt. xxv. § 86, pp. 347—.50.

And slay them. This part of the parable received its first fulfilment in that terrible vengeance which fell upon the Jews, for their rejection of Christ, when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Romans. It will be again fulfilled, when Christ, sitting 'in the throne of his glory,' shall punish 'with everlasting destruction,' 2 Th. i. 9, all those who shall have refused to receive him as their Saviour and their King.—Lonsdale and Hale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xix. 22. By knowing how we now deal with his word, we may know how our Lord will deal with us hereafter. He will delight in those who delight in it; but to the froward, he will shew himself froward 23 ver. What we cannot, or will not, ourselves occupy, we should at least allow others to use. By withholding from others, we make ourselves poor indeed.

24, .5 ver. He who is received into the kingdom, retains what he had gained in the stewardship.

26 ver. Let us have the treasure of God in our hearts and in our lives; if it remain merely in our hands, it will be lost to us for ever.

27 ver. If we desire to be partakers of the kingdom with Christ, let us not by our evil tempers, or unholy lives, shew that we will not have him to reign over us.

ADDENDA.

PARALLELISM OF LUKE xix. 12—27, § 80, p. 248, AND MATTHEW xxv. 14—30, § 86, p. 347.

12	He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.		For the kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country,
13	And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.		who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.
14	But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.
			Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.
			And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.
			But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.
15	And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.		After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.
16	Then came the first,		And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.		saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.
17	And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.		His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.
18	And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.		He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.
19	And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.		His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.
20	And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:		Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord,
21	for I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.		I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed:
		25	And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.
22	And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:	26	His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed:
23	wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?	27	thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.
24	And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.	28	Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.
25	(And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)	29	For
26	For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.		unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.
		30	And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth
27	But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

AND, BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME, TO GIVE EVERY MAN ACCORDING AS HIS WORK SHALL BE.—Rev. xxii. 12.

THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH; BUT THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD.—Rom. vi. 23.

SECTION 81.—(G. 61—.3.)—[Lesson 74.]—AFTER THE EXPIRATION OF THE SABBATH, SIX DAYS BEFORE THE PASSOVER, THAT IS, ON SATURDAY, THE EVENING OF THE NINTH OF NISAN, JESUS ARRIVES AT BETHANY.* HE IS ENTERTAINED AT SUPPER,† AT BETHANY, IN THE HOUSE OF SIMON THE LEPER; AND IS ANOINTED THERE BY MARY THE SISTER OF LAZARUS: THE DISCIPLES, AND ESPECIALLY JUDAS ISCARIOT, TAKING OFFENCE THEREAT, ARE REPROVED BY HIM. PARTICULARS OF THE FIRST DAY IN PASSION WEEK, SUNDAY, THE NINTH OF THE JEWISH NISAN.—Matt. xxvi. 6—13. Mark xiv. 3—9. Luke xix. 28. John xi. 55—xii. 11.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jesus, having spoken the parable of the nobleman and his servants, in which he plainly shewed that faithfulness is required in his stewards, and will be rewarded in the kingdom: and that woe is awaiting those who will not have Christ to reign over them—see Lu. xix. 11—27, § 80, p. 247—

Lu. xix. 28. Our Lord proceeds on his journey to Jerusalem; where, from the case of Judas, and that of the Jewish priesthood, it is made to appear, that not without cause had our Lord spoken of the wicked servant, and of the bitter opposition to the enemies of the King.

Jno. xi. 55, .6. In order to prepare for the approaching passover, many have come up from the country 'to purify themselves.' They seek Jesus, and talk among themselves, saying, 'What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?'

— xi. 57. The chief priests and the Pharisees have commanded, that if any man know where Jesus is, he should report it, in order that he may be apprehended.

— xii. 1. Six days before the passover Jesus arrives at Bethany, where Lazarus is, whom he raised from the dead.

Mt. xxvi. 6. Mk. xiv. 3. Jno. xii. 2. A supper is prepared for Jesus in the house of Simon the leper: Martha waits on the guests; Lazarus sits at the table with Jesus.

— xxvi. 7. — xiv. 3. — xii. 3. While Jesus is sitting at table, Mary takes an alabaster box of the very precious ointment called spikenard, and pours it on his head; thus expressing her hope and desire that he should be King. She also anoints his feet, and wipes them with the hair of her head, performing thus, in the humblest manner, the most expressive act of hospitality.—Comp. a former anointing of the feet, Lu. vii. 36—50, § 29, pp. 229—32. The house is 'filled with the odour of the ointment.' — xxvi. 8, 9. — xiv. 4, 5. — xii. 4—6. One of the twelve, Judas Iscariot, who is the treasurer of the company, has been in the habit of purloining, and seems to be aggrieved at not being consulted in Mary's disposal of her property. He calls the anointing of Jesus a 'waste of the ointment;' but knowing that it would not be seemly to own the true cause of his chagrin, he pretends to be indignant because the ointment had not been sold, and the price of it made use of for the poor. This incipient Antichrist seems in danger of infusing his own spirit into others of the apostles.

— xxvi. 10—.3. — xiv. 6—9. — xii. 7, 8. It does not appear that any of the disciples are prepared to vindicate the right of Jesus to the anointing; or the right of the woman to confess Jesus as the Christ, without consulting Judas as to her manner of doing so. But Jesus himself takes up the matter, and improves it for the benefit of his disciples in all time coming.

1st. He vindicates the right of private judgment—the right of the woman to serve the Saviour with her best, independent of the control of even the apostles, saying to them, 'Let her alone.'

2nd. He questions the motives of the disciples in troubling the woman, Mt. xxvi. 10; Mk. xiv. 6.

3rd. He testifies that Mary (who chose the good part) hath wrought a good work on him, Mt. xxvi. 10; Mk. xiv. 6.

4th. He teaches that we need never want an opportunity of doing good; but that the present action is most opportune: he is not to be with them always, Mt. xxvi. 11; Mk. xiv. 7; Jno. xii. 8.

5th. The woman has done according to her ability, Mk. xiv. 8.

6th. It is the anointing for Jesus' burial, which he now for the first time predicts, Mt. xxvi. 12; Mk. xiv. 8; Jno. xii. 7.

7th. Mary has given an example of that generous devotion, free from Antichristian control, whereby the savour of the knowledge of Christ is to be universally diffused; so that wheresoever this gospel of the kingdom is preached throughout the whole world, this which Mary hath done is to 'be told for a memorial of her.'

Jno. xii. 9. Many of the Jews come to Bethany to see Jesus, and 'Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.'

— xii. 10, .1. The chief priests consult to put Lazarus as well as Jesus to death, because many attracted to Jesus by the miracle are led to believe on him.

No. 81.—(G. 61.)—After the expiration of the sabbath, six days before the passover, that is, on Saturday, the evening of the ninth of Nisan, Jesus arrives at Bethany.

LUKE xix. 28.

28 [a]And when-he-had-thus-spoken, he-went before, ascending-up to Jerusalem.[b]
(Ch. xix. 29, § lxxxii. p. 260.)

JOHN xi. 55—xii. 1.

(Ch. xi. 54, § lviii. p. 133.)

[b]And the Jews' passover was nigh-at-hand: and 55 many went-out-of the country-up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves. Then 56

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xi. 55. passover—see ADDENDA, § 6, pp. 4.3, .4, and ch. vi. 4, § 40, p. 311.

purify themselves—It appears from Nu. ix. 6—13; 2 Chr. xxx. 17—.9, that cleanness, according to the law of Moses, was required in all who kept the feast of the passover, at the time appointed, Ex. xii. 3—6.

NOTE.

Jno. xi. 55. To purify themselves. The 'many' who are here spoken of as going 'up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves,' were such as had contracted some legal defilement, from which they could not be purified without the performance of certain rites in the temple at Jerusalem.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

[FOR PRACTICAL REFLECTION, see margin.]

* 'He would thus arrive at Bethany on the first day of the week, as he arose again on the first day of the next: and as the former of these extremes was the beginning, so was the latter the close, of the period of his humiliation, or of what St. John calls ὡραν ἐαυτου, his hour;—and the close of the period of his humiliation was also the beginning of his glorification.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxviii. p. 69.—And see ADDENDA, p. 298.

† 'On the time of the unction at Bethany,' see ADDENDA, p. 258, infra.

JOHN xi. 57; xii. 1.

sought-they for-Jesus, and spake among themselves, as-they-stood in the temple, What 57 think ye, that he-will-'not'-come to the feast? Now both the chief-priests and the Pharisees had-given a-commandment, that, if any-man knew where he-were, he-should-shew it, that they-might-take him.

Ch. xii. 1. Then Jesus six days before προ ἑξ ἡμερων the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had-been-dead, whom he-raised from the-dead.

(G. 62.)—Jesus is entertained at supper, at Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper; and is anointed there by Mary the sister of Lazarus: the disciples, and especially Judas Iscariot, taking offence thereat, are reproved by him.

MATT. xxvi. 6—13. (Ver. 5, ∂ lxxxvi. p. 356.)	MARK xiv. 3—9. (Ver. 2, ∂ lxxxvi. p. 356.)	JOHN xii. 2—8.
6 [a] Now when-'Jesus'-was in Bethany, in the-house of-Simon the leper,[b]	3 And being in Bethany in the house of-Simon the leper, as-'he'-sat-at-meat,	[b] There they-made him a- 2 supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of-them-that sat-at-the-table-with him.
7 there-came-unto him a-woman having [c] an-alabaster-box of-[d]	there-came a-woman having an-alabaster-box of-	Then took 3 Mary [c] a-pound of-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xi. 56. spake among themselves—When before in Jerusalem, he had been the subject of much conversation among the people, who entertained contradictory opinions respecting him, ch. vii. 31, 32, 40—44, § 56, p. 94—6; x. 19—21, § ib., p. 117.

that he will not come to the feast?—Jesus had absented himself from Jerusalem at the preceding passover, ch. vi. 4, p. 311; vii. 1, § 52, p. 70—He had since then attended the feast of tabernacles, ver. 2—10, §§ 54, 55, pp. 87, &c., and of dedication, x. 22, 23, § 56, p. 120: but in both instances his life was threatened, viii. 59, § 55, p. 108; x. 31, § 56, p. 122—He had recently approached quite to the suburbs of Jerusalem, but he seems to have returned without entering the city, xi. 17, 18, 54, § 58, pp. 129, 133.

57. the chief priests and the Pharisees, &c.—They had, after the raising of Lazarus, gathered a council; upon which occasion Caiaphas uttered that remarkable prophecy respecting the expediency of Jesus being made a sacrifice for the people, ch. xi. 45—52, § ib., p. 132—ver. 53, 'Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.'

Ch. xii. 1. whom he raised from the dead—as described, xi. 17—44, § 58, pp. 129—132.

Mt. xxvi. 6. Bethany—A village on the east of the mount of Olives, adjoining Bethphage, Mk. xi. 1, § 82, p. 260—Jno. xi. 18, § 58, p. 129, 'Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off:'—Jesus, on the evening of the day upon which he made his public entry into Jerusalem, went out to lodge at Bethany, Mt. xxi. 17, § 82, [Mk. xi. 11.]

Simon the leper—Three of the evangelists are particular in the mention of a cure of leprosy by our Lord at an early period of his ministry, Mt. viii. 2—4, [Mk. i. 40—4; Lu. v. 12—4, § 21, p. 159.]—If Simon was the husband of Martha, and the family had this experience of the power of Jesus, it was not to be wondered at that he had been met by both Martha and Mary with the words, Jno. xi. 21, 32, § 58, pp. 129, 130, 'Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.'

Jno. xii. 2. Martha served—This was characteristic of Martha—see before, Lu. x. 38—42, § 61, pp. 149, 150.

NOTES.

Jno. xii. 1. Six days before the passover. See ADDENDA, p. 258, 'On the date of the arrival at Bethany.'

Bethany. About fifteen furlongs from Jerusalem.—See GEOG. NOT., § 58, p. 134.

Mt. xxvi. 6. Simon the leper. 'So called by surname, because he had been a leper, and had probably been cured by Christ. So Matthew was called the publican, as having been such.'—Bloomf.

'He was probably the husband of Martha, and either of them might be called indifferently the owner of the house.'—Greswell.

Jno. xii. 2. Supper. The meal ordinarily taken after sunset.

3. Mary. Comp. ch. xi. 2, § 58, p. 127. She was sister to Lazarus.

[This must not be confounded with that anointing of our Lord mentioned by Luke, vii. 36—50, § 29, p. 229. A careful comparison of that narrative with the present will discover much to distinguish the one event from the other. This is, Jno. xii. 3, attributed expressly to Mary, doubtless the sister of Martha and Lazarus; the woman in Luke is called a sinner. That seems to have occurred at Nain; this, Jno. xii. 1, in Bethany. Neither is the woman at Nain, who was a great sinner of that city, to be confounded with Mary, a woman of Magdala, who was afflicted in the providence of God, and out of whom seven devils were cast by his Son. Nor is there any more propriety in supposing Mary of Magdala to be the Mary who anointed our blessed Lord at Bethany on this occasion. Many have also distinguished the anointing of our Lord, as related by John, from the same as recorded by Matthew and Mark. It is more natural to suppose that Matthew and Mark having discontinued the history after Jesus left Jericho, until his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, for which there were powerful reasons, would not resume it to notice the fulfilment of prophecy, and should delay to refer to this anointing, until they had to record the iniquity of Judas, who, at the conclusion of our blessed Lord's ministry, covenanted with the chief priests, &c., to betray him, to satisfy his cupidity and covetousness, which first exhibited itself at the supper at Bethany.—See ADDENDA, p. 258, 'On the time of the unction at Bethany.']

Mt. xxvi. 7. An alabaster box. This denotes not a box but a cruse of ointment or unguentory, which (as we learn from the writers on antiquities) was much of the form of our oil-flasks, with a long and narrow neck.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Jno. xi. 57. Those among God's professing people who were the acknowledged guides in religion, and those who were the most strictly observant of outward purifications, were so far from the truth and from purity of heart, that they not only rejected him unto whom the law pointed, but laid it upon the consciences of the people that they should assist in his apprehension. Ought the people without inquiry to have been obedient to their guides? Should they not rather have each inquired, What is the truth? These divinely-appointed and state-supported teachers were verily guilty; but it is to be observed, that the people also were guilty in allowing themselves to be led by their venerable hierarchy. It is to be very-precious ointment, and poured it on his head,

MATT. xxvi. 8.

[f] as-he -sat at meat.[6]

MARK xiv. 4.
ointment of-spikenard
very-precious;
[e] and she-brake the box, and-poured it on his head.[f]

JOHN xii. 4.
ointment of-spikenard,
very-costly [c] πιστικῆς πολυτίμου.

[g] and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair; and the house was-filled with the odour of-the ointment.[h]

8 [h] But when-his disciples'-saw it,[i]

[i] Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should μέλλων betray him,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 3. ointment—Ca. i. 3, 'Because of the savour of thy good ointments thy name is as ointment poured forth.'

spikenard—This fragrant perfume is mentioned in the Song of Solomon, i. 12; the words might have been repeated by Mary: 'While the king sitteth at his table, my spikenard sendeth forth the smell thereof.' —In the enumeration of 'chief spices,' &c., iv. 13, 14, spikenard is repeatedly mentioned.

Mt. xxvi. 7. poured it on his head—To anoint the head with liquid perfume was customary at feasts—see Ps. xxiii. 5; Ec. ix. 8—It was expressive of love, Ps. cxxxiii. 1, 2—It was a common mark of respect from the host to his guests, Lu. vii. 46, § 29, p. 231— But there was something uncommon in the present anointing; by it Mary most probably expressed her faith in Jesus as being the Christ, the promised Messiah, Ps. ii. 2—6; xiv. 1—8, to which intention of the woman Jesus seems to allude, Mt. xxvi. 13, infra, where by 'this gospel' Jesus seems to mean that which was declared by the act of the woman, viz., 'that Jesus is the Christ.'

Jno. xii. 3. his feet—Mary was described, Lu. x. 39, § 61, pp. 149, 150, as one who 'sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.'—Jesus had now just ended a long and toilsome journey—see Lu. xiii. 33, &c., § 66, p. 179, so that the anointing of the feet may have been an act no less grateful to the Man of Sorrows, than expressive of Mary's homage to Jesus as the Christ— Jesus was sensible of such acts of kindness—see a former anointing of his feet by another woman, in the house of one Simon the Pharisee, Lu. vii. 36—50, § 29, pp. 229—32.

with her hair—This expression of humility and love had also been given by the woman mentioned, Lu. vii. 38, § 29, p. 230.

the odour—The apostle Paul, in speaking of the preaching of the gospel, says, 2 Co. ii. 14, 'Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.'—And see what our Lord says on the present occasion, Mt. xxvi. 13, infra, p. 257.

4. Judas Iscariot—He is called 'the son of perdition,' ch. xvii. 12, § 87, which is one of the titles of Antichrist, 2 Th. ii. 3—The name Antichrist, 1 Jno. ii.

NOTES.

['Pliny derives it from Alabastrum, a city of Egypt, near Thebes, where the finest oriental alabaster was found, and from which the stone derived its name. It should rather seem, that the city derived its name (at least among the Greeks) from the alabaster found in its neighbourhood, and there was probably a great manufactory of alabaster vases there. The utensil was so called, because it had been first, and was generally, made of a sort of marble called onyx (from being of the colour of a human nail), and also alabaster from its extreme smoothness. Thus the utensil came to be called ἀλάβαστρον, which it is probable was originally an adjective with the ellip. of σκεῦος. Afterwards, however, it came to be manufactured of any materials, as glass, metal, stone, and even wood.'—Bloomf.]—See on same, Lu. vii. 37, § 29, p. 230.

Mt. xxvi. 7. Very precious ointment. μύρου—βαρυτίμου. This was a thin and simple oleum, obtained from a highly aromatic plant, and so valuable (as appears from a passage in Horace), that as much of it as could be contained in a small box of precious stone, was considered as an equivalent for a large vessel of wine, and a handsome quota for a guest to contribute at an entertainment, according to the custom of antiquity.

Mk. xiv. 3. Spikenard. [A peculiar kind of the nard plant was so called from its spikes, or ears. The fragrant ointment made from it was celebrated even in the time of Solomon.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

And poured it on his head. This is noticed by Matthew and Mark. They were accustomed chiefly to anoint the head or hair. John says, xii. 3, that she 'anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair:' she probably poured it on both his head and his feet. To pour ointment on the head was common. To pour it on the feet was an act of distinguished humility and attachment to the Saviour, and therefore deserved to be particularly recorded. This is a desirable portion to understand in its harmony, for it is used by infidels to disturb our confidence in the inspiration of God's word. Taken separately, there seems discrepancy; placed in proper chronological succession, everything is beautiful and natural. Matthew and Mark mention the woman's anointing only his head, and the apostle John speaks of Mary's anointing only his feet. It is no unusual thing for one of these sacred historians to supply what was omitted by the others; and the apostle John writing last, might, for a further enlargement of the history, add the anointing of his feet: and so all this may very well consist with the histories being the same, as they appear to be in other circumstances.

Jno. xii. 4. Judas Iscariot. Wherever this apostle, who is described, ch. vi. 71, § 43, p. 334; xiii. 2, 26, § 87, p. 365, as the son of Simon, is mentioned in the New Testament, there is the addition of 'Iscariot' to his name, to distinguish him from the other apostle also named Judas, and mentioned under the name of Lebbæus, Mt. x. 3, § 27, p. 207.—See Cruden on the meaning of the name.

Mt. xxvi. 8. His disciples . . . had indignation. By a figure, called among rhetoricians enallage, the remembered that thus the whole nation was involved in the foulest deeds and the deepest destruction; to which also they were not a little hastened by the misinterpretation of a Divine utterance through the high priest, ver. 51, .2, § 53, p. 133. Thus are we taught not to place our confidence in spiritual gifts, any more than in sacredness of office, or long-established customs.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 7. Let us, at whatever cost, confess Jesus to be the Christ.

[Jno. xii. 3. The way had been long and rough by which Jesus had travelled on foot; and trying and difficult was the path he had yet to tread. His feet were doubtless in no less need of the ointment, than his head was worthy of the anointing. How great was the privilege to have, in such circumstances, an opportunity of ministering to the comfort of the KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS! Rev. xix. 16.]

May we be equally ready, as Mary was, to seize the favourable moment for performing an act of kindness.

THEM THAT SIN REBUKE BEFORE ALL, THAT OTHERS ALSO MAY FEAR.—[1] Tim. v. 20.
THE GOOD WORKS OF SOME ARE MANIFEST BEFOREHAND; AND THEY THAT ARE OTHERWISE CANNOT BE HID.—[1] Tim. v. 25.

Matt. xxvi. 9, 10.	Mark xiv. 4—6.	John xii. 5—7.
	Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?
	This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.
	4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste ἀπώλεια of the ointment made?
9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.	5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against ἐνεβριμῶντο her.
10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them,	6 And Jesus said,	Then 7 said Jesus,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

18—22, &c., against the anointing, may also have been derived from the conduct of Judas upon the present occasion—see ver. 5, 6, supra.—He was, like many pretended successors of the apostles, against the free expression of the woman's love to the Saviour —Judas would have had her contributions pass into the apostolic treasury, and not directly expended by the hand of the donor—This grasping disposition and desire to bring into bondage the children of God, is characteristic of false apostles, 2 Co. xi. 13, 20.—The true apostles, after some little experience, wished to be clear of money matters, and desired to give themselves 'continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word,' Ac. vi. 4.—The apostle of the Gentiles is very earnest in his exhortation to Timothy to avoid the temptation into which Judas fell, 1 Ti. vi. 9—11.

Jno. xii. 5. given to the poor—There was here an implied charge against Jesus, of encouraging this woman in waste, to the injury of the poor—Jesus might well say, as in Ps. cix. 3, 'They compassed me about also with words of hatred; and fought against me without a cause.'—Among these words, which are reported ver. 6—19, is the accusation of not remembering to shew mercy, of ill-using the 'poor and needy,' of, in effect, slaying 'the broken in heart:' in reference to which charge he says, ver. 21, 'But do thou for me, O God the Lord, for thy name's sake: because thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.'—Ver. 22, 'For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.'

6. bare—The Greek word here is the same with that used, ch. xx. 15, § 93, where, as here, it means to bear away—Judas seems to have made away with what was intrusted to his care—It was thus he exercised his thievish propensity, noticed above.

NOTES.

plural is put for the singular; it is, however, possible that Judas, who made the objection, was followed in the sentiment by the rest of the disciples. In the disciples it was regard for the poor, in Judas it was avarice.

Mk. xiv. 5. Three hundred pence Three hundred denarii. The denarius was a silver coin in use among the Romans, and introduced by them into the currency of the Jews. Three hundred denarii at sevenpence halfpenny were equal to about ten pounds English.

Jno. xii. 6. Had the bag. He seems to have been purse-bearer to Jesus and the apostles. It is said, 'He was a thief;' covetousness is the seed of robbery; shuts out from the kingdom of heaven.—See of Achan, Josh. vii. It has often since brought blighting and the curse of God upon the church, betrayed the cause of Christ, and drowned men in destruction and perdition.—See margin.

The bag. γλωσσοκομον, signifying a purse, scrip. Some say that as our Lord and his disciples lived on charity, a bag or scrip was provided to carry those pious donations by which they were supported. Judas was steward and treasurer to this holy company.—Comp. ch. xiii. 29, § 87, p. 372.

Bare. Rather 'bare away.'—See Script. Illus., supra. The meaning here is, that Judas, being 'a thief,' was in the habit of taking away, and applying to his own use money from the common purse.—Lonsdale and Hale.

Mt. xxvi. 10. When Jesus understood it. Γνους δε ὁ Ἰησους, 'but Jesus knowing it.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 4, 5. Let us suspect ourselves of worldliness when we feel inclined to accuse others of too great liberality in the cause of Christ.

[Niggardliness and censoriousness were among the first indications of that spirit in Judas which led him to sell his Master for thirty pieces of silver. There are some among ourselves who complain of the money spent in missionary labours, for the preaching of the gospel throughout the whole world, saying that it ought to be expended upon the poor at home. But would it not be better to endeavour to save from the superfluities lavished upon ourselves, that which is necessary to meet both demands, than to listen to the voice of the betrayer of his Lord, and accuser of the brethren?]

6 ver. Let us beware of pretending to have a care for the poor, while seeking to gratify our own covetousness. Let us look into our own hearts for the motives of our censoriousness, rather than to what others have to give, or how they give it.

[Judas Iscariot seems to have wonderfully shadowed forth that which was to come in the apostolic succession, the Antichrist—a word meaning either against the anointing, or, in the place of Christ. The name was applicable to Judas in both respects. He was literally against that anointing to which our Lord attached so much importance; and this because he desired the price to be put into his bag, in place of the ointment being poured upon his Lord. Like his many successors, he wanted to be the depository of the disciples' bounty. He wanted to restrain the free action of others in expression of their faith and hope and love. He would have their conduct regulated, not by principle, and as having individual responsibility, but by the rules of apostolic prudence. He thought all lost that did not come into the apostolic treasury. Let the leaders of religious societies be content to see the Saviour honoured, although it may not be to the increase of their revenue, nor in the way they would of themselves choose.]

MATT. xxvi. 11, .2.	MARK xiv. 7, 8.	JOHN xii. 8.
Why trouble-ye the woman? [m] [m] for she-hath-wrought a-good work upon me.	Let-her-alone; why trouble-ye her? she-hath-wrought a-good work on me. [n]	Let-her-alone· [m] against εις the day of-my burying ενταφιασμον hath-she-kept this. [o]
11 For ye-have the poor always with you;	7 [p] For ye-have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye-will ye-may do them good:	For the poor always ye-have with you; 8
but me ye-have not always.	but me ye-have not always.	but me ye-have not always.
12 [q] For in-that-she-hath-poured this ointment on my body, she-did it	8 She hath-done what she-could: [r] [q] she-is-come-aforehand προελαβε to-anoint my body for my burial προς το ενταφιασαι με	to the burying εις τον ενταφιασμον.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 10. Why trouble ye the woman?—Jesus bids the pretended philanthropist look to the real motives of his conduct, in making the ill-timed attack upon the woman—so in ch. xix. 17, § 75, p. 224, he questioned the motives of the rich young ruler, in calling him 'Good,' when having as little sense of Jesus' goodness, as Judas had of regard for the poor.

she hath wrought a good work—She of whom our Lord thus spake was the same of whom he had previously testified, Lu. x. 42, § 61, p. 150, 'Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.'

11. ye have the poor always—De. xv. 11, 'For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.'—Jesus for our sakes had made himself poor, 2 Co. viii. 9, 'Ye know the grace,' &c.

me ye have not always—Jno. xiii. 33, § 87, p. 373, 'Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.'—In opposition to the notion of the Romish church, that Christ is, as to his body, always present on the altar, see his words in addressing the Father after the last supper, xvii. 11, .2, 'And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.'—With regard to his divinity, however, he is alway with his disciples, Mt. xxviii. 20, § 96, 'Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.'

Mk. xiv. 8. what she could—2 Co. viii. 12, 'If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.'

aneinw—The embalming of Jacob is spoken of, Ge. l. 2, 3; of Joseph, ver. 26; of Asa, 2 Chr. xvi. 14—Ointments were prepared for the embalming of Jesus, Mk. xvi. 1, § 93; Lu. xxiii. 56, § 92; xxiv. 1, § 93; Jno. xix. 39, § 92, but it is worthy of notice,

NOTES.

Mk. xiv. 6. Why trouble ye her? &c. Why do ye put the woman to pain?

A good work. 'The good work which was to be done soon or never, was preferable to that of which the opportunities were continual.'

7. Ye have the poor, &c. Our Lord was ever mindful of the poor. One evidence of his Messiahship he stated was, 'to the poor the gospel is preached,' Lu. vii. 22, § 29, p. 223. But there is a time for every thing. Mary chose the proper time to shew her love to the Lord; and in its proper time and place those who love the Lord will not be backward in comforting the poor.

Me ye have not always. These words destroy the doctrine of transubstantiation; for if Christ were, as to soul, body, and divinity, truly in the host, the Roman Catholics would have Christ always with them.

Mt. xxvi. 12 She did it for my burial. See Jno. xii. 7. 'προς το ἐντ. ἐποίησεν. 'Εντιφιάζω signifies to make preparation for burying, by such observances (namely, washing, laying out, anointing, and embalming) as were used previously thereto The best commenta-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 7. When we feel inclined to interfere with others in the disposal of their property for the glory of God, and especially when we are ready to condemn them on account of neglecting our supervision or ministration, let us hear our Lord saying, as unto Judas, 'Let her alone.' Let us think of how we shall answer when he asks, as Mt. xxvi. 10, 'Why trouble ye the woman?' Let us ask ourselves, Will the discovery of our motives justify our conduct in being the troublers of Israel?

[Mt. xxvi. 10. It is worthy of remark, that the work which our Lord emphatically denominated good, was one for which there was no apostolic authority, but much against it. It was by a Christian woman's testifying, by a liberal use of her temporal means, that Jesus is the Christ. Did our Saviour reprove the woman for not paying some attention to the apostles in performing such an important act? No! but he reproved the apostles for wishing to interfere with the private disciple's liberty of action.]

Mk. xiv. 7. Let us ever remember that we have the poor with us always; and that to them we are to shew the kindness we would have shewn to the Lord himself had we been with Mary at Bethany.

Surely he is a deceiver, as gross as was the betrayer, who pretends that men may have always the bodily presence of Christ, as the Romish priests say they have in the mass; and surely the money for which masses are sold is as much misplaced as would have been the price of the spikenard put into the bag of Judas.

8 ver. What an eulogy was that which Jesus pronounced upon Mary, 'She hath done what she could!'

[Jesus had before predicted his humiliation, even unto death on the cross; he now adds the prediction of his burial; a remarkable fact, considering on the one hand the manner of his death, and on the other the expectations he had given his disciples reason to entertain of his rising from the dead. The two great truths of the gospel are expressed by the anointing and burial of Jesus. In his being buried, his work of humiliation was ended; and in his being anointed, there was given an example of that free and generous devotedness whereby the savour of his name is to

THE RIGHTEOUS CONSIDERETH THE CAUSE OF THE POOR: BUT THE WICKED REGARDETH NOT TO KNOW IT.—Prov. xxix. 7.
THE KING THAT FAITHFULLY JUDGETH THE POOR, HIS THRONE SHALL BE ESTABLISHED FOR EVER.—Prov. xxix. 14.

MATT. xxvi. 13.

13 Verily I-say unto-you, Wheresoever this gospel shall-be-preached in the whole world κοσμῳ, there shall-also this, that this woman hath-done,-be-told for a-memorial μνημοσυνον of-her.
(Ch. xxvi. 14, § lxxxvi. p. 356.)

MARK xiv. 9.

Verily I-say unto-you, Wheresoever this 9 gospel shall-be-preached throughout εἰς the whole world κοσμον, this also that she-hath-done shall-be-spoken-of for a-memorial μνημοσυνον of-her.
(Ch. xiv. 10, § lxxxvi. p. 356.)

(G. 63.)—Particulars of the first day in Passion week, Sunday, the ninth of the Jewish Nisan.—John* xii. 9—11. At Bethany.

9 Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he-was there: and they-came not for-Jesus'-sake only, but that they-might-see Lazarus also, whom he-had-raised from the-10 dead. But the chief priests consulted that they-might-put-Lazarus also-to-death; 11 because-that by-reason-of ὅτ' him many of-the Jews went-away ὑπηγον, and believed on Jesus.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

that they were not used; so that the present was the only anointing for the burial which Jesus received—comp. Jno. xix. 38—42, § 92; Mk. xvi. 1, 5, 6, § 93; Lu. xxiv. 1—6, § ib.

Mt. xxvi. 12. my burial—He had already predicted his sufferings, and his death by crucifixion, ch. xx. 18, 19, § 77, p. 235—He now adds another fact, viz., that he should be buried, a thing very unlikely to take place, as dying the death of a malefactor, it was more likely that he should be cast into Gehenna, where the bodies of criminals were thrown—see on NOTE, ch. v. 22, § 19, p. 125, and ADDENDA, p. 129—Or should his body be cared for by his friends, it was more likely that they would keep it until the third day, waiting the fulfilment of his promise—But so it was, that Joseph of Arimathæa, not before spoken of as a disciple of Jesus, came forward at the very moment required; a fact so remarkable, that it is noticed by the four evangelists, ch. xxvii. 57—60, [Mk. xv. 42—6; Lu. xxiii. 50—3; Jno. xix. 38—42,] § 92, p. 474.

13. this gospel—The gospel, or good news of the kingdom, testified by the woman in her anointing of Jesus, whose name is Christ, or Messiah, the Anointed—The preaching of the gospel is itself spoken of as spreading abroad the savour of the knowledge of Christ in every place: with which the whole world is to be filled, as with the odour of the ointment was filled the house where Jesus was now sitting—see on Jno. xii. 3, p. 253, and Mt. xxvi. 7, p. 254.

a memorial—Ps. cxii. 6, 'The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.'—Ec. vii. 1, 'A good name is better than precious ointment;'—2 Co. x. 18, 'Not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.'—The freedom which this woman exercised, as expressing her love for the Saviour, without asking leave of any man, although the whole company of apostles may have been present, is worthy of being kept in memory: it is for the advantage of the church in every age, and especially when all are to do what they can for spreading abroad the gospel of the kingdom before the king's return—see the words of the beloved disciple to the little children, when warning against Antichrist, 1 Jno. ii. 20, 'But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.'—Ver. 27, 'But the anointing of which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him.'—It is only by acting, like Mary, under the power of this anointing, to which Antichrist is opposed, that the gospel can be effectually preached throughout the whole world; 'Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free,' Gal. v. 1.

Jno. xii. 9. raised—see ch. xi. 38—44, § 58, p. 131.

10. consulted—see ch. xi. 46—53, § ib., p. 132.

NOTES.

tors, from Grotius downward, are agreed that πρὸς τὸ has reference, not to the intention of the woman, but rather of Providence.'—Bloomf.

Mt. xxvi. 12. It was a good work, inasmuch as it shewed her love and self-denial. Jesus, at the very time that his disciples expected him to assume his regal power, plainly again pointed to his death as first to take place. That which was designed as the anointing of him for the kingdom, he declared was anointing him for his burial. It was the only anointing or embalming his body should have. It was common among the ancients to expend large sums upon anointing and embalming the bodies of their friends. It is said that at the funeral of Herod, five hundred slaves, or freed men, were employed to carry the spices merely.

13. For a memorial of her. 'Εἰς μνημόσυνον αὐτῆς "for her [honourable] remembrance," εἰς τὸ μνημόσυνον, as well as its kindred terms, are almost always meant for praise. It is properly a neuter of the old adjective μνημόσυνος, commemorative.'—Bloomf.

Jno. xii. 10. The chief priests consulted. 'The proximity of Bethany to Jerusalem; and the existing impatience of the people to see our Lord and Lazarus, and the prodigious numbers that were present in Jerusalem waiting for the passover, going to and fro, produced in part by the desire of seeing Lazarus, the living witness of his own resurrection, would speedily induce the sanhedrim, whose eyes all along had been fixed upon Jesus, to deliberate on the best mode of removing him also.'—Greswell.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

be diffused in every place, and a preparation made for his glorious return, as the Messiah, the 'KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS.']

[Soon may there be given the same generous expression of love to the Saviour on the part of the individual members of the church; each doing what he can for the advancement of the truth; each at the same time standing fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made his people free. Then may the gospel be expected to extend throughout all the ramifications of society, and to the utmost bounds of the habitable globe.]

Jno. xii. 10. Let us beware of bigotry and priestly intolerance; and, whatever the inducements thereto, let us avoid seeking to keep up the importance of our own party by injuring others.

[How fearful is the case of that people, who, in place of being persuaded by the most overwhelming evidence to embrace the truth, are only thereby goaded on to greater wickedness! whose priests are more concerned to uphold their own importance, than to hold up the truth of God to the view of the people!]

From the history of our Saviour's life, and that more especially as we approach his death, we may well learn the folly of listening to either priests or apostles, in opposition to the truth of God, as taught by Himself. May we each feel our responsibility.

* 'All this day, Jesus continued in Bethany.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxviii. p. 71.

ADDENDA.

ON THE TIME OF THE ARRIVAL AT BETHANY—AND THE DAY OF THE PROCESSION TO THE TEMPLE.—John xii. 1, p. 253.

'The course of our subject has brought us regularly down to the period when Jesus, having formally made an end of his ministry in Galilee and elsewhere, was about to complete it in Jerusalem also; and at the same time to accomplish the work of human redemption—the proper work which the Father had given him to execute; the final end of his coming into the world: which being over, the period of his leaving the world, and of his returning again to the Father, with whom he was before he assumed flesh, could not be far distant. . . .

'The narratives of the first three evangelists, from the time when our Saviour passed through Jericho, to the time of his actual entry into Jerusalem, exhibit no interruption in their continuity. . . This silence implies only that nothing took place between the arrival at Bethany and the procession, which it might be necessary or expedient for the former gospels to relate; it implies also that the interval in question was short: and both these things . . . . were matters of fact.

'The precise date of the arrival, and the exact measure of the interval between that event and the procession to Jerusalem, could be supplied only by the last. Accordingly, the supplementary relation of that gospel which has been so often exemplified already, is critically illustrated in this instance also: for the notice of time which is wanting in the first three gospels, is found at ch. xii. 1, of the fourth: Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς πρὸ ἓξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα ἦλθεν εἰς Βηθανίαν. . . .

'Now the day of the Jewish passover in the year of our Saviour's passion, I am fully persuaded . . was the day upon which he suffered. This being the case, the day of the week on which he suffered was the fourteenth of Nisan, the day of the Jewish passover. But the day of the week on which he suffered was unquestionably the sixth, or Friday. If so, the fourteenth of Nisan, in the year when our Saviour suffered, coincided with Friday; and, consequently, so did the eighth with Saturday. It confirms this conclusion, that the fourteenth of Nisan, U.C. 783, and A.D. 30, the true date of the year of the Passion, coincided with the Julian April 5; and therefore so did the eighth of Nisan with the Julian March 30: the former fell not upon the Friday, and the latter upon the Saturday.

'If we are right, the true date of our Saviour's arrival at Bethany, U.C. 783, A.D. 30, preparatory to the last passover, was Saturday, March 30, on the corresponding day in the Jewish Nisan. It would seem, then, at first sight, that he arrived on the Jewish sabbath. But this is no necessary consequence; for a Jewish day began with sunset and ended with sunset, Lev. xxiii. 32; and sunset, March 30, eight days later than March 22, the true date of the vernal equinox, would not be much earlier than 6. 30, P.M. It would be daylight even after this for one hour more; that is, for the whole of the first hour of the next Jewish day as such, the ninth παρὰδημορον of Nisan, the beginning of the first day of a new week: and if our Saviour, as the time of the expiration of the sabbath, that is, at sunset upon the eighth of Nisan, or the thirtieth of the Julian March, was within an hour's journey of Bethany, he might still arrive there on the evening of Saturday, yet not on the Jewish sabbath. . . . .

'Again, though our Lord himself and his twelve apostles might stop with Zacchæus, there is no reason to suppose that the rest of his followers would do the same; and especially those who had homes of their own to go to at no great distance from thence. For this reason had the family of Lazarus accompanied him from Galilee to Jericho, and even been with him before he became the guest of Zacchæus: yet it would be morally certain that they would continue their route to Bethany, or that by some means or other arrive there before our Lord himself. Hence it might justly be said, as it is by St. John, that our Lord found Lazarus there when he came. Nor would it be extraordinary that a supper should be ready for him apparently as soon as he came; for they might be expecting his arrival, or already apprised of the time when it would take place. . . . .

'It would seem, then, that the day when Jesus crossed the Jordan, and passed through Jericho, and subsequently stopped with Zacchæus, was Friday, the seventh of the Jewish Nisan, and the twenty-ninth of the Julian March; that the day when he arrived at Bethany was Saturday, the thirtieth of the Julian March, and strictly speaking the evening of the ninth of the Jewish Nisan. From this point of time, then, must we begin and deduce the train of proceedings subsequently, until the morning of the resurrection; and it is a strong argument of the truth of these conclusions, that the duration of what was literally the period of our Lord's suffering becomes, upon this principle, agreeably to its name of Passion week, neither more nor less than one week.'—(For the conclusion of this paragraph, see foot note at p. 252.) —Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxviii. pp. 50—69.

ON THE TIME OF THE UNCTION AT BETHANY. P. 253.

'Among the circumstances of peculiarity which characterized the unction at Bethany, two only would require any particular illustration: one, the supposed value of the unguent in proportion to its quantity; the other, the peculiarity of the denomination which is given to it.

'The quantity of the unguent was an alabaster box or vase full, estimated at a pound in weight; the propriety of which estimation is explained by the following passage from Emphanius (ii. 182, De Mensuris et Ponderibus): Ἀλάβαστρον μύρου βιαίου μὲν ἔστιν ὅλιτραν, μύρου δὲ νάρδου ἥμισυ λίτρας, τὸ δὲ μέτρον ἐστὶ λίτρου τὸ ἥμισυ· ἀλάβαστρον δὲ κέκληται διὰ τὸ σῴζεσθαι. Boxes of this material were especially appropriated for the reception of unguents. . . .

'In shape the alabaster vase was round, and tapering from the bottom to the top. . . . . Sometimes the receptacles of unguents were conchs, or shells, if they happened to be naturally set or strung with pearls.—(And see Notes, pp 253, .4.)

'The price of the unguent is computed, both in St. Mark and in St. John, at three hundred pence, denarii, or drachmæ, or at more than that sum: which would amount to between nine and ten pounds of English money: that is to say, the unguent was valued at almost one pound per ounce. There can be no question, however, that it was of a rich and costly description; in which case a pound's weight of it, as we shall see, might be worth that price or more. The name of μύρων νάρδινον was given to a species of unguent composed of a variety of sweet spices besides the nard: Syrian unguents (of which this was probably one) were reckoned the most excellent in general, and the trade in unguents was so exclusively confined to Syrian or Phœnician dealers, that, according to Juvenal, Syrophœnix is but another name for an unguentarius, or vender of unguents. Among the Syrians themselves none was more esteemed than the nardine.'—Greswell, Vol. II. pp. 556, .60.

'The use of aromata, unguents, or perfumes, among the Jews, was an ancient as the institution of their temple service; but that use was purely religious. . . . In other respects it seems to have been chiefly confined to funeral honours, or the last offices about the persons of the dead. . . . Yet this use of perfumes also was not more peculiar to the Jews than to the rest of the East; and in Seneca's or Pliny's time it was a regular part of the duty of the dead to burn odours and unguents along with them.

'Upon this usage was founded our Lord's prophetical, and at the same time benevolent interpretation of the act of Mary, when the disciples in general, or Judas in particular, was complaining of the needless waste of a precious article. Let the woman alone; why are ye troubling her? She hath done unto me a becoming deed; against the day of my embalment hath she reserved it. The office which she had just performed was a good and a proper office, insomuch as it was, or should be, the embalment of our Lord's body against his burial. For this was, strictly speaking, the only embalment his body was to receive; and for that purpose, κατὰ συμβεβηκός, if not per se, it might be said to be intended; and its effect was ultimately reserved: which is the import of the prophetical preterite τετήρηκε. Jno. xii. 7.'—Ib. pp. 577—..9.

SECTION 82.—(G. 64.)—[Lesson 75.]—ON THE SECOND DAY IN PASSION WEEK, MONDAY, THE TENTH OF NISAN, AND FOUR DAYS PREVIOUS TO HIS DEATH, JESUS GOES IN PROCESSION FROM BETHANY TO JERUSALEM, TO APPEAR IN THE TEMPLE.* ALL THE CITY IS MOVED: THE PHARISEES DISPLEASED. GREEKS WISH TO SEE JESUS. JESUS GOES TO BETHANY. — Matt. xxi. 1—11, 14—.7. Mark xi. 1—11. Luke xix. 29—44. John xii. 12—36. BETHANY AND JERUSALEM.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jno. xii. 12, .3. The day following that on which Jesus came to Bethany, many who had come to the feast, go out from Jerusalem to meet him, with branches of palm and songs of welcome.

Mt. xxi. 1-3. Mk. xi. 1-3. Lu. xix. 29-31. Jesus sends two of his disciples for an ass's colt, telling them exactly where to find, how to answer when questioned, and what would result.

— xxi. 4,5. ——— ——— Fulfilment of Zec. ix. 9.

— xxi. 6. — xi. 4-6. — xix. 32-.4. The disciples find as Jesus foretold.

— xxi. 7. — xi. 7. — xix. 35. Jno. xii. 14. Having cast their garments upon the colt, they seat Jesus thereon.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 15,.6. Their fulfilling of the prophecy not understood till after Jesus' glorification.

— xxi. 8. — xi. 8. — xix. 36. ——— The way, as for a triumphal entry, prepared before Jesus.

——— ——— — xix. 37,.8. ——— At the descent of the mount of Olives, his praise is declared by the whole multitude of his disciples: they rejoice and praise God because of the mighty works they have seen; and hail 'the King that cometh in the name of the Lord:'

——— ——— ——— — xii. 17,.8. They are joined by those who saw Lazarus raised from the dead; on account of which miracle, many have come forth to meet Jesus.

——— ——— — xix. 39, 40. ——— Is requested by some of the Pharisees to rebuke his disciples. His reply.

— xxi. 9. — xi. 9, 10. ——— ——— 'The song of the multitudes going before, and of those following after: 'Hosanna,' &c.

——— ——— — xix. 41-.4. ——— Jesus weeps over Jerusalem, as being left in spiritual darkness, and about to be involved in sweeping desolation: having lost the substance of that which her name expresses, the SIGHT OF PEACE, even the shadow of peace is to be taken from her.

— xxi. 10. — xi. 11. Jesus enters Jerusalem, and the temple.

Mt. xxi. 10, .1. 'Who is this?' Reply of the multitude.

——— ——— Mk. xi. — Lu. xix. — Jno. xii. 19. The Pharisees complain, that 'the world is gone after him.' — xxi. 14. Blind and lame come to him to the temple, and are healed.

— xxi. 15, .6. The chief priests and scribes are 'sore displeased' upon seeing his miracles, and hearing the children crying in the temple, 'Hosanna,' &c. Jesus points their attention to Ps. viii. 2.

— xxi. 17. — xi. 11. ——— Having taken a view of all things in the temple, Jesus leaves the city at even-tide.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 20-.2. Philip and Andrew tell Jesus that Greeks desire to see him.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 23, .4. Jesus' reply. The hour is come when the Son of man should be glorified; 'Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die,' &c.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 25,.6. Speaks of the death and glorification of those that serve and follow him.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 27, .8. Jesus is troubled. His prayer answered by a voice from heaven.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 29,30. Conjectures of the people regarding the voice—wherefore it came.

——— ——— ——— — xii. 31-.3. Jesus declares the judgment of this world; the casting out of the prince thereof. He also predicts the manner of his death, giving it as a sign that he will draw all unto him.

——— ——— — xii. 34. The people begin to get stumbled, and ask what he means by saying 'The Son of man must be lifted up?'

——— ——— ——— — xii. 35, .6. Jesus warns them of approaching darkness, and exhorts them to walk in the light while they have the light. As if again telling them that now the things belonging to their peace are being hid from their eyes, he hides himself from them.

— xxi. 17. — xi. 11. ——— ——— Jesus goes with the twelve to Bethany, and lodges there.

No. 82.—Jesus goes in procession from Bethany to Jerusalem. The people meet him. John xii. 12, .3.

12 On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that 13 Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 13. palm trees—emblematic of victory, and of lasting prosperity. The palm tree grows straight upward; is wide at top; brings forth fruit in old age, and that in abundance: thus it is said, Ps. xcii. 12—.5, 'The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. 13, Those that be planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God. 14, They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing; 15, to shew that the LORD is upright: he is my rock, and there is no unrighteousness in him.'—In Rev. vii. 9, the innumerable multitude, who have come 'out of great tribulation,' who have followed 'the Lamb whithersoever he goeth,' are described as being 'clothed with white robes,' and as having 'palms in their hands;'

NOTES.

Jno. xii. 12. Next day. Jesus is supposed to have arrived in Bethany on the evening after the sabbath, and to have remained there during the next day.—See ADDENDA, p. 258, supra.

13. Branches of palm trees. It was customary with the Jews, at the feast of tabernacles, to carry about branches of palm and other trees in their hands, and to sing, HOSANNA, 'Save now, I beseech thee,' Ps. cxviii. 25. The finest palm trees grew about Jericho and Engedi. Hence Jericho was called 'the city of palm trees.' The palm has a long and straight body, a spreading top, and an appearance of very great beauty. It produces an agreeable fruit, a pleasant shade, and a kind of honey, little inferior to the honey of bees, and from it was drawn a pleasant wine, much used in the East. On ancient coins the palm tree is often a symbol of Judæa. On coins made after Jerusalem was destroyed, Judæa is represented by a female sitting in a weeping posture under a palm tree.

* 'On the time of the arrival at Bethany, and the day of the procession to the temple,' see ADDENDA, p. 258, supra, and p. 272, infra.

him, and cried, Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the-name-of-the-Lord. [Ver. 14, p. 262.]

Jesus sends for an ass from Bethphage.

MATT. xxi. 1—6. (Ch. xx. 34, ‖ lxxix. p. 244.)	MARK xi. 1—6. (Ch. x. 52, ‖ lxxix. p. 244.)	LUKE xix. 29—34. (Ch. xix. 28, ‖ lxxxi. p. 252.)
1 [a]And when they-drew-nigh unto Jerusalem, and were-come [b] to Bethphage, unto the mount of Olives, [c] then sent Jesus two disciples,	1 And when they-came-nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he-sendeth-forth two of-his disciples,	And it-came-to-pass, 29 when he-was-come- [b] nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of-Olives, [a] he-sent two of-his disciples,
2 saying unto-them, Go into the village over-against you, and straightway [d] [e] ye-shall-find an-ass tied, and a-colt with her: [f]	2 and saith unto-them, Go-your-way into the village over-against you: and [d] as-soon-as ye-be-entered into it, [e] ye-shall-find a-colt tied,	saying, 30 Go-ye into the village over-against you; in-the-which at-your-entering ye-shall-find a-colt tied,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 13. Hosanna—The English of this Hebrew salutation is given in the first two words of Ps. cxviii. 25. . . . 'Save now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.'—The whole psalm is beautifully expressive of the same as the palm tree—on which see p. 259.

King of Israel—No man had been king of Israel in Jerusalem since the death of Solomon, the son of David—see on the separation of Israel from Judah, 1 Ki. xii. 1—24, &c.—The LORD is 'the king of Israel,' Zep. iii. 15—It was predicted that the son promised to David, ‖ Sa. vii 12—6, should sit upon 'the throne of his father David,' and 'reign over the house of Jacob for ever;' Lu. i. 31—3. § 2, p. 10—Nathanael had confessed, Jno. i. 49, § 10, p. 73, 'Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.'—See on ver. 15, infra.

that cometh—One of the titles of Messiah—see on John the Baptist's inquiry, 'Art thou he that should come?' Mt. xi. 3, § 29, p. 222.

the name of the Lord—Ps. cxviii. 26. 'Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD:'—Jesus came in the name, that is, with the power and authority, of God, to lay down the law of judgment; and he will come in the power and with the authority of God to execute judgment—see Jno. v. 19—30, § 23, pp. 177, .8; Mt. xxv. 31—46, § 86, p. 351—Of the angel who was with Moses in the wilderness, the Lord said, Ex. xxiii. 21, 'My name is in him.'—— Of the great Prophet, De. xviii. 19, 'It shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.'

Mt. xxi. 1. Bethphage—said to mean 'the house of early figs,' from fig trees which grew in the neighbourhood—see on the barren fig tree, ver. 18—22, § 83, p. 267.

mount of Olives—see Jno. viii. 1, § 55, p. 97, and Lu. xix. 37, p. 263; also xxi. 37, § 86, p. 357—It was on the east of Jerusalem, Zec. xiv. 4, and distant therefrom about 'a sabbath day's journey,' Ac. i. 12, § 99—see GEOG. NOT., p. 354.

2. a colt, &c.—Kings and princes commonly rode on the ass, or mule, in times of peace; the horse was used more for war—see the description of the war horse, Job xxxix. 19—25—God, in order to keep the people of Israel in a more sensible dependence on himself, forbade them to multiply horses, De. xvii. 16—David rode on a mule, and ordered Solomon to do so on his coronation-day, 1 Ki. i. 33, .4—Afterward, when Solomon, iv. 26, and succeeding princes, multiplied horses, they were rebuked by the prophets, and chastised by God for it—see Isa. ii. 6, 7; xxxi. 1; and Ho. xiv. 3; and the removal of them is spoken of as matter of promise in the days of the Messiah,

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 1. Were come to Bethphage. Said to be on the west declivity of mount Olivet; from which it is thought the whole declivity and part of the valley took their names. It was so named from the words בֵּית beeth, signifying a region as well as a house, and פַּג phag, a green fig. The whole mountain was called the mount of Olives, from the olives which it produced; yet it abounded with figs and palms; and according to the variety of these, growing in different parts of the mountain, so various were the names imposed upon those tracts.—See GEOG. NOT., p. 354,

[a] Εἰς Βηθφαγή. Mk. xi. 1, and Lu. xix. 29, add καὶ Βηθανίαν. 'We may therefore suppose that the territories of the two villages were contiguous; yet that Bethphage came first in travelling from Jericho to Jerusalem. Hence Calmet and others are wrong in describing Bethphage as being a village between Bethany and Jerusalem. So Epiphan. adv. Hæres. p. 340, cited by Reland, Palæst. 629, testifies that there was an old road to Jerusalem from Jericho through Bethphage and Bethany, and the mount of Olives. Nay, Calmet himself describes Bethany as situated at the foot of the mount of Olives (and so all accounts represent it—see Reland); but from the words, πρὸς τὸ ὄρος τ. Ἐ. being here conjoined with Βηθφ., it is probable that Bethphage was situated on some part of the lower ridge, or ἀκρόρεια, of the mountain, and Bethany just below it, at the foot of it: and, consequently, it could not be between Bethany and Jerusalem. This is supported by the testimony of Jerome and Origen, the former of whom describes Bethphage as "sacerdotum viculus, situs in monte Oliveti." And the latter, in his Onomast. on Matt., says it was situated on mount Olivet.'—Bloomf.]

Mount of Olives. 'From Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey,' i. e., about a mile. Josephus, speaking of that part of it which was nearest to the city, states the distance to be five furlongs; and in the same place the Roman commander Titus encamped when he was about to begin the siege of the city, which fulfilled the prophecy, ch. xxiv. § 86.—See GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE, p. 271.

Two disciples. Probably Peter and John.

2. Ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt. Asses and mules were in common use in Palestine; horses were

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Lu. xix. 29, 30. Let us be ever ready to acknowledge the sovereignty of the King of Israel, by going where he commands, and doing whatever he intimates to be his pleasure.

OUR MOUTHS MAY AFFECT TO ADORE RELIGION, BUT IT IS OUR LIVES MUST ADORN IT.

MY LIPS SHALL NOT SPEAK WICKEDNESS, NOR MY TONGUE UTTER DECEIT.—Job xxvii. 4.

Matt. xxi. 3—5.	Mark xi. 3.	Luke xix. 31.
5 loose them,	whereon never man sat;	f whereon yet never man sat: 5 and-bring them unto-me. h	loose him,	loose him,
3 And if any man say	and-bring him.	and-bring him hither.
ought unto-you,	3 h And if any-man say	And if any-man 31 unto-you,	ask you,
ye-shall-say,	Why do-ye this?	Why do-ye-loose him?
i The Lord hath	say-ye that i	thus shall-ye-say unto-him, need of-them;	the Lord hath	Because the Lord hath and straightway he-will-	need of-him;	need of-him.
send them. k	and straightway he-will-send him
	k hither. l

4 l All this was-done, that it-might-be-fulfilled
5 which-was-spoken by the prophet, saying, Tell-ye the daughter of-Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto-thee, meek, and sitting upon an-ass, and a-colt the-foal of-an-ass.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ho. i. 7; Mi. v. 10, .1; and Zec. ix. 10—It is therefore with great propriety that Christ in his most public triumph, chose, according to the prophecy before us, to ride on an ass—Nor are we to imagine there was anything mean or ridiculous in it, for the eastern asses are a much larger and more beautiful animal than ours; and it plainly appears that the patriarchs and judges thought it no disgrace to ride upon them; of which Abraham, Ge. xxii. 3; Moses, Ex. iv. 20; and Jair's family, Ju. x. 4, are instances — Nay, magistrates are spoken of by the general description of those that rode on white asses, v. 10 —comp. Nu. xxii. 21; 2 Sa. xvi. 2; xvii. 23; xix. 26.

Mk. xi. 2. whereon never man sat—In this it is supposed is implied, that he for whose use the colt was to be brought, was a sacred person; thus in Nu. xix. 2, De. xxi 3, we find that heifers to be offered in sacrifice were to be such as had never been employed in labour—Animals which had never borne the yoke were preferred for sacred uses by other nations, as well as by the Jews; so when the Philistines returned the ark, they laid it upon 'a new cart,' drawn by 'two milch kine, on which there [had] come no yoke,' 1 Sa. vi. 7—15—In further consistency with the sacredness of our Lord's person, he was buried in a tomb 'wherein never man before was laid,' Lu. xxiii. 53; Jno. xix. 41, § 92, p. 476.

Mt. xxi. 4. by the prophet—Zec. ix. 9, is here specially referred to—see on Jno. xii. 15, infra, p. 262—but here, as in Mt. xxi. 5, &c., more prophets than one appear to be quoted; but indeed all the prophets were but different media for the one 'Spirit of prophecy,' 2 Pe. i. 20, .1; Re. xix. 10.

5. Tell ye, &c.—This appears to be taken from Is. lxii. 11, 'Behold, the LORD hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation [thy Jesus] cometh: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.'—A pledge of Jesus' coming in glory, was now being given in his coming to Jerusalem in order to be lifted up upon the cross—see Jno. xii. 31, .2, infra, p. 268.

Sion—see in Geog. Notices of Jerusalem, § 6, p. 42.

meek—Moses, the mediator of the old covenant, was remarkable for meekness, Nu. xii. 3—The meekness of our Lord is particularly noticed by Paul, 2 Co. x., xi.; Ph. ii. 3—5—Jesus requires that his followers learn of him, as being 'meek and lowly in heart,' Mt. xi. 29, § 23, p. 228.

meek, and sitting upon an ass—The words of the prophet, Zec. ix. 9, seem to have a reference to the coming of Christ in glory, to be manifested as 'just, and having salvation;' when he shall come to execute justice, and for the full deliverance of his people; of which an assurance was given in his coming the first time, 'lowly' and riding upon an ass—see on Jno. xii. 15, infra, p. 262.

NOTES.

seldom to be met with. Mark and Luke mention the sending for the colt only, as being that alone whereon our Lord rode; not mentioning the ass, though also brought (agreeably to the prophecy of Zecharias), because they do not mention that prophecy. There is plainly in the latter assertion no negation of the former. In Judæa there were few horses, and those were chiefly used in war. The ass, the mule, and the camel are still most used in eastern countries by princes and chief persons. To ride on a horse was sometimes an emblem of war; a mule or an ass the emblem of peace.—See Scrip. Ill., p. 260.

Mk. xi. 2. Whereon never man sat. No animal previously used in any way was employed for sacred uses even among the heathen.

Mt. xxi. 3. εἰπὸν τι. A popular mode of expressing 'if he shall make objection,' which is found in Mark and Luke.

The Lord, &c. ὁ κύριος, not 'the Lord,' but the master,' Rabbi, as at ch. vii. 21, § 19, p. 140, and viii. 25, § 34, p. 266; Jno. xi. 12, § 58, p. 128; xiii. 13, .4, § 87, p. 367.

4. All this was done, &c. Events were so admirably disposed to fulfil God's purposes, and by minute circumstances mark the advent of Christ.

5. Tell ye the daughter of Sion. This prophecy was constantly applied in the Jewish writings to the Messiah they expected; our Lord, therefore, by thus publicly fulfilling it, declared himself so. And so the people understood him.—See ver. 9, p. 264.

Thy King cometh. It had been foretold that Messiah should sit upon the throne of his father David; and the people thus applied to Christ his true title; although the time when he shall take to himself his great power and reign was not yet.

Sitting upon an ass, &c. 'The Prince of Peace did not take a horse, a warlike animal; but he will ride on that by and by, Rev. xix. 11. In the patriarchal ages, illustrious persons thought it no disgrace to make use of the ass; but it by no means appears that this opinion prevailed, or this custom continued till the reign of Tiberias. Was it a mean attitude wherein our Lord then appeared? Mean even to contempt? I grant it; I glory in it; it is for the comfort of my soul, for the honour of his humility, and for the utter confusion of all worldly pomp and grandeur.'—Wesley.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxi. 3. Let us gladly yield up to Christ whatever he demands: let it be enough for us that 'The Lord hath need of them;'

4 ver. In the literal fulfilment of that part of prophecy which related to the first coming of Christ, let us see his determination to accomplish all that is predicted respecting his second and glorious advent.

[5 ver. Let us tell the daughter of Sion that the despised Nazarene, who came to Jerusalem meek, and riding upon an ass, will as assuredly, when he comes in the clouds of heaven, be manifested as 'just, and having salvation.']

MATT. xxi. 6.	MARK xi. 4—6.	LUKE xix 32—.4.
6 And the disciples [m] went,	4 And they- went-their-way, and found [n] the colt tied by the door without in a place-where-two-ways-met επι του αμφοδου; and they-loose him. [o]	32 And they [m] that-were-sent went-their-way, and-found even-as he-had-said unto-them. [n]
	5 And certain-of-them that-stood there said unto-them, What do-ye, loosing the colt? 6 And they said unto-them [p] even-as Jesus had-commanded: and they-let-them-go. [q]	[o] And as-they-were-loosing the colt, 33 the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose-ye the colt? And they said, 34 The Lord hath need of-him. [p]
[q] and did as Jesus commanded them,

Jesus makes his public entry into Jerusalem.

MATT. xxi. 7—9.	MARK xi. 7—10.	LUKE xix. 35—44.	JOHN xii. 14—.8.
7 and-brought [a] the ass, and the colt, [b] and put on them their clothes,	7 [a] And they-brought [b] the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on-him;	And they-brought 35 him [c] to Jesus: and they-cast their garments upon the colt,	(Ver. 13, p. 260.)
			And Jesus, when-he-had-found a-young-ass, and they-set him thereon επανω αυτων.	and he-sat upon him.	and they-set-Jesus-thereon. [d]	14 sat thereon;
		[d] as it-is written, Fear not, daughter of-Sion: behold, thy King cometh, sitting on an-ass's colt. These-things 16 understood not his disciples at-the

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 32. and found even as he had said—He had told them the most minute particulars:—

1st. In the village over against them, Mk. xi. 2.

2nd. As soon as they were entered, Mk. xi. 2.

3rd. They should find an ass tied, Mt. xxi. 2.

4th. And a colt whereon never man sat, Mk. xi. 2.

5th. Both of them tied, Mt. xxi. 2.

6th. What they should be asked when loosing them, Lu. xix. 31.

7th. What should be done upon their reply, Mt. xxi. 3.

Jno. xii. 15. Fear not, &c.—Probably referring to Zep. iii. 14—7, 'Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem. 15, The LORD hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy: the king of Israel, even the LORD, is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more. 16, In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not: and to Zion, Let not thine hands be slack. 17, The LORD thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing.'—Thus might it have been, had Jerusalem known the things that belonged to her peace; but in place of rejoicing, he had to weep over her—see Lu. xix. 41, .2, p. 264.

16. understood not—see also Lu. xviii. 31, § 77, p. 235.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 7. Set him thereon. On the clothes which they had put upon the colt. The people would put the trappings on both the ass and the colt, to do the more honour to Jesus; and as not knowing on which he would ride. Thus, though there is a minute diversity in Matthew and Mark, as compared with Luke, yet it is no real discrepancy, since it does not involve any contradiction.

Jno. xii. 15. Sitting on an ass's colt. There is much similarity to the preceding, Zep. iii. 14—.7, in the passage more particularly referred to, Zec. ix. 9, 'Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.'—See before on Mt. xxi. 5, p. 261, supra.

16. These things understood not, &c. That is, His disciples understood not, at the time when this entry into Jerusalem took place, that it was a fulfilment of the prophecy of, Zec. ix. 9; but when he

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xi. 4—6. Let us go, as the Lord commands, and we shall find our way prepared according to his word.

Mt. xxi. 7. Let us be glad to honour our King with whatever we have—thankful that he deigns to accept our humble offering.

Jno. xii. 15, .6. He who cometh to execute vengeance upon the ungodly, bringeth salvation to his afflicted.

16 ver. Let us carefully ponder the words of prophecy, and therewith compare the operations of Providence, so shall we find our faith in the testimony of Jesus more and more confirmed.

Matt. xxi. 8.	Mark xi. 8.	Luke xix. 36—40.	John xii. 16—.8.
			first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.[e]
8 And [f] a very great ὁ πλειστος multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way.[g]	8 And many spread their garments in the way: and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.	[e]And as he went, [f] they spread their clothes in the way.
		[g]And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen; saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.[h]	[h]The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.
		For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.[i]
		[i]And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 16. glorified, &c.—ch. vii. 39, § 55, p. 96, 'The Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.'—xiv. 26, § 87, p. 385, 'But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance,' When the Holy Ghost was given, Peter testified, saying, Ac. ii. 13, 'The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus;'—1 Pe. i. 21, 'God, . . . raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.'

remembered—see also ch. ii. 22, § 12, p. 82.

Mk. xi. 8. spread their garments—a mode of doing honour to kings, 2 Ki. ix. 13.

cut down branches—as at the feast of tabernacles, Lev. xxiii. 40—see Jno. xii. 12, .3, p. 259.

Lu. xix. 37. come nigh—'unto Jerusalem,' Mt. xxi. 1, p. 260—see again Lu. xix. 41, infra, p. 264.

multitude of the disciples—Many appear to have followed him at this time, from even so far as Galilee, Mt. xxvii. 55, § 92, p. 472.

works—One of the last miracles recorded by Luke was opening the eyes of a blind man—see ch. xviii. 35—43, § 78, p. 240—It seems to have been followed by another of a similar kind, Mk. x. 46—52, § 79, p. 242.

38. the King that cometh—see on Jno. xii. 13, .5, pp. 259, .62, and Mt. xxi. 5, supra, p. 261, also on 'make him a king,' Jno. vi. 15, § 41, p. 318.

glory in the highest—The song of the heavenly host at the birth of the Redeemer was, ch. ii. 14, § 4, p. 21, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.'

Jno. xii. 17. called Lazarus, &c.—Jno. xi. 42, .3, § 58, p. 131.

NOTES.

had been glorified by his resurrection and ascension into heaven—comp. Jno. vii. 39, § 55, p. 96—then 'the Holy Ghost' brought to their remembrance both the prophecy and the fulfilment of it, by the doing of 'these things unto him.'—Comp. xiv. 26, § 87, p. 385.

Mt. xxi. 8. A very great multitude. 'The bulk of the people.'

Cut down branches from the trees. To cast flowers, or garlands, or boughs, before a warrior returning from victory, or a king entering into his kingdom, was a common way of testifying joyful and triumphant feeling. John says, xii. 13, supra, p. 259, that these were branches of the palm tree.

Lu. xix. 38. Peace in heaven. May there be peace in heaven, and glory to God in the highest heavens, for the blessings of Messiah's kingdom.

39. Rebuke thy disciples. For proclaiming thee as 'the King that cometh in the name of the Lord.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxi. 8. Let the children of Israel, unto whom more especially Jesus has been made known as a Prince and a Saviour, not be behind their Jewish brethren in preparing the way of the Lord.]

[Lu. xix. 37; Jno. xii. 17. He who, before his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, raised up Lazarus from the grave, hath given us greater cause to rejoice, and praise God, in that he hath raised up from the death of sin, multitudes who were asleep in spiritual death.]

Lu. xix. 38. Let us rejoice in the triumphs of our King, through whom there is peace in heaven, which shall yet prevail among men; and glory in the highest, which shall also yet cover the earth.

MATT. xxi. 9.	MARK xi. 9, 10.	LUKE xix. 41—.3.
9 [a]And the multitudes that went-before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to-the Son of-David: Blessed is he that-cometh in-the-name of-the-Lord; Hosanna in the highest.[l]	9 And they that-went-before, and they that-followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that-cometh in the-name of-the-Lord: 10 [l]Blessed be the kingdom of-our father David, that-cometh in the-name of-the-Lord: Hosanna in the highest.[m]	[m]And when he-was-come-near, 41 he-beheld the city, and-wept over it, saying, If thou-hadst-known, 42 even thou, at-least in this thy day, the-things which belong unto thy peace! but now they- are-hid from thine eyes. For 43 the-days shall-come upon thee,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 40. the stones, &c.—John the Baptist, probably with a similar reference to the Gentiles as contrasted with the Jews, who esteemed themselves as fruit-bearing trees, said to the latter, Mt. iii 8—10, § 7, pp. 52, .3. 'Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: 9, and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. 10, And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.'—The twelve tribes, most of whom were lost among the Gentiles, were represented by twelve stones, Jos. iv. 9, 19—24 — but they were usually spoken of as branches, as Rom. xi. 16—26, &c.

Mk. xi. 9. Hosanna—see on Jno. xii. 13, p. 260, supra —comp. 2 Sa. xiv. 4, and 2 Ki. vi. 26, where the cry is to an ordinary monarch, and where the word is translated 'Help.'

Mt. xxi. 9. Hosanna in the highest—Same words Mk. xi. 10—Lu. xix. 38, 'glory in the highest.'—Ps. cxlviii. 1, 'Praise ye the LORD from the heavens: praise him in the heights.'

Lu. xix. 41. wept over it—Ps. cxix. 136. 'Rivers of waters run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy law.'—Je. ix. 1, 'Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!'—xiii. 17, 'But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the LORD's flock is carried away captive.'

42. this thy day—this season of respite in which salvation is still offered thee; in which the power of choice is still in thy hand—comp. Ps. xcv. 7; 2 Co. vi. 2; He. iii. 7, 13, .5—The day here spoken of is contrasted with the days when her enemies would be allowed to triumph over her, mentioned ver. 43; Jno. xii. 35, .6, p. 269.

thy peace! . . . . thine eyes—alluding to the meaning of the name Jerusalem, the seeing of peace—see on ver. 44, p. 265, 'thy children.'

NOTES.

[Lu. xix. 40. The stones would, &c. οἱ λίθοι κεκράξονται. 'Said to be a proverbial and hyperbolical form of expression, to denote that it is a moral impossibility for a thing to be otherwise than it is. Here, however, it is meant, that if those should be checked, God would even, miraculously, animate the very stones to celebrate his triumph. Of the examples adduced of this mode of expression, the most apposite is the following: Hab. ii. 11, 'The stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam . . . . shall answer it,' meaning, that even if men should be silent, the very stones would exclaim.'—Bloomf.]

Mt. xxi. 9. Hosanna to the Son of David. When persons applied to the king for help, or for a redress of grievances, they used the word hosanna, or rather from the Hebrew, הוֹשִׁיעָה נָא HOSHIAH NA! 'Save now!' or, 'Save, we beseech thee!' Thus both the words and actions of the people prove that they acknowledged Christ as their Messiah, and looked to him for deliverance.

The Son of David. It was promised that MESSIAH, the King to reign in RIGHTEOUSNESS, should come of the family of David.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. May the kingdom of the Messiah, promised to our father David, be established. Blessed be he whom God hath sent to be our king and deliverer. To come in the name of the Lord, is to come by the authority of the Lord.—Jno. xii. 13, p. 260, SCH. ILL.

Mk. xi. 10. Blessed be the kingdom of our father David. The kingdom promised to David and his seed, 1 Ki. ii. 4; viii. 25.

In the highest. In the highest heavens. The sense is, May angels in the highest heavens join with us in doing homage to our king!—See Ps. cxlviii. 1.

Lu. xix. 41. He beheld the city, and wept over it. See on Mt. xxiii. 37—.9, § 85, p. 320.

42. If thou hadst known. May be rendered, 'O that thou hadst known.'

[Even thou. The pathos is increased by the high emphasis in καὶ σὺ, q.d., Even thou, notwithstanding that thou art the bloody and rebellious city, that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee. Notwithstanding that thou hast hitherto returned but hatred for my love, and hast so repeatedly sought to accomplish my destruction.]

The things which belong unto thy peace! Our Lord probably alludes to the meaning of the word Jerusalem, יְרוּשָׁלַיִם from יָרֵה yereh, 'he shall see,' and שָׁלוֹם shalom, 'peace or prosperity.'

43. For the days shall come upon thee. ἥξουσιν

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xix. 40. May we, by the Spirit of God, be built up together an holy temple to the Lord; so that, as lively stones, we may shew forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into light.—See 1 Pe. ii. 5, 9.]

[Mt. xxi. 9; Mk. xi. 10. Soon may Christ claim his rightful sovereignty over the kingdom of his father David, 'the whole house of Israel;' over which no king after Solomon did reign in Jerusalem.]

LUKE xix. 43, .4.

that thine enemies shall-cast-'a-trench'-about thee, and compass-'thee'-round, and keep-'
44 thee'-in συνεξουσι on-every-side, and shall lay-'thee'-even-with-the-ground, and thy children within thee; and they-shall-'not'-leave in thee one-stone upon another; because ανθ' ων thou-knewest not the time καιρον of-thy visitation επισκοπης.

(Ch. xix. 45, § lxxxiii. p. 276.)

All the city is moved: the Pharisees displeased.

MATT. xxi. 10, .1.

10 [a]And when-'he'-was-come into Jerusalem, all the city was-moved εσεισθη, saying, Who 11 is this? And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.[b] (Ver. 12, § lxxxiii. p. 276.)

MARK xi. 11.

[b] And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, 11 and into the temple:[c]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xix. 43. thine enemies shall cast a trench, &c.—as had been long threatened, De. xxviii. 49, 52—Is. xxix. 3, 'And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.'—Je. vi. 6, 'For thus hath the LORD of hosts said, Hew ye down trees, and cast a mount against Jerusalem: this is the city to be visited; she is wholly oppression in the midst of her.'—Da. ix. 26, 'And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself: and ("the Prince of Peace") having been rejected, and they, being given their choice, "No king but Cæsar") the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined.'

44. shall lay thee, &c.—see the words of the Lord to Solomon, when the latter had finished the building of the house of the Lord, &c., 1 Ki. ix. 7, 8—also what he said by the prophets, Is. xxix. 4; Mi. iii. 12.

thy children, &c.—in contrast to what would have been their case, had Jerusalem been worthy of her name, seeing the things that belonged to her peace: then it might have been said to her, as Ps. cxlvii. 12—.4, 'Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion. 13, For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee. 14, He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.'—Ver. 19, 20, 'He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them.'—See again the words of our Lord lamenting over Jerusalem, Mt. xxiii. 37—.9, § 85, p. 320.

one stone upon another—Predicted again of the temple, Mk. xxiv. 1, 2, [Mk. xiii. 2,] § 86, p. 324.

because thou knewest not—Ho. iv. 6, 'My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children.'—See Jno. xv. 21—.4, § 87, p. 390.

thy visitation—Is. l. 2, 'Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer?'

Mt. xxi. 10. Who is this?—see on Jno. vi. 31, § 43, p. 327, 'manna.'

11. the prophet—see on Jno. vi. 14, § 41, p. 317.

of Nazareth—see on Mt. ii. 23, § 5, p. 35, 'He shall be called a Nazarene.'

NOTES.

ἡμέραι, &c., 'for days will come adverse to thee,' ἐπὶ σὲ, as it is said, Ge. xlii. 36, 'all these things are against me.' Here is a manifest prediction, and, in some measure, description of the siege of Jerusalem; as will appear by referring to Josephus, Bell. v. 6. 2. 3. ix. 1. 11. l. 5, which passages illustrate the first stage—the χάρακα πᾶρβ.

Lu. xix. 43. Trench. χάραξ, 'a bank or rampart.' So called from the χάρακες, or strong poles, which were driven down to preserve the agger, or mound of earth, in due form. The word trench now means commonly a pit or ditch. When the Bible was translated, it meant also earth thrown up to defend a camp. This is the meaning of the original reference. The next term, περικυκλώσουσι, 'and compass thee round,' denotes the effectual blockade of the city by the building of a wall, which could not be burnt as the χάραξ had been. Josephus informs us that Titus, in order that he might compel the city to surrender by famine, built a wall around the whole of the city. This wall, nearly five miles in circumference, and furnished with thirteen castles or towers, was completed with incredible labour in ten days. The professed design of this wall was to keep the city in on every side. By this means the people were reduced to such awful extremities, that the revolting excesses of parents towards their children, and the sufferings that existed, are too awful to relate.

44. Shall lay thee, &c. ἐδαφιοῦσί. The best commentators are agreed that there is here a syllepsis, of demolishing the buildings, and of dashing the inhabitants, especially the children, against the stones. Both these senses of ἐδαφ. were in use, and both here seem to be intended.

They shall not leave ... one stone upon another. Only three towers were left standing for a time, to shew the former strength and magnificence of the place. But these likewise were afterwards levelled with the ground.

Because thou knewest not. Through their own wilful blindness and prejudices.

The time of thy visitation. The time when God had visited and redeemed his people by sending the promised Messiah, ch. i. 68, § 3, p. 16. This time is, ver. 42, called 'this thy day.'

Mt. xxi. 10. All the city was moved. 'Was in commotion;' agitated with hope, fear, wonder, or disapprobation, according as each person stood affected.

11. This is Jesus the prophet, &c. ὁ προφήτης, THAT prophet whom Moses spoke of, De. xviii. 18. Every expression of the multitude plainly intimated that they fully received our blessed Lord as the promised Messiah.

Mk. xi. 11. Into the temple. Jesus, the true Paschal Lamb, thus presented himself, as was required by the law, that the victim to be offered should be set apart four days before the great day of atonement.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xix. 43, .4. The walls of Jerusalem might seem impregnable, but without the protection of God, other defences are altogether vain, and may even contribute to the ruin of those who look to them for shelter: safety can only be found under the wings of the Almighty.

[Let us be warned by the case of Jerusalem, not to neglect the voice of God in prophecy: not to remain ignorant of the Divine proceedings in providence, and consequently of our duty in relation thereto.]

Mt. xxi. 10, .1. By the literal fulfilment of our Lord's predictions, we have abundantly confirmed to us the truth, that Jesus is indeed 'THE PROPHET;' and that our only safety is in hearkening to his voice, and in being moved thereby not merely to wonder, but to love and to obey.

THE RICH MAN SHALL LIE DOWN, BUT HE SHALL NOT BE GATHERED: HE OPENETH HIS EYES, AND HE IS NOT.—Job xxvii. 19.
BEHOLD, THE FEAR OF THE LORD, THAT IS WISDOM; AND TO DEPART FROM EVIL IS UNDERSTANDING.—Job xxviii. 28.

Matt. xxi. 14—.7. (Ver. 13, § lxxxiii. p. 278.)	Mark xi. 11.	John xii. 19.
		[c]The Pharisees therefore said 19 among themselves, Perceive-ye how ye-prevail nothing? behold, the world is-gone after him.[d]
14 [d]And the-blind and the-lame came to-him in the temple; and he-healed
15 them. And when-the chief-priests and scribes-saw the wonderful-things θαυμασια that he-did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Ho-sanna to the-Son of-David; they-were-16 sore-displeased, and said unto-him, Hearest-thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto-them, Yea; have-ye-never-read, Out-of the-mouth of-babes and sucklings thou-hast-perfected κατηρτισω praise?[e] [e]and when-he-had-looked-round-about-upon all-things, and-now the eventide was-
17 And he-left them, and-went out-		come, he-went-out

Greeks wish to see Jesus.—John xii. 20—36

20 And there-were certain Greeks among them that-came-up to worship at the feast:
21 the-same came therefore to-Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 19. ye prevail nothing—As predicted, Is. viii. 9, they had girded themselves for the conflict—Jno. xi. 47, .8, § 58, p. 132, 'Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.'

Mt. xxi. 14. the blind and the lame—The miracles which Jesus performed in his last journey to Jerusalem, appear to have been much of the same character with those that he performed on his arrival—see §§ 78, .9—They seem to have had a spiritual meaning—see Lu. xix. 42, p. 264, supra, and Jno. xii. 35, .6, p. 269, infra—There is a remarkable reference to the blind and the lame, in connexion with David's taking possession of the stronghold of Zion, 2 Sa. v. 6—8, 'And the king and his men went to Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land: which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither. 7. Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion: the same is the city of David. 8. And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.'

16. Out of the mouth of babes—Our Lord refers to a psalm which seems designed for the time when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth; and when, as upon our Lord's last visit to the temple, the children shall take an important part in the praise of the Redeemer; Ps. viii. 1, 2, 'O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens. Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger.'—The psalm is quoted in reference to Christ, 1 Co. xv. 27; Eph. i. 22; He. ii. 6.

Jno. xii. 20. Greeks—In Solomon's dedicatory prayer, there is a recognition of the stranger coming from a far country, to worship in the temple at Jerusalem, 1 Ki. viii. 41—.3—see also Is. lvi. 7, referred to by our Lord, Mt. xxi. 13, § 83, p. 278—These Greeks were Gentiles, but probably proselytes, as Ac. viii. 27; xiii. 42, .3; xvii. 4; Rom. i. 16, &c.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 15. The wonderful things, &c. The cures he did and the honour paid him by the multitudes.

16. Hearest thou what these say? It was common among the Jews for the children to be employed in public acclamations, and thus they were accustomed to hail their celebrated rabbins; this shouting was therefore no strange thing, but the priests were exasperated because it was in praise of a person they hated.

Jno. xii. 20. Greeks. Opinion 1. Foreign Jews and proselytes, who spoke the Greek language; these were called Greeks, or Hellenists.—Bens., so Calv., Drusius, &c. ii. The word Ἕλληνες, here rendered Greeks, properly signifies 'Greeks by nation or birth;' and sometimes their name is used for Gentiles in general, as Rom. i. 16; ii. 9, 10; compared with ver. 14. Grecians, or Hellenists. Ἕλληνισται, are mentioned only in Ac. vi. 1; ix. 29; and xi. 20; and signify such Jews as were scattered abroad in Gentile nations, and used the Greek language.—Guyse. There were at that time many Gentile inquirers after true religion; they used to frequent the synagogues as proselytes of the gate, and were not circumcised; mentioned, xvii. 4. It is probable, therefore, that these were Gentiles, and not Jews.—See Addenda, p. 274, col. 1, par. 3.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xii. 19. Let us beware of seeking from men honour to ourselves; but let us glory in the truth which, to their own and the nation's destruction, the Pharisees set themselves to oppose.]

Mt. xxi. 14. Jesus gives sight to the blind, and to the lame the power of walking: he alone could render Jerusalem worthy of her name, enable her to see the light, and guide her feet into the way of peace; but in heart she came not unto the Good Physician for healing.

15, .6 ver. Let us pray that the chief priests and scribes may no more be allowed to hinder the little ones from celebrating the praises of our blessed Redeemer.

16 ver. Let us pray that the time may soon come, when the promise will be fully realized, 'Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise.'

Let us pray that we may possess the spirit of little children; and that God may condescend to make use of us in the utterance of his word, which he hath magnified above all his name.

JOHN xii. 22—,8.

22 saying, Sir, we-would see Jesus. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew 23 and Philip tell Jesus. And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is-come, that the 24 Son of man should-be-glorified. Verily, verily, I-say unto-you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and-die, it abideth alone: but if it-die, it-bringeth-forth much fruit.
25 He that-loveth his life shall-lose it; and he that-hateth his life in this world shall-keep 26 φυλαξει it unto life eternal. If any-man serve me, let-him-follow me; and where I am, there shall-also my servant-be: if any-man serve me, him will-my-Father-honour.
27 Now is-my soul-troubled τεταρακται; and what shall-I-say? Father, save me from 28 this hour: but for this-cause came-I unto this hour. Father, glorify thy name. Then

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 22. Philip—one of the first disciples of our Lord, and generally mentioned in connection with Andrew—see ch. i. 44, § 10, p. 72, and ADDENDA, § 27, p. 216.

Andrew—ch. i. 40, § 10, p. 71, and ADD., § 27, p. 215.

23. Son of man . . . . glorified—These Gentiles seem to have been regarded as an earnest of the gathering of all nations to him, as the fruit of his death about to take place—comp. ver. 24, 32, ,3, infra, and see ch. vii. 39, § 55, p. 96; xiii. 31—,3, § 87, p. 373; xv. 8, § ib., p. 388; xvii. 1, § ib., p. 398.

24. Except a corn of wheat, &c.—1 Co. xv. 36, 'Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:'

25. loveth his life—Mt. x. 39, § 39, p. 302, 'He that findeth his life,' &c.—see on Mk. viii. 35, § 50, p. 42.

26. If any man, &c.—Lu. vi. 46, § 27, p. 210· Jno. xiv. 15, 'If ye love me,' &c., § 87, p. 392.

let him follow me—Mt. xvi. 24, § 56, p. 42, 'let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.'

where I am, &c.—ch. xiv. 3, § 87, 'If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.'—For this he supplicates the Father, xvii. 24, § ib., p. 404—see also 2 Co. v. 8, 'present with the Lord.'—Ph. i. 23, 'having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ;'—1 Th. iv. 17, being caught up to meet the Lord at his coming, 'so shall we ever be with the Lord.'—2 Ti. ii. 12, 'If we suffer, we shall also reign with him:'—Rev. iii. 21, 'To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne,' him will my Father honour—1 Sa. ii. 30, 'Them that honour me I will honour,'—Pr. xxvii. 18, 'he that waiteth on his master shall be honoured.'—He shall be honoured as being given communion with God now, Jno. xiv. 21—,3, § 87, p. 384, and full enjoyment hereafter, xvi. 24, ,7, § ib., p. 396—see also Mt. xxv. 34, § 86, p. 352, 'Then shall the King,' &c.

27. Now is my soul troubled—see also at the last supper, ch. xiii. 21, § 87, p. 370, and in Gethsemane, Mt. xxvi. 38, ,9, § 88, p. 413.

what shall I say?—read also interrogatively what follows, '[Shall I say] Father, save me from this hour'?

for . . . came I unto this hour—ch. xiii. 1, § 87, 'Jesus knew that his hour was come, that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.'—xvii. 37, § 90, 'To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth'—He. ii. 14, ,5, 'Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.'—x. 5—,7, 'Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: 6, in burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure. 7, Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.'

28. Father, glorify thy name—comp. ch. xxi. 19, § 97, 'This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God.'—And Ph. i. 20, 'According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.'

NOTES.

[Jno. xii. 24. Except a corn of wheat fall, &c. This is an illustration of the effect produced by his death; though the comparison is unaccompanied with application. The sense is, 'As a grain of corn cast into the earth, unless it die, remains alone, i. e., has no increase, so it must be with me; for as it must die to yield increase, so must I undergo temporal death, in order to be glorified, and produce a great spiritual harvest.']

The late resurrection of Lazarus gave our Lord a natural occasion of speaking on this subject. And agreeably to his infinite knowledge, he singles out from among so many thousands of seeds, almost the only one that dies in the earth; and which therefore was an exceeding proper similitude, peculiarly adapted to the purposes for which he uses it. The like is not to be found in any other grain except millet and the large bean.—Wesley.

25. He that loveth his life, &c. Our Lord here teaches, that those of his disciples who desire communion in his glory must not decline participation in his tribulations.

26. If any man serve me, let him, &c. Meaning, 'If any one would dedicate himself to my service, let him follow my footsteps, and be disposed to suffer all things for my name's sake; and (for his encouragement) let him be assured, that where I am, there will he be also, as partaker of my glory. Moreover, whosoever shall serve me faithfully, him will my Father reward gloriously.'—Bloomf.

[27. Now is my soul, &c. νῦν ἡ ψυχή, &c. 'If the common punctuation and interpretation be here adopted, we must suppose that, in the struggle of contending emotions, our Lord first utters, and then retracts, a prayer. Yet this view, as it is not a little objectionable, so neither is it necessary; for we may, with many of the best commentators, ancient and modern, place a mark of interrogation after τοῦτο, thus supposing two questions, as follows: 'What shall I say? [Shall I say] Father, deliver me from this hour? But for this cause came I unto this hour,' i. e., to meet this hour, or time of suffering.—Comp. Mk. xiv. 35. Thus, it seems, when about involuntarily to utter a petition, he is checked by a reflection on the end for which he came into the world; and the natural emotions of fear soon subside into a prayer for the furtherance of his Father's glory, in any way that may seem good to Him.'—Ibid.]

28. Glorify thy name. By accomplishing thy will in me, even unto my death.—Comp. ch. xiii. 31, ,2, § 87, p. 373; xvii. 1, § ib., p. 398.

Thy name. Thy name is here to be understood of God himself, in all his attributes; his wisdom, truth, mercy, justice, holiness, &c. Christ here teaches us a lesson of submission to the Divine will. Do with me what thou wilt, so that glory may redound to thee.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 20—,3. It was when Jesus was told that persons from Europe were inquiring for him, that he said, 'The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.'—24 ver. See margin.

26 ver. Let not those pretend obedience to Christ, who are unmindful of his example. Those who are willing to be with him in his suffering and humiliation, will also be with him in the enjoyment of blessing and honour from God the Father.

27, ,8 ver. Let us, after the example of the Son of God, learn obedience to our heavenly Father, having a supreme regard to the glory of his name.

JOHN xii. 29—34.

came-there a-voice from heaven, saying, I-have-both-glorified it, and will-glorify it again.
29 The people therefore, that stood-by, and heard it, said that-it-thundered βροντὴν
30 γεγονέναι: others said, An-angel spake to-him. Jesus answered and said, This voice 31 came not because-of me, but for-your-sakes. Now is the-judgment of this world: now 32 shall-the prince of this world-be-cast out. And-I, if I-be-lifted-up from the earth, will-33 draw all men unto me. This he-said, signifying what death he-should die.
34 The people answered him, We have-heard out-of-the law that Christ abideth for ever εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be-lifted-up? who is this Son

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 28. a voice from heaven—When Jesus was about to commence his public ministry, Lu. iii. 22, § 8, 'a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.'—At the transfiguration also, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55, there came 'a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.'

I have both glorified it—ch. xvii. 4, § 87, 'I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.'

and will glorify it again—ch. xv. 8, § ib., 'Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.'

30. for your sakes—ch. xi. 42, § 58, p. 131.

31. Now is the judgment—Now was it made sure that God would judge the world in righteousness, Ac. xvii. 31, 'Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.'—1 Pe. iv. 17, 8, 'For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?'

the prince of this world—ch. xiv. 30, § 87—'the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.'—xvi. 11, 'the prince of this world is judged.'—Satan is also called, Ep. ii. 2, 'the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience:' and, 2 Co. iv. 4, 'the god of this world'—The death of Christ is well calculated to destroy the influence of Satan, whether as tempting men to sin, by presenting them with the pleasures of this life, Rom. vi. 1—14; or as keeping in bondage by the fear of death, He. ii. 14, .5—1 Jno. iii. 8, 'For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.'—Satan offered to yield up his authority to Christ, if Jesus would do homage to him for the kingdom, Mt. iv. 9, § 9, p. 66—but the Son of God would rather die that he might purchase his people 'with his own blood,' Ac. xx. 28—and by that blood they obtain the victory, and Satan is cast out, Rev. xii. 10, .1—His being cast out preparatory to Messiah's reign of righteousness and peace is described, xx. 1—3.

32. if I be lifted up, &c.—Christ as lifted up upon the cross, was prefigured by the lifting up of the brazen serpent upon a pole, ch. iii. 14, .5. § 12, p. 85—It was predicted, Is. xl. 12, that the Lord 'shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.'

draw all . . . unto me—Ge. xlix. 10, 'unto him [Shiloh] shall the gathering of the people be.'—As surely as in the death of Christ upon the cross, God was shewn to be a just God and the Saviour, and would have no compromise with Satan, so surely will Israel, from all the ends of the earth, look unto Jesus, Is. xlv. 21—.4, .5, 'In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.'—The gathering together unto this One Standard, exhibited in the writings of the Old and New Testaments, is described, Eze. xxxvii. 15—22; Zec. ix. 1, 'the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.'—See the remarkable prophecy of Caiaphas, that the death of Jesus should result in the gathering 'together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad,' Jno. xi. 52, § 58, p. 133—Christ crucified 'is the power of God unto salvation,' Rom. i. 16—Justification is in Christ for all, v. 18—and it is in him that men of all nations, and ranks, and conditions, are gathered into one, Gal. iii. 28—comp. Is. liii. 10, .1.

33. This he said, signifying, &c.—this saying is referred to, ch. xviii. 32, § 90, p. 141.

34. that Christ abideth for ever—2 Sa. vii. 13, 'I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever.'—Ps.

NOTES.

Jno. xii. 28. I have both glorified it, and, &c. The meaning is, 'I have both glorified ' my name already, by thy words and works—comp. ch. i. 14, § 7, p. 43; ii. 11, § 11, p. 78; xi. 4, 40, § 58, pp. 127, .31—'and will glorify it again' by thy death, and by the consequences which shall follow it.—Comp. ver. 23, .4.—Lonsdale.

29. It thundered. The Jews knew from their fathers that, from the mercy seat, the Lord in former times spake to them through the high priest, and they said, 'An angel spake to him.' But others, among whom were probably many Gentile converts, unaccustomed to such a display of heavenly condescension, said, 'It thundered,' not knowing how to account for the supernatural communication.

30. This voice came not because of me. That is, not for my sake, as though I needed such a testimony from heaven for my own satisfaction, 'but for your sakes;' that ye, hearing the voice, may believe that the Father hath sent me, and is with me.—Comp. ch. xi. 42, § 58, p. 131.

This was the third occasion on which God the Father bore testimony to the Son, 'in the days of his flesh.'—See SCRIP. ILLUS., ver. 28.

31. Now shall the prince of this world, &c. Satan, who had gained possession of it by sin and death, 'be cast out;' that is, judged, condemned, cast out of his possession and out of the bounds of Christ's kingdom.

[Be cast out. His kingdom shall be destroyed. His empire shall come to an end. It does not mean that then his reign over all men should entirely cease, but that then would be the crisis, the grand conflict, on which he should be vanquished, and from that time his kingdom begin to decline, until it should finally cease, and men be free altogether from his dominion.—See Lu. x. 18, § 60, p. 143; Col. i. 18—20; Ac. xxvi. 18; 1 Co. xv. 25, .6; Rev. xx. 14.]

[32. If I be lifted up, &c. Here our Lord obscurely hints at the means by which the great consummation just adverted to would be accomplished; viz., by his crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, exaltation to glory, and the commencement of his office as Advocate with the Father; the first work of which would be the sending of the Holy Spirit, and thence-forward the mission of those who in every age should preach the gospel.]

34. Out of the law. This term included the prophets and all their Scriptures.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 28. The Father's name was glorified in the Son of God, the Head of the body; let us pray that it may also be glorified in all the members—the many sons he is leading unto glory, He. ii. 10.

[31 ver. The case of Christ, who was honoured of the poor, but rejected by the rich and the powerful; put to death by the noble Romans, at the instigation of the Jewish priesthood, is well calculated to make all who love truth and goodness mistrust the world, and the princes of this world.]

[32, .3 ver. By the despised Nazarene, who was lifted up on the cross, have many been elevated in

HEREIN IS MY FATHER GLORIFIED, THAT YE BEAR MUCH FRUIT.—John xv. 8.
MAY WE BE GIVEN EARS TO HEAR THE FATHER'S TESTIMONY CONCERNING JESUS.

JOHN xii. 35, .6.

35 of man? Then Jesus said unto-them, Yet a-little while is the light with you. Walk while ye-have the light, lest darkness come-upon καταλαβῃ you: for he that-walketh in 36 darkness knoweth not whither he-goeth. While ye-have light, believe in the light, that ye-may-be the-children of-light. These-things spake Jesus, and departed, and-did-hide-himself from them. (Ver. 37, § lxxxv. p. 309.)

Jesus goes to Bethany.

MATT. xxi. 17.

[a][and went out] of the city into Bethany; [b]

[c]and he-lodged there.*

MARK xi. 11.

[he went out] unto Bethany [b]with the twelve.[c]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

lxxxix. 36, 'His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me.'—cx. 4, 'The LORD hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek.'—Is. ix. 7, 'Of the increase of his government and peace . . . no end.'—liii. 11, 'He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.'—Eze. xxxvii. 25, 'my servant David shall be their prince for ever.'—Lu. i. 33, § 2, p. 10, 'He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever;' &c.

Jno. xii. 35. the light—see on ch. viii. 12, § 55, p. 100.

Walk while ye have the light—Je. xiii. 16, 'Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.'—Eph. v. 8, 'For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light:'—see on Mt. xvi. 2, 3, § 47, p. 29.

36. that ye may be the children of light—as being children of Jerusalem, they were in darkness and devoted to destruction, Lu. xix. 42—4, p. 264, supra—comp. 1 Th. v. 3—5, 'For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. 4, But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. 5, Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.'—1 Jno. ii. 9—11, 'He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. 10, He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. 11, But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.'

did hide himself—ch. viii. 59, § 55, p. 108—He had said, Lu. xix. 42, p. 264, 'If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.'

NOTES.

[τίς ἐστιν—ἀνθρώπου. 'This is not well rendered by our English translators, 'Who is that Son of man?' since τίς is here for ποῖος (like quis for qualis in Latin), as in Mk. i. 27, § 17, p. 111; vi. 2, § 37, p. 227; Lu. i. 66. § 3, p. 16; Jno. vii. 36, § 55, p. 95; and often. Render, 'What sort of Son of man is that to be?' To this question our Lord, ver. 35, only replies indirectly, and by allegory; hinting at their erroneous opinions concerning the Messiah, by advertising to the opportunity, which they now have, for obtaining light to dissipate the clouds of error under which they labour; an opportunity which they must use while they have it, lest they be overtaken by that moral darkness, through the absence of spiritual light, which would disable them from directing their course aright. Here, as on other occasions, our Lord, knowing that he is addressing those who 'could not hear his word,' their carnal passions and preconceived opinions blinding their understandings, and rendering them inaccessible to the truth, offers no explanation—comp. viii. 21, with vii. 33, § ib., pp. 94, 101—but, instead thereof, a solemn warning.'—Bloomf.]

Jno. xii. 35. The light. See on ch. i. 4, 5, § 7, p. 46. It is probable that they understood this as denoting the Messiah; and ch. viii. 12, 'I am the light of the world;' ch. ix. 4, § 55, pp. 100, .9.

36. Believe in the light. Believe in me as being 'the light of the world.'—Comp. ver. 46, § 85, p. 311.

That ye may be the children, &c. That ye may be the friends and followers of the Messiah, Eph. v. 8, 'Now are ye light in the Lord: walk as,' &c.

The children of light. Such as live under the guidance and comfort of spiritual light.

Mt. xxi. 17. Bethany. Takes its name from a Greek word signifying the dates of palm trees, which grew there in great plenty.—See GEOG. NOT. § 58, p. 134.

He lodged there. 'He passed the night,' not in the village, at the house of Lazarus, but probably among the olive trees with which the district abounded; for it is added, 'on the morrow, . . . he was hungry,' Mk. xi. 12, § 83, p. 275.—See Lu. xxi. 37, § 86, p. 257.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the social scale. Jesus has honoured the meanest and most suffering condition among men, and taught us not to take our opinions from mere human authority, but to search for the truth, even in the depths of poverty, and to receive it even from those who are despised and rejected of men.]

[In the humiliation of Christ we have an assurance of his glorification. At length the eyes of all nations shall be drawn unto him who is our Peace; 'the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD,' Zec. ix. 1.]

[As truly as Jesus was lifted up to suffer an ignominious death upon the cross, shall the cross be lifted up as the standard around which all Israel will assemble to hail him as their King.]

Jno. xii. 35, .6. The same truth which Jesus taught by healing the blind and the lame in the temple, he seems again to teach, when he advises the Jews to make use of the light while they may, ere they are involved in the darkness, and left to wander therein.]

36 ver. The same truth Jesus further expressed by departing and hiding himself from them, as if telling them that he with whom are the things that belong to our peace, was soon to be indeed hid from their eyes.

The case of the Jews has for many centuries been fulfilling the warning words of Jesus. Let us thereby be abundantly confirmed in our faith, and admonished to improve the day of our merciful visitation.

* 'It would seem that, upon this occasion, he must barely, as it were, have appeared in the temple, and as speedily departed from it again, which would be so far simply to present himself before God, ... in his capacity of the paschal sacrifice, now ready to be offered up, as making atonement for the sins of the world.'—Gresswell.—And see ADDENDA, p. 274, first par., second col.

ABIDE IN ME, AND I IN YOU. AS THE BRANCH CANNOT BEAR FRUIT OF ITSELF, EXCEPT IT ABIDE IN THE VINE; NO MORE CAN YE, EXCEPT YE ABIDE IN ME.—John xv. 4.

For GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE OF JERUSALEM, as referred to at Section IV. p. 118, see Section 92, p. 479.

ADDENDA.

THE TEMPLE.—And see Sect. I, p. 8, Vol. I.

'When an augur had defined a space in which he intended to make his observations, he fixed his tent in it (tabernaculum capere), with planks and curtains. In the ars this was not necessary because there was a permanent auguraculum. The Septuagint translation usually renders הֵיכָל, 'temple,' by οἶκος, or ναός, but in the Apocrypha and the New Testament it is generally called τὸ ἱερόν. Rabbinical appellations are בֵּית הַמִּקְדָּשׁ, the house of sanctuary, בֵּית הַבְּחִירָה, the chosen house, בֵּית הָעֲלָמִים, the house of ages, because the ark was not transferred from it, as it was from Gilgal after twenty-four, from Shiloh after three hundred and sixty-nine, from Nob after thirteen, and from Gibeon after fifty years. It is also called מִשְׁכָּן. After the Israelites had exchanged their nomadic life for a life in permanent habitations, it was becoming that they should exchange also their moveable sanctuary or tabernacle for a temple. David collected materials which were afterwards employed in the erection of the temple, which was commenced four years after his death, about B.C. 1012, in the second month, that is, the month of Zif (comp. 1 Ki. vi. 1; 2 Chr. iii. 2), four hundred and eighty years after the exodus from Egypt. We thus learn that the Israelitish sanctuary had remained moveable more than four centuries subsequent to the conquest of Canaan. 1 Ki. vi. 37, 38. "In the fourth year (of Solomon's reign) was the foundation of the house of the LORD laid, in the month Zif (April): and in the eleventh year, in the month Bul (October), which is the eighth month, was the house finished throughout all the parts thereof, and according to all the fashion of it. So was he seven years in building it."

'The site of the temple is clearly stated in 2 Chr. iii. 1, "Then Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshingfloor of Ornan (or, Araunah) the Jebusite." According to Josephus (De Bell. Jud. v. 5), the foundations of the temple were laid on a steep eminence, the summit of which was at first insufficient for the temple and altar. As it was surrounded by precipices, it became necessary to build up walls and buttresses in order to gain more ground by filling up the interval with earth. The hill was also fortified by a threefold wall, the lowest tier of which was in some places more than three hundred cubits high; and the depth of the foundation was not visible, because it had been necessary in some parts to dig deep into the ground, in order to obtain sufficient support.

'The temple itself and its utensils are described in 1 Ki. vi., vii., and 2 Chr. iii., iv.

'Divines and architects have repeatedly endeavoured to represent the architectural proportions of the temple, which was sixty cubits long, twenty wide, and thirty high. Josephus, however (Antiq. viii. 3, 2), says, "The temple was sixty cubits high, and sixty cubits in length; and its breadth was twenty cubits; above this was another stage of equal dimensions, so that the height of the whole structure was one hundred and twenty cubits." It is difficult to reconcile this statement with that given in 1 Kings, unless we suppose that the words ἴσος τοῖς μήκεσιν, equal in measures, do not signify an equality in all dimensions, but only as much as equal in the number of cubits; so that the porch formed a kind of steeple, which projected as much above the roof of the temple as the roof itself was elevated above its foundations. As the chronicles agree with Josephus in asserting that the summit of the porch was one hundred and twenty cubits high, there remains still another apparent contradiction to be solved, namely, how Josephus could assert that the temple itself was sixty cubits high, while we read in 1 Kings that its height was only thirty cubits. We suppose that in the book of Kings the internal elevation of the sanctuary is stated, and that Josephus describes its external elevation, which, including the basement and an upper story (which may have existed, consisting of rooms for the accommodation of priests, containing also vestries and treasuries), might be double the internal height of the sanctuary. The internal dimension of the "holy," which was called in preference הֵיכָל, was forty cubits long, twenty cubits wide, and thirty cubits high. The holy was separated from the "Holy of holies" (דְּבִיר) by a partition, a large opening in which was closed by a suspended curtain. The Holy of holies was on the western extremity of the entire building, and its internal dimensions formed a cube of twenty cubits. On the eastern extremity of the building stood the porch, אוּלָם, πρόναος. At the entrance of this promaos stood the two columns called Jachin and Boaz, which were twenty-three cubits high.

'The temple was also surrounded by three יְצִיעַ, stories of chambers, each of which stories was five cubits high, so that there remained above ample space for introducing the windows, requisite more for ventilation than for the admission of light into the sanctuary.

'The lowest story of the chambers was five cubits, the middle six, and the third seven cubits wide. This difference of the width arose from the circumstance that the external walls of the temple were so thick that they were made to recede one cubit after an elevation of five feet, so that the scarcement in the wall of the temple gave a firm support to the beams which supported the second story, without being inserted into the wall of the sanctuary; which insertion was perhaps avoided not merely for architectural reasons, but also because it appeared to be irreverent. The third story was supported likewise by a similar scarcement, which afforded a still wider space for the chamber of the third story. These observations will render intelligible the biblical statements:—1 Ki. vi. 5, 6, "And against the wall of the house he built chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the oracle: and he made chambers round about: the nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made narrowed rests (מִגְרָעוֹת, narrowings or rebatements) round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house."

'In reference to the windows it should be observed, that they served chiefly for ventilation, since the light within the temple was obtained from the sacred candlesticks. It seems from the descriptions of the temple to be certain that the דְּבִיר, oracle, or Holy of holies, was an adytum without windows. To this fact Solomon seems to refer when he spake, "The LORD said that he would dwell in the thick darkness." 1 Ki. viii. 12.

'The דְּבִיר, oracle had perhaps no other opening besides the entrance, which was, as we may infer from the prophetic visions of Ezekiel (which probably correspond with the historic temple of Solomon), six cubits wide.

'From 1 Ki. vii. 10, we learn that the private dwellings of Solomon were built of massive stone. We hence infer that the framework of the temple also consisted of the same material. The temple was, however, wainscoted with cedar wood, which was covered with gold. The boards within the temple were ornamented by beautiful carvings, representing cherubim, palms, and flowers. The ceiling of the temple was supported by beams of cedar wood (comp. Eres; Pliny, Hist. Nat. xvi. 89). The wall which separated the holy from the Holy of holies, probably consisted not of stone, but of beams of cedar. It seems, further, that the partitions partly consisted of an opus reticulatum; so that the incense could spread from the holy to the most holy. This we infer from 1 Ki. vi. 21, "So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition by the chains of gold before the oracle; and he overlaid it with gold."

'The floor of the temple was throughout of cedar, but boarded over with planks of fir, 1 Ki. vi. 15. The doors of the oracle were composed of olive tree; but the doors of the outer temple had posts of olive tree, and leaves of fir. 1 Ki. vi. 31, sq. Both doors, as well that which led into the temple as that which led from the holy to the Holy of holies, had folding leaves, which, however, seem to have been usually kept open, the aperture being closed by a suspended curtain, a contrivance still seen at the church doors in Italy, where the church doors usually stand open, but the doorways can be passed only by moving aside a heavy curtain. From 2 Chr. iii. 5, it appears that the greater house was also ceiled with fir. It is stated in ver. 9, that "the weight of the nails (employed in the temple) was fifty shekels of gold." And also that Solomon "overlaid the upper chambers with gold."

PRAISE THE LORD WITH HARP: SING UNTO HIM WITH THE PSALTERY AND AN INSTRUMENT OF TEN STRINGS.—Psa. xxxiii. 2.
HE LOVETH RIGHTEOUSNESS AND JUDGMENT: THE EARTH IS FULL OF THE GOODNESS OF THE LORD.—Psa. xxxiii. 5.

'The lintel and side posts of the oracle seem to have circumscribed a space which contained one-fifth of the whole area of the partition; and the posts of the door of the temple one-fourth of the area of the wall in which they were placed. Thus we understand the passage, 1 Ki. vi. 31—5, which also states that the door was covered with carved work, overlaid with gold.

'Within the Holy of holies stood only the ark of the covenant; but within the holy were ten golden candlesticks, and the altar of incense.

'The temple was surrounded by an inner court, which in Chronicles is called the court of the priests, and in Jeremiah the upper court. This again was surrounded by a wall consisting of cedar beams, placed on a stone foundation, 1 Ki. vi. 36, "And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams." This enclosure, according to Josephus (Antiq. viii. 3, 9), was three cubits high. Besides this inner court, there is mentioned a great court, 2 Chr. iv. 9: "Furthermore he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass." It seems that this was also called the outward court.—Comp. Ezek. xliv. 17. This court was also more especially called the court of the Lord's house, Je. xix. 14; xxvi. 2. These courts were surrounded by spacious buildings, which, however, according to Josephus (De Bell. Jud. v. 5, 1), seem to have been partly added at a period later than that of Solomon. The third entry into the house of the Lord mentioned in Je. xxxviii. 14, does not seem to indicate that there were three courts, but appears to mean that the entry into the outer court was called the first, that into the inner court the second, and the door of the sanctuary the third. It is likely that these courts were quadrilateral. . . . The inner court contained towards the east the altar of burnt-offering, the brazen sea, and ten brazen lavers; and it seems that the sanctuary did not stand in the centre of the inner court, but more towards the west. From these descriptions we learn that the temple of Solomon was not distinguished by magnitude, but by good architectural proportions, beauty of workmanship, and costliness of materials.

'There was a treasury in the temple, in which much precious metal was collected for the maintenance of public worship. The gold and silver of the temple was, however, frequently applied to political purposes, 1 Ki. xv. 18, sq.; 2 Ki. xii. 18; xvi. 8; xviii. 15. The treasury of the temple was repeatedly plundered by foreign invaders. For instance, by Shishak, 1 Ki. xiv. 26; by Jehoash, king of Israel, 2 Ki. xiv. 14; by Nebuchadnezzar, xxiv. 13; and lastly, again by Nebuchadnezzar, who, having removed the valuable contents, caused the temple to be burned down, xxv. 9, sq., B.C. 588. The building had stood since its completion four hundred and seventeen or four hundred and eighteen years (Josephus has four hundred and seventy, and Ruffinus three hundred and seventy years). Thus terminated what the later Jews called בית הראשון, the first house.

'In many writers on the temple the biblical statements concerning the first, or Solomon's temple, are confounded not merely with the temple in the prophetic visions of Ezekiel, but also with descriptions of the temple erected by Zerubbabel, and even with the later structures of Herod.

THE SECOND TEMPLE.

'In the year B.C. 536, the Jews obtained permission from Cyrus to colonize their native land. Cyrus commanded also that the sacred utensils which had been pillaged from the first temple should be restored, and that for the restoration of the temple assistance should be granted, Ezr. i., vi.; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, sq. The first colony which returned under Zerubbabel and Joshua having collected the necessary means, and having also obtained the assistance of Phœnician workmen, commenced in the second year after their return, B.C. 534, the rebuilding of the temple. The Sidonians brought rafts of cedar trees from Lebanon to Joppa. The Jews refused the co-operation of the Samaritans, who being thereby offended, induced the king Artaxerxes (probably Smerdis) to prohibit the building. And it was only in the second year of Darius Hystaspis, B.C. 520, that the building was resumed. It was completed in the sixth year of this king, B.C. 516.—Comp. Ezr. v., vi.; Ha. i. 15. According to Josephus (Antiq. xi. 4, 7), the temple was completed in the ninth year of the reign of Darius.

'This second temple was erected on the site of the former, and probably after the same plan. According to the plan of Cyrus, the new temple was sixty cubits high, and sixty cubits wide. It appears from Josephus, that the height is to be understood of the porch; for we learn from the speech of Herod which he records, that the second temple was sixty cubits lower than the first, whose porch was one hundred and twenty cubits high.—Comp. Joseph. Antiq. xv. 11. 1. The old men who had seen the first temple were moved to tears on beholding the second, which appeared like nothing in comparison with the first, Ezr. iii. 12; Ha. ii. 3, sq. It seems, therefore, that it was not so much in dimensions that the second temple was inferior to the first, as in splendour, and in being deprived of the ark of the covenant. . . . The temple of Zerubbabel had several courts (αὐλαί) and cloister cells (παστάδαι). Josephus distinguishes an internal and external ἱερόν, and mentions cloisters in the courts. This temple was connected with the town by means of a bridge (Antiq. xiv. 4). During the wars, from B.C. 175, to B.C. 163, it was pillaged and desecrated by Antiochus Epiphanes, who introduced into it idolatrous rites (2 Mac. vi. 2, 5), dedicating the temple to Jupiter Olympius, and the temple on mount Gerizim, in allusion to the foreign origin of its worshippers, to Jupiter, Ξενίου. The temple became so desolate that it was overgrown with vegetation (1 Mac. iv. 38; 2 Mac. vi. 4). Judas Maccabæus expelled the Syrians and restored the sanctuary, but was not able to repair the building, furnished new utensils, and erected fortifications against future attacks (1 Mac. iv. 43—60; vi. 7; 2 Mac. i. 18; x. 3). Alexander Jannæus, about B.C. 106, separated the court of the priests from the external court by a wooden railing (Joseph. Antiq. xviii. 5). During the contentions among the later Maccabees, Pompey attacked the temple from the north side, caused a great massacre in its courts, but abstained from plundering the treasury, although he even entered the Holy of holies, B.C. 63 (Joseph. Antiq. xiv. 4). Herod the Great, with the assistance of Roman troops, stormed the temple, B.C. 37.

TEMPLE OF HEROD.

'Herod, wishing to ingratiate himself with the church and state party, and being fond of architectural display, undertook not merely to repair the second temple, but to raise a perfectly new structure. As, however, the temple of Zerubbabel was not actually destroyed, but only removed after the preparations for the new temple were completed, there has arisen some debate whether the temple of Herod could properly be called the third temple.

'The reason why the temple of Zerubbabel was not at once taken down, in order to make room for the more splendid structure of Herod, is explained by Josephus, who follows (Joseph. Antiq. xv. 11, 2):—The Jews were afraid that Herod would pull down the whole edifice, and not be able to carry his intentions as to its rebuilding into effect; and this danger appeared to them to be very great, and the vastness of the undertaking to be such as could hardly be accomplished. But while they were in this disposition, the king encouraged them, and told them he would not pull down their temple till all things were gotten ready for building it up entirely.

'And as Herod promised them this beforehand, so he did not break his word with them, but got ready a thousand waggons, that were to bring stones for this building, and chose out ten thousand of the most skilful workmen, and bought a thousand sacerdotal garments for as many of the priests, and had some of them taught the arts of stonecutters, and others of carpenters, and then began to build; but this not till everything was well prepared for the work.

'The work was commenced in the eighteenth year of the reign of Herod; that is, about the year 734–35 from the building of Rome, or about twenty or twenty-one years before the christian era. Priests and Levites finished the temple itself in one year and a half. The out-buildings and courts required eight years. However, some building operations were constantly in progress under the successors of Herod, and it is in reference to this we are informed that the temple was finished only under Albinus, the last procurator but one, not long before the commencement of the Jewish war, in which the temple was again destroyed. It is in reference also to these protracted building operations that the Jews said to Jesus, 'Forty and six years was this temple in building,' Jno. ii. 20.

'The whole of the structures belonging to the temple were a stadium square, and consequently four stadia (or half a Roman mile) in circumference. The temple was situated on the highest point, not quite in the centre, but rather to the north-western corner of this square, and was surrounded by various courts, the innermost of which was higher than the next outward, which descended in terraces. The temple, consequently, was visible from the town, notwithstanding its various high enclosures. The inner court was called הר הבית, the mountain of the house, τὸ ὄρος τοῦ ἱεροῦ (1 Mac. xiii. 52). According to Middoth, i. 3, this mountain of the house had five gates, two towards the south, and one towards each of the other quarters. The principal gate was that towards the east; it was called the gate Susan, and a representation of the town of Susa, sculptured in relief, was affixed to it. This had been preserved from the days of Zerubbabel, when the Jews were anxious to express by all means their loyal submission to the Persian power. Most interpreters consider it the same which in Ac. iii. 2, 10, is called πύλη ὡραία, the beautiful gate. It seems, however, that besides these five principal gates there were some other entrances, because Josephus speaks of four gates on the west, and several on the south. Annexed to the outer wall were halls which surrounded the temple, and were thirty cubits wide, except on the south side, where the βασιλικὴ στοά, the royal hall, seems to have been threefold, or four times wider than the other halls. The roofs of these halls were of cedar-wood, and were supported by marble columns twenty-five cubits high. The Levites resided in these halls. There was also a synagogue where the Talmudic doctors might be asked questions, and where their decisions might be heard, Lu. ii. 46. These halls seem likewise to have formed a kind of lounge for religionists; they appear to have been spacious enough to afford opportunities for religious teachers to address knots of hearers. Thus we find that Jesus had there various opportunities for addressing the people and refuting cavillers.

'Here also the first Christians could daily assemble with one accord, Ac. ii. 46. Within this outer court money-changers and cattle-dealers transacted a profitable business, especially during the time of passover. The priests took only shekels of full weight, that is, shekels of the sanctuary, even after the general currency had been deteriorated: hence the frequent opportunity of money-changers to accommodate for agio the worshippers, most of whom arrived from abroad unprovided with the right coin. The profaneness to which this money-changing and cattle-dealing gave rise caused the indignation of our Lord, who suddenly expelled all these sharks from their stronghold of business, Mt. xxi. 12, sq.; [Mk. xi. 15—7; Lu. xix. 45, .6;] § 83, pp. 276, .8; Jno. ii. 13—7, § 12, p. 81.

'The surface of this outer court was paved with stones of various colours. A stone balustrade, סורג, which according to some statements was three cubits high, and according to Middoth ten hands high, was several steps higher up the mountain than this outer court, and prevented the too near approach of the heathens to the next court. For this purpose there were also erected columns at certain distances within this balustrade, on which there were Greek and Latin inscriptions, interdicting all heathens, under penalty of death, to advance farther, Josephi. De Bell. Jud. vi. 2, 4; Philo, Opera, ii. 577.—Comp. Ac. xxi. 28, where Paul is accused of having brought Greeks into the temple, and thus polluting the holy place.

'Higher up than this balustrade was a wall of the court called חיל. This wall was from its foundation forty cubits high, but from within the court it appeared to be only twenty-five cubits high. To this higher court led a staircase and gate on the eastern side of the square. This staircase first led into the עזרת נשים, γυναικωνίτις, τὸ τῶν γυναικῶν περιβόλωμα, the court of the women, which was 135 cubits square. Again, fifteen steps higher up was the principal entrance to the עזרת ישראל, the court of the Israelites, i.e., the men, on the eastern side of the temple. On the other sides only five steps led up from the court of the women to that of the men. But the fifteen steps, each of which was lower than each of the five steps, seem to have terminated in the same level. Over the gates were structures more than forty cubits high, in which were rooms. Each of the gates was adorned with two columns, which were twelve cubits in circumference. In these gates were folding-doors, each of which was thirty cubits high and fifteen wide: they were plated with gold and silver. The gate towards the east, being the principal one, was of Corinthian brass, and was higher, larger, and more adorned with precious metal than the rest. Within the walls of this court were halls supported by beautiful columns. The court of the priests was separated from that of the Israelites by a low stone balustrade one cubit high. The whole space which was occupied by the court of the Israelites and that of the priests, together with the temple, was from east to west 187 cubits, and from north to south 135 cubits. Each of these courts was eleven cubits wide, in which measurement that of the halls seems not to have been included.—Comp. Middoth ii. 6. The court of the priests surrounded the whole temple. On the west, north, and southern sides were magazines of salt, wood, water, &c., and on the south side also was the place of meeting for the sanhedrim. Towards the east, with entrances from the court of the women, were two rooms in which the musical instruments were deposited; towards the north-west were four rooms in which the lambs for the daily sacrifice were kept, the shew-bread baked, &c.—Comp. 1 Chr. ix. 33. In the four corners of the court of the women were lazarettos and quarantine establishments for the reception of persons suspected of leprosy and other infectious diseases: there was also a physician appointed to treat the priests who were unwell. There were several alms-boxes within the various courts, which had the shape of trumpets, and which sometimes are called γαζοφυλάκια, or also collectively τὸ γαζοφυλάκιον. All the courts were paved with flat stones. From the various statements concerning the court of the women, it is evident that this appellation did not mean a place exclusively devoted to the women, but rather a place to which even women were admitted, together with other persons who were not allowed to advance farther. The temple itself, ὁ ναός, was fifteen steps higher than the court of the Israelites, and stood, not in the middle, but rather towards the north-western corner of the court of the priests. In the usual plans of the temple the passage in Middoth ii. 1, has been disregarded. This passage clearly states that the temple was not in the centre: "The greatest space was from the south, the next greatest from the east, the third from the north, and the least from the west. The foundations of the temple consisted of blocks of white marble, some of which were forty-five cubits long, six cubits wide, and five cubits high. The porch measured externally a hundred cubits in width; the remaining part of the building sixty or seventy cubits." Thus it appears that the porch projected on each side from fifteen to twenty cubits. The difference of measurement between Josephus and the Talmud may be accounted for by the difference of internal and external width. The projections of the porch were like shoulders ὥσπερ ὦμοι. The whole building was a hundred or a hundred and ten cubits long, and a hundred cubits high. The internal measurement of the porch was fifty cubits by twenty, and ninety cubits in height. The holy was forty cubits by twenty, and sixty cubits high; the Holy of holies was twenty cubits square and sixty cubits high. According to Middoth the porch was only eleven cubits, the holy forty cubits, the Holy of holies twenty cubits, and behind this last there was a vestry of six cubits. The remaining twenty-three cubits were distributed among the diameters of the several walls, so that the whole was a hundred cubits long. In the eastern front, which was a hundred cubits square, was a proportionate gate, seventy cubits high and twenty-five cubits wide. Above the holy and Holy of holies were upper rooms. On the summit of the temple, κατὰ κορυφὴν, were spikes ἥλοι, which resembled our conductors in shape, and were intended to prevent birds from settling on the temple. Middoth, iv. 6, calls these spikes, שׁוּרָב בּוֹלֵד, scare-crows, or literally scare-ravens. It seems that the roof was flat, and surrounded by a balustrade three cubits high. On the north and south side of the temple were three stories of chambers, which were much higher than those of the Solomonic temple, but did not entirely conceal the temple itself, because it projected above them. The spaces on the north and south sides of the porch contained the apparatus for slaughtering the sacrifices, and were called בֵּית הַחִלְפוֹת, the house of knives.

THERE IS NO KING SAVED BY THE MULTITUDE OF AN HOST: A MIGHTY MAN IS NOT DELIVERED BY MUCH STRENGTH.—Psa. xxxiii. 16.

AN HORSE IS A VAIN THING FOR SAFETY: NEITHER SHALL HE DELIVER ANY BY HIS GREAT STRENGTH.—Psa. xxxiii. 17.

'The Holy of holies was entirely empty, ἦκεινο οὐδὲν ἦν ἐν αὐτῷ, Joseph. De Bell. Jud. v. 5, 5; however, there was a stone in the place of the ark of the covenant, called אֶבֶן שְׁתִיָּה, on which the high-priest placed the censer. Before the entrance of the Holy of holies was suspended a curtain, which was torn by the earthquake that followed after the crucifixion. The rabbis talk of two curtains, between which was a space of one cubit, suspended before the Holy of holies. The folding doors between the porch and the holy were twenty cubits high and ten cubits wide; but the entrance itself, with its mouldings, was fifty-five cubits high and sixteen cubits wide. These doors stood open; there were, however, behind them some other doors which were shut, and before which a splendid Babylonian byssus curtain was suspended, in colours and workmanship similar to that of the Solomonic temple. The entrance to the porch was externally seventy cubits high and twenty-five cubits wide, with folding doors of forty cubits high and twenty cubits wide. These doors were usually kept open. This entrance to the porch was adorned by a colossal golden vine, גֶּפֶן שֶׁל זָהָב, whose grapes were as big as men (Jani. De vite aurea templi Hierosolymitani, in Ugolino, tom. ix.) This vine was a symbolical representation of the "noble vine," Jer. ii. 21; Eze. xix. 10; Joel i. 7, and of the vineyard, Is. v., under which the prophets represent their nation. It is very likely that this vine also gave an opportunity to the parable of the vine, Jno. xv., and to the strange misconception of pagan scribblers that the Jews worshipped Bacchus.

'Within the porch were a golden and a marble table, on which the priest who entered the sanctuary daily deposited the old and the new shewbread. Before the porch, towards the south, were the כִּיּוֹר, brazier or fire-pan, and the altar for burnt-offerings; towards the north were six rows of rings attached to the pavement, to which the sacrifices to be killed were fastened; also eight low columns overlaid with cedar beams, from which the beasts that had been killed were suspended in order to be skinned. Between these columns stood שֻׁלְחָנוֹת שֶׁל שַׁיִשׁ, marble tables, on which the flesh and entrails were deposited. On the western side of the altar stood a marble table, on which the fat was deposited, and a silver table, on which the various utensils were placed.

'The temple was situated upon the south-eastern corner of mount Moriah, which is separated to the east by a precipitous ravine and the Kidron from the mount of Olives: the mount of Olives is much higher than Moriah. The temple was in ancient warfare almost impregnable, from the ravines at the precipitous edge of which it stood; but it required more artificial fortifications on its western and northern sides, which were surrounded by the city of Jerusalem; for this reason there was erected at its north-western corner the tower of Antonia, which although standing on a lower level than the temple itself, was so high as to overlook the sacred buildings with which it was connected, partly by a large staircase, partly by a subterraneous communication. This tower protected the temple from sudden incursions from the city of Jerusalem, and from dangerous commotions among the thousands who were frequently assembled within the precincts of the courts; which also were sometimes used for popular meetings.

'The temple treasury, ὁ ἱερὸς θησαυρὸς, was managed by an inspector, γαζοφύλαξ, נִגִּיד, and it contained the great sums which were annually paid in by the Israelites, each of whom paid a half-shekel, and many of whom sent donations in money, and precious vessels, ἀναθήματα. Such costly presents were especially transmitted by rich proselytes, and even sometimes by pagan princes, 2 Mac. iii. 3; Joseph. Antiq. xiv. 16, 4; xviii. 3, 5; xix. 6, 1; De Bell. Jud. ii. 17, 3; v. 13, 6; c. Apion. ii. 5; Philo, Opp. ii. 59, sq.; 569. It is said especially that Ptol. Philadelphus was very liberal to the temple, in order to prove his gratitude for having been permitted to procure the Septuagint translation, Aristeas, De Translat. LXX., 108, sq. The gifts exhibited in the temple are mentioned in Lu. xxi. 5; we find even that the rents of the whole town of Ptolemais were given to the temple, 1 Mac. x. 39. There were also preserved historical curiosities, 2 Ki. xi. 10, especially the arms of celebrated heroes (Joseph. Antiq. xix. 6, 1): this was also the case in the tabernacle.

'The temple was of so much political importance that it had its own guards, φύλακες τοῦ ἱεροῦ, which were commanded by a στρατηγός.

'Twenty men were required for opening and shutting the eastern gate, Joseph. De Bell. Jud. vi. 5, 3; c. Apion. ii. 9; Antiq. vi. 5, 3; xvii. 2, 2. The στρατηγός had his own secretary, Antiq. xx. 6, 2; 9, 3, and had to maintain the police in the courts.—Comp. Ac. iv. 1; v. 24. He appears to have been of sufficient dignity to be mentioned together with the chief priests. It seems that his Hebrew title was הַבַּיִת אִישׁ הַר, the man of the mountain of the house.

'The priests themselves kept watch on three different posts, and the Levites on twenty-one posts.

'The various office bearers in the temple were called στρατηγοὶ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, captains or officers of the temple, Lu. xxii. 52, § 88, p. 421, while their chief was simply designated στρατηγός.

'During the final struggle of the Jews against the Romans, A.D. 70, the temple was the last scene of the fury of war. The Romans rushed from the tower Antonia into the sacred precincts, the halls of which were set on fire by the Jews themselves. It was against the will of Titus that a Roman soldier threw a firebrand into the northern outbuildings of the temple, which caused the conflagration of the whole structure, although Titus himself endeavoured to extinguish the fire, Joseph. De Bell. Jud. vi. 4.

'The sacred utensils, the golden table of the shewbread, the book of the law, and the golden candlestick, were displayed in the triumph at Rome. The place where the temple had stood seemed to be a dangerous centre for the rebellious population, until, in A.D. 136, the emperor Hadrian founded a Roman colony, under the name Ælia Capitolina, on the ruins of Jerusalem, and dedicated a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus on the ruins of the temple of Jehovah. Henceforth no Jew was permitted to approach the site of the ancient temple, although the worshippers of Jehovah were in derision compelled to pay a tax for the maintenance of the temple of Jupiter. Under the reign of Constantine the Great some Jews were severely punished for having attempted to restore the temple.—Comp. Fabricii Lux Evangelii, p. 124.

'The emperor Julian undertook, A.D. 363, to rebuild the temple; but after considerable preparations and much expense, he was compelled to desist by flames which burst forth from the foundations. Repeated attempts have been made to account for these igneous explosions by natural causes; for instance, by the ignition of gases which had long been pent up in subterraneous vaults. A similar event is mentioned by Josephus, Antiq. xvi. 7, 1, where we are informed that Herod, while plundering the tombs of David and Solomon, was suddenly frightened by flames which burst out and killed two of his soldiers.

'A splendid mosque now stands on the site of the temple. This mosque was erected by the caliph Omar after the conquest of Jerusalem by the Saracens, A.D. 636. It seems that Omar changed a christian church, that stood on the ground of the temple, into this mosque, which is called El Aksa, the outer, or northern, because it is the third of the most celebrated mosques, two of which, namely those of Mecca and Medina, are in a more southern latitude.'—Kitto's Bib. Cyclo., art. 'Temple,' pp. 833—42.

ADDENDA.

ON THE DAY OF THE PROCESSION TO THE TEMPLE.

'The resort of the Jews to Bethany, to see Jesus and Lazarus, who was also there, could not have been prior to his arrival, and was doubtless produced by the news of the arrival itself. Yet it could not have begun on the day of that arrival; first, because the arrival, as we have proved, was either on the sabbath, or one hour after its close. . . . .

'It may be taken for granted, then, that the time of the resort belongs, at the earliest, to the ensuing day, the morning of the ninth of Nisan, Sunday in Passion-week, and the thirty-first of the Julian March: a conclusion which the interposed account of the supper, if that be regular, demonstrates beyond a question. If the resort was after that supper, it must have been on the ninth of Nisan.

'All this day, Jesus continued in Bethany; and if we consider the proximity of that village to Jerusalem, the pre-existing impatience of the people to see our Lord, Jno. xi. 55, .6, § 81, p. 252, and the prodigious numbers which, in addition to its own population, were always present in Jerusalem at the time of the Passover, we shall not doubt that this passing to and fro would quickly begin, and when begun would go on with such bustle and celerity, as to attract the notice of the Sanhedrim, whose eyes all along had been fixed on Jesus; and, as being produced in part by the desire of seeing Lazarus, the living witness of his own resurrection, would speedily induce them to deliberate on the best mode of removing him also. The probable absence of Lazarus from Jerusalem until now, ... is a sufficient reason why this resolution should not have been conceived before; and his return at this time in company with Jesus, followed by the curiosity which his presence excited, as naturally accounts for it now. The sensible proof of so stupendous a miracle, furnished by his personal reappearance on the spot, made as many converts as the preaching of our Lord himself.

'It will follow from this conclusion, that the day of the procession to the temple, which Jno. xii. 12, denominates τῇ ἐπαύριον, the day after this resort, must have been the second day of the week, the Jewish tenth of Nisan, and the Julian first of April. If so, this procession is erroneously assigned to the Sunday in Passion-week, thence commouly called Palm Sunday; and does in reality belong to the Monday. . . . .

'If Jesus was to suffer on the Friday, he must keep his own Passover on the Thursday; he could not both keep it himself, and fulfil it by suffering upon the feast day at the same time. And if he was to keep his own Passover on the Thursday, he must take leave of the people, and formally close his ministry, on the Wednesday; he could not both be employed on the next day, as he had been for the two days before, and keeping his Passover also. Nor is it improbable that the three days thus spent in public, from Monday in Passion-week to Wednesday inclusive, during which he was conversant in the temple before his enemies as well as his friends, contained a secret reference to those three years of his ministry previously. Each, reckoned on the principle of the Jewish computation, would terminate alike the day before he consummated the final purpose of his mission itself; viz., on the thirteenth of the Jewish Nisan. For he proceeded to the temple on Monday, and he finally quitted it on the Wednesday; upon the morning of the Jewish tenth of Nisan in the one case, and on the evening of the Jewish thirteenth in the other. We may observe also a further analogy between these three days and the three years of the christian ministry. On the first our Lord went to the temple amidst the acclamations of the people, and welcomed by all as their Messiah: on the second he was received with ambiguous favour, and minds wavering between faith and unbelief; on the third this feeling was still more increased; and at the close of that day, his enemies, as we shall see hereafter, concerted with Judas the scheme of his death. The same description of the effect, mutatis mutandis, might apply to the three years of his ministry.

'The Gospel of St. John, which has hitherto gone by itself, it is manifest still stands alone from xii. 12, to 13, where the proceedings of Monday, the tenth of Nisan, and the first of April, begin to be related. The fact of the resort from Jerusalem to Bethany, produced by the news that our Lord was coming to the city, and the specifical circumstance that his procession set out from Bethany, are peculiar to his account — see p. 259. Bethphage, indeed, through which the three other evangelists make it to pass, lay upon the slope of mount Olivet (Euseb. et Hieron. De Situ et Nominibus.), as well as Bethany, and nearer to Jerusalem than it; in which case, a procession from Bethany towards Jerusalem would pass through or by Bethphage.

'The reason, however, why Bethphage, in St. Mark and in St. Luke, is placed before Bethany is probably this—that as, according to Epiphanius, Oper. i. 340, 2 Sa. xv. 23, 30; xvii. 22; φύσει (γὰρ) λευφόρος ἦν καλουμένη ἡ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν τὴν ἀπὸ Ἰερειχὼ ἀγουσα εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ διὰ τοῦ ὄρους τῶν Ἐλαιῶν, οὗ ἐγγιστα οὖσα τοῦ κατὰ τὸν πάνυ λεγομένου.—Bethphage lay upon the direct line of this route, but Bethany did not; so that one travelling from Jericho, as they suppose our Lord to be travelling previously, would come to Bethphage first, and would have to turn off to Bethany. It is possible also that they were almost contiguous; or little more than divisions of the same village; and, in any case, it is certain that our Lord's procession stopped at Bethphage, and it was thence that he continued his route under those circumstances which, as being the most illustrious instance of the fulfilment of prophecy now supplied, all the evangelists are more or less careful to record.

'From this time forward St. John's account begins to be joined by those of the rest; and, as might be expected in a supplementary gospel, it dwells henceforth upon nothing but what they had passed over in comparative silence, or what was necessary to explain them, and to apply his own accounts to theirs. Of his conciseness, where he touches upon a circumstance which had been fully related before, xii. 14, is an apposite proof; and of the application of his accounts to theirs, ver. 18 and 17. The miracle of Lazarus, indeed, as one of the most recent, and certainly one of the most memorable, instances of power which the disciples had witnessed, must undoubtedly have been alluded to, Lu. xix. 37; but the propriety of the allusion in St. Luke appears only from St. John.

'The news of our Lord's intention to visit Jerusalem on this day, was probably carried thither by some of the many visitors to Bethany the same morning. The consequent procession of the Jews from the country, Jno. xii. 12, which set out from the city to meet him, must have set out of their own accord; and perhaps first joined him when he was still at Bethphage. The hosannas, then, which Jno. xii. 13, ascribes to the attendants of Jesus, are manifestly the hosannas of the whole of his attendants; and not, like those in the other evangelists, the hosannas of a part. The branches of palm, a species of tree which is among the first in the East to put forth its verdure, were carried for a purpose, left unexplained by St. John, but ascertained by the rest, viz., to strew in the road before Jesus; a mark of respect which would be paid to none but persons of acknowledged rank and dignity—in unison, consequently, with the strong expectation now entertained that the kingdom of the Messiah was at hand, and with the personal hosannas addressed to our Lord as King. . . . . Similar to these acts in design, but a still more striking declaration of the personal feelings of the agents (not, however, until our Lord had mounted upon the ass' colt, and resumed his procession with something of the state of a King, as well as with the humility of a Prophet), was the act, ascribed by the rest of the evangelists to the greater part of the multitude present, the act of spreading their garments on the ground beneath his feet; for this was directly to acknowledge him as King (Ant. Jud. ix. vi. 2; 2 Ki. ix. 13).

'Between Bethphage and Jerusalem on the same slope of mount Olivet, though not necessarily in the same line of descent, there must have lain another village; a circumstance by no means improbable; for the suburbs of Jerusalem were scattered with such villages in every direction. To this village were the two disciples despatched from Bethphage for the ass and the colt, upon which Jesus designed to enter Jerusalem. Though their names are not mentioned, yet we may conjecture that these two were Peter and John; and in order to point out the fulfilment of a remarkable prediction, the fact of their mission is specified by all the evangelists. The account of St. Mark, however, is much the most particular; which, if Peter was one of the messengers, would be easily explained; and next to St. Mark's St. Luke's. But St. Matthew, with his usual attention to this kind of argument, has noticed, the most distinctly of any, the conformity of the event to its prediction by Zechariah, ix. 9.

THIS IS A FAITHFUL SAYING, AND THESE THINGS I WILL THAT THOU AFFIRM CONSTANTLY, THAT THEY WHICH HAVE BELIEVED IN GOD MIGHT BE CAREFUL TO MAINTAIN GOOD WORKS.—Tit. iii. 8.

'Nor is there any difference in the terms of the several accounts, further than what concerns the precise statement of the orders of the messengers; in which St. Matthew comprehends both a she-ass and her colt: St. Mark and St. Luke, though by mentioning a colt as such they virtually include also its dam, yet specify only the colt. The true reason of which distinction is not that both were not sent for, but that our Lord, though he sent for the dam also, intended to ride solely on the colt, and actually rode only on the colt.

'The first of these facts is implied in the very terms of the order relating to the colt, as recorded by St. Mark and by St. Luke, though omitted by St. Matthew—ἐφ' ὃν οὐδεὶς πώποτε ἀνθρώπων ἐκάθισε, Lu. xix. 30. This circumstance would not have been so distinctly specified, if our Lord had not himself intended to sit upon it now for the first time: and the fulfilment of the prophecy, which had predicted in the first place his riding upon an ass, and in the next to shew that it was an ass as yet unbroken or put to any common use, on a colt, the foal of an ass, was rendered hereby so much the more striking. The second of the same facts is proved directly by the testimony of St. Mark and of St. Luke, who both affirm that he rode upon the colt; and implicitly by that of St. John, whose use of the term, ὀνάριον, xii. 14, shews that the animal was a young one of its kind.

'It was not possible that Jesus could ride on both the dam and her colt at once; nor probable that he would ride first upon the one, and then upon the other. When, therefore, St. Matthew says that the disciples, having brought the ass and her colt, put their own robes ἐπάνω αὐτῶν, xxi. 7, this may be explained by the simple consideration that, as both had been sent for, they might think both were wanted, or as yet they did not know which Jesus designed to use; or, like Matthew xxvii. 44, or Herodotus ii. 121 (ἐκτίθεται δὲ τὸν νέκυν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὄνους), it may be resolved into the mere compendium of speech. But when he adds, καὶ ἐκάθισεν (ὁ Ἰησοῦς) ἐπάνω αὐτῶν, no one can doubt that he means this operation to be that of his sitting on the garments which served as the ephippia or housing for the occasion. In the first three evangelists the act in question is distinctly attributed to the disciples; and even in the last it is so implicitly, Jno. xii. 16: Now these things the disciples understood not at the first; but when Jesus was glorified, then they remembered that these things were written of him in allusion to him, and these things they had done for him. This observation is intended of their personal agency in bringing them to pass. The presence of the ass, then, as well as of her colt, may perhaps be accounted for either by supposing that, if the colt was still a young one and following the dam, it could not be separated from it; or rather because as the female or mother ass being mentioned in the prophecy, the female or mother ass was concerned also in the fulfilment of it. The colt could not be distinctly recognised for such, except by means of its relation to the dam. Nor is it improbable that, while Jesus himself rode on the one, something belonging to him—perhaps his upper or outer garment—might be carried on the other.

'In this state would he set out from Bethphage towards the city; nor could he have proceeded far before the enthusiasm of his attendants broke out into Hosannas, and Hallelujahs; and St. Luke seems to have critically pointed out both the place where they began to be raised, and the quarter from which they first proceeded. The place was the foot, or as he calls it the καταβασις, of the mount of Olives, when the procession would still be five or six stades distant from the city, and had not yet crossed the valley and the brook of Cedrŏn (Relandi Palæst. i. 294, 351), which bounded the mountain at its base. The quarter, from which they proceeded, was our Lord's own disciples; and Hosannas or Hallelujahs, raised upon the grounds which are specified, Lu. xix. 37, could have begun with none so fitly as with them. Both the fact of their commencement in this quarter, and the propriety with which they had begun there, are illustrated by the remonstrance arising out of the one, and by the answer which vindicates the other, ver. 39, 40. Such a rebuke would hardly have been levelled against them in particular, if they had been following the example of others, and not setting an example to the rest themselves. St. John indeed shews that this example was speedily imitated, especially by those who had seen, and who still remembered the raising of Lazarus; so that John xii. 17, 18, will ensue consecutively on Lu. xix. 37, 38, and then the remonstrance of the Pharisees, with its answer, ver. 39, 40, upon that.

'It is in the nature of enthusiastic emotions to be rapidly propagated among large bodies. The acclamations of the disciples, therefore, were soon caught and re-echoed by the multitudes, according to St. Matthew and St. Mark, who went before and who followed after; and the difference, if there is any, in their several Hosannas may consequently be accounted for thus:—in St. Luke these are the acclamations of the immediate followers of Jesus; in St. Matthew and in St. Mark (nearly agreeing together) they are the acclamations of the promiscuous multitude, distinct from them. The strain indeed of all may have been very much alike; though, for the sake of his Gentile readers, St. Luke would purposely omit such expressions as Hosanna; Hosanna, for the Son of David; the kingdom of our father David; and the like; which were intelligible only to Jews, or resolvable into Jewish pre-possessions.

'Subsequently to the commencement of these acclamations, but before our Lord was arrived at Jerusalem—probably while he was still on the mount of Olives, with the city and the temple to the westward in view before his eyes—the affecting scene of his weeping over it, accompanied by the most lively, minute, and circumstantial prediction of its siege and desolation, anywhere in scripture, must have taken place, Lu. xix. 41—44: the contrast between which, rendered more impressive as it was by his own significant emotion, and the false enthusiasm of the surrounding multitude, is too remarkable to escape our notice. Yet could it not have damped the ardour of the spectators; nor therefore have been rightly comprehended by them at the time; for the same demonstrations of joy and exultation, which had attended Jesus to Jerusalem, accompanied him also into it.

'The whole city, as St. Matthew next observes, was shaken, or agitated; agitated by the bustle and ferment of so large a procession, by the joyful acclamations of the multitude and of the disciples, and by the natural impulse of curiosity to know what this could mean. As is usual under such circumstances, the train of our Lord would acquire fresh accessions the further it proceeded; and in his progress to the temple, the crowded streets of Jerusalem, where millions of souls at this time were collected in attendance upon the feast, would swell prodigiously the concourse of his followers. Here, then, we may best insert that observation of the Pharisees among themselves, Jno. xii. 19, not merely as a consequence of the failure of their previous remonstrance, but as a distinct admission of their own inability to arrest the course of the popular feeling; which is most naturally accounted for by supposing that feeling to be now arrived at its height. From the place assigned to it in the context, it could not long have preceded the request of the Hellenes to see Jesus; as neither did that request the departure of Jesus for the night. But this brings us to the consideration of the time when our Lord entered the temple, and what stay he may be supposed to have made there.

'That we may waive, for the present, the further question whether he cleansed the court of the temple on this occasion or not (a question which has nothing to do with the first of those two points, and but little with the second), St. Mark's account of the proceedings, after the entrance into the city, is simply this—that our Lord went into the temple, looked round on the state of things there, and then departed with the Twelve to Bethany for the night. And it is assigned,

BY HIM THEREFORE LET US OFFER THE SACRIFICE OF PRAISE TO GOD CONTINUALLY, THAT IS, THE FRUIT OF OUR LIPS GIVING THANKS TO HIS NAME.—Heb. xiii. 15.

WHOSO LOOKETH INTO THE PERFECT LAW OF LIBERTY, AND CONTINUETH THEREIN, HE BEING NOT A FORGETFUL HEARER, BUT A DOER OF THE WORK, THIS MAN SHALL BE BLESSED IN HIS DEED.—Jas. i. 25.

as the reason for the shortness of his stay, that the hour was late. St. Luke, who mentions merely the cleansing of the temple, leaves every other circumstance doubtful, except that by telling us elsewhere, ch. xxi. 37, § 86, p. 357 that our Lord's practice throughout the previous days, had been not to leave the temple until night, he may be considered to imply that he left it on this occasion also only at night. St. Matthew's account adds certain particulars to that of St. Mark, viz., the cure of some blind and lame persons in the temple, the acclamations of the children, and another remonstrance of the Pharisees with our Lord on that account; in none of which is there anything inconsistent with St. Mark.

'For first, the περιβλεψάμενος πάντα of this Evangelist, ch. xi. 11, does not imply that Jesus did nothing else on this occasion, but simply prepares the reader for the cleansing of the temple on the following day. Secondly, the cures in question, though necessarily wrought after the entrance into the temple, would take up no time, nor require any long continuance there. Thirdly, the acclamations of the children had doubtless been going on from the first, and were not then merely begun, so as to have produced the remonstrance on the spot. Fourthly, as soon as our Lord had replied to this remonstrance, he left the temple immediately; and when he went out it was for the night, for he proceeded to Bethany, and slept there.

'The account of St. John, so far as it belongs to the history of proceedings on the same day, consists of only one additional and supplementary particular, the request of the Hellenes to see Jesus, and the reflections which it drew from our Lord, ch. xii. 20—36. If these Hellenes were, as their name implies, not Jews of the Dispersion, whose proper denomination would have been Hellenists, but Gentile proselytes, numbers of whom attended every feast (Jos. B. vi. ix. 3), the scene of this incident, or at least of the first part of it, the request addressed to Philip, was probably the outer court of the temple, to which only such proselytes had access; and therefore the time was either when our Lord was passing through that court out of the temple, or when he had already quitted it: and there is internal evidence, at ver. 35, .6, that as this application to him was apparently the last event in the day, so it was made when the night was at hand. The allusion at least in those verses to the approach of the night, besides its spiritual meaning, becomes so much the more striking and impressive, if it contains a sensible meaning also.

'The nation of the inquirers is further implied by the nature of their request itself, which was much more probably that they might be admitted to speak with, than merely to see Jesus. If they were really Gentiles, the former would be such a request as neither Philip nor Andrew, without first consulting their Master, could take upon themselves to grant, and therefore it would account at once for the behaviour of both; but the latter was such a gratification of an innocent curiosity that any one of the disciples might voluntarily have undertaken to concede. The strain of our Lord's reflections is in unison with the same supposition; for he takes occasion from the coincidence of such a request at this time, to predict in obscure, yet significant terms, the success of his gospel, in the preaching of Christ crucified, among the Gentiles. When this conversation took place, it is probable that he was either passing out of the temple, or had quitted it already. Nor is more implied at ver. 28, .9, by the mention of the people's standing and hearing the voice from heaven, than that on being apprised of the application of these strangers, wheresoever he was, he stopped for a time (which, however, could not be long) to deliver the sentiments which ensued.

'Laying these particulars together with St. Mark's previous statement of the time when he left the temple—a statement which cannot be understood of an earlier period than sunset—and making every allowance for the slowness and solemnity of the procession, after it set out from Bethany, to traverse a distance which probably did not exceed three Roman miles in extent; we may come to the conclusion that Jesus must have left Bethany about the ninth hour, on the tenth of Nisan, Monday in Passion week, and the Julian first of April; that he must have arrived in the temple before the eleventh hour; and must have left it again before sunset, or just on the eve of the Jewish eleventh of Nisan.

'It would seem, then, that upon this occasion he must barely as it were have appeared in the temple, and as speedily departed from it again; which would be so far simply to present himself before God: and, if the christian doctrine of the atonement is scriptural and true, to present himself in his capacity of the paschal sacrifice, now ready to be offered up. If we may assume, then, that he did this in compliance with the legal equity, the legal equity required it to be done on the tenth of Nisan; for at the first institution of the passover, Ex. xii. 3, 6, it had been commanded that the lamb, which was to be sacrificed on the fourteenth, should be taken up and consecrated for that purpose on the tenth. It is true that Maimonides, and others of the Rabbins, enumerate this requisition among the special circumstances, such as eating the passover in haste, in the garb and attitude of travellers, and the like, which they consider peculiar to the pascha Ægyptium or the first passover as such. Quod autem in Ægypto præscriptum erat, ut usque a decimo die primi mensis pararetur victima paschalis, ... hæc omnia omnino semel in tilo sacro paschali Ægyptio servata sunt; sed nunquam ustiata fuere postmodum (De Sacrificio Paschali, x. 15). I am ready to admit the general probability of this statement, especially in the case of those who might arrive in Jerusalem on the morning of the passover itself; of which there is an instance in the case of Simon of Cyrene. But, if it was merely a circumstance essential to the ceremonial of the first passover, that was sufficient to make it indispensable to the sacrifice of the death of Christ; and to explain the grounds of the legal requisition, which would otherwise be inexplicable.

'But in addition to the character of the paschal victim, our Lord had another to support, in the character of the daily sacrifice, with regard to which Maimonides himself will inform us (De Sacrificiis Jugibus. i. 8) that the lambs intended for that purpose were set apart, to be kept in the Conclave Agnorum, within the sanctuary, quatriduum ante immolationem. On this principle the daily sacrifice for the fourteenth of Nisan, must have been taken up and set apart on the tenth; the morning sacrifice in the morning, the evening one in the evening. On the same principle, too, it would be nothing improbable to suppose that every lamb which was wanted by any paschal company on the fourteenth of Nisan, was set apart in some proper place for the service of such a company on the tenth. In all these coincidences, if our Saviour was really the true paschal victim, and really the true ἀνδεκτὴ θυσία, and really presented himself in both these capacities before God on the tenth of Nisan, four days before the fourteenth when he suffered, and about the same time of the day on the one, at which he suffered upon the other; we cannot but perceive a striking conformity between the type and the antitype, between the figures of things to come, and their fulfilment by the event; which correspondence it would be great scepticism and incredulity, if not the height of inconsistency, to resolve into the effect of chance. It will add to the difficulty of accounting for it on any principle but that of design; that the tenth of Nisan, when our Lord presented himself in the temple, according to the Jewish mode of reckoning, was his nominal birthday, and the fourteenth of Nisan, when he actually suffered, according to the Julian, was his true; that is to say, the fifth of the Julian April, which coincided in the year of his birth with the tenth of Nisan, coincided in this year when he suffered with the fourteenth. For the proof of these positions, see Vol. I. Diss. xii.; but if the positions themselves are true, we need no other argument to convince us that the day of our Lord's procession to the temple before he suffered was Monday, the first of April, which coincided with the tenth of Nisan; as the day when he suffered was Friday, the fifth of April, which coincided with the fourteenth.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxviii. pp. 70—88.

SECTION 83.—(G. 65.)—[Lesson 76.]—PARTICULARS OF THE THIRD DAY IN PASSION WEEK, TUESDAY, THE ELEVENTH OF NISAN. JESUS, IN THE WAY FROM BETHANY TO JERUSALEM, CAUSES A BARREN FIG TREE TO WITHER.* DRIVES OUT THE MONEY-CHANGERS, ETC., FROM THE TEMPLE.—Matt. xxi. 18—22; 12, .3. Mark xi. 12—9 Luke xix. 45—.8.—[Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxix. p. 89.]

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxi. 18, .9. Mk. xi. 12—.4. In the morning, when returning from Bethany, Jesus being hungry, goes to a fig tree, as if to gather fruit; finding nothing thereon but leaves, he declares that no man shall eat fruit of it henceforth for ever.

— xxi. 20. ———— The disciples hearing what Jesus said, and seeing the fig tree instantly wither, express surprise, saying, 'How soon,' &c.

— xxi. 21, .2. ———— Jesus assures the disciples that if they 'have faith, and doubt not,' they shall not only do as has been done to this fig tree, but be able to remove 'this mountain,' and cast it into the sea; and all things they ask in prayer, believing, they shall receive.

— xxi. 12. — xi. 15, .6. Lu. xix. 45. Jesus enters the temple, and casts out of it those that make merchandise therein. He overthrows the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of those selling doves; and will not allow any burden to be carried through the temple.

Mt. xxi. 13. Mk. xi. 17. Lu. xix. 46. Jesus claims the temple for the Lord, to be used, according to the original intention, as a place of prayer for all nations. He charges the Jewish priesthood, &c., with making 'it a den of thieves.'

———— — xi. 18, .9. — xix. 47, .8. The chief priests, scribes, and chief of the people, hearing the saying of Jesus, are eager to destroy him; but in the daytime they are prevented by his being surrounded by those who hang upon his discourse; and in the evening he goes out of the city.

No. 83.—Jesus comes to a barren fig tree.

MATT. xxi. 18—22.

18 Now
[b] in-the-morning [c]
[d] as-he-returned into the city, he-hungered.
19 And when-he-saw a fig-tree in [em] the way,[e] he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only,
and said unto-it,

In the way from Bethany to Jerusalem.

MARK xi. 12—.4.

[c] And on-the morrow, [b] 12
[c] when-they-were-come from Bethany,[d]
he-was-hungry:
and seeing a-fig-tree 13
[e] afar-off having leaves, he-came, if haply he-might-find any-thing thereon: and when-he-came to it, he-found nothing but leaves;
for the-time καιρος of-figs was not-yet.
And Jesus answered and-said unto-it, 14

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxi. 19. a fig tree—see the parable of the fig tree, to which the owner came three successive years seeking fruit and finding none; and which, before being cut down, was given a fourth and last season of trial whether it would bring forth fruit, Lu. xiii. 6—9, § 64, p. 174—That parable was spoken immediately after warning the Jewish nation of their destruction, if they repented not; types of which approaching destruction had just been given, through the fall of a tower in Siloam, and in the Roman governor's mixing the blood of Galilæans with their sacrifices in the temple, ver. 1—5, § ib., p. 173—shortly after which Jesus pathetically contemplates the coming destruction of Jerusalem, and desolation of the temple, ver. 34, .5, § 66, p. 179.

Mk. xi. 13. nothing but leaves—Our first parents, with fig leaves, attempted to hide their nakedness after they had sinned, Ge. iii. 7— The efforts of the Jews to conceal their nakedness were equally vain—see our Lord's exposure of their hypocrisy, Mt. xxiii. 13—33, § 85, p. 315—it is predicted, 2 Ti. iii. 1, 5, that in 'the last days' shall be men 'having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof:' and from whom it is the duty of the man of God to 'turn away.'—Of certain teachers who are, like Cain, hating their brother; like Balaam, hired to curse the people of God; like Core, are opposed to those whose call is from God, it is said, Jude 12, .3, 'These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 18. In the morning as he returned into the city. Jesus' custom was to retire from Jerusalem in the evening, and to teach in the temple during the day.—See ver. 17, p. 266, and comp. Lu. xxi. 37, § 86, p. 357.

Mk. xi. 13. A fig tree. Fig trees were common in the neighbourhood of Bethany, Bethphage, and the mount of Olives, and around Jerusalem. This may have been more flourishing, and have given greater promise of fruit, than the rest. The fig tree seldom rises above twelve feet; has many spreading branches: large dark-green leaves; and the fruit, which is of a purplish colour, contains a soft, sweet, and fragrant pulp, mixed with small seeds. In Judæa it produces two crops of fruit; and sometimes fruit is found on it all the year round.

Having leaves. It is the nature of the fig tree to put forth its fruit before the leaves.

He came, if haply, &c. The sense appears to be, Jesus approached the tree, as one in doubt whether he should find ripe fruit upon it.

He found nothing but leaves. The tree symbolized the state of the Jewish people: they made a profession of serving God; they considered themselves alone to be the people of God, and despised all others. Our Lord had called them hypocrites, having nothing of religion but vain profession; they were profuse in outward shew; they had leaves but no fruit.

The time of figs was not yet. I. e., the time of gathering had not come.—See on 'having leaves,' supra.

[Mt. xxi. 19. Let no fruit grow on thee, &c. 'This action was emblematical; according to the usual custom of the sages of the East to express things by symbolical actions. It was also prophetic. Our Lord intended to prove that his power to punish the disobedient was as great as that to confer benefits. It was, moreover, to prefigure the destruction of the perverse Jews, because in the time of fruits they had borne none—see ver. 33, 41, [§ 84, pp. 286, .9;] and, likewise, to read a very important lesson to all his disciples of every age — that if the opportunities God gives for approving themselves virtuous be neglected, nought will remain but to be withered by the fist which shall consign them to everlasting destruction.' —Bloomf.]

* 'The incident respecting the fig tree having transpired on the way from Bethany to Jerusalem before, rather than after, the first hour of the day, the arrival at the temple would take place rather after that hour than before it.'—Greswell.

LET US TAKE WARNING, LEST WE BE FOUND LIKE THE FRUITLESS FIG TREE.
MERE PROFESSION WITHOUT CORRESPONDENT FRUIT WILL NOT SATISFY THE RIGHTEOUS JUDGE.

MATT. xxi. 20—.2.	MARK xi. 14.
Let no fruit grow on γενηται εις τον αιωνα thee henceforward for ever.	No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.
And presently the fig-tree withered away.	20, And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the 21 fig-tree withered away! Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be 22 thou cast into the sea; it shall be done. And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing ye shall receive. [Ver. 23, § lxxxiv. p. 282.]

Jesus drives out the money-changers, &c., from the temple.

MATT. xxi. 12, .3.*	MARK xi. 15—.9.	LUKE xix. 45—.8.
(Ver. 11, § lxxxii. p. 265.) 12 And Jesus went into the	15 *And they come to Jerusalem. And Jesus went into the	(Ver. 44, § lxxxii. p. 265.) And he went into the 45

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xi. 13. No man eat fruit, &c.—That people can scarcely be expected to prove profitable to others who refuse to bring forth fruit unto God; they are like the evil figs, a curse wherever they come, until they are consumed, Je. xxiv. 8—10, 'And as the evil figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and them that dwell in the land of Egypt: 9, and I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them. 10, And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.'—When Israel bring forth fruit unto God, the promise will be realized, Eze. xxxiv. 26, 'And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing.'

Mt. xxi. 21. If ye have faith, &c.—see Mk. xi. 22, § 84, p. 281, 'Have faith in God.'—Jesus had before said to his disciples, Mt. xvii. 20, § 51, p. 61, 'If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed,' &c.—see also Lu. xvii. 5, 6, § 70, p. 207, 'If ye had faith,' &c.

and doubt not.—Ja. i. 6—8, 'But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. 7, For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord. 8, A double minded man is unstable in all his ways.'

this mountain—When Jesus before used this expression, ch. xvii. 20, § 51, p. 61, he is supposed to have been in the neighbourhood of Hermon, the meaning of which name is 'desolate;' and which neighbourhood had been remarkable for idolatry—see on 'Cæsarea Philippi,' § 50, p. 35—As being on his return from Bethany to Jerusalem, Jesus was now on another mountain remarkable for idolatry, 1 Ki. xi. 6, 7, 'And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon.'—It is called the mount of offence; or as the translation is, 2 Ki. xxiii. 13, 'the mount of corruption.'—It is probable that it was to this, as being the mount of offence, that our Lord referred when he spoke of faith as removing it, Mt. xxi. 21.

We are to endeavour to cast from us whatever causes a brother to stumble—it were better for a man 'that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea,' than that he should offend one of Christ's little ones, ch. xviii. 6, § 52, p. 82—There is a striking resemblance between what our Lord says, regarding prayer and forgiveness, in his discourse respecting offences, ver. 19, 35, pp. 83, .5, and what he says when again speaking of removing 'this mountain,' the mount of offence, Mk. xi. 23—.5, § 84, p. 282.

cast into the sea—Faith is successfully to plead the promise, Mi. vii. 19, 'He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.'

23. whatsoever ye shall ask—It is in connection with an exhortation to fruitfulness that a like pro-

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 20. And presently the fig tree withered away. The fig tree began to wither immediately, and Jesus and his disciples the next morning, found it 'dried up from the roots,' Mk. xi. 20, § 84, p. 281.

The effect ensued before their eyes; they, according to St. Mark, heard what had been said; and, according to St. Matthew, they saw what was done by it.—See ADDENDA, p. 279, infra, col. 2, par. 2.

21. If ye have faith, and doubt not. If ye have faith without having any doubt in your hearts, that the power of God will be present with you.—Comp. Mk. xi. 22, .3, § 84, p. 281.—See on Lu. xvii. 5, 6, § 70, p. 207.

[' The surprise of the twelve being known to our Saviour, not merely as it was expressed, but as it was caused, he founded such reflections upon it, either for their admonition in particular, or for that of others in general, as were appropriate and pertinent to the occasion.'—Grescwell.]

If ye shall say unto this mountain, &c. So many of the rabbins are termed 'rooters up of mountains,' because they were dexterous in removing difficulties, solving cases of conscience, &c.

23. Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, &c.—See on Mt. xvii. 21, § 51, p. 61.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxi. 20. How truly has the curse been fulfilled upon the Jewish people! From the moment the words of Christ were uttered, the Jews have been as prodigies to others as they were previously to God; nor until they bring forth fruit unto God, can we expect them to bring a blessing upon the commonwealth with which they may happen to be connected. Neither let any man expect to receive fruit from a hypocritical priesthood.]—And see margin.

Christ's cursing the barren fig tree was a striking symbolical sign of the mere leafy state of the Jewish church, bearing no fruits to the Divine glory, and its approaching destruction by the axe of the Romans; but it remains also as a warning to every fruitless professor, who, if he abide not by true faith in Christ, is no more than a useless branch or a withered tree, and must at last be hewn down by the axe of Divine justice, and cast into the fire.

21 ver. The greatest opposition to the progress of Divine truth, that which casts the most darkening shade upon the spiritual temple, is the barrenness of professing believers. This is a mount of offence.

22 ver. Let us seek that we may be enabled to pray in the Spirit, and with the understanding also; that so we may pray with enlightened faith, according to the will of God.

* 'St. Matthew anticipated the time of the cleansing of the temple.' Grescwell.—See ADDENDA, p. 279.

ERE THE SEASON OF FRUIT BE PAST, LET US PRAYERFULLY SEEK TO ESCAPE THE CURSE OF UNFRUITFULNESS.
LET THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST HEAR AND FEAR: LET THEM MARK THE WORDS OF GOD, AND WATCH HIS HAND.

MATT. xxi. 12.	MARK xi. 16.	LUKE xix. 45.
temple [b]of God,[c] and cast-out all them that-sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of-the money-changers, and the seats of-them that-sold doves,	temple,[b] and-began to-cast-out them that-sold and bought [d]in the temple, and overthrew the tables of-the money-changers, and the seats of-them that-sold doves; 16 and would-not-suffer that any-man should-carry any	[c]and-began to-cast-out them that-sold therein, and them-that-bought;[d]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

miss is given, Jno. xv. 7, 8, § 87, p. 388, 'If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.'—It is when the Church hath become truly fruitful before God, and hath shaken herself clear from the defilement of idolatry; it is when the Bride hath made herself ready, that she shall be fully successful in prayer, and be given the marriage supper of the Lamb, Rev. xix. 6—9.

Mt. xxi. 12. temple of God—This it was professedly; and accordingly God of old remonstrated with the Jews, saying, Je. vii. 8—11, 'Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. 9, Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; 10, and come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations? 11, Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD.'—The Christian church, consisting of 'all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord,' 1 Co. i. 2, is called 'the temple of God,' iii. 16, 17, 'Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.'—The defilement of this temple of God is again adverted to, 2 Th. ii.—At the second coming of Christ, the destruction of the man of sin who has made use of, or rather abused, the house of God as if it were his own, will be exposed to shame, as truly as were the chief priests and scribes when Christ visited the temple at his first advent—and accordingly the apostle argues, ver. 3—10, 'Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; 4, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. 5, Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? 6, And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. 7, For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. 8, And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: 9, even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, 10, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.'—Mal. iii. 1, 2, 'The LORD . . . shall suddenly come to his temple, . . . But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' sope:'

money-changers—It had been appointed under the law, that those who came with their tithes from a distance might bring the same in money to the place of sacrifice, and there expend the money upon whatsoever they thought best, De. xiv. 24—7—Under the pretence of accommodating such persons, money-changers may have fixed themselves in the courts of the temple—see also NOTE, § 12, p. 81—There were other money-changers connected with the temple, Mic. iii. 11.

doves—used in the offerings of the poor, Lev. xiv. 21, 22—see Mary's offering, Lu. ii. 24, § 4, p. 24—they seem to have made the place a common market for these—see Jno. ii. 16, § 12, p. 81.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 12. Went into the temple of God, and cast out, &c. This was the day after his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.—See ADDENDA, 'On the day of our Lord's procession to Jerusalem,' p. 272; also p. 279, infra.

The temple of God. τὸ ἱερὸν. A general name for the whole edifice, with all its courts: as distinguished from the ναὸς, or temple, properly so called; which comprehended only the vestibule, the sanctuary, and the holy of holies. The outer court of the temple, or the court of the Gentiles, where the Gentile proselytes performed their devotions, was sufficiently spacious to admit not only of shops, but also of oxen, sheep, &c.; which were regularly brought thither and sold for sacrifices.

[Cast out. 'None but a prophet of acknowledged dignity, none perhaps at this period of Jewish history but the Messiah himself, could lay claim to, or exert as his own, such a jurisdiction as this; and by asserting his right to this, our Lord virtually asserted himself to be the Messiah. The propriety of such an avowal at the outset of his ministry is undeniable, and a little reflection will shew that it would be equally well timed at its close.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxix. pp. 104, 5.]

Money-changers. 'κολλυβιστῶν, from κόλλυβος, a petty coin, signifies those who exchanged foreign coin into Jewish, or the larger into the smaller coin, for the convenience of the purchasers of the commodities sold in the temple. These κολλυβισταὶ, or, as they are elsewhere called, κερματισταὶ, may be paralleled with our money-brokers.'—Bloomf. A small premium, which amounted to one-forty-eighth of the whole sum, was supposed to be exacted from those whom the money-changers obliged. This fee was called Kolbon.—See on Jno. ii. 14, § 12, p. 81.

Sold doves. These were chiefly the offerings of the poor.—See on Jno. ii. 14, § ib., SCRIP. ILLUS. This traffic, under any pretence, within the courts of the temple, our Lord here publicly condemned. By their merchandise in the temple they robbed God of his due honour: but that traffic was only a shadow of something worse: the high priesthood itself having been made a matter of merchandise; and at the same time they defrauded their neighbours in their dealings with them.

[Mk. xi. 16. Would not suffer . . . . any vessel, &c. σκεῦος. 'This is usually understood to mean any vessel, namely, devoted to profane uses, and by which any gain was made. But the word, σκεῦος, which in the Sept., corresponds to the Heb. כְּלִי, has, like that

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mt. xxi. 12. Christ's driving the buyers and sellers out of the temple should teach us to exercise a holy indignation against every corruption of God's worship and church. Imprudent zeal may, however, do harm; but there is a decision of conduct which we are here taught by Christ's example, which ought to be maintained for the preservation of its purity.

LET US PRAY THAT THE LORD MAY CLEANSE US FROM THE SPIRIT OF THE WORLD, AND ALL UNGODLINESS.
LET US EARNESTLY PRAY THAT WE MAY BE TEMPLES MEET FOR THE SPIRIT OF HOLINESS TO INHABIT.

MATT. xxi. 13.	MARK xi. 17—.9.	LUKE xix. 46—.8.
	vessel through the temple.
	17 And he-taught,
13 and said unto-them,	saying unto-them,	saying unto-them, 46
It-is-written, My house shall-be-called	Is-it-not-written, My house shall-be-called of-all nations	It-is-written, My house is the-house of-prayer; but ye have-made it a-den of-thieves. (Ch. xxi. 14, § lxxxii. p. 266.)	the-house of-prayer? but ye have-made it a-den of-thieves.	the-house of-prayer: but ye have-made it a-den of-thieves.
	18 And the scribes and chief-priests heard it, [e] [e] And he-taught daily 47 in the temple. But the chief-priests and the scribes and the chief of-the people sought to-destroy him, and sought how they-might-destroy him:	and could-not-find 48 what they-might-do: [f]
	[f] for they-feared him, because all the people were-astonished at his doctrine. [g]	for all the people
		[g] were-very-attentive εξεκρεματο to-hear him. [h] (Ch. xx. 1, § lxxxiv. p. 282.)
	19 [h] And when even was-come, he-went out-of the city.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xi. 17. My house—The Jews regarded it as their house; and so it was left to them, Mt. xxiii. 38, § 85, 'Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.'

of all nations—At the consecration of the temple by Solomon, it was recognised as the place of prayer for all nations, 1 Ki. viii. 29, 41—.3—In Ps. xciii., which declares the Lord to be King over all, it is said in conclusion, ver. 5, 'Holiness becometh thine house, O LORD, for ever.'—The words quoted by our Saviour are from Is. lvi. 7, 'Mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people.'

a den of thieves—Jer. vii. 11—see before on 'temple of God,' Mt. xxi. 12, supra, p. 277 — They were in the state described by the prophet, Is. i. 21—.3, 'How is the faithful city become an harlot! it was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers. 22, Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water: 23, thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves: every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.'—And the sentence was about to be executed, ver. 24, .5, 'Therefore saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts, the mighty One of Israel, Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies: and I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin:'

18. scribes and chief priests heard it—see again, Mt. xxi. 45, .6, § 84, p. 291.

Lu. xix. 47. taught daily—see his answer to the high priest, Jno. xviii. 20, § 89, p. 426.

NOTES.

word, a considerable latitude of signification, and denotes, as does the Latin vas, or instrumentum, a utensil, or piece of furniture, or article of dress; and, in a general sense, an article, whether for use or traffic. It may be said, indeed, that the very passing through it, without a burden, would make it a thoroughfare; but doing it with a burden was much worse; because carrying a burden had something slavish in it. So Josephus, Hell. ii. 8, 9, tells us that the Essenes so rigidly observed the Sabbath, as οὐδὲ σκεῦός τι μετακινῆσαι. The irregularities which our Lord rebukes had, it is supposed, originated in, or been increased by, the proximity of the Castle of Antonia; to which there would be a constant resort of various persons (see Josephus, B. J. i. 5, 5), and we may imagine that the priests, having an interest therein, connived at them.'—Bloomf.

Mt. xxi. 13. A den of thieves. In the original, a den 'of robbers,' or 'plunderers,' a place for those who lay in wait to practise extortion, and make dishonest gain in their merchandise. A proverbial expression for a harbour of wicked men. They who are placed in the church of Christ to serve souls, and do it not, and they who enjoy the revenues of the church, and neglect the service of it, are thieves and robbers in more senses than one.

['Avarice, covered with the veil of religion, is one of those things on which Christ looks with the greatest indignation in his church. Merchandise of holy things, simoniacal presentations, fraudulent exchanges, a mercenary spirit in sacred functions; ecclesiastical employments obtained by flattery, service, or attendance, or by anything which is instead of money; collations, nominations, and elections, made through any other motive than the glory of God; these are all fatal and damnable profanations, of which those in the temple were only a shadow.'—Greswell.]

Lu. xix. 48. Could not find, &c. Were not able to accomplish their purpose: they did not know how to bring it about.

Very attentive. ἐξεκρεματο αὐτοῦ &c. 'Hung on his words,' i.e., heard him with deep interest.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xi. 16. Let not the church be a thoroughfare for the world—a place of bearing heavy burdens grievous to be borne: soon may it be that wherein all the nations of the earth do meet as in the house of their common Father.]

17 ver. It is the will of God that not only individuals and families, but that states, that nations as such, yea, that 'all nations' should recognise his sovereignty and together worship at his footstool.

[The temple of God cannot be what it was originally designed, an 'house of prayer' for all nations, until it cease to be 'a den of thieves.' Let us pray and labour, that the sanctuary may be cleansed.]

[Lu. xix. 46. Let the modern scribes, and chief priests, beware of the temptation to which they are, perhaps equally with the Jewish priesthood, exposed, that of regarding the house of God as their own.]

47, .8 ver. How awful the state of a people, when it is only the fear of the multitude which prevents, or rather partially restrains, the authorized teachers and ministers of religion from persecuting unto death the true witnesses for God!

LET US WATCH, LEST OTHERS OCCUPY THAT TEMPLE OF THE HEART WHICH SHOULD BE SACRED TO GOD ALONE

WERE CHRIST NOW TO ENTER INTO HIS CHURCHES, WOULD HE FIND NO BUYERS AND SELLERS TO DRIVE OUT?

ADDENDA.

ON THE PROCEEDINGS OF TUESDAY IN PASSION WEEK, AND THE TIME OF THE CLEANSING OF THE TEMPLE.

'The transactions of this day, which answers to the eleventh of the Jewish Nisan and the second of the Julian April, as far as they have been recorded, are only these three: first, the cursing of the barren fig tree, before the arrival of our Lord at the temple; secondly, the cleansing or purgation of the temple; and thirdly, the day's teaching in it afterwards. On the last of these points there is no difficulty; but upon each of the former there is.

'The malediction pronounced upon the fig-tree is related by St. Matthew and by St. Mark; but for a reason which might easily be assigned—viz., the affinity and connection between the final end of the act of striking the barren fig tree, and the moral of the parable of the fig tree planted in the vineyard, which St. Luke has recorded, ch. xiii. 6—9, § 64, p. 174—is omitted by St. Luke; and both the former place is on the day after the procession to the temple, as our Lord with his disciples was returning thither from Bethany again. The scene of the malediction is consequently ascertained to be somewhere between Bethany and the city, on the mount of Olives; and the time, which St. Mark's expression, τῷ ἐπαύριον, ch. xi. 12, would have left indefinite, becomes similarly determined by St. Matthew's, ch. xxi. 18, πρωΐ δὲ ἐπανάγων ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν, to a period very probably prior, and certainly not posterior, to the first hour of the day. Πρωΐ and πρῶτα, however nearly akin, are not exactly the same in their signification; and as the former properly implies the first hour of the day, which began at sunrise, so does the latter the time immediately prior to that, which is the interval between dawn and sunrise. The same hour was the period of the usual morning's meal among the Jews; in which case the hunger of our Lord—which is specified by each of the evangelists, independently of any other considerations, as the moving cause of the act in question—becomes naturally accounted for. And that the return to the temple, both this morning and the next, was early, may be collected from the general declaration of Luke xxi. 37, .8, § 86, p. 357, as well as from John viii. 2, § 55, p. 99, which shews it was our Saviour's practice, whenever he repaired to the temple, to go thither early. The hour of πρωΐ, indeed, was the commencement of the morning service; and from that time to the third hour of the day was one of the stated periods for the resort of the people to worship.

'The final end of striking the fig tree was a symbolical action, and more closely connected with the scope and design of the parable recorded Lu. xiii. 6—9, § 64, p. 174, than is commonly supposed. . . . .

'According to Maimonides, the fruits of certain trees were required to be offered along with the δράγμα, manipulus, or wave sheaf of barley, at the Passover; which implies that, generally speaking, ripe fruits were to be had at that season as well as ripe barley. If this was likely to be the case in any year, it would be more particularly so in years when the Passover fell out late, and almost an entire month in advance of the summer compared with other times. In this year the Passover was celebrated on the 14th of April, only eleven days earlier than its latest time. Besides which, Josephus, in a passage which has been quoted elsewhere (Vol. II. Diss. xxiii. p. 269), informed us that in some situations, if not throughout all Judæa, the fig tree produced a succession of fruit for ten months in the year; which ten months must have extended from March to December inclusive. Ripe figs might consequently be looked for . . . even at the end of March or the beginning of April; and it is to such early fruits as these that the allusions occur at, Is. xxviii. 4; Ho. ix. 10; Mi. vii. 1; and Na. iii. 12.

'Our Lord visited the tree more as a tentative experiment—if haply he might find ought upon it—than with the certain assurance that he should. Nor does this imply any defect of knowledge upon his part; for he was aware what the event would be; but the action being designed as symbolical, his going up to the tree in the apparent hope of meeting with fruit upon it in the first place, and his pronouncing a curse upon its barrenness as if in consequence of some disappointment in the next, rendered it the more solemn, significant, and impressive.

'While St. Matthew and St. Mark, in their accounts of this transaction, agree together substantially, the latter, as usual, in the mention of circumstances, is somewhat more particular.* But this distinction must be understood with reference solely to the circumstances of the act: as to what followed, or is related subsequently, there is some difference which requires to be explained. The malediction pronounced on the tree, according to St. Matthew, took effect instantly, ch. xxi. 19, ἐξηράνθη παραχρῆμα ἡ συκῆ: the words could scarcely have been delivered before the tree had begun to be sensibly affected. Now both he and St. Mark expressly attest that the transaction occurred in the presence of the twelve. Jesus was walking with them when he fell in with the tree; he went up to it in their sight; and he pronounced the sentence of its perpetual barrenness in their hearing. The effect also which ensued, ensued before their eyes; they heard what had been said according to St. Mark, and they saw what was done by it according to St. Matthew. It would be no wonder, then, that they should have been surprised when they witnessed the change in the tree; a change so suddenly produced; the effect of a few words, and those not actually commanding it, though possibly presupposing it. It was equally natural that they should have expressed this surprise among themselves: . . . . and their surprise being known to our Saviour, not merely as it was expressed, but also as it was caused, that he should have founded such reflections upon it, either for their admonition in particular, or for that of others in general, as were appropriate and pertinent to the occasion, was just as much to be expected.

'The apostles wondered at the visible effect produced upon the tree; but much, perhaps, at the secret efficacy of the power which had produced it; and our Lord, according to his usual practice of deriving instruction from the occasion, and knowing that their admiration of this power was accompanied internally by the wish to possess it, tells them first, in reference to the object of their astonishment, that this was a slight effect, compared with what the same power, rightly applied, was capable of bringing to pass: secondly, in reference to the object of their wish, that this power to be rightly applied, must be so through the medium of implicit faith: thirdly, in reference to the virtue of this faith, it was such that whatsoever they might ask for in prayer, whether the energies of miraculous power, or any other petition, if they believed they did obtain, they should obtain: all which, if applied to the apostles, would be applicable only proleptically now, but might be so actually hereafter; and yet it is so obviously the result of the passing event, that it might well have ensued at the time . . . . as St. Matthew makes the sudden drying up of the tree the cause of the wonder of the apostles, so he makes the wonder of the apostles the direct effect of the drying up of the tree. . . .

'These several particulars are not mentioned by St. Mark; whose present account goes no further than the sentence of barrenness pronounced upon the tree: yet the very circumstance that it stops short even there prepares the reader for something immediately dried up; but it does say that the disciples heard what was said.

'The incident respecting the fig tree having thus transpired, on the way from Bethany to Jerusalem, before, rather than after, the first hour of the day, the arrival at the temple would take place rather after that hour than before it. And if the cleansing after that hour was performed this day, and the first of the temple was performed this day, and the first thing done subsequent to the arrival, that also would come to pass after the first, yet before the second, hour of the day. On this question, however, St. Matthew is apparently committed with St. Mark; the former, as it would seem, assigning the act of the cleansing to the day of the procession to the temple, the latter distinctly to the following morning: St. Luke, whose account of a similar transaction is such as might accord to either supposition, being consequently so far neuter.

'Unless, therefore, the cleansing in St. Matthew was altogether a different transaction from the

YET NOW HEAR, O JACOB MY SERVANT; AND ISRAEL, WHOM I HAVE CHOSEN:—Isa. xliv. 1.
IS THERE A GOD BESIDE ME? YEA, THERE IS NO GOD; I KNOW NOT ANY.—Isa. xliv. 8.

cleansing in St. Mark, the former has introduced an anticipation, or the latter a trajection, into his accounts: and an anticipation in St. Matthew would be no extraordinary phenomenon, but a trajection in St. Mark would be one. If the two events were the same act, there is no evading this conclusion, except by supposing that St. Matthew begins his account of the proceedings on the eleventh of Nisan, with this instance of cleansing, on the day after the public procession, at xxi. 12: which would be, in the first place, to resolve one difficulty by another; since though the accounts of the cleansing might by this means be reconciled together, yet those of the malediction on the fig tree, as we have seen, would be set at variance.

'In the next place, the beautiful incident relating to the children in the temple, ver. 15, .6, bears upon its face the evidence that this part of the narrative belongs to the day of the procession. For when it is considered that our Lord set out that day amidst the shouts and acclamations of the multitude, the various strains of whose hallelujahs did not prevent but that all might have been employed, and that he arrived in the temple similarly attended; when we consider also that the peculiar expressions, ὡσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δαυΐδ! are found in St. Matthew only, and yet are the very expressions which he puts into the mouths of the children; when we consider further the strong natural impulse of children to imitate what is passing around them; to mix eagerly in every scene of bustle and animation, and to be as loud and as active therein as any; we can entertain little doubt that they had caught these expressions from the multitude; they were merely doing what thousands of grown-up persons had been or were still doing besides. Unless, therefore, our Lord came again to the temple the next day, as he had done the day before, in a public procession, or with similar demonstrations of the public enthusiasm; this little circumstance, which is as natural as it is beautiful, determines thus much of St. Matthew's account, from 14—.7, to the evening of the tenth of Nisan.

'There is no alternative, then, but to conclude that either the same act of cleansing was twice performed, once on the evening of the tenth and again on the morning of the eleventh of Nisan, or St. Matthew has recorded it out of its place. The first of these suppositions may possibly be true, but . . . I do not think it so probable as the second.'—See Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xxxix. pp. 89—96.

PARTICULARS OF THE FOURTH DAY IN PASSION WEEK, WEDNESDAY, THE TWELFTH OF NISAN.—Sections LXXXIV.–LXXXVI. pp. 280—361.

SECTION 84.—(G. 66—70.)—[Lessons 77, .8.*]—On the morning of the fourth day in Passion week, Wednesday, the twelfth of Nisan, as Jesus and the disciples are returning to Jerusalem, Peter renews the conversation relating to the fig tree which had been cursed the day before.† Jesus answers the Pharisees, who demand of him by what authority he did the things before recorded. He delivers the parables of a father and his two sons, of the vineyard let out to husbandmen, of the marriage feast, and of the wedding garment. He answers the question of the Herodians, concerning tribute to Cæsar. —Matt. xxi. 23—xxii. 22. Mark xi. 20—xii. 17. Luke xx. 1—26.—[Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xl. p. 109.]

BRIEF INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mk. xi. 20—.6. The fig tree dried up from the roots. From this sign, mercifully given to the Jews, to warn them of their approaching doom, Jesus takes occasion to speak to his disciples of the power of believing prayer; intimating, at the same time, that in order to success in prayer, we must approach God as knowing our own need of forgiveness, and as being willing to forgive others.

Mt. xxi. 23—.7. Mk. xi. 27—33. Lu. xx. 1—8. In the temple the chief priests, &c., ask Jesus for his authority. He replies by requiring them to tell whence was the baptism of John.

Mt. xxi. 28—32. Mk. xii. — Lu. xx. — Jesus delivers the parable of the two sons.

— xxi. 33—46. — xii. 1—12. — xx. 9—19. The parable of the vineyard let out to husbandmen.

— xxii. 1—10. ——— ——— The parable of the marriage feast.

— xxii. 11—.4. ——— ——— The wedding garment.

— xxii. 15—22. — xii. 13—.7. — xx. 20—.6. The Pharisees conspire with the Herodians to entangle Jesus in his talk. His reply on the subject of giving tribute to Cæsar.

THE JEWS ARRAIGNED AND CONDEMNED.

In Mt. xxi. 28—xxv., we have a remarkable example of parallelism, not only in the construction of sentences, but of entire discourses.

In Mt. xxi. 28—xxii. 14, there are three parables mainly relating to Christ's first coming, and the taking away the kingdom from the Jews, and transferring it to the Gentiles, and especially to a nation intended to bring forth the fruits thereof.

The parables are—

1st. The two sons sent by their father to work in his vineyard . . . . . xxi. 28—32.

2nd. The vineyard let out to husbandmen, ver. 33—46.

3rd. The marriage of the king's son, xxii. 1—10.

Connected with the last parable there is, in ver. 11—.4, a fourth parable, relating to the 'wedding garment,' and containing the germ of the second series of paragraphs, in which the several despisers of the Lord's grace, many of whom expected to feast in Messiah's kingdom, are each of them rendered speechless. These are—

1st. The worldly-minded Herodians, ver. 15—22.

2nd. The infidel Sadducees . . . . 23—33.

3rd. The self-righteous Pharisees . . . 34—40.

Here again, in ver. 41—.6, there is, in immediate connection with the third paragraph, a fourth—Jesus' question to the Pharisees; and his remarks upon their answer, implying that Christ is Lord, and that his enemies must be abased. This is the subject of the third series of paragraphs, in which are described—

1st. The pride of those who had usurped the place of Christ . . . . . xxiii. 1—12.

2nd. Their hypocrisy . . . . . 13—32.

3rd. Their condemnation . . . . . 33—.9.

There is also a fourth paragraph . . xxiv. 1—3, immediately connected with the preceding, and introducing the next,—

The fourth series of paragraphs. These are the three answers of Christ to his disciples, respecting—

* Section lxxxiv. includes Lessons 77, .8 in the 'System of Graduated Simultaneous Instruction.' Lesson 77 is Mk. xi. 20—6; Mt. xxi. 23—46; Mk. xi. 27—xii. 12; Lu. xx. 1—19.

† On the proceedings of Wednesday in Passion week, see Addenda, p. 298.

FRET NOT THYSELF BECAUSE OF EVIL-DOERS, NEITHER BE THOU ENVIOUS AGAINST THE WORKERS OF INIQUITY.—Psa. xxxvii. 1.
FOR THEY SHALL SOON BE CUT DOWN LIKE THE GRASS, AND WITHER AS THE GREEN HERB.—Psa. xxxvii. 2.

1st. The end of the world . . . ver. 4—14.
2nd. The sign of his coming . . . . 15—31.
3rd. The time when these things should be . . . . . 32—.9.

Here again we have a fourth paragraph, ver. 40—.4, immediately connected with the preceding, and germinating—

THE CONCLUDING SERIES, containing parables relating to the second advent of our Lord:—

1st. The faithful and evil servants . ver. 45—51.
2nd. Wise and foolish virgins . . xxv. 1—13.
3rd. The servants to whom the talents were intrusted . . . . . 14—30.
4th. The sheep and the goats, or the judgment of the nations . . . . . 31—46.

Thus in Mt. xxi. 28—xxv., there are in all FIVE SERIES; each of these consisting of four particulars, twenty in all; the fourth of each series germinating, or containing the substance of, the series that immediately succeeds it.

In the FIRST SERIES, consisting of parables, the Jews are charged with disobedience to God; breach of contract; murder of the Lord's messengers; and contempt of his grace . . . . xxi. 28—xxii. 14.

In the SECOND SERIES, containing answers to the Herodians, Sadducees, and Pharisees, their quibbling opposition to their Judge is exposed and put to silence . . . . . xxii. 15—46.

In the THIRD SERIES, the criminality of their conduct is described, and sentence is pronounced upon them . . . . . xxiii.—.iv. 1—3.

In the FOURTH SERIES, we have the particulars respecting the execution of the sentence in three answers to his disciples . . . . . xxiv. 4—39.

The FIFTH SERIES, like the first, consists of parables; but these last are illustrative of the second advent, and the judgment of the nations, who in the case of the Jews have been given an assurance that God will reckon with his servants, and will not allow his grace to be slighted with impunity, ver. 40—xxv.

FIRST SERIES. Parables connected with the first advent.

1st. The two sons.
2nd. The vineyard and husbandmen.
3rd. The marriage feast.
4th. The wedding garment.

SECOND SERIES. Answers to enemies.

1st. To Herodians.
2nd. To Sadducees.
3rd. To Pharisees.
4th. What think ye of Christ?

THIRD SERIES. Guilt and condemnation of scribes.

1st. Their pride.
2nd. Their hypocrisy.
3rd. Their condemnation.
4th. When shall these things be? &c.

FOURTH SERIES. Answers to disciples.*

1st. The end of the world?
2nd. The sign of Christ's coming?
3rd. The time when these things? &c.
4th. Separation, &c., at Christ's coming.

FIFTH SERIES. Parables connected with second advent.

1st. Faithful and evil servants.
2nd. Wise and foolish virgins.
3rd. Talents, or profitable and unprofitable servants.
4th. Sheep and goats, or judgment of the nations.

THE FIRST SERIES contains parables relating to Christ's first advent; and the LAST SERIES contains parables respecting his second advent: and these two 'keys of the kingdom of heaven' are connected together by a chain as symmetrical as it is continuous. THE SECOND SERIES, xxii. 15—46, being Answers to his Enemies; and the FOURTH, or corresponding series, Answers to his Disciples. In the THIRD, or middle series, his disciples are warned against the pride, hypocrisy, and blood guiltiness of his enemies; in unveiling whom, and in pronouncing whose doom, he manifests his omniscience and Divine compassion; and no less was the result to attest the truthfulness of Him who is indeed the Faithful Witness, and the object of our faith and love.

No. 84.—(G. 66.)—On the morning of the fourth day in Passion week, Wednesday, the twelfth of Nisan, as Jesus and the disciples were returning to Jerusalem, Peter renews the conversation relating to the fig tree, which had been cursed the day before.—Mark xi. 20—.6.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS OF Mk. xi. 20—.6.

Mk. xi. 20. In the morning, as Jesus with his disciples return to the city, the fig tree is found 'dried up from the roots.'

—— 21. 'Peter calling to remembrance' the words of Jesus, expresses surprise. They had frequently seen Jesus blessing, but never before had they witnessed the effects of his curse.

Mk. xi. 22—4. As when the fig tree began to wither away, Mt. xxi. 19—22, § 83, p. 275, Jesus improves the occurrence, by exhorting to faith in God.

—— 25, .6. In order to the enjoyment of the Divine forgiveness, we must be willing to forgive others, as Mt. vi. 14, &c., § 19, p. 133.

MARK xi. 20—.6.

20 And in-the-morning, as-they-passed-by, they-saw the fig-tree dried-up from-the-roots.
21 And Peter calling-to-remembrance saith unto-him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which 22 thou-cursedst is-withered-away. And Jesus answering saith unto-them, Have faith in-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xi. 21. cursedst—The disciples may not at first have perceived the meaning of the prophetic sign which had been given in the withering away of the fig tree, ver. 13—.4—comp. Mt. xxi. 18—20, § 83, p. 275—The ensuing discourse was well calculated to remove any suspicion that Jesus had spoken in the spirit of cursing—He shews that the power whereby the act was performed of God was almighty; and could only be exercised in the spirit of forgiveness—see ver. 22—.6, supra—The lesson was not lost upon Peter, 1 Ep. iii. 9, 'Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.'—See also the words of Paul, Rom. xii. 14, 'Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.'—And of Ja. iii. 10, 'Out of the same,' &c.

23. Have faith in God—He before referred to the power of faith, Mt. xxi. 21, § 83, p. 276; now he is more explicit—The words might be rendered, 'Have faith of God,' that is, be not confident in yourselves, or in any inferior power, but let your confidence be altogether that which cometh from God—So the apostle exhorts, Eph. vi. 10, 'Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.'

* Mr. GRESWELL supposes our Lord to answer the queries in the same order in which they are put by the disciples,—not in the inverse order as is supposed by the writer of the ANALYSIS.—See foot note, Sect. LXXVI. v. 322.

MARK xi. 23—.6.

23 God Θεου. For verily I-say unto-you, That whosoever shall-say unto this mountain, Be-thou-removed, and be-thou-cast into the sea; and shall-not-doubt in his heart, but shall-believe that those-things-which he-saith shall-come-to-pass; he shall-have whatso-24 ever he-saith. Therefore I-say unto-you, What-things so-ever ye-desire, when-ye-pray, 25 believe that ye-receive them, and ye shall-have them. And when ye-stand praying, forgive, if ye-have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may-26 forgive you your trespasses παραπτωματα. But if ye do-not-forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

(G. 67.)—Jesus answers the priests, who demand of him by what authority he did the things before recorded.—Matt. xxi. 23—.7. Mark xi. 27—33. Luke xx. 1—8. At Jerusalem.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxi. 23. Mk. xi. 27, .8. Lu. xx. 1, 2. Jesus' authority is questioned in his Father's house, by the chief priests, &c.

— xxi. 24, .5. — xi. 29, 30. — xx. 3, 4. He offers to satisfy their demand on condition that they tell him whence was the baptism of John.

Mt. xxi. 25—.7. Mk. xi. 31—.3. Lu. xx. 5—7. They question among themselves not, What is truth? but what it may be expedient to answer; and at length say, 'We cannot tell.'

— xxi. 27. — xi. 33. — xx. 8. Jesus consequently declines to tell them by what authority he acts.

MATT. xxi. 23—.7. (Ver. 22, § lxxxiii p. 270.)	MARK xi. 27—33.	LUKE xx. 1—8. (Ch. xix. 48, § lxxxiii. p. 278.)
	27 [a] And they-come again to Jerusalem: [b]	[b] And it-came-to-pass, I that on one of those days, as-he-taught the people in the temple, and preached-the-gospel,
23 And when-he-was-come into the temple,	and as-he-was-walking in the temple,
the chief-priests	there-come to him the chief-priests, and the scribes,	the chief-priests and the scribes [c] came-upon επεστησαν him with the elders,
[c] and the elders	and the elders,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xi. 23. unto this mountain—see on Mt. xxi. 21, § 83, p. 276.

Be thou removed—Is. lxiv. 1—4.

24. believe that ye receive, &c.—The truth contained in the text is more fully expressed, Jno. xiv. 14, § 87, p. 382—see Mt. xxi. 22, § 83, p. 276—If we really believe that which is given to us of God, the Son of his love, we shall both have confidence to ask, and power to take possession—see the privileges of those who receive Christ, and have their confidence in God through him, Rom. v. 1—11.

25. stand praying — This seems to have been a frequent posture in prayer among the Jews, Zec. iii. 1; Lu. xviii. 11, § 73, p. 216, Rev. xi. 4. The posture was sometimes kneeling.—Comp. Ps. xcv. 6; Lu. xxii. 41, § 88, p. 414; Ac. vii. 60; ix. 40; and see on Lu. xviii. 11, § 73, p. 216.

forgive — shewing that what he had done to the fig tree, ver. 12—.4, p. 275, and what he was about to do with regard to the scribes and Pharisees, and the Jewish nation generally, Mt. xxiii., § 85, p. 312, was in no spirit of personal hatred or revenge, but as calling to repentance and forgiveness.

26. if ye do not forgive, &c.—The same is taught in connection with the subject of prayer, Mt. vi. 15, § 18, p. 133—and at the conclusion of the discourse concerning offences and forgiveness, xviii. 35, § 53, p. 85, 'So likewise shall my heavenly Father do,' &c.

NOTES.

Mk. xi. 23. Unto this mountain. Our Lord probably pointed to that portion of the mount of Olives called the mount of corruption, which he was now passing in his way to Jerusalem.

24. Believe that ye receive them, &c. This trust must necessarily be regulated by God's own promise and warrant; and it is exercised in order that we may receive.

Mt. xxi. 23. When he was come into the temple. See ver. 17, § 82, pp. 266, .9.

The chief priests and the elders, &c. They were probably sent by the council or sanhedrim to which they belonged, and which had the supreme authority in matters of religion.—See on ch. ii. 4, § 5, p. 32; xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40. They were accompanied by the scribes. —See ib., and ADDENDA, § 29, p. 199. It is uncertain when this council was first established, and of how many members it consisted; though some have supposed that it both took its rise, and the number of its members, from the appointment by God himself of 'seventy men of the elders of Israel,' to assist Moses in the government of the people.—See Nu. xi. 16, .7. 24, .5. These, with the chief priests, seem purposely to have appeared in a considerable company, to give the more weight to what they said, and if need were,

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xi. 20—.4. We should carefully note the words of prophecy, and attentively watch their fulfilment. This is not a profitless employment; for thereby we have our faith increased; and our Lord has commanded us to have faith in God, that we may both be able to do whatsoever we determine upon, and also obtain whatever we ask.

[25, .6 ver. We must not only have faith in God through our Lord Jesus Christ; but be likewise willing to manifest in our conduct to others that forgiving grace which, by faith, we ourselves receive from God.]

Let us not think that there is any obstacle on God's part to our free and full forgiveness: if there be a hindrance, it is in our own unforgiving tempers: this we must endeavour to overcome.

THE HAND OF OUR GOD IS UPON ALL THEM FOR GOOD THAT SEEK HIM; BUT HIS POWER AND HIS WRATH IS AGAINST ALL THEM THAT FORSAKE HIM. Ezra viii. 22.

Matt. xxi 24, .5.	Mark xi. 28—30.	Luke xx. 2—4.
of-the people came-unto him as-he-was-teaching, [d] and-said, By what authority doest-thou these-things? and who gave thee this authority?	28 and say unto-him, By what authority doest-thou these-things? and who gave thee this authority [e] to do these-things?	[d] and spake unto him, saying, 2 Tell us, by what authority doest-thou these-things? or who is he that-gave thee this authority?"
24 And Jesus answered and-said unto-them, I-also will-ask you one thing λογον, [f] which if ye-tell me, I-in-likewise will-tell you by what authority I-do these-things.	29 And Jesus answered and-said unto-them, I will-also'-ask-of you one question λογον; [f] and answer me, and I-will-tell you by what authority I-do these-things.	And he-answered 3 and-said unto them, I will-also'-ask you one thing λογον; and answer me:
25 The baptism of-John, whence was-it? from heaven, or of men? [g]	'30 The baptism of-John, was-it from heaven, or of men?	The baptism of-John, 4 was-it from heaven, or of men?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xx. 1. gospel—The good news of the kingdom, Mk. i. 14, § 16, p. 108.

2. by what, &c.—so their fathers had asked Moses, Ex. ii. 14, 'Who made thee a prince and a judge over us?'—see Ac. vii. 27, 35—The power of the name of Jesus was afterwards testified to by the apostles, iv. 7—10.

authority, &c.—Mt. vii. 29, § 19, p. 142, 'He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.' —Lu. xi. 20, § 62, p. 153, 'If I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.'—Jno. vii. 46—8, § 55, p. 96, 'Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?'

these things—Jesus had come into Jerusalem, as the prophet had foretold, Mt. xxi. 4, 5, § 82, p. 261; Zec. ix. 9—He had put forth power in casting out those that sold and bought in the temple, Mt. xxi. 12, .3, § 83, p. 276—and having cleansed the house of his Father, he taught therein, so as to engross the attention of the people, Mk. xi. 17, .8, § ib., p. 278—And especially did he proclaim the good news of a kingdom, very different from the then existing government, whether ecclesiastical or civil, Lu. xix. 11—27, § 80, p. 247.

who is he that gave, &c.—The God of providence had witnessed to his being a true prophet, and the fulfiller of ancient prophecy, Mt. xxi. 1—9, § 82, p. 260—The God of revelation had answered him from heaven, Jno. xii. 27—30, § ib., p. 267—His power over the laws of nature, in that the blind were given to rejoice in his light, and the lame to leap at his approach; and in his commanding the barren fig tree to give to the unprofitable Jews a sign of their approaching doom, Mt. xxi. 14, .9, 20, §§ 82, .3, pp. 266, .75—all this, as well as his many previous miracles, proved him to be equally possessed of the signet of the God of creation, and made those guilty of rejecting the witness of God who refused to receive him, Jno. xv. 24, § 87, p. 391.

Mk. xi. 29. one question—a question involving the whole matter in dispute: John had been witnessed to by the last words of the last of their prophets, Mal. iv. 5, 6—John pointed to Jesus as 'the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world,' Jno. i. 29, § 10, p. 69—he also 'bare record that this is the Son of God,' ver. 34, p. 70.

Mt. xxi. 25. whence was it?—God, as the God of providence, Lu. i. 8, 9, § 1, p. 3—of revelation, ver. 11—7, pp. 3, 4; ver. 67—79, § 3, p. 16—and of creation, 57—65, § ib., pp. 15, .6—had testified of John, ver. 36—45, § 2, pp. 10, .1

NOTES.

to bear a united testimony against him. They were the persons under whose cognizance the late action of Christ, in purging the temple, would naturally fall.

Mt. xxi. 23. As he was teaching. Which also they supposed he had no authority to do, being neither priest, nor Levite, nor scribe. Some of the priests (though not as priests) and all the scribes were authorized teachers.

By what authority doest thou these things? The driving of the buyers and sellers out of the temple. Also his public entry, miracles, and teaching. Jesus, in teaching, attached many of the people to himself, and thus lessened the importance of the recognised teachers; they therefore demanded of him to shew his authority for the changes he was making in the minds and practice of the people.

[By what authority. 'Ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ. 'Ἐν, Heb. ב, "by virtue of." This they were authorized to ask, because they had the power of inquiring into the pretensions of a prophet; and the permission of preaching in the temple was derived from them. The interrogators expected, no doubt, that he would answer, "By virtue of my right as Messiah," and thus enable them to fix upon him at once the charge of blasphemy. But our Lord forebore to directly reply to his malevolent interrogators; not through fear (as appears from the boldness evinced in the parables immediately following), but from deliberation; and according to a method familiar to Hebrew, nay, to Grecian disputants, he answers by interrogation, replying to question by question, and that propounded with consummate wisdom; for while the Pharisees were not disposed, nay, were even afraid, to dispute John's claim to be a prophet, they would thereby, on their own principles, admit the claims of Jesus, to whose Divine mission John had borne repeated and unequivocal testimony.'—Bloomf.]

25. The baptism, &c. That is, the ministry, of which baptism, upon repentance and faith in the coming Messiah, was so prominent a part.

[' The sense is, "whence had John authority to baptize?" Βάπτισμα is put, by synecdoche, for the whole ministry of John to preach repentance, and the doctrines he taught; because baptism was its most prominent feature, being a symbol of the purity which he enjoined.'—Bloomf.]

Whence was it? from heaven, or of men? By what authority did he act and teach? Did man or God give him that authority? Was it not God? But if so, the consequence was clear. For John testified that Jesus was the Christ.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xi. 27, .8. Let not the man of God be surprised that his authority to speak the words, or do the works of God, should be called in question: this was done by the Jewish priests to the Lord himself; and that in his Father's house.]

[29, 30 ver. In order to arrive at a knowledge of the truth, successive steps must be taken. Let us not refuse to take any one of those steps. Let us impartially weigh evidence, and frankly confess what we believe concerning God's communications to men.]

(GOD, WHO KNOWS THE THOUGHTS OF THE HEART, WILL, IN THE LIGHT OF THE LAST DAY, EXPOSE THE INIQUITY OF ALL DECEITFUL WORKERS.
PHARISAICAL PRIDE MAY IN ONE PRETEND TO KNOW EVERYTHING, AND IN ANOTHER AFFECT TO KNOW NOTHING.

MATT. xxi. 26, .7.

And they reasoned
διελογίζοντο with themselves, saying,
If we-shall-say,
From heaven; he-will-say unto-us, Why did-ye-'not then-believe him?
26 But if we-shall-say,
Of men;
we-fear the people;
for all hold
John as a-prophet.

27 And they-answered
Jesus, and-said,
We-can-'not-tell.
And he said unto-them,
Neither tell I you
by what authority
I-do these-things.

MARK xi. 31—.3.

& Answer me.
31 And they-reasoned ελογιζοντο
with themselves, saying,
If we-shall-say,
From heaven; he-will-say,
Why then did-ye-'not-believe him?
32 But if we-shall-say,
Of men; &
they-feared the people:
for all men counted
John, that he-was a-prophet indeed οντως.
33 And they-answered
and-said unto Jesus,
We-can-'not-tell.
And Jesus answering saith unto-them, Neither do-I-tell you
by what authority
I-do these-things.

(Ch. xii. 1, p. 286.)

LUKE xx. 5—8.

And they reasoned 5
συνελογισαντο
with themselves, saying,
If we-shall-say,
from heaven he-will-say,
Why then believed-ye him not?
But and-if we-say, 6
Of men;
& all the people will-stone us:
for they-be persuaded that-John was a-prophet.

And they-answered, 7 that-they-could-'not-tell whence it was.
And Jesus 8
said unto-them,
Neither tell I you
by what authority
I-do these-things.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xi. 31. If we shall say, &c.—They did not ask among themselves, 'What is truth?' and, in the fear of God, seek to ascertain the intimations of his will; they merely sought for some expedient to enable them to escape the horns of the dilemma. This revealed their deceitful state of mind, and unpreparedness to be taught of God—see ver. 33, infra.

32. all men counted John, &c.—Herod, on this account, feared to put him to death, Mt. xiv. 5, § 40, p. 306—'All the people,' &c., Lu. vii. 29, .9, § 20, p. 225—Yet 'John did no miracle: but all things that John spake of this man [Jesus] were true,' Jno. x. 41, § 57, p. 125.

33. We can not tell—They had wilfully shut their eyes upon the light, Mt. xvi. 3, § 47, p. 29; Jno. ix. 30, 40, .1, § 55, pp. 112, .3—They knew that he had the authority of 'a teacher come from God,' iii. 2, § 12, p. 83, and yet they asked, 'Who is he that gave thee this authority?' Lu. xx. 2, supra, p. 283—and so were they, as a people 'of uncleanlips,' left to that blindness which the prophet had foretold, Is. vi. 5—10. . . . while the kingdom was being given to another people —see the succeeding parables, Mt. xxi. 28—xxii. 14, infra, pp. 285—94—Their case is described, Is. xxix. 14—.6. . . . 'Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. 15, Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? 16, Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?'

Neither do I tell you, &c.—see the disposition with which we may successfully inquire of the Lord, Ps. xxv. 9—14, 'The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he teach his way. 10, All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies. 11, For thy name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; for it is great. 12, What man is he that feareth the LORD? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose. 13, His soul shall dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit the earth. 14, The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him; and he will shew them his covenant.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 25. Why did ye not then believe him? That is, all his doctrines; and in particular, 'Why did ye not . . . . believe him?' when he repeatedly pointed me out as your Messiah?—See ch. iii. 14, § 8, p. 58; Jno. i. 29, 36, § 10, pp. 69, 70; iii. 26—36, § 13, p. 83.

26. For all hold John as a prophet. More respect seems to have been shewn to him than to Jesus; even many of the Pharisees and Sadducees came to his baptism. The defeat of Herod's army was esteemed by the Jews a judgment for the death of John the Baptist.

Lu. xx. 6. The people will stone us. The priests had themselves accustomed the people to that violence. When they could not legally convict their enemies, they invited the populace to stone them, by what was called the judicium zeli.—See Jno. x. 31, § 56, p. 122; Ac. xiv. 19. Stoning was indeed enjoined in the law of Moses as the punishment of idolatry, blasphemy, and other heinous offences; and its execution was committed to the people at large. Yet it appears from Exodus, that such sort of irregular and tumultuary vengeance was in use before the law—viii. 26, 'And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?'

Mt. xxi. 27. We can not tell. They were reduced to an inextricable dilemma. They were self-convicted of being unworthy to receive from Jesus an answer to their question. They would not acknowledge John to be Jesus' forerunner, for of necessity they then must have received Jesus as the Christ.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xi. 31, .2. Let us inquire, not what it may be expedient for us to answer before men, but what is the truth before God; and that especially concerning the testimony of Jesus.

33 ver. If we make not an honest use of the knowledge we already possess, let us not expect that God will be liberal to us in further communication of Divine truth.

The parable of a father and his two sons.—Matt. xxi. 28—32. In the temple.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxi. 28—32. Jesus delivers the first of a series of parables, chiefly relating to his first advent, and the transmission of the kingdom from the Jews to another people.

—— 28, 29. To the first son (Israel) the Father says, 'Go work to-day,' &c.; he refuses; but, repenting, he afterwards does as commanded.

—— 30. The second son (Judah) professes to be obedient, but is not.

Mt. xxi. 31. Jesus having asked which of these two 'did the will of his father?' they agree that it was the first. Jesus tells them in effect that they are the people represented by the second son, and that publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before them.

—— 32. As it had been with the preaching of John, so would it be with that of the apostles.

MATT. xxi. 28—32.

28 But what think ye? A certain-man had two sons; and he-came-to the first, and-said, 29 Son, go work to-day in my vineyard. He answered and-said, I-will not: but afterward 30 he-repented, and-went. And he-came-to the second, and-said likewise. And he answered 31 and-said, I go, sir: and went not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They-say unto-him, The first. Jesus saith unto-them, Verily I-say unto-you, That the 32 publicans and the harlots go-into the kingdom of God-before you. For John came unto

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxi. 28. But what think ye?—Had they in truth been brought to think, they might have been led to see in Jesus, him, of whom it is written in the book, 'Lo, I come: . . . I delight to do thy will, O my God,' Ps. xl. 7, 8—so would they have escaped the doom of those whose fear toward the Lord 'is taught by the precept of men,' Is. xxix. 13—have enjoyed the blessing of those 'that feared the LORD, . . . and that thought upon his name,' Mal. iii. 16, 17—and have better understood the testimony of Moses and Elijah, to which the last of their prophets directs their attention, iv. 4—6.

two sons—the two houses, Judah and Israel (or Ephraim), concerning whose progeny is the greater part of Old Testament history and prophecy—see Ho. iv. 15; vi. 4—With regard to these two, the Lord said, i. 6, 7, 'I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; but I will utterly take them away. But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah,'—it was, however, afterwards found, that the professed obedience of the latter was more in word than in deed, Is. i. 10—5. . . . .—The Lord is at length heard to say, Je. iii. 11, 'The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah.' And, addressing the Jews, who combined the profession of obedience with the most positive rebellion against God, vii. 8—14. . . . . he saith, ver. 15, 'I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim.'

29. I will not—Ho. xi. 7, 8, 'My people are bent to backsliding from me: though they called them to the most High, none at all would exalt him. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim?' &c.—Je. ii. 31, 'Wherefore say my people, We are lords; we will come no more unto thee?'—To backsliding Israel the Lord, iii. 7, 'said, after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me. But she returned not. And her treacherous sister Judah saw it.'

repented—see the Father's recognition of Ephraim's repentance, Je. xxxi. 18, 20. . . . .—and the joy and kindness with which he meets his returning prodigal, ver. 20—and comp. Lu. xv. 11—32, § 68, pp. 190—.5—see also the conclusion of Hosea, whose prophecy chiefly regards Ephraim, xiv.

30. I go, sir—Je. iii. 10, 'And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah hath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but feignedly, saith the LORD.'

went not—Rom. ii. 17, 'Behold, thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law, and makest thy boast of God,' —24, 'The name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you,'—x. 3, 'They (the Jews) being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.'

31. The first—Is. lxiii. 8, 'For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: so he was their Saviour.'—Je. xxxi. 20, 'Ephraim my dear son? a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still:'

publicans—Matthew himself was an example, ch. ix. 9, § 22, p. 167—and Zacchæus, Lu. xix. 2—10, § 80, p. 246—Contrast the humble publican and the self-righteous Pharisee, xviii. 9—14, § 73, p. 216—see the mercenary spirit, and worse than publican conduct, of the rulers and priesthood, Mt. iii. 9—12. . . . . Mal. i. 6: ii. 9—What the publicans did in the name of Cæsar, was nothing to that which was afterward done by the chief priests, Jno. xix. 12—.5, § 90, p. 414.

harlots—see the case of the woman which was a sinner, Lu. vii. 37—48, § 29, p. 230—'Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 28. What think ye? τί δὲ ὑμῖν δοκεῖ. 'What think you? Give me your opinion of what I am about to say?' A mode of speaking meant to refer the matter to themselves, that they might ultimately be self-condemned.

[A certain man . . . two sons. 'By ἄνθρ. is plainly meant God; but it is not so clear what is meant by τέκνα ἕν, on which there has been some diversity of opinion. The best commentators, however, are agreed that the words designate two different classes of the Jewish nation: 1, the profane and irreligious generally, but who were brought to repentance by John, and to reformation by Christ; 2, the scribes and Pharisees, whether priests or laymen, who, though professedly anxious to do the will of God, were, in reality, the greatest enemies to religion, and especially that of the gospel.'—Bloomf.]—See SCRIP. ILLUS.—See ADDENDA, p. 298, 2nd col. 2nd par.

31. The publicans and the harlots go, &c.—See on Lu. xviii. 13, § 73, p. 217; xix. 2—8, § 80, p. 246.

Go into . . . . before you. προάγουσιν. Render, not 'go before,' precede; but 'are preceding you.'—Comp. Lu. vii. 29, 30, § 29, p. 225.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxi. 28. It was as a son, and not as a mere servant, that Israel was commanded of the Lord; and it is in the spirit of adoption that we are now called upon to do his will.]

It is 'to-day,' it is now, that we are to 'work;' and it is in the Lord's vineyard that we are to labour, and not as merely seeking to please ourselves.

29 ver. How unbecoming in a son to say, in answer to any reasonable request of his father, 'I will not'! If we have thus replied to our heavenly Father, let us not delay repentance; let us hasten to know and do his will.

[30 ver. He who does those things which religious ceremonies symbolize, does the will of God; and not he who is ceremoniously respectful of religion, but really regardless of the Divine will, as to the regulation of his heart and life.]

31 ver. See margin.

[32 ver. We may reason from the past to the future; inferring as our Lord here does from what has already taken place, to what is likely to happen hereafter. They who remain unimproved by past providences, are the less likely to benefit by the opportunities that may hereafter be granted them.]

FORMALITY AND HYPOCRISY ARE GREATER OBSTACLES TO THE POSSESSION OF TRUE RELIGION THAN OPEN DISOBEDIENCE.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS NOW SHUT AGAINST THOSE THAT HAVE DONE EVIL, BUT AGAINST THOSE WHO REFUSE TO FORSAKE THEIR SINS.

MATT. xxi. 32.

you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not: but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

(G. 68.)—The parable of the vineyard let out to husbandmen—Matt. xxi. 33—46. Mark xii. 1—12. Luke xx. 9—19. In the temple.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxi. 33. Mk. xii. 1. Lu. xx. 9. Every thing necessary done for the vineyard by the householder previous to his leaving it in the hands of the husbandmen.

— xxi. 34—6. — xii. 2—5. — xx. 10—.2 The ill treatment of the servants (the Old Testament prophets) sent to receive the fruits of the vineyard.

— xxi. 37. — xii. 6. — xx. 13. The Lord of the vineyard resolves to send his 'well-beloved son.'

— xxi. 38, .9. — xii. 7, 8. — xx. 14, .5 The conduct of the husbandmen to the Son, quite in contrast to that which might have been expected.

— xxi. 40. — xii. 9. — xx. 15. Jesus asks the Jews, what they think should be done unto those husbandmen by the lord of the vineyard?

Mt. xxi. 41. Mk. xii. 9. Lu. xx. 16. The Jews answer, without at first perceiving that they are pronouncing sentence upon themselves; but afterwards, probably upon Jesus repeating their words with emphasis, they begin to discern his meaning, and exclaim, 'God forbid.'

— xxi. 42—4. — xii. 10, .1. — xx. 17, .8. Jesus directs their attention to Ps. cxviii. 22, .3, respecting the Stone rejected of the builders; and tells them that the kingdom of God shall be taken from them, 'and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.' And he contrasts the case of those who fell upon the Stone with that of those upon whom it should fall.

— xxi. 45, 6. — xii. 12. — xx. 19. The chief priests and Pharisees, perceiving that his parables refer to them, desire to lay hands on him, but fear the multitude, who regard Jesus as a prophet.

MATT. xxi. 33—46.	MARK xii. 1—12.	LUKE xx. 9—19.
33 [a]Hear another parable:	1 And he began to speak unto them by parables.	Then began he to speak 9 to the people this parable;
There was a certain housholder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged	A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged	A certain man planted a vineyard, him,' Lu. xv. 1, § 83, p. 188—Both Israel and Judah are reproached for spiritual whoredom, Je. ii. 31; iii., &c. . . . . —Jerusalem was pre-eminent as playing the harlot, Ezc. xvi. 1—47—The Lord declares upon oath, that even Sodom had not done as she and her daughters had done, ver. 48—is not to be restored till her sisters, Samaria and Sodom, are restored, ver. 53—63—The children of Israel are represented as children of whoredoms, Ho. i.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxi. 32. way of righteousness—John was the voice of one crying, '[1]Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight,' ch. iii. 3, § 7, p. 51—calling for repentance, ver. 2—and change of life, ver. 7, 8, § ib., p. 52—to cease from dependence upon man, and mere ceremonial religion, and to look for pure spiritual blessings from God, in Christ, ver. 9—12, § ib., p. 53—The same is the righteous way pointed out to Israel, as returning from the north country, Je. iii. 12—.7, . . . —and to Judah, as desiring to be put among the children, ver. 18, .9, p. ib.,—when, amid commingled expressions of repentance, they will rejoice in Jesus as the Way, ver. 21—.5.

ye believed him not—They did not profess to have any opinion on the subject of John's mission, Mk. xi. 33, p. 284—Had they believed John, they would have believed in Jesus, for John's testimony was respecting Him who was to come, Lu. iii. 15—.7, § 7, p. 54; Ac. xix. 4, 5—see on one question,' Mk. xi. 29, supra, p. 283.

33. householder — God is the great householder—Ps. xxxix. 12, 'I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers.'

vineyard—Ps. lxxx. 8, 'Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.'—15, 'The vineyard which thy right hand hath planted,' &c.—Is. v. 1, 2, 'Now will I sing to my wellbeloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard.'—See § 7, p. 53, on 'Every tree'—Je. ii. 21, 'I had planted thee a noble vine,' &c.

hedged it round about—He gave them ordinances to separate them from the surrounding heathen: 'the middle wall of partition,' which is now 'broken down,' Eph. ii. 14.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 32. In the way of righteousness. ἐν ὁδῷ δικ. A Hebrew form of expression for 'he came to you in the practice of, i. e., practising righteousness;' and, by implication, leading others into the same course.

That ye might believe. Intimating that there was a close connection between repentance and faith, and that their unrepentant state of mind prevented the reception of the great truth to which John bare witness, that Jesus is the Messiah, who hath full authority over the house of God; yea, 'all power . . . in heaven and on earth.'

33. Another parable. This is a customary method of teaching in the East. By this relation of a well-understood transaction, the more important instruction of convincing them of rebellion against God is brought home to their consciences.—See on ch. xiii. 3, § 32, p. 243.

[a] Our Lord takes this parable from Is. v. 1. The design is to shew, first, how peculiarly God had favoured and protected the church which he had planted in Judæa (ver. 33)—see Ps. lxxx. 8—16; secondly, how shamefully the rulers of that church had rebelled against his authority, Mt. xxi. 34—9; and thirdly, how severely he would judge them for their rebellion, ver. 40, .1. The Householder is God; the vineyard is his church—see on xx. 1, § 76, p. 231; the husbandmen are his people the Jews, more particularly those who bore spiritual rule among them; his servants are the prophets whom he sent to remind them of his authority, and to demand from them the fruits of obedience, and who were, on several occasions, cruelly used by them; his son is the Lord Jesus Christ; the miserable destruction of the

MATT. xxi. 34, .5.	MARK xii. 2, 3.	LUKE xx. 10.
a-wine-press ληνον in it, and built a-tower, & let-it'-out to-husbandmen, and went-into-a-far-country: [b]	a place for-the-wine-fat ὑπολήνιον, and built a-tower, & let-it'-out to-husbandmen, and went-into-a-far-country.	& let-it'-forth to-husbandmen, and went-into-a-far-country [b] for-a-long time.
34 and [c] when the time of-the fruit drew-near, [d] he-sent his servants to the husbandmen, that-they-might-receive the fruits of-it.	2 And at-the season [d] he-sent to the husbandmen a-servant, that he-might-receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of-the vineyard. [e]	And at-the-season [c] 10 he-sent a-servant to the husbandmen, that they-should-give him of the fruit of-the vineyard:
35 [f] And the husbandmen [f]	3 And they	but the husbandmen

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS

Mt. xxi. 33. winepress—Rev. xiv. 19, 20, 'The great winepress of the wrath of God . . . trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.'—xix. 15, 'And he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.'—Comp. Joel iii. 9—14. . . . .—Of the wrath of God against sin, the Israelites were continually reminded by the blood of their sacrifices, Ex. xii. 13; xxiv. 8; He. ix. 18—22—Of the justice of God we are still more strongly reminded by the blood of Jesus; and for those that despise this, there remaineth but vengeance, when the Lord shall judge his people, x. 28—31.

built a tower—Is. xxi. 5—10, 'Watch in the watch-tower,' &c.—Hab. ii. 1, 'I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower [Heb. fenced place], and will watch to see,' &c.—What was seen was to be written plain for the reader to run therewith, ver. 2—Prophecy was at length to serve its purpose, ver. 3—By the right use thereof, might be descried what belongs to the life of faith, as distinguished from proud self-righteousness, ver. 4—the proud kingdoms of the world, the Babylonian, ver. 5—8—the Medo-Persian, ver. 9—11—the Grecian, in whose language the knowledge of the glory of the Lord was conveyed to man, ver. 12—4—the Roman, who was allowed to fulfil the prophecies, by violence upon the land and the city, ver. 15—7—and that other form of the same idolatrous empire, ver. 18, 9—to be superseded by the kingdom of 'the LORD in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him,' ver. 20.

let it out to husbandmen—To the seed of Abraham was appointed the duty of instructing and blessing all nations, Ge. xxii. 17, 8. . . . .—To this the Lord had regard, when he gave to the nations their different positions on the globe—De. xxxii. 9, 'For the LORD's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance.'—The Lord's purpose was in some measure accomplished, by the instruction ministered by the Christian Jews to the Gentiles, 1 Co. iii. 6—8—ver. 9, 'For we are labourers together with God: ye are God's husbandry' [marg. tillage]—2 Ti. ii. 6, 7, 'The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits. Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.'

went into a far country—After manifesting his own Divine power, in giving Israel possession of the crowning land, 'which is the glory of all lands,' Eze. xx. 6, the Lord left them in the use of means he had so abundantly provided, now they were to be without that constant direct visible interference he had manifested, as bringing them out of Egypt, &c., ver. 7—26.

Lu. xx. 10. sent a servant—Je. vii. 25, 'I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets,' the fruit—Mi. ii. 7, 'O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the spirit of the LORD straitened?

NOTES.

wicked husbandmen is the destruction of the Jewish state, and the dreadful slaughter of the Jews by the Romans; the other husbandmen are the Gentiles, ver. 41, 3, who were to become God's church in the place of the Jews.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

Mt. xxi. 33. Hedged it, &c. By Divine ordinances, by Divine protection, by the fence of circumcision and the ceremonial law.

A winepress. This is still dug in the ground in Persia, and lined with mason's work. That part of the 'winepress' called by Mark, xii. 1, 'the winefat,' into which the juice of the grapes ran from the winepress above. The winepress may signify the altar. The altar flowed continually with the blood of the sacrifices, as the winepresses with the blood of the grape.

A tower. In eastern countries at present these towers are often eighty feet high and thirty feet square. They were for the keepers who defended the vineyard from thieves and animals, especially foxes, Ca. i. 6; ii. 15. The 'tower' is by some supposed to be the temple.

And let it out to husbandmen. To such as work in vineyards and fields, and receive the profit of their labour. Here they represent the priests and elders, to whom the care of the people was committed.

[ἐξέδοτο for ἐξεμίσθωσε. 'The word may here be rendered, "let it out,"—understanding, however, the rent to be not in money, but (agreeably to the most ancient usage, yet retained in the East, and even in some parts of the West) in a certain portion of the produce. Thus τοὺς καρποὺς just after should be rendered "his fruit or produce, the portion which fell to him." The expression let out implies agreement; and in the moral of the parable, has correspondent to it the covenant entered into by God with the Jews.'—Bloomf.]

And went into a far country. That is, left the keepers of his vineyard in some measure to behave as they should see good. The original means, 'went out of the country; went abroad.'

34. When the time of the fruit, &c. '"The time for gathering the fruits," as Mk. xi. 13. This, too, appears from the researches of Mr. Greswell, to have been the time commonly appropriated by landlords to receiving the rents. Indeed it must, if, as in the present case, the rent be supposed to have been paid in produce. By the servants are plainly meant, in the moral, the prophets.'—Bloomf.

Receive the fruits. Alluding to the ancient custom of paying the rent of a farm in kind. The Boldon book, a survey of the bishopric of Durham in 1183, shews how much of the rents was paid in cows, sheep, pigs, fowls, eggs, &c., the remaining part being made up in manual labour.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxi. 33. The first thing necessary for the church is, that it be the planting of the Lord; the second, that it be separated from the world into a holy community; the third, that it bring forth fruit in the season thereof for him who planted it; and the fourth, that the tower of the Lord's building be made use of, in order that all may be carefully preserved.]—For ver. 34, see margin.

[The time of the Lord's sending his special messengers is a time when he more especially calls for

LET US LOOK UPON THE LORD'S MESSENGERS AS THOSE WHO ARE NOT ONLY SENT TO DO US GOOD, BUT DESIGNED TO CALL FORTH INTO MANIFESTATION THE PROPER FRUITS OF THE GOOD WORD OF GOD.

MATT. xxi. 36.	MARK xii. 4—6.	LUKE xx. 11—.3.
took his servants, and-beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.	I caught him, and-beat him, and sent-him-away empty.	beat him, and-sent-him-away empty.
36 Again, he-sent other servants more than-the first: and they-did unto-them likewise.	4 And again he-sent unto them another servant; and-at-him they-cast-stones, and wounded-him-in-the-head, and sent-him-away shamefully-handled.	And again he-sent another servant: and they beat him-also, and entreated-him-shamefully, and-sent-him-away empty.
	5 And again he-sent another; and him they-killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some.	12 And again he-sent a-third: and they wounded him also, and-cast-him-out.
	6 Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved,	13 Then said the lord of-the vineyard, What shall-I-do? I-will-send my beloved son:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

are these his doings? do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?'—Am. v. 15. 'Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate:'—Mi. iii. 8, § 7, p. 22, 'Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance:'—Ga. v. 22, .3, 'The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance:'—Eph. v. 8—10, 'Walk as children of light: 9, (for the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;) 10, proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.'

Lu. xx. 10. empty — Ho. x. 1, 'Israel is an empty vine [marg. a vine emptying the fruit which it giveth], he bringeth forth fruit unto himself:'—Ephraim, though fruitful as compared with his brethren, was yet far from bringing forth fruit unto God, equal to his privileges, xiii. 15, .6—see the testimony with regard to Israel, 2 Ki. xvii. 7—23.

Mt. xxi. 36. other servants—Particular instances of the cruel usage of God's servants, the prophets, by the rulers of the Jews are recorded—see on ch. v. 12, § 19, p. 122; and comp. xxiii. 37, § 86, p. 320; Lu. xiii. 33, .4, § 66, p. 179.

Mk. xii. 4. cast stones—This was among the Jews a common way of punishment, De. xiii. 9; xvii. 7; Jos. vii. 25; . . . . . 2 Chr. xxiv. 20, .1; xxxvi. 16; Ne. ix. 26—Especially was this the case in times of popular tumult, and of sudden indignation among the people, Ac. vii. 58; xiv. 19.

5. beating . . . . and killing—The guilt of this Jesus charged home upon Jerusalem, Mt. xxiii. 37, § 85, p. 320—so Stephen, Ac. vii. 52, 'Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One:'—And Paul describes the Jews, 1 Th. ii. 15, .6, as those 'who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, ... forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

Lu. xx. 13. my beloved son—Is. xlii. 1, 'Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him:'—The sign of this was given at Jesus' baptism, accompanying the Father's declaration, Lu. iii. 22, § 8, p. 59, 'Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.'—And on 'the Holy Mount' this voice was again heard, 2 Pe. i. 17, .8.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 35. Beat one. Δέρειν signifies properly to flay or skin; but as words denoting great violence come at length, by the abuse of them, to bear a milder sense, it was at length used to signify beat severely.

[36. More than the first. Or, more honourable. It is evident that a climax is intended by the historian, in representing the husbandmen as proceeding from evil to worse; and the climax is much better supported by making πλείονας relate to dignity, than by making it refer to number. He first sent some inferior servants; afterwards, the more respectable; last of all, his son. As the fulness of the time approached, each prophet more fully and clearly pointed out the coming of Christ.]

Lu. xx. 12. A third. The Lord sent prophets such as Hosea and Amos to Israel, before the Assyrian captivity; he sent others, such as Isaiah and Jeremiah, to their brethren, the Jews, before their being carried to Babylon; and thereafter to the remnant of the Jews that were restored from thence, he sent prophets such as Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi.

There is a little variation in the circumstances, as mentioned by Matthew, and by Mark and Luke; but the substance is the same. Mark and Luke are more particular, and state the order in which the servants were sent one after another. They all denote the dealing of the people of Israel towards the prophets. All these things had been done to the Lord's servants; He. xi. 37, 'They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented;'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the fruits of righteousness; and the danger of neglecting the call, is correspondent to the privilege of receiving it. The times of the prophets have generally been trying times.]

[Mt. xxi. 35. Let not the servants of God be surprised should they meet with ill-usage from men: they must be willing, with their lives, and by their death, to attest the truth of their mission.]

36 ver. Let us admire the patience of God in continuing to warn the wicked, by his working in providence and grace, that so they may be awakened to repentance.

Matt. xxi. 37—41.	Mark xii. 7—9.	Luke xx. 14—.6.
37 But last-of-all he-sent unto them his son, saying, They-will-reverence my son.	" he-sent him also last unto them, saying, " They-will-reverence my son.	" it-may-be they-will reverence him when-they-see-him.
38 But when-the husbandmen-saw the son, they-said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let-us-kill him, and let-us-seize-on his inheritance.	7 But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let-us-kill him, and the inheritance shall-be our's.	But when-the husbandmen-saw him, they-reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let-us-kill him, that the inheritance may-be our's. 14
39 And they-caught him, and-cast him out of-the vineyard, and slew him.	8 And they-took him, and-killed him, and cast him out-of the vineyard.	So they- 15 cast him out-of the vineyard, and-killed him.[o]
40 [o]When the lord therefore of-the vineyard cometh, what will-he-do unto those husbandmen?	9 What shall-therefore the lord of-the vineyard-do?	What therefore shall-the lord of-the vineyard-do unto-them?
41 They-say unto-him, He-will-miserably-destroy those wicked men, and will-let-out his vineyard unto-other husbandmen,	He-will-come and destroy the husbandmen, and will-give the vineyard unto-others.	He-shall-come and destroy 16 these husbandmen, and shall-give the vineyard to-others.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xx. 14. reasoned among themselves, &c.—Jno. xi. 47, .8, § 58, p. 132, 'What do we? for this man doeth many miracles. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.'

This is the heir—Through the mouth of their high priest he was pointed out as being he, in whom is the redemption of Israel. Jno. xi. 49—52, § ib.

come, let us kill him—Jno. xi. 53, § ib., p. 133, 'Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.'

inheritance may be our's—Otherwise, thought they, we shall lose it; Jno. xi. 48, § ib., p. 132, 'the Romans shall come and take away both our place,' &c.

15. cast him out—He. xiii. 12, 'Jesus . . . . suffered without the gate.'—See Mk. xv. 20, § 91, p. 456.

killed—as Jesus himself had predicted, just before the transfiguration, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40—and after, xvii. 22, .3, § 52, p. 70; xx. 18, .9, § 77, p. 235.

Mt. xxi. 41. They say unto him—Some of the audience attending to the narrative, without immediately perceiving its application, gave answer according to truth, as in the text—In their sentence, Jesus seems to have acquiesced, as Mk. xii. 9—He may also have repeated their words; and then others, or it may be the same individuals, perceiving at length the drift of the parable, exclaim, 'God forbid'! as in Lu. xx. 16.

destroy those wicked—see also afterwards, ch. xxii. 7, infra, p. 292—This the prophets had foretold, Is. i. 24, .8. . . . . Je. xix. 12, .5: Eze. xiv. 21—Jesus himself had before lamented this destruction, Lu. xix. 43, .4, § 82, p. 264.

other husbandmen—The other house of Israel, after whom, when the Lord turned from 'treacherous Judah,' he sent his word into the north country, Je. iii. 11, .2. . . . .—and whom it was to find in the islands and ends of the earth, Is. xli. 1, .5, 9. . . . . xlii. 10. . . . . xliii. 4, 7, 21. . . . . xlix. 1. . . . . Je. xxxi. 10. . . . . &c.—the other sheep which were not of the Jewish fold, Jno. x. 16, § 55, p. 116; xi. 52, § 58, p. 133, 'the children of God that were scattered abroad,'—which in time past had been made, Is. xl. 8, 'not a people,'—but, 1 Pe. ii. 10, 'are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.'—See also Rom. ix. 25, .6—and comp. Ho. i. 8—10.

NOTES.

Mt. xxi. 37. Last of all . . . his son . . . They will reverence my son. Jesus here is plainly fixing their attention on himself; whom God had sent, and whom they were plotting to destroy.

38. Said among themselves. Alluding to the conspiracies in their councils against Christ.—See ch. xxvii. 1, § 89, p. 434.

39. Cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. Utterly rejected the counsel of God against themselves; and would neither acknowledge the authority of Christ, nor submit to his teaching.

And slew him, &c. This refers to the conduct of the Jews in putting the Saviour to death. So they understood it, ver. 45. This was done by giving him into the hands of the Romans, and seeking his crucifixion, ch. xxvii. 20—.5, § 90, p. 451; Ac. ii. 23; vii. 51, .2.

41. They say unto him, &c. Our Lord as before, ver. 31, p. 285, leads them to condemn themselves unawares.

He will miserably destroy, &c. Κακους κακως απολεσει αυτους. He will put those wretches to a wretched death. How solemnly is the extinction of the national existence, and the removal of the religious privileges of the Jews, foretold! The sentence which is here passed upon them is rendered more terrible from their being condemned out of their own mouth!

Unto other husbandmen. He would take the privileges enjoyed by the Jews, and give them to another people.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxi. 37—.9. How much in contrast to that which might have been expected, was the conduct of those unto whom the Son of God was more especially sent! In place of giving him reverence, they treated him as the vilest malefactor.

[40 ver. The Lord of the vineyard will not always be passive towards those who have assumed to be lords over his heritage. As the Jews could by the help of this parable judge more impartially of their case, so let us by their case judge more truly of ours.

MATT. xxi. 42—.4.	MARK xii. 10, .1.	LUKE xx. 17, .8.
which shall-render him the fruits in their seasons.[P] [P] And when-they-heard it, they-said, God-forbid. And he beheld them, 17 and-said,[q]
42 Jesus saith [q] unto-them, Did-ye-never-read in the scriptures, The-stone which the builders rejected απεδοκιμασαν, the-same is-become the-head of-the-corner: this is the-Lord's doing παρα Κυριου εγενετο αυτη, and it-is marvellous in our eyes?	10 And have-ye-not-read this scripture; The-stone which the builders rejected απεδοκιμασαν is-become the-head of-the-corner: 11 this was the-Lord's doing παρα Κυριου εγενετο αυτη, and it-is marvellous in our eyes?	What is this then that is-written, The-stone which the builders rejected απεδοκιμασαν, the-same is-become the-head of-the-corner?
43 Therefore say-I unto-you, The kingdom of God shall-be-taken from you, and given to-a-nation bringing-forth the fruits thereof.
44 And whosoever shall-fall on this stone shall-be-broken συνθλασθησεται: but on whomsoever it-shall-fall, it-will-grind-him-to-powder λικμησει.		Whosoever shall-fall upon 18 that stone shall-be-broken συνθλασθησεται; but on whomsoever it-shall-fall, it-will-grind-him-to-powder λικμησει.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxi. 41. fruits—Ph. i. 11, 'The fruits of righteousness,'—He. xiii. 15, 'The fruit of our lips giving thanks to [marg. confessing to] his name.'—Ja. iii. 17, .8, 'good fruits,' &c.—see on Lu. xx. 0, p. 284.

42. The stone—Ps. cxviii. 22, .3. . . . —The 'sure foundation' laid in Sion, Is. xxviii. 16; 1 Pe. ii. 6, 7—see Peter's confession of this stone, Mt. xvi. 16—.8, § 50, p. 36—before ascending the holy mount, xvii. 1—4, § 51, pp. 51—.4.

head of the corner—Jesus, who is the foundation of the apostles, Lu. ix. 20, § 50, p. 36; and prophets, ver. 30, .1, § 51, p. 53; is 'himself the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord,' Eph. ii. 20, .1.

43. taken from you—Is. lxv. 15. . . . . 'The Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name:'—see before, on the two sons, Mt. xxi. 28—32, p. 285.

a nation bringing forth, &c.—see this nation addressed, Is. ii. 4. . . . . lxvi. 5—14. . . . —are to give their many crowns to the Redeemer, Rev. xix. 11—.6.

the fruits—Ephraim, of whom a multitude [or, fulness] of nations was to come, Ge. xlviii. 19. . . . . —the fulness of the Gentiles, Rom. xi. 25—is yet to be found worthy of his name, Fruitful, Ho. xiv. . . . . Ge. xlix. 22—.6.

44. fall on this stone—The Lord, who was to be for a Sanctuary to those that put their trust in him, was also to be, Is. viii. 14, .5, 'for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.'—Comp. 1 Pe. ii. 8—Simeon testified of Jesus, Lu. ii. 34, § 4, p. 26, that he was 'for the fall and rising again of many in Israel;'—Mt. xi. 6, § 28, p. 228, 'Blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.'

it shall fall, &c.—Da. ii. 34, .5. . . . . 'A stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon the corner stone; and, by its importance in sustaining and defending the building, the head stone.—See 1 Co. iii. 11; Eph. ii. 20, .1; 1 Pe. ii. 5.]

43. The kingdom of God shall be taken, &c. The privileges and blessedness promised to the fathers—of which you deem yourselves heirs—seeing you prove unworthy, shall be given to the people whom ye despise; who, though now cast out among the Gentiles, 'shall be my people, and I will be their God.'

A nation. Though collected out of many nations, they will as Christians constitute one nation, the ἐθνος ἁγιον mentioned 1 Pe. ii. 9, 'an holy nation.'

NOTES.

[Mt. xxi. 41. Which shall render him the fruits, &c. The people who had been more especially promised blessing under the New Testament dispensation, were the outcast children of Ephraim, whose name means 'fruitful.'—See INTRODUCTION to Luke xv. § 68, p. 187.]

42. The stone which the builders, &c. See Ps. cxviii. 22. The Messiah, rejected by the Jews, especially by their chief priests and rulers.

[Head of the corner. Both the Jewish and Christian dispensations are often designated by the figure of a building; and of the latter Christ is represented as

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxi. 41. By the fulfilment of the sentence which they pronounced against themselves, God has given us assurance that his threatenings against those who neglect so great a salvation will surely be executed.]

[Have we not come short of the expectations that might reasonably have been formed of us, as much as the Jews came short of that which might have been expected of them? May it not be said, that as little as they reverenced the Son, have we rendered to the Lord of the vineyard the fruits thereof in their seasons?]

Let men take care that in listening to the highest human authority they are not rejecting the Divine.

[43 ver. The ministration of the word of God which was taken from the Jews, has most truly been given to our people. We have been given unequalled facilities and inducements to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom. Let us from the case of the Jews see that the possession of great privileges is no guarantee of our security, should we prove unworthy of them.]

44 ver. Let us ever remember, that as truly as those who fell upon that Stone were broken, so truly will those on whom it shall fall be ground to powder. A severer doom awaits the apostate nations of Christendom, than even that which befel the unbelieving Jews.

LET US TRUST IN GOD, AND BE WILL IN DUE TIME MAKE MANIFEST HIS OWN WORK, TO THE WONDER OF MEN THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN WATCHING THE OPERATIONS OF HIS HAND.

Matt. xxi. 45, .6.	Mark xii. 12.	Luke xx. 19.
45 And when-the chief-priests and Pharisees-had-heard his parables, they-perceived that he-spake of them. 46 But when-they-sought	12 And they-	And the chief-priests and 19 the scribes
		ʳthe same hour ˢ
ˢto-lay-hands-on him, they-feared the multitude, because they-took him for a-prophet.ᵗ	sought to-lay-hold-on him, but feared the people:	sought to-lay hands on him; and they-feared the people:
	ᵗfor they-knew that he-had-spoken the parable against them: and they-left him, and-went-their-way. (Ver. 13, p. 295.)	for they-perceived that he-had-spoken this parable against them. (Ver. 20, p. 295.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

his fact that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces . . . . . like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.'—Ver. 44, .5, 'The kingdom—[marg. Chald. kingdom thereof]—(see Mt. xxi. 43) . . . . shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever,' &c.

Mt. xxi. 46. a prophet—'A great prophet,' Lu. vii. 16, § 29, p. 222—'That prophet that should come into the world,' Jno. vi. 14, § 41, p. 317—'The Prophet,' vii. 40, § 55, p. 96, predicted, De. xviii. 18, .9

NOTE.

Lu. xx. 19. The same hour. ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ, 'at that very time.' The words have reference to the attempts made to take him just after by the same persons.—Comp. ch. xix. 47, p. 278.

(G. 69.) —Jesus delivers the parable of the marriage feast.—Matt. xxii. 1—14. In the temple.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxii. 1—10. Jesus delivers the third parable.

—— 1, 2. Occasion of the gospel message. The king's design to honour his son.

—— 3. He sends 'forth his servants to call them that were bidden:' they refuse to come.

—— 4. He sends forth other servants (the apostles, &c.), saying, 'all things are ready: come,' &c.

—— 5, 6. They make light of the invitation, and go, 'one to his farm, another to his merchandise:' the remnant maltreat the messengers, even to death.

—— 7. The king gives commandment to destroy 'those murderers,' and to burn 'up their city.'

—— 8, 9. Those first invited having proved themselves unworthy of the kindness shewn to them, the king sends forth his servants into the highways, to bid as many as they find 'to the marriage.'

—— 10. The servants obey, and gather together 'both bad and good: and the wedding' is 'furnished with guests.'

Mt. xxii. 11—.4. The wedding garment, concluding the parables illustrative of our Lord's second advent.

—— 11. The king having come in to look at the guests, sees one not having 'on a wedding garment:' representing such as make light of the righteousness of Christ, and assume to be heirs of the heavenly blessedness, without being made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.

—— 12. The king asks the man why he has come in hither without the proper attire. He has nothing to say in excuse,—wedding garments having been provided for all the guests, as freely as the entertainment.

—— 13. The man who found his way into the guest chamber without being prepared for the feast, is given a place and portion correspondent to his condition.

—— 14. Our Lord repeats the saying, that 'many are called, but few are chosen.'

Matt. xxii. 1—14.

1 And Jesus answered and-spake unto-them again by parables, and-said, 2 The kingdom of heaven is-like unto-a-certain king ὡμοιωθη ανθρωπω βασιλει, which made a-marriage

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 1—10—see Parallelism, Lu. xiv. 16—24, p. 186, Addenda.

2. certain king—Ps. xlvii. 7, 'God is the King of all the earth:'—Ho. xiii. 10, 'I will be thy king: where is any other that may save thee in all thy cities? and thy judges of whom thou saidst, Give me a king and princes?'—Mal. i. 14, 'I am a great King, saith the Lord of hosts,' marriage—The bridegroom is described, Ps. xlv. 2—9, the bride is addressed, 10—.4. . . . —Much on this subject is said in the Song of Solomon—The bride is contrasted with Jerusalem that now is, Is. liv. 1—5, ... —comp. Ga. iv. 25—31—has been seemingly slighted, but is the object of everlasting love, Is. liv. 6—10; lxii. 4, 5—is identified with the New Jerusalem—comp. liv. 11—.4, with Rev. xxi. 9—27.

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 1. By parables. It was a constant practice of our Lord to take the subject of his discourses from the persons present, or from the circumstances of times, persons, or places.—See ch. xvi. 6, § 48, p. 32; Jno. iv. 7—10, § 13, p. 92; vi. 26, .7, § 43, p. 325; vii. 37, § 55, p. 95; and see on Mt. xiii. 3, § 32, p. 243.

['The object of the parable was, it should seem, twofold; I., as being partly historical and partly prophetical, to shadow forth the general fortunes of the gospel in its early stage. Thus it represents, 1, the invitation given to the Jews to embrace the gospel; the rejection of that offer, the severe punishment to be inflicted on them for their disobedience, and the admission of the Gentiles, in their stead, to the privileges of Christianity. 2. It was meant to represent the peculiar nature of the gospel, as a dispensation of grace through faith; and thus to afford instruction for every age of the church; when multitudes who were bidden to the marriage feast of life and immortality would refuse to come, and others who accepted the invitation would come irreverently and profanely, and so far from complying with the terms, both expressed and implied, would affix terms of their own, and thus be self-excluded.'—Bloomf.]

2. A marriage. 'A marriage-feast;' so the Greek and the sequel imply. Such feasts lasted several

MATT. xxii. 3—8.

3 for-his son, and sent-forth his servants to-call them that-were-bidden to the wedding:
4 and they-would not come. Again, he-sent-forth other servants, saying, Tell them which-are-bidden, Behold, I-have-prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, 5 and all-things are ready: come unto the marriage. But they made-light-of it αμελη-6 σαντες, and-went-their-ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise: and the 7 remnant took his servants, and-entreated-them-spitefully ὑβρισαν, and slew them. But when-the king-heard thereof, he-was-wroth ωργισθη: and he-sent-forth his armies, 8 and-destroyed those murderers, and burned-up their city. Then saith-he to his servants,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 3. sent forth his servants — Lu. xvi. 16, § 69, p. 199, 'The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into [or, against] it.'—John the Baptist described himself as the friend of the Bridegroom, Jno. iii. 26—9, § 13, p. 89.

would not come — Notwithstanding the seeming popularity of Jesus, John testified, iii. 32, § ib., p. 90, 'No man receiveth his testimony.'

4. other servants—1 Co. iv. 9, 'For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death:'

which are bidden—Those unto whom the word of God had come, by his servants the prophets—their case further described, ver. 8, and Lu. xiv. 24, § 67, p. 184.

Behold—Pr. i. 20—3, 'Wisdom crieth without;' &c. —see the repeated calls to 'hearken,' Is. li. 1—8, . . . and to 'awake,' and put on 'beautiful garments,' attending to the voice of the Lord's messengers, lii. 1—12. . . . . —After the contemplation of the Bridegroom, ver. 13—5; liii. . . . —and the address to the bride in liv. . . . . —see the invitation to the feast, lv. 1—4. . . . . sent forth to an estranged nation, &c., to be at length effectual in gathering together the nations to whom it has been sent, ver. 5—13, and of strangers with them, as taking hold of the covenant, lvi. 1—8. . . . . —The neglecters and despisers of the invitation are noticed, 9—12—lvii. 1—12. . . . . —The preparation for the feast, ver. 13—9—and the contrast, ver. 20, 1—the external preparation which is not acceptable, lviii. 1—5. . . . — and the preparation the Lord will accept, 6—14—The nakedness of those that are left in the outer darkness, lix. . . . . contrasted with the light and abundance of those who truly obey the invitation, lx.

prepared my dinner, &c.—Pr. ix. 1, 2, 'Wisdom . . . hath killed her beasts; she hath mingled her wine; she hath also furnished her table.'

come—Pr. ix. 5, 'Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled.'—Rev. xix. 9, 'And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called,' &c.; xxii. 17.

5. made light of it—Pr. i. 22, 'How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?'—24, 'Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;' &c.—ix. 12, 'If thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thyself: but if thou scornest, thou alone shalt bear it.'—Comp. Is. lxv. 2; Rom. x. 21—Jno. v. 40, § 23, p. 130, 'And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.'—Rom. ii. 4, 'Despisest thou the riches of his goodness?'—He. ii. 3, 'How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;'

6. entreated . . . spitefully—1 Th. ii. 15, 'Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us;' &c.—see on Mt. xxi. 34—40, p. 287.

7. was wroth—1 Th. ii. 16, 'For the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

his armies—The king of Babylon, whose armies had previously destroyed Jerusalem, was forced to acknowledge, Da. iv. 34, .5, 'the most High . . . doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth:'—and see the burden of Babylon, Is. xiii. 1—5.

destroyed those murderers—see Is. i. 21—.8 — see on Lu. xix. 27, 43, .4; Mt. xxi. 4, &c.

8. bidden—Ac. iii. 26, 'Unto you (the Jews) first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 3. Sent forth his servants. It was the custom among the ancients for the guests to be twice invited; or rather first invited, that they might prepare themselves, and then summoned a short time previous to the banquet, that they might be there at the proper time. The first invitation to the Jews was given by the prophets, down to John the Baptist; the second afterwards by the apostles and other disciples in succession. To this custom Solomon alludes, in a beautiful parable of the accessibility of wisdom to those who are disposed to seek it, Pr. ix. 1—5.

4. My dinner. τὸ ἄριστον. This was, in early times, the name given to breakfast: afterwards it denoted the noonday meal; and at length it was applied to the chief meal (dinner), taken at the close of the day. Hence it came to signify a banquet in general.

6. And the remnant, &c. Some sinners are well satisfied by merely neglecting religion; while others proceed against it with open violence and bitter malice.

7. He sent forth his armies. This points out in the plainest terms the Roman armies under Vespasian and Titus, which, not many years after this was spoken, besieged Jerusalem, and destroyed the city with an immense number of its inhabitants. This terrible devastation our Lord here predicts in general terms (as afterwards more particularly at ch. xxiv.), and represents, as the judgment of God on this perverse and obstinate people, for their rejection of the Christian religion, their savage treatment of the apostles and their associates, and their many other atrocious crimes.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxii. 1—3. Let us not, like those unto whom the gospel message was first sent, endeavour to frustrate the Divine purpose—God's great design of honouring His Son in the salvation of men. The obstruction to the salvation of those unto whom the word of God came was not on God's part, but on theirs,—'they would not come.'

[4 ver. God not only sent his servants, the prophets, to give warning, but also afterwards the apostles, to say, 'All things are ready:' and it is only because of man's reluctance to comply with the Divine invitation, that the long-promised feast of joy has been deferred.]—5 ver. See margin.

[5, 6 ver. Indifference to the call of God by the better sort, is an encouragement to the remnant to proceed to deeds of violence, which those who are thus the real causes thereof would themselves blush to perpetrate.

7 ver. Let those who love peace beware of seeking to obtain it in standing apart from the messengers of peace. The punishment which fell upon the Jews involved in destruction and misery, not only the individual murderers, but their city and nation, both those who spitefully entreated and slew the messengers, and those whose conduct led to this by their making light of the message.

THE GREAT HINDRANCE TO COMPLIANCE WITH THE GOSPEL INVITATION IS PERHAPS NOT SO MUCH A DESIRE OF THINGS UNLAWFUL, AS AN UNLAWFUL DESIRE OF THINGS THAT IN THEIR PROPER PLACE MAY BE GOOD FOR US TO POSSESS.

MATT. xxii. 9—12.

9 The wedding is ready, but they which-were-bidden were not worthy. Go-ye therefore into the highways διεξοδους των οδων, and as-many as ye-shall-find, bid to the marriage.
10 So those servants went-out into the highways οδους, and gathered-together all as-many-as they-found, both bad and good: and the wedding was-furnished επλησθη with-guests.
11 And when the king came-in to-see θεασασθαι the guests, he saw there a-man which-had-not on a-wedding garment:
12 and he-saith unto-him, Friend, how camest-thou-in hither

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 8. not worthy.—The apostles were to inquire in the several places to which they went, who therein was worthy? — Mt. x. 11, .3, § 39, p. 297, 4 'If it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.'—At Antioch, in Asia Minor, Paul and Barnabas said to the Jews, Ac. xiii. 46, 'Seeing ye . . . . judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life,' &c. — On the blessedness promised to those that are worthy—see Rev. iii. 4; xxii. 14.

9. Go ye therefore, &c.—Is. xlii. 8, 'Bring forth,' &c. —9, 'Let all the nations be gathered,' &c. —lv. 1. . . . . 'Ho, every one that thirsteth,' &c.—5, 'Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee'—lvii. 3, 6—8, . . . —Mt. xxviii. 19, 20, § 96, ... 'Go ye therefore, and teach all nations,' &c.—The Lord says of Paul, Ac. ix. 15, 'he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:'—xiii. 46, 'Lo, we turn to the Gentiles.'

10. gathered together — see on the parable of the tares, ch. xiii. 40—3, § 33, p. 260—and of the net cast into the sea, ver. 47—50, &c., § ib., p. 262.

furnished with guests — see Is. xlix. 18, .9; li. 3; lx. 4, 5; Zec. x. 10.

11. had not on—1 Pe. v. 5, 'Be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud,'—2 Co. v. 3, 'If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked.'—Ph. iii. 9, 'Not having mine own righteousness,'—Rev. xvi. 15, 'Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments,' &c.

wedding garment—Ps. xlv. 13, .4, 'The king's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework: the virgins her companions,' &c.—Is. lii. 1, 'Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem,'—lxi. 10, 'He hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh,' &c. —To Joshua, the high priest, the Lord said, Zec. iii. 4, 'I will clothe thee with change of raiment.'—Rom. xiii. 14, 'Put ye on the Lord Jesus,'—Eph. iv. 24, 'The new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.'—So Col. iii. 10—ver. 12, 'Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering;'—Rev. xix. 8, 'And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white [marg, bright]: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.'

12. how camest, &c.—He needed not to have come without, seeing there is provided, Rom. iii. 22, 'the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:'

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 8. Were not worthy. Because they made light of it, and would not come; preferring earthly things to heavenly blessings. Among Mohammedans, refusal to come to a wedding-feast, when invited, is considered a breach of the law of God. It was probably considered in this light by all the oriental nations. This observation is necessary, in order to point out more forcibly the iniquity of the refusal. A man may be said to be worthy of, or fit for, this marriage-feast, when feeling his wretchedness and misery, he comes to God in the way appointed, by the blood of Jesus Christ.

9. Go ye therefore into the highways, &c. Διεξοδους των οδων, cross or by-paths; the places where two or more roads met in one, leading into the city, where people were coming together from various parts of the country. It was a custom among the Jews, when a rich man made a feast, to invite in poor and destitute travellers.

This picture is quite agreeable to eastern manners; for the Arabs never set by anything that is brought to table; so that when they kill a sheep, they dress it all, call in their neighbours and the poor, and finish everything. It is as common in the east for a rich man to give a feast to the poor, and the maimed, and the blind, as it is in England for a nobleman to entertain men of his own degree. Thus, does he wish to gain some temporal or spiritual blessing? he orders his head servant to prepare a feast for one or two hundred poor guests.

11. The king came in to see the guests. By this circumstance ancient manners are accurately depicted. Grotius informs us, that when great persons gave magnificent banquets, they used, when their guests were seated, to enter the hall of entertainment. May here signify the members of the visible church.

A wedding garment. 'In the East every guest was expected to appear in an elegant dress; this was frequently a white robe. If the guest were a stranger, one was furnished by the master of the feast. It was to a high degree indecorous and offensive to appear without this garment.—So Porteus. The words ενδυμα γαμου may here signify "a banqueting robe," for a certain style of dress, as far as respected the outer garment, was required at all feasts.'—Bloomf.

The Easterns, among whom the fashion of clothes was not changeable as with us, reckoned it a principal part of their magnificence to have their wardrobes stored with rich habits. Thus Job, speaking of the wicked, says, ch. xxvii. 16, 'Though he heap up silver as the dust, and prepare raiment as the clay.' Accordingly, in scripture, when the uncertainty of earthly treasures is spoken of, they are represented as subject not only to rust, but to moths. —See Mt. vi. 19; Ja. v. 2, 3. Horace tells us, that when Lucullus, the Roman general, who had enriched himself with the spoils of the East, was asked if he could furnish a hundred habits for the theatre, he replied, he had five thousand in his house, of which they were welcome to take part or all.

12. Friend. Rather, companion. The word does not imply friendship; but was a common mode of

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxii. 8, 9. Let us admire and be grateful for the grace of God to ourselves, who has made the rebellious rejection of the gospel by the Jews the cause of good to us. The wedding is as ready for us as it was for them: may we, knowing our own unworthiness, and trusting entirely in the worthiness of Christ, be enabled to partake thereof.]

[10 ver. It is the king's commandment that gives a right to any to come to the marriage, and his commandment calls for obedience to the faith among all nations for his name. The righteousness which is by faith is unto all and upon all them that believe.]

11 ver. How can we come before God? not in the rags of our own righteousness, but as having on the wedding garment, the righteousness of Christ. We 'are saved by grace,' let us manifest the same in our conduct and conversation.—Let us be clothed with humility.

12 ver. Our negligence is inexcusable if we are not found clothed. The 'wedding garment' is as equally free for our acceptance, as is admission to the feast; both are of God's providing; and he who will not have the one, cannot partake of the other.

LET ALL BE INVITED TO PARTAKE OF THE BLESSINGS OF THE GOSPEL; BOTH THE BAD AND THE GOOD MAY COME IN AND WELCOME.
THE GOODNESS OF SOME DOES NOT GIVE THEM A RIGHT TO ENTER, NOR DOES THE BADNESS OF OTHERS EXCLUDE THEM.

MATT. xxii. 13, 4.

13 not having a-wedding garment? And he was-speechless' ἐφιμώθη. Then said the king to-the servants, Bind him hand and foot,[a] and-take-'him'-away, and cast him into outer 14 darkness; there shall-be weeping and gnashing of teeth. For many are called, but few are chosen ἐκλεκτοί.

[a] GR. feet and hands.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 12. speechless—Je. ii. 26, 'As the thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests, and their prophets.'—Both Gentile, Rom. i. 20, and Jew, ii., are inexcusable — iii. 19, 'That every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.'—In the immediately succeeding paragraphs, Mt. xxii. 15, &c., the several despisers of the grace of the Lord; the worldly-minded Herodian, ver. 15—22; the infidel Sadducee, ver. 23—33; the self-righteous Pharisee, ver. 34—40, come forward in succession as opposing the Saviour, and they are all of them put to silence, ver. 41—.6.

13. Bind him, &c.—He had refused to be made free indeed, as invited by the Son of God, Jno. viii. 31, .2, .6, § 55, pp. 103, .4.

take him away—He had refused to come unto Jesus in truth, as invited, ch. xi. 28—30, § 29, p. 228.

outer darkness—He had refused to follow the light, as exhorted, Jno. viii. 12, § 55, p. 100—The casting into outer darkness is referred to, Mt. viii. 12, § 28, p. 220; xxv. 30, § 86, p. 350—And the same seems to be described in other words, 2 Th. i. 9; 2 Pe. ii. 17; Jude 13.

weeping and gnashing of teeth—see Ps. xxxvii. 12, .3; Is. viii. 22; xxvi. 11; lxv. 13—.5; Mt. viii. 12 § 28, p. 220.

14. few . . . chosen—see ch. xix. 30, § 75, p. 230; xx. 16, § 76, p. 233—Many were called but few chosen, in the case of Gideon's victory over the Midianites, Ju. vii.

NOTES.

addressing any person.—Comp. ch. xx. 13, § 76, p. 233; xxvi. 50, § 88, p. 419.

Mt. xxii. 12. πῶς εἰσῆλθες, &c. I. e., 'How is it that thou didst venture to come in?' &c.

Dr. Doddridge observes, that this circumstance of the parable is admirably adapted to the method of God's dealing with man. For he requires repentance, indeed, and holiness, in order to our partaking of the happiness of heaven; but at the same time he graciously offers to work it in us by his Holy Spirit; and therefore may justly punish our neglect of so great a favour. On the word FRIEND, see ch. xx. 13, § 76, p. 233.

[A wedding garment. ἔνδυμα γαμου. 'An appropriate robe, with which those who attended were expected to come clothed, and which was invariably furnished by the host on all such occasions at a wedding-feast. This custom was common alike to the Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans; and something similar to it yet prevails in the East. In this, therefore, consisted the offence of the delinquent—that he had neglected to provide himself with the appropriate dress. But the most important point in tracing the moral of the parable is, to ascertain what it is that is designated by the wedding garment. We should, with many eminent interpreters, and recently Mr. Greswell, understand this to mean "a lively faith in Christ, a sacred badge of our christian profession, peculiarly characteristic of the gospel, and the grand criterion between the nominal and the real Christian; forming, indeed, the mystical bond of union which attaches the members to the Head of his body, the Church." This proper garment (observes Mr. Greswell) was to be furnished indeed from the vestry of the king, but its assumption depended on the guests themselves; and even faith, though the one thing necessary to salvation, and in its imputed efficiency singly sufficient for that purpose, is not independent of the free will and co-operation of the believer, no more than of the grace of God. It may be the proper spiritual covering of the soul, and neither of mortal texture nor of human acquisition, but immediately derived from the wardrobe of heaven; and yet it must be received and put on by the wearer for himself. Thus it is, as Calvin well remarks, frivolous to debate whether the wedding garment designates faith or a holy life; since the two are inseparable, the former implying the latter. And therefore the former is rightly made the symbolum or tessera of admission to the heavenly banquet. Agreeably to this, St. Paul says, Rom. iv. 16, διὰ τοῦτο ἐκ πίστεως [ἐστὶ] ἵνα κατὰ χάριν, scil. ᾖ. So also the innumerable company of the redeemed are in Rev. xix. 11—.4, represented as clothed in white robes, typifying, like the white robe of the spouse of the Lamb, ver. 8, the δικαιώματα τῶν ἁγίων, i. e., the justificatory robes of the saints.'—Bloomf.]

['And it is to be borne in mind (as Mr. Greswell well suggests), that "the individual mentioned in the parable as being rejected for non-qualification, forms the representative of a class, and, alas! a very large one, even of those among professing believers, who presumptuously seek to be saved in some other way, and not through faith in a crucified Redeemer."'—Ibid.]

13. Bind him hand and foot, . . . cast him into outer darkness, &c. It is well known that the Jewish marriages were performed in the night season—see ch. xxv. 6, § 86, p. 346; and that the rooms in which the feast was celebrated were splendidly illuminated.—See on ch. viii. 12, § 28, p. 220.

This parable supposes an individual hurried from the dazzling brilliancy of an imperial palace, illuminated for a purpose of no common festivity, into the prisons lying at the foundation of its external walls; not simply expelled the royal residence, and thrust forth to the shades of the night, but plunged into those melancholy abodes which, when the meridian sun gladdens the face of nature, admit no cheerful beam. And, considering how splendid and magnificent the entertainments of the eastern princes were, it cannot be thought an unnatural circumstance that such an affront as this offered to the king, his son, his bride, and the rest of the company, should be so punished.

[This parable is parallel to Lu. xiv. 16—24, § 67, p. 183—see 'Parallelism,' ADDENDA, p. 186. They hold in view one object, and are so similar in their illustrations, that in each we find the same circumstances, but little varied, and alternately expounded. This parable exceeds, in the events of the wedding garment, the destruction of the rebellious, and the punishment of the individual presuming to appear without the robe of ceremony. The parable in St. Luke enumerates the various excuses brought by the parties who renounced the invitation. These are the only differences; it is clear that the same object is kept in sight in both cases, while the allegories mutually furnish something to perfect the true and affecting delineation. Conjointly, they present a most interesting display of Divine mercy and of human folly; and powerfully enforce the leading sentiment of both parables, 'many are called, but few are chosen.']

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxii. 13. And as we would not hereafter have weeping and gnashing of teeth, let our rejoicing be now in the free grace of God.

14 ver. Let us see that we are not only called, but that we accept the invitation, and submit to the terms thereof, so that we may be found among the chosen of God, ascribing all to his sovereign grace, and delighting to manifest his love to all around us.

AS WE WOULD NOT BE BOUND UNTO PUNISHMENT, LET US NOW SEEK TO BE LOOSED FROM SIN

AS WE WOULD NOT BE CAST INTO OUTER DARKNESS, LET US NOW BE CLOTHED IN LIGHT.

(G. 70.)—Jesus answers the question of the Herodians, concerning the payment of tribute to the Roman emperor.—Matt.* xxii. 15—22. Mark xii. 13—.7. Luke xx. 20—.6. In the temple.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxii. 15, .6. Mk. xii. 13. Lu. xx. 20. The Pharisees take counsel to reduce Jesus to a dilemma; so that he must either, by his answer to their question, disappoint the somewhat popular expectation of his being the long-promised Messiah; or on the other hand, so declare himself, as that they may procure his being apprehended by Pilate, under the charge of disaffection to the Roman government. This charge it would be inconsistent for themselves to make, but not for the Herodians, the great advocates of a connection with Rome. Herod had shewn himself ready and willing to sacrifice religious duty at the shrine of political expediency, or in order to procure as he thought worldly advantages, by being subservient to the Romans in matters forbidden of God. Some of this party the Pharisees get to go forth with their disciples, in order to ensnare Jesus.

— xxii. 16, .7. — xii. 14, .5. — xx. 21, .2. The spies approach Jesus with seeming respect; giving him credit for candour, and fearlessness in declaring the truth: and doubtless, thinking that he cannot, consistently with any claim to his being the King of Israel, allow that tribute should be paid to a foreign despot, they conclude by asking, whether it be 'lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?'

Mt. xxii. 18, .9. Mk. xii. 15. Lu. xx. 23, .4. Jesus, perceiving their crafty wickedness, charges them therewith, and asks to be shewn the tribute money.

— xxii. 19—21. — xii. 16. — xx. 24. They bring him a penny; he asks, Whose is the 'image and superscription' thereon? They answer, 'Cæsar's.' — xxii. 21. — xii. 17. — xx. 25. Jesus briefly but expressively reproves both parties, without involving himself with either.

— xxii. 22. — xii. 17. — xx. 26. They marvel at his answer, are put to silence, and depart disappointed of their prey.

Matt. xxii. 15—22.	Mark xii. 13—.7. (Ver. 12, p. 291.)	Luke xx. 20—.6. (Ver. 19, p. 291.)
15 [a] Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle (παγιδευσωσιν) him in his talk.[b]
16 And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians,	13 And they send unto him [c] certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians,[d]	[b] And they watched (παρατηρησαντες) him, and sent forth spies (εγκαθετους),[c] which should feign (υποκρινομενους) themselves just men, that 20

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 15. Pharisees—who would neither go into the kingdom of heaven themselves, nor suffer others to enter, ch. xxiii. 13, § 85, p. 316—and see on ch. xvi. 4, § 47, p. 29.

entangle—Their desire was not to elicit the truth, but to darken 'counsel by words without knowledge,' Job xxxviii. 2, that they might, if possible, get the True Witness to condemn himself—Ps. lix. 3, 'For, lo, they lie in wait for my soul:' &c.—and see on Lu. vi. 7, § 25, p. 195.

Lu. xx. 20. feign—Ps. lv. 21, 'The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart:'—They wished to exercise craft, in order to gratify their malice, as Jesus had forewarned, when he spoke to them of their father, who from the beginning was a murderer and a liar, Jno. viii. 44, § 55, p. 106.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxii. 15. Entangle him. παγιδευσωσιν, 'might ensnare him.' The term is properly used of snaring birds; but, like ἀγρευειν, employed by Mark, xii. 13, and the Latin irretire and illaqueare, is used of ensnaring any person by difficult and artful questions.]

[Lu. xx. 20. Watched him, ... spies. ἐγκαθέτους. 'Ἐγκάθετος properly denotes 'one who is stationed in a lurking place' to watch another's motions, either for attacking him or otherwise; and, in a metaphorical sense, one sent as a spy, whether of words or actions.]

[Mt. xxii. 16. With the Herodians. Josephus nowhere mentions them as a distinct religious sect. They were distinguished from the other parties, first, by their concurring in Herod's plan of subjecting himself and his people to the dominion of the Romans; and secondly, in complying with the latter in many of their heathen practices, such as erecting temples with images for idolatrous worship; raising statues, and instituting games in honour of Augustus; which symbolizing with idolatry upon views of interest and worldly policy, is supposed to have been a part at least of 'the leaven of Herod,' against which our Lord

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxii. 15, .6. There are no such insidious and persevering enemies to our Lord and his gospel, as the self-righteous Pharisees. They will conspire even with those to whom they are the most directly opposed, in order that they may the more successfully oppose the truth.]

* 'This incident respecting the payment of tribute to the Roman emperor, who at this time was Tiberius Cæsar, touched upon the principles first openly avowed, U.C. 760, by Judas, the Gaulanite, commonly called the Galilæan. This question was put by the Herodians, but it was suggested and abetted by the Pharisees; and the account of its circumstances, though substantially the same in all, is yet much closer together in St. Matthew and St. Mark, than in either and St. Luke, whose conciseness in particular is easily explained by the minuteness of the other two. Yet with his usual attention to precision, he has specified most distinctly, both the design proposed by the question, and the effect produced by the answer. Writing also for Gentile readers, and not with the associations of a Jew himself, he suppresses the name, while he describes the character, of the instruments now employed, viz., as parties suborned, or put forward, by others; feigning themselves righteous, that is, actuated by a zeal for God, whose exclusive right to the civil obedience of the Jews was the question concerned in the solution of the practical difficulty, respecting the payment of tribute to Cæsar. This assumption of pretended righteousness appears in the language of their hypocritical compliment to our Saviour, at the outset of the address, as recorded by St. Mark. Διδασκαλε, rabbi or master, we know that thou art ἀληθης, a plain spoken, sincere, or honest, man; who, when the truth is concerned, carest for no one; for thou payest no respect to the person of men, but teachest of a truth the way of God. The name of Herodians does not occur in the gospel of St. Luke.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. x. p. 114.

Matt. xxii. 17, 18.	Mark xii. 14, 15.	Luke xx. 21—23.
	to catch αγρευσωσι him in-his-words.	they-might-take-hold επιλαβωνται of-his-words, that so they-might-deliver him unto-the power and authority of-the governor.[c]
	14 [d]And when-they-were-come, they-say unto-him, Master, we-know that thou-art true,[f]	And 21 they-asked him, saying, Master, we-know that thou-sayest and teachest rightly, saying, Master, we-know that thou-art true, [f]and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou-regardest not the-person of-men.[g]	and carest for no-man: for thou-regardest not the-person of-men, [g]but teachest the way of God in truth:[h]	neither acceptest-thou the-person of any, but teachest the way of God truly:
17 [h]Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is-it-lawful to-give tribute unto-Cæsar, or not?[i]	Is-it-lawful to-give tribute to-Cæsar, or not? 15 [i]Shall-we-give, or shall-we-not-give?[k]	Is-it-lawful for-us to-give 22 tribute unto-Cæsar, or no?
18 [k]But Jesus perceived their	But he, knowing their	But he-perceived their 23

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xx. 20. governor—'Pontius Pilate,' ch. iii. 1—who might be expected to prove ready for a deed of blood, xiii. 1, § 64—and who, ultimately, delivered him to their will, to be crucified, xxiii. 25, [Mk. xv. 15,] § 90.

Mk. xii. 14. Master, we know, &c.—Ps. xii. 2, 'With flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak.'

Mt. xxii. 16. regardest not the person, &c.—so God is described, De. x. 17; Job xxxiv. 19—so Jehoshaphat charged the judges he appointed, 2 Chr. xix. 6—11—so the Lord commanded the prophets, Je. i. 17—9; Eze. ii. 6—8—so Jesus had himself exhorted his disciples, Lu. xii. 4, 5, § 63, p. 164.

NOTES.

cautioned his disciples, Mk. viii. 15, § 48, p. 32; consequently they were directly opposed to the Pharisees, who, from a misrepresentation of De. xvii. 15, maintained that it was not lawful to submit to the Roman emperor, or to pay taxes to him. Herod, who had received Judæa by appointment of the Romans, held that the law of Moses referred only to a voluntary choice of a king, and did not refer to a necessary submission, where they had been overpowered by force. They supposed, therefore, that it was lawful in such cases to pay tribute to a foreign prince. This opinion was, however, extensively unpopular amongst the Jews. Hence the difficulty of the question. Whatever way he decided, they supposed he would be involved in difficulty. If he should say it was not lawful, the Herodians were ready to accuse him as an enemy of Cæsar; if he said it was lawful, then the Pharisees were ready to accuse him to the people, as being opposed to their rights.]

The Herodians were brought by the Pharisees in order that they might hear and report to the Roman government the words of Jesus which they thought they would be able to draw forth. The Pharisees being impatient of the Roman yoke, could not yet bring themselves to be the public accusers of Jesus under pretence of a zeal for Cæsar.

It is probable that the Herodians, in their doctrinal tenets, were chiefly of the sect of the Sadducees; since that which is by one evangelist called 'the leaven of Herod,' Mk. viii. 15, is by another termed—see Mt. xvi. 6, § 48, p. 32—the leaven 'of the Sadducees.'

Lu. xx. 20. Just men. δικαιους. That is, men of probity and integrity, who were only actuated by motives of conscience, and the desire of being taught in the questions they had to propound.

Mt. xxii. 16. Art true. αληθης. 'Upright,' neither practising simulation nor dissimulation.

Regardest not. ου μελει σοι π. ο. Meaning, art impartial,' 'without partiality.'

Regardest not the person, &c. Art not influenced in thy teaching by the outward condition of any human being. Thou favourest no man for his riches or greatness.

[17. Is it lawful to give tribute, &c. In order to understand the insidious nature of the question here proposed to Jesus, it must be observed, that the Jews at this time being under the dominion of the Romans, paid them an annual tribute in money as an acknowledgment of their subjection. The annual capitation tax, κηνσος κεφαλικος, or tribute money, imposed by the Romans on the Jews was a denarius, which tax they bore with great impatience. Judas of Galilee, about ten years after the birth of Christ, first stirred up the people to resist this tax, saying it was contrary to their religion to acknowledge any other sovereign than God.—See Ac. v. 37.—He is supposed to have been of the Pharisees.]

Cæsar. The Roman emperor. The name Cæsar, after the time of Julius Cæsar, became common to all the emperors, as Pharaoh was the common name of all the kings of Egypt. This was Tiberius Cæsar.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxii. 16. That was a true confession which the messengers of the Pharisees made respecting Christ; but it was made in the spirit of falsehood, and with the most evil intent. Unlike such men, let us speak the truth in love; and, like our Leader, let us be 'wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.']

[17 ver. Had the Jews been true to their heavenly King, they would not have been subjected to a foreign yoke. They had low thoughts of the Messiah, if they thought that he was to be only a deliverer from temporal bondage. The Jews thought that Jesus could not, consistently with his being the Messiah, allow of their paying tribute to Cæsar; but it was most fit that they should remain in temporal bondage, until they were willing to be made spiritually free.]

18 ver. Jesus gives evidence of his Messiahship in a way not expected, by shewing that they were naked and open to his omniscient eye. Let us not think of imposing upon the Lord with flattering words, but let our hearts be right before him.

BE THOU EXALTED, LORD, IN THINE OWN STRENGTH:—Psa. xxi. 13. THE CHRISTIAN TAKES UP CONTENTMENT IN GOD'S APPOINTMENT.

MATT. xxii. 19—22.	MARK xii. 16, .7.	LUKE xx. 24—.6.
wickedness, and-said, Why tempt-ye me, ye-hypocrites?	hypocrisy, said unto-them, Why tempt-ye me?	craftiness, and-said unto them, Why tempt-ye me?
19 Shew me the tribute money.
	[t]bring me a-penny, that I-may-see it.[u]	Shew me a-penny 24
[u]And they brought unto-him a-penny.	16 And they brought it.
20 And he-saith unto-them, Whose is this image and superscription?	And he-saith unto-them, Whose is this image and superscription?	Whose image and superscription hath-it?
21 They-say unto-him Cæsar's.	And they said unto-him, Cæsar's.	They-answered and-said, Cæsar's.
Then saith-he unto-them, Render therefore unto-Cæsar the-things which are Cæsar's; and unto-God the-things that are God's.[x]	17 And Jesus answering said unto-them, Render to-Cæsar the-things that are Cæsar's, and to-God the-things that are God's.	And he said 25 unto-them, Render therefore unto-Cæsar the-things which be Cæsar's, and unto-God the-things which be God's.
		[x]And they-could not take-hold-of his words before the people: [o] 26
22 [o]When-they-had-heard these words, they-marvelled, [p]	And they-marvelled at him.	and they-marvelled [p]at his answer, and-held-their-peace. [q]
[q]and left him, and-went-their-way.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 21. Cæsar's—The image and name of the Roman emperor being on their coin, was a public acknowledgment of their having submitted themselves to the Roman government; which, for the purpose of defending the lives and property of its subjects, required that tribute should be paid, as is noticed, Rom. xiii. 6. 'For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.'—1 Pe. ii. 13, .4, 'Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.'

Render—Rom. xiii. 7, 'Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.'—1 Pe. ii. 13, .4, .7, 'Fear God. Honour the king.'

and unto God—see the sacrifices which God requires and which the Pharisees neglected to present to God, whilst they professed to be most zealous in his service—Ps. l. 8, 'I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt offerings,' &c.—14, 'Offer unto God thanksgiving;' &c.—ii. 16, .7, 'For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: . . . The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit:' &c.—Ec. v. 4, 'Pay that which thou hast vowed.'—Mal. i. 6—8, 'A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honour?' &c.; iii. 8—10, ...—Rom. xii. 1, 'Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.'—1 Co. vi. 20, 'Ye are bought with a price:'—x. 31, 'Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.'

Lu. xx. 26. could not take hold, &c.—Jesus availed himself of the opportunity of reproving both the Herodians, who robbed God for the sake of Cæsar; and the Pharisees, who, out of pretended zeal for God, were ever ready to cavil against the civil government—see Mk. xii. 13; Lu. xx. 20.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxii. 18. Their wickedness. πονηρίαν. The word here signifies, like the Latin malitia, craft. So Luke has πανουργίαν; Mark, ὑπόκρισιν, with reference to the ὑποκριτρομένους of Lu. xx. 20.]

Why tempt ye me? Or, why would you ensnare me? They conceived it impossible that he could extricate himself from the dilemma into which they had brought him.

20. Superscription. The denarius paid by the Jews as tribute money, is said to have had round the head of Cæsar this inscription: Καισαρ Αὐγουστ. Τουδαιας καλουσας; Cæsar Augustus, Judæa being conquered. The origin of stamps and impressions on coins is attributed to the Persians.

'Our Lord here baffles the malignant proposers of the question, by taking advantage of their own confession, that the denarius bore the emperor's image and superscription, and also of the determination of their own schools, that wherever any king's coin was current, it was a proof of that country's subjection to that government. He significantly warns these turbulent and seditious demagogues, the Pharisees, to render unto Cæsar the dues of Cæsar, which they resisted; and these licentious and irreligious courtiers, the Herodians, to render unto God the dues of God, which they neglected; thus publicly reproving both, but obliquely, in a way that they could not take any hold of.'—Dr. Hales.

22. Marvelled. ἐθαύμασαν. That is, 'wondered at the wisdom of his answer;' for by this decision of so nice and difficult a question, Cæsar was satisfied, God glorified, and the people edified.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxii. 19, 20. Let us consider our opponents, so as to meet each of them upon his own ground, as our Lord does here the worldly-minded Herodians, in company with the covetous Pharisees, who in receiving the money of Cæsar, acknowledged him to be their sovereign.]

[21 ver. Unlike the Pharisees, let us gladly render to the civil governor the submission commanded by the Supreme; but unlike the Herodians, let us refrain from yielding to human authority, that which belongs to God. If men would be freed from evil in the former respect, let them give unto God the glory due unto his name: and soon he will break their bands asunder. Cæsar must exact his tribute, until Christ is submitted to by the nations.]

HE WHO TRAFFICS IN GOD'S SERVICE TO FREIGHT HIMSELF WITH MAN'S PRAISES, SHALL SUFFER SHIPWRECK IN THE HAVEN.

THE HYPOCRITE HIDES HIS SINS WHICH HE SHOULD HAVE CONFESSED, AND PUBLISHES HIS GOOD DEEDS WHICH HE SHOULD HAVE HID.

IT IS THE GLORY OF GOD TO CONCEAL A THING: BUT THE HONOUR OF KINGS IS TO SEARCH OUT A MATTER.—PROV. XXV. 2.

THE HEAVEN FOR HEIGHT, AND THE EARTH FOR DEPTH, AND THE HEART OF KINGS IS UNSEARCHABLE.—PROV. XXV. 3.

ADDENDA.

ON THE PROCEEDINGS OF WEDNESDAY IN PASSION WEEK.—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xi. p. 109.

'The transactions of this day, which answers to the morning of the Jewish twelfth of Nisan, and to the Julian third of April, are not only the most diversified in their circumstances, and the most minutely related, but the most interesting in themselves of any which have yet been considered. The day, too, is memorable as the close of our Lord's public ministry; after this time, until the morning of the crucifixion, he never appeared openly again. It was consequently a remarkable coincidence, resolvable perhaps solely into the agency of a controlling Providence, that the last and concluding scene of his ministry furnished the clearest indications which had yet been exhibited, both of the malice, the hypocrisy, and the subtlety of his enemies on the one hand, and of his own wisdom, power, and Divine authority on the other. . . . .

'The first circumstance is manifestly the renewal of the conversation in reference to the fig tree, Mk. xi. 20—.6 [p. 281]; the time and the place of which must consequently have been either the same as those of the original incident the day before, or not much different from them. . . . .

'The remaining events of the day are to be divided into those which occurred in the temple before our Lord quitted it for the night, and those which occurred out of it after he had quitted it for the night.

'The particulars of the first division consist chiefly of a series of questions put to our Saviour one after another, until he had successively foiled the interrogators, or replied to all their inquiries, so that from that time forward no man durst ask him any more. The first two of these questions turned upon a civil, or political, much more than upon a religious, or doctrinal point; the last two were purely of the latter description. The third and proposed by them all, except perhaps the last, was sinister; that of the first or to render our Lord amenable to the spiritual jurisdiction of the sanhedrim, or to the civil jurisdiction of the Roman governor; that of the third, if not of the fourth, by a perplexing, and an apparently insuperable difficulty to lower his credit as a teacher. The parties from whom they proceeded were in every instance one or more of the three existing and principal sects, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Herodians; the two former a philosophical, or a religious denomination; the latter probably a civil; retaining, though covertly, the principles of Judas of Galilee; which accounts for the question put by them. In all of them, however, the Pharisees in general, and the leading members of the sanhedrim in particular, appear to have taken, either openly or in secret, the most active and the most influential part.

'When, therefore, we consider the common antipathy and want of union prevailing in other respects between these sects, and yet the concurrence of all, not merely simultaneously, but in a regular order of succession, to injure or to criminate our Saviour, we may justly conclude that they did not act at random, nor independently of each other, but upon some preconcerted plan, and with a mutual understanding.

'They had agreed to forget for the time their pre-existing jealousies and differences of opinion, while they aided and supported each other in a common attack upon our Lord. It is true, the method of disputation among the Jews was purely dialectic; that is, by asking questions and receiving answers. But on no occasion except this may each of the sects in its turn be seen united in a single endeavour to puzzle or to ensnare the same person, with their most difficult or most dangerous problems; and like so many ἑταῖροι, successively entering the lists against him. We may argue, therefore, that they acted on a scheme concerted overnight; and that our Lord's oldest, most inveterate, and most powerful enemies, the Pharisees, were probably the contrivers or abettors of the whole plan. Nor is this supposition without its use in accounting for the immediate origin of that highly-wrought invective, which will be found recorded as the last event of the proceedings in the temple for the day, and which our Lord in his turn levelled against that sect in particular. . . . .

'First, then, while Jesus, after his return to the temple, as St. Mark informs us, was still walking about therein; and as St. Matthew or St. Luke tells us, when he was teaching, or beginning to teach, and to preach the gospel; the entire body of the sanhedrim, or a deputation from each of its members, the chief of the priests, the scribes, and the elders (each of these classes it is probable consisted of twenty four persons, making up the number seventy-two in all; this is certain of the heads of the courses or ἀρχιερεῖς, among whom the high priest also would be included; and from Rev. iv. 4, it may be presumptively collected of the elders, or πρεσβύτεροι; in which case it must have been true of the scribes, or γραμματεῖς; likewise) came upon him with the interrogation, By what authority doest thou these things? the reference in which to the act of cleansing the temple we have already considered. If our Lord had either not yet begun to teach, or only just done so, the time of this question would be very probably soon after πρωΐ. The question would be publicly put, and the answer to it would be publicly returned, but the consultation of the sanhedrim upon the answer must have taken place apart, that is, in their own conclave, or council chamber, the site of which was upon the confines of the priests', and of the men's courts respectively. The history of this transaction is remarkably similar in each of the narratives [p. 282].

'Upon the close of this account, St. Matthew, ch. xxi. 28—32 [p. 285], subjoins the moral illustration of the father and the two sons; the application of which by our Lord shews that it had reference to the preceding question, and therefore might have been suggested by it. The point of the comparison must be sought for in the historical fact of the different success of the same preaching of John, like the alleged different success of the same request of the father; of the former with two very different orders of persons, the scribes and the Pharisees on the one hand, and the publicans and sinners on the other; of the latter with his two sons, as the first or as the last addressed respectively. The antecedent self-righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees answered to the apparent readiness of the last addressed, the antecedent wickedness and impenitence of publicans and sinners to the apparent refusal of the first. Yet the preaching of John had failed with the former, and succeeded with the latter, as the second son had broken his original promise, and the first had retracted his original refusal.

'That St. Mark should have omitted this discourse is nothing extraordinary; and that St. Luke did so is explained by a comparison with Lu. vii. 29, 30 [§ 29, p. 225], which is substantially to the same effect. The parable of the vineyard let out to husbandmen [p. 286] is a parable of a different description, recorded by each of these evangelists, and by each in a consecutive order. Nor could it have been long over before another of the same class, recorded by St. Matthew only, the parable of the wedding garment [p. 291], was also subjoined; the omission of which in St. Mark is to be explained as before; and its omission in St. Luke by its partial resemblance to a parable which was previously recorded by him, and by him alone, the parable of the great supper [ch. xiv. 15—24, § 67, p. 183].

'The next incident appears to have been the question concerning the payment of tribute to the Roman Emperor, who at this time was Tiberius Cæsar; touching consequently upon the principles first openly avowed in U.C. 760, by Judas the Gaulanite, commonly called the Galilæan. This question was put by the Herodians, but it was suggested and abetted by the Pharisees; and the account of its circumstances, though substantially the same in all, is yet much closer together in St. Matthew and St. Mark, than in either and St. Luke, whose conciseness in particular is easily explained by the minuteness of the other two.—See NOTE, p. 295.

'The next circumstance on record is the question proposed by the Sadducees, in which, though the Pharisees might have rejoiced to see Jesus perplexed by it, unless they had their own mode of solving the problem, they could not perhaps openly have concurred; for the belief in the resurrection of the dead, so far at least as it was implied by a belief of the immortality and metempsychosis of the human soul, was a point of distinction between them and the Sadducees, of which Ac. xxiii. 6, 8, alone is a proof. . .

'With regard to the harmony of the several accounts, every discrepancy is trifling, except what concerns the terms or the order of our Lord's reply. . . . The concluding words of St. Luke's account, πάντες γαρ αυτῷ ζῶσιν, are parallel in point of construction to this passage of Josephus, οἱ τεθνήκασι τὸ πλέον Ἀντιόχῳ (B. J. xxxii. 2); or to this, εἰδότες ὅτι οἱ διὰ τὸν Θεὸν ἀποθνήσκοντες ζῶσι τῷ Θεῷ, ὥσπερ Ἀβραὰμ, Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ Ἰακὼβ, καὶ πάντες οἱ πατριάρχαι (De Maccabeis 16).

'The answer, as we learn expressly from St. Luke, and by implication from St. Mark, gave so much satisfaction to certain scribes present, doubtless of the sect of the Pharisees, as to draw forth an open avowal of their approbation, Διδάσκαλε, καλῶς εἶπας [Lu. xx. 39]. Its effect upon the multitude is stated by St. Matthew only; but the impression it produced upon the interrogators, as the sect of the Sadducees in particular, that they durst not ask him anything more, that is, try to renew the dispute, either on that, or on any other subject, is noticed most distinctly by St. Luke. This sect therefore was now put to silence.

'One of the above-mentioned scribes, as we may collect from St. Mark, it was consequently who put the next question concerning the greatest commandment in the Law, which St. Luke has omitted altogether, and St. Matthew has recorded only in part. The motive of this inquirer I believe was good; and, therefore, that St. Matthew's πειράζων, in reference to his act, must be literally interpreted of making trial only, and with a sincere desire of information. Nor when he says, just before, that the Pharisees were collected together, is it implied that this man was put forward by the others, or acted as their spokesman and not of his own accord. It may be inferred from both evangelists, that the terms of the question were probably these, Ποία ἐστὶ πρώτη πασῶν ἐντολὴ, καὶ μεγάλη ἐν τῷ νόμῳ; and the terms of our Lord's decision, as a categorical answer to a categorical question, Αὕτη ἐστὶ πρώτη, καὶ μεγάλη, ἐντολή, [Mt. xxii. 38, p. 305,] do so far confirm the inference. After this, we learn from St. Mark, No one durst ask him any more questions; an observation which comes somewhat later in St. Matthew, viz., at the end of the next transaction; but is clearly to be understood reflexively of the effect of this.

'The whole time hitherto taken up it may not be possible exactly to determine; but the last particular could not be much earlier than the incident relating to the widow's mite; nor that incident than the commencement of evening service, one of the stated times when such oblations were wont to be made, viz. from the ninth hour of the day to the eleventh.

'While the Pharisees were still assembled together, as we learn from the same authority, and consequently not long after the last question, our Lord in his turn began to interrogate them, by demanding publicly whose son the Christ was to be. Now it appears from St. Mark, and from St. Luke, who do not mention his personally addressing himself to the scribes and the Pharisees in the first instance, but suppose him to argue directly from some tenet or admission of their's, that his motive in putting the question was to make them commit themselves by returning the answer; upon which, without continuing to speak to them, he must have turned to the people, and reasoned on the answer, as St. Mark and St. Luke describe him to have done. Nor is St. Matthew at variance with them; for first, in direct refutation of the answer of the Pharisees, we may suppose our Lord to have said to them, Πῶς οὖν Δαυὶδ, ἐν πνεύματι, Κύριον αὐτὸν καλεῖ; [Mt. xxii. 43,] and then, turning to the auditors, as St. Mark [ch. xii. 35] and St. Luke [ch. xx. 41] each imply, to have reasoned more at length, Πῶς λέγουσιν οἱ Γραμματεῖς; κ. τ. λ. with which the residue of St. Matthew's account is obviously reconcileable. . . . .

'After this we must place Mk. xii. 38—40, and Lu. xx. 45—,7, [p. 308,] the first personal and direct attack upon the scribes, as recorded by St. Mark and by St. Luke, in terms almost the same; and which it is impossible to confound with that longer and later invective, Mt. xxiii. throughout. . . . This was addressed, as we learn from St. Luke, to our Lord's own disciples in particular; that, to the multitude at large, or to others as well as to them. . . . This is levelled against a single vice, the pride or arrogance of the parties addressed; that, against a complication of vices. . . . This can, on no principle, be considered merely as an epitome of that; and if it is not an epitome of it, it must be distinct from it. . . . After the delivery of that longer invective, it is morally certain that our Lord immediately left the temple, and never returned to it again; whereas St. Mark and St. Luke both attest that, when he had made an end of the former address, he spent some time in contemplating the resort of the people, with their respective contributions, to the treasury; upon which occasion they record the anecdote of the poor widow's mite.*

'After this event, but before the next, it seems the most convenient place to insert Jno. xii. 37, to the end; alluded to above. First, because from the express testimony of verse 36; what is afterwards recorded must have happened subsequently to the tenth of Nisan, the day of our Lord's first visit to, and first departure from, the temple; and subsequently also to the evening of that day, which we have shewn to have been the time when he quitted the temple. Secondly, because it is equally certain from xiii. 1, [§ 87, p. 365,] that it must have transpired before the thirteenth of Nisan, when St. John, as we shall see, resumes the thread of his account, upon the evening prior to the passion. If so, it must have come between these extremes exactly; later than the tenth, but earlier than the thirteenth of Nisan; and consequently either on the eleventh or on the twelfth.

'This point being presumptively established, we may much more confidently assume that the next transaction—the denunciation of woes against the scribes and Pharisees—which takes up the whole of Mt. xxiii. [p. 312*], was immediately followed by the departure from the temple.—See NOTE, p. 321.

'The particulars subsequent to this, on the same day, were first, the observation made by some one or more of the disciples, as they were passing out of the temple, and personally addressed to our Lord, on the beauty and magnificence of its structure; an observation, memorable not only from the immediate answer which it drew forth from him, but also for its connection with the prophecy on the mount; which seems to have ultimately been due to it. In this fact all the three Evangelists are agreed. Secondly, the prophecy upon mount Olivet, delivered, as we learn from St. Mark, to four of the apostles, Peter and Andrew, James and John, apart from the rest; and recorded also, either wholly or in part, by each of the same Evangelists.

'Yet the proceedings on the evening of this day are not, perhaps, completed even with the close of this prophecy itself; for, if I mistake not, another incident not less important, and not less distinctly recorded, than any of the rest is still to be referred to it: preparatory to which, however, it is necessary we should first say something on the several accounts of the unction at Bethany. Observing, therefore, simply that the place and purport of the remark, subjoined to St. Luke's relation of the prophecy, [ch. xxii. 37, .8, § 85, p. 357,] are a proof that he considered our Lord's public ministry to have been concluded this day, and, consequently, with the evening of Wednesday in Passion week.'

* 'If he was sitting at the time in the women's court (which Jno. viii. 20, renders probable), his position was favourable to that survey; for the treasury, or corban, was situated in that court, and over against its pooches (Jos. B. Jud. v. v. 2). Αἱ στοαὶ δὲ μετὰ τῶν πολλῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ τείχους ἔνδον ἵστανται πρὸ τῶν γαζοφυλακείων, κ. τ. λ. Between the time of that address, then, and the time of the next in St. Matthew, there must have been some interval; and it is a further proof of this fact that, with the account of the widow's offering, the other two conclude their history of the transactions in the temple altogether; and what they next relate is our Lord's passing out of it for the night. The anecdote of the widow's mite was consequently one of the last, but it was not the very last of these transactions; it could not have followed after Mt. xxiii. at least; it must have come, therefore, between that and Mk. xii. 40, or Lu. xx. 47.'

TAKE AWAY THE DROSS FROM THE SILVER, AND THERE SHALL COME FORTH A VESSEL FOR THE FINER.—PROV. XXV. 4.

TAKE AWAY THE WICKED FROM BEFORE THE KING, AND HIS THRONE SHALL BE ESTABLISHED IN RIGHTEOUSNESS.—PROV. XXV. 5.

SECTION 85.*—(G. 71—.7.)—[Lessons 79—81.]—JESUS ANSWERS THE INQUIRY OF THE SADDUCEES, CONCERNING THE WOMAN MARRIED TO SEVEN BRETHREN IN SUCCESSION; IN WHICH IS INVOLVED THE QUESTION OF A RESURRECTION TO COME. A CERTAIN SCRIBE AND PHARISEE, WHOSE ADMIRATION HAS BEEN EXCITED BY THE REASONING OF JESUS, DESIRES OF HIM A SOLUTION OF THE QUESTION, WHICH IS THE FIRST AND GREAT COMMANDMENT. JESUS' ANSWER. JESUS INQUIRES OF THE PHARISEES WHOSE SON THE CHRIST WAS TO BE; AND SHEWS THEIR ANSWER TO BE INCOMPLETE. HE WARNS HIS DISCIPLES TO BEWARE OF THE SCRIBES. HE COMMENDS THE WIDOW'S OFFERING BEYOND THOSE OF THE RICH. THE CONTINUED INFIDELITY OF THE JEWS: DISCOURSE OF JESUS, ON THE SAME SUBJECT. JESUS, BEING ABOUT TO LEAVE THE TEMPLE FOR THE NIGHT, AND AT THE SAME TIME TO MAKE AN END OF HIS PUBLIC MINISTRY, DENOUNCES PENAL RETRIBUTION UPON THE SCRIBES AND PHARISEES FOR A SERIES OF OFFENCES, IN EIGHT WOES.—Matt. xxii. 23—xxiii. Mark xii. 18—44. Luke xx. 27—xxi. 4. John xii. 37—50.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxii. 23-33. Mk. xii. 18-27. Lu. xx. 27-40. Jesus answers the quibble of the Sadducees respecting the resurrection.

— xxii. 34-40. — xii. 28-34. ——— Jesus replies to the Pharisees, regarding the first and great commandment.

— xxii. 41-.6. — xii. 35-.7. — xx. 41-.4. He questions the Pharisees on the sonship of Christ.

——— — xii. 38-40. — xx. 45-.7. Jesus warns his disciples to beware of the scribes.

——— — xii. 41-.4. — xxi. 1-4. Jesus notices the liberality of a poor widow, who in casting two mites into the treasury, gave more than all the offerings of the rich.

——— ——— ——— Jno xii. 37-41. Unbelief of the Jews, as foretold by Isaiah, when speaking of the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.

Mt. xxii. — Mk. xii. — Lu. xxi. — Jno. xii. 42,.3. Even the chief rulers among the Jews which did believe were unworthy of their name (Judah meaning confession and praise).

——— ——— ——— — xii. 44-50. Jesus declares the responsibility of those who saw and heard him, and who did not believe.

— xxiii. 1—12. The character of the scribes and Pharisees described, as seeking to magnify themselves before men, and occupy the largest share of public attention.

— xxiii. 13—32. In eight Woes, contrasting with the eight Beatitudes, Jesus describes the counterfeit religion of the scribes and Pharisees.

— xxiii. 33—9. Jesus declares the overwhelming guilt and the incorrigible state of Jerusalem. He passes sentence accordingly, intimating its speedy destruction, and the desolation of the temple: until they are ready to receive Jesus as the Sent of God, the Jews cannot see their Messiah.

No. 85.—(G. 71.)—[Lesson 79.]—Jesus answers the inquiry of the Sadducees, concerning the woman married to seven brethren in succession; in which was involved the question of a resurrection to come. In the temple.†

MATT. xxii. 23—33.	MARK xii. 18—27.	LUKE xx. 27—40.
23 [a]The same day came to-him[b] the-Sadducees, which say that-there-is no resurrection, and asked him,	18 Then come unto him the-Sadducees, which say there-is no resurrection; and they-asked him,	Then came-to him 27 [b]certain-of-the Sadducees, which deny that-there-is any-resurrection; and they-asked him,
24 saying, Master, Moses said, If a-man die, having no children, his brother	saying, 19 Master, Moses wrote unto-us, If a-man's brother die, [c]and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother[d]	28 saying, Master, Moses wrote unto-us, If any-man's brother die,[c] having a-wife, and he die without-children, that his brother

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxii. 23. Sadducees—Some of them, just before the transfiguration, came tempting Jesus, asking 'a sign from heaven,' ch. xvi. 1, § 47, p. 28—Jesus bade his disciples beware of their leaven, ver. 6—12, § 48, pp. 32—.4—and taught plainly the truth, as opposed to their doctrine, ver. 27, .8, § 50, pp. 43, .4—A confirmation was immediately afterwards given the disciples on the holy mount, xvii. 3, § 51, p. 53.

Lu. xx. 27. deny . . . . any resurrection—This doctrine of theirs is noticed also, Ac. xxiii. 8—Their leaven seems to have begun early to work in the christian church, 1 Co. xv. 12; 2 Ti. ii. 18, 'saying that the resurrection is passed already;' &c.

28. Moses wrote—The Sadducees pretended to be great sticklers for Moses, and are said not to have ad-

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 23. Sadducees. They were the richest sect amongst the Jews.—See on ch. iii. 7, § 7, p. 22, and ADDENDA, p. 56.

Resurrection. Raising up the body to life after it is dead, Jno. xi. 24, § 98, p. 129; v. 28, .9, § 23, p. 178; 1 Co. xv. 22. Throughout the whole of this narra-

* SECT. LXXXV. includes Lessons 79, 80, and 81, in the 'Graduated Simultaneous System,' &c. LESSON 79, Mt. xxii. 23—46; Mk. xii. 18—37; Lu. xx. 27—44.

† See ADDENDA, p. 298, col. 2, par. 5.

SINCE BY MAN CAME DEATH, BY MAN CAME ALSO THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.—1 COR. XV. 21.

FOR AS IN ADAM ALL DIE, EVEN SO IN CHRIST SHALL ALL BE MADE ALIVE.—1 COR. XV. 22.

MATT. xxii. 25—.9.	MARK xii. 20—.4.	LUKE xx. 29—34.
[d] shall-marry his wife, and raise-up seed unto his brother.	should-take his wife, and raise-up seed unto his brother.	should-take his wife, and raise-up seed unto his brother.
25 Now there-were with us	20 Now there-were	There-were therefore 29 seven brethren: and the first, when-he-had-married-a-wife,[e] deceased, [f]and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother: [g]	seven brethren: and the first took a-wife, and dying left no seed.	seven brethren: and the first took a-wife, and- [e]died[f] without-children.
26 likewise the second also,	21 And the second took her,	[g]And the second took her 30 to-wife, and the third,	and died, neither left he any-seed: and the third likewise.	and he died childless. And the third took her; 31 unto the seventh ἕως τῶν ἑπτά.	22 And the seven had her,	and in-like-manner the seven also:
	and left no seed:	and they-left no children, and died.
27 And last-of-all the woman died also.	last-of-all the woman died also	Last-of-all the woman 32 died also.
28 Therefore in the resurrection	23 In the resurrection therefore,	Therefore in the 33 resurrection[h]
[i]whose wife shall-she-be of-the seven? for they-all had her. [k]	[h]when they-shall-rise, [i]whose wife shall-she-be of-them? for the seven had her [k]to-wife.	whose wife of-them is-she? for seven had her to-wife.
29 Jesus answered and-said unto-them, Ye-do-err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God.	24 And Jesus answering said unto-them, Do-ye-not therefore-err, because-ye-know not the scriptures, neither the power of God? [l]	And Jesus answering-said 34 [l]unto-them,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

mitted as of Divine authority any of the sacred writings except the Pentateuch, or first five books of the Bible—It is from the fifth of these books that they quote, De. xxv. 5, 6—and it is from the second of these books that our Lord replies to them, Mt. xxii. 31, .2, infra, p. 303.

Mt. xxii. 24. marry his wife—To this custom of marrying a deceased brother's wife, Naomi refers, Ru. i. 11.

Lu. xx. 31. left no children—Thus according to the Sadducees, their existence was entirely cut off, the only way in which they could perpetuate their life being the renewal of it in their offspring; a life which the wicked have in common with the righteous, Ps. xvii. 14—The psalmist could not be satisfied without the continuance of his personal existence; and that, as being transformed into the Divine likeness, ver. 15—see also the contrast, xlix. 11—.5.

Mk. xii. 24. Do ye not therefore err—see his correction of their mistake, Lu. xx. 34—.6, supra.

know not, &c.—Like modern sceptics, they pretended to superior knowledge; such as made them despise the prejudices of the multitude respecting the spiritual world and a future state—Their knowledge, as our Lord here tells them, was ignorance; and their wisdom, as Paul intimates, was that of the fool, 1 Co. xv. 35, .6.

the scriptures, &c.—Job confesses his belief in the fundamental truth of a resurrection unto life through the Redeemer; and that, as intimating his sense of the deep importance of the subject, ch. xix. 23—.8—so the Psalmist as before, xvii. 15; xlix. 15—also, lxxiii. 23—.8—so the prophets, Is. xxvi. 19; Hag. ii. 23, &c.

the power of God—In the beginning, [a]the Spirit of tion, ἀνάστασις τῶν νεκρῶν evidently denotes the restitution of bodies, and their conjunction with souls; so that marriages, &c., might exist, as the Pharisees maintained, whose opinion it seems to have been the especial purpose of the Sadducees to expose to derision.

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 24. Raise up seed unto his brother. This passage, De. xxv. 5, 6, is quoted in substance. The meaning is, that the children produced by this marriage should be reckoned in the genealogy of the deceased brother, and enjoy his estates. The Hindoos have a similar law.

[28. Whose wife shall she be? Here they thought was an absurdity which would be presented in the resurrection, sufficient to prove that no such change was likely to take place. The difficulty arose from their supposing, that if man were given a resurrection, he must necessarily be replaced in all the relations belonging to this mortal state.]

29. Ye do err, &c. 'That is, "ye deceive yourselves by assuming a false hypothesis," namely, that if there be

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxii. 23—.8. Silly opposing the truth by imaginary difficulties, is a sort of logic, which infidels, both ancient and modern, have been prone to use; and by which they are apt to prevail with those who know but little, or who are proud of the little they think they do know.

29 ver. Those who are most proud of their reasoning powers form often the most absurd ideas of spiritual things.

[29, 30 ver. If we would be kept from error, let us endeavour to become well acquainted with the scriptures of truth, and earnestly seek to have communion with God by his Holy Spirit, who leadeth into all truth, and upholdeth therein.]

MUCH SCRIPTURE TREASURE LIES UNDERGROUND THAT MUST BE DIGGED FOR.

THE SENSES ARE THE OPEN PORTS INTO WHICH MEN ADMIT TEMPTATIONS.

Matt. xxii. 30.	Mark xii. 25.	Luke xx. 35, .6.
		'The children of this world του αιωνος τουτου marry, and are-given-in-marriage:
30 For in the resurrection	25 For when they shall rise from the dead, but they which shall be 35 accounted worthy to obtain that world τον αιωνος εκεινον, and the resurrection from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given-in-marriage,	they neither marry, nor are given-in-marriage;	neither marry, nor are given-in-marriage:
		neither can they die any 36 more: for they are but are as the angels [m] of God in heaven. [n]	but are as the angels which are in heaven.	equal unto the angels; [m] [n] and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

God moved upon the face of the waters,' and produced order out of confusion, Ge. i. 1, 2, &c.—Abraham accounted that God was able to raise Isaac up, even from the dead, He. xi. 19—Job acknowledged, ch. xlii. 2, 'I know that thou canst do every thing,' &c.—That 'with God nothing shall be impossible,' Lu. i. 37, § 2, p. 10, has been shewn in the birth, death, and resurrection, of the Son of God, Rom. viii. 32—9 — 2 Ti. i. 10, 'who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:'— . . . . . 'the power of God,' Rom. i. 16 — see also 1 Co. i. 24; 2 Co. vi. 7; xiii. 4; 2 Ti. i. 8; 1 Pe. i. 5; Ac. xxvi. 8, 'Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?'

Lu. xx. 36. Neither can they die any more, &c.— 1 Co. xv. 42, 'It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:'—ver. 43, 'As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.'—ver. 52, 'In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.'—See on 'children of the resurrection,' infra.

angels—Jesus here implies, that the argument they opposed to the resurrection, did not hold against the existence of angels, although that also was denied by the Sadducees, Ac. xxiii. 8.

children of God — The being made children of God, as Jno. i. 12, .3, § 7, p. 47, is a pre requisite to the enjoyment of a blessed resurrection, 1 Jno. iii. 1, 2; Rom. viii. 19, 'the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God,'—ver. 21, 'Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.'—The sons of God, as in fellowship with the Lamb, are to manifest his Father's name, written upon their foreheads, Rev. xiv. 1—comp. with Ho. i. 10; Rom. ix. 26; and Is. viii. 18; and with Heb. ii. 13—and as to the Name of the Father, which the children of God are to manifest, see on Jno. xvii., § 87; Rev. xxi. 7, 'He that overcometh — (that prevaileth, see Ge. xxxii. 28)— shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.'

children of the resurrection — Having been now raised to spiritual life, as Jno. v. 24, § 23, p. 177; Col. iii. 1—3, they will also be given a resurrection of the body, Jno. v. 25, § ib., p. 178; vi. 39, 40, § 43, p. 329, &c.; Col. iii. 4—It is on the resurrection, or at the second coming of Christ, that the sons of God will appear as they are, 1 Jno. iii. 2— The children of God, which remain to the coming of Christ, are not to have the advantage of them that are asleep; for when, 1 Th. iv. 16, .7, 'the Lord himself shall descend from heaven . . . . the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.'—Rev. xx. 4, 'And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them,' (as promised to the twelve, Mt. xix. 28, § 75, p. 228,) 'and . . . . the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus,' . . . . .

NOTES.

a future state it must be like the present, and by your ignorance of the true sense of the scriptures; and not considering the omnipotence of God.'—Bloomf.

Mt. xxii. 30. In the resurrection. Here means in the state to which men are introduced by the resurrection.

As the angels of God. Not as to their incorporeal substance, but as to the qualities of their bodies, and the condition of their celestial life, being in that blessed state exempted from all the imperfections of animal life.

As the angels of God in heaven. The words 'in heaven,' refer to 'the angels,' as appears from Mk. xii. 25.

It is worthy of observation that our Lord's discourses exhibit no particular description of the invisible world. He affirms generally the happiness of the good, and the miseries of the bad; but maintains a solemn reserve as to anything further.

Lu. xx. 35. That world. The world to come, when the saints shall have the dominion under the whole heaven.

36. Neither can they die any more. Upon such the second death hath no power, Rev. xx. 6, 'Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.'

The children of God. Their adoption in Christ, and their likeness to him, will be perfected, by their being made partakers of the resurrection to eternal life.—See Rom. viii. 23.

The children of the resurrection. All who have died in Christ, will Christ bring with him when he comes to judge the nations; and all who at his coming are looking for his appearing, will be caught up and be for ever with him.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Lu. xx. 35. By being raised from the death of sin, and satisfied with the Lord as our Portion, let us give evidence that we 'shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead.'

MATT. xxii. 31, .2.	MARK xii. 26, .7.	LUKE xx. 37, .8.
31 But as-touching the resurrection of-the dead, have-ye-not-read that which-was-	26 °And as-touching the dead, that they-rise: have-ye-not-read in the book of-Moses, how in the bush God spake unto-him,	Now that the dead 37 are-raised, even spoken unto-you by God,	saying,	Moses shewed at the bush,
32 saying, I am the God of-Abraham, and the God of-Isaac, and the God of-Jacob? God is not the-God of-the-dead, but of-the-living.	I am the God of-Abraham, and the God of-Isaac, and the God of-Jacob? 27 He-is not the God of-the-dead, but the-God of-the-living: ᵖ	when he-calleth the-Lord the God of-Abraham, and the God of-Isaac, and the God of-Jacob. For he-is not 38 a-God of-the-dead, but of-the-living: ᵖ for all live unto-him. ᵍ

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS

(as noticed, vi. 9—11,) 'and which had not worshipped the beast,' &c. . . (as xiii. 7—15,) 'and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.' —Rev. xxii. 5, 'and they shall reign for ever and ever.'

Mk. xii. 26. book of Moses, &c.—As he had confounded the worldly-minded Herodians from their own text, 'a penny,' Mt. xxii. 19—22, § 84, p. 297, so he now does the Sadducees, from that portion of the Divine testimony which they professed to admit—see on Mt. xxii. 24, p. 300, supra.

in the bush—Ex. iii. 2, 'the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.'—A fit emblem of the meek and lowly, whom the Lord deigns to preserve in the midst of consuming judgments, Is. lxvi. 2, 'to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word.'—The first humble followers of the Lamb, 2 Co. iv. 8—11, were 'troubled on every side, yet not distressed;—10, always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body'—Ps. ix. 9, 'The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble.'—xlvi. 1, 2, 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed,' &c.

spake unto him—Ex. iii. 6—The saying is referred to by Stephen, Ac. vii. 31, .2.

the God of Abraham—God had promised Abraham, saying, Ge. xvii. 8, 'I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.'—Yet during Abraham's former sojourn on earth, Ac. vii. 5, 'he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not . . . to set his foot on:' —He. xi. 9, 'By faith he [Abraham] sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:'—The promise, therefore, was not fulfilled to Abraham nor to his son, nor to his son's son, nor for four generations after, as predicted, Ge. xv. 16—Yet God still recognises himself as the God of those individuals unto whom he had made promises, in order to their enjoyment of which they required to be raised again—Their resurrection, therefore, was clearly implied in God's recognition of these men, as being those unto whom he was yet to prove a faithful covenant-keeping God—In confirmation of the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of their fathers brought the children of Israel out of Egypt, and through the Red Sea, in which their pursuers were left to perish; all which God had in view, ver. 13—6, at the very time that the land was promised to Abraham, ver. 7 —The resurrection of Abraham must, therefore, have been contemplated when such promises were afterwards given to him, as in xvii. 7; and the whole of the promises previously made to him were included in the blessing of the oath, xxii. 16—8; He. vi. 17—20, 'Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath:' &c.

Lu. xx. 38. all live unto him—Jno. xi. 25, § 58 p. 129, 'Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:'—Rom. iv. 17, &c.,

NOTES.

[Mk. xii. 26. In the bush. ἐπὶ τῆς βάτου. This is usually taken as if there were a transposition, for ὡς εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ τῆς βάτου. But Wolf, Michaelis, Rosenmuller, and Kuinoel, more properly adopt the view taken by Bezer and Jablonski; who regard this as a form of citing scripture usual, in that age, with the Jewish doctors; namely, of referring to any particular part of the Old Testament, by naming some remarkable circumstance therein narrated. Thus the sense will be, in the section which treats of the burning bush, i.e., Ex. iii. 6; so in Rom. xi. 2, ἢ οὐκ οἴδατε ἐν Ἠλίᾳ τί λέγει ἡ γραφή.—Bloomf.]

[Mt. xxii. 32. I am the God, &c. 'From this passage of Ex. iii. 6, 16, the doctrine of the resurrection is proved, more Judaico, and that inferentially and by legitimate consequence from what has been said. The argument (as stated by Mr. Horne) is as follows:—"Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had been long dead when these words were spoken, wherein God says, 'I am—(not I was)—the God of Abraham,' &c.; and as he is not 'the God of the dead, but of the living,' these patriarchs must have been existing in some sense when this declaration was made; for it implies a relationship between God and them, which could not be if they were not existing. The patriarchs, therefore, though dead to us, are alive to God; which proves a future state."'—Bloomf.]

[God of Abraham, ... of Isaac, &c. God's calling himself the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, after they had been long dead, plainly imported that they continued still the sons of God, waiting for the redemption of their bodies; and that their bodies, which still remained in covenant with him, as well as their souls, could not be suffered always to abide in a state of death.]

Lu. xx. 37. When he calleth, &c. 'That is, when in his history the Lord is spoken of as "the God," &c. In the passages here referred to, Ex. iii. 6, 15, .6: iv. 5, it is not Moses who calls the Lord "the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," but the Almighty, who thus speaks of himself to Moses.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xx. 37. While endeavouring to convince men of the truth, it is good to take them upon ground which is common to us and to them, as our Lord does the Sadducees, who admitted only the five books of Moses, from which both they and our Saviour here quote.]

[God is not only King of saints, but King of the saints individually; with whom, and not merely in behalf of whose cause, he hath entered into covenant. He hath engaged to do for them what he hath not yet fully done, but what he hath fully shown his determination to accomplish.]

Mk. xii. 24—.7. Let us beware of receiving the Divine revelation in word only; treating it with such indifference and neglect, that we are even unacquainted with its contents.

MATT. xxii. 33. MARK xii. 27. LUKE xx. 39, 40.

ye therefore do greatly err.

33 And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

Then certain of the scribes 39 answering said, Master, thou hast well said. And after 40 that they durst not ask him any question at all.
(Ch. xx. 41, p. 307.)

(G. 72.)—A certain scribe and Pharisee, whose admiration had been excited by the reasoning of Jesus, desires of him a solution of the question, which is the first and great commandment? Jesus' answer. In the temple.

MATT. xxii. 34—40. MARK xii. 28—34.

34 But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence εφιμωσε, they were gathered together επι το αυτο.

35 Then one of them, which was a lawyer,

And one of the scribes 28 came, and having heard them reasoning together συζητουντων, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him,

asked him a question,
36 tempting him, and saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

Which Ποια is the first commandment of all?

37 Jesus said unto him,

And Jesus answered him, 29
The first of all the commandments
Hear, O Israel;
The Lord our God is one Lord:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

'Before him whom he [Abraham] believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.'—ver. 20, .1, 'He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.'

Mt. xxii. 36. great commandment—Our Lord had already testified of the Pharisees, that laying aside the commandment of God, they held the tradition of men; they rejected the commandment of God, that they might keep their own tradition; they made the word of God of none effect, through their tradition, Mk. vii. 8, 9, 13, § 44.

Mk. xii. 29. Hear, O Israel; &c.—De. vi. 4, 5; Ec. v. 1, 'Be more ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools:'—The great command which God gave to Israel, when he brought them out of Egypt, was not concerning burnt offering and sacrifice, it was, Je. vii. 21—3, 'Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people:'—34, 'But they hearkened not,' &c.—see also Ps. lxxxi. 8—16—God especially commanded that they should hear that Prophet, whom the Lord their God would raise up unto them, De. xviii. 19—whose call was, Mk. vii. 14, § 44, p. 8, 'Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand:'—ver. 16, 'If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.'—And with regard to whom the Father spake as he had spoken from the beginning, ix. 7, § 51, p. 55, 'This is my beloved Son: hear him.'—See the blessing when this first commandment is obeyed, Ps. lxxv. 8—13, 'I will hear what God the LORD will speak: for, &c.'

Israel—The name put upon Jacob as wrestling with the Angel of the covenant, at Peniel, Ge. xxxii. 28—The disciple who was ready to receive the knowledge of God, as revealed in 'the Son of God; . . . the King of Israel,' was called 'an Israelite indeed,' Jno. i. 47—9, § 10, p. 72.

Mk. xii. 29. The Lord our God is one Lord—The Trinity in the Godhead, the one Living, Life-Giving Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, is distinctly recognised in scripture, as 1 Co. xii. 4—There are

NOTES.

[Mt. xxii. 33. They were astonished at his doctrine. The assured manner in which he spoke of eternal and invisible realities, as one possessing the most intimate knowledge of them; and the ease with which he detected the sophistry, and silenced the cavils, of their most noted doctors and disputants.]

34. The Pharisees . . . . were gathered together. They would rejoice that the Sadducees had been confounded, but they would not be the less desirous to involve Jesus in difficulty. They therefore endeavoured, probably, to find the most difficult question in dispute among themselves, and proposed it to him to perplex him.

35. A lawyer. See on Lu. x. 25, § 60, p. 145.

Tempting him. This lawyer seems to have come with an evil intention, but to have departed better disposed.—See on Lu. x. 25, § ib.

[36. Which is the great commandment, &c. 'The question involved a matter of no little controversy among the Jewish doctors, as involving the comparative importance of different precepts; some maintaining the pre-eminence of one, some of another. Some said, 'sacrifices;' some, 'circumcision;' some, 'the law of the sabbath;' some, 'the law of meats, washings, phylacteries,' &c. Only while they distinguished the Divine precepts (of which they numbered 613) into great and small, they constantly gave the preference to the ceremonial ones. Christ, however, decided in favour of the moral law, yet not to the neglect of the ceremonial.'—Bloomf.]

In the law. In the five books of Moses. It consisted of the ceremonial law and the moral. The Jews preferred the former. It is more easy to sacrifice gifts unto God, than to practise holiness of life.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mk. xii. 28, .5. Let us never forget that the very first part of the first commandment of all is, that we hear that which God hath been pleased to reveal concerning himself.

GOD USES THE INFIDELITY OF SOME FOR THE BENEFIT OF OTHERS.
IF WE LIVE IN THE SPIRIT, LET US ALSO WALK IN THE SPIRIT.—Gal. v. 25.

MATT. xxii. 38—40.

Thou-shalt-love the-Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind διανοιᾳ.

38 δ This is the-first and great commandment.
39 And the-second is like unto-it,
Thou-shalt-love thy neighbour as thyself.
40 On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets. ᵃ

MARK xii. 30—3.

and thou-shalt-love the-Lord thy God 30
with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind διανοιας, and with all thy strength: ᵇ
this is the-first commandment.
And the-second is like, namely this, 31
Thou-shalt-love thy neighbour as thyself.

ᵃ There-is none other commandment greater than-these. And the scribe said unto-him, Well, Master, thou-hast-said the truth ἐπ' ἀληθειας· for there-is one God; and there-is none other but he: 32 and to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding συνεσεως, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, is more than all whole-burnt-offerings and sacrifices. 33

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

'diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.'—5—11—ver. 5, 'And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.'—12—27—ver. 6, 'And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.'—28—31—That which He worketh in all, is charity or love, ch. xiii.—Love is his own Name, whereby he makes himself known to those that know him in truth, 1 Jno. iv. 7, 8—It was for the purpose of putting this Name upon us, that God revealed himself in the Son of his love, ver. 9—17—Thus are we brought into obedience to the great commandment, ver. 18—ver. 19, 'We love him, because he first loved us.'—ver. 21, 'And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.'

Mk. xii. 30. love the Lord thy God, &c.—This implies the knowledge of God, which knowledge implies obedience to the first part of the commandment, 'Hear, O Israel;'—see on ver. 29, supra.—The Lord hath promised to give power unto Israel, to obey this part of the great commandment, De. xxx. 6, when they hearken unto his voice by obeying the gospel, ver. 10—4—comp. with Rom. x. 6—10.

31. love thy neighbour, &c.—Le. xix. 18; quoted also Mt. xxii. 39; Rom. xiii. 9; Ga. v. 14; Ja. ii. 8.

Mt. xxii. 40. these two, &c.—The first commandment comprehends the first table of the law, Ex. xx. 2—11; which respects the object, ver. 2, 3; medium, ver. 4—6; manner, ver. 7; and special time of worship, ver. 8—11: and the second comprehends the second table of the law, ver. 12—.7; which last six commandments are alluded to, Mt. xix. 18, .9, § 75, p. 224; and Rom. xiii. 9.

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 37. With all thy heart, &c. 'These are formulas nearly equivalent, but involving no redundancy, and united for intensity of sense; importing, not that perfection in degree, or exaltation in kind, contended for by some, but only denoting that "we must assign to God the first place in our affections, and consecrate to him the united powers and faculties, both of body and mind," with which he hath endued us, so as to exert them most effectually.—Comp. De. vi. 5.'—Bloomf.

'He loves God with all his heart who loves nothing in comparison of him; with all his soul, or rather ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ ψυχῇ, "with all his life;" who is ready to give up life for his sake; with all his strength, who exerts all the powers of his body and soul in the service of God; and with all his mind, intellect, διανοιᾳ, who applies himself only to know God and his holy will.'—Clarke.

[38. The first. 'Whether the object of it is considered, or the manner in which it is to be observed, or its being the principle from whence all the duties and actions of men should flow, and the end to which all are to be referred; the first command in order of nature, time, dignity, and causality.'—Gill.]

39. The second is like unto it. It is like unto it, for it is founded upon it, and flows from it; and a right love to our brother, whom we have seen, is both an instance and an evidence of our love to God, whom we have not seen, 1 Jno. iv. 20.

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. We must love him as truly and sincerely as we love ourselves; and in the same instances, nay, in many cases, we must deny ourselves for the good of our neighbour, and must make ourselves servants to the true welfare of others.—And see on Lu. x. 27, § 60, p. 145.

40. Hang all the law, &c. That is, they contain the substance or abridgment of all the religious and moral duties contained in the law and the prophets, which therefore may be all said to hang or depend on them. The expression is a metaphor taken from a custom mentioned by Tertullian, of hanging up their laws in a public place to be seen of all men; and it imports that in these precepts is compendiously contained all that the law and prophets require, in reference to our duty to God and man. They are like the first and last links of a chain, all the intermediate ones depend on them. True religion begins and ends in love to God and man.

Mk. xii. 32. The scribe. He seems to speak with a certain degree of authority, as one who was accustomed to decide matters relating to the law.—See ver. 35, p. 307; Mt. xvii. 10, § 51, p. 57

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xii. 30. Let us not merely seek to have an understanding of what God hath condescended to make known of himself; but, espousing him as the Lord our God, let us devote unto him all the affections of our hearts and our whole lives. Let us give him an intelligent service; and let the whole vigour of our soul, body, and spirit be his.]

31 ver. As we are to love ourselves in subordination to our love of God, so are we to love our neighbours, desiring that they, with us, may be made the happy instruments of accomplishing the Divine purposes of love to mankind.

[Mt. xxii. 40. Let us see how God hath magnified the law. In the successive development of Divine revelation he hath, throughout all time, been following up the plan which was sketched in the ten commandments, written once and again upon two tables of stone, and summed up in the two great commandments, that teach our duty to God, to our neighbour, and to ourselves. The first five commandments are developed in the Pentateuch or five books of the law; and the second five in the books of the larger prophets.—See ADDENDA, § 19, p. 142, and TABULAR VIEW, p. 152. In the books of the New Testament God hath again written his law. That which God, in different dispensations, and through successive ages, has been writing for our instruction, must be worthy of our most careful study. May it be written upon our hearts, and in our lives!]

Mk. xii. 33. There is a distinction between the moral and the ceremonial law, which even the scribe and Pharisee confessed, and which our Saviour seems to have allowed. If we have the former, we shall duly attend to the latter; but the latter can never be a substitute for the former

MATT. xxii.

MARK xii. 34.

bour as himself, is more than-all whole-burnt-offerings and sacrifices. And when-Jesus-saw 34 that he answered discreetly νουνεχως, he-said unto-him, Thou-art not far from the kingdom of God. And no-man after-that durst ask him any question.

(G. 73.)—Jesus inquires of the Pharisees whose son the Christ was to be; and then reduces their answer to an absurdity. In the temple.

MATT. xxii. 41—6. MARK xii. 35—7 LUKE xx. 41—4. (Ver. 40, p. 304.)

41 [a] While-the Pharisees-were-gathered-42 together, Jesus asked them, saying, What think ye of Christ του Χριστου? whose son is-he? They-say unto-him, The Son
43 of David. He-saith unto-them, How then doth-David in spirit-call him Lord, [b]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xii. 33. more than all, &c.—Samuel asked Saul, 1 Sa. xv. 22, 'Hath the LORD . . . . delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, ... to hearken than the fat of rams.'—Pr. xxi. 3, 'To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice.'—Ho. vi. 6, 'For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings.'—Mi. vi. 6—8, 'Wherewith shall I come before the LORD?' not with costly sacrifices, but as contemplating his goodness, and bringing forth the fruits thereof: as learning the lessons taught us in the work of our redemption by Christ Jesus—comp. Rom. v. 8—21; 1 Pe. i. 17—22.

34. not far from, &c.—This scribe had arrived at a knowledge of the principle of obedience; it remained for him to deny himself, and receive salvation by grace; the gospel, which, Rom. i. 16, 'is the power of God unto salvation'—He. xi. 6, 'Without faith it is impossible to please' [God]—Rom. x. 17, 'Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.'—And Jesus is the Word of God, Jno. i. 1, &c.; the expression of the Father's love to men, iii. 16, § 12, p. 86; by believing in whom we are brought into communion with God, 1 Jno. i. 1—3; and are made partakers of his holiness, ver. 5—10, through the power of his justifying grace, ii. 1, 2—Our knowledge of God, as thus revealing himself, is made manifest by our keeping his commandments, ver. 3—6; both the first commandment, ver. 7, and the new commandment, ver. 8—11—To that, which is the way into the kingdom, Jno. xiv. 6, § 87, Jesus next directs the attention of his hearers, Mt. xxii. 41—5, infra.

Mt. xxii. 42. What think ye, &c.—Jesus now calls the attention of his auditors to 'the word' which Israel had been commanded to 'hear'—see on 'Hear, O Israel;' Mk. xii. 29, p. 304, supra—The word of God, in order to be profitably heard, must be deeply thought upon—see Ps. i. 2; cxix. 9, &c.; Pr. ii. 1—9.

What think ye of Christ?—We are to think of what he is, and does for us—He. iii. 1, 'Consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;'—xii. 2, 'Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith;' &c.—We are to think of him as our example—Eph. v. 2, 'Walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us,'—Heb. xii. 3, 'For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself,' &c.—Christ is the great subject of consideration—xiii. 7, 8, 'Considering the end . . . Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever.'

whose son is he?—When the Father speaks of the King, he declares of him, Ps. ii. 7, 'Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee.'—He is the Priest, whose prayers will be answered, whether as to mercy, ver. 8, or judgment, ver. 9—He is the great Teacher, whom all are with reverence believingly to hear, ver. 10—2—comp. with the declaration of the decree on the Holy Mount, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55—Christ is the Son of the Father's love, Jno. iii. 16, 7, § 12, p. 86, 'For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son,' &c.—1 Jno. iv. 10, 'Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.'

The Son of David.—It is observable that, before the genealogy of Christ begins, ch. i. 1, he is particularly described as the 'Son' of David, that is, the descendant 'of David,' as being the 'seed' promised to David, whose 'kingdom' should 'be established for ever,' 2 Sa. vii. 12—6; Ps. lxxxix. 29, 35, 6; Is. xi. 1; Je. xxiii. 5; xxxiii. 15.

of David—Rom. i. 3, 4, 'Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh; and declared to be the Son of God with power,' &c.—In both aspects he had been promised to David. 2 Sa. vii. 12—6—If the Jews thought only of the human nature of Christ, they came miserably short of the truth, as Jesus immediately shews them, Mk. xii. 36, 7.

David—Under the name of David, or Beloved, Christ was spoken of by the prophets, as Eze. xxxiv. 23

NOTES.

Mk. xii. 34. Not far from the kingdom of God. 'Not far from relishing the doctrine of Christ,' against which all the other scribes were so prejudiced.

No man . . . . . durst ask him. That is, no one of the scribes, the Pharisees, or the Sadducees, durst ask him a question for the purpose of tempting or entangling him.

Mt. xxii. 41, 2. Jesus asked them, ... What think ye of Christ? Our Lord having answered the three questions successively proposed to him, now in his turn puts a question to the Pharisees, the object of which is to shew to them how far their notions of the Messiah's dignity fell short of the truth, and also to prove his divinity.

43. How then, &c. How is this doctrine, that he is descended from David, consistent with what David says when he calls him Lord?

How could he be his Lord who was not to be born until many ages afterwards, and was certainly to have no secular dominion over him? This admits of but one reply, which should acknowledge the divinity as well as the humanity of the Christ.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xii. 34. See margin.

Mt. xxii. 42. Let us consider whether we are indeed ready to answer the question, 'What think ye of Christ?' not what may be reported of him by others, but to what conclusion have we ourselves come, respecting Him, to whom the law and the prophets bear witness.

[43 ver. Let us see that our views of Christ are derived from scripture, and so are consistent with all revealed truth; which they can never be, without our being given to know that Christ is Emmanuel—God with us.]

We cannot apprehend the high meaning of scripture, unless we recognise its Divine origin. The different books are varied indeed, according to the media through which they were ministered; but what we have to seek for in them, is not that which was of man, but that which is of God.

MATT. xxii. 44—.6.	MARK xii. 35—.7.	LUKE xx. 41—4.
	35 b And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ ὁ Χριστος is the Son of David?	And he- 41 said unto them, How say they that Christ τον Χριστον is David's son?
saying,	36 For David himself c said	And David himself 42 c saith in the book of Psalms, d
44 The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool υποποδιον των ποδων σου?	d by εν the Holy Ghost, The LORD said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool υποποδιον των ποδων σου.	The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine 43 enemies thy footstool υποποδιον των ποδων σου.
45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?	37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and whence is he then his son? e	David therefore 44 calleth him Lord, how is he then his son?
46 e And no man was able to answer him a word, f	f And the common people ὁ πολυς οχλος heard him gladly ἡδεως. g

g neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.—(Ch. xxiii. 1, p. 312.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

—The Father, himself, gives him the name of 'Beloved,' at his baptism, Mt. iii. 17, § 8, p. 59, and enthronement, 2 Pe. i. 17, .8—The spouse also calls him by this name, Ca. v. 2, &c.—And the same name is put upon his people, Ph. iv. 1; 2 Pe. iii. 1, 8, 14, .7, &c.—Love is the law of his kingdom, Ja. ii. 8.

Mk. xii. 36. by the Holy Ghost—Mt. xxii. 43, 'In spirit'—Lu. xx. 42, 'In the book of Psalms,' on my right hand—Mt. xx. 21, § 77, p. 237—This was done respecting Christ, Mk. xvi. 19, § 98; Ac. vii. 55; Rom. viii. 34; Eph. i. 20; He. i. 3; viii. 1; x. 12.

The LORD said to my Lord—quoted from Ps. cx. 1.

thine enemies—There are two kinds of enemies spoken of in Ps. cx.; those had been enemies who have submitted to Messiah's government, and who are most willing that he should reign over them, guide them by his instructions, and exercise for them his everlasting priesthood, ver. 1, 3, 4; and there are those, among whom he rules with the rod of his power (spoken of Ps. ii. 9), and referred to Ps. cx. 2—These are they of whom the king speaks, Lu. xix. 27, § 80, p. 250, 'But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay .... before me.'—The first enemies are correspondent to the case of the first son, who said, Mt. xxi. 29, § 84, p. 285, 'I will not: but afterward he repented, and went.'—These are his people that he redeemed from Egypt, whom he here, 'and carried...all the days of old'—Is. lxiii. 10, 'But they rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit: therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.'—Having been cast out among the Gentiles, they were not known as descended from Abraham, and are most willing to be known simply as having God for their Father, and as being the people of the Redeemer, ver. 16; as being the tribes of the Lord's inheritance, and the people of his holiness; and as called by his name, they, in contradistinction to a people who have not submitted to his rule, earnestly supplicate the Lord's return, ver. 17—.9;—that the return is from heaven, is intimated, ch. lxiv. 1; and that it will be to the confusion of his enemies is shewn, ver. 2, 3.

footstool—This word indicates an humble position, Ja. ii. 3; but never a state of punishment—It is rather an extreme case, when the Lord seems not to remember in mercy his footstool, Lam. ii. 1—The temple had been built 'for the footstool of our God,' 1 Chr. xxviii. 2—The place of worship is called his footstool also in Ps. xcix. 5—The whole house of Israel, represented by the four living creatures, are to become the footstool of the Lord: who is represented as seated upon a sapphire throne, placed upon a crystal-bright firmament, stretched forth over the heads of the living creatures—Then will the Lord be by his people greatly exalted, Ps. xlvii. 9—and those who thus humble themselves to become his footstool, he will exalt: and give to sit with him upon his throne—comp. Eze. i. 26—.8, with Rev. iv. 6—8.

37. whence is he then his son?—Jesus himself answers this question, Jno. xvi. 28, § 87, 'I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world:'—The question can only be answered aright, as recognising the fact, that Christ proceeded forth and came from his Father in heaven; and so is David's Lord: whilst as being man, he sprang from the family of David, and so was David's Son.—In him were united the Divine and human natures, as 1. 1—14, § 7, pp. 46—.8; Ph. ii. 6—8: Heb. ii. 14; 1 Jno. i. 1, 2; Rev. v. 5—10; xxii. 16.

NOTES.

Mt. xxii. 44. The LORD said, &c. This is the language of David. 'Jehovah said to my Lord'—the Messiah—'Sit thou,' &c. This was a prediction respecting the exaltation of Christ.

[Sit thou on my right hand. 'A comparison taken from kings, on whose right hand sat the heir, or he who was next in dignity, and on the left hand he that was immediately below him in rank. But sitting on the right implied also a participation in the regal power and authority. Hence συμβασιλευειν is interpreted by St. Paul, 1 Co. xv. 25, as equivalent to βασιλευειν.'—Bloomf.]

Thine enemies thy footstool. See SCRIP. ILLUS.

Mk. xii. 35. How say the scribes? As the authorised interpreters of the scriptures.—See ver. 32, supra.

Mt. xxii. 45. If David then call him Lord, how is he his son? As Jesus Christ, in his human nature, was David's Son, so, as the Son of God, and the Christ, he was the Lord of David. That he had an existence at the time of David, and was his Lord and Master, his God and King; and that as man he was descended from Him; thus being 'the root and the offspring of David,' Rev. xxii. 16.

46. Ask him any more questions. Attempt to ensnare him by any question.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxii. 44. Christ hath been declared the Son of God with power, by the resurrection from the dead; and he will remain at the Father's right hand until the kingdom be subdued under him, and until his enemies be made his footstool.] — See margin.

(G. 74.)—[Lesson 80.]—Jesus warns his disciples to beware of the scribes. In the temple.*

MARK xii. 38—40.	LUKE xx. 45—7.
	[a] Then-in the-audience-of all the people 45
38 And he-said unto-them	he-said unto his disciples, [b]
[b] in his doctrine,
Beware of the scribes, which love θελοντων	Beware of the scribes, which desire θελοντων 46 to-go in long-clothing στολαις, and	to-walk in long-robes στολαις, and love salutations in the market-places,	love φιλουντων greetings in the markets,
39 and the-chief-seats in the synagogues,	and the-highest-seats in the synagogues, and the-uppermost-rooms at feasts:	and the-chief-rooms at feasts;
40 which devour widows' houses, and for-a-	which devour widows' houses, and for-a- 47
pretence προφασει make-long-prayers:	shew προφασει make-long-prayers:
these shall-receive	the-same shall-receive greater περισσοτερον damnation.	greater περισσοτερον damnation.

(G. 75.)—Jesus declares the widow's mite to be a greater donation than the offerings of the rich.

MARK xii. 41—4.	LUKE xxi. 1—4.
41 [a] And Jesus sat over-against the treasury, [b] and beheld εθεωρει how	[b] And he-looked-up, and-saw * 1
[c] the people [d]	the rich-men cast money into the treasury:	[d] casting their gifts into the treasury. [e]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xx. 45. unto his disciples, &c.—Jesus had been reasoning with particular classes of men; with each upon their own ground: with the Pharisees, Herodians, &c., Mt. xxii. 15—22, § 84, p. 295; the Sadducees, ver. 23—33, p. 300; the scribes and Pharisees, ver. 34—40; and lastly, with the Pharisees, on the Sonship of Christ, ver. 41—6.—He now more particularly addresses his own disciples, but that in the audience of all the people, as Lu. xx. 45—7; and more fully, Mt. xxiii. 1—12, p. 312.

Mk. xii. 38. Beware of the scribes—They exalted the letter, to the rejection of the spirit of Divine revelation; yea, of the very living Word, who was among them, as had been predicted, Is. xxviii. 9—13; xxix. 13, 14; xxx. 8—11.—The danger of following such leaders was earnestly to be deprecated, iii. 12, 'O my people, they which lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths.'—So ix. 16—Jesus had already cautioned to 'beware of the leaven of the Pharisees,' Mt. xvi. 6—12, § 48, pp. 32—4; and the christian church was not without the danger of entertaining such deceitful workers, Ac. xx. 29, 30; 2 Co. xi. 13—5; Ph. iii. 2.

salutations, &c.—'Greetings,' &c., Mt. xxiii. 7; Lu. xx. 46—Salutations were sometimes with a kiss, Rom. xvi. 16—It had been said, Pr. xxiv. 26, 'Every man shall kiss his lips that give-th a right answer.'—The Son of God had now, by his right answers, vindicated his claim to the honour his Father had required for him, Ps. ii. 12.

39. chief seats, &c.—so Mt. xxiii. 6, p. 314—Lu. xx. 46, 'highest seats'—xi. 43, § 62, p. 156, 'uppermost seats'—see the 'parable to those which were bidden,' xiv. 7—11, § 67, p. 182—also Rom. xii. 10.

40. devour widows' houses—Against this the law gave commandment, Ex. xxii. 22—It was one of the charges against Jerusalem, Is. i. 23, 'They judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.'—How much more guilty are those described, x. 1—4, who expressly make decrees 'to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!'—Ja. i. 27, 'Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.'

greater damnation—Being thefts perpetrated in the name of God, the crime of blasphemy is added to a multitude of other sins, as noticed, Rev. xiii. 6; xvii. 3—comp. ix. 20, 21.

NOTES.

Mk. xii. 38. 'This and the two following verses contain all that St. Mark and St. Luke (xx. 45—7) have recorded of that discourse of our Lord against the scribes and Pharisees, which occupies the whole of Mt. xxiii.'—Lonsdale.

Lu. xx. 46. Long robes. The garments of the doctors were to be so long as to cover the whole body, even down to their heels, but were not to be any longer; but they did not always go by this rule, some had even a train after them—significant of their consequence, leisure, and learning.

Greetings, &c. Respectful salutations in the places of public resort.—See ch. xi. 43, § 62, p. 156.—And see on Mt. xxiii. 6, 7, 13, pp. 314, 15, infra.

Highest seats in the synagogues. See § 15, p. 106, ADDENDA, 'Synagogue,' last paragraph.

Chief rooms. According to the original, 'the chief places at table.'

47. Devour widows' houses. Josephus expressly notices the ascendency which the Pharisees had gained over the female sex by their pretences to the possession of God's favour.

Make long prayers. These sometimes were continued for three hours, and with vain repetitions were common among Jews, Mohammedans, and heathens.—See Mt. vi. 7, 8, § 19, p. 131.

Mk. xii. 41. Cast money. χαλκον, 'ms. 'Brass money,' probably the smallest brass coin, called פרוטה, 'prutah,' among the Jews, two of which make a farthing, and twenty-four an Italian assarius, which assarius is the twenty-fourth part of a silver penny. We call this mite, from the French miete, which signifies a crumb, or very small morsel.

The treasury. The treasury was a part of the temple, in the court which was called the court of the women. In it were chests, with a large open mouth, in the shape of a trumpet, for receiving the voluntary contributions of the people for the service of the temple, called, Lu. xxi. 4, 'the offerings of God.' In Jno. viii. 20, § 55, p. 101, our Lord is mentioned as teaching in this part of the temple.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mk. xii. 38—40. Let us carefully avoid the conduct and company of those, who, while professing to be teachers of the law, the substance of which is love to God and love to man, are yet so destitute of both, as that their great aim is, not to magnify God, but to exalt themselves; not to benefit their neighbour, but to gratify at any expense their own covetousness, even to devouring widows' houses, under the pretext of performing religious services; which performances, so far from conducing to the salvation of any, bring upon the performers greater damnation.]

* See Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xl. p. 121.

BEWARE OF DOGS. BEWARE OF EVIL WORKERS, BEWARE OF THE CONCISION.—Phil. iii. 2.

WHAT THINGS WERE GAIN TO ME, THOSE I COUNTED LOSS FOR CHRIST.—Phil. iii. 7.

MARK xii. 42—4.	LUKE xxi. 2—4.
'and many that were rich cast-in much.
42 And there-came a-certain μια poor πτωχη widow, and-she-threw-in two mites, which make a-farthing.	And he-saw also a-certain τινα 2 poor πενιχραν widow casting-in thither two mites.
43 And he-called-unto him his disciples, and-saith unto-them, Verily I-say unto-you, That this poor widow hath-cast-more-in, than-all they which-have-cast into the treasury	And he said, Of-a-truth I-say unto-you, 3 that this poor widow hath-cast-in more than-they-all:
44 for all they did-cast-in of their abundance ;f	for all these 4 have-of their abundance-cast-in f unto the offerings of God :g
g but she of her want ὑστερησεως did-cast- in all that she-had, even all her living. (Ch. xiii. 1, § lxxxvi. p. 323.)	but she of her penury ὑστερηματος hath-cast- in all the living that she-had. (Ver. 5, § lxxxvi. p. 323.)

(G. 76.)—St. John the evangelist comments on the continued infidelity of the Jews: and adds a last discourse of Jesus, relating to the same subject, and probably now delivered.—John xii. 37—50. In the temple. [Ver. 36, § lxxxii. p. 269.]

37 But though-he-had-done so-many miracles before them, yet they-believed not on him:
38 that the saying of-Esaias the prophet might-be-fulfilled, which he-spake, Lord, who hath-believed our report? and to-whom hath-the arm of-the-Lord-been-revealed?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xii. 43. This . . . hath cast more—The work of the women for the tabernacle is noticed, in the midst of the rich donations of gold and precious stones, Ex. xxxv. 21—9; 2 Co. viii. 12, 'If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.'

44. of their abundance—see the abundance which David, with all his might, prepared for the house of God, 1 Chr. xxix. 2—5; and the gifts of the princes, &c., ver. 6—9; and the munificence of Solomon, 2 Chr. iii., iv.—Isa. lxvi. 1, 2, 'Thus saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word.'—Such was the temple he now chose to inhabit, as predicted by the Law and the prophets —see 1 Co. iii. 16; vi. 19; 2 Co. vi. 16, &c.

Jno. xii. 37. miracles—The beginning of his miracles was at Cana, in Galilee, ch. ii. 11, § 11, p. 78; but he also wrought them at Jerusalem, ver. 23, § 12, p. 82—see confession of Nicodemus, iii. 2, § ib., p. 83.

believed not on him—Although they could not deny his power of working miracles, ch. xi. 47, § 58, p. 132, yet would they rather ascribe it to Beelzebub, than allow it to be evidence of his Divine mission, Mt. xii. 24, § 31, p. 235—They would not believe his words, so as to repent of their wickedness, hear his voice, and follow him, relying upon him as the promised Messiah, Jno. iii. 20, § 12, p. 87; x. 24—6, § 56, p. 121.

38. who hath believed our report?—The words of Isaiah, when he contemplated the coming of Christ, ch. liii.—The prophet, in vision, sees the unpreparedness of the people to receive Christ, ver. 1, 2; the ill reception he meets with when he has come, ver. 3; and then meditates upon his sufferings, as the propitiation for our sins, ver. 4—6; to which the Father replies, ver. 7—9; then the prophet continues his view of Christ, as having been put to grief, and about to make his soul an offering for sin, in the prospect of the joy set before him, ver. 10; and the Father again replies, assuring, that the reward shall be given, in the redemption of many, ver. 11—This reply is continued upon the view of the atonement having been made, and a full witness is given to the purposes of his death, ver. 12.

arm of the Lord—The wonder-working power, which the Jews had contemned, was the same which

NOTES.

Mk. xii. 41. Many that were rich cast in much. πολλα (many). This may refer to the number of the πρυτανα which they threw in, and not to the value.

42. A certain poor widow. 'Miserably poor,' as the original imports.

A farthing. κοδραντης. A Roman coin, in value no more than three-fourths of our farthing.

43. This poor widow . . . . more. That which is both a greater sacrifice for her to make, and of more value in the sight of God.

Jno. xii. 37. So many miracles. τοσαυτα σημεια signifies both 'so many,' and 'so great,' and refers to all the miracles he had wrought formerly.

[38. That the saying of Esaias, &c. 'Or, Thus the word of Isaiah was fulfilled. So I think ἵνα (commonly rendered that) should be translated.'—A. C.]

[Report. τῇ ἀκοῇ. 'Ακοὴ properly signifies the act of hearing, or the faculty by which any one hears; but also the thing heard, and hence a report, or testimony. A sense of the word derived from the Heb. שְׁמוּעָה, and occurring at Rom. x. 16. 7; Ga. iii. 2; Je. x. 22. Although the time, place, and other circumstances of Christ's coming had been so clearly foretold by the prophets few had so believed their report as to be ready to receive him.]

Arm. βραχιων, by a common figure, signifies

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xii. 41, 2. Jesus had shewn that the long prayers of the Pharisees, under pretence of which widows' houses were robbed, rather procured greater damnation than did any good; and the same may be said of the masses, purchased by Romish devotees, on behalf of their own souls, or those of their deceased relatives: by payments for long prayers abundant damage was done to the widows and fatherless during the dark ages. Jesus now shews that it was not only in the power of the poorest to make a richer offering than any of those whose houses were so devoured, but even than all these who had cast into the Lord's own treasury, and whose gifts were not presented to procure advantage to themselves only, but thrown into the general treasury, for the support of the Lord's appointed worship. She, whose gift might not have procured in her behalf a single prayer from the Pharisees, presented in her humble and contrite spirit, an offering more acceptable to the Lord than the whole temple service.]

Let us give as having trust in God, rather than in gold, or those who handle it: gold hath no power for good, but as accompanied by the Divine blessing; and this may be given to the poor widow's two mites as much as to all the offerings of the rich.

[Jno. xii. 37, 8. Let us ponder the words of the

JOHN xii. 39—42.

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, 40, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor 41 understand νοησωσι with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them. These 42 things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him. Nevertheless ὁμως μεντοι among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they had brought Israel out of Egypt; when it is duly recognised, and prayer is made accordingly, a wondrous and joyful deliverance will be wrought, Is. li. 9—11—The Lord longeth to put forth power through his people, ver. 12—6, which can only be by their having Christ revealed to them by the Father, Mt. xvi. 17, § 50, p. 37, through the power of the Spirit, 1 Co. ii. 10—4, and as being, by faith, made one with the Son, Ga. iii. 5; Eph. i. 17—20.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 39. Esaias said, &c.—The words referred to are Is. vi. 10, the warning which was given to the Jews, with regard to the danger they were in, of being given over to a reprobate mind, on account of rejecting the Lord as their King; and he said, ver. 9, 10, 'Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.

a Make the heart of this people fat,
b and make their ears heavy,
c and shut their eyes;
c lest they see with their eyes,
b and hear with their ears, [be healed.'
a and understand with their heart, and convert, and

It is to be observed, that the evangelist does not quote the passage word for word, but rather affords us a key to the understanding of the prophet, by giving the sense of what was spoken; b b are omitted, being of the same import with 'they could not believe,' the words used in introducing this farther reference to Isaiah; and the first c and c are reversed in order, giving the passage the form of a direct, in the place of an inverted parallelism, as it is in the prophet.

40. He hath, &c. . . . . I should, &c.—The evangelist also notes a distinction of person in the text: the one who speaks, saying, 'And I should heal;' this must be the Good Physician, who wept over Jerusalem, as not knowing the time of her visitation; the other is spoken of, 'He hath blinded their eyes,'—It is true that 'God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear,' Rom. xi. 8; but it is also true that God giveth this by leaving them in the darkness they have loved, 2 Co. iv. 3, 4, 'If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.'—Had they regarded their own sacrifices aright, they would have heard them speak as John did, of 'the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world,' Jno. i. 29, § 10, p. 69—2 Co. iii. 14, .5, 'But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ. But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart.'

41. saw his glory—As described, Is. vi. 1—3, 'His train filled the temple.'—Jesus, although rejected of the Jews, is yet to be glorified by a people, of whom he says, xliii. 21, 'This people have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise.'—The seraphim were beheld by the prophet as making the case of this people, in whom the Lord will be glorified, a subject of their song, vi. 3, 'And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory.'—Isaiah, as knowing himself to be of the Jews, a people who were to be rejected on account of their refusal to acknowledge the King of Israel, exclaims, as in ver. 5, confessing his undone condition, because of his own sin, and as dwelling 'in the midst of a people of unclean lips:' then his personal forgiveness is declared, and a sign is given of the consecration of his lips unto the Lord, ver. 6, 7—He then accepts the office of messenger for the Lord, to the people of unclean lips, ver. 8—then the warning is delivered, ver. 9, 10, the truth of which warning hath been visible for 1800 years, unto those who had eyes to see, until now that the land hath been left as predicted, ver. 11, .2; after these long desolations, an effort may be made to restore the Jews in u. belief, which restoration will be to a still more entire discomfiture; thereafter to the Holy Seed will the land give its strength, ver. 13, to which time the words of the seraphim, in the beginning of the vision refer 'The whole earth is full of his glory.'

NOTES.

power, or rather power exerted in action; and there may be, as Lampe supposes, an allusion to the custom of warriors in ancient times uncovering the arm, whether for actual battle or for giving orders. —See on Lu. i. 51, § 2, p. 12. The interrogation implies a strong negation, q. d., nemo fere, very few.

Jno. xii. 39. Therefore. διὰ τοῦτο. 'Wherefore' meaning, since they would not hearken to Christ's words.

[They could not believe. 'This is not to be understood of physical, but of moral inability; meaning, that they would not; lit., they could not bring themselves to, &c. From a comparison of Mt. xiii. 10—.7, (§ 32, p. 214,) it is evident that "the evangelist was far from intending to say, that the inability to believe was superinduced and caused, in order that the prediction of the prophet might be accomplished; still less that the miracles in question were wrought with a view to incredulity on the part of those who should witness them. We are to suppose that the fact of their unbelief is represented to bespeak a state of mind and heart which rendered them the awful examples of such blindness and insensibility as the prophet foretold."'—Bloomf.]

41. Saw his glory (Isa. vi. 1). The evangelist speaks of Esaias seeing the glory of Christ, whom he calls 'LORD of hosts:' it follows that Christ is 'the LORD of hosts.'

[' We have here a very remarkable proof of our Lord's divinity. For in the passage of Isaiah here referred to, ch. vi. 1—10, the prophet says that he saw "the Lord sitting upon a throne," with "the seraphims" about him; "and one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory." [Marg. "His glory is the fulness of the whole earth."] But the evangelist here plainly declares that it was Christ whose glory Isaiah then saw, and of whom he spake when he said, "Mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts." Christ therefore in his Divine nature was worshipped by the angels as "the LORD of hosts," before he "was made flesh, and dwelt among us."'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

42. The chief rulers. 'The original word means simply "rulers," and is not translated "chief rulers" in any other passage of the New Testament."—Ibid.

Many believed, &c. Two only are mentioned by name, Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathæa.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Prophets, and receive the truth of God into our hearts; so shall we receive gain from all that takes place: so shall we find that his working in providence is in accomplishment of what he has predicted—in confirmation of what he has revealed.]

Jno. xii. 39, 40. Let us seek to understand that which God, in his providence, is causing to pass before us: if we are not improved thereby, we are likely to be made worse.

[41 ver. Let us, with Isaiah, contemplate the Saviour, both in his sufferings and in his glory; let us prize these keys of the kingdom of heaven; and the more so, when we see in the Jews the awful consequences of slighting the proffered mercy.]

THE SPIRIT SEARCHETH ALL THINGS, YEA, THE DEEP THINGS OF GOD.—1 Cor. ii. 10.
HE THAT IS SPIRITUAL JUDGETH ALL THINGS, YET HE HIMSELF IS JUDGED OF NO MAN.—1 Cor. ii. 15.

JOHN xii. 43—.7.

43 did-not-confess him, lest they-should-be put-out-of-the-synagogue: for they-loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.
44 Jesus cried and said, He that-believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that-45 sent me. And he that-seeth me seeth him that-sent me. 46, I am-come a-light into 47 the world, that whosoever believeth on me should-not-abide in darkness. And if any-man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I-came not to judge the

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 42. but . . . did not confess, &c.—ch. ix. 22, § 55, p. 111, 'The Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.'—Those that confess him before men, he will confess before his Father in heaven, Mt. x. 32, § 39, p. 301; whereas, those who are ashamed of him and of his words, of them will he be ashamed, 'when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels,' Mk. viii. 38, § 50, p. 43—Rom. x. 10, 'For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.'—2 Ti. ii. 12, 'If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:'

43. the praise of men, &c.—Jesus regarded this preference of the honour that cometh from man, as an insuperable obstacle to the believing in him, ch. v. 44, § 23, p. 180—It was as confessing Jesus to be the King of Israel (whose glory Isaiah had beheld), that Nathanael received the honour of being called 'an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!' ch. i. 47, § 10, p. 72—Rom. ii. 29, 'He is a Jew, which is one inwardly; . . . . whose praise is not of men, but of God.'

44. believeth, &c.—1 Pe. i. 21, 'Who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.'

45. seeth him that sent me—In Jesus both the glory and the grace of the Father were manifested, and in him might be seen the truth of all that God had spoken, ch. i. 14—see margin—Jesus says to Philip, xiv. 9, § 87, 'He that hath seen me hath seen the Father;'—and of the Jews, as having seen his works, he says, xv. 24, § ib., 'But now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.'—Jesus is, Col. i. 15, 'The image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature:'—He. i. 3, 'The brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person,'—He who knew his Lord the most intimately, testifies, 1 Jno. i. 2, ('The life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;')

46. light into the world, &c.—Whilst there was throughout the land of Egypt darkness that might be felt, 'the children of Israel had light in their dwellings,' Ex. x. 21—3—That which gave light to the children of Israel, as fleeing from Egyptian bondage, was to the Egyptians darkness, in which they stumbled and fell, xiv. 19—25—see Jno. xii. 35, § 82, p. 269; ver. 40, p. 310; ix. 5, § 55, p. 109; viii. 12, § ib., p. 100; iii. 19, § 12, p. 86; i. 5—9, § 7, pp. 46, .7.

not abide in darkness—The chief rulers who believed on him, were unwilling to forsake the darkness, ver. 42, .3—He. x. 26, .7, 'If we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.'—1 Jno. i. 6, 7, 'If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.'

47. I judge him not, &c.—Jesus does not condemn those that believe not, as he does those who slight him as a teacher, by turning away from hearing his word—so he warned Nicodemus, ch. iii. 19, § 12, p. 86—and so he said of the Jews, that they had not had sin unless he had come and spoken to them, and done among them the works which none other man did, v. 22—4, § 87, p. 390. But those who do believe on him, yet will not obey him, he has especially to deal with in judgment, now, in the present time, in order that they may be driven, if they will not be drawn, into the way of holiness; such appears to have been the case mentioned, 1 Co. v. 1—5—In mercy the Lord judges his people—He. xii. 5—9, 'My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth,' &c.—With regard to Israel it was said, Am. iii. 2, 'You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities.'—As for the foolish and wicked, they are frequently allowed, comparatively, to escape punishment in this life, Ps. lxxiii. 5—7, 'They are not in trouble as other men; neither are they plagued like other men. . . . Their eyes stand out with fatness: they have more than heart could wish.'

came not to judge, &c.—The first coming of Christ was not to be for judgment to the world in general, although it was to be for judgment to the Jews, who had been previously so highly favoured: it was rather to be for salvation to the Gentiles, whom the Jews in their national pride thought their Messiah

NOTES.

Jno. xii. 42. But . . . they did not confess him. Their faith was weak, and they could not bear the reproach of the cross of Christ.

Put out of the synagogue. See on ch. ix. 22, § 55.

43. They loved the praise of men, &c. The glory or honour that cometh from men.—See on ch. v. 41—.4, § 23, p. 180.

[44. Believeth not on me. Not only on me, but on my Father also 'that sent me;' because the words which he believes when spoken by me, are not only mine, but my Father's also.—Comp. Mt. x. 20, § 39, p. 299; Mk. ix. 37, § 52, p. 75. Jesus uniformly represents the union between himself and God as so intimate that there could not be faith in him, unless there was also faith in God.—See Jno. v. 17, 20, 36, § 23, pp. 176, .7, .9; viii. 38, § 55, p. 104; x. 25, 37, .8, § 56, pp. 121, .3—He who believes on the Son believes on the Father; he who hath seen the Son hath seen the Father; he who honours the Son honours the Father. Though it was for asserting this (his oneness with God) that they were going to crucify him, yet he retracts nothing of what he had spoken, but strongly re-asserts it, in the very jaws of death!]

45. That seeth me, &c. Regards me with a lively faith; does, in effect, see him that sent me, and thereby does honour to the Father himself.

Seeth him that sent me. 'Seeth my Father' also 'that sent me,' because I and my Father are one.

[47. I judge him not. οὐ κρίνω αὐτόν. 'The words are commonly taken to mean, "I do not here on earth

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 42, .3. Let us act as in the sight of God, and as seeking his approval: so shall we best escape the fear of man, which bringeth a snare.

[44, .5 ver. It is in the Son that the Father is revealed. Those whose minds are enlightened in the knowledge of Christ, are led to repose their confidence in God.]

46 ver. Let us ever remember that the object of Christ's coming into the world was that we might see the light, and walk therein.

[47 ver. Those who believe, and yet act not according to the light they receive, may in mercy expect punishment in the present time, that they may escape the judgment hereafter.]

JOHN xii. 48—50.

48 world, but to save the world. He that-rejecteth ἀθετων me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that-judgeth him: the word that I-have-spoken, the-same shall-judge him in 49 the last day. For I have-not-spoken of myself; but the Father which-sent me, he-50 gave me a-commandment, what I-should-say, and what I-should-speak. And I-know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even-as the Father said unto-me, so I-speak. [Ch. xiii. 1, ‖ lxxxvii. p. 365.]

(G. 77.)—[Lesson 81.]—*Jesus, being about to leave the temple for the night, and at the same time to make an end of his public ministry, denounces penal retribution upon the scribes and Pharisees; in eight woes.—Matt. xxiii. In the temple. [Ch. xxii. 46, p. 307.]

In the descriptions of the scribes and Pharisees in this chapter, we have a full-length portrait of the hypocrite. I. They shut up the kingdom of heaven against others, ver. 13. They made great pretensions to knowledge; but they neither entered in themselves, nor suffered others. II. They committed the grossest iniquity under a cloak of religion, ver. 14. They cheated widows out of their property, and made long prayers to hide their villainy. III. They shewed great zeal in making proselytes; yet did it only for gain, and made them more wicked, ver. 15. IV. They taught false doctrine; artful contrivances to destroy the force of oaths, and shut out the Creator from their view, ver. 16—22. V. They were superstitious, ver. 23. Small matters they were exact in; matters of real importance they cared little about. VI. Their trust was in outward ceremonies, particularly washing, to the neglect of inward holiness, ver. 23— 6. VII. They were openly hypocritical. They took great pains to appear well, while they themselves knew that it was all deceit and falsehood, ver. 25—8. VIII. They professed great veneration for the memory of the pious dead, while at the same time they held the principles and followed the conduct of their murderers, ver. 29—31. And see NOTES on ver. 5, p. 313.

1 Then spake Jesus to-the multitude, and to his disciples, 2, saying, The scribes and 3 the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: all therefore whatsoever they-bid you observe, that would destroy: the Baptist had warned them of their mistake, Mt. iii. 8—12, § 7, p. 52, and Jesus had to the Jewish ruler expressed the purpose of his coming, Jno. iii. 16, .7, § 12—says the beloved disciple, 1 Jno. iv. 14, 'We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xii. 48. shall judge, &c.—He who rejects the word, although he may escape many of the afflictions of the just in this life, will at length be judged by that word which he hath contemned—He, ii. 3, 'How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;'

49. I have not spoken of myself—Not of myself alone, but under my Father's authority, and according to his instructions—comp. ver. 44, supra; ch. iii. 32, § 13, p. 92; v. 30, § 23, p. 178; vii. 16, .7, § 55, p. 91; viii. 38, § 56, p. 104; xiv. 10, 24, § 87; xvii. 8, 14, § 95.

he gave me a commandment—as was intimated when the injunction was given to hear that Great Prophet, according to whose teaching, all are to be judged, De. xviii. 18—20—see also Jno. viii. 28—38, § 55, p. 103; xiv. 10, 31, § 87, pp. 382, .6.

50. his commandment—De. vi. 4, 'Hear, O Israel,' &c.—see on Mk. xii. 29, p. 304—Lu. ix. 35, § 51, p. 55, 'This is my beloved Son: hear him.'—1 Jno. iii. 23, 'This is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment.'—As to the connection between the hearing of faith and life everlasting, see Is. lv. 3; Rom. v. 1, 2; viii. 2, &c.

Mt. xxiii. 2. scribes and... Pharisees—The parties with whom Jesus had been last in discussion, Mk. xii. 28; Mt. xxii. 34, p. 304—They admitted the whole of the Old Testament scriptures, as to the letter, but neglected the great commandment which required them still further to hear God, De. vi. 4, 'Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD:'—to hear the Great Prophet spoken of by Moses, xviii. 18, .9—to hear the Messenger of the covenant, pointed forward to by Isaiah, lv. 1—3, and by the last of their prophets, Mal. iii. 1—They neglected to think of Him who was presented to them, not only by the words of the prophets, Ac. iii. 18, 21—.4, but by all their sacrifices and temple services, Col. ii. 16, .7—viii. 5, 'How do ye say, We are wise, and the law of the LORD is with us? Lo, certainly in vain made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain.'

sit in Moses' seat—After the Jews' return from

NOTES.

act as judge over him, since I came to be a Saviour, not a judge."—See ch. iii. 17; [§ 12, p. 86;] v. 45; [§ 23, p. 180;] viii. 15. [§ 55, p. 101.] Kuinoel and Tittman, however, take κρινειν here in the sense of condemn and punish; q.d., "I am not the cause of his condemnation, or that of men in general, having come not to destroy, but to save; and therefore the whole blame must rest with those who prefer darkness to light." On this verse comp. iii. 16—.9; [§ 12, p. 86;] and 2 Pe. iii. 9, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish."—Bloomf.]

'Christ does not say that he will not judge the world hereafter, see on v. 27—9. [§ 23, p. 178,] but only that he does not judge it now.'—Lonsdale.

Jno. xii. 48. He that rejecteth me. The word 'rejecteth' means despiseth, or refuseth to receive me, Lu. x. 16, § 60, p. 143.

The word, ὁ λογος. By this and the τα ῥηματα, 'my words,' are meant that part of Christ's teaching which respected his person and office.—See ch. iii. 17, [§ 12, p. 86.]

49. What I should say, and what I should speak. Εἰπω refers to commands, and λαλησω to oral instruction.

Mt. xxiii. 2. Sit in Moses seat. The scribes, i. e., ver. 8, the rabbies, the doctors, were assessors or ju-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xii. 48. The words of Christ must be for our salvation now, or our condemnation hereafter.

49, 50 ver. The words of Christ are the words of the Father. Let us learn from the example of Christ to be obedient in all things.

50. Let us earnestly deliver unto men his commandment, which 'is life everlasting;' and endeavour to persuade them according to his truth, to walk in holiness to the glory of his name.

Mt. xxiii. 2, 3. See margin.

* 'It is morally certain that a direct attack, like this, on his worst and most powerful enemies, would be reserved by our Lord for the close of the day. And if any regard is due to the plain meaning of terms, not to say to his own veracity, it can scarcely be doubted that, as he delivered the concluding sentence, "For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord," he would both leave the temple, and never again return to it. With this event, the account of the transactions on the twelfth of Nisan, within the temple, must be concluded.'—Vol. III. Diss. xi. p. 125.

LET US BEWARE OF REJECTING THE TRUTH, BECAUSE OF THE UNWORTHINESS OF THE TEACHER: AND LET US EQUALLY BEWARE OF FOLLOWING THE MAN, IN PLACE OF THE TRUTH WHICH HE TEACHES.

MATT. xxiii. 4, 5.

4 observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not. For they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but 5 they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Babylon, Ne. viii. 1, 'all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.'—And there were others with him who, ver. 7, 'caused the people to understand the law:'—ver. 8, 'So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.'—Mal. ii. 7, 'The priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth:'—Ac. xv. 21, 'Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues,' &c.

Mt. xxiii. 3. they say, and do not—were represented by the second son in the parable, who said, 'I go, sir: and went not,' ch. xxi. 30, § 84, p. 285—Rom. ii. 21—4, 'Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?'—see margin—Ti. i. 16, 'They profess that they know God; but in works they deny,' &c.

4. bind heavy burdens, &c.—Lu. xi. 46, § 62, p. 157, 'Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.'—Israel are 'to undo the heavy burdens,' previous to their great enjoyment of the Lord's goodness, Is. lviii. 6—9—'The apostles and elders and brethren,' at Jerusalem, sent an epistle to the brethren at Antioch, &c., saying, Ac. xv. 23, 28, 29, 'It seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.'—Notwithstanding which advice, the scribes and Pharisees still continued to pester the church, Ga. v. 1—9; vi. 12, 13, &c.

5. to be seen of men—Jesus had, from the beginning, warned against the conduct of the hypocrites in this respect, as to alms-deeds, ch. vi. 1—4, § 19, p. 131—place of prayer, ver. 5, 6—manner of prayer, 7—15, pp. 131—3—and fasting, 16—18, ib.

phylacteries—The words of the great command, 'Hear, O Israel:' &c., the Israelites were directed to have within their heart, and to bind 'as frontlets between' their 'eyes,' to keep in remembrance that which God had been pleased to reveal of himself, that they should think of his love as revealed in his word, so as to be led into obedience to his great commandment, De. vi. 4—6, 8, 'Thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart,' &c.

borders of their garments—The Israelites were directed to put upon the fringes of the borders of their garments a riband of blue; that they might remember to do all the commandments of the Lord, and be faithful unto their God, Nu. xv. 38—40.

NOTES.

With one of their fingers. That is, 'so far from taking upon their own shoulders the burdens which they lay on those of others,' they will not even stir them with their finger ends; a proverbial expression (common both to Greek and Latin writers) to denote 'being quite indisposed to engage in the labour which we enjoin upon others.'

5. All their works, &c. Such as prayers, alms, fastings, &c.

In pointing out the corruptions of these men, our Lord gives us the distinguishing characteristics of false teachers generally, whether Jewish or Christian.

i. They live not according to the truths they preach.—'They say, and do not,' ver. 3.

ii. They are severe to others; point out the narrowest road to heaven, and walk in the broad road themselves.—'They bind heavy burdens,' &c., ver. 4.

iii. They affect to appear righteous, and are strict observers of certain rites, &c., while destitute of the power of godliness.—'They make broad their phylacteries,' &c., ver. 5.

iv. They love worldly entertainments, go to feast wherever they are asked, and seek church preferments.—'They love the chief places at feasts, and chief seats in the synagogues,' ver. 6.

v. They love and seek public respect and high titles, salutations in the market-place (for they are seldom in their studies), and to be called of men, Rabbi, eminent teacher, though they have no title to it, either from the excellence or fruit of their teaching. When these marks are found in a man who professes to be a minister of Christ, charity itself will assert, he is a thief and a robber; he has climbed over the wall of the sheepfold, or broken it down in order to get in, ver. 7; and see note, p. 312, preceding the text.

Phylacteries. φυλακτηρια, from φυλασσω, to keep, or preserve, because they were used to preserve the law in memory, in order to its observance. The phylacteries had their origin from the law, Ex. xiii. 9, 16; De. vi. 8; xi. 18. These precepts, which enjoined a

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxiii. 4. Let us give an example of that obedience to the commandments which we require from others; and let us beware of imposing our own will upon others in place of the commandments.]

MATT. xxiii. 6—11.

6 of their garments, and love the uppermost-rooms at feasts, and the chief-seats in the 7 synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to-be-called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.
8 But be-not ye-called Rabbi: for one is your Master ὁ καθηγητης, even Christ ὁ Χριστος;
9 and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your 10 Father, which is in heaven. Neither be-ye-called masters καθηγηται: for one is your 11 Master, even Christ. But he-that is greatest among-you shall-be your servant.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 8. called Rabbi, &c.—The apostles did not claim to have dominion over the faith of the disciples, but only to be helpers of their joy, 2 Co. i. 24—Ja. iii. 1, 'My brethren, be not many masters,'—1 Pe. v. 3, 'Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.'

one is your Master—And he gave his disciples an example of the humblest service, Jno. xiii. 13—5, § 87, p. 367; Eph. v. 23—32—He stooped to raise us up, Ph. ii. 3—11.

brethren—sons of God, Jno. i. 12, § 7, p. 47—see on Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501.

9. no man your father, &c.—Paul claimed to be only a minister of Christ, and steward of the mysteries of God: although if any in the church might claim to be a father, he could, 1 Co. iv. 1, 14—.7.

10. masters—2 Pe. ii. 3, &c., 'Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you:'—3 Jno. ver. 9, 'I wrote unto the church: but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.'

one is your Master—This requires to be repeated—see on ver. 8—Christ hath a right to rule over us; we are his by creation, Jno. i. 3, § 7, p. 46—by redemption, 1 Co. vi. 19, 20—and providence, Mt. xxviii. 18, 20, § 96, p. 502—'the head,' Col. i. 14—.9—'over all things to the church,' Eph. i. 22, .3.

11. your servant, &c.—see on Lu. xxii. 24—.7, § 87, p. 375, and Jno. xiii. 15, .6, § ib.

NOTES.

constant regard to, and remembrance of God's law, the Jews in latter times interpreted literally. Phylacteries were small slips of parchment or vellum, on which certain portions of the law were written, and which they rolled up neatly, and put into a case or box of dressed skin, and tied them upon their forehead and on the wrist of the left arm with a fillet. The portions of the law which were inscribed upon them are said to have been the following: Ex. xiii. 1—10, 11—.6; De. vi. 4—9; xi. 13—21, all inclusive. The phylactery became an important appendage to a Pharisee's character, insomuch that some of them wore them very broad, either that they might have the more written on them, or that the characters being larger, they might be the more visible, and that they might hereby acquire greater esteem among the people, as being more than ordinarily religious.—See on Lu. xx. 46, .7, p. 308, supra.

Mt. xxiii. 6. Uppermost rooms. πρωτοκλισιαν, 'the first seat at banquets,' namely, among the Jews, at the top of the table, as with us; among the Greeks and Romans the middle place at the triclinium.

Chief seats in the synagogues. According to the most ancient customs of the Jews, those persons who held no office in the synagogues used to sit according to the distinctions of age. But afterward it became the custom for those who had the highest character for erudition, to sit in the places of the greatest honour.

[7. Rabbi. A title which the scribes had at that time assumed; from the Hebrew word רב, which signifies 'great;' hence rabbi meant 'master,' or 'excellent.' It was doubled for the sake of greater emphasis. These rabbis were looked up to as infallible oracles in religious matters, and usurped not only the place of the law, but of God himself. According to Dr. A. Clarke, and others, there are three words used among the Jews as titles of dignity, which they apply to their doctors, rabh. rabbi, and rabban, each of which terms has its particular meaning. Rabban implies much more than rabbi, and rabbi much more than rabh. These titles of distinction did not take place till the schism between Hillel and Shammai. Dr. Lightfoot tells us, that 'the words of the scribes are declared to be more weighty than those of the prophets, and equal to those of the law; so that Gamaliel advised to get a rabbi, that one might no longer doubt of anything.' They even went so far as to say, that the words of a rabbi were the words of God.]

These titles were conferred by the sanhedrim, by the imposition of hands; and afterward in the dispersion, by the president of their schools.—See Addenda, § 12, p. 87, 'Rabbi.'

8. Ye are brethren. No one among you is higher than another, or can possibly have from me any jurisdiction over the rest. Ye are in this respect perfectly equal.—See on ch. xx. 24, § 77, p. 238.

[Most commentators concur in placing these words at the end of the following verse, immediately after 'for one is your Father, which is in heaven,' with which they are intimately connected. The arrangement is evidently more natural, gives a closer connection to the sentiments, and throws more light on the passage than the common arrangement, which places this clause at the end of this verse, and adds an abruptness to the whole.]

9. Call no man your father, &c. Acknowledge no man as your father in spiritual things, so as to have 'dominion over your faith;' for ye have but one such father, even 'your Father, which is in heaven.'

[Our Lord probably alludes to the Ab, or father of the sanhedrim, who was the next after the Nasi, or president.—See on ch. xx. 21, § 77, p. 237, by which he gives his disciples to understand that he would have no second, after himself, established in his church, of which he alone was the head.]

[10. Neither be ye called masters. Leaders, or guides, that is, of the judgments and the consciences of men, exercising an authority and dominion over them, which the Pharisaical doctors had usurped, telling the people that they ought to believe all their doctrines, and obey all their injunctions, as the commands of the living God. Neither of these commands forbids us to give proper titles of civil implying to men, nor to render them the honour belonging to their station.—See ch. xxii. 21, § 84, p. 297, 'Render therefore unto Cæsar,' &c.; Rom. xiii. 7, 'Render therefore to all their dues: . . . honour to whom honour;' 1 Pe. ii. 17, 'Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.' They forbid the disciples of Jesus to seek or receive mere empty titles implying eminence, and human authority to control the souls of others.]

11. He that is greatest, &c. He that would be greatest among you, let him prove his claim by devoting himself to the service of his brethren.—See on ch. xx. 26, .7, Scrip. Illus., § 77, p. 239.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiii. 5—7. Let us beware of occupying ourselves with the literal and ceremonial, to the exclusion of the moral and spiritual parts of the law; with that which is seen of men, to the neglect of that which God looketh upon; of desiring to take a conspicuous place before men, rather than to act worthily in the sight of God.]

8 ver. Let us look to our Master, and learn of him who was meek and lowly of heart; who was 'despised and rejected of men;' and let us love one another as brethren, in place of striving with each other, as those may be expected to do who know not what Christ hath done, to reconcile us to God and to each other.

[9 ver. How remarkable it is, that the members of the Great Apostacy have their very name as doing that which Christ expressly forbids; the calling one on the earth, 'Father,' otherwise 'papa,' or pope!]

MATT. xxiii. 12—.5.

12 And whosoever shall-exalt himself shall-be-abased; and he-that shall-humble himself shall-be-exalted.

13 But woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-shut-up the kingdom of heaven against εμπροσθεν men: for ye neither go-in yourselves, neither suffer-ye them-that-are-entering to-go-in.

14 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-devour widows' houses, and for-a-pretence προφασει make-'long'-prayer: therefore ye-shall-receive the-greater περισσοτερον damnation.

15 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-compass sea and land to-make one proselyte, and when he-is-made, ye-make him twofold-more the-child of-hell than-yourselves.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 12. exalt himself—see the abasing of him that exalteth himself, 2 Th. ii. 4—8; Rev. xiii. 5—10 xix. 19, 20.

humble himself, &c.—to become, from being an enemy, the footstool of the Lord, Ps. cx. 1; so the living creatures are the footstool of the throne of the God of Israel, Eze. i. 22, .6—afterwards they are found exalted, so as to be in the midst of the throne, Rev. iv. 6, &c.—see on 'footstool,' Mk. xii. 36, p. 307.

13. woe unto you, . . . hypocrites!—The eight Woes which our Lord here pronounced, ver. 13—30, upon those who substituted the form for the substance of religion, may advantageously be contrasted with the eight Beatitudes, ch. v. 3—10, § 19, pp. 120—.2—Contrast this woe upon the proud self-righteousness which prevents an entrance into the kingdom of heaven, with ver. 3, p. 120, 'Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.'

shut up, &c.—Lu. xi. 52, § 62, p. 157, 'Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.'—Christ is the door, Jno. x. 7—9, § 55, p. 115—xiv. 6, § 87, 'the way, the truth, and the life:'—The Pharisees knew not this one way of salvation, Mt. xxii. 41—.6, p. 306; Rom. x. 2—4—and sought to prevent others from acknowledging the truth, Jno. ix. 22, § 55, p. 111.

14. Woe, &c.—Contrast with ch. v. 4, § 19, p. 120, 'Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.'

devour, &c.—see on Mk. xii. 40, [Lu. xx. 47,] p. 308—Contrast with the case of those who take advantage of the affliction of others, that of those who being afflicted, persevere in prayer like the importunate widow, Lu. xviii. 1—8, § 73, pp. 214—.6—as referred to in the second beatitude.

15. Woe, &c.—Contrast with ch. v. 5, § 19, p. 120, 'Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.'

to make one proselyte, &c.—see this proud spirit of mastership over others' faith forbidden, ver. 8—12, p. 314—We may not seek to make others according to

NOTES.

Mt. xxiii. 12. Whosoever shall exalt himself, &c. It is worthy of remark, that it is recorded of our Lord, that he repeated this saying three times, Lu. xiv. 11, § 67, p. 182; xviii. 14, § 73, p. 217, which see: —— the repetition is a striking proof of the necessity of the Christian grace of humility.—See Scrip. Illus., § 67, p. 182.

13. Woe unto you. Our Lord pronounced eight blessings upon the mount: he pronounces eight woes here; not as imprecations, but solemn, compassionate declarations of the misery which these stubborn sinners were bringing upon themselves.—See Scrip. Illus., supra.

[Pharisees, hypocrites! . . . ye shut up, &c. They might be justly said to shut up the kingdom of heaven from men, because they suppressed the true interpretation, and the daily inculcation of passages which treat of repentance, faith, and unfeigned charity, and bestowed all their pains on urging rites and enlarging ceremonies, thereby obstructing the approach of those who were willing to enter. Κλειειν εμπροσθεν has the force of ἀπωθεισθαι, and exactly answers to the English phrase, to shut the door in any one's face.]

Ye neither go in, &c. The import of both expressions is, that 'they cut off all access to the temple of salvation, by taking away that key of the knowledge' [of Christ in God] which would open the entrance thereto.

['In this portion (ver. 13—35) there is a most impressive apostrophe (one of the noblest on record) to the Pharisees, as if present (though, as appears from ver. 1, they had now withdrawn), against whom Christ, as it were wearied out with their attempts against him, whether to take him by force or by guile, sums up all that he had said, or had to say, of a generation of vipers; denouncing on them oft-repeated woes for their complicated vices (their hypocrisy, pride, extortion, rapacity, and persevering persecution of all the prophets sent to them), and concludes with a solemn prediction (awfully fulfilled within that very generation) of the destruction of their temple, and the withdrawing of his presence until their final conversion.'—Bloomf.]

[14. Devour widows' houses. This 'eating up' was effected by various subtle artifices. By pretensions to extraordinary philanthropy and piety, they induced persons to commit to them the disposal of their property, as executors and guardians; or 'creeping into widows' houses,' devised various means of enriching themselves, either by making devotees of the widows, and laying them under contribution, or caballing with the children to deprive the widow of part of her dowry, for some return either in hand, or in expectation.—See on Lu. xx. 47, p. 308, supra.

Long prayer. One rule among them, says Lightfoot, was to meditate an hour, then pray an hour, and then meditate another hour, all of which was included in their long prayers, or devotions. Sometimes, it is said, these prayers occupied nine hours a day.

15. Ye compass sea and land. A proverbial expression, used to denote the most strenuous efforts to accomplish an object. The excessive zeal of the Jews in making proselytes is even glanced at by Horace, l. 1, sat. iv.; v. 142, .3.

Proselyte. From Προσηλυτος, a stranger, or foreigner; one who is come from his own people and country to sojourn with another.

[According to the bishop of Lincoln's idea, proselytes were those, and those only, who took upon

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 10—.2. Christians may seek to be great; but not as exercising lordly power: it is as abounding in service to the servants of God. They may seek for honour, and glory, and immortality, but it is as being willing to take the lowest place among men, in order that God may be exalted.

[13 ver. Let us know our own unworthiness, so as to be willing to enter the kingdom of God upon the terms of free grace. To all such the kingdom is freely offered. Let us beware of those who proudly pretend to have exclusive possession of the keys: who, like their Jewish predecessors, neither go in themselves, nor allow others to enter.

[15 ver. Let us not be desirous of getting dominion

MATT. xxiii. 16—22.

16 Woe unto-you, ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall-swear by the temple, it-is 17 nothing; but whosoever shall-swear by the gold of-the temple, he-is-a-debtor! Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?
18 And, Whosoever shall-swear by the altar, it-is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the 19 gift that is upon it, he-is-guilty ὀφείλει.[a] Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, 20 the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift? Whoso therefore shall-swear by the altar, 21 sweareth by it, and by all-things thereon. And whoso shall-swear by the temple, 22 sweareth by it, and by him that-dwelleth therein. And he that-shall-swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that-sitteth thereon.

[a] Marg. 'He is a debtor;' the same word as is so translated, ver. 16.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

our own will, but seek to be ourselves made after the mind of God, Is. lxiv. 8; Eph. ii. 10—It is a people formed by and for himself, that he will bless, Is. xliii. 7, 21—as in the third beatitude, Mt. v. 5.

Mt. xxiii. 16. Woe, &c.—Contrast with the fourth beatitude, ch. v. 6, § 19, p. 120, 'Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.'

blind guides, &c.*—Is. lvi. 10, 'His watchmen are blind: they are all ignorant.'—Mt. xv. 14, § 44, p. 9, 'blind leaders of the blind.'

swear, &c.*—see on ch. v. 33, .4, § 19, p. 126.

17. fools, &c. — Ps. xcii. 5, 6, 'Thy thoughts are very deep. A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this.'—Je. iv. 22, 'My people is foolish, they have not known me;' &c.—Rom. x. 3, 'They being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.'

19. the altar that sanctifieth—Ex. xxix. 37, 'Whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.'

21. dwelleth therein, &c.—1 Ki. viii. 13, 'A settled place for thee to abide in for ever.'—2 Chr. vi. 2, 'An house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.'—Ps. xxvi. 8, 'The place where thine honour dwelleth.'—cxxii. 13, 4, 'The LORD hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it.'

NOTES.

themselves the obligation of the whole Mosaic law, but retained that name till they were admitted into the congregation of the Lord, as adopted children. Gentiles were allowed to worship and offer sacrifices to the God of Israel in the outer court of the temple; and some of them, persuaded of the sole and universal sovereignty of the Lord Jehovah, might renounce idolatry without embracing the Mosaic law; but such persons never appear to be called proselytes in scripture, nor in any ancient christian writer. Dr. Lardner says, 'I do not believe that the notion of two sorts of Jewish proselytes can be found in any christian writer before the fourteenth century or later.' Dr. Jennings also observes, that this does not appear to be sufficient evidence in the Bible history of the existence of such proselytes of the gate as the rabbins mention; nor indeed of any who with propriety can be styled proselytes, except such as fully embraced the Jewish religion.]

[Mt. xxiii. 15. The child of hell. That is, one who from his character will surely fall into the punishment of hell.—See ver. 33, p. 319, infra. A Hebraism for an exceedingly wicked person, such as might claim hell for his mother, and the devil for his father. Persons, according to the Hebrew mode of speaking, being called the 'children,' or 'sons,' of that which marks their condition or character. Thus, in 1 Sa. xx. 31, and 2 Sa. xii. 5, the expression, which in the text of the English Bible is translated 'shall surely die,' stands in the original, 'is the son of death,' as is noted in the margin there; so also Jno. xvii. 12, § 87, Judas is called 'the son of perdition.' Dr. Lightfoot and others observe, that the proselytes were considered by the Jewish nation as the scabs of the church, and hindered the coming of the Messiah; and Justin Martyr says, that the proselytes did not only disbelieve Christ's doctrine, but were abundantly more blasphemous against him than the Jews themselves.]

16 In this and the six following verses Christ condemns the subtle distinctions of the Pharisees concerning oaths, and points out the sanctity and obligation of an oath.

Woe unto you, ye blind guides. He had previously styled them hypocrites, from their personal character; now he gives them another title, respecting their influence upon others.

Swear by the temple, it is nothing. That is, the oath may be violated with impunity.

The gold of the temple. There were in the temple many vessels made of gold; beside the golden candlestick; the doors and other parts of the temple were covered with gold, and there was gold in the treasury.

[The Jews had various forms of vows and oaths, but obligatory in different degrees. The Pharisees in their traditions established those oaths only to be binding which were sworn by God, or something immediately consecrated to him; and therefore did not maintain the obligation of those oaths made by the temple or altar, which had only a general consecration, but of those made by particular obligations and gifts, devoted to God by the voluntary piety of men; such as the gold on the temple, and the gift on the altar, to which they attached more peculiar sanctity. This our Saviour considers to be a pitiful deceit to frustrate the obligation of oaths. It is probable that, by increasing the presumed sanctity of the gifts offered in the temple, they had the object of making men more liberal in this way, and thus of deriving gain from their doctrine.]

The Jews had borrowed several profane oaths from the heathens, and provided the name of God was not expressly mentioned in them, they fancied that such oaths were not binding.

18. The gift that is upon it. The gift or offering made to God; so called because it was devoted or given to Him.

20. Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon. Not only by the gift, but by the holy fire, and the sacrifice; and above all, by that God to whom they belong; inasmuch as every oath by a creature is an implicit appeal to God.

21. Him that dwelleth therein. That is, God. The temple was his house, his dwelling. In the first, or Solomon's temple, he dwelt between the cherubims, in the most holy place. He manifested himself there by a visible symbol, the cloud of glory, resting on the mercy-seat, 1 Ki. viii. 10—31; Ps. lxxx. 1.

22. By heaven. Our Lord had before expressly forbidden all such oaths as these, ch. v. 34—6, § 19, p. 126; and he here shews it is vain to attempt to distinguish them from each other, as to their effects in binding the conscience.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

over their faith, but of leading them to faith in God: and let us, in the meantime, give them an example of that meek submission to his holy will, which becomes the children of God. Converts to a false religion not unfrequently become twofold more the children of hell than those who inherited the system from their fathers.]

[Mt. xxiii. 16—22. Let us hunger and thirst after righteousness; not after vain conceits, which can never satisfy the soul. Those who seek after cunning casuistry, and crafty equivocations, deceive their own souls. In place of being filled with true knowledge and wisdom, they are fools and blind: and blind and foolish must those be who follow them.]

MATT. xxiii. 23—.6.

23 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-pay-tithe-of mint and anise and cummin, and have-omitted the weightier matters of-the law, judgment, mercy, and 24 faith: these ought ye to-have-done, and not to-leave-the-other-undone. Ye blind guides, which strain-at διυλίζοντες a gnat, and swallow κατατίνοντες a camel.
25 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-make-clean the outside of-the cup and of-the platter, but within they-are-full of extortion ἐξ ἁρπαγῆς and excess 26 ἀκρασίας. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of-them may-be clean also.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 23. Woe, &c.—Contrast with the fifth beatitude, ch. v. 7, § 19, p. 121, 'Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.'

omitted . . . . judgment, mercy, &c.—Ho. iv. 1, 'No truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land.' —Jesus repeatedly refers to the Lord's requiring 'mercy, and not sacrifice,' Mt. ix. 13, § 36, p. 278; xii. 7, § 24, p. 190—Lu. xi. 42, § 62, p. 156, 'Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done,' &c.

25. Woe, &c.—Contrast with the sixth beatitude, ch. v. 8, § 19, p. 121, 'Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.'

26. cleanse, &c.—Pureness of heart is called for in Jerusalem, Je. iv. 14—in Israel, Eze. xviii. 31—and in all that would draw near to God, Ps. x. 22; xii. 14, 'holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord:'—Ja. iv. 8, 'Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.'

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiii. 23. Ye pay tithe. A popular commentator says, 'The law required the Jews to devote a tenth part of all their property to the support of the Levites, Nu. xviii. 20—4. Another tenth part they paid for the service of the sanctuary, commonly in cattle or grain: but where they lived far from the place of worship, they changed it to money, De. xiv. 22—.5. Besides these, there was to be every third year a tenth part given to the poor, to be eaten at their own dwellings, ver. 28, .9. So that nearly one-third of the property of the Jews was devoted to religious services by law.' This is evidently a mistake. All the passages quoted refer to the same tithe. The truth of the matter seems to be, the Israelites were to devote a tenth part of their income to religious purposes: the offerings made directly to the Lord in this way went to the Levites; who again gave a tenth of their income to the priests; whatever remained with the people, of the tithe, over and above what was expended in sacrifices, and in attending the festivals, was, at the end of three years, to be stored up in their several cities, in order to its distribution to the poor, the stranger, &c., as occasion required. The law was sufficiently burdensome without the monstrosity of a triple tithe.—See on Lu. xviii. 12, § 73, p. 217. It might as well be said that the Jews were given several weekly sabbaths to observe, because in one place God's example in resting the seventh day is given as the reason of keeping the commandment, and in another the reason assigned is, that men and cattle may rest.]

Of mint, &c. See on Lu. xi. 42, § 62, p. 156. A garden herb, in the original so called from its agreeable flavour. It was used to sprinkle the floors of their houses and synagogues, to produce a pleasant fragrance.

Anise. An annual umbelliferous plant, the seeds of which have an aromatic smell, a pleasant warm taste, and a carminative quality. But by ἄνηθον in this passage is meant the DILL. Our translators seem to have been first misled by a resemblance of the sound. No other versions have fallen into the mistake. The Greek of anise is ἔνισον; but of dill, ἄνηθον.

Cummin. This is an umbelliferous plant; in appearance resembling fennel, but smaller. Its seeds have a bitterish warm taste, accompanied with an aromatic flavour, not of the most agreeable kind. An essential oil is obtained from them by distillation.

The law did not oblige the Jews to give the tithe of this sort of herbs; it only required it of those things which could be comprehended under the name of income or revenue. But the Pharisees, desirous of distinguishing themselves by a more scrupulous and literal observance of the law than others, gave the tithes of mint, anise, and cummin. Christ did not discommend this exactness; but complained that, while they were so precise in these lesser matters, they neglected the more essential commandments of the law, and substituted observances, frivolous and insignificant, in the place of justice, mercy, and truth.

Judgment, mercy, and faith. The use of the tithe was threefold. It was to support the people when they went to learn judgment at the place appointed of the Lord; wherewith also were they to shew mercy to the poor, and kindness to the Levite; and a third part was to be expended in sacrifices, whereby they expressed their faith in God as being propitiated to them through that Great Atonement which was prefigured by the sacrifices under the law. From the sacrifices the ministering priests and Levites seem to have had their chief support.

24. Strain at a gnat. In the old English translation this is rendered, 'strain out a gnat,' and this is more conformable to the sense of the passage. Allusion is made to the custom which prevailed all over the East, of passing their wine and other liquors through a strainer, that no gnats or flies might get into the cup. Among the unclean animals, &c., the Jews reckoned flies; and on that account were particularly careful to strain their wine. The expression, to 'strain out a gnat and swallow a camel,' is evidently proverbial. The sense is this, 'Who carefully avoid the slightest transgressions of the ceremonial part of your religion; while, without scruple or remorse, ye commit the grossest offences against the moral and spiritual part of the law.'

25. The outside of the cup, &c. The allusion is to their traditions about washing their cups and pots and brazen vessels—see Mk. vii. 4, § 44, p. 4—which they strictly observed.

Within they are full, &c. There is here a blending of the comparison with the thing compared: the sense, withdrawing the figure, being, that their repasts are furnished by means of rapine and injustice.

[Full of extortion and excess. The meaning is, that though they took much pains to appear well, yet they obtained a living by extortion and wickedness, which were swallowed down without scruple. The censure is double [taking intemperance in the vulgar sense]. These miserable men procured unjustly what they used intemperately. No wonder tables so furnished proved a snare, as many find by sad experience. Thus luxury punishes fraud, while it feeds disease with the fruits of injustice. But intemperance, in the full sense, takes in not only all kinds of outward intemperance, particularly in eating and drinking, but all intemperate or immoderate desires, whether of honour, gain, or sensual pleasure.]

26. Cleanse first, &c. The sense is, Cleanse first the inward thoughts and dispositions of the heart,

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 23, .4. Let us earnestly seek to have a true discernment of the purpose of God, in what he has commanded; and we shall find that the great lesson which he teaches is, to shew mercy, having faith in Him, who is the Giver of every good gift.

[25, .6 ver. Let us seek to be pure in heart, if we would be vessels sanctified and made meet for the Master's use. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. And let us ever remember that this holiness does not proceed from any ceremonial washing.]

BLIND GUIDES ARE APT TO OCCUPY THEMSELVES WITH PUNCTILIOUS OBSERVANCES, TO THE NEGLECT OF THE GREAT SCOPE AND PURPOSE OF THE WHOLE; THEY TURN INTO VEXATION THAT WHICH WAS INTENDED FOR MERCY.

Matt. xxiii. 27—32.

27 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye-are-like-unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful ὡραῖοι outward, but are-within-full of-dead men's 28 bones, and of-all uncleanness. Even-so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto-men, but within ye-are full of-hypocrisy and iniquity.
29 Woe unto-you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye-build the tombs of-the 30 prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of-the righteous, and say, If we-had-been in the days of our fathers, we-would-not-have-been partakers-with them in the blood of-the 31 prophets. Wherefore ye-be-witnesses unto-yourselves, that ye-are the-children of-them
32 which-killed the prophets. Fill-ye-up then the measure of your fathers.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 27. Woe, &c.—Contrast with the seventh beatitude, ch. v. 9, § 19, p. 121, 'Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.'

whited sepulchres—Lu. xi. 44, § 62, p. 156, 'as graves which appear not,'—Ps. lv. 20, .1, 'He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace . . . . his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.'

29. Woe, &c.—Contrast with the eighth beatitude, ch. v. 10, § 19, p. 122, 'Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.'

31. the children of them which killed, &c—The same self-righteous spirit which led to boasting, as in ver. 30, was that which led their fathers to seek the lives of those that reproved them, Je. xxvi. 10, .1, &c. —The same spirit of idolatry which led their fathers to worship the serpent and other idols, now led themselves to expend upon the dwellings of the dead that which belonged to the living temples; which they not only disregarded, but sought to destroy.

32. Fill ye up, &c.—Abraham's descendants could not be given the land until the fourth generation, that so, by necessary consequence, the outward conduct may be clean also.—Comp. ch. xii. 33—5, § 31, p. 237. Our Lord seems here to give a flat contradiction to the pharisaic notion of baptismal regeneration. It is not by an outward washing of either the face, or even the whole body, that the heart is made clean; the heart is made clean through receiving the word in faith; and from thence proceeds the outward cleansing of the life.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiii. 27. Whited sepulchres. It was a Talmudic ordinance that sepulchres should be annually whitened before the month Adar (February and part of March). This seems to have been done in order to prevent persons from inadvertently approaching the tombs or grave-stones, and thus becoming unclean for seven days, Nu. xix. 16.

Sometimes the Jews buried their dead in fields, over whom the opulent and families of distinction raised superb and ostentatious monuments, on which they lavished great splendour and magnificence, and which they religiously maintained from time to time in their pristine beauty and glory. To this custom our blessed Lord alludes in this verse. The following extract from Dr. Shaw's Travels beautifully illustrates the passage. 'If we except a few persons who are buried within the precincts of the sanctuaries of their marabutts, the rest are carried out at a small distance from their cities and villages, where a great extent of ground is allotted for the purpose. Each family has a particular part of it walled in like a garden, where the bones of their ancestors have remained for many generations. In these enclosures the graves are all distinct and separated, each of them having a stone placed upright both at the head and feet, inscribed with the name and title (2 Ki. xxiii. 17) of the deceased; while the intermediate space is either planted with flowers, bordered with stones, or paved with tiles. The graves of the principal citizens are further distinguished by having cupolas or vaulted chambers, of three, four, or more square yards, built over them. These different sorts of tombs and sepulchres, with the very walls also of their respective cupolas and enclosures, are constantly kept clean, white-washed, and beautified, and continue to illustrate these expressions of our Saviour, where he compares the scribes, Pharisees, and hypocrites, to 'whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.'

But though the sepulchres of the rich were thus beautified, the graves of the poor were oftentimes so neglected, that if the stones by which they were marked happened to fall, they were not set up again, by which means the graves themselves did not appear; they were ἄδηλα, as St. Luke, ch. xi. 44, § 62, p. 156, expresses it, 'which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.'

29. Ye build the tombs of the prophets, &c. It was the eulogy of a rabbi by one of his disciples, that he had adorned the sepulchres of Adam and of Abraham. Josephus informs us that Herod most splendidly repaired the sepulchre of David. And we are also told that, in the time of St. Jerome, there were many tombs of the holy men of the Old Testament remaining in Judæa, which undoubtedly had been erected or rebuilt long after their death. Concerning this custom, see 1 Mac. xiii. 27—.9.

[30. If we had been in the days of our fathers. They professed exceedingly to disapprove the conduct of their predecessors, and avowed that, had they then lived, they would not have concurred therein. Yet they hated the doctrines and precepts which the prophets taught; and rejected with determined scorn and enmity the Messiah whom they predicted; nay, they were even at that time plotting his death! In fact, the dead prophets no longer gave offence to their pride, and interfered with their favourite sins; and it increased their reputation and aided their hypocrisy to appear as their friends; but Christ and his disciples greatly offended and exposed them.]

31. Ye be witnesses unto yourselves. μαρτυρεῖτε ἑαυτοῖς, 'ye bear testimony against yourselves.'—Bloomf.

Thus we see the inferential force of ἐστε, which is as follows:—So then [by this conduct, so similar to that of your fathers], ye bear testimony respecting yourselves, that ye are true sons of your fathers, who murdered the prophets, as it is said, ver. 37, p. 320.

32. Fill ye up, &c. πληρώσατε τὸ μέτρον, v. w. 4. 'This may, with many of the best commentators, ancient

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiii. 27, .8. Let us be living temples, in which the God of peace may be seen manifesting his reconciling grace to men. Not pestiferous charnel houses, full of uncleanness; and the fairer the exterior, the more dangerous. Let not ours be the peace of death, which is deceitful; but the peace enjoyed and manifested by the children of the living God.]

[29—31 ver. Let us rather be followers of those who were persecuted for righteousness' sake, than be found with those who proudly boast of the saints, and garnish their sepulchres; manifesting the same self-righteousness, and tendency to creature worship, which led their fathers to resist the reproofs of God's messengers, and bow down to the works of their own hands. By their very conduct, meant for glorification of the martyrs, they bear witness that they are truly the descendants of those that shed their blood.]

32 ver. So far from a people taking encouragement to continue in sin, because of the previous longsuffering of God, they ought to be more alarmed, lest judgment, long delayed, should be now the nearer and should also be the heavier when it comes.

33 ver. See margin.

MATT. xxiii. 33—.5.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation γεννηματα of-vipers, how can-ye-escape the damnation 34 κρισεως of hell? Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise-men, and scribes: and some of them ye-shall-kill and crucify; and some of them shall-ye-scourge 35 in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city: that upon you may-come all the-righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

'for the iniquity of the Amorites . . not yet full,' Ge. xv. 16—The whole seed of Ephraim, because of their rebellion against God, having been cast out, the Lord avowed his determination to do the same with the Jews, and commanded the prophet not to pray for them, for he would not hear, Je. vii. 16—2 Chr. xxxvi. 16, 'They mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy.'—Stephen witnessed of the Jews, Ac. vii. 51, 'Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye.'—And they did to him, ver. 57, .8, as their fathers had done to Zechariah, 2 Chr. xxiv. 21—The climax of their guilt appears to have been the forbidding to preach the gospel unto the Gentiles, that they might be saved, 1 Th. ii. 16, 'Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

Mt. xxiii. 33. generation of vipers—Is. i. 4, 'Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger,'—so the Baptist had addressed them, Mt. iii. 7, § 7, p. 52, 'O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?'—so Jesus had before characterized them, Jno. viii. 44, 'Ye are of your father the devil,' &c.—see Paul's summary of the witness of Moses and the prophets, with regard to them, Rom. iii. 12—.9.

how can ye escape, &c.—They could escape only by taking warning at the mouths of the messengers, who, at the hazard of their lives, were about to deliver unto them the Lord's last offers of mercy, Lu. xiii. 8, 9, § 64, p. 174.

damnation of hell—see the awful curse of Gehenna, denounced upon Jerusalem, Je. xix. 11, 'Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again:'—comp. with Ps. ii. 9; Is. xxx. 8—14, p. (88); Je. xiii. 12—.4; xix. 12, 'Thus will I do unto this place, saith the Lord, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet:'—Is. lxvi. 24, 'Their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.'

34. Wherefore, &c.—Either for mercy, as directing to the one way of escape from the wrath to come, see on ver. 33, and comp. Ac. ii. 38—40; iv. 12: or for judgment, as filling up the measure of their fathers, ver. 32, supra—The rejection of the offers of mercy, and the murder of the messengers, would aggravate their guilt, and hasten their impending doom—see on ver. 35, .6, infra.

I send, &c.—Jno. xx. 21, § 95, p. 499, 'As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.'

prophets—as on the day of Pentecost, Ac. ii. 4—11—When also Peter opened up unto them the words of their own prophets, ver. 16, &c.—and afterwards, iii. 13—26.

wise men—as Stephen, 'full of faith and power.'—Ac. vi. 8; ver. 10, 'They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.'

scribes—such as Matthew himself, whose gospel appears to have been written primarily for the Hebrews — also the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews, who wrote while the ceremonial law was yet remaining, He. vii. 5, 28; viii. 3—5; but was ready to vanish away, ver. 13—He expounded to them the gospel import of their sacrifices, ix.; as pointing to the one sacrifice for sins, x. 11—.4; and powerfully warned the Jewish Christians against declining from the one way of escape, from the fiery indignation, ver. 26—31.

of them ye shall kill, &c.—Ac. vii. 59, 60, 'They stoned Stephen, calling upon . . . . and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. . . . Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.'

scourge, &c.—Paul was an example of the truth of this prediction, both as punishing others, Ac. xxvi. 10, .1, and being himself scourged, 2 Co. xi. 24, 'Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one.'

from city to city—see again as to Saul the persecutor, Ac. ix. 1, 2—and Paul the apostle, xiii. 45, 50; xiv. 5, 6, 19, 20, &c.

35. upon you may come—1 Th. ii. 16, 'For the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.'

righteous blood—rendered so through Jesus Christ, the righteous; otherwise, Rom. iii. 10, 'There is none righteous, no, not one:'

righteous Abel—He. xi. 4, 'By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh.' [Marg. is yet spoken of.]—With regard to the blood of Abel, God said to Cain, Ge. iv. 10—.2, 'The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground. And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand; . . . . a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.'—Comp. the foregoing curse upon Cain with the case of the Jews, after having refused Him that speaketh, He. xii. 24, .5, .9—1 Jno. iii. 11, .2, This is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore and modern, be accounted an ironical permission, often occurring in scripture; such as indignantly hearas the persons addressed to experience the consequences of their wilfulness, as if he had said, "I contend with you no longer, I leave you to yourselves."'—Bens.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiii. 33. Serpents . . . . generation of vipers. Their subtilty was like that of the serpent.

Damnation of hell. See on ch. v. 22, § 19, p. 124.

[34. Wherefore, behold, I send unto you, &c. We have a remarkable instance of our Lord's assuming Divine authority in this his declaration, that the 'prophets, and wise men, and scribes,' who were to be sent to the unbelieving Jews, would be sent by him. —Comp. Lu. xi. 49, § 62, p. 157, where this declaration is recorded as proceeding from the 'wisdom of God.']

[Prophets, and wise men. Our Lord here applies to his apostles and their successors the titles given by the Jews to their prophets and doctors; intimating that his messengers, so called in Lu. xi. 49, ib., would be as entitled to the appellation προφήτας (in the sense, Divine legates and inspired interpreters of the will of God) as were the prophets of old; and would likewise be entitled to the appellations σοφούς, חכמים, and γραμματεῖς, ספרים, as being thoroughly conversant in the scriptures and Divine learning.]

Some of them ye shall kill, &c. See Script. Illus.

35. That upon you may come . . . . upon the earth. 'Επὶ τῆς γῆς, upon this land; meaning probably the land of Judæa; for thus the word is often to be understood. The national punishment of all the innocent blood that had been shed in the land, from the

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiii. 34. Let us not be boastful because to us the word of God hath been more especially sent, as it was at first unto the Jews. Let us rather consider our greater responsibility.]

Let the true followers of Christ lay their account with meeting the most bitter and persevering persecution from the world, especially under the pretence of zeal for religion.

MATT. xxiii. 36—.8.

blood of-Zacharias son of-Barachias, whom ye-slew between the temple and the altar.
36 Verily I-say unto-you, All these-things shall-come upon this generation επι την γενεαν 37 ταυτην. O-Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which-are-sent unto thee, how-often would-I have-gathered-thy children-together, even-38 as a-hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye-would not! Behold, your slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiii. 35. Zacharias son of, &c.—spoken of, 2 Chr. xxiv. 20.—2—Zacharias, a prophet to the Jews, after the return from Babylon, appears to have been given the name of the former Zechariah, who prophesied previous to the captivity—comp. Zec. i. 1—6, with 2 Chr. xxiv. 19, 20.

Zacharias ('Memorial or remembrance of the Lord')—was also the name of the father of the Baptist; he, too, was of the priesthood, Lu. i. 5, § 1, p. 2, and appears to have had his name from an ancestor, and it was expected he would transmit the same to his posterity, ver. 59—61, § 3, p. 15; but the name which by Divine appointment was given to his son, John ('Grace of the Lord'), was expressive of that grace the gospel brings to those who, in truth, receive Him; to whom the Levitical sacrifices pointed, Jno. i. 15—7, 29, §§ 7, 10, pp. 48, 59, 'The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.'—Je. xxxi. 34, 'I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.'—He. viii. 12—To those who have ears to hear, the blood of Jesus speaketh better things than the blood either of Abel or of Zechariah; their blood cried for vengeance, but his speaketh peace, xiii. 20, 1—It, 1 Jno. i. 7, 'cleanseth us from all sin.'

Barachias ('Blessed of the Lord')—Aaron and his sons were to bless the children of Israel, saying, 'The Lord bless thee, and keep thee:' &c., Nu. vi. 24—.6—The father of Zechariah, Jehoiada, the high-priest, might well be called Blessed of the Lord—2 Chr. xxiv. 16, 'And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.'

slew, &c.—In addition to other prophetic warnings, to which 'they would not give ear,' 2 Chr. xxiv. 19; ver. 20—2, 'The Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people [probably in the place where his father had pronounced the priestly benediction], and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper?

because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath also forsaken you. 21, And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the Lord. 22, Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son. And when he died, he said, The Lord look upon it, and require it.'—And the Lord did require it, ver. 23—5; xxxvi. 15—.9; and was now again to remember it against Jerusalem, Mt. xxiv. 32—.6, § 86, p. 339.

36. All these things, &c.—The curse for shedding the blood of righteous Abel, whereby Cain was made 'a fugitive and a vagabond,' Ge. iv. 11, 2—and the requiring of the blood of Zechariah, the seed of the blessed of the Lord, 2 Chr. xxiv. 22, speedily ensued, ver. 23—5, and in due time brought destruction upon the city and the temple, xxxvi. 17—.9.

generation—The word here used is in the original different from that translated generation in ver. 33, and is the same with that used, Lu. i. 48, § 2, p. 11—It is evidently meant, that the things predicted would happen during the ordinary lifetime of the men then living, so that some of them might see the temple and city destroyed, and the Jews made fugitives and vagabonds; all which came to pass within forty years after, see Mt. xxiv. 34, § 86, p. 340.

37—.9. O Jerusalem, &c.—These words were before spoken in Galilee, upon the occasion of Jesus being told to depart thence, lest Herod should kill him, Lu. xiii. 34, .5, § 66, p. 172—There is evidently an allusion to the meaning of the name (The seeing of peace) both in xix. 42, § 83, p. 264, and here, ver. 39.

sent unto thee, &c.—Not only did she kill the prophets which forewarned of the danger, but stoned the ambassadors of peace, afterwards sent with offers of pardon and reconciliation—such were the apostles, 2 Co. v. 20—see on ver. 34, p. 340.

gathered thy children, &c.—see on Lu. xiii. 34, § 66, p. 179.

ye would not!—Jesus said to the Jews, Jno. v. 40, § 23, p. 180, 'Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.'—And as to their brethren, 'all the blood of Abel, to the blood of Zechariah, appears to have been visited upon that generation, so extreme were the misery and sufferings endured by the Jews during the siege and destruction of Jerusalem.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiii. 35. Zacharias son of Barachias. There can be no doubt but that this is the Zechariah mentioned in 2 Chr. xxiv. 19—21, particularly as he is the last of the prophets whose death is mentioned in the Old Testament. It is true that he is stated in Chronicles to be the son of Jehoiada; but against this objection it is alleged, that Barachias and Jehoiada are names of a similar import, and that among the Jews it was not unusual for the same person to bear two names.]

'All the martyrs from Abel to Zechariah,' seems to have been a proverb: and it might naturally arise from observing that Abel was the first, and Zechariah, in Chronicles, the last, eminently good men, of whose murder the scripture speaks.

The altar. θυσιαστηριον, 'the altar for holocausts,' which stood in the court of the priests, before the entrance of the ναος.

[36. All these things shall come upon this generation. This expression is not to be interpreted as implying that those individual crimes, which happened before the time of the people then living, would be laid to their charge; but that, with every species of cruelty, oppression, and murder, which had been exemplified in former ages, they of that age would be found chargeable; inasmuch as they had permitted no kind of wickedness to be peculiar to those who had preceded them, but had carefully imitated, and even exceeded, all the most atrocious deeds of their ancestors from the beginning of the world. There is no hyperbole in the representation. The account given of them by Josephus, who was no Christian, but one of themselves, shews in the strongest light how justly they are here characterised by our Lord.—See ch. xxiv. 12, § 86, p. 329. The war between the Romans and the Jews, which lasted five years, and ended with the taking and destruction of Jerusalem, began about thirty-three years after the giving of this warning by our Lord. The sufferings of the Jews, both during the war, and at its termination, are unequalled in the history of nations.—See Josephus, de Bell. Jud.]

37. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, &c. 'Our Lord here, I apprehend, turns from the scribes and Pharisees to the people at large, the οι ἁγιοι mentioned at ch. xxiii. 1.'—Bloomf.—See on Lu. xiii. 34, § 66, p. 179.

[Sent unto thee. προς αὐτην, 'unto her.' An Eastern mode of construction to use the third pronoun, after the relative, following a first or second person. It prevails in Heb. Arab. Syr.]

As a hen, &c. See on ibid. The metaphor which

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiii. 35, .6. When we may see so plainly, upon the unbelieving Jews, from that very generation downward, to our own day, the curse of Cain, who was made a fugitive and a vagabond on the earth; and the judgment upon the murderers of Zechariah, on whose account Judah and Jerusalem were given into the hands of their enemies, we may well learn to stand in awe, knowing that God doth not threaten even his most favoured people in vain.]

37 ver. Let not a sense of past sin, however grievous, prevent men from taking refuge in Christ, the only covert from the wrath to come: but they may well dread the evil of continued impenitence.

MATT. xxiii. 39.

39 house is-left unto-you desolate ερημος. For I-say unto-you, Ye-shall-not-see me henceforth απ' αρτι, till ye-shall-say, Blessed is he that-cometh in the-name-of-the-Lord.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

house of Israel wholly,' so far from desiring for them that salvation for which Jesus was about to lay down his life, the inhabitants of Jerusalem had said unto them, Exe. xi. 15, 'Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this land given in possession.'—The Lord's will, however, was very different from theirs; he meant to gather the outcasts unto himself, 'as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come,' ver. 16—And when for this purpose the Lord sent forth his word, as Mt. xxviii. 19, 20, § 96, pp. 363, .4, the Jews would if possible have prevented the word of reconciliation being preached to the outcasts, 1 Th. ii. 16—see ver. 32—nay, even those Jews who were willing to receive salvation for themselves, had, with very great difficulty, their hearts enlarged to the purpose of God with regard to the Gentiles—Ac. xi. 19, 'They which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled . . . preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.'—Few indeed could enter into the spirit of the inquiry made by the Lord, in the ears of Jerusalem, Je. xiii. 20, 'Where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock?' —27, 'Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! wilt thou not be made clean? when shall it once be?'

Mt. xxiii. 38. your house, &c.—As if in allusion to the words of Israel, when they separated from Judah, 1 Ki. xii. 16, 'What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.'—The Jews had repeatedly questioned the right of the Son of God to exercise authority in the temple, as being his Father's house, Jno. ii. 16, 17, & § 12, p. 81; Mt. xxi. 12, 23, §§ 83, .4, pp. 276, .82, and now he left it to them, as their house: it was desolate, deserted not only by the people, but also by the God of Israel: He, the King, upon his throne, the mercy-seat over the ark of the covenant, had been accustomed to give audience to the high priest, as bearing upon his shoulders and his heart, the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, Ex. xxviii. 11, .2, 21, .9, 30; who were now scattered abroad, 2 Ki. xvii. 18—23; Ja. i. 1, and to appearance lost, but whom the Redeemer of Israel had come to seek and to save, Eze. xxxiv. 6, 11—.5—The glory which had filled the house was now departing, as representing which, Jesus, as the conclusion of the present address, Mt. xxiv. 1, § 86, p. 323, 'went out, and departed from the temple?'—They were now to be left to reap the fruit of their own crafty counsel, when they said, Jno. xi. 48, § 58, p. 132, 'If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.' —They chose 'the overspreading of abominations' that were to 'make desolate,' Da. ix. 27; Mt. xxiv. 15, § 86, p. 330, in place of the covering wings of Jehovah, Ps. xvii 8; lvii. 1; xci. 1, 4—They rejected the proffered protection of the Prince of Peace, Mt. xxiii. 37, p. 320, supra; and now were the things belonging to their peace to be taken away, Lu. xix. 42, § 82, p. 264.

39. Ye shall not see, &c.—see on Lu. xiii. 35, § 66.

till ye shall say, &c.—Not until they are waiting for God's 'Son from heaven,' 1 Th. i. 10, found among those looking for Him to 'appear the second time without sin unto salvation,' He. ix. 28, can the Jews see peace—see how Peter charges them with their guilt, Ac. iii. 13—.8, and presents the terms of pardon and peace, ver. 19—21, with the awful threatening, ver. 22—4, and again the offer of the common salvation, ver. 25, .6.

Blessed is he that cometh, &c.—Ps. cxviii. 26—Our Lord seems here to allude to the conduct of the Pharisees, Lu. xix. 39, § 82, p. 263, and of the chief priests and scribes, Mt. xxi. 15, .6, § ib., p. 266—Until they repented—until the cry which they had forbid others to make was found in the mouth of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, it should see him no more—Mal. iii. 1, 2, 'Behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming?'—He. x. 37, 'Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.'—Rev. iii. 20, 'Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.'—xxii. 20, 'He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.'

NOTES.

our Lord uses here is a very beautiful one. When the hen sees a beast of prey coming, she makes a noise to assemble her chickens, that she may cover them with her wings from the danger. The Roman eagle is about to fall upon the Jewish state; nothing can prevent this but their conversion to God through Christ. Jesus cries throughout the land, publishing the gospel of reconciliation; they would not assemble, and the Roman eagle came and destroyed them.

Mt. xxiii. 37. Ye would not! For more than two thousand years these people engrossed the peculiar regard of the most beneficent Providence; and during the three years of our Lord's ministry, his preaching and miracles had but one aim—the salvation of this disobedient people. For their sakes, he who was rich became poor, that they through his poverty might be rich. For their sakes he made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

38. Behold, your house, &c. O οἶκος, the temple. This is certainly what is meant. It was once the Lord's temple, God's own house; but now he says, your temple, or house, to intimate that God had abandoned it.—See on ver. 21, p. 316.

[39. Ye shall not see me henceforth. Ἀπ' ἄρτι here, as in some other places, signifies not 'henceforth,' but 'after a while,' i. e., after a little time is past, after my ascension, ye shall not see me till I return to take vengeance in the direful calamities which are about to come upon this generation. Ἀπ' ἄρτι is used in this sense, Jno. i. 51, § 10, p. 73, referring to Ac. i. 9. It is also in the sense of, 'not a little while,' Jno. xiv. 19, and xvi. 16, § 87, pp. 383, 395; so Mt. xxvi. 64, § 89, p. 429. In Jno. xiii. 19; xiv. 7, § 87, pp. 370, 381, it seems to be only an expletive, like ἄρτι or νῦν.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxiii. 39. Jerusalem can never see peace, until she seek to be at peace with God in Christ, receiving with thankful welcome the messengers of peace. We should do good to the Jews, as we have opportunity; but we can never expect for them abiding peace and prosperity while they remain in rebellion against their rightful Sovereign, in whom alone there is salvation for them and for us. The greatest kindness we can shew them is, perseveringly to approach them in the name of the Lord, beseeching them to be reconciled unto God, through the blood which was shed upon Calvary.]

[Mt. xxiii. From the third to the thirtieth verse is exposed everything that commonly passes in the world for religion, wherehy the pretenders to it keep both themselves and others from entering into the kingdom of God; from attaining, or even seeking after those tempers in which alone true Christianity consists. As, I. Punctuality in attending on public and private prayer, ver. 4—14. II. Zeal to make proselytes to our opinion or communion, though they have less of the spirit of religion than before. ver. 15. III. A superstitious reverence for consecrated places or things, ver. 16—22. IV. A scrupulous exactness in little observances, though with the neglect of justice, mercy, and faith, ver. 23, .4. V. A nice cautiousness to cleanse the outward behaviour, and especially of ceremonial observances, to the neglect of inward purity, ver. 25, .6—VI. A specious face of virtue and piety, covering hypocrisy and villany, ver. 27, .8. VII. A professed veneration for all good men, except those among whom they live, ver. 29, 30.]

This most eloquent, most appalling, and terrible of all discourses ever delivered to mortals, was pronounced in the temple, in the presence of multitudes. Never was there more faithful dealing, more terrible reproof, more profound knowledge of the workings of hypocrisy, or more skill in detecting the concealments of sin. This was the last of Christ's public discourses; and it is a most solemn summary of all that he ever had said, or had to say, of a wicked and hypocritical generation.

O, HOW AMAZING IS THE FOLLY OF THE WICKED, WHO WEARY OUT THE FORBEARANCE OF GOD, AND PERISH IN THEIR SINS!

THE RUIN OF THE JEWS WAS NOT FROM THE FAILURE OF CHRIST'S MERIT, BUT FROM THEIR OBSTINATE UNBELIEF.

SECTION 86.—(G. 78—81.)—[Lessons 82—.4.*]—AS JESUS IS LEAVING THE TEMPLE, ONE OF HIS DISCIPLES OBSERVES TO HIM UPON THE BUILDINGS. JESUS' REPLY. THE PROPHECY UPON MOUNT OLIVET, DELIVERED TO FOUR OF THE APOSTLES, PETER AND ANDREW, JAMES AND JOHN. THE PARABLES OF THE SERVANT WHO BEAT HIS FELLOWS, OF THE TEN VIRGINS, OF THE TALENTS, AND OF THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS, DESCRIBING THE JUDGMENT OF THE NATIONS. JESUS REFERS TO THE NEARNESS OF THE PASSOVER. THE COUNCIL OF THE JEWS DELIBERATE ON THE MODE OF APPREHENDING JESUS. JUDAS ISCARIOT COVENANTS WITH THEM TO BETRAY HIM. THE LAST TWO DAYS OF JESUS' MINISTRY. —Matt. xxiv. 1—xxvi. 1—5, 14—.6. Mark xiii. 1—xiv. 1, 2, 10, .1. Luke xxi. 5—xxii. 1—6. —See Addenda, pp. 358—.61.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxiv. 1. Mk. xiii. 1. Lu. xxi. 5. Jesus having plainly intimated that the national guilt, which had been accumulating for ages, was to be visited upon that very generation, when Jerusalem would be peculiarly exposed to judgment, and the temple be made desolate, as having been deprived of the Divine presence; he now, as if expressing in act what he had declared in word, departs from the temple. While he is departing, his disciples attempt to draw his attention to the strength and beauty of the buildings, and the costly gifts wherewith the temple was adorned. Was it possible a place so glorious, and which he had but recently claimed as his Father's house, was about to be abandoned to the spoiler?

— xxiv. 2. — xiii. 2. — xxi. 6. Jesus assures his disciples that all which they now admiringly contemplate, is to be so overwhelmed, that 'there shall not be left one stone upon another.'

— xxiv. 3. — xiii. 3, 4. — xxi. 7. As Jesus is sitting 'upon the mount of Olives over against the temple,' four of his disciples come to him privately, desiring to be more particularly informed concerning those astonishing changes of which he had spoken. Their inquiries seem to be these—

First. 'When shall these things be?'

Second. 'What shall be the sign of thy coming'?

Third. 'And of the end of the world?'

In order to understand the answers that follow, it is necessary to understand the questions proposed. 'The disciples, in asking, 'When shall these things be?' referred of course to the things which Jesus had spoken respecting the desolation of the temple, and destruction of Jerusalem.† To the same things our Lord refers, when he answers the question, Mt. xxiv. 32—.5, p. 338.

When they asked the SECOND question, 'What shall be the sign of thy coming'? we can hardly suppose them to inquire respecting what is commonly understood by our Lord's Second Advent; for as yet they do not seem to have apprehended what he had told them regarding his departure, and could therefore have scarcely asked concerning his return; but it was natural for them to ask, What is to be the sign of thy presence? How may men know where to gather together unto thee, if the temple, the great central point for the nation, be removed? Our Lord, in answering this question, speaks of signs of various kinds—forewarning them of the ensigns they were to flee from or avoid; and at length, speaking of the sign of the Son of man in heaven, when the great gathering together of the elect by his angels will take place, Mt. xxiv. 15—31, p. 330. ‡

— xxiv. 4—6. — xiii. 5—7. — xxi. 8, 9. Our Lord, in replying to his disciples, commences with warning against those who, coming in his name, will preach only themselves; there will be 'wars and rumours of wars:' 'but the end is not yet.'

— xxiv. 7, 8. — xiii. 8. — xxi. 10, .1. The judgments begin to thicken; wars, famines, pestilences, earthquakes, and fearful sights. The end is now more near, but still these are [only] the beginnings of sorrows.'

Mt. xxiv. 9. Mk. xiii. 9—11. Lu. xxi. 12—.5. Now, although their countrymen, the Jews, may have lost the power to persecute, they, as being Christians, 'shall be hated of all nations.' Their being brought before kings and rulers will, however, be overruled for good; and they are to leave their defence entirely in the hands of God, who will give them 'a mouth and wisdom, which all' their 'adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.'

— xxiv. 10—4. — xiii. 12, .3. — xxi. 16—.9. The disciples are warned with regard to worse enemies than those without: brethren will become offended; will betray and hate one another, persecuting even unto death their nearest relatives. They are also to be tempted by false prophets, who 'shall deceive many': also, by abounding iniquity, on account of which 'the love of many shall wax cold.' By these trials of their faith, hope, and charity, their patience might be tried to the utmost; but he who throughout them all continues faithful, will, in the morning of the resurrection, be found to have lost nothing; he will be infinitely a gainer. And when 'this gospel of the kingdom shall' have been 'preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; . . . . then shall the end come.'

— xxiv. 15—31. — xiii. 14—27. — xxi. 20—.8. OUR LORD NOW PROCEEDS TO SPEAK OF THE SECOND POINT OF INQUIRY—THE SIGN OF HIS PRESENCE; THAT WHEREBY IT SHOULD BE KNOWN WHERE TO GATHER TOGETHER UNTO HIM.

— xxiv. 15—22. — xiii. 14—20. — xxi. 20—.3. First, he warns them of the woe to be experienced by those found in Jerusalem when given her choice, as seeking rest under the Romans, to the rejection of Him who would have gathered her children into peace. The approach of their chosen protector, the Roman eagle, was to be the sign of dispersion, instant, speedy, and universal;—of tribulation unexampled, and destruction so severe, as that, were it to continue, the whole race would be extirpated: but for the sake of his chosen people God will shorten the days.

———— — xxi. 24. Jesus foretells that the Jews will be destroyed, and carried captive from off the land, and Jerusalem be trodden under foot of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled.

— xxiv. 23, .4. — xiii. 21, .2. ———— Jesus warns against being deceived by false reports of the presence of Christ here or there; and tells, there would be 'false Christs, and false prophets,' shewing great signs and wonders, calculated to deceive, if possible, 'the very elect.'

— xxiv. 25—.8. — xiii. 23. ———— The disciples of Christ being forewarned, are not to be deceived by any pretended gathering together unto him, whether in the open country or in the secret chamber:—First. Because his coming will be as the lightning, shining from the east even unto the west.

* Lesson 82, in the 'System of Graduated Simultaneous Instruction,' is Mt. xxiv. 1—44; Mk. xiii. 1—37; Lu. xxi. 5—36.

† 'The answer to this question is contained between ver. 4 and ver. 14, inclusive, in St. Matthew.'—Greswell.

‡ 'The remaining part of this second question, whether actually put, and actually intended by the inquirers, as a third, is yet answered by our Lord as an independent question, from ver. 29—31, inclusive.'—Ibid.—See foot notes, pp. 331, .6, infra.

GIVE GLORY TO THE LORD YOUR GOD, BEFORE HE CAUSE DARKNESS, AND BEFORE YOUR FEET STUMBLE UPON THE DARK MOUNTAINS, AND, WHILE YE LOOK FOR LIGHT, HE TURN IT INTO THE SHADOW OF DEATH, AND MAKE IT GROSS DARKNESS.—Jer. xiii. 16.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS—continued.

Second. Because every gathering together of the Jews would only be unto a further destruction; wherever the body of them is found, the eagles will also be gathered together to devour.

Mt. xxiv. 29. Mk. xiii. 24, .5. Lu. xxi. 25, .6. Jesus speaks of the fearful signs which are to succeed the great tribulation.

— xxiv. 30. ——— ——— 'Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: . . . then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn,' — xxiv. 30. — xiii. 26. — xxi. 27. Then 'they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven,' &c.

— xxiv. 31. — xiii. 27. ——— By the agency of the angels, and 'with a great sound of a trumpet,' his redeemed will be gathered together 'from the four winds,' and 'from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.'

——— ——— — xxi. 28. Heavy and grievous as are the evils foretold, they will be overruled for good, as giving an assurance that all else predicted will take place, even unto the full development of our redemption in Christ.

— xxiv. 32, .3. — xiii. 28, .9. — xxi. 29–31. As from the budding of the fig tree it may be known that summer is approaching, so from the coming upon Jerusalem of the judgment threatened, we may be well assured that all else will take place according as our Lord has foretold.

— xxiv. 34, .5. — xiii. 30, .1. — xxi. 32, .3. The things predicted respecting the destruction of the temple, the fulfilment of which is to give, to all generations, a token of the truthfulness of God, Jesus assures his disciples will take place ere the present generation have left the earth.

——— ——— — xxi. 34–6. A warning is given to the followers of Jesus, not at any time to be betrayed into dreamy listlessness by the pleasures of life, or by prevailing example: it is needful that thes ever watch and pray, that they may escape all 'these things,' and 'stand before the Son of man.'

Mt. xxiv. 36–9. Mk. xiii. 32, .3. Lu. xxi. — Having clearly predicted the time of the destruction of the temple, &c.—comp. Mt. xxiii. 36, § 85, p. 320; xxiv. 1, 2. and the first question of the disciples, ver. 3, with ver. 34—our Lord now proceeds to speak of another time, the day of his coming. The hour of his appearing is not made known unto men. It is in the keeping of the Father, and will come upon the world like the flood in the days of Noah. Many will have their hearts and their hands fully occupied with the business and cares of the present life, and be altogether unprepared for the presence of the Son of man.

— xxiv. 40–2. ——— ——— At the Second Advent of Christ there will be in the same field, and in the same domestic employment, those of whom one shall be taken, and another left.

——— — xiii. 34–6. ——— Our Lord likens himself to a man taking a far journey, after giving 'authority to his servants, and to every man his work.' — xxiv. 43. ——— ——— They are by the prophetic word faithfully forewarned of all coming danger; and are to have that care for the house of their Lord, as he himself would, were he personally present.

— xxiv. 44. — xiii. 37. ——— Again they are warned to be ready; 'for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.' The porter was particularly admonished to watch, but none are exempted from this duty. 'What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.'

No. 86.—(G. 78.)—[Lesson 82.]—As Jesus is leaving the temple, one of his disciples observes to him upon the buildings. Jesus' reply. The prophecy upon mount Olivet, delivered to four of the apostles, Peter and Andrew, James and John. On the mount of Olives.

Matt. xxiv. 1—44.	Mark xiii. 1—37. (Ch. xii. 44, § lxxxv. p. 309.)	Luke xxi. 5—36. (Ch. xxi. 4, § lxxxv. p. 309.)
1 [a]And Jesus went-out, and departed from the temple; [b] and [c]his disciples came-to him for to-shew him the buildings of-the temple. [d]	1 [b]And as-he-went-out [e] of the temple, [e] one of his disciples saith unto-him, Master, see what-manner-of stones and what buildings are here!	[d]And as-some-spake 5 of the temple, how it-was-adorned with-goodly stones and gifts [ανατηματσι,] [e]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 1. departed, &c.—Our Saviour thus gave in action, a farther expression of the sentence he had pronounced in word, ch. xxiii. 38, § 85, p. 320—so when he had spoken of the Jews being left in darkness, Jno. xii. 36, § 82, p. 269, he 'departed, and did hide himself from them.' — Comp. with Je. xiii. 15—.7.

to shew him, &c.—He had just before predicted that the desolation of the temple should take place in that very generation, ch. xxiii. 36—.8, § 85, p. 320.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 1. To shew him the buildings of the temple. That is, to draw his attention to the magnitude, the splendour, the apparent solidity and stability of that magnificent structure.—See § 1, p. 8, ADDENDA, 'The temple,' and § 82, p. 270.

[Mk. xiii. 1. What manner of stones. 'These were indeed stupendous; in proof of which the commentators adduce Josephus, Ant. xv. 11, 3; Bell. v. 5, 6; whence it appears that the stones of the temple were some of them forty-five cubits in length, five in depth, and six in breadth. It is strange, however, they did not see that the latter account, as far as it regards the dimensions of the stones, makes the former one seem almost incredible. For it represents them as only about twenty-five cubits in length, eight in height, and about twelve in breadth. It is not so much the excessive length spoken of (for in Bell. i. 21, 6, Josephus speaks of the stones of Strato tower as some of them fifty feet long, nine high, and ten broad) as the disproportion in breadth, which affords room for suspicion. And as this account differs so materially from the other in Josephus, I cannot but suspect that for μ' we should read κ', which will make the number twenty-five. Thus the two accounts will exactly tally. The exclamation of the apostles here is illustrated by what Josephus says at Bell. v. 5, 6, namely, that the whole of the exterior of the temple, both as regarded stones and workmanship, was calculated to excite astonishment (ἐκπλήξειν). —Comp. 1 Ki. ix. 7.'—Bloomf.]

Lu. xxi. 5. And gifts, ἀναθήμασι. Such gifts or presents made to God as might be hung up and exposed to open view. Such was the golden vine which Herod gave, as Josephus relates. Anciently warriors dedicated to their gods the spoils of war, the shields, and helmets, and armour, and garments of those slain in battle. These were suspended in the temples of their gods.

MATT. xxiv. 2—4.	MARK xiii. 2—5.	LUKE xxi. 6—8.
2 And Jesus said unto-them, See-ye not all these-things?	2 And Jesus answering said unto-him, Seest-thou these great buildings?[f]	he-said,
	[f] As for these-things which ye-behold, 6 the-days will-come, in the-which[g]
[g] verily I-say unto-you, There-shall-not-be-left here one-stone upon another, that shall-not-be-thrown-down	there-shall-not-be-left one-stone upon another, that shall-not-be-thrown-down καταλυθηση.	there-shall-not-be-left one-stone upon another, that shall-not-be-thrown-down καταλυθησεται.
3 And as-he-sat upon the mount of Olives,[h]	3 And as-he-sat upon the mount of Olives [h] over-against the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him privately,[i]
the disciples came-unto him privately, saying, [k] Tell us, when shall-these-things-be? and what shall be the sign το σημειον of-thy coming της σης παρουσιας, and of the end of-the world και της συντελειας του αιωνος?[l]	4 Tell us, when shall-these-things-be? and what shall be the sign το σημειον [l] when all these-things shall μελλη be-fulfilled συντελεισθαι?	And they-asked him, 7 [i] saying, Master,[k] but when ποτε ουν shall-these-things-be? and what sign το σημειον will there be when these-things shall μελλη come-to-pass γινεσθαι?
4 [m]*And Jesus answered and-said unto-them, Take-heed -that no man	5 And Jesus answering them began to-say, Take-heed lest any-man	And he said, Take-heed 8 that-ye-be-not-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 2. See ye not, &c.—As deserted by the God of Israel, the outward adornings of the temple were only to make the judgment of God in its destruction the more conspicuous—comp. Mk. xiii. 2; Lu. xxi. 6, supra—see on Mt. xxiii. 37—9. § 85. p. 320.

3. mount of Olives—Zec. xiv. 4. 'And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives,' &c.

the disciples—Mk. xiii. 3. 'Peter and James and John and Andrew'—the last mentioned was one of the first two followers of Jesus, Jno. i. 40—2. § 10, p. 71—The other three were those chosen by Jesus to 'see the Son of man coming in his kingdom,' and hear the Father's acknowledgment of Christ on the holy Mount, Mt. xvi. 28, § 50, p. 44; xvii. 1—5, § 51.

these things, &c.—the things which Jesus had just predicted, the destruction of the temple, even to the overturning of every one of those stones upon which their admiration was fixed, Mk. xiii. 1—'These things' may also include the things he had before said should happen to that generation—Jesus speaks of various signs, Mt. xxiv. 15—29, and of 'The Sign,' ver. 30.

thy coming—see INTROD., and ver. 27, infra, p. 336.

end of the world—the fulfilling of the age—This phrase occurs only in the two books which were written, as is supposed, primarily for Jewish believers, ch. xiii. 39, 40, 49. § 33; xxviii. 20, § 96; and He. ix. 26.

4. Take heed, &c.—De. xi. 16, 17. 'Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, ... and . . . . ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.'—Is. vii. 4, 'Take heed, and be quiet;'—9. 'If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established.'—Eph. v. 6, 'Let no man deceive you with vain words:'—Col. ii. 8—18, 'Beware,' &c.—2 Th. ii. 3, 'Let no man deceive you by any means:' (as to the time of Christ's Second Advent.)

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 2. Not be left . . . one stone. The Jewish writers themselves acknowledge that Terentius Rufus, who was left to command the Roman army, tore up with a ploughshare the foundations of the temple.

3. And of the end of the world. Rather, of the conclusion of this age; for so the words συντελεια του αἰωνος may be rendered. Comp. Heb. ix. 26, where the phrase συντελεια των αἰωνων, though not του αἰωνος, occurs to denote a period or point of time in the world's existence, at which the Son of God appeared in the flesh to do away sin, by his one sacrifice of himself, once offered; a period which might well be called a συντελεια των αἰωνων, if it was, ... a cardinal division of time in the existence of the world; when two-thirds of that existence were elapsed, and one-third still remained to elapse, before the consummation of the whole.—See also 1 Co. x. 11.'—Greswell.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mk. xiii. 1, 2. Riches, beauty, and strength, all which the temple eminently possessed, could give to it no security, when the Lord was departed therefrom. All only rendered its fall the more remarkable, and made more plainly to appear the truthfulness of the Foundation upon which believers are built up an holy temple to the Lord.—See Eph. ii. 20, 1.]

[m] 'The first division of this prophecy, following Matthew, is from ver. 4—14, inclusive'—'Combining together the three accounts, each of two of which specifies one particular among this class of events, omitted by the rest, we obtain the following division of the events themselves in the following order:—firstly, false Christs; secondly, wars and rumours of wars; or, as St. Luke expresses it, wars and commotions (ἀκαταστασίας); thirdly, the rising of "nation ... against nation, and kingdom against kingdom," which are classed apparently together, as events of the like kind in genere, though different in specie; fourthly, "great earthquakes" in such and such places (κατα τόπους), "famines, and pestilences," which likewise are classed apparently together, as events of a kindred nature, and consequently admitting of being differently specified in the order of succession: St. Matthew places "earthquakes" last, St. Mark and St. Luke placing them first—but both St. Matthew and St. Luke, who only mention pestilences as well as famines, concurring in placing the former after the latter; fifthly, "troubles" (ταραχαί), specified by St. Mark alone, in conjunction with the other particulars of the fourth class, but posterior to them; sixthly, "fearful sights" (φόβητρα), "and signs ..... from heaven" (σημεῖα ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ), specified by St. Luke. (This is the first member of the first division of the prophecy, ver. 4—14.)'—Greswell on the Parables, Vol. v. p. 224.

THE RECOLLECTION OF THE PRESENCE OF GOD IS AN EXCELLENT MEANS OF PRESERVING US FROM SIN. ON EARTH THE SAINTS MUST WALK, WORK, AND WATCH IN THE WHOLE ARMOUR OF GOD.

MATT. xxiv. 5—7.	MARK xiii. 6—8.	LUKE xxi. 9, 10.
deceive πλανησ͞ν you.	deceive πλανησ͞ν you:	deceived πλανηθητε:
5 For many shall-come in my name, saying, I am Christ ὁ Χριστος;	6 for many shall-come in my name, saying, I am Christ;	for many shall-come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time καιρος draweth-near ηγγικε:
and shall-deceive many.	and shall-deceive many	go-ye not therefore after them.
6 And ye-shall μελλησετε hear-of wars and rumours of-wars: see that ye-be-not-troubled θροεῖσθε: for all-these-things must come-to-pass γενεσθαι, but the end τελος is not-yet ουπω.	7 And when ye-shall-μελλησετε hear-of wars and rumours of-wars, be-ye-not-troubled θροεῖσθε: for such-things must needs be γενεσθαι; but the end τελος shall not-be-yet ουπω.	But when ye-shall- 9 hear-of wars and commotions ακαταστασιας, be-not-terrified πτοηθητε: for these things must first come-to-pass γενεσθαι; but the end τελος is not by-and-by ευθεως. Then said-he unto-them, 10
7 For nation shall-rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:	8 For nation shall-rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:	Nation shall-rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 4. deceive you—Je. xxix. 8—19, 'Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you,' &c.

5. in my name—ch. vii. 22, § 19, p. 141.

I am Christ—or the Christ—ver. 24, p. 335, 'For there shall arise false Christs,' &c.—Believers' are the body of Christ, and members in particular,' 1 Co. xii. 27; but none of them is THE CHRIST, or Master over the others: against which presumption, Jesus repeatedly warned his disciples, Mt. xxiii. 8—10, § 85, p. 314.

Lu. xxi. 8. the time draweth near, &c.—1 Jno. ii. 18.

go ye not . . . . after them—Ac. xx. 30, .1, 'Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch,'—see also 2 Co. xi. 13—.5, 20.

Mt. xxiv. 6. rumours, &c.—Eze. vii. 26, 'Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be,' &c.

be not troubled—As the disciples were not to be drawn, ver. 4, 5, so neither were they to be driven from their confidence in the Lord, 1 Th. iii. 3, 4—Ps. cxii. 7, 'He shall not be afraid of evil tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.'

7. nation shall rise against nation, &c.—'A sword,' one of the four sore judgments threatened, Lev xxvi. 25—.8; Eze. xiv. 17, .8—This killing of one another is represented by the Red horse, &c., under the second seal, Rev. vi. 4.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 5. Many shall come in my name. See on ver. 23, p. 334. 'The substantial agreement with which leaves no doubt that both relate to the same subject, and inculcate the same caution, and therefore with a reference to the same time, and to the same effect.' 'The first instance of the appearance of any person among the Jews, who would answer to the description of a false Christ, occurs U.C. 797, or 798, A.D. 44, .5, fourteen or fifteen years after the ascension.'—Greswell on the Parables, pp. 367, .81.

6. Wars and rumours of wars. 'It is a singular coincidence that, as there were three Roman emperors, and no more, between the time of Tiberius, in the sixteenth of whose reign the prophecy was delivered, and the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, Caius, Claudius, and Nero, the two first of these, almost at equal distances of time asunder, menaced the Jews with a war, which to the eye of human observation seemed all but inevitable, and the last actually carried it into effect. On the first occasion, nothing but the opportune assassination of Caius, and on the second, nothing but the most active exertions on the part of the principal men among the Jews, and the timeliest submission on the part of the nation at large, saved them from the impending danger, Caius having already commanded the president of Syria, Petronius, to carry his orders for the erection of his statue in the temple into execution at the point of the sword: Claudius having in some measure declared war against the Jews as it was, by ordering all the Jews to quit Rome and Italy within a given time. The time of the first of these events was U.C. 793, .4, A.D. 40, .1; that of the second, U.C. 802, A.D. 49.'—Ibid. p. 391.

7. Nation shall rise against nation. 'This is the third class of events. The words, "nation against nation," (εθνος επι εθνος), might evidently be assumed to denote people of one race in opposition to those of another; such as the Gentile in contradistinction to the Jew. . . . . This requires to be understood of those scenes of turbulence, insurrection, sedition, and bloodshed, in which Jew as such should hereafter be seen engaged with Gentile as such, ... and consisted in the conflict of opposite national distinctions, or opposite religious denominations, in which Gentiles were commouly the aggressors, and which conflicts were most disastrous to the Jews.'—Ib. pp. 229, .30.

At Cæsarea the Jews and Syrians contended about the right of the city, when the Jews were expelled, and twenty thousand slain. The Jewish nation flew to arms, and ravaged the cities and villages of the Syrians, slaughtering immense numbers.—See ADDENDA, p. 360.

Kingdom against kingdom. This portended the open wars of different tetrarchies and provinces

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 4, 5. One of the first duties to which the Christian has to attend is, to take heed that no man deceive him; that he clearly distinguish those who preach themselves from those who point to Jesus as the Christ; and that he be not led away with the many, but closely follow Christ as his Leader.]

[6, 7 ver. Where the Prince of Peace is rejected, wars and commotions may be expected: but let not the servant of God be thereby driven from his post, till he know it to be his Master's pleasure he should leave it. The very contentions of the enemy, like those between the Jews and the Romans, may only allow the Christian the more quietly to carry onward the work of peace.]

NOW THE GOD OF HOPE FILL YOU WITH ALL JOY AND PEACE IN BELIEVING, THAT YE MAY ABOUND IN HOPE, THROUGH THE POWER OF THE HOLY GHOST.—Rom. xv. 13.

MATT. xxiv. 8, 9.	MARK xiii. 9.	LUKE xxi. 11, .2.
[w]and there-shall-be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes	and there-shall-be earthquakes	and [*] great earthquakes σεισμοι, in-divers places	σεισμοι in-divers places	σεισμοι shall-be in-divers places
κατα τοπους.[v]	κατα τοπους, and there-shall-be famines and troubles ταραχαι:	κατα τοπους, and famines, and pestilences: [v]and fearful-sights φοβητρα and great signs shall-there-be from heaven.[w]
8 [w]All these are the-beginning of-sorrows	these are the-beginnings of-sorrows ωδινων.
	9 [x]But take-heed-to yourselves;[y]	But [y]before προ all these, they-shall-lay their hands on you, and persecute you,[z]
9 Then shall-they-deliver-[+]	[z]for they-shall-deliver-	delivering-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 7. famines — threatened against Israel, Le. xxvi. 19—21, and against Jerusalem, Eze. xiv. 13, 14—represented by the Black horse, &c., under the third seal, Rev. vi. 5, 6.

pestilences—threatened against Israel, Le. xxvi. 16—8—and Jerusalem, Eze. xiv. 19—21—represented by the Pale horse, &c., under the fourth seal, Rev. vi. 7, 8.

8. of sorrows — ωδινων — Severe afflictions are frequently compared by the psalmist and prophets to the pangs of child-birth—see t) . LXX.; Ps. xlviii. 6; Is. xiii. 8; lxvi. 7; and Je. xxx. 6, 7.

Lu. xxi. 12. persecute, &c.—The first Christians were persecuted, He. x. 32, 3; 1 Th. ii. 14, .5; 1 Pe. iv. 12; against each other. 1st. That of the Jews and Galileans against the Samaritans, for the murder of some Galileans going up to the feast at Jerusalem, while Cumanus was procurator. 2ndly. That of the whole nation of the Jews against the Romans and Agrippa, and other allies of the Roman empire; which began when Gessius Florus was procurator.

NOTES.

'It would be irrelevant to interpret the prediction of the civil wars which should take place in course of time between the successive competitors for the Roman purple, Nero and Galba, Galba and Otho, Otho and Vitellius, Vitellius and Vespasian, for these were the contests of Gentiles with Gentiles, ... the fact of which also did not begin to be verified until a year and a half after the commencement of the Jewish rebellion.'—Greswell: und see ADDENDA, p. 358.

Mt. xxiv. 7. And there shall be famines. 'There was a famine foretold by Agabus, Ac. xi. 28, which is mentioned by Tacitus, Suetonius, and Eusebius. Its presence was likely to be felt more severely in Judæa than elsewhere, because it set in immediately after a sabbatic year, U.C. 794, .5, ab autumno.'—Ibid.—See NOTE, p. 261.

Earthquakes. 'This is the first among the fourth class of events. The word σεισμοι in this verse cannot refer to the commotions and insurrections mentioned above, as some commentators assert. From the deficiency of our historical materials, we are not able to recite any recorded instances which actually came to pass in Judæa before the necessary point of time to serve the purpose of a sign, or a presage of the approaching visitation of the Jews. Contemporaneous history makes mention of several before and after the time of the delivery of the prophecy, oftentimes very disastrous in their effects, so as truly to deserve the name of great, and oftentimes affecting the neighbourhood of Judæa, if not of Judæa itself; and Josephus describes a memorable instance of the same kind of natural phenomenon in the very vicinity of Jerusalem, ... but the former must be excluded from the scope of the prophecy as not happening in Judæa, the latter, as too late . . . . to fulfil the common purpose of this class of events as a sign.'—Ibid.

Mk. xiii. 8. Troubles. 'This is the fifth class of signs, the combined effect of every antecedent species of sign besides, the increasing troublousness, restlessness, and agitation of the times, as the period of the end drew nigh; . . . . a characteristic of the intervening period between the ascension and the destruction of Jerusalem, after a certain point, as well authenticated and remarkable as any.'—Ibid.

Lu. xxi. 11. Fearful sights and great signs . . . . from heaven. 'Signs of the sixth class. The two most remarkable events which attest this fulfilment, being one of them a phenomenon which appeared in the air, ... a sign from heaven, the other a truly alarming and portentous occurrence.'—Ibid.—See ADDENDA, p. 358.

Mt. xxiv. 9. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted. Rather, Then they will deliver you up to

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 7. Although pestilence may naturally be expected to follow famine, as famine does the desolations of war, yet neither of them come but in the order of Providence; they come for the correction or destruction of nations, according as men are led to repentance or left in impenitence.

[8, 9 ver. The sore judgments, whereby the unbelieving Jews were swept from off their land, and left [*] 'Mark and Luke give priority to earthquakes as writing later than Matthew, before the date of whose gospel no earthquake [to be noted as a sign] is supposed to have happened.'—See Greswell, NOTES, supra.

[†] 'The collateral member of the first division of the prophecy is from ver. 9—14 in St. Matthew's account. Two series of events are combined in the first division (ver. 4—14), so far as it is prophetical of the future in general, which must consequently be supposed to begin together, and to run parallel to each other during the same interval, up to the same period. . . . The persons addressed in this member of the division (ver. 9—14), were the four apostles, as representatives of their fellow-disciples, and the future members of the future Hebrew church.

'This member, like the former of the same division, consists of preceptive, combined with historical matter; . . . That the business of the historical portion of it is to acquaint the disciples with the course and circumstances of futurity, affecting themselves as members of the christian community among the Jews, through the same period for which the order and kind of facts previously recited, were destined to affect the rest of their countrymen, may be taken for granted. Combining as before the several accounts into one, we obtain the following enumeration of the particulars of the course and the circumstances in question:—first, the beginning, continuance, and increase of persecution; secondly, the taking of offence, by many; thirdly the rise and agency of false prophets, or teachers; fourthly, the growing lukewarmness, or coldness, of the love of believers in general; and fifthly, the odium of the christian name universally among the Gentiles. —Greswell on the Parables, p. 272.

IF YE WALK CONTRARY UNTO ME, AND WILL NOT HEARKEN UNTO ME;
I WILL BRING SEVEN TIMES MORE PLAGUES UPON YOU ACCORDING TO YOUR SINS.—Lev. xxvi. 21.

Matt. xxiv. 9.	Mark xiii. 10, .1.	Luke xxi. 13.
you-up	you-up to councils;	you-up to and in εις the-synagogues	the-synagogues,
	ye-shall-be-beaten δαρησεσθε:	and into prisons, and ye-shall-be-brought	being-brought σταθησεσθε	αγομενους
to be-afflicted εις θλιψιν,	before rulers and kings	before kings and rulers, for-my-sake,	for-my name's-sake.
		And it-shall-turn αποβησεται 13
	for a-testimony against-them.[a]	to-you for a-testimony.

[a] and shall-kill you: and ye-shall-be hated of all nations των εθνων for my name's-sake.[b]

10 [b] And the gospel must δει first be-published among εις all nations τα εθνη.

11 But when they-shall-lead you, and-deliver-you-up,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ac. xxvi. 11 — They were imprisoned: Peter and John, iv. 3; viii. 3; Paul and Silas, xvi. 23; 2 Co. xi. 23—so also Ac. xxii. 4; xxvi. 10—They were beaten in the synagogues, xvi. 23; 2 Co. xi. 24, .5; Ac. v. 18, 40 — brought before councils, iv. 3—6 — before kings, xii. 1, 2 — before rulers, Paul before Gallio, Felix, and Festus, xviii. 12; xxiii. 33; xxv. 6—They were killed: Stephen, vii. 59; James, xii. 2—so xxii. 4.

Mt. xxiv. 9. and shall kill you, &c.—The subject of the fifth seal, when were seen, Rev. vi. 9—11, 'under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:'

hated of all nations, &c.—1 Th. ii. 14, 'Ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews:'—iii. 3, 'Yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.'—Ja. v. 7, 'Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord.'—1 Pe. iv. 12—.9, 'Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you,' &c.

Mk. xiii. 10. published among all nations—which would partly result from the disciples being driven out from among the Jews by the persecutions mentioned, ver. 9—Ac. xiii. 46, 'Seeing ye put it from you, . . . lo, we turn to the Gentiles.'—See Mt. xxiv. 14, infra, and the great commission, xxviii. 19, 20, § 96, pp. 503, .4.

11. But when they shall lead .... and deliver you up, &c.—The same advice, Mt. x. 19, 20, § 39, p. 299; Lu. xxi. 14, infra.

NOTES.

affliction, εις θλιψιν. By a bold figure of speech affliction is here personified. They are to be delivered into affliction's own hand, to be harassed by all the modes of inventive torture.

'The particle τότε, which ushers in this division of the subject in St. Matthew, is not to be referred to the point of time indicated by the fulfilment of the last of the classes of signs just enumerated, but to the point of time indicated by the commencement of the enumeration of these signs in general; that is, it must be referred to the general question, πότε ἔσται ταῦτα, not to what immediately precedes in the narrative.'—Greswell, p. 272.

'The particular persecutions intended are those which should be begun and carried on by the Jews; .... The first instance of a persecution, which answers to the description in the prophecy, is that which was begun seven years after the ascension, and was rendered memorable by the death of Stephen, and the active part taken in it by Saul of Tarsus. The progress of the hostilities of the Jews against the Christians is clearly pointed out in the Acts of the Apostles.'—Ibid. —See Scr. Ill., and Addenda, p. 359, 'Of persecution.'

Mk. xiii. 9. And in the synagogues, &c. See on Mt. x. 17—22, § 39, p. 298.

Lu. xxi. 12. For my name's sake. 1 Pe. iv. 16, strictly on that account; for the Epicureans denied a God or a Providence, and the Jews were equally enemies to idolatry; yet both escaped. So that it was, as Tertullian says, nominis prælium, a war against the very name of Christ; for he who was called Christian had, in bearing the name, committed crime enough to be put to death!

13. It shall turn to you for a testimony. By this means they would have an opportunity of confirming their testimony for Christ before kings and rulers. It is also to be remarked, that what was by men accounted dishonour, their being martyrs for Christ, has become at length one of the most honourable distinctions; and it is as having suffered for the testimony which they held, that they will at last be raised up in glory.

Mt. xxiv. 9. Ye shall be hated of all nations. Thus our Lord had before warned them, ch. x. 22, § 39, p. 299. In Ac. xxviii. 22, we find the Jews at Rome, in the reign of Nero, speaking of the Christians as a 'sect . . . everywhere spoken . . . against.' And so Nero, when, as there is reason to believe, he set fire to Rome, taking advantage of the general hatred to the Christians, made it the ground of inflicting upon them the most cruel torments.

Mk. xiii. 10. And the gospel must first be, &c. See on Mt. xxiv. 14, p. 330.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

without the power of persecuting, as they had done, the followers of Jesus, were not by these to be rejoiced in: they were the beginning of sorrows to the nation generally. The Christians had been previously persecuted by their own nation, but now they were to be hated of all nations. Let us pray that the day of grace to our people may be prolonged. The evils we suffer from one another are small compared with those we might be called to endure, if left to the mercy of other nations.]

Lu. xxi. 12, .3. The Christian, when called to suffer for Christ's sake, should rejoice, inasmuch as he is thereby given an opportunity of evincing the sincerity of his religious profession, and of bringing the truth before those from whom it might otherwise remain hid.

[Mt. xxiv. 9. The disciples of Christ were bid to look for nothing less than hatred, persecution, and death from man. If we are exempted, we ought to inquire the reason; and if not on account of our unfaithfulness, we ought to be thankful for the quiet we enjoy, in place of complaining at every little slight or seeming injustice we receive from those around us.]

[Mk. xiii. 10. The blood of the saints was not to be shed in vain. Let us not only be willing to suffer, but be diligent in making known the truth for which we are willing to suffer.]

[Mk. xiii. 11. Those who have extraordinary duties to perform, or dangers to pass through, in the Lord's work, may expect extraordinary help from on high; and those who are remarkably gifted may expect to be as remarkably tried. The disciple will best be prepared for trial by simply committing himself into the hands of God, being diligent to know, and do, and suffer his holy will.]

LET THEM THAT SUFFER ACCORDING TO THE WILL OF GOD COMMIT THE KEEPING OF THEIR SOULS TO HIM IN WELL DOING, AS UNTO A FAITHFUL CREATOR.—1 Pet. iv. 19.

Matt. xxiv. 10.	Mark xiii. 12, 13.	Luke xxi. 14—17.
	take-no'-thought-	Settle θεσθε it therefore 14
	before-hand μη προμεριμνατε ·	in your hearts, what ye-shall-speak,	not to-meditate-before what-ye-shall-answer
	neither do-ye-premeditate: but	απολογηθηναι:
	whatsoever shall-be-given you in that hour, that speak-ye: for it-is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.[c] [a]for I will-give you a-mouth and wis- 15 dom, which all your adversaries shall-not-be-able to-gainsay nor resist.[d] 10 [d]And then shall-many'-be-offended, and shall-betray one-another, and shall-hate one-another.[e]
		[e]And ye-shall-be- 16
12 Now δε		betrayed both by
[f]the-brother shall-betray		parents, and brethren, the-brother to death,		and kinsfolks, and friends;[f]
and the-father the-son; and children shall-rise-up against their parents, and shall-cause-them'-to-be-put-to-death.[g] [g]and some of you shall they-cause-to-be-put-to-death.
13 And ye-shall-be		And ye-shall-be 17 hated of all men for		hated of all men for my name's-sake:		my name's-sake.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxi 15. a mouth and wisdom, &c.—comp. Mt. x. 19, 20, § 39, p. 289—This promise fulfilled in the case of Peter, Ac. iv. 13, 4—of Stephen, vi. 8, 10—of Paul, xxiv. 25.

Mt. xxiv. 10. then shall many be offended, &c.—Is. viii. 15, 'And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.'—Mt. xiii. 21, § 35, p. 255, 'When tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.'—Examples in Paul's experience, 2 Ti. i. 15; iv. 10, .6.

betray one another—[Mk. xiii. 12; Lu. xxi. 16.] hate one another—Ja. iii. 14—.6, 'If ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts,' &c.

Lu. xxi. 16. ye shall be betrayed, &c.—see a similar warning, Mt. x. 21, 36, § 39, pp. 289, 302; Mk. xiii. 12, su.

17. hated of all—Mt. xxiv. 9—'Hated of all men,' &c., x. 22, § 39, p. 299.

'For proofs of the existing or gradually increasing odium or infamy attaching to the professors of Christianity, see Ac. xiii. 6—8, 50; xvii 5—7; xviii. 6; xix. 9; xxii. 21, .8; xxiv. 5, 6, 9, 14; xxv. 7, 8; 1 Co. iv. 12, .3; 1 Th. iv. 10; Ja. ii. 7; 1 Pe. ii. 12, .5; iii. 16; iv. 4, 14, .6.'—Greswell.—See Note.

NOTES.

[Lu. xxi. 14. Settle it therefore in your hearts. θεσθε ουν εις τας καρδιας υμ. ου. i. e., 'Make it a firmly-fixed and heartfelt principle,' &c.—Comp. Mt. x. 19, 20, § 39, p. 299; Lu. xii. 11, .2, § 63, p. 164.]

Mk. xiii. 11. Neither do ye premeditate. The exact rendering of the original is, 'Neither prepare yourselves by practice,' that is, for making your defence. —See Addenda, p. 358.

'The same Spirit which wrought by their hands, would speak by their mouths; and the same supernatural agency would be as visible in their discourses, as in their miracles. . . . The admirable specimens of christian eloquence which occur in the history of the Acts of the Apostles, so pregnant and sublime in the matter, so just and cogent in the argument, so animated, rapturous, and elevated in the expression, are not the words of the mouth which pronounces them, but of the Holy Ghost.'—Greswell.

[Lu. xxi. 15. I will give you a mouth and wisdom. 'In this promise we have a remarkable proof of the divinity of our blessed Lord For he here assures his disciples, that when they shall be called upon to defend themselves and their faith "before kings and rulers," he, though no longer on earth, will supply them with such powers of speech, and such wisdom, as shall put down all contradiction and resistance.—See Ac. vi. 10.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

Mt. xxiv 10. Then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another. 'This is to be understood as a preliminary step to the falling away of some among the christian community themselves. . . . . The parable of the sower prepared us before-hand to expect instances of the apostacy everywhere as one of the first and most natural effects of the subjection of christian principle, and fervour of christian love, to so severe a trial as persecution.'—Greswell, p. 276.

To illustrate this point, one sentence out of Tacitus, Annal. l. xv., will be sufficient; who, speaking of the persecution under Nero, U.C. 817, A.D. 64, says, 'At first several were seized, who confessed, and then by their discovery a great multitude of others were convicted and persecuted.'

Lu. xxi. 17. Ye shall be hated of all men, &c. 'This

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxi. 15, .6. Let not the Christian be over-confident that the danger is past, when those who have been in open hostility are put to silence. We have a wily adversary, who, if he cannot overcome by force, will not be backward to use fraud, and this as working with instruments that we could least of all suppose would become subservient to his designs.]

[Mt. xxiv. 10. The most dangerous enemies the church has met with have been from within. It is more difficult to exercise patience as meeting with offenders, betrayers, and haters of each other among the brethren, than to meet with open hostility from the world. But such trials are part of the discipline through which the Christian should be prepared to pass.]

Mk. xiii. 12. Let us admire the wisdom and kindness of our Saviour, who has made conducive to the confirmation of our faith even the most painful and discouraging circumstances, such as betrayal unto death by one's nearest and dearest relatives.

MATT. xxiv. 11—13.	MARK xiii. 13.	LUKE xxi. 18, 19.
11 ▲ And many false-prophets shall-rise,		But there-shall-not an hair of your 18 head perish. In your patience 19 possess-ye κτησασθε your souls. ▲
12 and shall-deceive many. And because iniquity shall-abound δια το πληθυνθηναι την ανομιαν, the love of many των πολλων shall-wax-cold.
13 But he that-shall-endure unto the-end, the-same shall-be-saved.	but he that-shall-endure unto the-end, the-same shall-be-saved.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxi. 18. not an hair, &c.—Mt. x. 30, § 39, p. 301, 'The very hairs of your head are all numbered.'

19. patience, &c.—Rom. v. 3—5, 'Tribulation worketh patience;' &c.—Heb. x. 36, 'Ye have need of patience,'—Ja. i. 4, 'But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire,' &c.

Mt. xxiv. 11. many false prophets—Jesus had already shewn how they were to be known, ch. vii. 15—20, § 19, p. 140—1 Joo. iv. 1, 'Many false prophets are gone out into the world.'—See the criterion, ver. 2, 3—Some would affect great austerity, 1 Ti. iv. 1—8.

12. iniquity shall abound—2 Ti. iii. 1—13, 'This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, &c.'—Men having the form of godliness, but having the spirit and conduct of the world—Their evil case is further described, 2 Pe. ii.; Ju 14—9—It had been before predicted, Ps. xii. 1—4; Is. lix.

13. he that shall endure—comp. Mt. x. 22, § 39, p. 299—Rev. ii. 10, 'Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.'—Heb. x. 39, 'We are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.'

NOTES.

prediction is one which from the necessity of the case could be accomplished only gradually. . . . . With reason, then, does this prediction come the last in order; . . . and the universal disrepute of Christianity immediately precedes the prediction of its universal propagation. . . . . As to the matter of fact involved in the prediction itself, nothing admits of a clearer confirmation.'—Greswell, p. 282.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.—And see ADDENDA, p. 359, 'Of persecution.'

Lu. xxi. 18. There shall not an hair, &c. A proverbial saying among the Jews, signifying perfect safety.—See 1 Sa. xiv. 45; 2 Sa. xiv. 11; 1 Ki. i. 52; Ac. xxvii. 34. Whatever losses they might seem to sustain, nothing would be found lacking to them in the resurrection of the just.

19. In your patience possess ye your souls. Be calm and serene, masters of yourselves, and superior to all irrational and disquieting passions. By keeping the government of your spirits, you will both avoid much misery, and guard the better against all dangers.

Mt. xxiv. 11. False prophets. 'Rather, false teachers, most probably the Judaizing teachers, the object of whose teaching was to do away with the scandal of the cross, by inculcating upon converts to the gospel, the necessity of the observance of the law of Moses, instead of an absolute and total reliance upon one sole and sufficient ground of trust, the merits of a crucified Saviour . . . . the first motive to their peculiar doctrine, was mainly the effect of persecution from the unbelieving Jews.'—Greswell.—See on ver. 5, p. 325; see also on ch. vii. 15, § 19, p. 140.

[12. And because iniquity shall abound. 'And because of the prevalence of lawlessness and iniquity of every kind.' It seems better to assign this general sense to ἀνομίαν, than any of the particular ones which are given by one or other of the commentators. And thus it may include all the preceding.]

The love of many. Rather, according to the original, which is not the same here as in ver. 10. 'Of the many,' i.e., 'of the majority.' Christ here foretells that beside many who would renounce the faith, and many who would corrupt it, ver. 10, 1, the love of the greater number of Christians would become cold towards him and towards their brethren.—See 2 Ti. i. 15; iv. 10, 6; He. x. 25.

Wax cold. The word wax means 'to become.' It is an old Saxon word. 'This is another of the effects of persecution, long, violent, and aggravated, a description of consequences which points to a period late in the order of succession, and converging to the time of the end itself. "Because of the multiplying of iniquity," that is, because the reign of lawlessness and terror was every day becoming more and more outrageous; because oppression was every day becoming more intolerable; "the love," by which is meant the faith, the fervour, the devotion, "of the many, should be chilled, and begin to grow cold."'—Greswell, p. 280.

13. He that shall endure unto the end. He whose hope, ver. 10, and faith, ver. 11, and charity, ver. 12, endure to the end; and he who bears afflictions, persecutions, &c., faithfully; that throughout all trials, even unto death, adheres to the truth, shall inherit the kingdom prepared for those who overcome.

[The same shall be saved. Many commentators interpret this of the destruction of Jerusalem, and affirm from Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. lib. iii. 5, that the Christians who took refuge at PELLA, in the mountainous region of DECAPOLIS, were preserved in the national ruin. Rather, take ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος as a proverbial expression, denoting to persist with constancy, i.e., to fight it out as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Σωθήσεται may signify all the felicity which Christianity can impart to its faithful followers, both in this life and in the next.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxi. 19. We may be called upon to part with everything external. Even the objects of our warmest affection may be turned into our bitterest enemies; but still the command remains—'In your patience possess ye your souls!' Let our souls be filled with the love of God, and we have still remaining a rich possession.

[Mt. xxiv. 12. It is painful to be deceived by false brethren; but still more must it be to find that those unto whom men have listened as to oracles of God, have been but amusing them with dreams, or leading away from the truth by the delusions of Satan; and that, in order to be safe, they must renounce the leadership of those they have idolized, and the fellowship of many with whom they have accustomarily associated. But there were to be MANY false prophets.

Let men therefore beware, lest in escaping from the snare of one they fall into that of another.]

13 ver. So long as iniquity abounds in the church, we cannot expect that love will increase; nor will it increase by our complaining of the want of it; but by one and all endeavouring to stem the torrent of abounding iniquity; and to promote, first in ourselves, and then in others, holiness of heart and life.

[13 ver. Let us pray that we may be enabled to endure, not only for a time, but unto the end; not merely through this or the other evil, which our natural constitution may be best adapted to resist, but through all the trials to which we may be subjected, and which only Divine grace can fit us to endure.]

IF THOU PUT THE BRETHREN IN REMEMBRANCE OF THESE THINGS, THOU SHALT BE ▲ A GOOD MINISTER OF JESUS CHRIST, NOURISHED UP IN THE WORDS OF FAITH AND OF GOOD DOCTRINE, WHEREUNTO THOU HAST ATTAINED.—1 Tim. iv. 6.

MATT. xxiv. 14.	MARK.	LUKE
14 And this τουτο το gospel * of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world οικουμενῃ for a witness unto all nations τοις εθνεσι; and then shall the end come.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 14. this gospel of the kingdom—see on ch. iv. 23, § 18, p. 115; ix. 35, § 38, p. 293.

preached—Peter, in opening the kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles, says, Ac. x. 36, 7, 'The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:) that word, ... ye know, which was published throughout all Judæa, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;'

in all the world, &c.—The word οικουμενη, here translated world, is the same as in Lu. ii. 1, § 4, p. 19—It is used four times in the Acts, ch. xi. 28; xvii. 6; xix. 27; xxiv. 5—In all of these cases it may be taken to mean the Roman world, as also it may in Rom. x. 18—Paul was himself a remarkable instrument in preaching the gospel throughout the Roman world, xv. 15—24 —comp. Col. i. 6, 23; Ac. i. 8; viii. 1, 4; xviii. 23; xix. 10.

a witness, &c.—What was said, done, and suffered by the apostles, in testifying of Jesus, was to be put upon record; and being added to the gospel narratives, was to be made use of as a witness or testimony to the nations. Paul recognised his special call to this work, Eph. iii. 1—12.

then shall the end come—An end was predicted, Eze. vii. 2, 3, &c.; when great and long desolations would ensue; when not only strangers, ver. 21, but even 'the worst of the heathen,' would 'possess their houses: . . . . and their holy places . . . . be defiled,' ver. 24—After Messiah's being cut off, was to be the destruction of the city and the sanctuary—Da. ix. 26, 'And the end thereof . . . . . with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined.'—At the time of the end was to be the invasion of the Roman world, by the kings of the south and of the north, xi. 40, &c.—The Saracen and Turkish invasions, appointed to lay the land most desolate, are described under the fifth and sixth trumpets, Rev. ix.—The vision was 'closed up and sealed till the time of the end,' Da. xii. 4—9; which comp. with Rev. x. 4—7; but comp. Mt. xiii. 39—see on xxiv. 3, supra—6, 'the end is not yet,'—8, 'the beginning of sorrows,' —13, 'he that shall endure unto the end,'

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 14. This gospel, &c. The good news of the kingdom, to be given to those that overcome or 'endure unto the end,' as ver. 13, supra—comp. Rev. ii. 26; iii. 21; xii. 10, 1.

Preached in all the world. See ADDENDA, p. 359.

[When the 'gospel of the kingdom' has not only been preached throughout the Roman world, but has served as designed, 'for a witness' to the nations, then may 'the end come' in a happier fulfilment than it came upon Jerusalem when destroyed by the Romans; or upon the land when it began to be most desolate, as being placed under Mohammedan sway, which was about the time these northern, and now Protestant nations, became subject to the see of Rome. When entirely free from her influence, we have fulfilled our mission to the nations, 'THEN SHALL THE END COME.']

[A witness, &c. The New Testament, which we regard as the witness of God to ourselves more especially, is a record of the preaching of the gospel throughout the Roman world: first, personally by our Lord himself, as recorded in the Four Evangelists; secondly, by the apostles, as recorded in the book of the Acts, which leaves the great apostle of the Gentiles at Rome itself; thirdly, the New Testament contains the farther opening up, and application of the truth of the gospel, as contained in the epistles, all which are sent to churches and individuals within the bounds of the Roman world, beginning with the epistle to the believers at Rome; fourthly, the New Testament contains, in the Apocalypse, an account of what was yet to happen in connection with the promulgation of the gospel, in the same locality, until the word should be transmitted unto all the nations, the 'multitude of nations,' springing from outcast Israel dwelling in the north and west; and after whom more especially the gospel message was sent in this direction; and who were to be the happy instruments of conveying the same 'to every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation:' for which great work the nations of Anglo-Saxon race have been given such unprecedented facilities.]

[Our Lord in ch. xxiv. 14, may thus be regarded as predicting not only that the end would come upon the land, when the gospel had been proclaimed throughout the Roman world; but that the preaching of the gospel throughout the Roman world should constitute his WITNESS or TESTIMONY to the nations; this, indeed, is implied in the very title of the book, 'The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.']

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 14. It is indeed good news, and a great inducement to hold out against all opposition, and under all discouragement, to be assured that he who endureth to the end shall be saved into the enjoyment of the kingdom of glory.

Soon may that gospel, which hath come to us at such cost, through the Roman world, both pagan and papal — soon may it be preached, with the witness from on high, to all the nations: and thereby a people be made ready for the Lord.]

* 'A comparison of St. Matthew with St. Mark will shew that this prediction was twice distinctly stated; first at the beginning of this part of this discourse, Mk. xiii. 10, [p. 327;] a second time [now] at the end: the difference between which statements is simply that the former gives us what was first said about the event in general terms, the latter what was finally added, with somewhat more of special explanation; our Saviour having first joined together the two leading events of the christian history during this period,—the persecution of his church at home, and the propagation of his church abroad, as destined to begin together, or nearly so, and to accompany each other ever after; and equally to answer the end designed by the prediction of both in common; afterwards having passed to the particular notice of each in its turn, beginning with the former as the earlier in point of time, and ending with the latter, because its fulfilment from the nature of the case (in the whole of the effect predicted at least) must be the last thing of all.

'Secondly, we may observe, that like the rest of the particulars predicted in reference to the private or local history of the christian church among the Jews, through the contemporary period; this prediction, also, in reference to the gradual progress of the gospel abroad, was intended to be a sign and document of the several stages in the approach of the great national visitation at last; in the observance and construction of which, accordingly, the Hebrew Christians were as much interested, as in noting and applying the rest. We may infer this both from the adverb of time, "first," coupled with the prediction of the fact in St. Mark's account of it, and still more from the expressive addition, "And then will the end come," subjoined to it in St. Matthew's. The end could not arrive before this prediction in particular had been fulfilled; it could not be delayed after it had. . . . Whatever passing events might portend, there would be in the knowledge of this fact, a positive ground of conviction to the Hebrew Christian, that as yet he had nothing to fear. The catastrophe of his devoted country, terrible as it might be to contemplate, was still in the womb of time... until christian apostles had carried the glad tidings of salvation into every land.'—Greswell, pp. 297—9.

BECAUSE THOU HAST KEPT THE WORD OF MY PATIENCE, I ALSO WILL KEEP THEE FROM THE HOUR OF TEMPTATION, WHICH SHALL COME UPON ALL THE WORLD, TO TRY THEM THAT DWELL UPON THE EARTH.—Rev. iii. 10.

MATT. xxiv. 15.	MARK xiii. 14.	LUKE xxi. 20.
15 When ye-therefore-* shall-see the abomination of desolation της ερημωσεως, spoken-of by δια Daniel the prophet, stand in-the-holy place,[a]	14 But when ye-shall-see the abomination of desolation της ερημωσεως, spoken-of by υπο Daniel the prophet, standing where it-ought not,
[b] (whoso readeth, let-him-understand ο αναγινωσκων νοειτω :)[1]	(let-him-that readeth-understand ο αναγινωσκων νοειτω,)
		[i] And when ye-shall-20 see Jerusalem compassed with κυκλουμενην υπο armies στρατοπεδων, [k]
		[l] then know that the desolation thereof is-nigh.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 15. abomination of desolation—The sign of the long and severe desolation spoken of, Eze. vii.—the Roman ensign, 'the eagle,' De. xxviii. 49—see on ver. 28; spoken of by Daniel, ix. 26, 27, 'For the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate,'—The Jews sought protection under the Roman eagle to the rejection of Him, who would have gathered the children of Jerusalem as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings—comp. Mt. xxiii. 37, 38, § 85, p. 320; Jno. xix. 12, 15, § 90. pp. 444, 8—Daniel speaks of the abomination that maketh desolate, xii. 11.

the holy place—'Where it ought not,' Mk. xiii. 14, supra—Jerusalem was called 'the holy city,' Ne. xi. 1; Is. xlviii. 2; Mt. iv. 5, § 9, p. 64, where the people ought to have sought shelter under the wings of Jehovah.

whoso readeth—Rev. i. 3, 'Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.'

understand—Da. ix. 23, 'Understand the matter, and consider the vision.'—25, 'Know therefore and understand,'

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 15. THAT PART OF THE PROPHECY WHICH MORE PARTICULARLY RELATES TO THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM BEGINS AT THIS VERSE.

When ye . . . . . see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel. The Roman armies had as their standard the image of the eagle, the ensign of desolation. The eagles were properly the tutelary divinities of the Roman legions, and worshipped as such, being enshrined in small temples, like any other object of ancient idolatry.

[Mr. Greswell says, 'It is my opinion, that the only occurrence of this description between the time of the delivery of the prophecy, and the fulfilment of the event more especially predicted to follow upon this one fact—which could answer the purpose of a sign of that event, and of a warning to alarm the fears of the observers of it in due time, with a view to their own escape—was the siege of Jerusalem, by Cestius Gallus, the president of Syria, A.D. 65, at the outset of the Jewish war.'—p. 318.]

['There was something truly remarkable about this siege of Cestius, which does not admit of explanation, except on the supposition that an overruling Providence purposely ordered all its circumstances to this one end and result, of serving as a warning to the believing portion of the Hebrew community, that the war with Rome was begun, and the threatened destruction of Jerusalem was at hand, but for nothing more.'—Ibid. p. 326.—See ADDENDA, p. 359.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 15. It is well to consider what brought the ensign of desolation into the holy place, where it ought not to have entered. It was not the prowess of the enemy without, but the infidelity of those within, who sought protection under the Roman eagle, to the rejection of Him who would have gathered them as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings.]

Let us read, so as not only to understand the word of the prophecy, but also the lessons therein.

Lu. xxi. 20. Let us not be too hasty in drawing conclusions: those who saw the besieging army of Cestius Gallus withdraw, amid the successful assaults of the pursuing Jews, might think that the words of Jesus were not likely to be fulfilled. That encompassing of the city with armies was, nevertheless, the sure sign of the desolation of Jerusalem; to which, on account of their exasperating the Romans, the very successes of the Jews contributed.

* 'The second general division of the prophecy is comprehended between ver. 15—28 of Matthew, its object in general being to return an answer to the second question, "What is the sign of thy appearing and presence?" its particular purpose, in one of its subdivisions, from ver. 15—22, inclusive, being to declare what this sign should be; in the other, from ver. 23—28, inclusive, to declare what it should not be.'—Greswell, p. 307.—See INTRODUCTION, p. 322.

'Without entering into the inquiry what further meaning the event here spoken of as the appearing and presence of Jesus Christ (παρουσια) might possibly have, we may obviously take it for granted, that in one of its senses, and in the apprehension of the inquirers at least, the event denoted by this appearing and presence must be the same with the event denoted by the end. If, then, the order of the prophecy, as this point of time, passes on to ascertain the period of the end, it passes on to certify the period of the appearing and presence, and so far to return a direct answer to the second topic of inquiry; and that it does so pass, at this moment, is evident from the words which connect the beginning of this division with the end of the last, "When therefore ye see," with "and then will the end come." The proximity of the end, and so far of the παρουσια, the appearing and presence, being thus presupposed, the object of what follows is to shew by what means it should be known not only to be near, but arrived.'—Greswell, pp. 312—.4.

'The substance of the several prophetical particulars comprehended in this first member of the second general division may be reduced to the following heads:—first, the practical admonitions, subjoined to the recognition of the fatal sign, and necessary to be observed immediately afterwards, Mt. xxiv. 16—.3; Mk. xiii. 14—.6; Lu. xxi 21, .2, p. 332; to which may be added, Mt. xxiv. 20; Mk. xiii. 18: secondly, the purpose, intention, or final end of the days which were to follow, Lu. xxi. 22, p. ib.: thirdly, a promise that they should be prematurely abridged, and the grounds of it, Mt. xxiv. 22; Mk. xiii. 20, p. 333: fourthly, the description of the days themselves, and of the effects, both for the time, and for the future, which should result from them, Mt. xxiv. 19—22; Mk. xiii. 17, .9, 20; Lu. xxi. 23, .4'—Ibid. pp. 319—.27.

FOR THE TIME IS COME THAT JUDGMENT MUST BEGIN AT THE HOUSE OF GOD: AND IF IT FIRST BEGIN AT US, WHAT SHALL THE END BE OF THEM THAT OBEY NOT THE GOSPEL OF GOD?—1 Pet. iv. 17.

Matt. xxiv. 16—21.	Mark xiii. 15—.9.	Luke xxi. 21—.3.
16 then let-them which be in Judæa-flee into the mountains:	then let-them that be in Judæa-flee to the mountains:	Then let-them 21 which are in Judæa-flee to the mountains; and let-them which-are in the-midst of-it-depart-out; and let-not them that-are in the countries-enter thereinto.[m]
17 let-him which is on the house-top not-come-down to-take any-thing out-of his house:	15 [n] and let-him that is on the house-top not-go-down into the house, neither enter-therein, to-take any-thing out-of his house:
18 neither let-him which is in the field-return back to-take his clothes.	16 and let-him that-is in the field not-turn back-again for-to-take-up his garment.[n]
		[m] For these be the-days of-vengeance εκδικησεως, that all-things which are-written may-be-fulfilled. 22
19 And woe unto-them that-are with child, and to-them that-give-suck in those days!	17 But woe to-them that-are with child, and to-them that-give-suck in those days!	But woe unto-them 23 that-are with child, and to-them that-give-suck, in those days![o]
20 [o] But pray-ye that your flight be not in-the-winter, neither on the-sabbath-day:	18 And pray-ye that your flight be not in-the-winter.
21 for then shall-be	19 For [n] those days shall-be

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 17. on the housetop—Lu. xvii. 31, § 72.

18. neither . . . . return, &c.—The like haste commanded to Lot, as fleeing out of Sodom, Ge. xix. 17—see Lu. xvii. 31, § ib.

Lu. xxi. 22. the days of vengeance, &c.—Predicted by Moses, De. xxviii. 49—58; also by Ezekiel, ch. vii. 3; xiv. 21, &c.

Mt. xxiv. 19. woe unto them, &c.—Lu. xxiii. 29, § 81, p. 457, 'Behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren,' &c.—This woe had been particularly dwelt on by Moses, De. xxviii. 53—.7.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 16. Then let them which be in Judæa flee into the mountains. By Judæa must be understood all the southern parts of Palestine, both the plain and the hill countries, which at this time went by the name of Judæa. By 'the mountains,' must be understood the countries on the east side of Jordan, especially those which in the time of war were under the government of the younger Agrippa. These countries remaining in their obedience to the Romans, the people who fled into them were safe.

It is remarkable, that by the special providence of God, after the Romans, under Cestius Gallus, made their first advance towards Jerusalem, they suddenly withdrew again, in a most unexpected and impolitic manner; at which Josephus testifies his surprise, since the city might then have been easily taken. By this means they gave, as it were, a signal to the Christians to retire; which, in regard to our Lord's admonition, they did, some to Pella, and others to Mount Libanus, and thereby preserved their lives.

'And if their flight ensued immediately on the defeat of Cestius Gallus, then it was not winter—see on ver. 20, infra—for the eighth of Dius, on which that defeat happened, corresponded in U.C. 819, A.D. 66, to October 15th, and October, in the Jewish year, was one of the mildest months in their calendar.'—Greswell, p. 335.

['Vespasian was deputed in the room of Cestius Gallus, who, having subdued all the country, prepared to besiege Jerusalem, and invested it on every side. But the news of Nero's death, and soon after that of Galba, and the disturbances that followed, and the civil wars between Otho and Vitellius, held Vespasian and his son Titus in suspense. Thus the city was not actually besieged in form till after Vespasian was confirmed in the empire, and Titus was appointed to command the forces in Judæa. It was in those incidental delays that the Christians, and indeed several others, provided for their own safety by flight. In Lu. xix. 43, § 82, p. 264, our Lord says of Jerusalem, "Thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side." Accordingly, Titus, having made several assaults without success, resolved to surround the city with a wall, which was, with incredible speed, completed in three days. The wall was thirty-nine furlongs in length, and was strengthened with thirteen forts at proper distances, so that all hope of safety was cut off; none could make his escape from the city, and no provisions could be brought into it.'—See Jos. Bell. b. v. c. 12.]

18. To take his clothes, &c. By τὰ ἱμάτια are meant the upper garments (the cloak and coat), which husbandmen of the southern countries have ever, when at work, laid aside, or left at home; they are then said to be γυμνοι.—See Mk. xiv. 51, § 88, p. 422.

20. Pray ye . . . . neither on the sabbath day. The distance allowed by the Jews for a sabbath-day's journey was only two thousand cubits, or about five furlongs; supposed to be the space between the camp and the tabernacle, Le. xxiii. 3.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxi. 21. It had been meetingly said to the righteous, 'Flee as a bird to your mountains.' The time did come when only the righteous could thus escape; when the unbelieving Jews perished in their strongholds throughout the whole land, or were driven forth therefrom to suffer slavery or death.

[Mt. xxiv. 17, .8. We may not be called to the same necessity for escape from temporal danger, but it becomes us to be ready, at the bidding of our Lord, to part at once with whatever of this world we have been accustomed to account it good to possess.]

Lu. xxi. 22. The judgment written must take place. So far from feeling at ease on account of God deferring the days of vengeance, our highly favoured, but deeply guilty nation, should rather tremble, because of accumulated guilt.

[23 ver. Nothing was more desired by Jewish women than children; but, in the circumstances predicted, children were an aggravation of their sufferings. Without the Divine favour our very blessings become fountains of misery.]

[Mt. xxiv. 20. It is possible for a people utterly impenitent to be yet scrupulously observant of the forms of religion, as were the Jews, with regard to the sabbath, just before being given over to extreme and protracted punishment.]

MATT. xxiv. 22.	MARK xiii. 20.	LUKE.
great tribulation θλιψις, such-as was not since the-beginning of-the-world κοσμου P	affliction θλιψις, such-as was not from the-beginning of-the-creation κτισεως P which God created to this-time, no, nor ever shall-be ουδ' ου μη γενηται.	unto this time, neither shall-be και ου μη γενηται.
22 And except	20 And except-those days should-be-shortened εκολοβωθησαν, there-should-no flesh-be-saved ουκ αν εσωθη πασα σαρξ: but for-the elect's-sake	that the-Lord had shortened εκολοβωσε those days, no flesh should-be-saved ουκ αν εσωθη πασα σαρξ· but for-the elect's-sake, whom he-hath-chosen εξελεξατο, those days shall-be-shortened.	he-hath-shortened the days.Q

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 21. great tribulation—Great, not only as to intensity of suffering at the beginning and end, but also as to continuance, as is intimated, Lu. xxi. 23, .4, pp. 332, .4—They had been forewarned of it by Moses, De. xxviii. 60—.8—It had been presented to Abraham in the first recorded vision, Ge. xv. 12, .7—see the description of those who come out of the great tribulation, Re. vii. 14—.7.

such as was not, &c.—Je. xxx. 7, 'Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it.'—Da. xii. 1, 'There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation,' &c.

22. no flesh be saved—ver. 28, 'For wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together.'

the elect's sake—Who shall come out of the great tribulation with triumph, serving the Lord in the beauty of holiness, Rev. vii. 9, 10, .4—see Is. xii. 8, 9; xlviii 20—.6; xlv. 19, 25.

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 21. Great tribulation. Josephus uses almost the very words of our Saviour:—'All the calamities,' says he, 'which had befallen any nation from the beginning of the world, were but small in comparison with those of the Jews.'

Such as was not. Such were the atrocities and horrors of the siege of Jerusalem, that the words may admit of the most literal acceptation. The triple negative is most strongly emphatic.

[22. Except those days . . . be shortened, &c. There were many circumstances which seemed likely to protract and delay the siege of Jerusalem. On the one hand, the rebellion of three chiefs, and the departure of Vespasian from Judæa, to enter upon the imperial dignity; on the other hand, the obstinacy of the Jewish nation, together with the hatred of the Romans; a successful engagement with Cestius, and the then increased hope of assistance from God, and their countrymen on the other side of the Euphrates; Jerusalem, too, a city of extreme strength, both by nature and art, and well provided with every requisite for sustaining a long siege. Add to this, the counsels of Titus' generals, who advised him to wait for famine to do the work. All these circumstances threatened utter extinction to the Jews. But by the interposition of Divine providence, affairs took another direction. The consequence of long protracted hostility would probably have been the universal destruction of the Jews; those at home by the Romans, who were exceedingly enraged against them; and even by their own countrymen, the Sicarii zealots, &c., who put all to death who did not unite in the same desperate hostility with them. 'Wretches (says Josephus) who agreed in nothing but in butchering all that were worthy of being preserved, and were peaceably inclined.' But for the preservation of the sound portion, however small, of the Jews, and especially the Christians, too, by his providence shortened the duration of the war, as by the same providence he had before protracted the commencement of it, in order to give time to the Christians to escape.] — See ADDENDA, p. 360.

[No flesh. οὐ πᾶσα σάρξ. A Hebraism for οὐδὲ εἷς. How literally this was fulfilled we learn from Josephus, from whom it appears, that if the siege had lasted out a little longer, the whole nation must have been destroyed. He says it was a proverbial expression in the mouths of all who escaped:—οἱ μὴ ταχέως ἀναλώσασα. οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθημεν. — See on 'Great Tribulation,' supra.]

[For the elect's sake. 'In Mark, "for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen." By the elect here we are to understand that comparatively small portion of the Jews living in Judæa, who had embraced, and continued to hold fast, the faith of the gospel. They are the same as those "few," who, in ch. xx. 16, § 76, p. 233, are distinguished from the "many . . . called"; the word there translated "chosen," being the same as that here translated "elect."'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

'Or, rather, what is indeed the most probable supposition, we are not to understand by the elect, regard to whom was to produce this effect, simply the believing portion of the Hebrew community, in opposition to the unbelieving, of this day; but the whole series of fathers, patriarchs, and prophets, all the good and holy men of the Jewish nation, from the first; whose faith and obedience had been as exemplary as the unbelief and wickedness of this generation among their posterity was enormous and entitled to punishment; more especially the three most illustrious of the number, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the denomination of the elect of God is first and properly applicable, and who had received on sundry occasions the assurance of his favour and protection inalienable from them and from their posterity.'—Greswell, p. 349.

By 'the elect' may be understood not only Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Joseph, &c., and such of their believing children as were in Judæa at the commencement of the Great Tribulation, but also the chosen people in after times, unto whom the case of the remnant of Judah was to serve for testimony to the truth —See SCRIP. ILLUS., and comp. Exe. xiv. 22.

Those days shall be shortened. 'History, both Jewish and heathen, bears testimony to the truth of this part

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 21. The Jewish people, who were more highly favoured than any other, were also the most severely punished. We know of no nation whose punishment has been so great, so universal, and of such long continuance. Such protracted punishment cannot here be repeated: but let us beware.

[22 ver. May we not say, that for our sake the days of vengeance were shortened—that of the Jews a remnant was preserved. In the case of the preserved remnant of the Jews we have a continual witness to the truth of the gospel, which their fathers rejected.]

MOREOVER ALL THESE CURSES SHALL COME UPON THEE, AND SHALL PURSUE THEE, AND OVERTAKE THEE, TILL THOU BE DESTROYED: BECAUSE THOU HEARKENEDST NOT UNTO THE VOICE OF THE LORD THY GOD, TO KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS, ETC.—Deut. xxviii. 45.

MATT xxiv. 23	MARK xiii. 21.	LUKE xxi. 24.
	[g] for there-shall-be great distress αναγκη in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they-shall-fall by-the-edge of-the-	24 sword, and shall-be-led-away-captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall-be trodden-down of the-Gentiles, until the-times αχρι καιροι of-the-Gentiles be-fulfilled πληρωθωσι."*
23 Then if any-man shall-say unto-you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.	21 [r] And then if any-man shall-say to-you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not·

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxi. 23. this people—The Jews, upon whom wrath has come to the uttermost, 1 Th. ii. 16.

24. be led away captive — After the four sore judgments have come upon Jerusalem, Eze. xiv. 21, .2, 'Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters: behold, they shall come forth unto you, [' the elders of Israel,' ver. 1,] and ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.'—The nations that have sprung from outcast Israel have thus had the testimony afforded in the case of the unbelieving Jews, who have been brought forth unto them, in addition to the witness presented to them by the apostles, as noticed, Mt. xxiv. 14, supra, p. 330—see these two witnesses, judgment and mercy, represented by the smoking furnace and burning lamp in Abram's vision, Ge. xv. 17.

trodden down—Jerusalem was thus to be reduced to that which was expressed in its former name, Jebus, Ju. xix. 10.

times of the Gentiles — Israel was to be punished seven, or a fulness of times, for their iniquity, over and above their destruction from off the land by the four sore judgments, Le. xxvi. 18, 21, .4, .8—which was to be by their being destroyed as a distinct people, De. xxviii. 45—see margin, p. 333; Ho. i. 6—10 — see NOTE.

Mt. xxiv. 23. Christ—or the Christ—see NOTE, and see on ver. 5, p. 325.

believe it not — The worshippers of the wafer make the belief of a lie the condition of salvation, which the apostle makes the sign of damnation, 2 Th. ii. 11, .2—Their strange god had been spoken of in connection with the time of the end—comp. Da. xi. 36, .9, with 2 Th. ii. 3, 12.

NOTES.

of the prophecy. For we learn from both Josephus and Tacitus, that the Roman commander, Titus, from a desire of glory, and of returning to the pleasures of Rome, determined to bring the siege of Jerusalem to an end as speedily as possible, notwithstanding the opinion of some of his officers, who advised him to reduce the city by blockade, and not by assault. We also learn from Josephus, that the war was brought to a much earlier close than might have been expected, by the conduct of the Jews themselves, who, acting, as it were, under a frenzy sent upon them by God, wasted their strength in their furious contests with each other, burnt their stores of corn, which might have lasted many years, B. Jud. v. 1, and of their own accord, abandoned to the enemy points of defence, from which nothing but famine could have driven them. Titus himself, when viewing the fortifications of the city, after its fall, declared that it could never have been taken by human means; and that God himself had interposed on the side of the Romans, B. Jud. vi. 9.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Mt. xxiv. 23. Christ. See on ver. 5, supra, p. 325. The reference may be here to that still more astonishing presumption of the modern false teachers, who not only put themselves in the place of the Father, but pretend to have the power of turning, with the breath of their mouth, a wafer into the Christ, and of exhibiting the Son of God between their finger and thumb, and of giving Him to be swallowed by whomsoever they please. 'Lo, here is Christ, or there;' is the language of the Romish mass.

Lu. xxi. 24. Shall fall, &c. No less than one million one hundred thousand perished in the siege of Jerusalem.—See ADDENDA, p. 360.

Shall be led away captive. More than ninety thousand were led into captivity.

And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles. The land was sold, and no Jew was allowed to inhabit there, a rigour probably never used towards any other people conquered by the Romans; nay, they might not come within sight of Jerusalem, or the hill ELIA, the name given to the new city, which was built without the circuit of the former, when the foundations of the old were ploughed up.—See Ammian. Marcel., lib. xxiii. — See ADDENDA, p. 361.

[Times of the Gentiles. These times commenced when Ephraim was broken that it should not be a people, and was confounded with the Gentiles; that is, within threescore and five years from the time that Isaiah delivered to Ahaz the prophecy respecting the birth of Christ, with the warning that if the Jews did not believe, neither should they be established, Is. vii. 8, 9; 14.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxi. 24. The witness has been equally universal as it has been continuous. Their own land still lies desolate; and in all other lands the evidence of their having been led away captive, and being still in banishment, is abundantly obvious.

[That fulness of times, during which Israel were to undergo the punishment of being lost among the Gentiles, must now be near completion, if not already fulfilled. May we be prepared for those changes which are to take place in connection with the fulfilment of the times of the Gentiles. May we escape the evil, and obtain the good.]

[Mt. xxiv. 23. Let us hear the words of our Saviour regarding Transubstantiation, the great doctrine of the Romish church: 'Believe it not.' The priest has not the power of creating his Maker out of a piece of paste! That which is exhibited with 'Lo, here ... or there;' and which receives the adoration of deceived nations, is only a wafer.]

* A TIME or year in prophecy consists of 360 days; seven, or a fulness of times, are 2,520 days, the double of 1,260 days, so frequently mentioned in the Apocalypse. A day is understood to express a year in prophecy, Eze. iv. 6. The times during which Israel was to be lost among the Gentiles were to commence about B.C 677. Comp. Is. vii. 8, where we find Ephraim was to be made not a people (or Lo-ammi, Ho. i. 6, 9) within sixty-five years after Isaiah delivered the prophecy contained in that chapter. 677 before Christ, and 1851 since, would amount to fully more than 1260 twice told, or the great prophetic week of Israel's dispersion, and the land's subjection to Gentile sway; so that the time to favour Sion must be near, and probably the only impediment now remaining is the people's unpreparedness for blessing.

MATT. xxiv. 24—6.	MARK xiii. 22, 3.	LUKE.
24 For there-shall-arise false-Christs, and false-prophets, and shall-shew δώσουσι great signs and wonders; insomuch-that, if it were possible, they-shall-deceive the very elect.	22 for false-Christs and false-prophets shall-rise, and shall-shew δώσουσι signs and wonders, to seduce προς το αποπλανᾶν, if it were possible, 23 even the elect. But take-ye-heed: behold, I-have-foretold you all-things.'
25 Behold, I-have-told-you-before.
26 'Wherefore if they-shall-say unto-you, Behold, he-is in the desert; go-not-forth: behold, he is in the secret-chambers; believe 27 it not. For as the lightning cometh-out of the-east, and shineth even-unto the-west; so shall-also the coming παρουσια of-the Son of

BEHOLD, I LAY IN SION A CHIEF CORNER STONE, ELECT, PRECIOUS: AND HE THAT BELIEVETH ON HIM SHALL NOT BE CONFOUNDED.—1 Pet. ii. 6.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 24. false Christs, &c.—'The king,' Da. xi. 36, 9—The horn 'that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows,' vii. 8, 11, 20.

great signs and wonders, &c.—so with regard to the man of sin, who 'exalteth himself,' &c., it is said, 2 Th. ii. 9, 10, 'Whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness,' &c.—which comp. with the description of the beast and false prophet, Rev. xiii. 3, 13—5.

the very elect, &c.—They would go near, to seduce from the true Foundation the elect mentioned, ver. 22, supra—see the Lord's powerful remonstrance with his chosen people in the latter days, as halting in their choice with regard to who should be their Rock, &c.; whether they will have Peter, or Christ, the Rock for their Foundation; whether they will have the pope, or God, their Creator, Redeemer, and Provider, for their Father, De. xxxii. 3—7—His chosen people, ver. 8, 9—chosen to be built upon the Rock, ver. 4, 15, 8, 30, 1, and comp. 1 Pe. ii. 6—see margin—not Peter, a stone, but Christ, the Rock, is the chosen Foundation, ver. 6, for a chosen people, ver. 9.

25. told you before, &c.—In the very commencement of this discourse, ver. 5, supra, p. 325—the evil warned against was that which Paul most dreaded in his favourite Ephesian church, Ac. xx. 28—31; and in writing to the Romans, he takes no notice whatever of any Head, past, present, or to come, except the Lord, Rom. i. 1, 7, although very particular in his recognition of the brethren, xvi.—Jesus did not require to be so earnest in warning against the seductions of professed enemies, but the false Christs were to arise among the body of his own disciples, Ac. xx. 28, 30, and would defile the temple of God, making the highest assumptions, with the greatest powers of speech—comp. 1 Co. iii. 16, 7; 2 Th. ii. 3, 4; 2 Pe. ii. 18, 22; Rev. xiii. 5—14; Da. vii. 8, &c.—2 Pe. iii. 17, 'Beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness.'

27. lightning, &c.—Lu. xvii. 24, § 72, p. 211, 'As the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.'—Eze. i. 13, 4, 'And out of the fire went forth lightning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.'—Comp. Rev. iv. 3, 5.

out of the east—Christ, in the ministry of the word, is described as proceeding from the east, westward; through ASIA MINOR, in the direction of EUROPE, Rev. i. 11, 7, and comp. vii. 2.

the coming—This word may here, and in ver. 3, supra, where it first occurs, be translated presence, as it is, 2 Co. x. 10; Ph. ii. 12—The presence of the Lord,

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiv. 24. Shall shew great signs and wonders. The artifice of man, and the power of Satan, if permitted, can doubtless produce effects which appear miraculous, though they will not bear to be compared with the incontestable miracles wrought by Christ and his apostles. Respecting the objection which is urged from this passage against admitting miracles as a proof of doctrines, it may be briefly observed, that it cannot certainly be proved that the works here referred to were true miracles; they might be like the lying wonders, powers, and signs, mentioned, 2 Th. ii. 9: or that if, for argument's sake, it be granted that they were real miracles, yet they are supposed to be wrought at a time when there were in the christian church, teachers subsisting with superior miraculous powers. But it can never be inferred from such a supposition in that case, that God will suffer miracles to be wrought in proof of falsehood, when there were none of his servants to perform greater miracles on the side of truth. And when such superior miracles for the truth do exist, the opposite miracles at most can only prove that some invisible beings of great power, who are the abettors of falsehood, are strongly engaged to support the contrary doctrine; the consideration of which must excite all wise and good men to receive a truth so opposed with greater readiness, and to endeavour to promote it with great zeal; as they may be sure the excellence and importance of it is proportionable to the solicitude of these malignant spirits to prevent its progress. Kypke takes δώσουσι in the sense of promise, of which he gives two examples. So נתן, in De. xiii. 2; 1 Ki. xiii. 3, 5. This seems, too, to be confirmed by Josephus, who only says that the ψευδοπροφῆται promised to shew miracles δεῖξειν ἤθελον. The word μεγάλα seems to confirm this mode of interpretation.]

If it were possible. The exact rendering of the original is, 'if possible.' This expression is elsewhere in scripture used to denote the great difficulty, and not the absolute impossibility, of doing a thing.—See Mt. xxvi. 39, § 88, p. 414; Ac. xx. 16; Rom. xii. 18.

[The very elect. See on ver. 22, supra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 24. Should even great signs and wonders be wrought, in order to establish as true that which we know to be false, we are not to believe it. The temptation must, by the elect of God, be resisted.]

25 ver. Let it not be in vain that we have been given such repeated warning against false Christs and false prophets.

[26 ver. The disciples need never be deceived, so as to be drawn away into any pretended gathering, whether open or more covert, to obtain by force or by fraud possession of the promised dominion.]

MATT. xxiv. 28, 29.	MARK xiii. 24.	LUKE.
28 man's-be. For wheresoever the carcase is, there will-the eagles'-be-gathered-together.
29 Immediately εὐθέως δὲ* after the tribulation of those	24 But in those days, after that tribulation,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

although hid from the eyes of the Jews, Mt. xxiii. 39, § 85, p. 321, was yet to be everywhere with his disciples, xxviii. 20, § 96, p. 504—It did not consist in being seen with the carnal eyes, for thus he was seen by the Jews, after he had said, 'Ye shall not see me, until,' &c., Lu. xiii. 35, § 66, p. 179—The presence of the Lord was now to be removed from the temple at Jerusalem, to seek out a people who should worship God 'in spirit and in truth,' Jno. iv. 21—4, § 13, pp. 93, 4.

Mt. xxiv. 28. carcase . . . . eagles—see Lu. xvii. 37, § 72, p. 213—Job xxxix. 30, 'Where the slain are, there is she.'—Ge. xv. 11, 'When the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.'—Now the nation with which had been the Divine presence, was to be left as a loathsome, lifeless carcase, by Him who could alone deliver; left to be torn asunder and devoured by the Roman eagles—see on Mt. xxiv. 15, 22, pp. 331—3.—see also xxiii. 37, § 85, p. 320.

29. after the tribulation—Commencing with 'the beginning of sorrows,' ver. 8, p. 326, and reaching on to the time when 'the LORD alone shall be exalted,' Is. ii. 11—when the Lord will take out of the hand of his afflicted the cup of trembling, and put it into the hand of them that afflict, li. 17, 21, 22—when the Lord will make his people to know his Name, lii. 6.

NOTE.

[Mt. xxiv. 28. By the eagles are plainly meant the Romans, whose standard was an eagle. Since, however, eagles, properly so called, do not feed on dead bodies, and there were none in Palestine, so the best commentators suppose the bird here meant to be the vultur percnopterus, or γυναικός, which was by the ancients referred to the eagle genus. And assuredly the Heb. נשר, denoted not only the eagle, but the vulture. Here, indeed, the mention of the latter is as apposite as that of the former would be the reverse; γυναικοί being proverbially fond of carcases.—See Ælian de Anim. ii. 46. By πτῶμα is meant the Jewish nation, lying, like the fabled Prometheus, a miserable prey to the foes who were tearing out her vitals. Under the allusion, however, is couched a great moral truth, that 'wherever there is flagrant impiety, thither will vengeance from heaven surely and suddenly light upon it.']

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 27. When Christ comes personally, he will, as the lightning, come quickly, and so as to be manifest to all. In the meantime his spiritual presence is not confined to any particular locality.

[28 ver. It is utterly vain to seek safety, either as following the deluded multitude, or as joining any dark confederation; for wheresoever the wicked are the hand of God will reach them: wheresoever they are gathered together the eagles will also be gathered to devour. So was it with the Jews of old; and so has it been in our time. Our only safety is in Jesus.]

* 'It has been assumed of the object of the THIRD division of the prophecy, Mt. xxiv. 29—31, that it was designed to return an answer to the third question, virtually, if not actually put. What was the sign to precede the συντέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος, or close of the period of ages? whether understood of the end of the world, or of any other event, which admits of being considered a consummation of a pre-existing state of things, as well as that. The testimony, indeed, of each of the evangelists, who record this concluding division, concurs to shew, that whatever be the nature of the events which begin now to be predicted, they bear date from a point of time later than the close of the period hitherto under consideration; not only than the interval between the delivery of the prophecy, and the commencement of the days of vengeance, understood synonymously with the national visitation of the Jews, but than the conclusion of those days themselves.'—Greswell, p. 394.

'The three most conspicuous days [of the Son of man] if not the three only ones of the number, we may venture to say, are the destruction of Jerusalem, as the first; the decision of the great antichristian contest, preparatory to the millennium, as the second; and the general judgment, preliminary to the consummation of all things, and the end of the world, as the last. It is my opinion, as the part of the prophecy, hitherto considered, relates to the first of this number; so this [Mt. xxiv. 29—31] . . . relates to the second; as we shall find, perhaps, that a part of the prophecy, at the end of all, relates to the third.'—Ibid. p. 397.

'The consideration of the two preceding divisions has shewn that they possess an use and purpose of their own, to which they are carefully accommodated; and that too an use and purpose, entirely worthy of the communications. And in fact, did we compare the fulness of the former with the conciseness of the latter, merely, we should be tempted to say this last was an appendix added to them, rather than that they were an introduction premised to it. But the truth is, they are each independent of the other, and only connected together in the prosecution of a common subject, which formed the original inquiry, and in the matter of fact, naturally distributed itself into two heads—the appearing of the Son of man in his day, to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the appearing of the Son of man in the same kind of day, to any analagous dispensation—whether the decision of the great antichristian contest, and the close of the period of ages in that sense, or the general judgment, and the consummation of all things.'—Ibid. p. 400.

* . . . . As its subject-matter in general is akin to that of the two former divisions, so are the place and distribution of its contents analagous to the order which has been seen to pervade theirs.

'For example, the signs specified in the former instance, to mark out and presignify the approach of the end; and events are specified in this instance, also, which are obviously intended to serve the same purpose of signs of something else. Those signs before were of two kinds in general; and so there appear to be in this instance also. Some of the events here specified are remote or distant harbingers of the coming result of all, and one in particular seems to declare it to be at hand; serving the same purpose, as a sign, in this instance, as that particular event which ushered in the appearing, or parousia, did before. There is apparently, too, an interval of some kind between the manifestation of this sign, and the consummation which ushers it in, as there was before, between the sign of the appearing, and the appearing itself. Lastly, there is here also an appearing and presence, an advent and manifestation of Jesus Christ, to consummate the whole series of prognostics and harbingers of its approach, as there was before; with this difference only, that whereas that appearing was typical before, it is literal now; whereas it was virtual, or ἐν δυνάμει, before, it is actual, and in person now. . . .

'Combining together the accounts of the three evangelists, we may collect that the events which are destined to answer the purpose of signs of the first description, will be in general twofold: those which will be manifested in the heaven, and those which will be manifested on the earth; but that each of them will be subservient to a third, of which they are symptomatic and declaratory. . . . . The third event, of which the two former classes of signs collectively must be considered themselves the prognostics, as directly as this event is of something beyond itself, is the fact which is meant by the shaking of the powers of the heavens.'—Greswell on the Parables, Vol. V. p. 401, ..2.

MATT. xxiv. 29.	MARK xiii. 25.	LUKE xxi. 25, .6.
days shall-the sun-be-darkened,	the sun shall-be-darkened,	And there-shall-be signs in the-sun, and the moon shall-not-give her light,	and the moon shall-not-give her light,	and in-the-moon, and the stars shall-fall πεσουνται from heaven,[t]	and the stars of heaven shall fall εσονται εκπιπτοντες,	and in-the-stars;
and the powers of-the heavens shall-be-shaken σαλευθησονται:	and the powers that are in heaven shall-be-shaken σαλευθησονται.	[t] and upon the earth distress συνοχη of-nations, with perplexity εν απορια; the-sea and the-waves σαλου roaring ηχους της; men's hearts-failing-them απο ψυχοντων for fear, and for looking-after προσδοκιας those-things which-are-coming-on the earth οικουμενη: for the powers of heaven shall-be-shaken σαλευθησονται.*

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 29. sun be darkened*—*see this awful period described under the sixth seal, Rev. vi. 12—7—synchronizing with the seventh vial, xvi. 18—21—contrasted with the rejoicing multitude come out of the great tribulation, vii. 9—17—see also the contrast in Ps. xlvi.; Is. ii. 4; xxiv. 13, 23; Joel ii.; Am. v. 20; Hab. iii.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiv. 29. Shall the sun be darkened, &c. 'The narrative of St. Luke, if not the account of St. Matthew and St. Mark, by discriminating between the phenomena which should be visible in the heavens, and the signs which should be perceptible on the earth, clearly intimates that the former must have an use and meaning, confined to their proper locality, as much as the latter; and in particular that neither, in their own locality, can be simply symbolical of anything confined to the locality of the other. The terms, too, in which St. Luke more especially speaks of the signs of either class, seem incapable of anything but a literal acceptation. For we observe he has qualified the language of the prediction in St. Matthew and St. Mark, ... from which is a necessary inference that the sun, the moon, and the stars themselves, and not something else of which they are but symbols, are destined to be the subjects of those affections. With respect to the signs whose locality is to be the earth, too, he has distinguished the continuance of nations in distress, and the fearful misgivings of men's hearts, from the roaring of the winds and waves, while he classes them together as signs of a common import . . . . If the first two of these particulars are literal events, the third of the number must be as literal as the other two. . . . .'—Grenwell, p. 404.]

[Lu. xxi. 25. And upon the earth. επι της γης. Some late expositors think it ought to be rendered, 'upon the land,' considering the prophecy as relating solely to Judæa. But what follows appears to have a more extensive object, and to relate to the nations and the habitable earth in general. It is not at all probable that by the term εθνων, 'nations,' used thrice in the preceding verse manifestly for Gentiles, are meant in this verse only Jews and Samaritans.'—Camp.]

The sea and the waves, &c. All these are figures of great and terrible calamities. The roaring of the waves of the sea denotes great affliction and tumult among the people. Perplexity means doubt, anxiety; not knowing what to do to escape. Men's hearts should fail them for fear, or by reason of fear.

[Mt. xxiv. 29. The powers of the heavens. αι δυναμεις των ουρ. σαλευ. The imagery seems formed upon a passage of Is. xiii. 10, .3 (which treats of the destruction of Babylon), where bishop Lowth remarks (after Sir Isaac Newton) that 'when the Hebrews intend to express happiness, prosperity, the instauration and advancement of states, kingdoms, and potentates, they make use of images taken from the most striking parts of nature, from the heavenly bodies, from the sun, moon, and stars; which they describe as shining with increased splendour, and never setting; the moon becomes like the meridian sun, and the sun's light is augmented sevenfold, see xxx. 26; new heavens and a new earth are created, and a brighter age commences. On the contrary, the overthrow and dejection of kingdoms is represented by opposite images; the stars are obscured, the moon withdraws her light, and the sun shines no more; the earth quakes, and the heavens tremble; and all things seem tending to their original chaos.'—See Joel ii. 10; iii. 15, .6; Am. viii. 9.*]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Lu. xxi. 25—.7. When days of darkness come; when the heavens are giving forth portentous signs; and the earth is groaning beneath long accumulated woe; when men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon the earth; then may those who are looking for God's Son from heaven rejoice, for their redemption indeed draweth nigh. When there was darkness over all the land of Egypt, the children of Israel had light in their dwellings. The powers of the heavens may be shaken, but our Foundation standeth sure. 'The Lord knoweth them that are his,' 2 Ti. ii. 19.]

* The powers of heaven shall be shaken. 'We may venture to say, that no kingdoms, or bodies politic on earth, nor their heads or governors, are ever described in the style of prophecy by the name of "the powers of the heavens." But if the phrase is to be literally understood, then by the powers of the heavens must be meant one or other of the two orders of created intelligences, the good and the evil angels, both of them equally subordinate to the Supreme Intelligence, the Lord of Hosts, and both of them in one sense the powers of heaven. It is most reasonable, however, to understand it of the last of these orders in particular, ... whose local habitation, during the continuance of that toleration and immunity which the Almighty is pleased to allow them at present, we have the assurance of scripture is actually the region of the lower heavens or upper air; . . . . from which they may be some time ejected. . . . . Perhaps the time of the fulfilment of this prediction is intimated, Rev. xii. 7—9. To judge from the intimations of scripture, the decision of the great antichristian contest may be expected to be preceded by a general defection or apostacy from Christianity, a persecution of the true church, and a firmer and more general establishment of the strongholds of spiritual wickedness in the parts of heaven, for a time, than ever; and by parity of consequence, when the event of that decision is approaching, the arrival of the period of their coercion and punishment, to such a degree as we have reason to expect for the duration of the millennium, may be preceded by such signs and symptoms, as to imply that the powers of the heavens are in danger; that the time of their ascendency is drawing to an end; that their empire is already shaken to its centre, and ere long must be completely overthrown.'—Grenwell, pp. 406—.9.

REMEMBER THEM WHICH HAVE THE RULE OVER YOU, WHO HAVE SPOKEN UNTO YOU THE WORD OF GOD: WHOSE FAITH FOLLOW, CONSIDERING THE END OF THEIR CONVERSATION.—Heb. xiii. 7.

Matt. xxiv. 30, .1.	Mark xiii. 26, .7.	Luke xxi. 27.
30 "and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in ev; the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.	26 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in ev the clouds with great power and glory.	And then shall they see 27 the Son of man coming in ev a cloud with power and great glory.
31 And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall	27 And then shall he send his angels, and shall

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 30. sign of the Son of man — Jesus is exalted 'to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins,' Ac. v. 31—when this, the purpose of his going away, is accomplished, there is the sign given that he is about to return, iii. 19—21, 'Repent . . . . and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution,' &c.—see Israel's expression of repentance, and call for the Lord's return, when terrible things have taken place, Is. lxiii. 15—9. . . . . lxiv. . . . .—As the Lord hath returned to his place, till his people acknowledge their offence and seek his face, Ho. v. 15—when their eyes, as the eyes of one man, are toward the Lord, then is the sign of his return, Zec. ix. 1—when the prayer of Jesus is answered in the unity and preparedness of his people, Jno. xvii. 20—3, § 87, p. 403—comp. Eph. iv. 13, .6—It is an inward preparation that the Lord requires, He. xii. 14—Jesus hath gone to receive the Comforter for his people, and when the sound which was heard upon the entrance of our ever-living High Priest into the holiest (Ex. xxviii. 35; Ac. ii.) is again heard as returning, then is the sign to those that look for him, that he is about to 'appear the second time without sin unto salvation,' He. ix. 28 — and see on Lu. ix. 26, § 50.

all the tribes of the earth mourn — Pr. i. 24—33, 'Because I have called, and ye refused;' &c.—At the severing of the wicked from among the just, &c., there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth, Mt. xiii. 41, .2, 50, § 33, p. 260, ..3—Lu. vi. 25, § 27, p. 208, 'Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn,' &c.—see Mt. xxiv. 51, p. 344—comp. Zec. xii. 12; Rev. i. 7.

shall see the Son of man—of whose coming, 'with ten thousands of his saints,' Enoch had prophesied, Jude, ver. 14—.6—Immediately before the Transfiguration, Jesus himself testified, Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43, 'The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels;' &c. — At his ascension it was testified to the disciples, Ac. i. 11, § 26, 'This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.'—See also the testimony of the Spirit by Paul, as 1 Th. i. 10; ii. 19; iii. 13; iv. 15—.8; v. 1—11; and of the Father, Rev. i. 7.

31. great sound of a trumpet—Is. xviii. 3, 'All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.'—xxvii. 13, 'The great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish,' &c.—xxx. 30, 'The LORD shall cause his glorious voice to be heard,' &c.—Zec. ix. 14, 'The Lord GOD shall blow the trumpet, and shall go with whirlwinds of the south.'—1 Co. xv. 52, 'At the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound,' &c.—1 Th. iv. 16, 'The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God:' &c. — Rev. xi. 15, 'And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ;' &c.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiv. 30. The sign of the Son of man. 'As to the true nature of the sign itself, the prophecy specifies it no farther than by its relation to the Son of man, which gives it its name, and whence we may infer that it must be something eminently characteristic of him. On this account, it would be obvious to conclude, that it cannot be the Shechinah, or that luminous appearance, which seems on every occasion of the manifestation of the Deity to the eye of sense, to have been the visible symbol of his presence: both because the Shechinah would be the characteristic sign of the Godhead as such, and not as the Son of man; and because the Shechinah is spoken of afterwards, as we may presume, under the name of the glory, which, along with the demonstrations of power and majesty, is supposed to attend the actual appearing and presence, posterior to the manifestation of the sign of the Son of man. It was the opinion of the commentators of antiquity on this part of the prophecy, that the sign of the Son of man, thus alluded to, was the cross; and certainly as the sign of the Son of man none could possess a more characteristic relation to Him . . . who died upon the cross for the salvation of mankind.'—Greswell, p. 410.]

Mk. xiii. 27. And then shall he send, &c. The word tote, here translated then, does not mean thereafter, but may rather regard what will have already occurred.

Mt. xxiv. 31. His angels. The word angels most commonly refers to the race of intelligences more exalted than man, He. i. 14. — See on Lu. i. 26, § 2, p. 9.

With a great sound of a trumpet. The Jewish assemblies used to be called together by the sound of a trumpet, as ours are by bells, Nu. x. 2; Ju. iii. 27. Our Saviour, speaking to Jews, described the assembling of the people at the last day in a way which would be peculiarly clear and impressive to them. In the Old Testament God's messengers to his people are frequently said to address them as with the voice of a trumpet, Is. lviii. 1; Je. vi. 17; Eze. xxxiii. 3—6.

A trump, or trumpet, was a wind instrument, made at first of the horns of oxen and of rams.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 30. Let us clearly understand what is meant by the sign of the Son of man in heaven. Is it not the evidence in his people, that he hath ascended into heaven, and received that which was promised of the Father? He went to receive grace for his people, to meeten them for glory. When that object of his going away is accomplished—when they in holy love are gathered into one, as he is one with the Father; then may we look for his return.]

[Soon may the sign of the Son of man in heaven be seen in the preparedness of the bride to meet the Bridegroom. When she hath made herself ready, the marriage cannot be delayed. When that time of rejoicing has come, it will be too late to mourn. Let us now learn the song with which the redeemed will gladly go forth to meet their returning Lord: 'Unto Him that loved us,' &c.]

Let us now be as Christ was in the world; and so when he cometh in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, we shall be with him: yea, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as he is.

31 ver. How joyful the meeting, when, however widely separated by time or space the saints may have been, they will be, by attending angels, gathered together into the presence of their Lord! The hand of Him who scatters the proud in the imagination of their hearts, will collect the scattered dust of his elect, and give them glorified bodies like unto his own.

MATT. xxiv. 32. .3.	MARK xiii. 28, .9.	LUKE xxi. 28—31.
gather-together επισυναξουσι his elect from the four winds, from one-end of- heaven to the-other.	gather-together επισυναξει his elect from the four winds, from the-uttermost-part of- the-earth to the-uttermost- part of heaven.
	And when these-things begin αρχομενων 28 to-come-to-pass γινεσθαι, then look-up ανακυψατε, and lift-up your heads; for διοτι your redemption απολυτρωσις draweth-nigh. And he-spake to-them a-parable; 29
32 Now δε learn a την parable of the fig-tree;	28 Now δε learn a την parable of the fig-tree;	Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;
when his branch is yet tender, and putteth- forth leaves, ye-know	When her branch is yet tender, and putteth- forth leaves, ye-know	when 30 that summer is nigh:	that summer is near:	they now shoot-forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand.
33 so likewise ye, when ye-shall-see all these-things,	29 so ye in-like-manner, when ye-shall-see these-things	So likewise ye, when 31 ye see these-things

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 31. gather together his elect, &c. — Ge. xlix. 10, 'Unto him (Shiloh) shall the gathering of the people be.'—Ps. l. 5, 'Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.'—Ho. i. 11, 'Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel.'—Zec. ii. 11, 'And many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be my people:'— This gathering together was the object of the Redeemer's desire, and that for which he laid down his life, Jno. xi. 51, .2, § 58, p. 133—This gathering together to the glory of the Lord is described, Is. lx. 1—14. . . . .—It is the Lord's own work, ver. 21.

Lu. xxi. 28. then look up, &c.—He. ix. 28, 'Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.'

lift up your heads, &c.—At this time is the gathering together of the elect, as intimated in the correspondent passages, [Mt. xxiv. 31; Mk. xiii. 27,] supra —Such will be able to say, Ps. iii. 3, 'Thou, O LORD, art a shield for me; my glory, and the lifter up of mine head.'—Amidst the most awful convulsions they will sing aloud, xlvi. 1, 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.'—ver. 7, 11, 'The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge.'— See Rev. vii. 9—17.

your redemption . . . . nigh, &c.—When the sign is given, in the redemption of Israel, then speedily will come to pass that of which it is the sign, the resurrection of all the saints, I Co. xv. 22—.5, 54—.8—that for which the waiting has been, 'the redemption of our body.'—Comp. Rom. viii. 19, 23; Rev. v. 9, 11, .2.

Mt. xxiv. 32. his—Gr. αυτης, her.

33. all these things, &c. — The destruction of the temple at Jerusalem, and scattering of the Jewish nation, ch. xxiii. 35, .6, § 85, p. 319; xxiv. 1—3.

NOTES.

The common trumpet was straight, made of brass or silver, a cubit in length, the larger extremity shaped so as to resemble a small bell. In times of peace, in assembling the people, this was sounded softly. In times of calamity, or war, it was sounded loud. Perhaps this was referred to when our Saviour said, 'with a great sound of a trumpet.'

Mt. xxiv. 31. They shall gather together his elect. See on ver. 22. He will send his angels to gather his chosen together from all places, ch. xiii. 39, 41—.3, § 33, p. 260. This shall be done before the living shall be taken up to meet the Lord, I Co. xv. 51, .2; 1 Th. iv. 16, .7.

From the four winds. That is, from the four quarters of the globe—east, west, north, and south. The Jews expressed those quarters by the winds blowing from them.—See Eze. xxxvii. 9, ... see also Is. xiii. 5, 6.

[32. 'Our Lord having spoken of the signs preceding the two grand events, concerning which the apostles had inquired, begins here to speak of the time of them. And to the question proposed, ver. 3, p. 324, concerning the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, he answers, ver. 34; concerning the time of the end of the world, he answers ver. 36.'—Wesley.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxi. 28. If those who saw the beginning of sorrows could rejoice, how much more may we, who live so much nearer their termination! The glory is not more distant because of the long delay, but every moment nearer than when we first believed.

Mt. xxiv. 32. As truly as the budding leaves give promise of approaching summer, so truly does the fulfilment of prophecy, in the destruction of Jerusalem, give assurance that all the predictions concerning the kingdom of God will be fully accomplished.

* 'The remainder of the discourse from the 32nd ver. of xxiv. of Mt. admits of being distributed, like the former part, into three general divisions, each of them arising in its turn out of the corresponding portion of the first half of the discourse, which returned the proper answer to one of the three questions originally put. . . . . Of these divisions of the sequel of the discourse, the first extends from ver. 32—.5, the second, from ver. 36—44, both of the xxiv. of Mt., the third, from ver. 45 of ch. xxiv. to the end of ch. xxv.

'That the first two of these divisions are to be referred in general to the subject of the predicted destruction of Jerusalem, may be safely concluded; the former, because by ver. 34, which is an integral part of that division, the period of time to which it is limited, is distinctly comprehended within the natural lifetime of the then existing generation; . . . . the latter, because in ver. 37 it remains the topic of the appearing and presence of the Son of man, and so refers us at once to the subject of the second question. . . . . With respect to the third and most comprehensive division of all, the circumstance that the two preceding divisions are specially restricted to the first two of the original questions, would itself be presumptively an argument that the third and remaining division must have the same special reference to the third and remaining topic of inquiry.'—Greswell on the Parables, Vol. V. p. 422.

WITH HEAVEN-BORN COURAGE, LET US PASS THROUGH THE GLOOM: THE GLORY LIES BEYOND.

LET US, BY THE THINGS AROUND US, HAVE OUR THOUGHTS CARRIED HEAVENWARD.

MATT. xxiv. 34, .5.	MARK xiii. 30, .1.	LUKE xxi. 32—.6.
know that	come-to-pass γινομενα, know that	come-to-pass γινομενα, know-ye that it-is near, even at the-doors,	it-is nigh, ε even at the-doors.[e]	the kingdom of God is nigh-at-hand.[f]
34 Verily I-say unto-you, This generation ἡ γενεα αυτη shall-not-pass παρελθῃ, [d] till ἕως αν all these-things be-fulfilled γενηται.	30 Verily I-say unto-you, that this generation ἡ γενεα αυτη shall-not-pass παρελθῃ, till μεχρις οὗ all these-things be-done γενηται.	[e]Verily I-say unto-you, 32 This generation ἡ γενεα αυτη shall-not-pass-away παρελθῃ, [d] till ἕως αν all be-fulfilled γενηται.
35 Heaven and earth shall-pass-away παρελευσονται, but my words λογοι shall-not-pass-away οι μη παρελθωσι.[e]	31 Heaven and earth shall-pass-away παρελευσονται: but my words λογοι shall-not-pass-away ου μη παρελθωσι.	Heaven and earth shall- 33 pass-away παρελευσονται: but my words λογοι shall-not-pass-away ου μη παρελθωσι.
		[e]And take-heed to-yourselves, lest-at-any- 34 time your hearts be-overcharged βαρυνθωσιν with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of-this-life μεριμναις βιωτικαις, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a- 35

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 33. at the doors, &c.—Ps. xxiv. 7, 'Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in,' &c. — cxviii. 19, 20, 'Open to me the gates of righteousness:' &c. — Is. xxvi. 2, 'Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in.'

34. This generation — Ps. xxii. 30, .1 — see on Mt. xxiii. 36, § 85, p. 320.

35. Heaven and earth shall pass — 2 Pe. iii. 5—7, 'By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: 6, whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: 7, but the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.'—They shall pass away after the thousand years, Rev. xx. 11—Then will be the general resurrection, ver. 12—.5, and a new heaven and a new earth, xxi. 1—see also 2 Pe. iii. 12, .3.

my words, &c.—Ps. xxxiii. 6, 'By the word of the LORD were the heavens made;' — He. i. 2, 3, and by the same word are all things upheld—Ps. cv. 8—16, 'He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations,' &c.—and he in whom his words abide, shall live for ever, Jno. vi. 58, 63, .8, .9, § 43, pp. 332—.4—Not only will Christ, by his Spirit, manifest himself to such, but the Father and the Son will come and make their abode with him, xiv. 21—.6, § 87, p. 384—and he 'abideth for ever,' 1 Jno. ii. 17—see also 1 Pe. i. 23—.5.

Lu. xxi. 34. take heed — Pe. cxix. 9, 'Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.'—The elders are especially warned to take heed to themselves, Ac. xx. 28—Jesus had commenced this discourse with an admonition to take heed, so as not to be deceived by others, Lu. xxi. 8, supra—Now they are warned to take heed to themselves, ver. 34—.6; as also Mt. xxiv. 37—44; Mk. xiii. 33—.6, p. 341, .2.

overcharged — as were those unto whom the invitation to the great supper was first sent, ch. xiv. 17—20, .4, § 67, p. 183—Rom. xiii. 13, .4, 'Not in rioting and drunkenness,' &c.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiv. 34. This generation shall not pass. Accordingly, all the things which Jesus predicted respecting the destruction of the temple, and to which the disciples referred, when they asked, 'When shall these things be?'—these things did actually take place within forty years after our Saviour delivered this parable, and before that generation had passed away. Some critics are of opinion, that by this generation, ἡ γενεα αὕτη, is to be understood the Jewish nation throughout all ages; as if our Lord intended to say they should continue a distinct people to the judgment day. But this is not generally received.]

[All these things. Relating to the temple and the city. This is evidently spoken in answer to the question of the disciples, ver. 3, 'Tell us, when shall these things be?' What things? The things of which our Lord had just before spoken, ver. 2; and a little before that, xxiii. 35, .6, § 85, p. 319; where he uses the very expression he here repeats, that these things would come upon that very generation. That 'these things' did not include his SECOND ADVENT is evident from this, that he points to 'these things' as being the sign of something else as about to follow—see ver. 33. Now they could not be a sign that summer was nigh if they included even the harvest, the winding up of all.]

Things be fulfilled. That is, the things respecting the destruction of Jerusalem: the fulfilment of our Lord's predictions respecting which was to be a sign to that very generation and all succeeding generations until the end, that the glorious appearing of our Lord would assuredly follow, even as assuredly as the ripening of summer follows the budding of spring.

Till all, &c. 'All that has been spoken of the destruction of Jerusalem to which the question, ver. 7, relates; and which is treated of from the 8th to the 24th verse.'—Wesley.

[Lu. xxi. 34. Take heed . . . . lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness. And was there need to warn the apostles themselves against such sins as these? Then surely there is need to warn even strong Christians against the very grossest sins. Neither are we wise if we think ourselves out of the reach of any sin.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt xxiv. 34, .5 To all succeeding generations the truthfulness of Christ has been confirmed, by the case of that very generation which refused to believe his words. Let those who are disposed to make light of the warning voice of prophecy, know that all, with regard to which the disciples asked, 'When shall these things be?' came upon that very generation.]

[Let us, from that, the beginning, look forward to the close of the present dispensation; yea, beyond—to the passing away of the present heaven and earth: rejoicing that the word of the Lord shall stand for ever; let us, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.]

Lu. xxi. 34. Want and persecution are not the greatest dangers which the Christian may have to meet. The pleasures and cares which accompany riches, are as deadening and distracting to the soul.

MAN ALSO KNOWETH NOT HIS TIME: AS THE FISHES THAT ARE TAKEN IN AN EVIL NET, AND AS THE BIRDS THAT ARE CAUGHT IN THE SNARE; SO ARE THE SONS OF MEN SNARED IN AN EVIL TIME, WHEN IT FALLETH SUDDENLY UPON THEM.—Eccles. ix. 12.

MATT. xxiv. 36—.8.

LUKE xxi. 36.

snare παγις shall-it-come on all them that-dwell on the face-of-the whole earth. Watch-ye αγρυπνειτε therefore, 36 and-pray always εν παντι καιρω, that ye-may-be-accounted-worthy to-escape all these-things that shall μελλοντα come-to-pass, and to-stand σταθηναι before the Son of man.ƒ (Ch. xxi. 37, p. 357.)

MARK xiii. 32, .3.

36 But of that day and hour knoweth no-man, no-not the angels of heaven, ƒ But of that day and that hour knoweth 32 no-man, no-not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son,ᵍ but the Father.

ᵍ but my Father only.ʰ

ʰ Take-ye-heed, watch and pray: for ye- 33 know not when the time ὁ καιρος is.ᵍ

37 ⁱ But as the days of Noe were, so shall-also the coming παρουσια of-the Son of man-be.
38 For as in the days that were before the flood they-were eating and drinking, marrying and giving-in-marriage, until the-day that Noe

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxi. 35. a snare—As suddenly 'as a snare' entangles the prey that is taken in it—comp. Ec. ix. 12, see margin; Mt. xxiv. 17, .8, p. 332—The figure is often used to denote the suddenness of calamities, Ps. lxix. 22; cxxiv. 7; Is. xxiv. 17; Rom. xi. 9.

36. and to stand before the Son of man—so the rejoicing multitude, Rev. vii. 9, 10—see also Is. xxiv. 23; xxxiii. 15—24.

Mt. xxiv. 36. of that day—The day when the Son of man is revealed, Lu. xvii. 30, § 72, p. 212—When those who are found prepared will ascend into the presence chamber, as Ps. xxiv. 3—6; Mt. xxiv. 44, infra—'The day of redemption,' unto which believers are sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, Eph. iv. 30.

knoweth no man, &c.—even Daniel had been refused the knowledge, ch. xii. 9—the apostles were told, that it was not for them (previous to their receiving power) 'to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power,' &c., Ac. i. 7, 8.

37. days of Noe—see Lu. xvii. 26, .7, § 72, p. 212.

NOTES.

Lu. xxi. 35. Dwell. According to the original, sit. The expression appears to describe persons sitting at ease, and apprehending no danger.

Of the whole earth. Or, 'of the whole land.' It would seem from the whole of our Saviour's predictions, that the word γης cannot be confined to Judæa, but must extend to the whole Roman empire.

36. Watch ye therefore, and pray always. Perhaps we should connect εν παντι καιρῳ, continually, with αγρυπνειτε, watch, as it appears to be the most natural order. Indeed the word continually belongs equally to both watch and pray; and no man is safe, at any time, who does not attend to this advice as literally as possible.

[That ye may be accounted worthy. This word sometimes signifies an honour conferred on a person, as when the apostles are said to be counted worthy to suffer shame for Christ, Ac. v. 41. Sometimes meet or becoming: as when John the Baptist exhorts to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance, Lu. iii. 8, § 7, p. 52; and so to be counted worthy to escape, is, to have the honour of it, and to be prepared for it.]

To stand before the Son of man. To be acquitted, and to be condemned, are expressed, in Rom. xiv. 4, by standing and falling. Those who were faithful to the grace they had received were not only preserved in the destruction of Jerusalem, but became heralds of the grace and mercy of God to the nations. Thus they were counted worthy to stand before the Son of man—to minister salvation in his name.

Mt. xxiv. 36. But of that day, &c. It has been said the word ειδεν (knoweth) here seems to have the force of the Hebrew conjugation Hiphil, which, in verbs denoting action, makes that action, whatever it is, pass to another. Wherefore ειδεν, which properly signifies, I knew, used in the sense of the conjugation Hiphil, signifies, I make another to know, I declare. The word has this meaning without dispute 1 Co. ii. 2, 'I determined to know (ειδεναι) nothing among you but Jesus Christ, and him crucified;' i. e., I determined to make known, to preach nothing among you but Jesus Christ. So also in this passage, 'But of that day and that hour, none maketh you know,' none hath power to make you know it;' [just as the phrase, Mt. xx. 23, § 77, p. 238, 'is not mine to give,' signifies, 'is not in my power to give;'] 'no, not the angels, neither the Son, but the Father.'

[These words, ουδε ὁ υἱος, Mk. xiii. 32, which assert the same ignorance of the day and hour in question, of the Son, as of the angels in heaven, and therefore seem to put limits or bounds to his knowledge as much as to theirs, admit of an easy explanation, without calling in question the genuineness of the reading of the text, or disputing the matter of fact itself, or impeaching the proper divinity of the Saviour, any more than his proper humanity. For this purpose we have nothing to do but simply to refer to the time when the words were spoken, which was before his crucifixion and passion, and much more his resurrection and ascension. Now it is not more extraordinary that there should have been a time when our Saviour, though always God as well as man, was not yet omniscient in the latter capacity, though always so in the former, than that there should have been a time when he was not yet omnipotent in the one capacity, though always so in the other. And if all power, both in heaven and earth, was not communicated to him in his human capacity before his resurrection and ascension, why should all knowledge? He might not therefore be omniscient now, in his human capacity, no more than omnipotent in the same, when this prophecy was delivered, and yet might become both hereafter. The same act of the Father, which committed all power to him in his mediatorial capacity, when he sat down at his right hand, doubtless committed all knowledge also; for the possession of omnipotence implies the possession of omniscience also.'—Greswell, p. 427.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxi. 35. Without the protecting power of God, even our strength may become the means of our destruction. Never were the defences of Jerusalem so powerful, as just before its capture. In that city, and in their strongholds generally throughout the land, the Jewish nation were caught as in a snare.]

36 ver. Let us not be deceived by false appearances of temporal security: let us watch and pray always, that we may escape the destruction awaiting unbelievers; and stand ready for any service unto which our Lord may appoint us, here in grace, or hereafter in glory.

[Mk. xiii. 32. The son knoweth more than the servant: but even as sons of God, there is at least one thing, which our Father has seen meet to hide from us: but He knoweth all things. Let us confide our all to him; and the day of the Lord will be to us a day of blessedness whensoever it cometh.]

MATT. xxiv. 39—44. MARK xiii. 34—.7.

39 entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took-them-all'-away; so shall-also the coming of-the Son of man-be.
40 Then shall-two-be in the field; the one shall-be-taken, and the-41 other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the-one 42 shall-be-taken, and the-other left. Watch γρηγορειτε therefore:
for ye-know not what hour your Lord doth-come.[k]

[k] For the Son of man is as a-man taking-a-far-journey απoδημoς, 34 who-left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to-every-man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch- 35 ye therefore: for ye-know not when the master of-the house cometh, at-even, or at-midnight, or at-the-cock-crowing, or in-the-morning: lest coming suddenly he-find you sleeping.[l] 36

43 [l] But know this, that if the goodman-of-the-house had-known in-what watch the thief would-come, he-would-have-watched, and 44 would-not-have-suffered his house to-be-broken-up. Therefore be ye also ready: for in-such-an-hour-as ye-think not the Son of man cometh. [m]

[m] And what I-say unto-you I-say unto-all, 37
Watch. (Ch. xiv. 1, p. 355.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 38, .9. coming—see on ver. 27, p. 335.

40. In the field—Lu. xvii. 36, § 72, p. 213.

41. grinding, &c.—Lu. xvii. 35, ib.

42. Watch—Mk. xiii. 33—7, supra.

43. thief—Lu. xii. 39, § 63, p. 167.

Mk. xiii. 37. I say unto all, Watch—1 Th. v. 5, 6, 'Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.'—Follow not the example of the children of darkness, ver. 7—but, ver. 8, take the armour of light—ver. 9, 10, 'For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxiv. 37—41. See on Lu. xvii. 26—36, § 72, p. 212, and parallelism, p. 213.

41. Two ... grinding at the mill. The μύλων was a hand-mill with two stones, turned by two persons, generally females.

[42. Watch. γρηγορειτε. Γρηγορεῖτε signifies, 1, to be wakeful; 2, as here, to be watchful. Some of the best commentators, ancient and modern, are with reason of opinion, that our Lord's discourse, as far as regards the destruction of Jerusalem, terminates at ver. 41; and that what follows, ver. 42 (peculiarly applicable to the final advent of our Lord), forms, as it were, the moral of the prophecy, and its practical application to Christ's disciples of every age. Many of the above expositors, too, suppose it to have been spoken upon another occasion, since Luke places it in a different connection. But as the portion in question is applicable in both connections, there is surely no reason why we should not suppose it to have been introduced twice.—See infra, ch. xxv. 13, p. 347; Mk. xiii. 33, .5.—Bloomf.]

Mk. xiii. 34. The Son of man is as a man taking a far journey. Being about to leave this world and go to the Father, he appoints the services that are to be performed by all his servants in their several stations.—See on Mt. xxv. 14, p. 347.

Mt. xxiv. 43, .4. But know this, &c. See on Lu. xii. 38—40, § 63, p. 167.

Goodman of the house. The same word in the original, ch. xx. 1, is translated 'householder.' In the northern parts of Great Britain, the master of the house is still called 'the good man,' and the mistress 'the good woman.'

In what watch. See on Lu. xii. 38, § 63, p. 167.

Be broken up. Rendered more correctly, 'break through,' ch. vi. 19, 20, § 19, p. 134; Lu. xii. 39, § 63, p. 167. It means, 'to break into a house by digging through the wall.'—See Job xxiv. 16; Eze. xii. 5. The expression, 'to break up,' is used in the same sense here as in Ex. xxii. 2, and in the margin of Eze. xviii. 10.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 37—9. May we not so neglect the Divine presence of Christ, as to be unprepared for his personal appearing; and let us never forget that the evil against which we are more especially warned, is an over-attention to the things of this life, preventing a preparation for the life to come.]

Let us not suppose that the signs of Messiah's approach will be any more regarded by this world, than was the preaching of Noah by the old world: nor will it be less regarded by the household of faith, than was the warning of Noah by those that were saved in the ark.

40, .1 ver. Let us attach more importance to inward preparation than to outward condition. In the very same outward circumstances will be found those that shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and those that will be left.

[Mk. xiii. 34. During the absence of our Lord, we may not be idle; nor wait until we receive a commission from man. If we are the Lord's servants, we have, every one of us, received authority to do something for him; and to him we must render an account.]

[35 ver. Let the ministry never forget that Jesus is the Lord of the house; and let us all know our ignorance with regard to the exact period of his return, so as to be wise unto salvation.]—And see margin.

[Mk. xiii. 43. The house of God need not have been broken up and defiled, had those with whom it has been intrusted listened to the warning voice and prophetical instructions of the Master; and had they acted for his house as they would for their own.]

44 ver. As we desire the return of our Lord, let us seek for preparedness to receive him. It must not be that he find his house broken up, and his servants still fast asleep. And let us never forget that preparation for his coming on the part of the bride, is the sign of the coming of the Bridegroom.

[Mk. xiii. 37. The duty of watching, which our Lord saw it needful so to impress upon his first disciples, is a duty belonging to all. It is only thus we can be prepared to resist the attack of the thief, or to receive as we ought our returning Lord. The duty of watching, although emphatically that of the porter, is the duty, and no less the interest, of the whole household of faith.]

(G. 79)—[Lesson 83.]—THE REST OF THE PROPHECY UPON MOUNT OLIVET, AS RELATED BY MATTHEW.—Ch. xxiv. 45—xxv. 30.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxiv. 45—51. Jesus delivers the parable of the servant appointed to give to his household meat in due season. The first of four parables, illustrative of the SECOND advent; and which are antithetic to the like number of parables relating to the FIRST advent, given, ch. xxi. 28—xxii. 14, § 84, pp. 285—94.

—— 45—7. The inquiry, 'Who then is a faithful and wise servant'? Why given so much power, and such abundant means of blessing? If, at his Lord's return, he is found distributing to others according as God hath dealt out to him, 'Blessed is that servant,' &c.

Mt. xxiv. 48—51. Our case, if acting as an evil servant, and putting away from us the idea of our Lord's return, we abuse our trust, oppress those around us, and eat and drink 'with the drunken.'

The servant who beat his fellows.—Matt. xxiv. 45—51.

45 Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath-made-ruler over his 46 household θεραπειας. to give them meat in due-season? Blessed is that servant, whom 47 his lord when-he-cometh shall-find so doing. Verily I-say unto-you, That he-shall-48 make-him-ruler over all his goods. But and-if that evil servant shall-say in his heart,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 45. Who then, &c.—comp. ver. 45—51, with the same in Lu. xii. 42—6, § 63, p. 167, and ADDENDA, p. 172.

faithful and wise, &c.—As Joseph was to Potiphar, Ge. xxxix. 3—5.

servant—or slave; such as Joseph, whose master had 'bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites,' Ge. xxxix. 1—Is. xli. 8, 'But thou, Israel, art my servant,' —xliii. 3, 'I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.'—Yea, he, Eph. v. 2, 'hath given himself for us'—1 Co. vi. 20, 'Ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.'

ruler over his household—see on Lu. xii. 42, § 63.

46. Blessed . . that servant, &c.—see on Lu. xii. 43.

47. ruler over all his goods—or, over all his rulers—see on Lu. xii. 44, § ib., p. 168.

48. evil servant, &c.—The word finds those acting an evil part, Is. lviii. 1—5. . . . . who are exhorted

NOTES.

[Mt. xxiv. 45. Who then, &c. This inquiry seems clearly inconsistent with the idea of the Romanists, that Peter was appointed to the chief rule over the household: but on the other hand, if Peter and his pretended successors, the popes, be the parties referred to, then the context as clearly denies the doctrine of the pope's infallibility; for the parable supposes that the servant, so intrusted with authority, and the possession of the master's goods, may act most unworthily with regard to both; may altogether fail, and at last have his portion with the hypocrites. The words may refer to a people peculiarly favoured, more especially in reference to the gospel.]

[A faithful and wise servant. May be applied to an individual, a minister of Christ, who, by the teaching of the Holy Spirit, is able rightly to divide the word of God; firm in adhering to the truth at all risks: zealous in improving every talent to the glory of God.]

To give them meat in due season. The word of God, whereby the soul may be nourished unto eternal life.

[* Here we have the second illustration, derived from the case of a good or a bad δοῦλος, or, as Luke, using a more specific term, says, οἰκονόμος; from whose account it appears that the words were spoken in answer to a question from Peter, which suggested the parable or illustration here employed. The question was, Lu. xii. 41, § 63, p. 167, Κύριε, πρὸς ἡμᾶς τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην λέγεις, ἢ καὶ πρὸς πάντας; for the apostles, it seems, were always fancying that they should have exemptions and privileges beyond the multitude. Now the answer is intended to correct this error: and accordingly the foregoing general admonition to christian watchfulness is here urged as especially incumbent on those who are intrusted with any spiritual charge, as οἰκονόμοι τῶν μυστηρίων τοῦ θεοῦ, to feed the flock of Christ.'—Comp. 1 Co. iv. 2. —Bloomf.]

47. Over all. That is, from being οἰκονόμος, or dispenser, he will promote him to ἐπίτροπος, treasurer, or steward, which implied freedom.—Comp. ch. xxv. 21, 23, p. 348.

48—51. But and if that evil servant, &c. In these verses our Lord warns his disciples against the effect which the delay of his coming to judgment might have upon his servants, in leading them not only to

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxiv. 45, 6. The servant who would have much intrusted to him by his lord, must endeavour to combine wisdom with faithfulness: he must exercise both his affections and his intellect aright.

[There are diversities of gifts and ministrations: but let those who are the most richly gifted, highly placed, ever remember, that they are so favoured in order that they may do the greater service.]

[It is as much the duty of some to take the lead in the ministry, as it is for others to receive the benefit of their ministrations.]

[The disciples should earnestly inquire, as here prompted by our Lord, who it is he hath appointed to the ministry; so that both he who is to rule in service may feel his responsibility, and others recognise him in his office.]

[The minister in the house of God is not only to give meat to the household, but give it in due season; seeking to please each one for his good to edification.]

A nation, as well as an individual, may be appointed to a particular ministry. The English, possessing such facilities for distributing the bread of life among the nations, are doubtless responsible, far beyond others, who, in general, have neither the same ability, nor yet the same outward opportunities of doing good. We quite mistake our mission, if we suppose that we are given our position chiefly for the purpose of acquiring for ourselves the bread that perisheth.

46 ver. See margin.

We are not to look for our reward now from man, but from our Lord at his coming.

47 ver. Let us be faithful in the position which we now occupy, if we expect to be raised to a higher dignity in the kingdom. Those may afford to act liberally, who know the Almighty is their provider, and that they are to inherit all things.

WE ARE ONLY BLESSED, AS WE BESTOW UPON OTHERS THAT OF WHICH OUR LORD HATH MADE US STEWARDS.

LET US ACT NOW AS WE SHALL WISH TO BE FOUND ACTING AT THE PERSONAL APPEARING OF OUR LORD.

MATT. xxiv. 49—51.

49 My lord delayeth his-coming; and shall-begin to-smite his fellow-servants, and to-eat 50 and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall-come in a-day when he-
51 looketh-not-for him, and in an-hour that he-is-not-aware-of, and shall-cut-him-asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall-be weeping and gnashing of teeth.* [Ch. xxv. 1, p. 346.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

to act the part of the faithful and wise servant, 6—12; and who, if they will turn to honour the Lord, are promised the dominion, 13, 4.

Mt. xxiv. 48. delayeth, &c.—see on Lu. xii. 45, § 63, p. 168.

49. smite his fellow-servants—see ib.

eat and drink, &c.—see ib.

with the drunken—such as described, Rev. xvii. 1, 2, 'The great whore that sitteth upon many waters: with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.'—ver. 6, 'The woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus:'

50. in an hour, &c.—ver. 36, 'But of that day and hour knoweth no man,' &c.—the day of the parousia, ver. 37—9—and hour of his epiphania, or actual appearing, ver. 42—4.

51. cut him asunder, &c.—will cut open, and reveal his real life and character as he did—see on Lu. xii. 46, § 63, p. 168.

his portion—see ib.

with the hypocrites—whose hearts were laid open, and their true character and conduct exposed by the Word, ch. xxiii. 13—30, § 85, p. 315—and whose portion is appointed, ver. 32. 3, § ib., p. 318—see the parallel parable, Lu. xii. 46. § 63, p. 168.

weeping and gnashing of teeth—where were cast those who had reckoned themselves the 'children of the kingdom,' ch. viii. 12, § 28, p. 220—and the man that had not on the wedding garment, xxii. 13, § 84, p. 294.

NOTES.

fail in watchfulness, but also to engage in evil practices, with respect both to others and themselves.—Comp. 2 Pe. iii. 3—10.

Mt. xxiv. 48. Delayeth his coming. See on Lu. xii. 38, § 63, p. 167.

[51. Shall cut him asunder. 'The common translation of the words dichotomēsei autón, ill suits with what follows of the punishment of this man, which supposes him still alive. It is no answer to say, that the punishment of the wicked will affect both the present life and the future. Beza has correctly rendered dichotomēsei autón, separabit eum; and see on Lu. xii. 46, § ib., p. 168, where we read, instead of "hypocrites," "unbelievers." '—Bloomf.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxiv. 48. Let us beware. As our highly favoured position gives us greater opportunities of usefulness, so will our guilt, in the case of unfaithfulness, be the greater, and our consequent punishment more severe. One of the great sources of evil in many is the secret persuasion that they will not soon be called to account. Let us not be among those who say, 'My Lord delayeth his coming;']

[If we do not rightly use our power, it is likely enough that we will abuse it. Let us not be of those who contend with their fellow-servants, and who smite those they should cherish and protect; and in place of giving food to the hungry, drink with the drunken.]

50, 51. ver. Men may hide their selfishness and pride under the guise of religion now; but we are all naked and open to the eye of Him with whom we have to do. Miserable will be the portion of those who feed only themselves, and who, it may be, are zealous only in preventing others being fed. At the coming of the Lord, those who laugh now, then shall have weeping and gnashing of teeth.'

* 'There is no security for the constant discharge of the duties of a given station, except in the continual consciousness of a responsibility for that discharge; there is no security for the continual consciousness of a responsibility, except in the reflection that an account is always impending; however delayed it is never excused, however distant it must one day arrive. The habits of practical virtue must be formed and reside in moral agents, if their lives and actions are to be uniformly accommodated to the standard of their duty: but they will not be formed, nor kept alive in them, except by constantly meditating on the great end for which they are placed in their temporary state of probation; and what influence their conduct here, during a limited period of being, must exert in determining their condition hereafter, through all eternity. The certainty of the account which all must give—the uncertainty of the time when each must be called to his own; the present labour and diligence in the discharge of an appointed part, which is the direct practical result of both—are the whole implied by the vigilance required of Christians; and all that is necessary to its full effect. If the fatal moment finds them thus employed, however suddenly and unexpectedly it may arrive, it cannot take them by surprise; for it cannot find them unprepared for their account. No steward can ever be unfit to resign a trust, who is intent upon it at all times with equal fidelity; no servant can be afraid to appear, on any summons, before a master, in whose service he is always engaged with equal diligence; no innocent person can be afraid to present himself at any time before a judge, from whose justice he knows he has nothing to apprehend.

'Considered in this point of view, it is indifferent to the end proposed by the uncertainty in question, whether the appointed moment of the final account be the day of judgment, or the day of death. The same obscurity hangs over the latter; doubtless for the same reason, that men are to do so live at all times, as to be at any time prepared to die. But the period of death is virtually the period of judgment also; since after death comes the judgment, and there is no more trial or probation between the one and the other. The day when a man is called away from life, is as good as the day when he is called to his account. The interval between death and the resurrection may be longer or shorter in itself; but it is of no moment, as a period of suspense between death and judgment, whether it be long or short; it weighs as nothing in the scale of moral responsibility, and neither adds to, nor diminishes from, the things done in the body. As the tree falls so it lies, Ec. xi. 3; and as life will leave us, so the judgment will find us. No increase, from the amount of personal ill desert, contracted in life; or none that will be taken into account at the day of doom. The everlasting destination of every moral agent, is as irrevocably fixed at the hour of his departure from the world, by the tenor of his past existence; as if his final audit were forthwith to be transacted, and his final sentence to be pronounced and executed upon him. Whatever be the nature of that intermediate state of being, in which departed souls continue to exist, before their reunion with the body; whatever difference the justice of God may even now make, in the disposal and treatment of the good and the bad respectively; whatever may be the separate occupations, enjoyments, or sufferings, of each in their proper place and sphere; we may be certain of thus much, that this interval is devoted to no purpose, nor transacted in any manner, which will be taken into consideration at the last day, or possess the least weight in deciding the everlasting fortunes of either the good or the bad, according to the judgment of that day.'—Gresswell on the Parables, Vol. V. p. 440.

ARE THERE NOT AMONG OURSELVES MANY WHO ARE WILLING TO ACT THE PART OF THE EVIL SERVANT; WHO SYMBOLIZE EVEN WITH THE BLOOD OF THE SAINTS, IN DRUNKEN

THE PARABLES OF THE TEN VIRGINS AND THE TEN TALENTS.—Matt. xxv. 1—13;* 14—30. Mount of Olives.

INTRODUCTION.

Mt. xxv. 'The two parables which follow (ver. 1—13, 14—30) are intended to carry on the subject treated of in the latter part of the preceding chapter 'this being one continued discourse on the mount of Olives, in sight of the temple).....And the object of both is to warn men of the necessity of being always prepared to meet their Judge. Accordingly, at the close of these parables there is a transition to the subject of the general judgment only. The scope of the first parable is to inculcate the necessity of continued vigilance, constant prayer, and perseverance in every good work; and it is especially designed to discourage all trust in a late repentance. It is founded on the circumstances which attended the celebration of marriage among the Jews, with whom it was usual for a procession of females to grace the nuptial ceremony.'—Bloomf.

'As the Jews had ordinarily their weddings at night, and seldom fewer than ten bridemaids, that custom is here alluded to. Christ is the glorious bridegroom. The ten virgins denote multitudes of professing, and apparently real, Christians. Their slumbering and sleeping denote their common sloth and security while Christ withdraws his presence. The foolish virgins, who had only lamps, but no oil in them, represent nominal Christians, who have a profession of gospel truth, but no real grace; and who, when awakened by death or judgment, shall find their profession come to nothing. The wise virgins are true believers, whose external profession of Christ arises from real grace in their hearts; and who are, notwithstanding occasional sloth and slumberings, in an habitual readiness to meet with Christ; ..... these, though they have no grace or good works to be imparted to others, shall be graciously admitted to eternal fellowship with him in the heavenly mansion.

'By the bridegroom's tarrying, and at last coming while the virgins slept, are represented Christ's delaying to come to judgment, and the suddenness of his coming at last.—Comp. ch. xxiv. 44—50, p. 342. The practical application of the parable is given by our Lord at ver. 13.'—Lonsdale.

Mt. xxv. 14—30. Comp. with Lu. xix. 12—27, § 80, p. 248, and ADDENDA, p. 251, 'Parallelism.' The circumstances of the parable vary in certain particulars, and the imagery is somewhat diversified, but the leading features are, for the most part, the same, as is the sentiment precisely; it is, that to every man a trust is consigned, for which he is responsible; and that the judgment passed upon him finally will correspond with the means of improvement at present confided to him. 'The design of this parable is to encourage active usefulness. It is meant still further to illustrate the manner in which Christ will deal with men at his return to judgment. Or to enter more particularly into its nature, there are, Mr. Greswell thinks, two histories combined therein; the first comprehending the five first verses; the second continuing to the end: one containing a scheme of probation; the other one of retribution: one preparing the way for the other; and of course the latter economy forming the principal subject of the parabolic narrative.'—Bloomf.

The goods intrusted to their care were according to the several ability of the servants, and must have been different from the several ability of each, according to which measure they were given, and whereby they are to be occupied. May they not be the treasures of Divine truth, of which there is sufficient to occupy the strongest intellect, the most active powers, the largest means, and most ample opportunities; and a duplicate of which should be found in the hearts and lives of all with whom they have been intrusted?

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxv. 1—13. THE SECOND OF THE LAST FOUR PARABLES, THAT OF THE TEN VIRGINS.

—— 1. Ten virgins, taking their lamps, go forth to meet the Bridegroom.

—— 2—4. The different conduct of the five wise virgins, from that of the five foolish.

—— 5. The bridegroom seems to delay, and all slumber and sleep.

—— 6. At midnight the cry is heard, 'Behold, the bridegroom cometh.'

—— 7. All arise, and trim their lamps.

—— 8, 9. The foolish, finding that their lamps are going out, apply to the wise for oil. The wise recommend them to go to those who sell, and buy for themselves.

—— 10. The bridegroom comes. Those who are ready go in with him, and the door is shut.

—— 11, 12. Those who were unprepared, come, crying, 'Lord, Lord, open to us'; but he does not acknowledge them.

—— 13. The lesson—'Watch therefore.'

—— 14—30. THE THIRD OF THE LAST FOUR PARABLES, THAT OF THE TALENTS; OR GOOD AND WICKED SERVANTS.

Mt. xxv. 14. The Son of man is as a man travelling into a far country, who calls his own servants, to leave his goods in charge with them.

—— 15. He gives to each according to his ability: to one, five talents; to another, two; to another, one,

—— 16, 17. Each of the first two mentioned, in trading with his Lord's money, doubles the original sum.

—— 18. The third hides his talent in the earth.

—— 19. After a long time the lord returns, and reckons with his servants.

—— 20, 21. The servant who has doubled the five talents, gives in his account with joy; he is commended, and received into the joy of his lord.

—— 22, 23. The servant who has gained two talents, receives the like commendation and reward.

—— 24—30. Last of all comes the servant who hid his lord's money, and says, 'Lord, I knew thee,' &c. He is judged out of his own mouth, and condemned for not allowing others to make gain of the money, seeing he would not use it himself. The talent is given to him that has ten; and the unprofitable servant cast into outer darkness.

* 'The particle of time (τότε) which connects the beginning of this chapter with the end of the last, must be referred either to the beginning or to the close of the parabolic allegory just preceding, that is, either to the point of time denoted by Mt. xxiv. 45, or to that denoted by xxiv. 51, between which the connection is such that the one refers to the first commencement, the other to the close and consummation of one and the same intermediate economy, specially applicable to the particular probation and particular responsibility of the ministers of religion: the former determined by the departure of Christ from the government of his church in person, the latter by his return to take cognizance of it again. In this case, the object of the reference in what follows, to what has just preceded, will be to shew, that at either of the periods in question, whether that of the departure, or that of the return of Christ, in person, the same event should produce effects upon the Christian world in general, analogous to what the parabolic allegory just recited shewed it to have produced with respect to the ministers of religion in particular. The parable, then, which follows was intended to be as applicable to the moral probation and moral responsibility of all who agreed in the character of Christians in general, as the parabolic allegory which had preceded, to those of the ministers of religion in particular.'—Greswell on the Parables, Vol. V. p. 487.

YE, BRETHREN, ARE NOT IN DARKNESS, THAT THAT DAY SHOULD OVERTAKE YOU AS A THIEF.—1 Thess. v. 4.

YE ARE ALL THE CHILDREN OF LIGHT, AND THE CHILDREN OF THE DAY:—1 Thess. v. 5.

The parable of ten virgins.—Matt. xxv. 1—13.

1 Then shall-the kingdom of heaven-be-likened-unto ten virgins, which took their 2 lamps, and-went-forth to meet εἰς ἀπαντησιν the bridegroom. And five of them were 3 wise, and five were foolish. They-that were foolish took their lamps, and-took no oil
4 with them: but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. 5, While-the 6 bridegroom-tarried, they-all-slumbered ἐνυσταξαν and slept. And at-midnight there-
7 was-a-cry-made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go-ye-out to meet him. Then all 8 those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto-the wise, Give 9 us of your oil; for our lamps are-gone-out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so;

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 1. ten virgins—It is said of the bride, the church of the first-born, Ps. xlv. 14, 5, 'She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework: the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee. With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought: they shall enter into the king's palace.'—Comp. Je. xxxi. 9; He. xii. 23.

lamps—Ps. cxix. 105, 'Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.'—That this lamp may give forth the light—the hope of the gospel, it must be held fast in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus, 2 Ti. i. 10—3—The light must be kept burning through the supply of the Holy Ghost dwelling in us, ver. 14.

went forth—This going forth might be from their usual homes unto the place of rendezvous, the dwelling of the bride—see on ver. 6, next column.

to meet the bridegroom—or, 'to a meeting of the bridegroom'—The same word occurs in the account of Paul's progress to Rome, Ac. xxviii. 15—also in the description of the personal return of our Lord, and resurrection of those who sleep in Jesus, 1 Th. iv. 17.

bridegroom.——see Jno. iii. 29, § 13, p. 89.

2. wise.——He who made provision against the future was said to have done wisely—In that respect he is presented as an example to 'the children of light,' Lu. xvi. 8, § 69, p. 197—see the charge to Timothy, 1 Ti. vi. 13—6—and to the rich, 17—9—see the rich provision God hath made for the wise, that they may maintain good works, Ti. iii. 5—8.

foolish—He who raised curious questions respecting the resurrection is called a fool, 1 Co. xv. 35, 6; 2 Ti. ii. 23—Tit. iii. 9, 'Avoid foolish questions,'

3. lamps . . . . no oil—Jer. viii. 7—9, 'Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times: and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord. How do ye say, We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us? Lo, certainly in vain made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain,' &c.

4. in their vessels, &c.—2 Co. iv. 6, 7, 'The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels,' &c.—Eph. v. 18—20, 'Be filled with the Spirit; . . . . singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;' &c.—1 Jno. ii. 20, 'Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.'

5. tarried—2 Pe. iii. 9, 'The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.'

slumbered and slept—1 Th. v. 6, 'Let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.'

6. midnight, &c.—Mk. xiii. 35, supra, p. 342, 'Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight,' &c.

Behold, the bridegroom, &c.—1 Th. iv. 16, 'The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel,' &c.

go ye out to meet him—Is. lx. 1, 'Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.'—Eph. v. 14, 'Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.'

7. trimmed, &c.—The word seems to intimate that they adorned their lamps; but ornaments are valueless without light—we are to let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works, and glorify our Father who is in heaven, ch. v. 16, § 19, p. 123.

NOTES.

Mt. xxv. 1. Virgins, . . . took their lamps, . . . to meet the bridegroom, &c. The Jewish marriages were generally celebrated in the evening, at the house of the bride's parents, and without any religious ceremonies. After the connubial union was ratified, it was customary for the bridegroom (as among the Greeks and Romans), in the evening, to conduct his spouse from her friends' house to his own home, with all the pomp, brilliancy, and joy that could be crowded into the procession. It was usual for female friends and relations to be invited to grace the procession, and to add numbers and lustre to the retinue; these, adorned with suitable apparel, took lamps, and waited in a company near the house, till the bride and bridegroom with their friends issued forth, whom they welcomed with the customary congratulations; and with songs and acclamations, and every demonstration of joy, advanced to the bridegroom's house, where an entertainment was provided for the party, according to the circumstances of the united pair. The doors were then shut, to prevent strangers from intruding. The like custom still exists among the Hindoos. The marriage festivities lasted seven days.

2. Five of them were wise. Or, provident, φρονιμοι.

[Five were foolish. Μωροι, which might be translated careless, is generally rendered foolish; but this does not agree so well with φρονιμοι, provident or prudent, in the first clause, which is the proper meaning of the word. Μωρος, in the Etymologicon, is thus defined: μη ὁρᾶ το δεον, he who sees not what is proper or necessary.]

4. Took oil in their vessels. They not only had a sufficiency of oil in their lamps, but they carried a vessel with oil to recruit their lamps, when it should be found expedient. In many parts of the East, instead of torches, they carry a pot of oil in one hand, and a lamp, which is supplied from it, in the other.

5. Slumbered and slept. They were all drowsy, and some were asleep.

6. At midnight. At an hour when the summons was not expected.

7. Arose. Rather, 'awoke,' according to the original.

8. Are gone out. Marg. 'are going out.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxv. 1, 2. It is not enough that we are of those who have a christian profession: let us see that we have the grace belonging thereto; grace which shall endure through every trial, and glorify Christ at his coming.]

3, 4 ver. It is characteristic of the foolish to look only to the present want. It is the part of the wise to improve present opportunity in providing for the future.—[On ver. 5, 6, see margin.]

[7 ver. Let us examine ourselves in time, lest we be wanting for eternity. It is quite possible for us to be deceived in this most important matter. The foolish as well as the wise arose and trimmed their lamps, and seem not to have known they were lacking until it was too late.]

[8, 9 ver. It is characteristic of the foolish to look to the creature for the supply of grace. Their dependence is upon the church, which some are so unwise as

THE PAST EXAMPLE OF THE CHURCHES IS NOT OUR PRESENT RULE OF DUTY. WE HAVE ALL SLUMBERED, AND SOME HAVE SLEPT.
LET US BE AWAKE AND READY TO ARISE, WHENSOEVER THE CRY IS HEARD, 'THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH; GO YE OUT TO MEET HIM.'

MATT. XXV. 10—3.

lest there-be-not-enough for-us and you: but go-ye rather to them that-sell, and buy 10 for-yourselves. And while-they-were went to-buy, the bridegroom came, and they-that were 11 ready went-in with him to the marriage: and the door was-shut. Afterward came also 12 the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to-us. But he answered and-said, Verily 13 I-say unto-you, I-know you not. Watch therefore, for ye-know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

The parable of the talents.—Matt. XXV. 14—30.

14 For the kingdom of heaven is as a-man travelling-into-a-far-country, who called his-15 own servants, and delivered unto-them his goods. And unto-one he-gave five talents, to-another two, and to-another one; to-every-man according-to his-several ability; and

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 9. lest . . . . not enough, &c. — Ps. xlix. 7, 'None . . . can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him:'

buy for yourselves—Had they applied in time, they might have procured blessing upon easy terms—Is. lv. 1, 'Ho, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.'—6, 'Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:' —Eph. iii. 14—21, 'For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, 15, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, 16, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;' &c.

10. the door was shut—Lu. xiii. 25, § 66, p. 178, 'When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord,' &c.—He. iii. 18, 19, 'And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.'

11. Lord, Lord, &c.—Jesus had before testified, that it is not every one who makes such a cry, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he who doeth the will of his Father, ch. vii. 21, § 19, p. 140.

12. I know you not, &c.—Pr. i. 29—33, 'For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD:' &c.—Ps. v. 5, 'The foolish shall not stand in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.'—1 Co. viii. 3, 'If any man love God, the same is known of him.'—2 Ti. ii. 19, 'Having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every,' &c.

14. as a man travelling, &c.—so is the Son of man, whose coming is to be waited for, as before, ver. 13—see also 'A certain noblemau went,' &c., Lu. xix. 12, § 80, p. 248—comp. ch. xxv. 14—30, with Lu. xix. 12—26, § 80, p. 248—and see 'Parallelism,' p. 251.

into a far country—Lu. xix. 12, § ib., 'into a far country . . . . and to return.'

his own, &c.—The Jewish people are especially called his own; as, Jno. i. 11, § 7, p. 47, 'He came unto his own, and his own received him not.'

servants—see on 'servant,' ch. xxiv. 45, supra—In the parable, Lu. xix. 12—27, § 80, p. 248, the servants spoken of were ten in number, and with each of them the same sum of one pound was left.

delivered unto them—Rom. iii. 1, 2, 'What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God.'

his goods — The goods which he valued — which Jesus left in trust with his disciples, were the words of wisdom — Pr. viii. 10, .1, 'Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.'

15. gave five . . . . two, &c.—1 Co. xii. 11, 'dividing to every man severally as he will.'

according to his several ability—The talents were therefore not the ability itself, but something given correspondent thereto, and in which the ability was to be exercised as Jesus directed, Jno. vi. 27, § 43, p. 326, 'Labour not for the meat which perisheth,

NOTES.

Mt. xxv. 10. And they that were ready. They who were prepared; who had not only a burning lamp of an evangelical profession, but had oil in their vessel, the faith that works by love in their hearts, and their lives adorned with all the fruits of the Spirit.

[The marriage. αἰς τοὺς γάμους, 'ad nuptias.' The Greek word, γάμους, rather means, 'the apartment in which the marriage feast was kept,' or the house where the marriage was celebrated. The marriage ceremony took place before the bride left her father's house, but a feast was given at the house of her husband, and which was also called the marriage, or a part of the marriage solemnities.]

The door was shut. When the bridegroom, at a Hindoo marriage, has entered the house, the door is shut and guarded; after which, no expostulation or reward will obtain admission. So when the Lord shall have come, no more can be received into the glorified church.

[12. I know you not. οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς. I do not recognise you among those who accompanied me and my spouse, and so far you are unknown to me, and inadmissible. The word know is often used in the sense of approving, loving, acknowledging as real friends and followers.—See Mt. vii. 23; Ps. i. 6; 2 Ti. ii. 19; 1 Th. v. 12.]

[13. Watch, &c. The word does not only call for wakefulness, but being vigilant or alive; watchful, so as to be fully provided for the occasion, and prepared for the efficient discharge of duty; in order to which, there must not only be a survey of the present, but a due regard to the future.]

15. Five talents, &c. If the talents were talents of gold, he that had five of them was entrusted with a sum of thirty-six thousand pounds sterling; if they were of silver, they amounted to two thousand two hundred and fifty pounds. There are circumstances, however, which may lead us to doubt the accuracy of our calculations upon ancient sums. The Greek word Τάλαντον, is used by Homer for something of much less value than the price of two fat oxen.

According to his several ability. 'According to each one's particular capacity and ability to employ the money to advantage.' Thus it seems that masters to think can help them, even after death; but we must in time buy for ourselves: and blessed be God we can buy, without money and without price. Let us look to God alone; and the Father, through the Son, by his Holy Spirit, will supply our every want.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxv. 10. Let us be now ready to enter. It will be too late to seek an entrance when the door is shut.

11 ver. See margin.

12 ver. It is not by crying unto the saints for help, as the poor Romanists do, that we can obtain entrance into the joy of our Lord, but as being known of Him, and prepared to meet Him at his appearing.

13 ver. Let us both be prepared, and ever on the watch, for we know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh.

There must not only be a watching against danger, as ch. xxiv. 43, supra, but a watching for opportunities of honouring the Lord, by being ready to every good work, Ti. iii. 1.

[14 ver. Let the servants of Christ feel that they are his; and that though he does not immediately call them to account, yet assuredly he will at his return: let them consider that they should not be the less anxious to advance his interests, now that he is gone into heaven to procure blessing for them.]

MATT. XXV. 16—22.

16 straightway took-his-journey. Then he that-had-received the five talents went and-17 traded with the-same, and made them other five talents. And likewise he-that had 18 received two, he also gained other two. But he that-had-received one went and-digged
19 in the earth, and hid his lord's money. After a-long time the lord of those servants 20 cometh, and reckoneth with them. And-so he that-had-received five talents came and-brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou-deliveredst unto-me five talents: behold, 21 I-have-gained beside them five talents more. His lord said unto-him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou-hast-been faithful over a-few-things, I-will-make-thee-22 ruler over many-things: enter-thou into the joy of thy lord. He also that-had-received two talents came and-said, Lord, thou-deliveredst unto-me two talents: behold, I-have-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.'—Pr. iii. 14—8, 'The merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold,' &c.

Mt. xxv. 15. straightway took his journey—Ac. i. 2, 'He was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:'

16. other five talents—Pr. viii. 19—21, 'My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver. 20, I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: 21, that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures.'

17. other two—Having it now, not only in his hand but in his heart and life—having a double of that which was presented to him in the written word—become, 2 Co. iii. 3, 'the epistle of Christ . . . written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.'

18. digged in the earth, &c.—He should rather have followed the example of the psalmist, Ps. cxix. 11, 'Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.'—And as directed by wisdom,

Pr. iv. 20—2, 'My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings. 21, Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. 22, For they are life unto those that find them, and health [marg. medicine] to all their flesh.'

19. After a long time, &c.—Ps. xc. 13, 'Return, O LORD, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.'

reckoneth with them, &c.—2 Co. v. 10, 'For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ;' &c.

20. gained beside them, &c.—2 Jno., ver. 8, 'Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.'

21. ruler over many things—Lu. xxii. 29, § 87, p. 376, 'I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;'—Rev. iii. 21, 'To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down,' &c.

joy of thy lord—Lu. xxii. 30, § 87, p. 376, 'That ye may eat and drink at my table,' &c.—Jno. xvii. 24, § 95., p. 404, 'Father, I will that,' &c.—He. xii. 2, 'Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him,' &c. —1 Pe. i. 8, 'In whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:'

NOTES.

sometimes (as is still the case in the East and in Russia) committed to their slaves some capital, to be employed in traffic; for the improvement of which they were to be accountable to them.

[The expression 'according to his several ability,' may denote, that every man hath that portion which best suits the station intended for him, in the church and in the community; and which would suffice for his becoming a useful, honourable, and accepted servant. It should not be concluded from what follows, that they who receive most, are generally the most faithful, for the contrary is very commonly the case, and the scripture teaches us to expect that it will be so. But our Lord thus shews, that an account must be rendered of the weakest abilities, and smallest advantages, as well as of those which are more eminent and distinguishing. It will be no excuse for a man to plead that he had but little intrusted to him, if he neglects to make a good use of that little; for the conduct of the servant who buried his talent, represents the character of those who make no good use of their abilities, opportunities, and advantages; who neglect the duties of their stations; who live to themselves, and are engaged in earthly pursuits; who deem it enough not to do positive evil; who are destitute of love; and who are actuated by envy, discontent, and selfish passions.]

Mt. xxv. 19. Reckoneth. Compares or adjusts the account with them; the account required is therefore exact and strict.

21. Well done. The original word, εὖ, has a peculiar force and energy, far beyond what can be exactly expressed in English. It was used by auditors, or spectators, in any public exercise, to express the highest applause, when any part had been well performed. 'Bravo!' comes, perhaps, something near it, but is not equally elegant and forcible.

[Into the joy of thy lord. Χαρὰν, which our translators have rendered joy, signifies also a feast. The LXX. interpret the Heb. מִשְׁתֶּה, convivium, by χαρὰν, Est. ix. 19. The connection is easy between joy and feasting. It may be remarked, that

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxv. 15. See margin. We may each take from God's treasury what we can, to exercise our varied powers of understanding, engage our affections, regulate our lives, and direct us in our conduct toward God and toward men. But although our Lord has given the same Bible to all, he does not expect the same degree of knowledge in all.]

[16, 17 ver. In each of us may there be produced a duplicate of that which we have received. May we so exercise ourselves in the word of God as to become epistles of Christ, 'known and read of all men.']

18 ver. If men would labour as much in and according to the scriptures as they do in the opinions and ordinances of men, their labour would be much more pleasant, and far more profitable.

19 ver. Our Lord anticipated that his personal absence would be long, as it has been; but however long the delay, there will at length come a time of reckoning. Let us account that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation. Let us redeem the time, and henceforth act, so as at length to give in our account with joy.

[20 ver. May we be able to rejoice before our Lord in the gain we have received from the treasure with which he has intrusted us. Let our gain be such as cannot be lost in the loss of all things earthly; such as we can carry into the presence of our Lord at his coming, and say, 'I have gained,' &c. It will be but small comfort that our religious attainments procured us the best 'living' upon earth, if we have failed to make gain of the word of God, so as to have life in the soul, and so as to be made heirs of everlasting life.]

[21 ver. Let the servant of God be good and faithful as in the sight of God; and whatever dishonour or other ill reward he may meet with from the world, he will be abundantly recompensed in receiving honour, power, riches, and joy, in the presence of the just; as being received by his Lord into the inheritance which He has gone to procure.]

22, 3 ver. Although we may not possess the same

IN THE RICH TREASURY OF DIVINE TRUTH THERE IS ENOUGH TO OCCUPY ALL.
IT WILL BE WELL THAT WE EACH POSSESS THE BIBLE TO THE UTMOST OF OUR ABILITY.

MATT. XXV. 23—.7.

23 gained two other talents beside them. His lord said unto-him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou-hast-been faithful over a-few-things, I-will-make-thee-ruler over 24 many-things: enter-thou into the joy of thy lord. Then he which-had-received the one talent came and-said, Lord, I-knew thee that thou-art an-hard σκληρος man, reaping 25 where thou-hast-not-sown, and gathering where thou-hast-not-strawed: and I-was-26 afraid, and-went and-hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou-hast that is thine. His lord answered and-said unto-him, Thou wicked and slothful οκνηρε servant, thou-
27 knewest that I-reap where I-sowed not, and gather where I-have-not-strawed: thou

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 22. two other talents—2 Co. viii. 12, 'If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.'—See the case of the poor widow, Mk. xii. 43, .4, § 85.

23. Well done, &c.—2 Co. x. 18, 'Not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.'—See on ver. 21.

24. Lord, I knew thee—Pr. xxvi. 12—ver. 16, 'The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.'

hard man—Job xxi. 15, 'What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?'—Mal. i. 13, 'Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts;'

where thou hast not sown—God is not such an unskilful husbandman—He looks for the harvest where his good seed has been sown—Is. xxviii. 23—.9, 'Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken, and hear my speech,' &c.—Je. ii. 31, 'O generation, see ye the word of the LORD. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness? wherefore say my people, We are lords; we will come no more unto thee?'

25. I was afraid—Retaining the disposition of the old Adam, when he said, Ge. iii. 10, 'I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.'—And of Israel, immediately before the Lord wrapped up his word in the ceremonials of the old covenant, Ex. xx. 19—Under the new covenant this fear is removed, He. x. 19—22, 'Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,' &c.—1 Jno. iv. 18, .9, 'There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love. We love him, because he first loved us.'

26. His lord answered, &c.—Jude, ver. 14, .5, 'Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.'

wicked and slothful—or, 'evil and slothful'—evil, as having ill thoughts of his lord, as expressed, ver. 24—slothful, as making no use of what was intrusted to his care, as ver. 25—Evil and slothful are opposed to the characteristics, 'good and faithful,' ver. 21, .3, supra.

thou knewest that, &c.—repeating the evil servant's own words, as in ver. 24—and judging him according to his own rule, as forewarned, Ps. xviii. 26, with the froward the Lord will shew himself froward—Eze. xxxiii. 20, 'Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

NOTES.

freed servants were frequently invited to recline at meat with their masters, though the slaves were not allowed that privilege: so Demetrius, the freed man of Pompey the Great.]

Mt. xxv. 24. An hard man. σκληρὸς. Hard-hearted, 'griping;' one who exacts his due to the uttermost, ἀπροδόσκητος: so Josephus, Ant. vi. 14, uses it of Nabal. 'Severe and unreasonable in thy demands upon thy servants, exacting more than they have ability to perform.'

Reaping where thou hast not sown. That is, requiring more of us than thou givest us power to perform. So does every obstinate sinner, in one kind or other, lay the blame of his own sins on God.

[25. Was afraid. φοβηθεὶς. That is, 'fearing lest if I should lose the money, thou wouldst severely exact it of me,' by taking away all my substance (Euth.). This was evidently a mere excuse; but as Euthym. observes, the parable puts a weak excuse into the mouth of the slothful servant, in order to shew that in such a case no reasonable apology can be made.]

In the earth, &c. This represents the conduct of those who neglect the abilities that God has given, and fail to do what he has required. Their excuses are without foundation, for God does not require us to do as much as those who have greater abilities; but this is not a reason why we should do nothing, 2 Co. viii. 12. That situation is honourable, and may be useful, where God has placed us; and though humble, yet in that we may do much good, 1 Co. xii. 11—21. Men of slender abilities often do more good in the world than men of much greater talents. It is rather a warm heart than a strong head which is required to do good. Christ will call men to an account for the manner in which they have improved their talents.—See Rom. xiv. 12; 2 Co. v. 10; Ac. xvii. 31. No one is excused in indolence on account of his having comparatively little opportunity of doing good. God will require of him only according to his ability, 1 Co. iv. 2; Lu. xii. 48. All the excuses of sinners are to cheat themselves out of heaven. Sinners grudge what God requires, yet sell themselves to Satan for naught.

[Lo, . . . thou hast . . . thine. He was like the Jews and the Romanists, who think it a great matter that they have preserved the letter of the word, buried under the rubbish of human traditions and opinions. But the word of God is not rightly used as being merely preserved; it was spoken that it might be heard, understood, rejoiced in, and obeyed. We cannot say to our Lord, 'Lo, thou hast thine,' except we are ourselves presented holy and without blame before him in love.]

26. Wicked and slothful. Wicked, inasmuch as thou hast been slothful, having wilfully neglected the trust which I committed to thee.

[Thou knewest that I reap, &c. Some commentators have translated this passage interrogatively, thus: 'Didst thou know that I was?' &c. The argument appears to be as follows:—'Though it were really true, as thou sayest, that I reap where I sow not, and thou durst not risk the money in merchandise, yet thou oughtest to have put it out to the public moneychangers to interest; some exertions should have been made.' He mentioned this instance of good management, because it was the lowest that could be, and was attended with the least trouble, to intimate, that though the servant had not pursued, with his lord's money, that particular trade in which, according to the custom of the times, he had been instructed, yet, if he had been at any pains at all to improve the stock committed to him, though it had been ever so little, he would not have been so entirely to blame.]

Reap where I sowed not. Near small towns and ability as some others, yet let us be faithful in what we are given, and we also shall receive our full measure of joy.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxv. 24, .5. It is remarkable that in the parable, the only man who boasts of his knowledge of the Lord, is the man who has it not.

[That is not a true knowledge of the Lord, which leads to distrust, in place of casting out fear, and procuring us all things that pertain to life and godliness.]—See margin.

[26, .7 ver. It is expected that we act according to our convictions of truth and duty, whatever these

LET NO MAN THINK THAT HE IS WISE, WHILE REFUSING TO MAKE USE OF THE WORD OF GOD.
TRUE WISDOM CONSISTS IN OUR BEING ACCORDANT TO GOD'S WORD IN HEART AND IN LIFE.

MATT. XXV. 28—30.

oughtest therefore to-have-put my money to-the exchangers, and then at-my-coming I 28 should have-received mine-own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him, and 29 give it unto-him which-hath ten talents. For unto every-one that-hath shall-be-given, and he-shall-have-abundance: but from him that-hath not shall-be-taken-away even 30 that-which he-hath. And cast-ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall-be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 27. thou oughtest, &c. — see Lu. xix. 23, § 80, p. 250.

28. Take therefore, &c.—Lu. xix. 24, § 80.

29. For unto every one, &c.—see the same principle stated, ch. xiii. 12, § 32, p. 245; Mk. iv. 25, § 33, p. 259—He who can, with our Great Exampler, say, Ps. xl. 8, 'I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart.'—He who thus hath shall be given the true knowledge of those symbolic representations, and verbal exhibitions of the truth, in which formalists rest, without penetrating into their meaning, or allowing their great lesson of love to be stamped upon the heart and life—Lu. viii. 18, § 33, p. 259, 'Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.'—Mary, who sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word, was more commended by our Lord than her sister, who was careful and troubled about many things: x. 42, § 61, p. 150, 'But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.'—See xix. 26, § 80, p. 250.

30. unprofitable, &c.—so, as to the branches that abide not in the true vine, and are found withered, Jno. xv. 6, § 87, p. 308, 'Men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.'

outer darkness, &c. — Is. xxi. 12, 'The morning cometh, and also the night:'—Am. v. 18, 'Woe unto you that desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? the day of the LORD is darkness, and not light.'—20, 'Shall not the day of the LORD be darkness, and not light? even very dark, and no brightness in it?'—The unprofitable are to have their portion with those described, Jude, ver. 13, as 'raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever:'—Mal. iii. 18, 'Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.'

NOTES.

villages, grain was sown in common fields, which were divided into parts proportioned to the number and extent of the resident families. As the divisions were made with no great accuracy, it was in the power of a selfish and disingenuous man to encroach on his neighbour's territory, and to reap more than his own seed-corn had produced.—Comp. Pr. xxiii. 10; Job xxiv. 2—10.

Mt. xxv. 27. Exchangers. τραπεζίταις. These discharged not only the offices of our bankers, in receiving and giving out money, and giving interest upon it, but also in exchanging coins, and distinguishing genuine from forged money. — See on Lu. xix. 23, § 80, p. 250.

[With usury. σὺν τόκῳ, with interest. Anciently the import of the word usury was no other than profit, whether great or small, allowed to the lender for the use of borrowed money. As this practice often gave rise to great extortion, the very name at length became odious. The consideration that the Jews were prohibited by their law from taking any profit from one another for money (though they were allowed to take it from strangers), contributed to increase the odium. When christian commonwealths judged it necessary to regulate this matter by law, they gave to such profit as does not exceed the legal, the softer name of interest; since which time usury has come to signify solely extravagant profit disallowed by law; and which, therefore, it is criminal in the borrower to give, and in the lender to take. As it is not this kind of profit that is here meant, the word usury is now become improper.]

29. Him that hath not. See on ch. xiii. 12, § 32, p. 245. The words may be paraphrased, with Kuinoel, 'When any one does not properly use gifts bestowed, or benefits received, even these are taken from him. But to him who rightly employs them, more are given, as rewards of his good management.'

[The right interpretation appears to be this:—From him that hath not, i. e., hath not anything additional, or any improvement, shall be taken away even that which he hath; i. e., the principal, the sum which was originally committed to his charge. As to the expression in St. Luke, viii. 18, § 33, p. 259, 'that which he seemeth to have,' it is not meant that he only seems to have it in his possession, and really has it not; but that he only has it in his possession without any original right to it; he has it not as his own, but as deposited by another, who can justly take it from him whenever he pleases. He has it, therefore, as it is in his possession, and only seems to have it, or (which is all the same) really has it not, as he has no right to it.]

30. Cast ye . . . . into outer darkness. See on ch. viii. 12, § 28, p. 220.

Unprofitable servant. Ἀχρεῖον here means 'useless:' so mere harmlessness, on which many build their hope of salvation, was the cause of his damnation.

14—30. 'The Master is Christ, who, in his ascension, travelled into a far country. The servants are ministers and people. The talents are offices, gifts, and opportunities, given to Christ's men in different degrees for the good of the church, to be improved for his glory, and to be accounted for at his coming again. Such as improve what they have received, whether more or less, in a faithful and diligent manner, shall be graciously rewarded. But such as, through unbelief of God's kindness and mercy, neglect to improve their gifts, shall be deprived of them, and damned for their abuse of them.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

may be. Many who refuse to search the scriptures, so as to find in them the free gift of eternal life, may expect condemnation, as being judged according to their own principle of salvation by works. Let us believe that God is gracious, if we expect to produce works worthy of our christian profession; and let us be merciful, as we expect to find mercy in that day.]

[Mt. xxv. 27. It is not enough that a church has been given the keeping of the scriptures, and has even kept the truth of God entire; a bare possession without profit will be found loss in the end. The loss to the evil servant is even already overruled for the enrichment of the good and faithful: for, by the fulfilment of the scriptures, in the case of the Jews, and also in that of the Romans, those who are faithful in the use of Divine Revelation, have their faith abundantly confirmed.]

29 rev. Not only in outward privilege, but in inward possession, may our privileges continue and increase.

[30 rev. It is not enough that we abstain from doing evil; but indeed we do evil, if we refrain from doing good. It will not avail to pretend such a reverence for the scriptures, as that we will not use them through the fear of abusing them. If we desire to avoid the punishment of the unprofitable servant, let us seek to the utmost of our ability to possess, and act according to that whereby the Lord worketh in us, and forms us for his pleasure. Let us now make our choice, whether we shall be made light in the Lord, and so be made partakers of his joy; or amuse ourselves with the sparks of our own kindling, and so be cast 'into outer darkness,' where 'shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.']

THOSE WHO WILL NOT USE THE BIBLE FOR THEMSELVES, OUGHT AT LEAST TO ALLOW OTHERS TO USE IT.
THE SCRIPTURES ARE WITHHELD WHEREVER THE ROMAN PRIESTHOOD HAVE UNCONTROLLED SWAY, VER. 26, 27.

[Lesson 84.]—OF THE JUDGMENT OF THE NATIONS.—Matt. xxv. 31—46.

INTRODUCTION.

Mt. xxv. 31—46. 'After pressing the warnings inculcated in the preceding parables, our Lord now, with inexpressible majesty and solemnity, proceeds to advert to the great day of retribution itself, in a description which represents, 1, the extent, i.e., the universality, of the judgment; 2, the methods with which it will be carried on; 3, the place and circumstances. Whence (in the words of Dr. Smith, Script. Test. vol. ii. p. 257) we learn, that "he will discriminate men's moral state, amidst the complicated varieties of human character; will estimate their actions by an infinitely penetrating development of their motives; will, accordingly, by an infallible decision, completely and for ever separate them one from another."

'The imagery is partly derived from the solemn mode of administering justice in the East (see Ps. ix. 4—9; Is. vi. 1; lxvi. 1; Da. vii. 9, 10), and partly there is a pastoral metaphor (frequent in scripture) derived from the ancient eastern custom of keeping the sheep separate from the goats.'—Bloomf.

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxv. 31—46. THE PARABLE OF THE SHEEP AND GOATS; THE FOURTH OF THE LAST SERIES OF PARABLES.

—— 31. Christ, at his SECOND advent, will come in glory: all the holy angels with him. Then shall he sit on the throne of his glory.

—— 39. All nations will be gathered before him. He will separate them as a shepherd doth his sheep from the goats.

—— 33. The sheep on the right: the goats on the left.

—— 34—.6. The King's welcome to those on the right hand, 'Come, ye blessed,' &c.

—— 37—.9. The righteous ask, 'When saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee?' &c.

Mt. xxv. 40. The King replies, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'

—— 41—.3. To those on the left hand, he says, 'Depart from me, ye cursed,' &c.

—— 44. They also ask, 'Lord, when saw we thee an hungred'? &c.

—— 45. He answers, 'Verily . . . . Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.'

—— 46. The very different destinations of those thus separated.

31 When the Son of man shall-come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then 32 shall-he-sit upon the-throne of his glory: and before him shall-be-gathered all nations τα εθνη: and he-shall-separate αφορισει them one-from-another, as a shepherd divideth 33 αφοριζει his sheep from the goats: and he-shall-set the sheep on his right-hand, but the goats on the-left.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 31. When the Son of man, &c.—Da. vii. 13, 'I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven,'—The glory in which he will come, had been shewn to the disciples on the holy mount, ch. xvi. 28, § 50, p. 44; xvii. 1—5, § 51, pp. 51—6; 2 Pe. i. 16—8.—The Son of man, who was made a little lower than the angels, has been crowned with glory and honour; and is now to be given the dominion, and have all things put under his feet—comp. Ps. viii. 4—9, with He. ii. 6, 9—Jno. v. 27, § 23, p. 178, the Father 'hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.'—1 Co. xv. 28, 'And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.'

all the holy angels—Mk. viii. 38, § 50, p. 43, 'He cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.'—2 Th. i. 7, 'His mighty angels.'—He. xii. 22, 'An innumerable company of angels,'—Rev. v. 11, 'The number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;'—see on Lu. ix. 26, § 50, p. 44.

throne of his glory—It was promised, ch. xix. 28, § 75, p. 229, 'In the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also [the twelve apostles] shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.'

32. all nations—all the nations to whom the gospel has been preached, as predicted, ch. xxiv. 14, supra, p. 330, and commanded, xxviii. 19, § 96, p. 503.

separate them—ch. xiii. 41, § 33, p. 260, 'The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;'—49, p. 262, 'The angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just,'—see also xxiv. 31, 40, .1, supra.

sheep from the goats—After the Lord will have gathered his scattered flock, Eze. xxxiv. 12—6. . . . he will, ver. 17, 'judge between cattle and cattle, between the rams and the he-goats.'—20, 'Between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxv. 31. When the Son of man shall come. He who humbled himself for our sakes, the despised and insulted 'Son of Man, will take unto himself his great power and reign,' then the whole race of mankind will appear before his awful tribunal, and a final separation take place between 'them that serve God, and them that serve him not.'

'Great God! what do I see and hear?
The end of things created!
The Judge of mankind doth appear
On clouds of glory seated!
The trumpet sounds! the graves restore
The dead which they contained before!
Prepare, my soul, to meet him!'—Luther.

32. All nations. Meaning, both Jews and Gentiles, both quick and dead. In opposition to the Jewish notion, that the Gentiles should have no part in the resurrection.

And he shall separate, &c. Shall determine respecting their character, and appoint them their place accordingly. Among the ancients generally, whether Jews or Gentiles, approbation was denoted by placing on the right hand.

Sheep from the goats. The metaphor is taken from the shepherds of ancient times, who kept the sheep and goats in different flocks, and hardly separated them when they became mingled together.

Sheep, which have ever been considered as the emblems of mildness, simplicity, patience, and usefulness, represent here the genuine disciples of Christ.

Goats, which are naturally quarrelsome, lascivious, and excessively ill scented, were considered as the symbols of riotous, profane, and impure men. They here represent all who have lived and died in their sins.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxv. 31. Let us seek to be prepared for meeting the Lord with joy, when he cometh in glory with all his holy angels.

May we be among those by whom Christ shall be glorified at his SECOND appearing: and as we desire this, let his throne be now fixed in our hearts.

32, .3 ver. What an assemblage! Such has never previously been, and such will never be again. To which of these two companies do we belong? Now is the time for making our choice; it will then be too late.

34 ver. See margin, p. 352.

THE MEMORY OF THE JUST IS BLESSED: BUT THE NAME OF THE WICKED SHALL ROT.—Prov. x. 7.

A WISE SON HEARETH HIS FATHER'S INSTRUCTION: BUT A SCORNER HEARETH NOT REBUKE.—Prov. xiii. 1.

THEY WHO NOW TAKE GOD FOR THEIR PORTION, WILL AT LENGTH BE ALSO GIVEN TO INHERIT THE EARTH.

THOSE WHO CHOOSE TO HAVE THIS WORLD NOW FOR THEIR PORTION, WILL LOSE BOTH IT AND THEMSELVES FOR EVER.

MATT. XXV. 34—.7.

34 Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my 35 Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a-
36 stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited 37 επεσκεψασθε me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 34. the King—Jno. xviii. 36, .7, § 90, p. 441, 'Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born,' say . . . Come—He had gone to prepare a place for them, and now he has come to receive them unto himself; that where he is, there they may be also—see on Jno. xiv. 2, 3, § 87, p. 380.

blessed of my Father—The Father hath declared those blessed who put their trust in the Son, Ps. ii. 12—see in the Beatitudes, their character and blessedness described, ch. v. 3—10, § 19, pp 120—.2—are now blessed of the Father with the Spirit of truth, Jno. xiv. 16—.7, § 87—have fellowship with the Father and Son, ver. 21; 1 Jno. i. 3—Eph. i. 3, 'The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ:'—Ja. i. 12. 'Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.'

inherit—Rev. xxi. 7, 'He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.'

prepared—ch. xx. 23, .3, § 77, p. 238, 'It shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.'

from the foundation of the world—This does not refer to the spiritual kingdom, into which they have been already brought. Rom. xiv. 17; Col. i. 13; nor to the Father's house into which he now invites them, saying, 'Come, ye blessed,' and which he had gone to prepare for them, Jno. xiv. 2, 3, § 87, p. 380; but the dominion which was appointed to man from the foundation of the world, Ge. i. 28—8; which was lost in the first Adam, iii. 17—9; Rom. v. 12—4; and which is restored in the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, 15—21; 1 Co. xv. 43—.9—Rom. iv. 13, 'The promise, that he [Abraham] should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.'—Ps. xxxvii. 34, 'Wait on the LORD, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.'

35. I was an hungred, &c.—Is. lviii. 7, 'Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry,' &c.

thirsty—ch. x. 42, § 39, p. 303, 'Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple,' &c.

a stranger—He. xiii. 2, 'Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.'—So Abraham, Ge. xviii. 2, 5; and Lot, xix. 1, 3.

36. naked—Ge. ix. 21—.3; Ja. ii. 15, .6, 'If a brother or sister be naked,' &c.

visited me—Ja. i. 27, 'Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction,' &c.

in prison—2 Ti. i. 16, 'was not ashamed of my chain:'—He. xiii. 3, 'Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them;' &c.

NOTES.

Mt. xxv. 34. Inherit. As the children and heirs of God by adoption. Thus St. Paul, Rom. viii. 14—.7, speaking of the peculiar privileges of Christians, describes them as 'the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ;'

Here it is finely remarked by Chrys., he does not say receive, but inherit, as domestic property derived from a father, and therefore that to which any one has a just title.

From the foundation, &c. See SCRIP. ILLUS.

35. I was an hungred, &c. It is an observation of some importance to be impressed upon our minds, that, although charity to our neighbours, and indeed only one branch of that comprehensive duty, liberality to the poor, here specified as the only christian virtue, concerning which inquiry will be made at the final day of account; yet we must not suppose that this is the only virtue which will be expected from us, and that on this alone will depend our final salvation. Nothing can be more distant from the truth, or more dangerous to religion, than this opinion. The fact is, that charity, or love to man, in all its extent, being that virtue which Christ has made the very badge and discriminating mark of his religion, is here constituted by him, the representative of all other virtues, just as faith is, in various passages of scripture, used to denote and represent the whole christian religion. But, that neither charity, nor any other single virtue, can entitle us to eternal life, is clear from the whole tenour of the New Testament.]

[Nothing less than a sincere and lively faith in Christ, producing in us universal holiness of life, can make our calling and election sure. But thus much we may certainly collect from our Lord's representation of the final judgment, that charity, or love to man, is one of the most essential duties of our religion, and that to neglect this virtue must be particularly dangerous, and render us peculiarly unfit to appear at the last day before the tribunal of Christ.]

Gave me meat. See on ver. 40; Ac. ix. 4, 5; He. vi. 10. 'Of all the fruits of the Spirit, none are mentioned here but those that spring from love, or mercy; because these give men the nearest conformity to God. Jesus had said, "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy;" and he here shews how this promise shall be fulfilled. The Rabbins say, "As often as a poor man presents himself at thy door, the holy blessed God stands at his right hand: if thou give him alms, know that he who stands at his right hand will give thee a reward. But if thou give him not alms, he who stands at his right hand will punish thee."'—A. C.

A stranger, and ye took me in. συνήγαγετέ με, ye entertained me; i. e., treated me hospitably. This is more intelligible and precise, with greater dignity, than the common translation. Literally, συνάγω signifies to gather together. Strangers are sometimes so destitute, as to be ready to perish for lack of food and raiment: a supply of these things keeps their souls and bodies together, which were about to be separated through lack of the necessaries of life.

36. Naked. γυμνός. The term here (like the corresponding one in most languages, ancient and modern) denotes, not simply naked, but without some of one's garments; meaning, in a general way, poorly and scantily clothed.

[Visited. ἐπεσκέψασθε. The word signifies, 1, to look at, survey; 2, to look after, implying attendance, care, and relief. Thus it is used of both the attendance of a physician, and the care or attention of a nurse or friend. "Ἄθρει πρὸς με, like the Latin adire, implies solace and comfort.']

37. The righteous. Such as are described in ver. 35, .6: from which it appears that the righteous are those in whom such acts have proceeded from righteous principles, and formed part of a righteous course of life.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxv. 35, .6. Let us now produce works meet for repentance, and such as will evidence the truth of our faith in Him who feeds us with the bread of life, gives us to drink of the water of life, covers our nakedness with the robe of his righteousness, has received us when strangers into the household of God, has been to us the Good Physician, and the lifter up of our head, the merciful and almighty Deliverer.]

MATT. XXV. 38—41.

answer him, saying, Lord, when saw-we thee an-hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and 38 gave-thee-drink? When saw-we thee a-stranger, and took-thee-in? or naked, and 39 clothed thee? Or when saw-we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? 40. And the King shall-answer and-say unto-them, Verily I-say unto-you, Inasmuch-as ye-have-done it unto-one of-the least of-these my brethren, ye-have-done it unto-me.
41 Then shall-he-say also-unto-them on the-left-hand, Depart from me, ye cursed 42 κατηραμενοι, into everlasting fire, prepared for-the devil and his angels: for I-was-an-43 hungred, and ye-gave me no meat: I-was-thirsty, and ye-gave-me no-drink: I-was a-stranger, and ye-took-me not-in: naked, and ye-clothed me not: sick, and in prison, 44 and ye-visited me not. Then shall-they also-answer him, saying, Lord, when saw-we thee an-hungred, or a-thirst, or a-stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did-not-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 37. fed thee—It was He that had fed them, Jno. vi. 48—51, § 43, p. 331; 1 Pe. ii. 2, 3.

gave thee drink—He had quenched their thirst with living water, Jno. iv. 14, § 13, p. 93; vi. 35, § 43.

38. took thee in—It was He that had sheltered them, Eph. ii. 18, .9.

clothed thee—He had clothed them in his own most perfect righteousness, Ph. iii. 9—12; Rev. xix. 8.

39. came unto thee—He, the Good Physician, visited us in our low and lost estate, and gave his life for ours, Rom. v. 6—8—May He, the Great Deliverer, set us free from the most cruel bondage, vii. 22—5.

40 my brethren—Jesus, after his resurrection, called those who were sent to minister the word, his brethren, ch. xxviii. 10, .6, .7—20, § 95, .6—and these, although poor as he was in the world, are yet employed in making many rich, 2 Co. vi. 10—It is theirs to feed the flock of Christ, Jno. xxi. 15—.7, § 97; Ac. xx. 28; 1 Pe. v. 2—To dispense the water of life, Jno. vii. 38, .9, § 35, p. 95; Ptolem., ver. 7—so call the wanderers into the house of God, Mt. xxii. 9, 10, § 84, p. 293; Eph. ii. 12—.9—and in fine, to carry out the ministry of Jesus, who was sent, Lu. iv. 18, .9, § 15, p. 102, to 'heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord.'—Those thus engaged are the brethren of Christ, and to them he hath said, Mt. x. § 39, p. 302, 'He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.'—And in the judgment he will most surely fulfil the promise, x. 41, .2, § 39, p. 302, 'He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward;' &c.

41. Depart, &c.—The branches that bear not fruit in Christ are to be gathered, cast into the fire, and burned, Jno. xv. 2—6, § 87, p. 387—Is. i. 28, 'They that forsake the Lord shall be consumed.'

prepared for the devil—see in contrast that which is prepared for the messengers of Jesus, and those who have received them, ver. 34; supra, x. 41, .2, § 39.

42. gave me no meat—Eze. xxxiv. 8, 'The shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;'—The Lord will not only judge the shepherds, but the he-goats, who have eaten up the good pasture and trodden down the residue, ver. 17, .8—and fat cattle, who have thrust with side and shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with their horns, ver. 20, .1.

43. I was a stranger, &c.—Is. xvi. 1, 2—ver. 4, 'Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler;'—and this they were called to do in the view of the Lord's consuming the oppressors out of the land, and establishing the throne and sitting, ver. 5, 'upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.'

naked—We are not only in word to exercise that charity which covereth a multitude of sins, Ja. ii. 15, .6; 1 Pe. iv. 8—it will be to our deep reproach if we allow our garments to be moth eaten, Ja. v. 2.

sick, and in prison—Ps. lxxxii. 1, 'God standeth in the congregation of the mighty; he judgeth among the gods.'—3, 'Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy. 4, Deliver the poor and needy: rid them out of the hand of the wicked.'—But the mighty, even among the children of the Most High, know not for what end power has been put into their hands, ver. 5.

44. athirst—Jno. iv. 6, 7, § 13, p. 92; xix. 28, § 91, p. 457—see also Mt. xxvii. 34, § 96, p. 439.

or a stranger—ch. viii. 20, 34, § 34, .5, pp. 265, .72.

or naked—ch. xxvii. 35, § 91, p. 461.

or in prison—Yea, he gave himself for us, Ga. ii. 20; Eph. v. 25; 1 Ti. ii. 6.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxv. 40. Inasmuch as ye have done it, &c. Εφ' ὅσον—ἐποιήσατε. Here we have an explanation of what was meant at ver. 36, .9—the close is the union between Christ and his members, that he looks on whatever is done to them as done to himself, and rewards accordingly. Comp. ch. x. 42, § 39, p. 308. This indeed agrees with what the scriptures elsewhere declare, that what is done unto the poor, in relieving their wants, is done unto God himself, under whose especial care they are. Thus it is said, Pr. xix. 17, 'He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the LORD;' comp. Ac. ix. 4, where Saul is engaged in persecuting the members of the church of Christ, Christ speaks to him from heaven, saying, 'Saul, Saul, why,' &c. They are called to receive the kingdom, as the inheritance to which they are entitled as adopted children of a gracious God through Christ. Their works are not mentioned as grounds of the sentence, but as proofs that they are God's children, who love the brethren. Their objection denotes their viewing whatever they did as unworthy of so honourable a reward.]

41. Into everlasting fire, prepared. εἰς τὸ πῦρ, &c. Render, 'unto the everlasting fire, destined,' &c.

Prepared for the devil and his angels. First prepared for 'the angels that sinned,' and 'kept not their first estate,' 2 Pe. ii. 4; Jude, ver. 6; and now ordained to be the portion of those men also, who have been guilty of the like rebellion against God.

45. See p. 254. We see here plainly why sinners are destroyed; not because there was no salvation for them, but because they neglected to receive good and do good. As they received not the Christ who was offered to them, so they could not do the work of righteousness which was required of them. They are cursed, because they refused to be blessed; and they are damned, because they refused to be saved. The neglect of kind offices, when in men's power, is a crime for which they must account.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxv. 37—9. See margin.

[40 ver. Let us ever remember that the least of those who truly believe in Christ is a child of God; and that the kindness we would shew to the Son of God, were he present with us on earth, we must exercise to those who are as he was in the world.]

41 ver. Let us become one with Christ in heart and life. No other nearness to him can avail. How sad to hear, from Him who shed his blood to save us, 'Depart from me, ye cursed!'

[How miserable to think that by all the means which God hath given of preparing for the enjoyment of himself for ever, men should prepare themselves for the devil and his angels!]

42 ver. When we think of the multitudes who are hungry, naked, homeless, sick, and in distress of various kinds, let us think what means God hath given us of expressing our gratitude to Him, by shewing mercy to them; and let us fear to offend, in neglecting to use the means He hath given us to relieve their necessities.

MATT. XXV. 45, .6.

45 minister unto-thee? Then shall-he-answer them, saying, Verily I-say unto-you, Inas-46 much-as ye-did it not to-one of-the least of-these, ye-did it not to-me. And these shall-go-away into everlasting punishment κολασιν: but the righteous into life eternal.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxv. 45. Verily I say—Our Lord has been very emphatic in the announcement of this principle, for men are slow in discerning the body of Christ in his poor people, Rom. xii. 5; 1 Co. xi. 29; xii. 27—in thinking themselves only stewards of God for the good of his people, 1 Pe. iv. 9—11—and that they are under obligation to act out the law of love as the Lawgiver hath given us example, 1 Jno. iii. 16, .7; iv. 10, .6.

the least of these—It is not only to the rich or great, or to those brethren who may be to our own taste, in some particular respect, that love is to be manifested, Rom. xii. 16; 1 Co. i. 26—31—but to the most neglected, poor, and despised, Lu. xiv. 12—.4, § 67, p. 182—and who have no claim but what they derive from Jesus, who for us was an hungred, Mt. xii. 1, § 24, p. 188; xxi. 18, .9, § 83, p. 275.

46. everlasting punishment—Is. lxvi. 24, 'For their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched;'—2 Th. i. 9, 'Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power;'

the righteous into life eternal—The righteous Judge will render to every man according to his works, Rom. ii. 6—ver. 7, 'To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life:'

NOTE.

[Mt. xxv. 46. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, &c. The punishment of the foolish virgins, the slothful servant, and the cursed who are separated from God, was not because of their personal crimes, but because they were not good, and were not useful in the world. Their lives do not appear to have been stained with crimes, but they were not adorned with virtues. They are sent to hell because they did no good. They were not renewed in the image of God; and hence did not bring forth fruit to his glory. If these harmless people are sent to perdition, what must the end be of the wicked and profligate!]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mt. xxv. 44, .5. Our Christianity must be made evident by deeds of beneficence; especially in shewing mercy to the poor for Christ's sake.—[And see margin.]

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.

MOUNT OF OLIVES.—A mountain or ridge, now called by the Arabs Jebel et Tur, lying to the east of Jerusalem. According to Josephus, it was distant from the city five furlongs, but according to Luke, 'a sabbath day's journey,' or about eight furlongs; the difference of which statements may be reconciled by the supposition that Josephus took his admeasurement from the city to the base of the mountain, but Luke his, from the city to the summit whence our Lord ascended into heaven.

It is separated from the city by the narrow valley of Jehoshaphat, which forms a passage for the brook Kidron, see p 407, over which our blessed Lord went 'as he was wont to the mount of Olives,' as on that night when he crossed it to hide the sorrow of his soul beneath the shade of the olives of Gethsemane, see p. 422.

Mount Olivet is in fact composed of three hills, which summits verge from north to south; the highest is the middle, and is crowned with a beautiful little temple of marble of an octagonal form, erected, as tradition says, over the spot last touched by the Saviour's foot. From it he ascended into heaven; and when he comes again in great glory and power, 'His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east,' Ze. xiv. 4.—See § 98. Its height above the brook Kidron is 600 feet, and according to Lieut. Symonds, 2,397 feet above the level of the Mediterranean Sea. Its northern summit is nearly as high as the middle one. Beyond this summit the ridge sweeps round towards the west, and spreads out into the high level tract north of the city, which is skirted on the W. and S. by the upper part of the valley of Jehoshaphat.

Towards the south it sinks down into a lower ridge, over against the so-called 'Well of Nehemiah,' now known by the Franks as the mount of Offence, in allusion to the idolatrous worship established by Solomon, 'on the hill that is before Jerusalem.'

Over one of its lower summits winds a narrow path which divides into that leading to Jericho, the other to Bethany, situated on its eastern slope. This path is probably the same which was traversed by David when he 'went up by the ascent of mount Olivet, and wept as he went up, and had his head covered, and he went barefoot:' in sorrow and humiliation, when he fled before the face of Absalom, 2 Sa. xv. 30. About two-thirds up the mountain is still shewn the spot whence the Saviour, beholding the city, wept over it, and where he pronounced the prophecy of its fall: from this point Jerusalem appears below the spectator spread out like a map.—See § 23, p. 182, 'Jerusalem as seen from mount Olivet.'

The way to the mount of Olives is by the gate of St. Stephen, down the steep hill, and over a bridge which crosses the dry bed of the Kidron, passing close on the right the garden of Gethsemane. The mountain is all ploughed, sown, and divided into fields, and beautifully ornamented with olive, apricot, fig, almond, and many other sorts of trees. And here and there a shepherd may be seen leading his sheep and goats, going before them, and climbing now and then a little way into a tree, to shake down leaves for his following flock to eat.

It would require a long history to recount the varied scenes of grandeur and misery over which this mount has looked. It saw the infant Jerusalem rise and . . . attain its glory under the sway of David and Solomon, and sink in ashes beneath the dark wings of the Roman Eagle. It soon beheld another city (inheriting the name and the evil fortunes, but nothing of the splendour of its illustrious predecessor,) rise on the same site, to be scourged in turns by war, and famine, and pestilence. How often has it seen the heights around glitter with the arms of invading foes; the Persian, the Saracen, the Christian Crusader, and the Turk: hosts mustering where prophets trod, and its valleys resounding the war cry of the false prophet! It now beholds a servile and alien race, living in 'the city where David dwelt,' and an idolatrous shrine proudly seated on the mount where the Hebrew fathers worshipped. Amid all the changes which Jerusalem has undergone, mount Olivet has watched faithfully beside it.

From mount Olivet, the spectator on the east sees the mountainous desert, which intervenes between the capital and Jericho. Then comes the valley of the Jordan, with a waving line of green drawn along its scorched and desolate bosom, indicating the course of the river. The surface of the Dead Sea is seen burnished and glowing like a mirror, or shrouded in heavy fogs, and looking not unlike melted lead at the bottom of a caldron: viewed from the mount of Olives, this sea appears almost immediately beneath the spectator, but the journey to it is long and tedious. Beyond are the hills of Moab, their summits forming so even a line, that the spectator can fix on no peak of which he can say, there Moses stood when he viewed the land. On the north, summit rises behind summit, ranging upwards like the seats in an amphitheatre, till they are over-topped by the mountains of Ephraim. On the north-west stands Ramah, the birthplace of Samuel. In the foreground, on every side, the eye traverses a vast ocean-like undulation of bare and arid mountain tops and valleys. There is the hill Scopus, where Titus pitched his camp; the village of Anathoth, and Mizpeh, so indissolubly associated with two of the greatest of the Hebrew seers, are in sight. On the west, looking beyond the city, the eye rests upon the bare and rounded summits of the great central chain of Judæa. On the south, the mount of Offence intervenes and shuts out the view of the valley of Rephaim, and the fertile meadows and glittering roofs of Bethlehem.

IT IS NOT ENOUGH THAT WE ABSTAIN FROM DOING HARM TO OTHERS; WE MUST DO THEM GOOD.

LET US ANXIOUSLY BEWARE OF DESPISING EVEN THE LEAST OF THESE LITTLE ONES.

(G. 80.)—THE APPROACH OF THE PASSOVER.—JESUS BETRAYED TO BE CRUCIFIED.
Matt. xxvi. 1—5; 14—.6. Mark xiv. 1, 2; 10, .1. Luke xxii. 1—6.

INTRODUCTION.

Mt. xxvi. 1, 2. Mk. xiv. 1. Lu. xxii. 1. Having finished the remarkable sayings recorded Mt. xxi.—.v., Jesus reminds his disciples of the nearness of the passover, and tells them that he 'is betrayed to be crucified.'

— xxvi. 3. ——— ——— The priests, scribes, and elders, assemble in the palace of Caiaphas the high priest.

— xxvi. 4, 5. — xiv. 1, 2. — xxii. 2. They consult how they may take Jesus by subtilty, to put him to death; but they agree that, in order to avoid a tumult, this must not be during the feast.

Mt. xxvi. 14. Mk. xiv. 10. Lu. xxii. 3, 4. Judas precipitates their movements by going to the chief priests and captains, and offering to betray Jesus unto them.

— xxvi. 15, .6. — xiv. 11. — xxii. 5, 6. For thirty pieces of silver he agrees to deliver Jesus into their hands, at a convenient season, in the absence of the multitude; and is henceforth on the watch for an opportunity of earning the wages of iniquity.

The approach of the passover.

MATT. xxvi. 1, 2.	MARK xiv. 1. (Ch. xiii. 37, p. 342.)	LUKE xxii. 1. (Ch. xxi. 38, p. 357.)
1 [a]And it-came-to-pass, when Jesus had-finished all these sayings, he-said unto his disciples,
2 Ye-know that after two days is the feast of the passover,[b]	1 After two days was the feast of the passover, [b] and of unleavened-bread: [c]	Now the feast of unleavened-bread drew-nigh, which is-called the-passover.
[c]and the Son of man is-betrayed to be-crucified.

The council of the Jews deliberate on the mode of apprehending Jesus. Judas Iscariot covenants with them to betray him. Jerusalem.

MATT. xxvi. 3—5; 14—.6.	MARK xiv. 1, 2; 10, .1.	LUKE xxii. 2—6.
3 [a]Then assembled-together the chief-priests, and the scribes, and the elders of-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 2. betrayed, &c.—He had before connected the idea of his sufferings with the glory that should follow, Mk. ix. 1, 2, § 50, p. 44; ver. 30, .1, § 52, p. 70.

3. assembled—Ps. ii. 2, 'The rulers take counsel together,'—xxii. 16, 'The assembly of the wicked have inclosed me:'—Ac. iv. 1—7; 25—.7; v. 17, 27.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 2. After two days. The preceding discourses were delivered on the Tuesday and Wednesday of the week in which Jesus suffered; and our Saviour probably uttered these words on the last-named evening, which was just two days before the paschal lamb was eaten.

[The passover. Of the three great yearly feasts of the Jews—see Ex. xxiii. 14—7; De. xvi. 1—17—at which all the males were required by the law to appear before the Lord, viz., the feast of the Passover, the feast of Weeks, or Pentecost, and the feast of Tabernacles, the feast of the Passover was the greatest. The directions given by God himself for its first celebration and perpetual observance, are recorded in Ex. xii. 1—27; 43—.9; and in De. xvi. 1—8. It was called the Passover, because it was to be kept in memory of the Lord's having passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, sparing their first-born when he destroyed the first-born of the Egyptians.—See Ex. xii. 11—3; 25—.7. It was also called 'the feast of unleavened bread'—see ver. 17, and Mk. xiv. 1; Lu. xxii. 1, supra—because, during the seven days of its continuance, the Israelites were strictly forbidden to eat leavened bread, or even to have any leaven in their houses.—See Ex. xii. 15—20; De. xvi. 3, 4. It began 'on the fourteenth day of the month Abib,' afterwards called NISAN, 'at even,' and continued 'until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.' Ex. xii. 18.—See § 6, p. 40, and ADDENDA, p. 43, 'Passover.']

The Son of man is betrayed [rather, delivered up] to be crucified. Having instructed his disciples and the Jews by his discourses, edified them by his example, convinced them by his miracles, he now prepares to redeem them by his blood!

[And the Son of man. καὶ ὁ υἱὸς. 'The καὶ is best taken in sensu γοργῷ for καὶ τότε. It is often used for ὅτε, which may admit of being resolved into καὶ τότε. That his death was near at hand, our Lord had repeatedly apprised his disciples; but he had not until now told them the exact time.'—Bloomf.]

3. Then assembled together the chief priests. That is, during the two days that preceded the passover.

The chief priests. The high priest, and those who had been high priests; the ruling men of the sanhedrim. Luke adds, that he went also to the captains, xxii. 4. It was necessary on account of the great wealth deposited there, to guard the temple by night. Accordingly men were stationed around it, whose leaders or commanders were called captains [marg. rulers], Ac. iv. 1. These men were commonly Levites, were closely connected with the priests, were men of influence, and Judas went to them, therefore, as well as to the priests, to offer himself as a traitor.—See on Lu. xxii. 4, p. 356.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvi. 1, 2. In the view of the glory and power with which our Lord will come in his SECOND advent, he did not neglect to prepare for the sufferings which he was about to endure, as giving himself for our redemption. While we rejoice in the blessed hope that we shall reign with Christ hereafter, let us be prepared to suffer with him now.]

[3, 4 ver. Men, filling the most sacred offices, and punctilious in the performance of religious rites, were those who consulted to take Jesus by subtilty

OH HOW GREAT IS THY GOODNESS, WHICH THOU HAST LAID UP FOR THEM THAT FEAR THEE; WHICH THOU HAST WROUGHT FOR THEM THAT TRUST IN THEE BEFORE THE SONS OF MEN!—Psa. xxxi. 19.

MATT. xxvi. 4, 5; 14.	MARK xiv. 2, 10.	LUKE xxii. 2—4.
the people, unto the palace of-the high-priest, who was-called Caiaphas,	and the chief-priests and the scribes sought how they-might-take him by craft δολῳ, and-put-him-to-death.	And the chief-priests and scribes sought how they-might-kill him;
4 and consulted that they-might-take Jesus by-subtilty δολῳ, and kill him.	2 But they-said, Not on the feast day, lest there-be an-uproar of-the people. (Ch. xiv. 3—9, ibid.)	2 [b] for they-feared the people.
5 But they-said, Not on the feast day, lest there-be an-uproar among the people.[b] (Ch. xxvi. 6, § lxxxi. p. 253.)
14 Then one of-the twelve, called Judas Iscariot,	10 And Judas Iscariot, one of-the twelve,	Then entered Satan into 3 Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of-the twelve.
went unto the chief-priests,	went unto the chief-priests,	And he-went- 4 his-way, and-communed-with the chief-priests and captains, how τα πως he-might-betray him unto-them.[c] to betray him unto-them.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 3. palace—see Is. xxxii. 14; Je. xvii. 27; Am. ii. 5.

4. take Jesus by subtilty—1 Sa. xxiii. 9, 'And David knew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him;'—Hab. iii. 14, 'Their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly.'—See also the description of a like priesthood, Ps. x. 1—10.

Lu. xxii. 2. feared the people—so Herod, in the case of John, Mt. xiv. 5, § 40, p. 306—comp. Mk. xi. 18, 32, §§ 83, 4, pp. 276, 284.

3. entered—Judas seems to have been but a sample of that evil generation, whose case is described, Mt. xii. 43—5, § 31, p. 239—on Satan entering his heart, comp. Jno. xiii. 27, § 87, p. 372, &c.; Ac. v. 3—Eph. ii. 2, 'The prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience:'

NOTES.

[Mt. xxvi. 3. The palace of the high priest . . . . . The word αὐλὴ properly denoted an open, airy enclosure. So, in the Old Testament, and Rev. xi. 2, it is said of the outer court of the temple. It also denoted an area, or court, such as encircled the vestibule, door, or entrance to a large house; and also (as here) such an edifice as had attached to it an αὐλὴ. It was, moreover, generally applied to the houses of kings and powerful or opulent persons. Hence the English word court, denoting a king's palace.]

[Caiaphas. See on Jno. xi. 49, &c., § 58, p. 189. It appears from Ac. v. 17, that Caiaphas was a Sadducee. The kings of Judah appointed the high priests from among the family who possessed the claim to that office.—See 1 Ki. ii. 27, 35, and 1 Chr. xxix. 22. In the republic, the sanhedrim. Under the Syro-Macedonians, and the Romans, those nations assumed the same privilege with greater licence.

About two years after our Lord's crucifixion, Caiaphas and Pilate were both deposed by Vitellius, then governor of Syria, and afterwards emperor. Caiaphas, unable to bear this disgrace, and the stings of his conscience for the murder of Christ, killed himself about A.D. 35.]

[4. That they might take Jesus by subtilty. The English word subtilty does not convey the meaning of the Greek word δολῳ, in this verse. Perhaps the sentiments of the evangelist would be more correctly conveyed by rendering this passage, 'that they might take Jesus without the knowledge of the populace.' This was their wish; whereas subtilty might be employed without precluding the observation of the people. Indeed, the following verse seems to fix the meaning of the term; and it may be doubted whether the Jewish rulers at this time did not intend to dispatch our blessed Lord clandestinely, without the intervention of the Roman governor.]

[5. Not on the feast day. μὴ ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, not during the festival. As there is nothing in the original answering to the word day, the term ἑορτῇ may include the whole festival; viz., the day of the paschal sacrifice, and the seven days of unleavened bread that followed it. Their design was, not to apprehend Jesus till the eight days of the paschal feast were ended, because the multitudes who came to Jerusalem to celebrate the passover would then be greatly diminished; but Judas having come to the chief priests soon after, and made an offer of delivering him up in the night, they changed their design, and seized upon him on the evening of the first of these eight days, intending to try him, and condemn him in the night: and, if possible, to crucify him early in the morning, before the multitude of people then in the city should come together. The result was, that the true Paschal Lamb was offered up on the great day of the paschal solemnity.—See on Mt. xxvii. 20, § 90, p. 451.]

It was, doubtless, of the very first importance that the crucifixion of Christ, which was preparatory to the most essential achievement of Christianity, viz., his resurrection from the grave, should be exhibited before many witnesses, and in the most open manner, that infidelity might not attempt, in future, to invalidate the evidences of the christian religion, by alleging that these things were done in a corner.—And see Macknight's Harmony of the Gospels, on Judas' motives for betraying Christ, in loc.

Lu. xxii. 3. Then entered Satan into Judas. As those who obey the Divine motions are said to receive the Spirit as a Divine guest, so Satan is said to enter into those who consent unto criminal suggestions.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

Satan is never wanting to assist those whose hearts are bent upon mischief.

Being of the number of the twelve. Which is an aggravation of his sin.

[4. Captains. στρατηγοῖς, scil. τοῦ ἱεροῦ, expressed infra, ver. 52, 3. By these I would understand, not, with some, the officers charged with the superintendence of the buildings of the temple; but, with Lightfoot and Bp. Middleton, the commanders over those and kill him. Men should beware of placing their confidence in any human priesthood, however ancient, or whatever its origin may have been.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxvi. 4. A fear of the populace may sometimes be salutary in restraining the leaders, civil and ecclesiastical, from precipitating a nation into crime.]

DRAW ME NOT AWAY WITH THE WICKED, AND WITH THE WORKERS OF INIQUITY, WHICH SPEAK PEACE TO THEIR NEIGHBOURS, BUT MISCHIEF IS IN THEIR HEARTS.—Psa. xxviii. 3.

Matt. xxvi. 15, 16.	Mark xiv. 11.	Luke xxii. 5, 6.
15 [a]and-said unto them, What will-ye give me, and-I will-deliver him unto-you? [d]	11 [d]And when-they-heard it, they-were-glad, and promised επηγγειλαντο to-give him money.	And they-were-glad, and covenanted συνεθεντο to-give him money. 5
[a]and they covenanted εστησαν with-him for-thirty pieces-of-silver.		And he-promised εξωμολογησε, and sought opportunity to-betray him in-the-absence ατερ of-the-multitude. 6
16 And from that-time he-sought opportunity [f] to betray him. (Ver. 17, § lxxxvii. p. 362.)	And he-sought [f]how he-might-conveniently-betray him.[g] (Ver. 12, § lxxxvii. p. 362.)	(Ver. 7, § lxxxvii. p. 362.) [g] unto-them in-the-absence ατερ of-the-multitude.

(G. 81.)—*How Jesus employed himself for the last two days of his public ministry, after he first visited the temple.—Luke xxi. 37, .8.

[Ch. xxi. 36, p. 341.]

37 And in-the day-time he-was teaching in the temple; and at-night he-went-out, and-38 abode in the mount that is-called the mount of-Olives. And all the people came-early-in-the-morning ωρθριζε to him in the temple, for-to-hear him. [Ch. xxii. 1, p. 355.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 15. What will ye give me—1 Tl. vi. 9, 10, 'They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare,' &c.—2 Pe. ii. 14, .5, 'An heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:' &c.

thirty pieces of silver—Ge. xxxvii. 26—8, 'And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit . . . . if we slay our brother, and conceal his blood? Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites,'—and they did so 'for twenty pieces of silver:'—Zec. xi. 12, .3, 'And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.'—Ac. i. 18, 'This man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity:'

Lu. xxi. 37. teaching in the temple—Jesus in his youth had delighted in the house of God, Lu. ii. 46—9, § 6, p. 41—afterwards we find him there at the feasts, even when it was dangerous to be so—comp. Jno. vii. 1, § 52, p. 70; ver. 14, § 55, p. 91—He could say, xviii. 20, § 89, p. 426. 'I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort:'—He was the Great Teacher predicted, De. xviii. 15—and appointed of the Father, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55.

38. early—Ps. lxiii. 1, 'Early will I seek thee:'—Wisdom saith, Pr. viii. 17, 'I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me.'—When previously at Jerusalem Jesus seems to have followed the same course, Jno. vii. 2, § 55, p. 99.

NOTES.

bodies of Levites who kept guard in the temple, mentioned in Ac. v. 26, and Joseph. Bell. vi. 5. 3, of whom one, the chief, is mentioned at Ac. iv. 1, and sometimes in Josephus, as ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ. These στρατηγοὶ, however, were, properly speaking, not military, but civil officers, and besides the duty above mentioned, acted as præfecti and curatores templi generally.'—Bloomf.]—And see on Lu. xxii. 52, § 88, p. 421.

Mt. xxvi. 15. Thirty pieces of silver. Τριάκοντα ἀργύρια. The ἀργύριον is commonly supposed to have been the Jewish shekel; which was the standard coin among the Hebrews. Each shekel was in value about half-a-crown English; consequently the whole amounted to nearly 3*l.* 15*s.* It appears from Ex. xxi. 32, that this was the price paid for a slave or a servant when killed by a beast. So vilely was He esteemed who shed his precious blood for man! and so true is it, 'that he took upon him the form of a servant!'

16. To betray him. Ἵνα αὐτὸν παραδῷ, 'to deliver him up,' like one delivering his bargain to the purchaser. Being disappointed of the prey he hoped to have from the sale of the precious ointment, ver. 9, § 81, p. 255, he sold his Master to make up the sum.

Lu. xxii. 6. In the absence. The feast lasted seven days. A vast multitude attended from all parts of Judæa. Jerusalem is said to have contained at such times three millions of people. Amidst such a multitude there were frequent tumults and seditions; and the sanhedrim were justly apprehensive there would be now, if in open day, in the temple, they took away a teacher so popular as Jesus, and put him to death.

xxi. 37. Day. In the daytime 'he was teaching in the temple.' This shews how our Lord employed his time after coming to Jerusalem; but it is not said, he was this day in the temple, and next morning the people came. It does not therefore by any means imply, that he came any more after this into the temple.

38. And all the people came early in the morning . . . hear him. How much happier had his disciples been in these early lectures, than the slumbers of the morning could have made them on their beds! Let us not scruple to deny ourselves the indulgence of unnecessary sleep, that we may morning after morning place ourselves at his feet, receiving the instructions of his word and seeking those of his Spirit.

Commencing the day with God is like arresting evil at the fountain: prayer at any other time, without this, is an attempt to arrest it when it has swollen to a stream, and rolls on like a torrent. Let the day be begun with God, and the work of piety is easy. Let the world have the ascendency in the morning, and it will be likely to have it also at noonday and at evening.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Lu. xxi. 37, .8. Let us, from the example of our dear Lord, learn how to improve our time. We have, in Mt. xxiv., v., a sample of the manner in which Jesus spent his evenings upon the mount of Olives; and in the daytime he was teaching in the temple, where 'all the people came early in the morning . . . . for to hear him.' It was to interrupt that labour of love, this incessant teaching without human authority, that the Jewish priesthood set themselves. Let us hence learn not to be followers of men; but let us be followers of God, as dear children, as children of the light and of the day.]

* On the time when our Lord concluded his public ministry, see Addenda, p. 298, last par.

ADDENDA.

THE PROPHECY ON MOUNT OLIVET.—Matt. xxiv. 1—44; Mark xiii.; Luke xxi. 5—36, pp. 323—.42.
See Grenwell on the Parables, Vol. V. pp. 197—443.

'Two very distinct lines of argument run through the discourse, from first to last; the business of one of which is to communicate the knowledge of future facts, and that of the other to counsel, to admonish, to warn, and advise in a variety of ways. . . . . (P. 198.)

'That the prophetical matter of the discourse, down to a certain point at least, is directed to a specific end and purpose, may, I think, be inferred from two very significant passages which occur in it at distinct intervals; one of them in a negative sense, serving to the same effect, as the other in a positive; the first, Mk. xxiv. 6; Mk. xiii. 7; Lu. xxi. 9 [p. 325]. "But the end is not as yet," or "But the end is not immediately:" the other, Mt. xxiv. 14 [p. 330]. "And then will the end come." . . . . (P. 200.)

'We may lay it down as a sufficiently correct assumption of the nature, constitution, and final end of this memorable prophecy, that it is a prophetic revelation of the future, not simple or uniform in its construction, but mixed; combining together two distinct topics of argument, which run parallel with each other throughout it, the purely prophetic, and the purely preceptive; the end of the former being subordinate to that of the latter, and both conspiring to a common purpose, the preservation and safety of the Hebrew Christians amidst that series of national calamities, which were about to fall promiscuously on the rest of their countrymen. . . . . (P. 209.)

'KINGDOM AGAINST KINGDOM.'—Mt. xxiv. 7, p. 325.

'The matter of fact which I apprehend to be properly contemplated in the fulfilment of this prediction, is the occurrence of insurrectionary wars between one part of Judæa itself and another; both as distinct and independent communities comprehended in the same locality. The mention of kingdom as opposed to kingdom . . . . points in this instance to the ancient division of Palestine into the kingdom of Judah and the kingdom of Israel respectively, and to the revival of something like the old rivalship and hostility which from the moment of their separation had ever so far distinguished these kingdoms. The representative of the kingdom of Judah at the present day was Judæa Proper, the two Galilees, Peræa and its inhabitants; that of the ancient kingdom of Israel was Samaria and its inhabitants. The rising up of one kingdom against another, in the sense here implied, is by no means a necessary intimation of the fact of open or regular warfare between them, or of anything more than in the former instance, mere sudden outbreaks of a common violence, and mutual tumultuary outrage. Contests of this description, in which Jew was expressly engaged with Samaritan, are on record for the interval between the ascension and the destruction of Jerusalem, to which I consider this prediction properly to relate. These disputes had something in their nature akin to, and something different from, the last-mentioned ones [see on ver. 6, 7, p. 325]; sufficient to make them be classed together, and yet to distinguish them asunder.' (P. 247.)

'FEARFUL SIGHTS,' &c.—Lu. xxi. 11, p. 326.

'With respect to the signs of either description, belonging to this (sixth) class, which more immediately concerned the Jews, Josephus enumerates them, B. Jud. vi. v. 3, in the following order; with whose account we may compare also Tacitus, Histor. v. 13.

'I. The appearance of a star, in the shape of a sword, and stationary over the city. II. A comet, visible for a year. Both these would be signs from heaven. Whether they appeared before U.C. 819, A.D. 66, or after it, is not distinctly stated, though the comet in particular may fairly be supposed one of those which we have seen to have been visible at Rome, U.C. 807, U.C. 813, U.C. 817, more especially that which is reported to have been visible six months and upwards, consequently that of U.C. 813, or U.C. 817. . . .

'III. On the eighth of Xanthicus, or Nisan, March 23, U.C. 819, A.D. 66, at three in the morning, so bright a light suddenly shone round about the altar of burnt offering, and the ναος, or sanctuary, as to cause the appearance of noonday in the temple; a phenomenon which lasted half an hour. This also may be considered a sign from heaven.

'IV. During the feast of the passover next ensuing, from March 29 to April 5, a cow, in the act of being sacrificed, is said to have brought forth a lamb in the midst of the temple; an event which, if true, might well pass for a φάσματον, or fearful thing.

'V. During the same festival, the eastern or brazen gate of the inner temple, which was wont to be made fast to the ground every evening with strong bolts and bars, and required the united strength of twenty men to open or to shut it, was found standing wide open at midnight: another φάσματον, or alarming occurrence. Cf. Tac. H. v. 13.

'VI. On the 21st of Artemisius, or Jar, that is, May 4, the same year, at sunset, the air was seen to be full of chariots, and armed battalions, darting from the clouds, and compassing or encircling the cities, like besieging armies, throughout the country. The war with Rome, it should be observed, had broken out in this month, not later than the sixteenth preceding.—See my Diss. Vol. my Diss. xiii. p. 579, sqq. This would be a sign from heaven of a truly portentous description to the Jews, coinciding as it did with the first commencement of the contest on which they had embarked, the effects of which were destined to realize everything in the end, thus pictured in the air of their view beforehand. Tacitus, H. v. 13, asserts the fact of this phenomenon, as well as Josephus. . . .

'VII. At the feast of Pentecost, next ensuing, which would fall out that year on May 19, the priests whose duty it was to visit the inner temple in the night time, heard first a noise and a motion of some kind, then on a sudden the words, Let us depart hence (μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν). This also is mentioned by Tacitus, loc. cit. . . . With this period, then, we might date the fulfilment of our Saviour's prediction, in the last words which he had addressed to the unbelieving Jews, before he made an end of his ministry, ἰδοὺ, ἀφίεται ὑμῖν ὁ οἶκος ὑμῶν ἔρημος, Mt. xxiii. 38; Harm. iv. 77. . . .

'VIII. At a time which I shewed in my former work, Vol. II. Diss. i. p. 82, sqq., to coincide with the feast of tabernacles, U.C. 815, A.D. 62, four years before the war, Jesus, or Joshua, the son of Ananus, a common Jew from the country, who had come up to attend the feast, suddenly began to cry, in the vicinity of the temple, φωνὴ ἀπ' ἀνατολῆς, φωνὴ ἀπὸ δύσεως, φωνὴ ἀπὸ τῶν τεσσάρων ἀνέμων, φωνὴ ἐπὶ Ἱεροσόλυμα, καὶ τὸν ναὸν, φωνὴ ἐπὶ νυμφίους, καὶ νύμφας, φωνὴ ἐπὶ τὸν λαὸν πάντα, that is, "a voice from the east; a voice from the west; a voice from the four winds, a voice unto Jerusalem, and the sanctuary; a voice unto bridegrooms and brides; a voice unto all the people." Though he was immediately brought before the Roman governor, Albinus, by the Jewish authorities, who were offended at this strange and portentous exclamation, and scourged there until the flesh was torn from his bones, he appeared insensible to the pain of his treatment; and was so far from being compelled to desist by it, that he continued to cry out as before, all the time he was scourging. At length he was dismissed, as one possessed of an unaccountable madness, and no further molested by either the Roman governor or the Jewish sanhedrim; after which Josephus tells us, that for seven years and five months, that is, from the autumn of U.C. 815, A.D. 62, to midsummer U.C. 823, A.D. 70, night and day he continued to go about all the streets of Jerusalem, especially during the feasts, uttering the same cry, with no variation, except that occasionally he interwove it with αἰ, αἰ Ἱεροσολύμοις, "alas, alas, for Jerusalem;" never once becoming weary, never getting hoarse with incessant crying aloud, taking no notice of anything, neither shewing symptoms of gratitude towards those who gave him meat, or used him kindly, nor symptoms of resentment against those who gave him blows, or used him ill; until at last, as he was making the circuit of the walls during the siege, after repeating with a loud voice, woe to the city, and to the people, and to the temple, he added, αἰ, αἰ ἐμοί, at which moment he perished by a blow from one of the Roman engines.' . . . . . (Pp. 266—.9.)

I WILL BREAK THE PRIDE OF YOUR POWER; AND I WILL MAKE YOUR HEAVEN AS IRON, AND YOUR EARTH AS BRASS:—Lev. xxvi. 19.

YOUR STRENGTH SHALL BE SPENT IN VAIN: FOR YOUR LAND SHALL NOT YIELD HER INCREASE, NEITHER SHALL THE TREES YIELD, ETC.—Lev. xxvi. 20.

OF PERSECUTION.—Mt. xxiv. 9, &c., p. 326.

'Tacitus, when giving an account of the burning of Rome, U.C. 817, A.D. 64, a crime as we know purposely laid to the charge of the Christians, in order to divert the odium of the fact from its real author, the emperor Nero, Ann. xv. 44, though he bears witness to their innocence of this particular crime, yet speaks of them as "per flagitia invisos," as "sontes et novissima exempla meritos," and calls Christianity itself "exitiabilis superstitio," from all the "atroica" and "pudenda," which, along with everything else of the same kind, had made its way to the city, and obtained a reception there . . . . There was nothing the most calculated to excite horror and disgust, and to inflame the passions of a common humanity against the professors of such principles, or the perpetrators of such enormities, that was not currently imputed to the pure and holy religion of Jesus Christ, and thought to make a part of the practice of Christians. Impiety and profaneness, the utter contempt of everything which the world deemed sacred, human sacrifices, and banqueting upon human flesh, the promiscuous intercourse of the sexes, unnatural lusts, incest, and the like;' . . . . (P. 283.)—And see p. 285, ib., for the probable origin of these charges.

'NEITHER DO YE PREMEDITATE.'—Mk. xiii. 11, p. 328.

'The conduct which christian orators were thus commanded to pursue, was . . . . very different not only from what human prudence itself might have suggested, but also from the example set them by the practice of the orators of antiquity generally. . . . . Aristotle's definition of the art of rhetoric, as taught in his own system, would apply to any of the rest; as a δύναμις τοῦ περὶεκαστα λόγους, ἃ δύναμις περὶ τοῦ δοθέντος εὑρεῖν λόγους, ἅπαντος τοῦ θεωρήσαι περὶ ἕκαστον τὸ ἐνδεχόμενον πιθανόν, or the like. His copious and minute collections of εἴδη and τόποι, were intended, if such an effect was possible, to comprehend within a given compass all conceivable arguments on all conceivable subjects, which, in the exercise of the orator's vocation, could come under discussion; and so to prepare him at all points, and for every emergency. On some of these subjects, which were of more usual occurrence than others, so as to have the nature of loci communes, he directs him to be provided with the most pertinent topics, for or against the subject, duly arranged and committed to memory; which he was to produce when the occasion served. Of their speeches, too, distributed as they were into the proœm, the narration, the proof, the peroration, or the like—such portions as were more or less the same in all, it was usual to have lying by, in a variety of forms differently modified; one or other of which might be used on almost every occasion. Thus, among the extant works of Demosthenes, there is a collection of προοίμια, or proœms; as so many possible modes of introducing or beginning a speech, before coming to the particular subject under discussion. In like manner, there might be a variety of forms for concluding a speech, that is, of the epilogus or peroration. In short, to such a degree of system had the art of rhetoric been reduced, by this time, that with the exception of the part belonging to the head of the διήγησις and the πίστις, (and not the whole even of either of those, respectively,) an orator of antiquity might have had a speech ready for any occasion, almost before he knew for what it was wanted.'—(P. 293.)

THE 'GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM . . . PREACHED IN ALL THE WORLD,' &c. Mt. xxiv. 14, p. 330.

'If by the words, "in all the world," ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ οἰκουμένῃ, we were to understand no more to be meant than the compass of the Roman empire, while we should be borne out in such a construction by classical usage and authority, the correspondence of the event with the prediction would become, in that case, too notorious to require to be pointed out. Between the time of St. Paul's first mission to the Gentiles from Antioch, A.D. 44, and the time of writing his epistle to the Romans, from Corinth or Cenchreæ, A.D. 56, by his own individual exertions round about from Jerusalem, as far as up to Illyricum, he had fully preached the gospel of Christ; not too upon a foundation already laid, but upon a foundation of his own laying; that is, not where other Christian evangelists had preached the gospel before him, but where its introduction for the first time was properly his own work.'. . . (P. 300.)

'WHEN YE THEREFORE SHALL SEE THE ABOMINATION,' &c.—Mt. xxiv. 15, p. 331.

'We may justly remark, that of the occurrences which were to forerun the destruction of Jerusalem, possessing the virtue of signs or harbingers in reference to an event still future—this was beyond a question the most important and deserving of attention, because the most awful and alarming in its signification. The catastrophe which previous intimations had shewn to be at first a great way off, and ever after more or less remote—was declared by this one, to be close at hand; and while former presages, until their common import had received the confirmation of this, the most oracular and momentous of all, were auspices of hope as well as omens of fear—in this one event, when it came to pass, there would be everything to alarm the apprehensions, nothing to encourage the confidence of the observers, for the security of the existing state of things . . . .

'With this understanding previously established about it, the fact of such an occurrence would be at once an alarum, to rouse the fears of the believing Jews, and a final document to seal the doom of the unbelieving. Before that time, it would be the wisdom of the disciples to sit still, and watch the kindom of the disciples to sit still, and watch the kind, and the progress of events, without perturbation, and without the disposition, whatever might appear the temptation, to bestir themselves for immediate escape, as if from impending danger. But now, their only means of safety would be the speediness of their flight. Not a moment was to be lost in profiting by the warning, once given. . . . .

They were to cast themselves entirely upon God—with no ground of assurance but trust in his protection—with no prospect of an asylum, no hope of sustenance and support, but what his providence might be found to furnish them.'. . . (Pp. 315, .6.)

'THOSE DAYS SHALL BE SHORTENED.'—Mt. xxiv. 22, p. 333.

'A promise is subjoined to this declaration of the final end of the days in question, that they should be abridged, or cut short; with respect to the fact of which abridgment generally, or the fulfilment of the prediction itself, understood, too, of both the extremities of the days in question, both the premature commencement, and the abrupt termination of the period so appropriated to the purpose of vengeance,

SING WITH GLADNESS FOR JACOB, AND SHOUT AMONG THE CHIEF OF THE NATIONS: PUBLISH YE, PRAISE YE, AND SAY, O LORD, SAVE THY PEOPLE, THE REMNANT OF ISRAEL.—Jer. xxxi. 7.

there is but one opinion to be entertained: viz., that it is borne out by the testimony of contemporary history.' .... (P. 340.)

'The siege of Jerusalem itself was begun, by the appearance of Titus Cæsar before it, on or soon after the passover day, April 13, U.C. 823, A.D. 70. And it was brought to an end by the capture of the city, on the eighth of Gorpiæus, September 1, ensuing. The exact duration, then, of the days of vengeance, considered as devoted to the production of such penal effects in particular as the calamities suffered by the unbelieving Jews, during the siege of Jerusalem, was comprehended between these two dates, the thirteenth of April as the earliest, and the first of September at the latest, in the same year; which is a period of one hundred and forty-two days in all.' .... (Pp. 341.)

'THEY SHALL FALL BY THE EDGE OF THE SWORD.'—Lu. xxi. 24, p. 334.

'The particular prediction, "they will fall with the sword's edge," is no doubt, in its primary reference, to be restricted to the carnage and loss of life which the Jews were to sustain between the two periods of the proper commencement and the proper termination of the days of vengeance; and more especially during the siege of Jerusalem. Yet there is no reason why we may not give it a more enlarged comprehension, so as to include the whole of the destruction of life to the Jews, not only from the war at last, but in any other way; and may not illustrate the truth of the prediction by the fulfilment accordingly. The period in question, as devoted to this particular penal purpose of the destruction of life in various ways, may bear date from as far back as U.C. 790 or 791, A.D. 37 or 38, in the first or second of Caius; and extend as low down as U.C. 827 or 828, A.D. 74 or 75, in the sixth or seventh of Vespasian: and while illustrating the truth of the prediction by the requisite instances of the actual consumption of life within this period, taken collectively, we shall do much to illustrate the necessity of that abridgment of the period itself as devoted to an effect like this—which was said to be requisite for the sake of the elect, if any of their posterity, however guilty, were still to be saved from extermination....

'First, then, as to the numbers who perished in the contests between Jews and Gentiles, in various instances.

U.C. 791, A.D. 38, at Seleucis, in Upper Asia, (Ant. Jud. xviii. 1x. 9)	50,000
U.C. 819, A.D. 66, on the 12th of Gorpiæus (August 27), a sabbath at Cæsarea (B. Jud. ii. xviii. 1)	20,000
U.C. 819, A.D. 66, at Scythopolis (B. Jud. Ibid. 3)	13,000
——— at Ascalon (B. Jud. Ibid. 5)	2,500
——— at Ptolemais (Ibid.) . .	2,000
——— at Alexandria, in Egypt (Ibid. 8; Cf. also vii. viii. 7. 1114) . .	60,000
——— at Damascus (B. ii. xx. 2; vii. viii. 7. 1114) . . .	18,000
Sum total	165,500

'Secondly, of the numbers who perished by the sword, before or after the siege of Jerusalem.

U.C. 802, A.D. 49, in Jerusalem at the passover (Ant. Jud. xx. v. 3. B. ii. xii. 1) .	20,000
U.C. 819, A.D. 66, in Jerusalem, by the soldiers of Florus, Artemisius (B. ii. xiv. 9)	3,600
——— in Joppa, by the troops of Cestius Gallus, Hyperberetæus (ii. xviii. 10)	8,400
——— on Mount Asamon, in Galilee, over against Sepphoris, by the detachment of Gallus (Ibid. 11) . .	2,000
U.C. 819 or 820, A.D. 66 or 67, in the two battles at Ascalon, by Antonius and his forces, (iii. ii. 1—3)	18,000
U.C. 820, A.D. 67, Dæsius 25, at Japha, near Jotapata, by Trajan and Titus Cæsar (iii. vii. 31)	27,000
U.C. 820, A.D. 67, Dæsius 27, on mount Gerisim, by Cerealis (of Samaritans) (Bell. iii. vii. 32)	11,600
——— from Artemisius to Panemus at the siege of Jotapata (Ibid. § 36)	40,000
——— Panemus or Lous, drowned or killed at Joppa (iii. ix. 3) . . .	4,200
——— Gorpiæus 8, at Tarichææ, and on the lake of Galilee (iii. x. 9, 10)	6,500
——— at Tiberias (Ibid. § 10) .	1,200

'As to the specification of circumstances, or the account of the particular evils about to be inflicted on the Jews; the coincidence between the prophecy beforehand, and the matters of fact, and the order of their occurrence, subsequently, is truly minute and admirable. Possessing as we do, the historical narrative of Josephus, to direct us in determining the order, or classifying the kinds of the events in question; were we called upon to reduce the complicated disasters of this fatal period, to their more general heads, they would not be found to fall under more divisions than these: 1st, in respect to those who perished by famine and the sword—2ndly, in respect to those who survived, captivity and dispersion among all nations—3rdly, in respect to the temple and to Jerusalem, total destruction, desolation, and alienation from its former possessors and inhabitants.' .... (P. 350.)

U.C. 820, A.D. 67, Hyperberetæus 23, at Gamala (iv. i. 10)	9,000
——— Hyperberetæus, in the escape from Gischala (iv. ii. 5) . .	6,000
——— November, at Jerusalem, by the Idumeans and the Zealots (iv. v. 1—3)	20,500
U.C. 821, A.D. 68, Passover, at Engaddi, by the Sicarii (iv. vii. 2)	700
——— Dystrus, in the escape from Gadara to the Jordan, besides a vast multitude drowned in the Jordan (iv. vii. 4—6) .	15,000
——— Spring, at Betaris and Cephartoba, villages of Idumæa (iv. vii. 1)	10,000
——— at Gerasa, by L. Annius (iv. ix. 1)	1,000
U.C. 824 or 825, A.D. 71 or 72, at Machærus, by Bassus (vii. vi. 4) . . .	1,700
——— In the ξυρὸς, or wood of Jardes, by the same (Ibid. § 5) .	3,000
U.C. 826 or 827, A.D. 73 or 74, at Masada, Xanthicus 15, by their own hands (vii. ix. 1)	960
U.C. 827 or 828, A.D. 74 or 75, at Alexandria, of the Sicarii (vii. x. 1) . . .	800
——— In Cyrene, and the Pentapolis by the governor, Catullus (vii. xi. 2)	3,000
Sum total	213,960

'Thirdly, as to the numbers who perished in the siege of Jerusalem,

U.C. 823, A.D. 70, from the fourteenth of Xanthicus to the eighth of Gorpiæus, by famine or the sword (B. vi. ix. 3; v. xiii. 7; vi. x. 1)	1,100,000

'If we add to this last sum, the other two before collected, the sum total is 1,479,460: a result enormous as it may appear, yet, if the statements of Josephus are to be believed, or if the correctness of the numeral readings in his text at present, is to be depended on, much below rather than above the truth. The numbers who perished in the flight from Gadara to the Jordan, he expresses in general terms only, by πλῆθος ἄπειρον: but the author of the Hebrew history of the same events, entitled Josephus Gorionides, puts them at 97,000: a statement, which we may have the less hesitation to admit, that Josephus himself says, B. iv. vii. 6, the air was rendered impassable, and the lake Asphaltites itself choked up, with corpses, carried thither in multitudes down the river.

'We have no account in the above enumeration of particulars, how many perished in the seditions at Cæsarea (Ant. Jud. xx. viii. 7; B. ii. xiii. 7; xiv. 5:) —or at Jerusalem, on the various occasions specified B. ii. xv. 5; xvii. 5—10; xix. 1—7 iv. iii. 12; vi. 3; ix. 10—12; v. i. 1—3; iii. 1—or in Tyre, Hippus, and Gadara (B. ii. xviii. 5:)—or in Galilee, generally, killed by Placidus (B. iii. iv. 1:)—or at the taking of Gadara (B. iii. vii. 1:)—or at mount Tabor, killed by Placidus (iv. i. 8:)—or in the escape from Jericho to the ὄρεσι or hill country (B. iv. iii. 2:)—or round about Gerasa, killed by Lucius Annius (iv. ix. 1:)—or in Idumæa, by Simon Giore (iv. ix. 3—8:)—or in Hebron, when its inhabitants were slain ὑφ᾽ ἑαυτῶν, by Cerealis (iv. ix. 9)—and perhaps on other occasions, which may have escaped my notice.

'Nor, often as false prophets are said to have appeared, in the course of the period before the war, and to have drawn away multitudes after them, all of whom with their followers were either slain or dispersed by the Roman governors; are we told, except in one or two instances, what was the number

IF YE WILL NOT BE REFORMED BY ME BY THESE THINGS, BUT WILL WALK CONTRARY UNTO ME:

THEN WILL I ALSO WALK CONTRARY UNTO YOU, AND WILL PUNISH YOU YET SEVEN TIMES FOR YOUR SINS.—Lev. xxvi. 23, 4.

who perished. In the other cases too, the numbers specified are those of the dead: nothing is said of the wounded, nor how many perished after a battle, from the injuries received therein. There is a still greater omission in the mention of the number of prisoners, on each occasion. If the Romans did not put to the sword all the inhabitants whether male or female, old or young, in the towns or the country, as different parts severally came into their power—which it is certain they did not, at least in a great many instances—the amount of captives must often have equalled the numbers of the slain. Yet Josephus specifies the αἰχμάλωτοι, as such, or prisoners reserved for slavery, only at Japha (2,130, B. iii. vii. 31): at Jotapata (1,200, B. iii. vii. 36): at Tiberias (36,400, iii. x. 10): in the escape from Gischala (3,000, iv. ii. 5): at the Jordan (2,200. iv. vii. 5): in Idumæa (1,000, B. iv. viii. 1): and after the capture of Jerusalem, or during the siege (97,090, B. vi. ix. 3). These captives, we may presume, were disposed of in most instances alike: viz. such as were above the age of seventeen, to labour on the isthmus of Corinth, or in the mines in Egypt, or to be destroyed in the theatres, by each other's hands, as gladiators, or in combats with wild beasts (B. iv. x. 10; vi. ix. 2); and those that were under the age of seventeen, to be sold into slavery, to any that would buy them (B. vi. ix. 2).

'When we consider too, that in most of these instances, it is clearly the disposal of the male population which is specified; that nothing is said of the female part, whose numbers, however, would equal those of the male; we may reckon it a very probable supposition that, either by the sword, or by famine, or by captivity and absportation, Judæa was drained of two or three millions of inhabitants; that is, as I endeavoured to prove in my former work, of one-third of its population at least (vide Supplem. Diss. xiii. 224, sqq.); and all this within the space of nine years, which was the duration of the war, as I also shewed (Vol. I. Diss. xiii. 578. sqq. Cf. Supplem. Diss. 431—38) from first to last, viz., U.C. 819, A.D. 66—U.C. 828, A.D. 75; by far the greatest part of the carnage and loss of life, in every way, being that which was effected between the spring of U.C. 819, A.D. 66, in the first year of the war, and the beginning of the autumnal quarter, U.C. 823, A.D. 70, in the fifth; the date of the capture of Jerusalem. —(Pp. 358—.8.)

'JERUSALEM SHALL BE TRODDEN DOWN,' &c.—Lu. xxi. 24, p. 334.

'We are told (Bell. Jud. v. iii. 2) that upon the first approach of Titus with his army to the siege of the city, about the middle of April, U.C. 823, A.D. 70, he caused the whole of the space, between Scopus and the monument of Herod (a distance of five stades at least, the former being seven, the latter two stades from the walls of Jerusalem), to be levelled with the ground. This was the beginning of the ἅρπαγαι of Jerusalem.....

'Upon the final reduction of the city, as well as the temple, Titus gave orders to level all with the ground, except the three towers, called Phasaelus, Hippicus, and Mariamne, and the part of the city wall on the west; the former, for their size, their strength, and beauty, to be a monument what kind of defences Roman valour had conquered, the latter as a protection to the military force which he left in possession of the place.'—(P. 361.)

ON FALSE CHRISTS.—See Mt. xxiv. 5, 23, pp. 325, .34, .5.

'Though no matter of fact is capable of being more fully substantiated by the testimony of contemporary history, than this of the repeated appearance of pretenders to the character of the Jewish Messiah, during the interval between the Ascension and the commencement of the Jewish war, the fact that any one ever arose laying claim to that title before the birth, or between that time and the beginning of the ministry of our Saviour, is just as destitute of support or confirmation from external testimony of any kind.'—(P. 380.)

RETROSPECT OF THE PROPHECY.—pp. 413—.21.

'THE TIME selected for the delivery of these predictions, peculiar as they are in the subjects upon which they turn, and copious and minute as they are in their details, was singularly appropriate. This period was the close of our Saviour's public ministry, just before the event of his suffering, and not long anterior to his final separation from his disciples in person. If we regard them as prophetical of the impending dissolution of the Jewish church and state, considered in the light of the national punishment upon the national guilt, contracted by the failure of our Lord's ministry, perhaps we shall conclude they could not have been delivered at any period of his ministry with more fitness than at this. The national sin of the Jews was now complete. A long series of overt acts, and declarations of impenitence and infidelity, had placed beyond a question the fact of their rejection of the Messiah, notwithstanding the evidence of the fulfilment of prophecy, the testimony of John the Baptist, the preaching of our Lord himself, and the glory of his miracles, all conspiring to establish the truth of his character; or if the same fact required any further proof, it was shortly about to receive it in the crucifixion of the Master, and the systematic hatred and persecution of his followers. With reason then did the denunciation of the punishment coincide with the time of the consummation of the guilt. . . . .

'If we regard these disclosures, on the other hand, as equally intended for the sake of our Lord's own disciples, the period selected for their delivery will appear not less suitable. As a means of assuring the Hebrew Christians beforehand of his constant care and providence in their behalf, they would be most necessary when he was about to be personally separated from them. . . . .

'THE OCCASION, too, which more immediately produced these disclosures, whatever further end might be contemplated by them, possesses something peculiarly impressive. The prophecy was delivered in answer to an inquiry of the apostles; but this question arose apparently out of the prediction relating to the fate of the temple. . . . A temple which, for the magnificence of its structure, the costliness and the beauty of its materials, as well as for the purity of its worship, and the sacredness of its character, was without a rival in the ancient world. Yet when the sense of honest pride and patriotic exultation, in the possession of so distinguished an ornament of his age and nation, was at its height in the mind of the disciple, whose apostrophe to our Lord, excited by the contemplation and the admiration of its buildings, as they were passing through its courts, is so singularly contrasted with the melancholy import of his answer—this was the moment chosen to inculcate upon him, and the rest of the hearers, the mournful truth of its future ruin and desolation. There is a moral pathos in this coincidence, derived not only from the consideration of the calamity itself thus forcibly brought to view, but from the reflection which it naturally excites upon the causes to which that effect should be due; not merely the fleeting and transitory quality of all human works, but moreover the efficacy of human sin and human guilt to abase and annihilate the proudest and most durable monuments of human power and human grandeur; how much more speedy and irresistible than time, or any other agent of destruction, the wickedness of men themselves should be, to deface and obliterate the fairest and noblest of their own creations. . . . . .

'THE PECULIARITY OF THE PLACE, too, on which this prophecy was delivered, is as remarkable as any other. . . . The time would come when mount Olivet, on which the speaker was sitting, would be covered not only with the ministers, but with the monuments of the predicted vengeance; when the entire vicinity of Jerusalem would be so filled with the spectacle of suffering, that, as Josephus tells us was the case, crosses should be wanted for bodies, and room for crosses. . . . .

'We might specify many passages in the above account, which the local situation of the speaker, and of the parties addressed, would at once illustrate and apply; where the allusion to things about him and them was too pointed to be overlooked; in which the sentiments or language of the discourse might have been suggested by the circumjacent picture; into which the very attitudes and gestures of the speaker, a turn of the body, a glance of the eye, a motion of the hand, might have thrown a living force and expression.' . . . . (Pp. 413—.21.)—Greswell.

THERE SHALL BE A DAY, THAT THE WATCHMEN UPON THE MOUNT EPHRAIM SHALL CRY, ARISE YE, AND LET US GO UP TO ZION UNTO THE LORD OUR GOD.—Jer. xxxi. 6.

SECTION 87.—(G. 82—92.)—[Lessons 85—90.*]—PARTICULARS OF THE FIFTH DAY IN PASSION WEEK, THURSDAY, THE EVENING OF NISAN THE FOURTEENTH. PETER AND JOHN ARE SENT TO PREPARE THE PASCHAL SUPPER. JESUS SITS DOWN WITH THE TWELVE. HE WASHES THE DISCIPLES' FEET. HE INSTITUTES THE BREAKING OF BREAD. FORETELLS HIS BETRAYAL. JUDAS LEAVES THE SUPPER CHAMBER. JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES; AND FORETELLS THAT PETER WILL DENY HIM. THE DISCIPLES DISPUTE CONCERNING PRECEDENCE. JESUS AGAIN FOREWARNS PETER. JESUS BIDS ALL HIS DISCIPLES DRINK OF THE CUP IN REMEMBRANCE OF HIM. AFTER SUPPER JESUS DISCOURSES WITH HIS DISCIPLES, AND DEPARTS TO THE MOUNT OF OLIVES. FORETELLS A THIRD TIME THAT PETER WILL THRICE DENY HIM; HE PROMISES THE DISCIPLES THAT AFTER HIS RESURRECTION HE WILL GO BEFORE THEM INTO GALILEE.—Matt. xxvi. 17—35. Mark xiv. 12—31. Luke xxii. 7—39. John xiii.—xviii. 1.—[See ADDENDA, infra, pp. 408—.11.]

ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvi. 17. Mk. xiv. 12, .3. Lu. xxii. 7—9. Jesus sends Peter and John to prepare the passover.
— xxvi. 18. — xiv. 13—.5. — xxii. 10—.2. He tells them where to go, what to say, and how they will speed; giving thereby tokens of his omniscience.
— xxvi. 19. — xiv. 16. — xxii. 13. The disciples follow the directions of their Lord; they find as he foretold, and do as he commanded.
— xxvi. 20. — xiv. 17. — xxii. 14. Evening being come, he sits down with the twelve.
Mt. xxvi. — Mk. xiv. — Lu. xxii. 15, .6. He tells them how earnestly he has desired to eat this passover with them; saying he will not any more partake 'thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.'
——— — xxii. 17, .8. Having taken the cup, Jesus gives thanks, and tells them to divide it among themselves; as for himself, he 'will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.'

See also pp. 365, ..7, INTRODUCTION, &c., Jno. xiii. 1—17.

No. 87.—(G. 82.)—Peter and John are sent to prepare the passover.

MATT. xxvi. 17—.9. (Ver. 16, ‡ lxxxvi. p. 357.)

17 [a] Now the first day of-the feast of unleavened-bread [b] the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto-him, Where wilt-thou that-we-prepare for-thee to-eat the passover?
18 And he said, Go into the city

MARK xiv. 12—.6. (Ver. 11, ibid.)

12 And the first day of-unleavened-bread, when they-killed the passover, his disciples said unto-him, [c] Where wilt-thou that-we-go and-prepare that thou-mayest-eat the passover? [d]
13 And he-sendeth-forth two of-his disciples, and saith unto-them, [e] Go-ye into the city, and [f]

LUKE xxii. 7—13. (Ver. 6, ibid.)

Then came the day of 7
unleavened-bread, [b] when the passover must be-killed.
And he-sent Peter and 8
John, saying, Go and-prepare us the passover, that we-may-eat.
And they 9
said unto-him, [c] Where wilt-thou that-we-prepare?
[d] And he said unto-them, [e] 10

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 17. unleavened bread—appointed to be eaten seven days at the feast of the passover, Ex. xii. 15, .8—1 Co. v. 8, 'Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.'

Lu. xxii. 7. the passover must be killed—A lamb for each house was to be taken on the tenth day—kept up until the fourteenth, and killed the same day at even, Ex. xii. 3, 6—see 1 Co. v. 7, 'Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us:'

Mk. xiv. 12. Where wilt thou, &c.—The servants of the Lord will carefully watch the intimations of his will, Ps. cxxiii. 2—they will put him in remembrance, Is. lxii. 6, 7—and seek to know his will that they may do it, Ps. cxix. 33.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxvi. 17. Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread. As the feast of unleavened bread did not begin till the day after 'they killed the passover,' i.e., on the fifteenth day of the month, Le. xxiii. 5, 6; Nu. xxviii. 16, .7, this could not have been, properly, the first day of that feast. Strictly speaking, the feast of unleavened bread did not begin till the evening of this day, when the paschal lamb was eaten; that is, just at the beginning of the fifteenth day of the month, the Jewish day being reckoned from evening to evening: but as the Jews began to eat unleavened bread on the fourteenth, Ex. xii. 18, this day was often termed the first of unleavened bread. The evangelists use it in this sense, and call even the paschal day by this name—see Mk. xiv. 12; Lu. xxii. 7—the reason of which appears to be, because on that day the Jews killed the paschal lamb, removed leaven from their houses, and made all necessary preparations for keeping the seven days of unleavened bread which were to follow. The 'first day' here spoken of by St. Matthew answers to the Thursday before Easter.—See ADD., p. 402, col. 2, par. 5.]

The passover. The word in the original translated passover, commonly means, not the feast itself, but the lamb that was killed on the occasion—see Ex. xii. 43; 1 Co. v. 7; where Christ, our Passover, is said to be 'sacrificed [slain] for us:' i.e., our Paschal Lamb; so called on account of his innocence, and his being offered as a victim, or sacrifice, for our sins.

Mk. xiv. 13. Go ye into the city. That is, into Jerusalem.

* Lesson 85, in the 'System of Graduated Simultaneous Instruction,' includes Mt. xxvi. 17—26. Mk. xiv. 12—22. Lu. xxii. 7—23. Jno. xiii. 1—30.

LET US ENDEAVOUR TO BE PREPARED FOR THE PROPER OBSERVANCE OF RELIGIOUS ORDINANCES;
AND LET US, ESPECIALLY IN SUCH MATTERS, ENDEAVOUR TO OBTAIN DIRECTIONS FROM OUR LORD.—See Matt. xxvi. 17.

MATT. xxvi. 19.	MARK xiv. 14—.6.	LUKE xxii. 11—.3.
		f Behold, when-ye-are-entered into the city,
	there-shall-meet απαντησει	there-shall-a-man-meet συναντησει
	you a-man bearing a-pitcher of-water: follow him.	you, bearing a-pitcher of-water: follow him into the house where he-entereth-in. g to such-a-man.
	14 g And wheresoever he-shall go-in,
and say unto-him,	say-ye to-the good-man-of-the-house, h	And ye-shall-say unto-the 11 goodman of-the house,
The Master saith,	The Master saith,	The Master saith unto-thee,
h My time ὁ καιρος is at-hand; I-will-keep the passover at thy-house προς σε with my disciples. i	i Where is the guest chamber καταλυμα, where I-shall-eat the passover with my disciples?	Where is the guest-chamber καταλυμα, where I-shall-eat the passover with my disciples?
	15 And he will-shew you a-large upper-room furnished εστρωμενον and prepared:	And-he shall-shew you a- 12 large upper-room furnished εστρωμενον:
	there make-ready for-us.	there make-ready.
	16 And his disciples went-forth,	And they-went, 13
	and came into the city, and found as he-had-said unto-them: k	and-found as he-had-said unto-them:
19 k And the disciples did as Jesus had-appointed συνεταξεν them; and they-made-ready the passover.	and they-made-ready the passover.	and they-made-ready the passover.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 18. My time is at hand—There was no time for delay—the place was to be found furnished and prepared, so that the disciples might immediately make ready the passover, Mk. xiv. 15 — The hour of his departure was at hand—see similar expressions, Jno. vii. 30; viii. 20; xiii. 1—comp. 2 Ti. iv. 6.

NOTES.

Mk. xiv. 13. There shall meet you a man. It was highly seasonable for our Lord to give them this additional proof both of his knowing all things, and of his influence over the minds of men. In this our Lord proved his omniscience, telling beforehand, and at a distance from the place, what should come to pass.

Mt. xxvi. 18. The Master. By this name Jesus was probably known among the disciples.

My time is at hand. That is, the time of my crucifixion. Kypke has largely shewn that καιρὸς is often used among the Greeks for affliction and calamity. It might be rendered here, the time of my crucifixion is at hand.

I will keep the passover at thy house. It is said, that during the time of the passover, the inhabitants of Jerusalem were not allowed to let any of their houses or rooms to strangers for hire, and that all were lent gratis. The furniture of the houses was looked upon as of common right, and occupied accordingly.

Mk. xiv. 15. Upper room. Such as the Jews used for the same purposes as our dining-rooms, parlours, and closets are applied.

Furnished. The Greek is, properly, 'carpeted,' which implies not only the covering of the floor, but of the couches on which the guests reclined at meals.

16. They made ready the passover. ἡτοίμασαν τὸ πάσχα, 'they prepared the paschal lamb.' Or, rather, 'they made ready for the paschal meal;' with reference to such preliminaries as examining the lamb, slaying, skinning, and roasting it. On the ceremonies of the passover, see ADDENDA, § 6, p. 43.

[Mr. Wakefield justly observes, 'that the Jews considered the passover as a sacrificial rite; Josephus calls it θυσιαν, A SACRIFICE; and Trypho, in Justin Martyr, speaks of προβατον τον πασχα θυειν, SACRIFICING the paschal lamb. But what comes nearer to the point is this, that Maimonides, one of the most eminent of the Jewish rabbins, has a particular treatise on the paschal sacrifice; and, throughout that piece, speaks of the lamb as a victim, and of the solemnity itself as a sacrifice. And R. Bechai, in his commentary on Le. ii. 11, says that the paschal sacrifice was of a piacular nature, in order to expiate the guilt contracted by the idolatrous practices of the Israelites in Egypt.' It was highly necessary that this should be considered as an expiatory sacrifice, as it typified that Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Lu. xxii. 10—.2. Jesus modifies his instructions according to the necessities of his disciples: now when in danger of being offended in him, on account of his sufferings and death, it was needful that they should anew be given assured evidence of their Lord's foreknowledge. Had they been rightly profited by the present lesson, they would have learned quietly to wait upon God until those calamities were over into which they were that very night to enter.] — 13 ver. See margin.

(G. 83.)—*At supper time, Jesus and the twelve sit down. In an upper chamber at Jerusalem.†

	MATT. xxvi. 20.		MARK xiv. 17.		LUKE xxii. 14—8.
20	Now	17	‡And		And	14
	when-the-even-		in-the-evening§		§ when the hour
	was-come,				was-come,
	he-sat-down		he-cometh		he-sat-down,
	with the twelve.		with the twelve.		and the twelve apostles
	(Ver. 21, p. 370.)		(Ver. 18, p. 370.)		with him.
			‡ And he-said unto them, With-desire ἐπιθυμίᾳ			15
			I-have-desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I-say unto-you, I-will-			16 not any-more-eat thereof, until it-be-fulfilled in the kingdom of God. And he-took the-cup,			17 and-gave-thanks, and-said, Take this, and divide-it-among your-selves: for I-say unto-			18
			you, I-will-not-drink of the fruit of-the vine, until the kingdom of God shall-come.
			(Ver. 19, p. 368.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 17. in the evening—Ex. xii. 6. 'The whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.'—De. xvi. 6. 'Thou shalt sacrifice the passover at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.'

Lu. xxii. 16. until it be fulfilled, &c.—The type was speedily to give place to the Antitype, when even Christ our Passover was to be sacrificed for us, 1 Co. v. 7—God sent, Rom. viii. 3, 4, 'his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.'—x. 4. 'For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.'

18. I will not drink, &c.—Jesus would eat of the passover, ver. 15—which was expressive of his suffering, Ex. xii. 8—but he would not drink of the wine which was expressive of rejoicing, Ju. ix. 13; Ps. civ. 15—until he had brought the joy of the kingdom, Jno. xvi. 22, p. 336, infra—Rom. xiv. 17, 'The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 20. When the even was come. The lamb was killed between the evenings—see the Heb. of Ex xii. 6. That is, between three and nine o'clock in the evening. The Jews reckoned two evenings; one from three o'clock P.M. to sunset, the other from sunset to the close of the first watch in the night, or nine o'clock.

[Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve. It is a common opinion that our Lord ate the passover some hours before the Jews ate it; for the Jews, according to custom, ate theirs at the end of the fourteenth day, but Christ ate his the preceding even, which was the beginning of the same sixth day, or Friday; the Jews begin their day at sunsetting, we at midnight. Thus Christ ate the passover on the same day with the Jews, but not at the same hour. Christ kept this passover the beginning of the fourteenth day, the precise day and hour in which the Jews had eaten their first passover in Egypt.—See Ex. xii. 6—12. And in the same part of the same day in which the Jews had sacrificed their first paschal lamb, viz., between the two evenings, about the ninth hour, or three o'clock, Jesus Christ our passover was sacrificed for us: for it was at this hour that he yielded up his last breath; and then it was that, the sacrifice being completed, Jesus said, 'IT IS FINISHED.'—See Ex. xii. 6, &c.; De. xvi. 6; A. C.; and see ADDENDA, p. 408.

He sat down. Ἀνέκειτο, he reclined or laid down. The first passover was directed to be eaten standing, in the posture of travellers—see Ex. xii. 11; but after the Israelites were settled in the land of Canaan, the guests reclined on their left arms upon couches placed round a table, during the time of their meals. This posture, according to the Talmudical writers, was an emblem of that rest and freedom which God had granted to the children of Israel by bringing them out of Egypt.

Lu. xxii. 15. With desire I have desired. That is, I have heartily desired it.

16. Until it be fulfilled, &c. Until everything be fulfilled of which the passover was a type or symbol.

17. He took the cup. The cup ordinarily taken before supper. The cup after supper is mentioned, ver. 20, p. 378.

Divide it. See Mt. xxvi. 27, p. 378; and see PRAC. REFLEC., infra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxii. 17, 8. Jesus did not drink of the cup himself; neither of this, nor of that after supper: but he says of this cup, 'Divide it among yourselves:' and of the cup after supper, 'Drink ye all of it.'

How strangely in contrast, here, as in other things, is the conduct of the Romish priesthood, who withhold the cup from the people, and make use of it themselves!

* On the time of the celebration of the last supper, see ADDENDA, infra, p. 408; and Diss. xlii. p. 123, on the proceedings of the night of Thursday, and the morning of Friday, in Passion week.

† 'The commencement of the paschal supper, we may reasonably suppose, would be at the usual time of that solemnity; which, according to the appointment of the Law, was the evening after the passover had been killed; and, consequently, as we before observed, after, not before, the beginning of the Jewish fourteenth; a time which St. Luke expresses in general by ἦλθε δὲ ἡμέρα τῶν ἀζύμων.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 174.

‡ 'At this point of time, when our Saviour and his twelve disciples were met together, and the solemnity was ready to begin, we may introduce Lu. xxii. 15, 6, peculiar to that account—and, consequently, the first clear proof of an omission in St. Matthew's or St. Mark's.'—Ibid.

§ 'This too is peculiar to his account: and therefore a proof of a second omission in St. Matthew and St. Mark. Nor can this cup, and what was connected with its introduction, reception, and distribution among the disciples, be confounded on any principle with what is similarly related at verse 20 of another cup; as the place of each in a common account, and the absence of the article before the mention of the one, and its presence before the mention of the other, are sufficient to prove. This circumstance of distinction shews the introduction, reception, and distribution, of that other cup to have been a different thing from the former. The well-known christian cup arose out of the one, but not out of the other. It first must still be peculiar to him: and if a similar declaration concerning the fruit of the vine accompanied both, St. Luke, who has specified this in the former instance, might naturally omit it in the latter.'—Ibid.

O LOVE THE LORD, ALL YE HIS SAINTS: FOR THE LORD PRESERVETH THE FAITHFUL, AND PLENTIFULLY REWARDETH THE PROUD DOER.

BE OF GOOD COURAGE, AND HE SHALL STRENGTHEN YOUR HEART, ALL YE THAT HOPE IN THE LORD.—Psa. xxxi. 23, 24.

(G. 84.)—Jesus rises from table, and washes his disciples' feet; after which he sits down again, and explains to them what he had done.—John xiii. 1—17.*

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jno. xiii. 1—3. Circumstances antecedent to our Lord's washing the disciples' feet.

—— 4, 5. Jesus rises from supper, lays aside his garments, takes the form of a servant, pours water into a bason, and begins to wash the disciples' feet, &c.

—— 6. Jesus comes to Simon Peter, who asks, 'Lord, dost thou wash my feet?'

—— 7. Peter is told that he will hereafter be given to know the import of what is now being done.

—— 8. Peter absolutely refuses to allow his Lord to wash his feet.

Jesus tells Peter that he must be washed by him, otherwise he can have no part with him.

—— 9. Peter now proves the truth of what Jesus had said in ver. 7. Mistaking the sign for the substance, the washing with water for the cleansing by the word, he asks that Jesus wash not only his feet, but also his hands and his head.

—— 10, 11. Jesus reminds Peter, that he who 'is washed needeth not save to wash his feet;' and this was their case, but not of them all—the exception being Judas.

Jno. xiii. 12. Jesus having resumed his former dress, and returned to his place at table, asks the disciples, 'Know ye what I have done to you?'

—— 13, 14. He recognises the propriety with which they had acted, in calling him 'Master and Lord;' but requires for the acknowledgment of their discipleship, in more than word, each humbling himself for the benefit of the other.

—— 15. Jesus is not only to be trusted in for our own salvation; he is the pattern after which we are to copy in our efforts for the benefit of each other.

—— 16. We are not to suppose ourselves above those condescensions to which our Lord humbled himself for us.

—— 17. In order to enjoy happiness, as the disciples of Christ, we must both know the truth, and do it, exhibiting in our conduct the condescending love of the Saviour.

[Ch. xii. 50, § lxxxv. p. 312.]

1 Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in 2 the world, he loved them unto the end. And supper being ended, the devil having now 3 put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him; Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 1. depart—'be received up,' Lu. ix. 51, § 59, p. 135.

loved them unto the end—see an expression of this in his earnest desire to anticipate the feast that he might eat it with them, Lu. xxii. 15, supra—as loves as a brother still, Ba. ii. 9—17.

2. supper being ended—or being come—see Gr. of Mk. vi. 2—comp. Jno. xxi. 4, § 97; Ac. xii. 18; xvi. 35; xxi. 40.

the devil having now put—Judas had already determined to betray his Master, Lu. xxii. 2—6, § 86, p. 356—Jno. vi. 70, § 43, p. 234. 'Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?'—Treachery in a friend is one of the severest trials, Ps. lv. 12, 13.

3. the Father had given—'All things are delivered unto me of my Father,' Mt. xi. 27, § 29, p. 228; see also xxviii. 18, § 96.

was come from God, &c.—Jno. viii. 42, § 55, 'I proceeded forth and came from God;'—see xvi. 28, infra; xvii. 11, ib.

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 1. Before the feast of the passover. That is, immediately before the celebration of 'the feast of the passover,' and when he himself was about to eat the paschal supper with his disciples.

When Jesus knew. Rather, 'Jesus knowing.' The original expression is the same as that translated 'Jesus knowing,' in ver. 3.

Having loved his own. τοὺς ἰδίους, 'his own persons,' that is, his apostles. Having given to them decisive and constant proofs of his love. This was done by his calling them to follow him, by patiently teaching them, by bearing with their errors and weaknesses, and by making them the heralds of his truth, and the heirs of eternal life.

Unto the end. Of his life. The words also signify 'to perfection,' which idea may be included. He shewed this love by communing with his disciples in the last supper, by washing their feet, and by unfolding the plenitude of grace and glory in his valedictory address.

2. Supper being ended. δείπνου γενομένου, 'supper being come.' That the supper was not ended, except as to the preparation of it, appears from ver. 26—28.

The devil having now put. 'Judas having now yielded to the temptations of the devil, and the enticements of his own covetous inclinations.'

3. Was come from God. This expression, ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε, 'was come from God,' taken in conjunction with πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ὑπάγει, 'went to God,' can import no less than that 'he was of celestial origin, and dwelt in heaven before he came on earth'—see ch. iii. 13, § 13, p. 85; vi. 62; xvii. 5; and i. 1: and the latter (πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ὑπάγει) must mean that he would return to the Father, again to reign with him by equal right. In short, the clause plainly declares the dignity of Christ's person—that as he had 'come from God, and had the governance of the whole universe committed into his hands, so he was going again to God, to resume the glory which he had with the Father from all eternity.']

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Jno. xiii. 1. Jesus did not love his disciples the less, because he was about to leave them. Though having full experience of their imperfections, and foreseeing their weakness and unfaithfulness in the hour of trial; and although about to ascend to the enjoyment of perfection true and eternal, still he does not despise the little ones whom he is leaving, but loves them to the end. May our love be like his!]

* 'Since it must be evident that the supper was actually now begun, there is no point of time where we can better introduce St. John's account of the washing the disciples' feet, than at this; first, because the act took place during supper—when the supper might have been begun, though not necessarily when it was over: secondly, because it took place in the course of the supper; our Lord arose from table to perform it; and having performed it he resumed his former position—a position, which the Greek terms employed (ἀναπεσόντων πάλιν) determine to be the position of a person at meat. The act, therefore, was critically interposed between the beginning and the end of the same solemnity; the supper had been going on before it, and continued to go on after it. Thirdly, the allusion in ver. 10 and 11 demonstrates that Judas was still present, and one of those among the rest whose feet were washed. But after the time implied at ver. 30 he was not still present—and that time, as we shall see hereafter, was much prior to the conclusion of the supper.

'The whole of this account, then, from Jno. xiii. 1—17, impressive and significant as it is, is clearly an episode, relating to a matter of fact between the two extremes of the paschal solemnity, and strictly independent of them both: which is probably the true reason why the former evangelists omitted it. As it began with Peter, it would probably end with Judas, and take the rest of the apostles in their order between the two.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 176.

JOHN xiii. 4—10.

4 went to God; he-riseth from supper, and laid-aside his garments; and took a-towel,
5 and-girded himself. After-that he-poureth water into a bason, and began to-wash the disciples' feet, and to-wipe them with-the towel wherewith he-was girded.
6 Then cometh-he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto-him, Lord, dost-thou-wash
7 my feet? Jesus answered and said unto-him, What I do thou knowest not now ἀρτι;
8 but thou-shalt-know hereafter. Peter saith unto-him, Thou-shalt-never-wash my feet.
9 Jesus answered him, If I-wash thee not, thou-hast no part with me. Simon Peter saith 10 unto-him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head. Jesus saith to-him, He that-is-washed needeth not save to-wash his feet, but is clean every-whit ὁλος: and

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 4. He riseth from supper—The supper had been prepared, ver. 2, supra—but was not yet eaten, ver. 26, p. 372, infra.

took a towel, &c.—He was among them as he that serveth, Lu. xxii. 27, p. 375—Ph. ii. 7, 'Made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant,'

5. he poureth water, &c.—Eph. v. 25, 6, 'Christ . . . loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word,'

6. dost thou, &c.—see ver. 14, 5, p. 367.

7. thou shalt know hereafter— Peter afterwards knew when he exhorted his believing brethren, 1 Ep. i. 14, 5, 'As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance: but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation:'—ii. 11, 'As strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts,'—iv. 1, 'Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind:'—v. 5, 'All . . . . be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility:'—see also 2 Ep. i. 2—11.

8. If I wash thee not, &c.—He. xii. 14—7, 'Holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord: looking,' &c.—2 Pe. iii. 14, 'Beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.'

9. saith unto him, Lord, &c.—see ver. 13, p. 367.

10. He that is washed, &c.—1 Pe. i. 2, 'Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ:'

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 4. He riseth from supper. See note, p. 365.

His garments. ἱμάτια, 'mantle.' The word ἱμάτιον, in the singular, properly signifies the 'upper garment, the mantle:' but the plural is often used for the singular, as Mt. xxiv. 18, § 86, p. 332; xxvi. 65, § 99, p. 429; xxvii. 35, § 91; Jno. xix. 23, § ib., p. 461.

[A towel. Λέντιον is a Hellenistic word (from whence the Latin linteum) nearly synonymous with σινδὼν, and meaning a towel; though σάβανον was the more usual term. To be thus girded was considered by the ancients in the same light as, with us, a person's wearing an apron,—namely, as indicating the exercise of some servile or handicraft occupation.]

5. Poureth water into a bason. This was the office of the meanest slaves. When David informed Abigail that he had chosen her for wife, she said, 'Behold, let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of the servants of my lord,' 1 Sa. xxv. 41.

[7. What I do thou, &c. Ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ, &c. 'A popular mode of expression for "The meaning of what I am doing," &c. Νῦν ταῦτα is often used, as here, of a very short period hence; meaning, in the present case, "after I have done what I am doing." This our Lord explains at ver. 12—7, p. 367; namely, to set them an example of humility, condescension, and Christian "forbearing one another in love."'—Bloomf.]

8. If I wash thee not, &c. These words seem to intimate to Peter, the necessity of a spiritual washing by Christ, in order to a participation in the blessings which belong to his disciples.

10. He that is washed. That is, he who has been in the bath, as probably all the apostles had lately been, in order to prepare themselves the better for the paschal solemnity; for, on that occasion, it was the custom of the Jews to bathe twice.

Needeth not save to wash his feet. Which may have been soiled in consequence of walking from the bath to the place of supper. 'This foot washing represented to them, besides its lesson of humility and brotherly love, their daily need of cleansing from daily pollution, even after spiritual regeneration, at the hands of their Divine Master.'—Alford.

The Hindoos walk home from bathing barefoot, and on entering the house, wash their feet again.

['Our Lord here states this familiar truth as a reason why it was not needful that he should comply with Peter's request, to have not only his feet, but also his hands and his head washed by Jesus. These words, however, must be considered as having a spiritual meaning, namely, that he who has been thoroughly cleansed in heart by faith in Christ, needs not to be again thus cleansed, but only to have those defilements washed away which he may have contracted from time to time in his course through the world. That our Lord, according to his custom in such instances, see ch. vi. 27, here takes occasion, from the mention of the washing of the body, to speak of the cleansing of the soul, appears from the words which immediately follow, "and ye are clean, but not all;" that is, and ye, my apostles, have been thus thoroughly cleansed by my doctrine, comp. xv. 3, p. 387, "but not all of you."'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xiii. 2—5. It was not only with a full knowledge of the utter unworthiness of those to whom such kindness was shewn, but as having a true sense of his own power and dignity; as knowing that all things were put into his hands; and that he was come from God, and went to God, that he washed his disciples' feet. Let not suspicion of their unworthiness, nor any conceit of our own dignity, prevent us from performing acts of service for the poor disciples of Christ, as such. In place of complaining that we are not sufficiently attended to by others, let us endeavour to do what we can for their comfort and advantage.]

4, 5 ver. Not in the present instance alone did Jesus give us an example of service. In taking upon him our nature, he did what is here represented, he 'took upon him the form of a servant;' and even his precious blood he poured forth that therein he might wash us from our sins: that he might cleanse us with the washing of water by the word.

6 ver. How marvellous that the Lord of Glory should condescend to occupy such a position in relation to creatures so unworthy as we are! No wonder Peter should ask, 'Dost Thou wash my feet?'

[7 ver. Let us submit ourselves into the hands of the Saviour; believing that He who knows the end from the beginning, is better able than we are to judge what is good for us; and that what we know not now, we shall know hereafter.]

[8 ver. Let us beware of hasty vows, or resolutions. Peter may have thought his proceeded from humility; but was there not some appearance of pride, in thinking he knew better than his Lord?]

Let us seriously consider that, without holiness, we can have no part with Jesus, whose very name declares that he saves 'his people from their sins.'

9 ver. See margin.

10 ver. Even those who have been really renewed in the spirit of their minds, may, in passing through life, contract defilement from which they require to be cleansed.

JOHN xiii. 11—.7.

11 ye are clean, but not all. For he-knew who should-betray him; therefore said-he, Ye-are not all clean.
12 So after he-had-washed their feet, and had-taken his garments, and-was-set-down 13 again, he-said unto-them, Know-ye what I-have-done to-you? Ye call me Master and 14 Lord: and ye-say well; for so I-am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have-washed 15 your feet; ye also ought to-wash one-another's feet. For I-have-given you an-example 16 ὑποδειγμα, that ye should-do as I have-done to-you. Verily, verily, I-say unto-you,
The-servant is not greater than-his lord; neither he-that-is-sent greater than-he that-17 sent him. If ye-know these-things, happy are-ye if ye-do them.
[Ver. 18, p. 370.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 10. and ye are clean—see ch. xv. 3, p. 387.

but not all—1 Co. xi. 28, 'Let a man examine himself,'—2 Co. xiii. 5, 'Examine yourselves,' &c.

11. For he knew, &c.—ch. vi. 64, § 43, p. 333, 'Jesus knew from the beginning,' &c.

12. Know ye what, &c.—see ver. 7, supra.

13. Ye call me Master and Lord—'Master,' Lu. xxii. 11, p. 363—'Lord,' Jno. xiii. 9, supra—'One is your Master,' &c., Mt. xxiii. 8, 10, § 85, p. 314—Lu. vi. 46, § 27, p. 210, 'Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?'—Ac. ii. 36, he is 'both Lord and Christ.'—Rom. xiv. 9, 'Lord both of the dead and living.'—1 Co. viii. 6, 'One Lord Jesus Christ,'—Ph. ii. 11, 'Every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.'

14. If I then, &c.—see Lu. xxii. 24—.7, p. 375.

wash one another's feet—Believers are in the spirit of meekness to seek the purification of such among them as have become defiled—Ga. vi. 1, 2, 'Brethren, if a man'—see margin.

15. an example—Mt. xi. 29, § 29, p. 228, 'Meek and lowly in heart:'—1 Pe. ii. 21, 'Leaving us an example,'

16. not greater than his lord—1 Pe. v. 3, 'Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.'—2 Pe. ii. 1, 2, 'There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, . . . And many shall follow their pernicious ways;'—see also the warning of Paul against those who assume a more lofty bearing among the brethren than did he whom they call Lord, Ac. xx. 29—35; 2 Th. ii. 4.

17. If ye know, &c.—God requireth the understanding and the heart, Pr. i. 5, 6—iii. 13, .4, 'Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.'—iv. 5—7, 'Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. 6, Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. 7, Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.'

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 10. Ye are clean, but not all. Eleven of you are upright and sincere; the twelfth is a traitor. So it appears he had washed the feet of all the twelve; but as no external ablutions can purify a hypocrite or a traitor, therefore Judas still remained unclean.

[And ye are clean, but not all. καὶ ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε. The καί should here (as at ver. 14) be rendered 'thus also;' render the ἀλλ' just after, 'by no means.' These latter words were meant to smite the conscience of Judas.]

12—.7. Here our Lord shews the chief intent of the action he had been performing, admonishing them to practise the duty it was meant to suggest.

[13. Ye call me Master and Lord. Ὁ διδάσκαλος καὶ ὁ κύριος, similar to ὁ רבי rabbi, and מר mar, titles very common among the Jewish doctors, as may be seen in Schoettgen. This double title was not given except to the most accredited teachers, 'רבי ומורי, rabbi vemore, my master, my lord.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xiii. 11. Washing with water by the hands of the Saviour did not take away sin. It did not expel the devil from Judas: it left him unclean, and ready for the betrayal of his Lord. Do we expect that washing with water by the hands of any human priesthood can be more efficacious, than that of Him who said unto Peter, 'If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me?' Jesus did not delude his disciples with the fancied virtues of an outward baptism. Unlike an apostate priesthood, he, after the performance of the rite, told his disciples plainly, 'Ye are not all clean.']

12 ver. We should endeavour to know the mind of the Lord in his acting toward us.

13 ver. Let us ever duly recognise Christ; both as our Master, by whose instructions we are to be enlightened; and as our Lord, to whose will we are to submit, whose directions we are to follow. He is rightfully our Lord and Master, both because of what He is, and what he hath done for us.

14, .5 ver. Let us, when we desire to teach effectually, endeavour, like our Lord, to teach by doing ourselves that which we desire others to do.

Let us learn humility and forbearance in doing good; not only from this act of Christ, in washing his disciples' feet, but from his whole example.

[16 ver. Let us be less disposed to criticise the defects of our fellow-believers. Rather let us, in the spirit of Christ, endeavour to seek their rectification. Let him who cannot bear with the folly and the vileness of those around him, look upward to Christ: if the Holy One of God could bear with Judas so long, and continue to the last the manifestation of kindness, mingled with all needful warning and reproof; if still he is dealing in this manner with us, then ought we to deal tenderly with each other.]

17 ver. May we both know what Christ hath done for us, and be thereby led to follow his blessed example: so will a blessedness be ours in the knowledge of Christ, which cannot be enjoyed except in the way of humble obedience to Him, as having 'washed us from our sins in his own blood.'

(G. 85.)—*Jesus institutes the breaking of bread; the first part of the Lord's supper.

Matt. xxvi. 26; 21—.5. Mark xiv. 22; 18—21. Luke xxii. 19; 21—.3. 1 Cor. xi. 23, .4.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvi. 26. Mk. xiv. 22. Lu. xxii. 19. 1 Co. xi. 23, .4. Jesus takes bread, and having given thanks, breaks the bread, and gives to his disciples, saying, 'Take, eat; this is my body,'—using thus symbolical language, as when just before he washed the disciples' feet. Our blessed Lord also intimates that they are hereafter to remember him in the breaking of bread.

* 'Upon the resumption of our Saviour's place at the table, the next thing, in the order of particulars, might be the introduction and consumption of the paschal lamb; coincident with which, either during or

BRETHREN, IF A MAN BE OVERTAKEN IN A FAULT, YE WHICH ARE SPIRITUAL, RESTORE SUCH AN ONE IN THE SPIRIT OF MEEKNESS; CONSIDERING THYSELF, LEST THOU ALSO BE TEMPTED.—Gal. vi. 1.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvi. — Mk. xiv. — Lu. xxii. 21, .2. Jno. xiii. — The hand of the betrayer is on the table with the Son of man, who truly goeth as it was determined; but woe to the betrayer.

— — — —

MATT. xxvi. 26.	MARK xiv. 22.	LUKE xxii. 19.	1 COR. xi. 24.
[a]and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body.[a] (Ver. 27, p. 378.)	and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body. (Ver. 23, ibid.)	and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is-given for you: this do in remembrance of-me. (Ver. 20, ibid.)	and said, Take, eat: this is my body, [c]which is-broken for you: this do in remembrance of-me. (Ver. 25, ibid.)

(G. 86.)—Jesus foretells his betrayal by one of those who sat at meat with him. What ensues thereupon until the departure of Judas Iscariot from the supper chamber.

MATT. xxvi. 21—.5. (Ver. 20, p. 364.)	MARK xiv. 18—21. (Ver. 17, ibid.)	LUKE xxii. 21—.3.	JOHN xiii. 18—30. (Ver. 17, p. 367.)
		[a]But, behold, the hand of-him that-betrayeth 21 me is with me on the table. And truly the 22 Son of man goeth, as it was-determined κατα το ωρισμενον: but woe unto that man by whom he-is-betrayed![b] (Ver. 23, p. 371.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 26. Take, eat—Giving and taking bread, and eating thereof together, implied a covenant of mutual fidelity, according to declared terms—see Is. lv. 1—3, 'Ho, every one that thirsteth, come,' &c.—lvi. 4, 6—see the conduct of the angels and Lot to each other, after they had eaten unleavened bread together, Ge. xix. 3—22.

this is—a form of expression commonly made use of, when it is meant that one thing represents another — Thus the offerings under the law, which could never take away sin, nor make reconciliation, were yet called sin offerings and peace offerings, as representing that one offering whereby Jesus Christ, once for all, hath made reconciliation for the sins of the people, He. ix. 6—28; x. 1—22—The sacrifice is to be mutual, Rom. xii. 1—5, 'I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.'—Comp. He. x. 5—10.

this is my body—This is the sign of my body, this represents my body 'which is broken,' and 'given for you:'—comp. Lu. xxii. 19; 1 Co. xi. 24, supra—so in Eze. v. 5, it is said of the prophets' hair, 'This is Jerusalem:' is the sign, or representation, of Jerusalem—and in Ga. iv. 25, we read, 'Agar is mount Sinai,' represents the Law given by Moses on mount Sinai — so in the account of the institution of the Lord's supper by Luke, ch. xxii. 20, and by Paul, 1 Co. xi. 25, we read, 'This cup is the new testament in my blood:' Is the sign of the new testament—see also 1 Co. x. 16, 'The cup of blessing which we bless, Is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, Is it not the communion of the body of Christ?'

1 Co. xi. 24. in remembrance, &c.—Implying that this act was to be observed by them during his absence, ver. 26, 'For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.'—And not only in ceremony were they to do this, they were also to exemplify this self-sacrifice, courtesy, and kindness, which the Master had here manifested, Lu. xxii. 27; Jno. xiii. 15, p. 367.

Lu. xxii. 21. that betrayeth me—It was while they were eating his bread, that Jesus made this recognition of the unfaithfulness of those to whom it was given, Mt. xxvi. 21, .3, [Mk. xiv. 18 20; Jno. xiii. 18, 21,] p. 370.

22. as it was determined—'As it is written,' Mt. xxvi. 24, [Mk. xiv. 21,] p. 371.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 26. This is. ἐστι. All the best commentators (of course excepting those of the Romish church) are agreed that the sense of ἐστι is, represents, or signifies: an idiom common in the Hebrew, which, wanting a more distinctive term, made use of the verb substantive; a simple form of speech, yet subsisting in the common language of most nations.—See Ge. xl. 12; xli. 26; Da. vii. 23; viii. 21; 1 Co. x. 4. Thus the Jews answered their children, who asked respecting the passover, What is this? This is the body of the lamb which our fathers ate in Egypt.]

['On the present subject it is justly remarked by bishop Pearson (on the Creed), that we must not so far stand upon the propriety of speech, when it is written, This is my body, as to destroy the propriety both of the bread and of the body. It is also most acutely observed by Werstein, that "while Christ was distributing the bread and wine, the thought could not but arise in the minds of the disciples, What does this mean, and what does it denote?' They did not inquire whether the bread which they saw were really bread, or whether another body lay unconapt. eunously hid in the interstices of the bread, but what this action SIGNIFIED? of what it was a representation or memorial?"—Bloomf.]—And see ADDENDA, § 43, p. 335, 'Except ye eat,' &c.

Lu. xxii. 19. Which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. This expresses the whole design of the sacramental bread. It is by a striking emblem to call to remembrance, in a vivid manner, the dying sufferings of our Lord. The meaning of this important passage may be thus expressed: 'As I give this broken bread to you to eat, so will I deliver my body to be afflicted and slain for your sins.' And the christian church, from the earliest days, has celebrated the Lord's supper, in order thereby to continue a perpetual memory of his precious death, until his coming again.—See St. Paul's account of the institution, 1 Co. xi. 23—.6.

21. The hand. An oriental mode of saying 'the person is at table with me.'—Comp. Jno. xiii. 26; Ps. xli. 9.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxii. 19. Let us, not only at the Communion, but at every other breaking of bread, endeavour to bless the Lord for his goodness; and at the same time, let us have a lively remembrance of the great medium of blessing to man.

[How remarkable it is, that the Romanists, who pretend to an absurd and blasphemous literality in the words 'This is my body,' neglect the plainest rules for the observance of this ordinance, such as the breaking of one bread among many! In place of this, they give each one an entire cake, transubstantiated, they say, into the body, blood, soul, and divinity of Christ. Moreover, as they must take without breaking, so must they swallow without eating; and they can scarcely take in remembrance of Christ that which they say is really his corporeal presence. Let us feel more and more the necessity of diffusing a knowledge of the scriptures, and the principles of common sense throughout the body of the people.]

[21, .2, ver. It is not in the power of the Eucharist, any more than in the washing with water, to save a would imply that the reception, the blessing, and the distribution of that substance, at this time, were regular parts of the paschal ceremony, as might be the case with the cup.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 177.

---

MEN HARDENED BY SIN CAN OUTWARDLY PERFORM THE MOST SOLEMN ACTS OF DEVOTION.
CAN WE EVER CEASE TO REMEMBER JESUS, WHO GAVE HIMSELF FOR US!

MATT. xxvi. 21. MARK xiv. 18. LUKE.

JOHN xiii. 18—21.*
(Ver. 17, p. 367.)

[b] I-speak not of you all: I know whom I-have-18 chosen: but that the scripture may-be-fulfilled, He that-eateth bread with me hath-lifted-up his heel against me. Now I-tell you before it-come, 19 that, when it-is-come-to-pass, ye-may-believe that I am he. Verily, verily, I-say unto-you, 20 He that-receiveth whomsoever I-send receiveth me; and he that-receiveth me receiveth him that-sent me.[c]

21 And as-they ['-did-eat, 18 [d]And as-they ['-sat and did-eat,[d]

[c] When-Jesus-had-thus-said, he-was- 21 troubled ἐταράχθη in spirit, and testified,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 18. I speak not of you all—He had intimated a doubt as to the fidelity of his disciples in ver. 10, 7, p. 367—which he does not apply to all of them, but specially to Judas, ver. 18, 9—The treachery of Judas was before noticed, Lu. xxii. 3—6, § 86, p. 356.

I know whom I have chosen—ch. vi. 70, § 43, p. 334, 'Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?'

the scripture, &c.—Ps. xli. 9, 'Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, [marg. to whom I gave an important charge,] which did eat of my bread, [see Mt. xxvi. 26,] hath lifted up his heel against me.'

20. whomsoever I send—see Mt. x. 40, § 39, p. 302—Although the messenger should prove a Judas, men will not lose the reward to be had in receiving the messenger of Jesus; but in order to this, they must see that the messenger is under his Lord's commands, as given ver. 14—6—that he has his Master's credentials, Mt. vii. 15—20, § 19, p. 140.

Mk. xiv. 18. did eat—see before, Jno. xiii. 18, and after, ver. 26.

Jno. xiii. 21. troubled in spirit—'being grieved,' &c., Mk. iii. 5, § 25, p. 197—'Now is my soul troubled,' Jno. xii. 27, § 82, p. 267.

NOTES.

[Jno. xiii. 18. He that eateth bread with me. To eat with one was a proof of friendship.—See 2 Sa. ix. 11; Mt. ix. 11, § 36, p. 277; Ge. xliii. 32. This means that Judas had been admitted to all the privileges of friendship, and had partaken of the usual evidences of his affection. These words of David, Ps. xli. 9, are supposed to have been originally uttered in reference to the treachery of Ahithophel towards him.—See 2 Sa. xv. 12, 31. But we learn from this passage, that they were spoken prophetically of the treachery of Judas towards Christ, of whom David was a type.]

Hath lifted up his heel against me. The meaning, according to the original, is, 'hath supplanted me;' 'hath tripped me up with his foot.'

[19. Now I tell you before, &c. Meaning, 'I tell you this now, before it has taken place, that when it shall have come to pass, ye may be confirmed in your faith, that I am He whom I professed to be, the Christ;' that being implied, though, as ch. viii. 24, § 55, p. 102, not expressed. Ἐγώ εἰμι is taken as at ii. 11, § 11, p. 78. Our Lord's purpose was not only to confirm their faith, but to prepare them for the perfidy soon to be disclosed; since his words allude to only one traitor, as indeed he soon afterwards intimates in express terms.]

20. He that receiveth whomsoever I send, &c. 'This was the substance of what our Lord had before delivered—see SCRIP. ILLUS., Lu. x. 16, § 60, p. 143—and now repeated by him, in immediate connection with his words, in ver. 18, 9, in order that the apostles might bear in mind that their office and mission were still the same, though one had proved himself a traitor.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

21. Troubled in spirit. See ch. xii. 27, § 82, p. 267. Jesus was man, as well as God; and he felt like other men; and his tender sensibilities were affected not less deeply by baseness and treason.

Testified. He bore witness to the truth; openly declared, what he had before intimated, that one of them would betray him.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

man possessed of the devil, as was Judas. From his case, we may plainly see that the sacrament does not work by its own virtue. If it had been so, our Lord would not have thus spoken of Judas, one of those who partook of the bread.]

A man's fulfilling prophecy in the perpetration of crime, does not free him from guilt. The death of Christ had been foretold, but the crime of Judas in betraying him was not the less; and of its criminality, and the misery connected therewith, Judas was faithfully forewarned.

[Jno. xiii. 18. Jesus was not deceived in Judas, whom he had taken to be a disciple and an apostle.]

19 ver. Those things which would have been apt to shake our faith to the utmost, such as the unfaithfulness of an apostle, and equally of the apostolical succession, our Lord has kindly overruled for the confirmation of our faith, by making them the subjects of prophecy.]

[20 ver. Let the christian minister never forget that he has to present Christ to the people, not only in word, but by example.]

Mk. xiv. 18—20. How carefully concealed must have been the true character of the betrayer, when each disciple felt more inclined to suspect himself than to

* 'At this point of time, . . . that is, directly after Lu. xxii. 22, I think it right to introduce Jno. xiii. 18, 19, 20. It is incredible how much these verses all gain, by this arrangement, in clearness, propriety, and significancy; and the only objection to it is, that they appear to follow, as part of a continuous discourse, on xiii. 17. But so does xiv. 1, on xiii. 38; and yet much independent matter—one circumstance whereof was the institution of the cup at least—must, as we shall see by and by, have been interposed between them. The supplementary character of St. John's gospel is, in fact, an answer to the whole objection.

'St. John proceeds to subjoin—which is a confirmation of this arrangement—that, after saying these things, viz., after ver. 20, Jesus was troubled, or distressed, in spirit; evidently by a lively sense of the perfidy and ingratitude of one of his own apostles, such as the preceding reflections could not but obtrude upon him: and testified, that is, bore witness to the futurity of his guilt, saying, Ἀμὴν, ἀμὴν, λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἷς ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με. Here, then, his account coincides critically, and in the use of the very same expressions, with Mt. xxvi. 21, and Mk. xiv. 18. The perplexity produced among the disciples by this sudden and open declaration, is next specified by all the evangelists, and carries forward the thread of the narrative in a very natural order; though St. Luke, for the reasons so often assigned, without descending into particulars, is content barely to notice the fact. St. John does so descend; but only to supply an anecdote omitted by St. Matthew and by St. Mark, yet intimately connected with what they do record.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 183.

MATT. xxvi. 21.
he-said,
Verily I-say unto-you,
that one of you shall-betray me.

MARK xiv. 18.
Jesus said,
Verily I-say unto-you,
One of you
[e] which eateth with me shall-betray me. [f]

LUKE xxii. 23.

(Ver. 22, p. 369.)
[g] And they began 23 to-enquire among themselves, which of them it-was that should do this-thing. [h]
(Ver. 24, p. 375.)

JOHN xiii. 22.
and said,
Verily, verily, I-say unto-you, that one of you [e]
shall-betray me.
[f] Then the 22 disciples looked-one-on-another, doubting of whom he-spake. [g]
(Ver. 23, infra.)

MATT. xxvi. 22—4.

22 [h] And they-were-exceeding-sorrowful, and began every-one of-them to-say unto-him, [i]

[h] Lord, is-it I Μητι εγω ειμι ?[l]

23 And he answered and-said,
He that-dippeth his hand with me in the dish,
[m] the-same shall-betray me.
24 The Son of man goeth as it-is-written of him: but woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is-betrayed! it-had-been good for-that-man if he had-not-been-born. [n]

MARK xiv. 19—21.

And they began to-be-sorrowful, 19 and to-say unto-him
[i] one by one, [k]
Is it I Μητι εγω?
and another said, Is it I?
[l] And he answered and-said unto-them, 20
It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish. [m]

The Son of man indeed goeth, as it-is- 21 written of him: but woe to-that man by whom the Son of man is-betrayed!
good were-it for-that man if he had-never-been-born.
(Ver. 22, p. 368.)

(JOHN xiii. 22, supra.)

[*] [n] Now there-was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his 23 disciples, whom Jesus loved. Simon Peter therefore 24 beckoned to-him, that-he-should-ask who it-should-be of

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 18. eateth with me—see on Mt. xxvi. 26, p. 369, 'Take, eat;'—Such infidelity was disgraceful even among the heathen, as Da. xi. 26, 7.

Jno. xiii. 22. Then the disciples looked, &c.—First, the disciples looked on one another, and then enquired among themselves, [Lu. xxii. 23,] as if they would find the betrayer each in some other than himself: but the hypocrisy of Judas had been such, as that they could not detect the betrayer, and so were oblized each to turn inward, and ask of him that searcheth the heart, Lord, is it I? Mt. xxvi. 22; [Mk. xiv. 19.] It appears that they could each suspect himself, rather than suspect Judas, the son of Simon.

Mt. xxvi. 23. dippeth his hand with me—Lu. xxii. 21, p. 369, 'The hand . . . with me on the table.'

24. as it is written—Ps. xxii.; lv. 12; Is. liii.; Da. ix. 26; Ze. xi. 12, 3—The writing is recognised, Mk. ix. 12, § 51, p. 57; Lu. xxiv. 25..6, 46, §§ 94, 96; Ac. xvii. 2, 3; xxvi. 22, 3; 1 Co. xv. 3.

but woe unto that man, &c.—Mt. xviii. 6—9, § 53, p. 82, 'But whoso shall offend one of these,' &c.

Jno. xiii. 23. Whom Jesus loved—Jno. xxi. 24, § 97, 'The disciple which testifieth of these things,'—comp. with ver. 20, § ib.

24. beckoned, &c.—see on Lu. v. 7, § 20, p. 151.

NOTES.

[Jno. xiii. 22. Looked one on another. Εβλεπον εις αλλ. This well depicts their anxiety, as ἀπορούμενοι does their perplexity, what to think or whom to suspect.—See Ge. xlii. 1.]

Mt. xxvi. 23. That dippeth, &c. It is probable that at this very instant our Lord and Judas, with some other of the disciples, were dipping the bitter herbs that were to be eaten with the paschal lamb in a vessel of vinegar or other sauce then in use, which stood on the table for that purpose.

24. The Son of man. That is, the Messiah; the Christ.—See Mt. viii. 20, § 34, p. 265.

Goeth. ὑπάγει, 'is going.' The present tense is used to denote the nearness of the things predicted.

It had been good for that man if he had not been born. 'Καλὸν—ἐγεννήθη is a formula employed by the ancients to express a condition the most miserable; of which examples are adduced by the commentators. The most apposite is Schemoth R. § 40, p. 135. "He that knoweth the law, and doeth it not, it were better for him that he had not come into the world."'—Bloomf.

Jno. xiii. 23. Leaning on Jesus' bosom. Rather, according to the original, 'lying in Jesus' bosom;' i. e., reclining at table in the place which was next to, and immediately in front of, our Lord. This situation, Kypke observes, was one chiefly assigned to near and dear connections, as wives and children, of which he adduces several examples.

24. Beckoned. νεύει. With a motion of the head, i.e., 'nodded.' Made signs to John, who was so placed as to inquire without being heard by the rest.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

suspect Judas! But however men may deceive their fellow-men; whatever lengths God may allow them to go in even religious affairs, they cannot escape detection. Judas was allowed to dip his hand into the dish with our Lord, at even the Last Supper; but this was no evidence of a want of discernment in Christ, although it was a manifestation of the most wonderful forbearance.

[*] 'The relative posture of those who reclined on a common couch was such, that the head of the lower was nearly on a par with the breast of the higher up of the two. Hence the observation of the evangelist, Ἐκκείνων δὲ ἀκείμενος ἐπὶ τὸ στῆθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ—which means his leaning back upon the breast of Jesus: as would necessarily be the case if he wished, while in his pre-existing situation, to ask him a question.

MATT. xxvi. 25. JOHN xiii. 25—30.

whom he spake. He then lying ἐπιπεσων on Jesus breast saith 25 unto-him, Lord, who is-it? Jesus answered, He it-is, to-whom I 26 shall-give a sop, when I have-dipped it. And when-he-had-dipped the sop, he-gave it to-Judas Iscariot, the son of-Simon.
And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus 27 unto-him, That thou-doest, do quickly ταχιον. Now no-man at- 28 the-table knew for what intent he-spake this unto-him. For 29 some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had-said unto-him, Buy those things that we-have need-of against the feast; or, that he-should-give something to-the poor.

25 [a] Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and-said, Master, is-it I Μητι εγω ειμι? He-said unto-him, Thou hast-said.[b] *
(Ver. 26, p. 368.)

[a] He then having-received the sop went- 30 immediately out: and it was night.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 26. gave it to Judas—Jesus continued to the last to exemplify his own law of love—Rom. xii. 20, 'If thine enemy hunger, feed him;' &c.

27. and after the sop, &c.—Rom. ii. 4, 5, 'Not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath'

That thou doest, do quickly—1 Ki. xviii. 21, 'How long halt ye between two opinions?'—Rev. iii. 15, 16, 'I would thou wert cold or hot.' &c.—see margin.

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 25. Lying on. ἐπιπεσων, 'leaning upon.' Euthymius, however, thinks he did not alter his posture, but merely turned his head. That the question was put in a low voice, and answered in the same tone, is plain from ver. 28, 9.

26. When he had dipped, &c. The Arabian fashion is, for all present to help themselves with their hands out of the same dish. In the East they use neither knife, fork, nor spoon; nor is delicacy so much violated, if we consider the frequent ablutions, never omitted before and after a meal. The Moors and Arabians wash their hands before every meal, which they eat with their fingers. The food is thrown by a jerk into the mouth, so that the fingers are clean. This giving the sop was one of the closest testimonies of friendly affection.

Satan entered into him. The devil had before this put it into his heart to betray Jesus, ver. 2, p. 365.

[27. That thou doest, &c. 'These words are not to be evaded, as being permissive or dismissive. They are like the saying of God to Balaam, Nu. xxii. 20, and of our Lord to the Pharisees, Mt. xxiii. 32 (§ 85, p. 318). The course of sinful action is pre-supposed; and the command to go on is but the echo of that mysterious appointment by which the sinner, in the exercise of his own corrupted will, becomes the instrument of the purposes of God.'—Alford.

May it not, rather, be that our Lord here directs Judas to choose quickly, and be decided in his choice—not to be double-minded—to be either cold or hot: viewed thus, the words of our Saviour are full of meaning to all his disciples. Mr. Greswell thinks differently.—See infra.

29. Buy those things that we have need of against the feast. Calmet's observation here has weight in it—'The disciples, who thought that our Lord had said this to Judas, knew well that on the day of the passover there was neither buying nor selling in Jerusalem. This, therefore, did not happen on the paschal evening; it appears to me, by the whole text of St. John, that the passover did not begin till the time in which our Lord expired upon the cross.'

Mt. xxvi. 25. Judas . . . . said. Master, is it I? What excessive impudence! He knew, in his conscience, that he had already betrayed his Master, and was waiting now for the servants of the chief priests, that he might deliver him into their hands; and yet he says (hoping that he had transacted his business so privately that it had not yet transpired), Master, is it I? Each of the other disciples said רבי, LORD, is it I? But Judas dares not, or will not, use this august title, but simply says, רבי, TEACHER, is it I?

Thou hast said. אתה אמרת, or אתה אמרתו, atta amartâ, 'Ye have said,' was a common form of expression for Yes; יפ יו no. 'When the Zipporenes inquired whether Rabbi Judas was dead? the son of Kaphra answered, Ye have said,' i. e., He is dead.

Jno. xiii. 30. He . . . . . went immediately out: and it was night. Urged by the prince of darkness, and in the time of darkness, he did this work of darkness.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xiii. 27. We may feel the presence of a false friend—a betrayer, to be irksome; and earnestly desire he would declare himself; but until by overt acts his true character is made manifest, we ought to treat him as Jesus did Judas.]

28, 9 ver. It would appear that our Lord was in the habit of using money both in purchasing, and in giving something to the poor. In this attention to the claims of justice and of mercy, he also 'left us an example that we should follow his steps.'

---

[a] 'This private conversation, then, we may suppose would take place after the questions recorded by St. Matthew and St. Mark, as far as they go in conjunction, had been put and been answered. It is evident, however, from the mention of the dish, which now ensues, and which we may presume denotes the dish of bitter herbs (or wasides) prepared after a certain manner by themselves, and brought in when the eating of the lamb was over, that the solemnity was far advanced; and, consequently, that the night was proportionably advanced also; which accounts for the assertion, Jno. xiii. 30. Upon the reception of the sop, Satan, says the evangelist, entered into Judas; and I persuade myself that the words directly after ascribed to our Lord—ὁ ποιεις ποιησον ταχιον—were intended, and are to be understood, as addressed to Satan then in possession of Judas, though they would appear to the rest of the company as addressed to Judas.

'The departure of Judas followed with no delay on the reception of the sop; and if his departure, for the reason assigned, created no surprise among the rest of the disciples, two conclusions will be presumptively established by it; viz., that this supper was not a paschal supper; and, whatsoever it was, that the supper was almost over. On the paschal night no member of the paschal sodalitium would have thought of leaving the paschal chamber before midnight at least; or if he did quit it, his departure would be something out of course.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. pp. 185—7.

[b] * 'After this, we may place without hesitation, and in a consecutive order, Jno. xiii. 30—the end; a part of

I KNOW THY WORKS, THAT THOU ART NEITHER COLD NOR HOT: I WOULD THOU WERT COLD OR HOT.—Rev. iii. 15.
SO THEN BECAUSE THOU ART LUKEWARM, AND NEITHER COLD NOR HOT, I WILL SPUE THEE OUT, ETC.—Rev. iii. 16.

(G. 87.)—[Lesson 86.]—Upon the departure of Judas, Jesus comforts his disciples: he foretells that Peter will thrice deny him. The disciples dispute which of them should be greatest, and are rebuked by Jesus. He again foretells that Peter will deny him, Luke xxii. 24—38. Jesus institutes the blessing of the cup; the remaining part of the Lord's supper.—John xiii. 31—.8. Matt. xxvi. 27—.9. Mark xiv. 23—.5. Luke xxii. 20. 1 Cor. xi. 25.

ANALYSIS.

Jno. xiii. 31—.3. The traitor having left the company of the apostles, Jesus speaks of his glorification.

—— 34, .5. He leaves with them the 'new commandment,' which requires them to love each other: this love to be the mark of their discipleship.

—— 36. Peter asks his Lord, 'Whither goest thou?' Jesus tells him that he cannot now follow him, but that he will hereafter.

—— 37. Peter asks, Why not now? and expresses his readiness even to die for Jesus' sake.

—— 38. Jesus questions Peter's readiness to make such a sacrifice, warning him that before the crowing of the cock, he will thrice deny his Master.

Lu. xxii. 24—38. THE DISCIPLES DISPUTE AMONG THEMSELVES WHICH OF THEM SHOULD BE GREATEST.

—— 25—.7. Jesus tells them that the superiority they are to aim at, is in contrast to the lordship exercised by the great ones of the earth; it is to be, after his own example, eminent in service.

—— 28—30. He recognises their faithfulness hitherto, and tells them, that in the kingdom which the Father hath appointed him, he will give them to possess power, honour, and joy, with authority over 'THE TWELVE TRIBES OF ISRAEL.'

—— 31, .2. He solemnly apprises Simon of Satan's desire to sift the disciples as wheat; speaks of his intercession in Peter's behalf; and requests, that when convinced of his weakness, he will use his power in strengthening the brethren.

—— 33. Peter again boasteth.

—— 34. Jesus again warns, as Jno. xiii. 38.

—— 35. Jesus asks if anything was wanting to them when sent out in immediate dependence upon the providence of God? They say, 'Nothing.'

Lu. xxii. 36, .7. He tells them that now they may avail themselves of ordinary provision, and exhorts them that they each make every honest endeavour to become possessed of a sword. That they may be able to defend themselves against the assaults of the enemy, it will be necessary to know what is written in the scriptures respecting the MESSIAH in his first advent: now are about to be fulfilled the things predicted concerning his humiliation, even to his being 'reckoned among the transgressors.'

—— 38. The disciples, supposing him to speak of the sword used by the rulers of this world, say, 'Lord, ... here are two swords.' Jesus replies.

THE CUP.

Mt. xxvi. 27. Mk. xiv. 23. Lu. xxii. 20. 1 Co. xi. 25. Jesus takes the cup, and having given thanks, gives it to the disciples, saying, 'Drink ye all of it;' — xxvi. 28. — xiv. 24. — xxii. 20. — xi. 25. Continuing the same symbolic language he had used with regard to the washing, the bread, and the sword, he tells them that this is the 'blood of the new testament,' shed for them, and for the remission of the sins of many; and that as oft as they drink, they are thus to do in remembrance of him.

— xxvi. 29. — xiv. 25. In opposition to the vain conceit of the Romanists, Jesus speaks of the wine as still but the fruit of the vine; and, remarkably in contrast to the practice of the priests, he gives it to all the disciples, and drinks not of it himself; but he speaks of a day when he will drink it new with them 'IN THE KINGDOM OF GOD.'

Jesus comforts his disciples; and foretells that Peter will thrice deny him. John xiii. 31—.8.

31 Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and 32 God is glorified in him. If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in 33 himself, and shall straightway glorify him. Little children, yet a little while I am

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 31. when he was gone out—When the old leaven was at length purged out, in the removal of the betrayer from the company of the disciples, ver. 2?, 30. p. 372, Jesus could more freely minister comfort to his true disciples, as in xiv.—.vii., infra.

Son of man glorified—Jesus had in the case of Judas an opportunity of acting according to his own law of love, so as to manifest forbearance and kindness to the utmost; the most perfect gentleness, combined with the greatest truthfulness.—He had won the crown of victory, as being not overcome of evil, but as overcoming evil with good, Rom. xii. 21—He had, as bringing forth the fruit of the kingdom, got removed the unfruitful branch. Jno. xv. 2, p. 378—The like conduct called for in us, 2 Co. vi.

God is glorified in him—ch. xv. 8, 'Herein,' &c.

32. If God be glorified in him—ch. viii. 49, § 55, p. 106, 'I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.' —Ph. ii. 6—8, 'Being found in fashion as a man,' &c.

God shall also glorify, &c.—Ph. ii. 9—11, 'Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: . . . . and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.'

straightway glorify him—Ac. iii. 13, 'The God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up,'—1 Pe. i. 21, 'Raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.'

33. Little children—1 Jno. ii. 12, 28; iii. 7, 10, 18; iv. 4; v. 21—see Babes, 1 Co. iii. 1; 1 Pe. ii. 2.

yet a little while—ch. xiv. 19, infra, p. 383; xvi. 16—22, infra, p. 395.

NOTE.

Jno. xiii. 31. Now is the Son of man glorified. See SCRIP. ILLUS. This seems to intimate a close connection between the departure of Judas and the sayings of our Lord which immediately follow. In order to see this, it is needful to think of the patience required to bear with the company of Judas, until he should openly declare himself, or voluntarily withdraw. In such circumstances Jesus continued steadfast in the manifestation of truth and of love. He perfectly glorified his Father, to whom he had himself before pointed as the Great Example of long-suffering kindness, Mt. v. 45, .8, § 19, p. 128.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiii. 31. Let us, after the example of our dear Lord, glorify God, both in doing and in suffering.

[32 ver. He who glorified God, in the manifestation of grace and truth, amid all outward discouragement, suffering by and for the sinfulness of man even unto the death, rejoiced in the rich reward he was to receive from God the Father in resurrection life. Let us also look upon our present afflictions as but for a moment in comparison of the eternal weight of glory hereafter to be enjoyed.]

---

his gospel which stands entirely by itself, and it would be in vain to pretend to harmonize with any portion of the rest. It is memorable, however, as containing an express prediction of the denials of Peter; a prediction which, as arising naturally out of the course and turn of the conversation, it would be improper to consider an anticipation: and if it is not an anticipation, but an actual part of the narrative where it

IF GOD BE GLORIFIED IN HUMANITY, IN THE PERSON OF THE SON OF MAN, THEN WILL HUMANITY, IN THE PERSON OF THE SON OF MAN, BE GLORIFIED IN THE DIVINITY.

JOHN xiii. 34—.7.

with you. Ye-shall-seek me: and as I-said unto-the Jews, Whither I go, ye can not 34 come; so now I-say to-you. A-new commandment I-give unto-you, That ye-love one-35 another; as I-have-loved you, that ye also love one-another. By this shall-all men- know that ye-are my disciples, if ye-have love one-to'-another.
36 Simon Peter said unto-him, Lord, whither goest-thou? Jesus answered him. Whither 37 I-go, thou-canst not follow me now; but thou-shalt-follow me afterwards. Peter said

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 33. I said unto the Jews—ch. vii. 34; viii. 21. § 55, pp. 94, 101.

Whither I go—see on ver. 36, infra.

34. A new commandment—1 Jno. ii. 7, 8. 'Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you:'—And yet it is an old commandment, iii. 11, 'The message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another.'—But the illustration of the law of love, as given in the Son of God, is new, Rom. v. 7, 8 (see margin); and new motive is supplied, by our being made members one of another in him, Eph. iv. 15, .6, 'Speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.'

That ye love one another—Le. xix. 18, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself:'—this is the old commandment recognised by our Lord, Mt. xix. 19, § 75, p. 225—the second of the two great commandments, on which hang all the Law and the Prophets, Mt. xxii. 37—40; Mk. xii. 29—31, § 85, p. 304—see also Lu. x. 27, § 60, p. 145.

as I have loved you—Rom. v. 8, 'God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.'—This is the new sanction to the law of love, and example of obedience thereto—see Jno. xv. 12—.7, infra, p. 389—The love of Christ passeth knowledge, Eph. iii. 17—.9. 'That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, 18, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; 19, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.'—The example which Jesus gave is that which is to be followed in the nearest and dearest relations, Eph. v. 25—.9—Ga. vi. 2, 'Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.'—1 Pe. ii. 24, 'Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree,'—1 Jno. iii. 16, 'Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.'

35. By this shall all, &c.—Men do but deceive themselves, or attempt to deceive others, if without manifesting brotherly love, they profess to be followers of Christ—Ja. iii. 14, 'If ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth.'—1 Jno. ii. 9—11, 'He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. 10. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. 11. But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.'—It is by the true manifestation of love that we declare we are Christians, ver. 5, 'Whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.'—iii. 14—.7, 'We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death,' &c.—iv. 7—17, 'Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God,' &c.

36. whither goest thou?—Referring to what our Lord had said, ver. 33, supra, 'Whither I go,' &c.

canst not follow me now—which was amply proved when he could not watch with him one hour, Mk. xiv. 37, § 88, p. 315—and when afterwards he denied him with oaths and with curses, 70. .1, § 89, p. 432.

thou shalt follow me afterwards—ch. xxi. 19, § 97, 'This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.'—And Peter afterwards did boldly follow his Master in witnessing a good confession, and that in the face of all opposition, Ac. iv. 8—12, .9, 20; xii. 3, 4.

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 33. So now I say to you. That is, they could not follow then, ch. xiv. 2, p. 360. He was about to die and to return to the Father, and for a time they must be willing to be separated from him. But he consoled his true disciples, ver. 36, with the assurance that the separation would be only temporary, and that they should afterwards follow him.

[34. A new commandment. See SCRIP. ILLUS. Brotherly love is here called 'a new commandment,' not as if it had not all along existed in the law of God, but because Christ revived it when it was sadly corrupted and almost forgotten, and enjoined it by a new example, and with new explications, motives, and enforcements, that it might be observed with a new spirit and temper, and in a new manner, as a fundamental law of his kingdom.]

35. By this shall all men know, &c. The disciples of different teachers were known by their habits, or some particular creed or rite, or point of austerity, which they had adopted. The Pharisees were distinguished by their reception of traditions and zeal for ritual observances; the disciples of John the Baptist by the austerity of their lives, and their frequent fastings: but Jesus wished the characteristic and criterion of his followers to be mutual love. The primitive Christians were particularly known by this among the Gentiles. Tertullian, in his Apology, gives us their very words: Vide, inquiunt, ut se diligant; et pro alteutro mori parati sunt. 'See, said they, how they love one another, and are ready to lay down their lives for each other.'

36. Whither I go, &c. Our Lord here adds, 'but thou shalt follow me afterwards;' meaning, it should seem, that he should follow him in the likeness of his death, as well as in the participation of his glory. —See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiii. 33. Let us be prepared to part with those we hold most dear upon earth, remembering that, if we and they are the Lord's, it is only now we part—we shall meet hereafter.

34 ver. Let us continue to love one another for Christ's sake, even as he hath loved us who were so utterly unworthy.

[35 ver. It is not so much by outward uniformity, either in religious rites or even doctrinal profession, as by the truthfulness of their love, that the disciples of Christ are to be distinguished. We are to be known by love, self-sacrificing, patient, kind, and courteous, and constant to the last.]

[36 ver. Let not the Christian lose confidence in God, on account of being called to follow his Lord in suffering affliction; neither let us flatter ourselves on account of present exemption from trials which some others are called to bear: this may not be because of any particular merit in us, but rather on account of our unpreparedness for them. God may, in compassion to our weakness, be reserving them, until he has strengthened us to bear them.]

stands, is a distinct and independent instance of any such prophecy; yet as no such prophecy has hitherto preceded, though similar predictions may be hereafter repeated, it will be the first instance of the kind.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 186.

FOR SCARCELY FOR A RIGHTEOUS MAN WILL ONE DIE: YET PERADVENTURE FOR A GOOD MAN SOME WOULD EVEN DARE TO DIE.—Rom. v. 7.
BUT GOD COMMENDETH HIS LOVE TOWARD US, IN THAT, WHILE WE WERE YET SINNERS, CHRIST DIED FOR US.—Rom. v. 8.

JOHN xiii. 38.

unto-him, Lord, why can-not-I follow thee now? I-will-lay-down my life for thy-sake.
38 Jesus answered him, Wilt-thou-lay-down thy life for my-sake? Verily, verily, I-say unto-thee, The-cock shall-not-crow, till thou-hast-denied me thrice. [Ch. xiv. 1, p. 380.]

(G. 88.)—The disciples dispute among themselves who should be greatest, and are rebuked by Jesus. Jesus again foretells that Peter will thrice deny him.*—Luke xxii. 24—38. [Ver. 23, p. 371.]

24 And there-was also a-strife φιλονεικια among them, which of-them should-be accounted 25 the-greatest. And he said unto-them, The kings of-the Gentiles exercise-lordship over-26 them; and they that-exercise-authority upon-them are-called benefactors εὐεργεται. But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let-him-be as the younger; and 27 he that-is-chief, as he that-doth-serve. For whether is greater, he that-sitteth-at-meat, or he that-serveth? is not he that-sitteth-at-meat? But I am among you as he that-serveth, 28 Ye are they which-have-continued διαμεμενηκοτες with me in my temptations.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiii. 37. lay down my life—Lu. xxii. 3—6, § 86, p. 356, supra; Mk. xiv. 31, infra, p. 406.

38. The cock shall not crow, till—Lu. xxii. 34, 'The cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.'—Mt. xxvi. 34, 'Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.'—Mk. xiv. 30, infra, p. 406, 'Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.'—See this prediction fulfilled, ver. 68, § 89, p. 431.

Lu. xxii. 24. which . . . greatest—This question had before been raised among them shortly after the Transfiguration, Lu. ix. 46; Mk. ix. 34, § 52, pp. 72, 4; Mt. xviii. 1, § 53, p. 82—Then he took a child and placed him before them as an example of humility, ver. 2—4, ib.—Now he gives himself as an example of that humble service, in truth and in love, which he called for, in each, towards the others, ver. 27, infra—see Jno. xiii. 14, 5, supra, p. 367.

25. The kings of the Gentiles—Mt. xx. 25, § 77, p. 238, 'The princes of the Gentiles,'—Mk. x. 42, § ib., 'They which are accounted to rule over,' &c.

26. But ye . . . not . . . so—The apostles only claimed to be helpers of the disciples' joy, 2 Co. i. 24; and were, even the chief of them, sent on the service of the church, Ac. xiii. 1—3; and they strongly resisted the claims of those who desired to have pre-eminence among the brethren, 1 Co. iii. 21—3; 1 Pe. v. 3; 3 Jno. ver. 9, 10.

27. For whether is greater, &c.—ch. xvii. 7—9, § 70, p. 207, 'Which of you, having a servant,' &c—Mt. xxiv. 45—7, § 86, p. 343, 'Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler,' &c.

I am among you as he that serveth—and not merely as before described, Jno. xiii. 6, 7, supra, p. 366, but as washing us 'from our sins in his own blood,' Rev. i. 5—comp. Ph. ii. 7, 8.—see margin.

28. have continued, &c.—It was after Abraham 'had patiently endured, he obtained the promise,'

NOTES.

Jno. xiii. 38. The cock shall not crow, &c. It is very common in the East to regulate the time in the night by the crowing of the cock; as, the midnight cock and the morning cock. The people attach a high value to those birds which crow with the greatest regularity; and some of them keep the time with astonishing precision.—See ADDENDA, 'On the times of Peter's denials,' § 89, p. 437.

Till thou hast denied me thrice. 'His threefold denial was thrice foretold; first, at the time mentioned here; secondly, at that mentioned by St. Luke; lastly, at that recorded by St. Matthew and St. Mark. This is the first instance of the prediction of Peter's denial of his Master yet recorded.'—See on Mt. xxvi. 31—5, infra, p. 406.

Lu. xxii. 25. The kings of the Gentiles. The kings of the nations, or of the earth. Our Lord does not mean to say that it was wrong that there should be such authority among them, but that his kingdom was to be of a different character.

Are called benefactors. εὐεργέται καλοῦνται. Εὐεργέτης was among the Greeks a title of honour, assigned to all who had in any way deserved well of the monarch or state, and was the title arrogated by, and through flattery bestowed on, the princes or magistrates of antiquity.

[The very Greek word used by the evangelist, εὐεργέται, was the surname of one of the Ptolemies of Egypt; Ptolemy Euergetes, i.e., the Benefactor. It was a custom among the ancient Romans to distribute part of the lands which they had conquered on the frontiers of the empire to their soldiers; those who enjoyed such lands were called beneficiarii, beneficed persons; and the lands themselves were termed beneficia, benefices, as being held on the beneficence of the sovereign: and it is no wonder that such sovereigns, however tyrannical or oppressive they might have been in other respects, were termed benefactors by those who were thus dependent on their bounty.]

26. Let him be as the younger. Dr. Lightfoot conjectures that Peter was the eldest of all the disciples; and he supposes that the strife was kindled between him and the sons of Zebedee, James and John. These three disciples were those whom Jesus had distinguished by peculiar marks of his favour.—See on Mt. xvii. 1, § 51, p. 52, SCRIP. ILLUS.

27. I am among you as he that serveth. As when he rose from supper and washed their feet.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

28. Temptations. ἐν τοῖς πειρασμοῖς μου, 'in my trials and afflictions.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiii. 37. It is possible that, like Peter, we do not know our own weakness: let us not boast of our strength, but ask more from God.

38 ver. Jesus laid down his life for Peter, although he well knew that Peter was not yet prepared to lay down his life for him. Let us endeavour to provoke unto love.

[Lu. xxii. 24. We can marvel at the folly of the disciples, in striving to the last which of them should be greatest; but how much more foolish are we, if we follow the apostles in this, in place of following the example of their Lord and Master.]

[25 ver. Forced subjection of others to their rule is not that which the disciples of Christ should seek after. The example of the kings of the nations is in this respect no example for us.]

[26 ver. Men are not to be given honour in the church because of their possessing power; but in proportion to their using the power they possess for the glory of God in the good of men, as the servants of all for Christ's sake.]

[27 ver. It is not as masters, but as servants, that men are to minister in the church of Christ; and all who require the observance of this precept by others, should teach it, as our Lord did, by example.]

28, 9 ver. Let us be willing to suffer with Christ no doubt that it was directed against some present and some passing, and not some former instance of the dispute in question; and there are two allusions in it, or subjoined shortly upon it, which tend to prove that both these incidents were posterior first to the act of washing the disciples' feet, and secondly to the departure of Judas from the supper table.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 187.

* 'The language of the reproof is such as can leave no

LUKE xxii. 29—33.

29 And-I appoint διατίθεμαι unto-you a-kingdom, as my Father hath-appointed unto-me;
30 that ye-may-eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel
31 And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath-desired ἐξῃτήσατο to have you, 32 that he-may-sift you as wheat: but I have-prayed ἐδεήθην for thee, that thy faith fail
33 not: and when thou art-converted ἐπιστρέψας, strengthen στηρίξον thy brethren. And he said unto-him, Lord, I-am ready to-go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

He. vi. 15—x. 36, 'Ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.'—See the many examples of this grace in Old Testament saints, xi.—xii. 1—3, 'Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, 2, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. 3, For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.'—iv. 15, He 'was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.'

Lu. xxii. 28. temptations—the same word is used, ch. viii. 13, § 23, p. 255. comp Mt. xiii. 21; Mk. iv. 17, ib.—see also Ac. xx. 19; Ja. i. 12.

29. I appoint unto you, &c.—Rom. ii. 7, 'To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life:'—2 Ti. ii. 12, 'If we suffer, we shall also reign with him:'—Ja. i. 12, 'Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.'

as my Father, &c.*—The Father had said, Ps. ii. 6, 'Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion.'—Some of the disciples had witnessed this appointment on the holy mount, Lu. ix. 27—35, §§ 50, .1, pp. 44,—51, .6.

30. may eat, &c.—ch. xii. 37, § 63, p. 167, 'Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.'—Mt. viii. 11, § 28, p. 220, 'Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.'—Rev. xix. 9, 'Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.'

sit on thrones judging, &c.*—Our Lord repeats the promise which he had given, Mt. xix. 28, § 77, p. 229, and which is referred to at Rev. xx. 4, 'And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them:' &c.

Twelve tribes of Israel — see* the epistle 'to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad,' Ja. i. 1—as being in tribulation through which we must enter the kingdom—v. 7—11, 'Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord,' &c.

31. Satan hath desired—1 Pe. v. 8, 'Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary,' &c.

sift* you as wheat—Am. ix. 9, 'I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve,'

32. I have prayed for thee—see an example of his intercession, Jno. xvii. infra. p. 398—He. vii 25, 'He ever liveth to make intercession for them.'—1 Jno. ii. 1, 'An advocate with the Father,' strengthen thy brethren*—which Peter earnestly did, as seeking to build upon the One only Foundation 'the strangers scattered,' &c.—1 Pe. i. 5, 'Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation,' &c.—see the whole of his two epistles, and in particular his prayer, v. 10—see margin—and his concluding address, 2 Pe. iii. 14—.8—Peter was not to exercise his strength as his pretended successors have done in coercing the brethren, but rather in strengthening them — correspondent to this is his exhortation to the elders, 1 Pe. v. 1—4—so also Paul, in writing to the Christians at Rome, exhorts, Rom. xv. 1 –7, 'We then that are strong ought,' &c.

33. I am ready, &c.—see Jno. xiii. 37, supra, p. 374.

NOTES.

Lu. xxii. 30. That ye may eat and drink, &c. Admission to Christ's heavenly kingdom is here, as elsewhere in the New Testament, represented by the image of partaking of a feast at the table of an earthly sovereign. — Comp. ch. xiv. 15, &c., § 67, p. 183, and SCRIP. ILLUS.

[31. Hath desired . . . . you. That is, all the apostles, but particularly the three contenders: the plural pronoun, ὑμᾶς, sufficiently proves that these words were not addressed to Peter alone. Satan had already got one, Judas; he had nearly got another, Peter; and he wished to have all. But we see by this that the devil cannot tempt a man unless he receive permission.]

Sift* you as wheat. Toss and shake you with temptations, as wheat is shaken in the sieve. After the corn had been trodden, the clods of earth were broken and sifted, to separate the grain; this was made a symbol of affliction.

[Σινιάζειν (from σινίον, a sieve) signifies to sift, or winnow; and as that implies agitation, commotion, and separation, so the expression has been usually supposed to mean disturb, loosen, i.e., undermine, and overthrow your fidelity. But the primary sense is more apt, namely, sift you, scrutinise, or try your fidelity and constancy.—Comp. 1 Pe. v. 8.'—Bloomf.]

[32. I have prayed for thee. From the natural forwardness and impetuosity of thy own spirit, thou wilt be brought into the most imminent danger; but I have supplicated for thee, that thy faith may not utterly fail—ἐκλείπῃ, from ἐκ, out, and λείπω, I fail, to fail utterly or entirely off. Peter's faith did fail, but not utterly; he did fall, but he did not fall off, apostatise, or forsake his Master and his cause finally.—Comp. Jno. xi. 42, § 58, p. 131.]

When thou art converted.* The original means simply 'when thou art turned;' so translated, ch. xvii. 4, § 99, p. 306; that is, when thou hast turned to me, after having forsaken me.

Strengthen thy brethren.* Confirm thy brethren in their faith by thy example, thy exhortation, and thy prayers.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

If we expect to reign with him. Let us rejoice that our appointment to the kingdom is by Christ himself; and that it cannot be withheld from those who are willing to follow the footsteps of our Redeemer.

[Lu. xxii. 30. As surely as the King hath come, and appointed those who are to rule in the kingdom, so surely will those be found whom the twelve apostles are appointed to reign over. However blessed the earthly portion of the inheritance may be, the heavenly portion which the glorified saints will be given to enjoy must be much more desirable.]

31 ver. Let us see that we do not, by boasting and self-confidence, invite the tempter to expose our weakness, and bring us into shame.

[32 ver. It is only through the intercession of Christ, and by faith in him, that we can be enabled to stand. Christ, not Peter, is the Rock—the sure Foundation.]

[The more we know of our own weakness, and of the forgiving grace—the exceeding kindness of God our Saviour, the more let us endeavour to use the strength we possess for the strengthening of the brethren. It is not by being strong in ourselves, but in the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ that we can benefit our poor fellow-sinners.]

LUKE xxii. 34—8.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.*
35 And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.
36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.
37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.
38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough. [Gr. ἱκανόν.] [Ch. xxii. 39, infra, p. 405.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxii. 34. I tell thee, Peter, &c.—see Jno. xiii. 38, p. 375—Peter at length learned the folly of having confidence in himself, and writes his second Epistle, i. 1—4. 'to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:'

36. he that hath a purse—Jesus had before said to them—Lu. xii. 33, § 63, p. 166, 'Provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not,'—There is something much more precious than gold that perisheth, 1 Pe. i. 7—Eph. iii. 8, 'The unsearchable riches of Christ:'

scrip—2 Pe. i. 3, 'His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:'

sword—2 Co. x. 4, 'The weapons of our warfare are not carnal,'—Eph. vi. 17, 'Take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:'—He. iv. 12, 'The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword,' &c.—see also Rev. i. 13; ii. 12; xix. 15, 21.

buy one—Pr. xxiii. 23, 'Buy the truth, and sell it not;'—2 Pe. i. 5—11, 'Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;' &c.

NOTES.

Lu. xxii. 34. The cock shall not crow this day, &c. Both Matthew and Mark say this night; but there is no disagreement between them and Luke, for the Jewish day of twenty-four hours began with the evening and ended with the beginning of the evening of the next day; and therefore included the night.—See on Mt. xxvi. 34, infra, p. 406.

35. When I sent you without purse, &c. See on Mt. x. 5—10, § 33, p. 295.

36. But now, he that hath a purse, &c. 'The general sense is, But now ye will have need of all the means of support and defence which ye may be able to provide for yourselves; for the time is at hand when ye will no longer be treated as the friends and disciples of a prophet, but as of one who has been "reckoned with the transgressors."'—Lonsdale and Hale.

He that hath no sword, &c. The original would be more correctly rendered, 'He that hath not, let him sell his garment, and buy a sword;' that is, he that hath not a purse of money, wherewith to buy a sword, let him sell his garment to provide the means of buying one. That our Lord, however, did not mean this direction to be taken by the apostles in its literal sense, appears from his answer to them in ver. 38; and also from his rebuke of one of them, namely, Peter, for using his sword against the high priest's servant, ver. 49—51, § 88, p. 419; Jno. xviii. 10, .1, ib.

37. reckoned among the transgressors—Is. liii. 12, 'He was numbered with the transgressors;'—The same scripture referred to, Mk. xv. 28, § 91—To distinguish between things that widely differ, but which men are apt thus to confound, and to enable us to deprive the enemy of the advantages that accrue to him from such confusion, it is necessary to be intimately and extensively acquainted with the word of God—Thus Jesus successfully combated the enemy, Mt. iv. 4, 7, 10, § 9, pp. 64—6—Thus also he exposed and defeated his various enemies, as the Sadducees, Mt. xxii. 29—32, § 85, pp. 301—3.

an end—The climax of his ill usage at the hands of men was hastening on, as he had forewarned his disciples, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40; xvii. 22, 3, § 52, p. 71—1 Pe. iv. 1—7, 'Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: .... But the end of all things is at hand:' &c.

38. It is enough—Two swords were not enough that each of the twelve should have one, as required ver. 36, supra—It was not that kind of weapon that our Lord had so earnestly desired them to possess—see afterwards, Mt. xxvi. 51, 2, § 88, p. 419.

[37. Must yet be accomplished in me. As much as to say, 'After all that I have suffered, this last now remains, namely, that I should (as was long ago prophesied of me) be brought unto an ignominious death.' Τέλος ἔχει is synonymous with τελεσθήναι, and is used by the best classical writers of the completion of predictions.]

For the things, &c. 'The things' which have been foretold by the prophets 'concerning me' are now on the point of having their accomplishment.—Comp. ch. xviii. 31, § 77, p. 235; Jno. xix. 30. In such circumstances it was of the greatest importance that they should possess and make themselves well acquainted with the scriptures, in order to be prepared for, and to profit by, the things that were taking place.

38. It is enough. The disciples mistook our Saviour's meaning. He made use of a proverbial form of speech; they took him in a literal sense. He corrected their misapprehension, by telling them that two were enough of that kind of sword, so that it could not be the weapon he referred to, of which he had told them each to possess one. Some, however, have supposed the meaning here is not 'there are swords enough,' but 'enough has been said upon the matter.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxii. 35, .6. The Lord is sometimes pleased to give, as he did to the apostles, extraordinary evidence of his care over his servants in the beginning of their service; that so they may learn to trust entirely in him: but this is not to prevent their own industry and care in ordinary cases; except when specially directed otherwise, they are to exert themselves for the obtainment of what they need; in every case looking unto God for the blessing.]

[36 ver. Christ could support his servants without any direct effort on their part: he could also defend his servants by words put into their mouths without their requiring to study the scriptures. Yet it was as using the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, that he himself overcame Satan in his temptations: and he requires that we possess this knowledge, even although at the expense of ordinary covering for the body. But it is remarkable that in the providence of God, the people who have been most desirous of possessing and communicating the scriptures, have been given the greatest facilities for acquiring and dispensing temporal blessings also.]

[37 ver. As being forewarned by the sure word of prophecy, we can best be prepared for the trials of life, and the pains of death. Did we not possess 'the shield of faith,' and 'the sword of the Spirit,' we might sometimes be tempted to think that God had forsaken the earth, as when the innocent are condemned to bear the shame and punishment of the guilty.]—38 ver. See margin.

Let us be duly thankful that what our Lord desired his apostles to possess, he hath procured for us: we may each possess a copy of the written word of God, but let us have it, not in our hands only, but also in our hearts.

* 'After this, there may be no reason why Lu. xxii. 35—8, should not be supposed to have followed consecutively, until a period of time when the paschal solemnity as such was manifestly drawing to a close, the next event which he specifies being the departure to the mount.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 189.

(G. 89.)—*Jesus institutes the blessing of the cup; the remaining part of the Lord's supper.

ANALYSIS.—See p. 373.

MATT. xxvi. 27—9. (Ver. 26, p. 369.)	MARK xiv. 23—5. (Ver. 22, ibid.)	LUKE xxii. 20. (Ver. 19, ibid.)	1 COR. xi. 25. (Ver. 24, ibid.)
27 And he-took	23 And he-took	Likewise also 20	25 After-the-same-manner also the cup,	the cup,	the cup after supper,	he took the cup, when he-had-supped,[b] and gave-thanks, and-gave it to-them, saying, Drink-ye all of it;[d]	and-when-he-had-given-thanks, he-gave it to-them:[c] and they-all-drank of it.	saying,	saying,
28 for this is my blood of-the new testament διαθηκης	24 And he-said unto-them,[e] This is my blood of-the new testament διαθηκης,	[a] This cup is the new testament διαθηκη in my blood,	This cup is the new testament διαθηκη in my blood:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

1 Co. xi. 25. same manner—He had given thanks at taking the bread, 1 Co. xi. 24—and in the same manner he took the cup, Mt. xxvi. 27—When the old covenant was made with Israel, Ex. xxiv. 1—8, the heads of the people were entertained at the Lord's table, and did drink as well as eat, ver. 11.

when he had supped—Lu. xxii. 20, 'After supper,'

Mt. xxvi. 27. Drink ye all of it—Lu. xxii. 17, 'Divide it among yourselves:'—supra, p. 364.

28. For this is my blood, &c.—As in making the old covenant, Ex. xxiv. 8, 'Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you'—so the Mediator of the new covenant applies to each of us the blood of the better sacrifice, Ile. ix. 23—8, by which our hearts are 'sprinkled from an evil conscience,' x. 22.

new testament — The new covenant predicted, Je. xxxi. 33, 'But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts: and will be their God, and they shall be my people.'—Comp. He. viii., ix.—The former covenant was upon the ground of man's promised obedience to the law, Ex. xxiv. 7, 'And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.'—The new covenant is made with a recognition of man's utter helplessness in himself, Lu. xxii. 31—4, p. 376—and with the promise of free forgiveness, Je. xxxi. 34, 'And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.'—And the supply of all things that pertain unto life and godliness, upon the ground of Divine righteousness, made ours by faith in Him who hath perfectly satisfied the demands of the law, 2 Pe. i. 1—3; Rom. iii. 21—6, 31.

NOTES.

Luke xxii. 20. Likewise also the cup after supper. See on Lu. xxii. 17, 8, p. 364.

[Mt. xxvi. 27. And gave thanks. The Jews had been accustomed to partake at all their feasts of bread and wine, in a serious and devout manner, after a solemn blessing or thanksgiving to God for his goodness to men; but especially at the feast of the passover, they commemorated more at large the mercies of their God, dwelling, however, chiefly on their deliverance from the bondage of Egypt. And as this had many particulars resembling that infinitely more important redemption of mankind from sin and ruin, which our Saviour was then about to accomplish, he very naturally directed his disciples that their ancient custom should for the future be applied to the greatest of Divine blessings, and become the memorial of Christ their passover, sacrificed for them; as indeed the bread broken aptly enough represented his body, and the wine poured forth expressly figured out his blood shed for our salvation.]

Drink ye all of it. The Romanists contend that our blessed Lord only spoke these words to those persons to whom he said, when speaking of the bread, 'do this;' and that those words, 'do this,' were only spoken to the apostles, whom he then made priests. But the reason of partaking of the cup, because it is the blood of the new testament shed for the remission of sins, concerns all believers.

[28. Blood of the new testament. In the federal sacrifices of the ancients it was (as Grotius and Hammond shew) usual to receive in a vessel the blood, which was itself drunk by the more barbarous nations; but by the more civilized, wine was substituted for it; to which the colour (the wine of the East being red) would contribute: and indeed wine is by poets called the blood of the grape. Our Lord is by some thought to have had a reference to this.]

Of the new testament. τῆς καινῆς διαθήκης, 'of the new covenant,' alluding to Ex. xxiv. 7, 8. The old

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 27; Mk. xiv. 23. Our Lord hath given us an example of humility, not only in washing the feet of the disciples, but also of serving them at table.

28 ver. Let us not only feed upon Christ as the bread of life, but trust to his atoning blood, whereby we are received into new covenant blessing.

[May we know the power of that atoning blood whereby we have the remission of sins; so that we may fully forgive each other, and be willing, if need be, to lay down our lives for the brethren.]

[May we know the new covenant, so as to feel the responsibility under which we are brought, to love and to serve; and, if need be, to suffer unto the death for each other. We are bound together in one bundle of life with the Lamb slain.—May our love to each other in the Lord be like the new covenant in his blood, everlasting. Should the faults of our fellow-Christians force themselves upon our attention, let us remember, that it is only as forgiven sinners we ourselves can partake of new covenant blessing. But let us also consider that before giving

* 'Here . . . I would place the introduction of the third and probably the last paschal cup; and with it the institution of the remaining member of the christian sacrament. In this part of the first eucharistic ordinance Judas would, consequently, not partake; though he must have partaken of the former.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 190.

IF, WHEN WE WERE ENEMIES, WE WERE RECONCILED TO GOD BY THE DEATH OF HIS SON, MUCH MORE, BEING RECONCILED, WE SHALL BE SAVED BY HIS LIFE.—Rom. v. 10.

Matt. xxvi. 29.	Mark xiv. 25.	Luke xxii. 20.	1 Cor. xi. 25.
which is-shed for many for the-remission of-sins.[f]	which is-shed for many.	which is-shed for you.* (Ver. 21, p. 369.)	[f] this do-ye, as-oft-as ye-drink it, in remembrance of-me.[A]
29 [a] But I-say unto-you, I-will-not-drink henceforth of this fruit of-the vine, until that day when I-drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom. (Ver. 30, p. 405.)	25 Verily I-say unto you, I will-drink no-more of the fruit of-the vine, until that day that I-drink it new in the kingdom of God.* (Ver. 26, p. 405.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 28. which is shed, &c.—Signifying to pour out or sprinkle the blood of the sacrifices before the altar of the Lord by way of atonement—see 2 Ki. xvi. 15; Le. iv. 7, 14, .7, 30, .4; viii. 15; ix. 9; Ex. xxix. 12.

many—Blood was spoken of by the sacred writers as representing life itself, or as containing the elements of life, Ge. ix. 4; Le. xvii. 14—When, therefore, Jesus says his blood was shed for many, it is the same as saying that his life was given for many—His life was given for sinners as their substitute—By his death on the cross, the death or punishment due to all believers is, through faith, removed, and their souls are saved—That he died in the stead or place of sinners, is abundantly clear from the following passages of scripture: Jno. i. 29; Eph. v. 2; Heb. vii. 27; 1 Jno. ii. 2; iv. 10; Is. liii. 10; Rom. viii. 32; 2 Co. v. 15—For the use and meaning of the phrase, remission of sins, see Lu. i. 77, § 3, p. 18; Mk. i. 4, [Lu. iii. 3,] § 7, p. 50; Ac. ii. 38; v. 31; x. 43; xiii. 38; xxvi. 18; Col. i. 14; He. x. 18.—A. C.

shed for many—He 'gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time,' 1 Ti. ii. 6.

remission of sins—Such was the promise of the new covenant, Je. xxxi. 34.

1 Co. xi. 25. this do ye, as oft as ye drink, &c.—The Corinthians, in each seeking his own gratification, and in neglecting to attend first to the wants of others, did not worthily partake of the Lord's supper; which is intended to shew forth the Lord's death for us, an example of self-denial and generosity beyond compare, 1 Co. xi. 20—2. .7, 33, .4.

Jesus, in ministering to his disciples, had given them an example which they were to follow, Lu. xxii. 26, .7, p. 375, supra.

Mk. xiv. 23. all drank of it—see before on Mt. xxvi. 27, p. 378; Jno. xiii. 30; and above on 1 Co. xi. 25.

Mt. xxvi. 29. my Father's kingdom—Mk. xiv. 25, 'The kingdom of God'—Lu. xxii. 18, p. 364, 'Until the kingdom of God shall come.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 28. Shed. ἐκχυνόμενον, 'poured out.' The word is often so used in a sacrificial sense in the Sept., signifying to pour out or sprinkle the blood of the sacrifices before the altar of the Lord by way of atonement.—See Script. Illus.

[The doctrine of atonement for sin by the shedding of blood was no new thing. It had been taught to the Jews by the whole appointed course of their sacrifices, which shewed, that 'without shedaing of blood is no remission,' He. ix. 22: and the reason assigned for being forbidden to eat blood was this; Le. xvii. 11, 'The life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls:'—Comp. Le. xvi. 14—3. Of the prevalence of the same doctrine among the ancient heathen nations we have abundant proof, not only in the frequency of their animal sacrifices, but in the express testimony of many of their writers.]

1 Co. xi. 25. In remembrance of me. The institution of the Lord's supper is a comforting ordinance; in the observance of which, true Christians remember, with lively gratitude, the death of the Lord Jesus, the only foundation of the remission of their sins; and, in short, the whole mercy of the new covenant as founded on the shedding of blood.—See on Jno. vi. 53, § 43, p. 335, Addenda, 'Except ye eat,' &c.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

testament was confirmed by the blood of bulls and goats, but the new testament with the blood of Christ, which is here distinguished from that.

his disciples the cup of the new testament, Jesus washed their feet. As we desire to have communion together with Christ, we must seek that both we ourselves and our fellow-communicants be made clean: without holiness no man shall see the Lord.]

Mt. xxvi. 29. Although Jesus would not at this time use the fruit of the vine, yet did he in the kindest manner bestow it upon his disciples.

[May we know what it is to have communion with Christ, in the new wine of the kingdom. The symbol may be partaken of, without enjoyment of the reality; and the reality may be enjoyed without the symbol. So was it when the disciples were wrongfully accused of being 'full of new wine,' Ac. ii.]

Whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, may we do all to the glory of God; making of things seen and temporal, mementoes of things unseen and eternal.

* 'The next ceremony might be the singing or recitation, either wholly or in part, of the usual thanksgiving psalms, called the great Hillel, or psalm of praise, and consisting of the cxv., cxvi., cxvii., and cxviii. psalms; which the rabbinical writers inform us were not confined to the passover, but went to be used at the other feasts also. Maimonides, indeed, supposes them to be recited while the lamb was eaten (De sacrificio Paschali, viii. 14); but this must not be too strictly understood. I place the Hillel here in obedience to the authority of St. Matthew and of St. Mark; both of whom specify the singing of some hymn as the last circumstance before the whole company went out. It is true this hymn was not necessarily the Hillel; and the singing of such a hymn, previous to the departure from the chamber, might have taken place with apparently an equal propriety even after Jno. xvii. 26.'—Gresswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 190.

'The paschal celebrity being concluded, still our Saviour and his eleven disciples might not immediately leave the supper chamber; and if they actually stayed there some time longer, this interval can not be otherwise devoted than to the conversations, ending with the prayer of Jesus, which are successively recorded in the xiv., xv., xvi., and xvii. chapters of St. John. There is internal evidence that the subject-matter of these chapters is a series of circumstances and discourses, all of consecutive occurrence; omitted perhaps by the other evangelists because they came between the close of the paschal ceremony, and the departure to the garden; and therefore, according to his practice, supplied by St. John. It is manifest that, even so early as the end of the fourteenth chapter, the time was come when they must have been preparing

BEING NOW JUSTIFIED BY HIS BLOOD, WE SHALL BE SAVED FROM WRATH THROUGH HIM.—Rom. v. 9. ALL THAT THE LORD HATH SAID WILL WE DO, AND BE OBEDIENT.—Exod. xxiv. 7.

(G. 90.)—[Lesson 87.]—The supper being ended, Jesus discourses with his disciples, before his departure from the supper chamber.—John xiv.

ANALYSIS.

Jno. xiv. 1—3. Jesus invites his disciples into the enjoyment of peace, as exercising faith and hope in the Father and in him. He tells them whither and wherefore he is going, and promises to come again to receive them to himself.

—— 4, 5. Jesus having said that they knew whither he was going, and the way; Thomas declares they are ignorant of both.

—— 6, 7. Jesus explains that he is himself the Way, the Truth, and the Life; and says that in knowing him, they know the Father.

—— 8—11. In reply to Philip, Jesus shews how the Father may be seen. Both the words and the works of the Son are of the Father. Jesus' works give sufficient evidence of his oneness with the Father.

—— 12—14. The privileges about to be bestowed on those that believe in Jesus and pray in his name.

—— 15—17. Jesus tells how his disciples are to shew that they love him; and how they may have (from the Father through him) the communion of the Comforter, the Spirit of truth.

—— 18, 19. Jesus promises that he himself will come again to his faithful disciples; and that although he must soon be removed from the view of the world, they will see him, and will at length through him be given resurrection life.

—— 20. He describes their intimate union with the Father through him. They have illumination, the knowledge of the Son as being in the Father; and justification, as being in Christ; and sanctification, Christ being in them.

Jno. xiv. 21. Jesus shews that love to him is to be known by having, and also keeping, his commandments. The disciple who thus loves the Son will be loved of the Father, and will be given the revelation of Jesus Christ.

—— 22—24. In answer to Judas, not Iscariot, Jesus shews how he will manifest himself to his disciples and not to the world. The Father and the Son will come and make their abode with him who keepeth the words of Jesus.

—— 25, 26. The Holy Ghost is promised to teach them, and bring all these sayings to remembrance.

—— 27. Jesus leaves peace with his disciples; his peace, freely bestowed; and not after the manner of the world. They are to be neither troubled nor afraid.

—— 28, 29. He intimates to them that true love to him should make them rejoice in his departure to be with the Father.

—— 30. He will not hereafter talk much with them; must gird himself for the grand conflict with the prince of the world.

—— 31. The work to which he now addresses himself, he does in manifesting his love to the Father, and in obedience to his commandment, 'Arise, let us go hence.'

JOHN xiv. [xiii. 38, p. 375.]

1 Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me 2 In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to- 3 prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come ἔρχομαι

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 1. Let not your heart be troubled—Jesus had shewn his disciples, that the most trusted among them would betray him, ch. xiii. 21—30, pp. 370—...2. supra—that the boldest of them would deny him, ver. 37, 38, p. 374, supra—but although deprived of all occasion of glorying in the creature, they had still, according to the terms of the new covenant, an assured ground of confidence, Je. xxxi. 33, 34 (see on Mt. xxvi 28, 'new testament,' p 378); Rom. iii. 19—28.

believe in God—Ps. xlvi. 1, 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.'—2 Co. i. 9, 'We had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

believe also in me—Ps. ii. 12, 'Kiss the Son . . . . Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.'—He. ii. 17, 'A merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.'

2. In my Father's house—2 Co. v. 1, 2, 'We have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. . . . Our house which is from heaven:'—Abraham, He. xi. 10, 'looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God,'—It is called, xii. 22, 'the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem,'—and, 1 Pe. i. 4, 'an inheritance . . . reserved in heaven'—Rev. iii 12, 'New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God:'—comp He. xi. 16, 'But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city'—Eph. ii. 19, 'Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God;'—see its amplitude and glory, Rev. xxi. 2—27.

many—Lu. xiv. 22, § 67, p. 184, 'And yet there is room.'

mansions—abidings—2 Co. iv. 18, 'For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

if . . . . not, &c.—2 Pe. i. 16, 'We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord,' &c.

I go to prepare, &c.—He ix. 24, 'For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us:'

3. I will come again—see Lu. xix. 12, § 80, p. 243; Ac. i. 11, § 98; 1 Th. iv. 13—...8.

NOTES.

Jno. xiv. 1. Be troubled. ταρασσέσθω. 'Be not so troubled as to be put into a hurry and confusion, like the troubled sea. Be not ruffled and discomposed.'

Ye believe in God, believe also in me. 'Place your confidence in God, and in me as the Mediator between God and man.'

2. In my Father's house, &c. The words imply a participation in those mansions of bliss which our Lord himself was going to occupy, and to which he would lead the way to all his disciples.

I go to prepare a place for you. By his going is meant his death and ascent to heaven. The figure here is taken from one who is on a journey, who goes before his companions to provide a place to lodge in, and to make preparations for their entertainment.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiv. 1 As we desire to enjoy peace, and to have strength for resisting temptation, let us comply with our Saviour's kind invitation, and repose our confidence in God, in the Father and the Son.

[Our Lord would not have us indulge in vain expectations; He would have us not only to build upon the true Foundation, but to build upon that foundation nothing but truth.]—See margin, next page.

to leave the place where they were: ἀναίρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, though it may not amount to a command actually to set out, cannot imply less than that the time for setting out was at hand.—Grot., Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 196.

SURELY IT IS NOT TOO MUCH TO EXPECT THAT WE ON EARTH PREPARE FOR THAT WHICH OUR LORD IS PREPARING FOR US IN HEAVEN!

DO WE INDEED ACT AS IF OUR FAITH, OUR HOPE, AND LOVE, WERE FIXED ON THINGS ABOVE — WERE CENTRED IN CHRIST?

JOHN xiv. 3—9.

again, and receive παραλήψομαι you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may-be 4 also. And whither I go ye-know, and the way ye-know. 5, Thomas saith unto-him, 6 Lord, we-know not whither thou-goest; and how can-we know the way? Jesus saith unto-him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no-man cometh unto the Father, but 7 by me. If ye-had-known me, ye-should-have-known my Father also: and from 8 henceforth ye-know him, and have-seen him. Philip saith unto-him, Lord, shew us the 9 Father, and it-sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto-him, Have-I-been so-long time with you, and-yet hast-thou-not-known me, Philip? he that-hath-seen me hath-seen the Father;

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 3. that where I am—ch. xii. 26, § 82, p. 267, 'Where I am, there shall also my servant be:'—1 Th. iv. 17, 'And so shall we ever be with the Lord.'

4. whither I go ye know—He had often discoursed to them of the kingdom, and to some of them given a sight of 'the Son of man coming in his kingdom,' Mt. xvi. 27, 28, § 50, p. 43; xvii. 1—5, § 51, p. 51, &c.

and the way ye know—It had been told them, both before the Transfiguration and after, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40; xvii. 22, 3, § 52, p. 70—And the 'decease' which he should accomplish at Jerusalem,' had been the theme of Moses and Elias, while appearing with him in glory, Lu. ix. 30, 1, § 51, p. 53.

6. I am the way—We have entrance 'into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us,' &c., He. x. 19, 20.

and the truth—The ark of the testimony was a figure of him who could truly say, Ps. xl 7, 8, 'In the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart.'—He. x. 5—10—Ac. x. 43, 'To him give all the prophets witness,' &c.

and the life—see the description of the living creatures, Eze. i., x.; Rev. iv.—1 Jno. i. 2, 'The life was manifested, and we have seen it,' &c.—v. 12, 'He that hath the Son hath life;'—Ga. ii. 20, 'Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.'—Ph. iii. 21, 'Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body,' cometh unto the Father, &c.—The high priest bare the children of Israel on his heart, and upon his shoulders before the Lord, Ex. xxviii. 12, 29—1 Ti. ii. 5, 'There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;'—He iv. 14, 5, 'Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, . . . Jesus the Son of God, . . . 16, let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy,' &c.—Ac. iv. 12, 'Neither is there salvation in any other:'

7. If ye had known, &c.—same said to the Jews, ch. viii. 19, § 55, p. 101.

from henceforth, &c.—2 Co. v. 16—9, 'Wherefore henceforth,' &c.—see on ver. 11, next page.

8. shew us the Father, &c. — Philip may not have understood what Jesus had before said, Jno. xii. 45, § 85, p. 311, 'He that seeth me seeth him that sent me.'

9. so long time with you, &c.—Philip had been one of the first called, ch. i. 43, § 10, p. 72, and had, in the case of Nathanael, then been given evidence of the omniscience of his Master, with the omniscient and heart-searching God, ver. 45—51, ib.

he that hath seen me, &c.—see on ver. 8—2 Co. iv. 4, 'Christ, who is the image of God,'—Col. i. 15, 'the image of the invisible God,'—He. i. 3, 'the express image of his person,'—1 Jno. i. 1, 3, § 7, p. 48, 'No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

NOTES.

[Jno. xiv. 6. I am the way, and the truth, and the life, &c.—' The way that leads to the Father. Jesus Christ is our way to the Father and to heaven, in his person, as God manifest in the flesh; in his office, as our Mediator with God, introducing us to the Holiest by "a new and living way;" in his example, as our great High Priest for ever; who, by his perfect obedience and atoning sacrifice, hath made propitiation for the sins of the whole world; in his intercession, as our Advocate with the Father, who hath given us access with confidence to the throne of grace; lastly, he is our way, as being our great Moral Teacher and Perfect Exemplar, being "the great Shepherd of the sheep, "leaving us an example that we should follow his steps," and preceding us in a way open to all, plain and even secure; pleasant, and terminating in everlasting bliss.']

'He is the truth, both in his essence and attributes, as being one with the Father (who "is truth"); he is the fountain of all truth, the complement of all truth (being the substance of all the types and figures of the Old Testament), having all the characters of truth. As such, he is our great Prophet, pointing out by his word, which "is truth," the way which leadeth unto everlasting life.

'Finally, he is the life, as being (what he elsewhere testifies of himself) "the resurrection and the life;" through whom alone any one cometh unto the Father in acceptance and salvation, and through whose life-giving Spirit the dead in trespasses and sins are so quickened as to believe in him as the truth, and to come unto him as the way, and thus to finally experience him as the life.'—Bloomf.

No man cometh unto the Father. By any other doctrine, by any other merit, or by any other intercession than mine.

7. Ye should have known my Father also. A correct knowledge of the character and work of Christ is the same as a correct knowledge of the counsels and plans of God.

From henceforth. From this time. From my death and resurrection you shall understand the plans and counsels of God.

Ye know him. You shall have just views of his plans and designs.

Have seen him. That is, had seen Jesus Christ, his image, and the brightness of his glory, He. i. 3, which was the same as having seen the Father, ver. 9.

9. Hast thou not known me. Meaning, hast thou not known who I am, and what is my true character?

He that hath seen me, &c. 'He who hath seen me hath [in effect] seen the Father;' of whom Christ

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiv. 3. As truly as our Lord hath gone and for us entered within the vail, so truly will he come again in the same manner as he went.—See margin.

4 ver. Let us indeed prize highly the knowledge of Christ: in knowing the Son we know the Father, and the way whereby he can be approached with acceptance.

5 ver. It is better, like Thomas, to confess our deficiency of knowledge, and have it supplied, than to remain in pride and ignorance.

[6 ver. Christ is not only our Mediator, but the ground and WAY of our reconciliation with God: He is not only our Prophet, but the TRUTH testified to by all the prophets: He is not only our King, but the LIFE whereby we live unto Him here in grace and hereafter in glory. It is as acknowledging Christ to be our Priest, Prophet, and King, that we approach the Father with acceptance.]

[7 ver. As it is only in Christ that the Father can be known, so certainly He is known by the true disciple of Christ. No other knowledge sufficeth, but the knowledge of Christ is sufficient.]

[8—10 ver. Let us prize above all things the revelation of God in Christ. He who seeth the Son seeth

JOHN xiv. 10—.5.

10 and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father? Believest-thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto-you I-speak not of myself:
11 but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works. Believe me that I am in the 12 Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works'-sake. Verily, verily, I-say unto you, He that-believeth on me, the works that I do shall-he-do-also;
13 and greater works than-these shall-he-do; because I go unto my Father. And whatsoever ye-shall-ask in my name, that will-I-do, that the Father may-be-glorified in the 14 Son. If ye-shall-ask any-thing in my name, I will-do it. 15, If ye-love me, keep my

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 10. Believest thou not, &c.—see ch. x. 38, § 56, p. 123; xvii. 21, infra, p. 403.

I . . in the Father— He is 'Alpha and Omega,' Rev. i. 8, 11—Isa. xlv. 21, 'a just God and a Saviour;' —25, 'in the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.'

I speak not of myself—see ch. vii. 16, § 55, p. 91.

11. and the Father in me—2 Co. v. 19, 'God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself,'—He. i. 1, 2, 'God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son,' &c.

works' sake — ch. v. 19, § 23, p. 177, 'What things soever he [the Father] doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.'—See also ver. 36, § ib., p. 179.

12. He that believeth, &c.—Mk. xvi. 17—20, § 98, 'And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;' &c.

greater . . . . than these—so to Nathanael, ch. i. 50, 51, § 10, p. 73, 'Thou shalt see greater things than these. . . . . Hereafter ye shall see heaven open,' &c.

13. ask in my name, &c.—ver. 26, infra, 'The Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name,'—

Rom. viii. 26, 27, 'For we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us,' &c.—Jude, ver. 20, 21, 'But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God,'—see on ver. 14, 6, infra.

that will I do—Ph. iv. 13, 'I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.'—2 Pe. i. 3—8, 'According as his divine power hath given unto us all things,' &c.

glorified in the Son—1 Pe. iv. 11, 'that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.'—See Jno. xv. 7, 8, infra, p. 388.

14. If ye, &c.—Our wills must be brought into conformity to the will of God, so that we shall ourselves ask that which we know is the mind of the Spirit, Eph. vi. 18; Ja. iv. 3; 1 Jno. v. 14, 15.

15. If ye love me, keep, &c.—1 Jno. ii. 3—5, 'Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. . . . Whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected:'—iii. 24, 'He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him,'—v. 3, 'This is the love of God, that we keep,' &c.—2 Jno. ver. 6, 'This is love, that we walk after his commandments.'

NOTES.

was the image by his doctrines and perfections. He who saw Jesus living, acting, and dying, saw, in fact, the Father.'—Tittman.

['"Thus (observes Dr. Fye Smith) the oneness assumed is shewn to be both that of moral excellences, and that of efficient operation. In each respect whosoever had seen or known the Son, had so seen or known the Father. The doctrines taught, the miracles performed, the spiritual excellences and glory displayed by the Son, are identically those of the Father. In short, the perfections were the perfections of the Son." The inference to be drawn from all this is (as Lampe, Tittman, and Smith have shewn), that where there is such perfect oneness of attributes, there must be a oneness also of nature in the Father and the Son.'—Bloomf.]

[Jno. xiv. 10. Believest thou not, &c. 'Here our Lord means to ask whether Philip did not yet believe the essential union and mutual indwelling of the Father and the Son, and of the Godhead in his human nature. He had frequently spoken to them on this subject; and his words were not "of himself," as distinct from the Father; and therefore they ought to have been more regarded, especially as the Father, dwelling in and working by him, had borne witness to him by so many stupendous miracles.'—Scott.]

He doeth the works. We are not only one in nature, but one also in operation.

11. For the very works' sake. Intending not merely the miracles themselves, but his sovereign godlike way of performing them.

12. Greater works than these shall he do, &c. The works which he had wrought were chiefly miracles of mercy upon the bodies of men; but those which through the instrumentality of his disciples he was to accomplish subsequent to his ascension, were much more important and permanent in their effects, being miracles of mercy upon the souls of multitudes for their everlasting salvation. The giving sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, and even the raising of the dead to life, were but as it were shadows of the spiritual blessing, bestowed upon men, through the powerful application, by the Holy Ghost, of the truth respecting Christ crucified, as proclaimed by those that believe in his name.

Because I go unto my Father. These words should be read in connection with the next verse.

13. Whatsoever ye shall ask. This promise referred particularly to the apostles, in their work of spreading the gospel. It is, however, true of all Christians, if what they ask is in faith, and according to the will of God, Ja. i. 6; 1 Jno. v. 14.

In my name. This is equivalent to saying on my account, or for my sake. If a man who has money in a bank authorizes us to draw it, we are said to do it in his name. If a son authorises us to apply to his father for aid because we are his friends, we do it in the name of the son, and the favour will be bestowed on us from the regard the parent has to his son, and through him to all the friends of his son.

That will I do. He therefore must be one in will and power with the Father.

That the Father may be glorified in the Son. See on ch. xiii. 31, p. 373.

15. If ye love me, keep my commandments. Immediately after faith he exhorts to love and good

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the Father; the words of the Father are spoken by the Son; and the works of the Son are wrought by the Father.]

Jno. xiv. 11. The God of creation and providence is the Author of our redemption; and the Author of our redemption is the God of creation and providence. Let us look to see Christ in God, and God as manifested in the Son.

[Christ, in requiring us to believe in himself as being one with the Father, does this upon reasonable grounds—He produces abundant evidence of being what he declares himself to be.]

12 ver. The miracles which Christ wrought when upon earth, were generally for the relief of the bodies of men; but those which he wrought after his ascension, were miracles of mercy upon the souls of multitudes. May we be the happy instruments of working these greater works.

[13 ver. It is the Spirit of Christ that in us prays, according to the will of God, and it is Christ that puts forth power in answer to prayer. In all our prayers and actings, let our object be that the Father may be glorified in the Son.]

14 ver. May we know the power of the name of Jesus, who saves his people from their sins.

15 ver. Would we shew our love to the Saviour?

JOHN xiv. 16—9.

16 commandments. And I will-pray ἐρωτησω the Father, and he-shall-give you another 17 Comforter Παρακλητον, that he-may-abide with you for ever εις τον αἰωνα; even the Spirit of truth της ἀληθειας; whom the world can not receive, because it-seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he-dwelleth with you παρ' ὑμιν, and 18 shall-be in you. I-will-not-leave you comfortless ὀρφανους: I-will-come ἐρχομαι to 19 you. Yet a-little-while, and the world seeth θεωρει me no more; but ye see me:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 16. And I will pray, &c.—see on ver. 13—Tit. iii. 5, 6. 'The washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;'—Eph. ii. 18, 'For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.'

Comforter—see ver. 26, infra, p. 384; xv. 26, p. 391; xvi. 7, p. 393—The same Greek word is translated 'advocate,' 1 Jno. ii. 1—Jesus, the Son of God, who 'is passed into the heavens,' Heb. iv. 14, is our advocate or intercessor; and the Holy Ghost also is another advocate, for 'the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us,' Rom. viii. 26.

17. the Spirit of truth—Jesus had declared himself to be 'the Truth,' ver. 6, supra—and here 'another Comforter,' given of the Father, at the intercession of the Son, ver. 16, is declared to be, ver. 17, 'the Spirit of truth;'—so also xv. 26, infra, p. 391; xvi. 13, p. 394.

ye know him, &c.—He had before said the same of the Father, ver. 7, supra; and had shewn that this was as seeing the Father in the Son, ver. 9—11—What was thus said of the Father, he now shews may be equally said of the Holy Ghost, who then dwelt with them in Jesus, and after whose removal was to be in them, so as to enable them to enjoy the fellowship of the Father and the Son—see on ver. 25, 6, infra, p. 384.

The union of which our Lord here speaks, and in ch. xv. 1—7; xvii. 21—3, 6, as subsisting between himself and his disciples, is the same union as that which St. Paul repeatedly declares to subsist between Christ as the head, and believers as the members of his church.—See Rom. xii. 4, 5; 1 Co. vi. 15; xii. 12, 25—7; Eph. iv. 12—6; v. 29, 30, 2.

18. comfortless—Gr. 'orphans'—Ps. ciii. 13, 'Like as a father pitieth his children,' &c.—Mt. vi. 32, § 19, pp 135, 6, 'Your heavenly Father knoweth,' &c.—2 Co. vi. 18, 'And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.'

I will come to you—see the coming of the Lord described—in its aspect toward the righteous, 1 Th. iv. 13—8—toward the wicked, 2 Th. i. 7—9.

19. Yet a little while, &c.—ch. xiii. 33, supra, p. 374, 'Yet . . . . I am with you.'—See xvi. 16, infra, p. 396.

seeth me no more, &c.—Jesus, after his resurrection, was shewn openly, Ac. x. 41, 'Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God,' but ye see me—Those who saw in Jesus the promised Messiah, were given to see still further evidence to the truth, Ac. i. 3, 'He shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs,'—Mt. xiii. 12, § 32, p. 245, 'For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance:'

NOTES.

works. The evidence which we have that a child loves its parents, is when that child is willing, without hesitation, gainsaying, or murmuring, to do all that the parent requires him to do.

Jno. xiv. 16. I will pray the Father. This refers to his intercession after his death, and his ascension to heaven: through Christ, as mediator between God and man, all blessings of grace and glory are bestowed on believers.

[Another Comforter. 'The word παράκλητος signifies not only a comforter, but also an advocate, a defender of a cause, a counsellor, patron, mediator. Christ is thus termed, 1 Jno. ii. 1, where the common translation renders the word advocate. Christ is thus called, because he is represented as transacting the concerns of our souls with God; and for this cause, he tells us, he goes unto the Father, ver. 12, p. 382. The Holy Spirit is thus called, because he transacts the cause of God and Christ with us, explains to us the nature and importance of the great atonement, shews the necessity of it, counsels us to receive it, instructs us how to lay hold on it, vindicates our claim to it, and makes intercessions in us with unutterable groanings. As Christ acted with his disciples while he sojourned with them, so the Holy Ghost acts with those who believe in his name.'—A. C.]

That he may abide with you for ever. With you and your followers in faith, who believe in your word, to the end of the world.

17. The world. ὁ κοσμος. Meaning the carnal, corrupt, and worldly-minded part of it. So 1 Co. ii. 14, ψυχικὸς ἄνθρωπος.

[Can not receive. οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν, i.e., 'cannot bring themselves to receive it;' since they only 'mind earthly things,' they neither understand nor care about those heavenly gifts. And thus it happens, as is just afterwards said, that they have neither any perception nor any knowledge of the thing.]

Neither knoweth him. To know in the scriptures often means more than the act of the mind in simply understanding a thing. It denotes every act of emotion of the mind that is requisite in receiving the proper impression of a truth.

He dwelleth with you, &c. When our Lord was upon earth, the Holy Ghost dwelt with the disciples; all the gifts and graces of the Spirit being manifested in Him, in whom 'dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily'; but the Comforter was hereafter to have a more intimate fellowship with them, he was to be in them.

[18. I will not leave you comfortless. Literally, orphans. The original word, ὀρφανός, is by some derived from ὀρφος, obscure, dark; because, says Minter, an orphan (one deprived of father and mother) is little esteemed, is neglected, and obliged to remain about in obscurity and darkness. Others derive it from the Hebrew חָרַף charaph, to strip, or make bare, despoil, because such a child is destitute of comfort, direction, and support, and is a prey to misery and disease, to sin and to death.]

'The disciples of a particular teacher among the Hebrews called him father; his scholars were called children, and on his death were considered orphans.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Let us manifest the same by keeping his commandments, which direct us to love one another, do good to those that are opposed to us, and shew kindness unto all.

[Jno. xiv. 15, 6. Although our obedience does not merit the intercession of Christ, the favour of the Father, and the fellowship of the Spirit, yet we may not expect to enjoy these except as keeping Christ's commandments. Should we lose the enjoyment of communion with God by his Spirit, let us rather suspect our own unfaithfulness, than suppose the Lord has failed to fulfil his promise, that the Comforter would abide with the disciples for ever.]

[17 ver. We may not go to the world to get a knowledge of spiritual things: the world is neither by perception nor by consciousness qualified to judge: but the disciples of Jesus should know the way of the Spirit, first, by having seen his manifestations in our great Exemplar the Son of God; and, secondly, by their having experience of his operations in themselves.]

[18 ver. The disciples of Jesus need not feel as those that are altogether bereaved of him whom they love. It is true they desire to behold him in glory; but even now they have communion with him in thought and affection; they can also be given his counsel and his help in every time of need. He is ever near, yea, around and within them.]

WE MUST OURSELVES BE TRUTHFUL IF WE WOULD ENJOY COMMUNION WITH THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH.

LET US SEE IN THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST THE ASSURED PLEDGE OF OUR OWN.

JOHN xiv. 20—5.

20 because I live, ye shall-live also. At that day ye shall-know that I am in my Father, 21 and ye in me, and-I in you. He that-hath my commandments, and keep'th them, he it-is that loveth me: and he that-loveth me shall-be-loved of my Father, and I will-love 22 him, and will-manifest ἐμαυτὸν myself to-him. Judas saith unto-him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is-it τι γεγονεν that thou-wilt manifest thyself unto-us, and not unto-the 23 world? Jesus answered and said unto-him, If a-man love me, he-will-keep my words:
and my Father will-love him, and we-will-come unto him, and make our abode with 24 μονην παρ' him. He that-loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which 25 ye-hear is not mine, but the-Father's which-sent me. These-things have-I-spoken unto-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 19. because I live, &c.—see the prayer for resurrection life, Eph. i. 15—23; Col. ii. 12. 'Ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.'—iii. 1—4, 'If ye then be risen with Christ,' &c.—1 Co. xv. 20. 1, 'But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.'

20. At that day, &c. — After the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus had come upon the disciples, they knew more fully the import of what he here taught them respecting his illuminating grace — see Ac. ii., iii., iv., &c., and the epistles throughout.

that I am in my Father—see on this grace of illumination, ver. 20—5 — and his justifying grace, 'ye in me,' 27—31 — and his sanctifying grace, 'and I in you,' xv. 1—10, infra, p. 367.

21. hath . . . . and keepeth, &c.—Rev. i. 3, 'Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.'

will manifest myself to him—This was shewn when, to the disciple whom Jesus loved, ch. xxi. 20—4, § 97, he did manifest himself as described, Rev. i. 1, 2, 9—18, &c.—see also the manifestation to Daniel, x. 11, 'A man greatly beloved,'

22. Judas—Lu. vi. 16, § 27, p. 207, 'the brother of James,'—the son of Alphæus. Mk. iii. 18, ib.—He is called, Mt. x. 3, ib., 'Lebbæus, whose surname was Thaddæus;'—Unlike Judas Iscariot, who cared more for his bag, and what was put therein, than for his Lord's manifesting himself to him, this Judas was peculiarly earnest in contending for the truth respecting his Lord, Jude, ver. 3—The epistle to the Hebrews, from the very commencement, dwells most emphatically upon the manifestation of the Father in the Son—see ch. i., &c.

23. will keep my words—He. ii. 1, 'Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.'

abode with him—see 1 Co. iii. 16, 'Ye are the temple of God,'—vi. 19, 'Your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost'—2 Co. vi. 16, 'Ye are the temple of the living God:'—and see Jno. vi. 56, § 43, p. 332—see also Rom. viii. 11; Eph. ii. 22—He. xiii. 5, 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.'—Rev. iii. 20, 'If any man hear,' &c.

24. loveth me not—see the character of those who were prone to forget what had been taught them of God, Jude, ver. 4—19.

and the word—see on ver. 10, supra, p. 382.

NOTES.

Jno. xiv. 19. Because I live. As surely as I shall rise from the dead, so shall ye. My resurrection shall be the proof and pledge of yours. And because I live a life of intercession for you at the right hand of God, ye shall live a life of grace and peace here, and a life of glory hereafter.

20. That I am in my Father. After my resurrection, ye will be more fully convinced of this important truth, that I and the Father are one; for I shall live in you by the energy of my Spirit, and ye will live in me by faith.

18—20. These verses may be paraphrased thus:—And though I am going from you by death, I will not leave you friendless and forlorn, but will pay you repeated visits after my resurrection, and return, by my Spirit, after my ascension, to your unspeakable comfort and advantage. Shortly those men who hate and reject me, shall see me no more on earth, but ye will see me alive after my passion; and because I am the living God, and shall rise again to an immortal life in my manhood, and live in heaven as the head of my mystical body, ye will, in union to my person, in fellowship with me, and by virtue derived from me, live spiritually, in a state of justification, sanctification, and consolation, in this world, and of glorification in the next. And when I have risen from the dead as a triumphant conqueror over sin and Satan, death and hell, and have poured out my Spirit upon you, ye will begin more clearly to understand that I am essentially one with the Father, and that ye are spiritually united to me, as the source of your life.

21. He that hath, &c. This intimate union is further manifested by these facts:—1st. That true love to Jesus will produce obedience.—See ver. 15. 2nd. That those who love him shall be loved of the Father, shewing the union between the Father and the Son. 3rd. That Jesus also will love them, evincing still the same union. Religion is love. And the love of one holy being or object is the love of all. The kingdom of God is one. His people, though called by different names, are one. They are united to each other, and to God; and the bond which unites the whole kingdom is one, is love.—See on ver. 15.

22. How is it that, &c. The sense of this question is, 'What has happened, that thou art about to manifest thyself unto us only, and not, as we expected, to the world?' The expression, 'How is it,' is used here much in the same sense as in Lu. ii. 49, § 6, p. 41, and has no reference to the manner in which Christ would manifest himself.

23. We will come, &c. This is a figurative expression.—Comp. Rev. iii. 20. In several places of scripture, God the Father and Christ are said to dwell by the Holy Spirit in those who are united to them by faith and love.—See Script. Illus.

24. The word which ye hear, &c. See on ch. vii. 16, § 55, p. 91.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xiv. 21. Let us prize the blessing of illumination, or the knowledge of Christ in God; and equally our being in Him for justification; and his being in us for sanctification.)

[May the true evidences of sanctification be found in us; our possessing the knowledge of what Christ has commanded, and therewith a joyful performance of that which we know to be his will. In this way let us open our hearts freely to Christ, if we would in truth obtain a knowledge of Him, without a practical knowledge of whom all other knowledge is unavailing.] — 22 ver. See margin.

[23 ver. See margin. It is to those who keep the words of Christ that He hath promised to make himself known. He makes no promise of any material presence in the sacrament, as many of those who neglect his words do feign. The presence of Christ is not to be fixed here or there by the hands of man. It may at all times and in all places be enjoyed by the believer, who is himself an abode for the Father and the Son—a living temple of the living God.]

[24 ver. He that manifests a disregard of the word of Christ, need not pretend to be a lover of his person. He may be enamoured with some image of his own creation, but he does not love the Saviour, else he would keep his word, which is the word of God.]

JOHN xiv. 26—9.

26 you, being-yet-present with μενων παρ' you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will-send in my name, he shall-teach you all things, and 27 bring-all-things-to-your-remembrance, whatsoever I-have-said unto-you. Peace I-leave with-you, my peace I-give unto-you: not as the world giveth, give I unto-you. Let-28 not your heart-be-troubled, neither let-it-be-afraid δειλιατω. Ye-have-heard how I said unto-you, I-go-away, and come again unto you. If-ye-loved me, ye-would-rejoice, 29 because I-said, I-go unto the Father: for my Father is greater than-I. And now I-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 25. being yet present with you—in his body as man, as in ch. xiii. 33, supra, p. 373—and on account of which he could say of the Spirit, xiv. 17, 'He dwelleth with you,'

26. the Comforter—see before, ver. 16, 7, supra.

the Holy Ghost, &c.—Here the doctrine of the Trinity, the foundation truth of the New Testament revelation, is again presented as in ver. 16, supra, p. 383.

teach you all things—1 Co. ii. 10—6, 'God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. 11, For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. 12, Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. 13, Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. 14, But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. 15, But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man. 16, For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.'—See Jno. xvi. 13, infra; 1 Jno. ii. 20—7.

your remembrance—Not only was the Spirit to guide the apostles in their expository epistles, as in that to the Hebrews, and those of James and Peter—He was also to superintend their labours in the giving of the gospels, which were written either by or under the direction of the apostles, ch. xv. 26, 27, p. 391; Lu. i. 1, 2, § 1, p. 1—It is also by the help of the Spirit that men are enabled to unders-and the scriptures aright, so as rightly to apply them; and the Spirit is given in seasonable remembrance, so as to compare spiritual things with spiritual, 1 Co. ii. 13—6—see above.

27. Peace, &c.—Rom. v. 1, 'Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:'

my peace—It is his; he hath dearly purchased it—Col. i. 20, 'having made peace through the blood of his cross,'

I give unto you—Eph. ii. 8, 'By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:'

28. I go away, &c.—see on ver. 2—4, supra, p. 380.

I go unto the Father—see on ver. 5—14, supra, p. 381.

greater than I—He was one with the Father in glory, but he had made himself of no reputation, that he might lift man up to sit with him on his throne, Eph. ii. 5, 6; Ph. ii. 6—11—When he ascended on high, he went to enjoy the glory he had with the Father, Jno. xvii. 5, infra, p. 399, 'before the world was.'

NOTES.

Jno. xiv. 26. But the Comforter, &c. 'The connection with ver. 25 is as follows: "But since of the things which I have spoken unto you, during my presence with you, some are imperfectly understood, and soon will be forgotten by you, the Comforter, &c."'—Lonsdale and Hale.—And see on ver. 16, p. 383.

This was a full promise that they should be inspired, and that in recording the truths necessary for our edification, they should be under the infallible guidance of the Holy Ghost.

In my name. For my sake, and in my place—Comp. ver. 13, 6, pp. 382, 3.

[He shall teach, &c. The language in which the Holy Ghost is spoken of here, and in ch. xv. 26; xvi. 7—15, plainly points him out as a Person distinct from the Father and the Son; while the offices ascribed to him in these passages no less plainly point him out as God.]

27. Peace I leave with you. Christ here speaks of himself as the giver of that peace which, in other places of scripture, is spoken of as coming from God. —See Is. xxvi. 3; Ph. iv. 7; Col. iii. 15.

['Here we have not (what some have supposed) a mere form of farewell, but a solemn and affecting valediction and benediction, as of one about to part with his friends, and therefore leaving behind him his blessing as a bequest. Ἐγκ ἀφίημι, I leave, may have the sense to bequeath; and so we use the word to leave. Ἀφίημι, I give, is well added after ἀφίημι; the two terms being usually conjoined in the wording of a will.

'The full import here of εἰρήνη, peace, is (as Lampe shews at large) peace with God, Ph. iv. 7, peace of conscience.'—Bloomf.]

Not as the world giveth. The salutations and benedictions of the world are generally matters of custom and polite ceremony, given without desire or design. To his followers Jesus gives peace, procures it, preserves it, and establishes it. He is the author, prince, promoter, and keeper of peace.

[28. If ye loved me. 'The sense is, "If ye loved me" as ye ought, ye would not, from a regard to your own loss, grieve at my departure, but "would rejoice" on my account, because, as I have said, I am going to my Father; for my Father, who is in heaven, is greater than I am, as long as I remain among you upon earth; and it is to the participation of this greatness that I am now about to return.'—See ch. xvii. 5, p. 399. Christ here speaks of himself as inferior to the Father, with reference to the nature which he took upon himself when he became man. When he spoke of himself with reference to his Divine nature, he asserted his equality and unity with the Father.—See ch. v. 18, § 23, p. 177; x. 30—6, § 56, p. 122; also i. 1—3, 14, § 7, pp. 46, 8; Ph. ii. 5—8.' —Lonsdale and Hale.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xiv. 26. By an infallible aid were the apostles led into the knowledge of all they were to communicate to us in their epistles; by the same assistance they were enabled truly to record the sayings of Christ when upon earth as has been done in the gospels.

[27 ver. May we, as having the word of God dwelling in us richly in all wisdom, know also by experience that PEACE which is the bequest of our blessed Redeemer.]

Unlike the world, Jesus gives what he is willing and able to give. His sincerity is abundantly proved by his dying for our sins; and his power, by his rising again for our justification.

[The true believer may well be at peace; in his behalf Christ hath answered every claim of justice—he need not be afraid; Christ hath overcome all his deadly foes, and secured for him the victory.]

28 ver. True honour rejoices in the honour and happiness of the object beloved. Let us rejoice that He who humbled himself unto the death for us, is now with the Father on his throne.

[29 ver. Let us beware of regarding prophecy as a

BY GRACE ARE YE SAVED THROUGH FAITH; AND THAT NOT OF YOURSELVES: IT IS THE GIFT OF GOD;—Ephes. ii. 8.
FOR WE ARE HIS WORKMANSHIP, CREATED IN CHRIST JESUS UNTO GOOD WORKS,—Ephes. ii. 10.

JOHN xiv. 30, .1.

have-told you before it-come-to-pass, that, when it-is-come-to-pass, ye-might-believe.
30 Hereafter I-will-not-talk much with you: for the prince of-this world cometh, and 31 hath nothing in me. But that the world may-know that I-love the Father; and as the Father gave-me-commandment, even-so I-do. Arise, let-us-go hence.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xiv. 29. I have told you, &c.—To wit, that they, as loving him, would rejoice upon his going to the Father, ver. 28—The joy of the Holy Ghost was given them upon Christ's ascension, Ac. ii. 1—13, 41, .6, .7.

when it is come to pass, &c.—The fulfilment of the promise as to the anointing—'The oil of joy' formed one of the principal features of Peter's discourse, on the day of Pentecost, in his exhorting men to believe, Ac. ii.—see Jno. xiii. 19, p. 370.

30. prince of this world—see ch. xii. 31, § 82, p. 268; and comp. Rev. xii. 3—9.

and hath nothing in me—There was nothing in common between them—they were entirely opposed, so that nothing was to be expected from such a meeting but the most deadly conflict—see the hour of darkness, Mt. xxvi. 37—46, [Lu. xxii. 40—.6,] § 88, p. 413.

31. that I love the Father—For this was he willing to endure the cross, despising the shame, Ph. ii. 8, 'And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.'

as the Father gave me, &c.—It was in obedience to the command of the Father that he laid down his life, ch. x. 17. .8, § 55, p. 116, 'Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.'

NOTES.

Jno. xiv. 29. Before it come to pass. Before my death, resurrection, and ascension.

That, when it is come, &c. That when all that I have now foretold to you 'is come to pass,' your belief in me may be fully established.—Comp. ch. xiii. 19, § 86, p. 370; xvi. 4, p. 393.

30. Hath nothing in me. There is in me no principle or feeling that accords with his, and nothing therefore by which he can prevail. Temptation has its power because there are some principles of evil in us which accord with the designs of the tempter, and which may be excited by presenting corresponding objects till our virtue be overcome. Where there is no such principle, temptation has no power.

[31. But . . . . may know, &c. 'Here (as often after ἀλλά, and before ἵνα and such particles) something is left to be supplied from the subject-matter. The full sense seems to be, "But [the prince of the world is permitted to assault me] that the world may know," &c.'—Bloomf.]

So I do. He shewed that, in the face of calamities, and persecutions, and temptations, he was disposed to obey his Father. This he did, that the world might know that he loved the Father. So should we bear trials. So should we resist temptation.

Arise, let us go hence. It has been commonly supposed, that Jesus and the apostles now rose from the paschal supper and went to the mount of Olives, and that the remainder of the discourse in ch. xv., xvi., together with the prayer in ch xvii., was delivered while on the way to the garden of Gethsemane. But some have supposed that they merely rose from the table, and that the discourse was finished before they left the room. It was now probably towards midnight, and the scene, wherever it took place, was one of great interest and tenderness. Jesus, with a little band, was going himself to die, and counselling his little company in regard to their duties and dangers, and, in the stillness of the night, invoking the protection and blessing of God his Father, to attend, to sanctify, and to guide them in the various labours, the toils, and persecutions, that they were yet to endure, ch. xvii.

The reader should carefully note the conduct of our Lord. He goes to die as a SACRIFICE, out of love to mankind, in obedience to the Divine will, and with unshaken courage. All our actions should be formed on this plan. They should have the love of God and man for their principle and motive; his glory for their end; and his will for their rule. He who lives and acts thus shall live for ever. Amen.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

mere matter of curious speculation: it was given for our use: not only that we may know what to look for in the purposes of God; but that, when we see his words fulfilled, we may the more confidently trust in Him, and assuredly expect the full accomplishment of all that he has promised.]

[Jno. xiv. 30. If 'the prince of this world' had the hardihood to attack even 'THE PRINCE OF LIFE,' in whom he could find nothing, can we hope to escape his assaults, when in us there is so much of the world whereby he may work our destruction? May we be prepared for the conflict, by being found in Christ, setting our affections on things above, not on things on the earth. Taking to us 'the whole armour of God,' may we 'be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, Eph. vi. 10, .1.

May every temptation and trial through which we have to pass make only the more manifest that the love of God rules in our hearts: that as the Father hath given us commandment even so we do.

Every moment has its proper duty. May we know what the duty is to which we are now called; and even although it should call us from the joys of social intercourse with the disciples of Jesus, may we cheerfully rise to its performance.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV. What a safe and suitable object of faith is our Redeemer! All his Father's perfections shine in him, as his only-begotten Son and mediatorial Servant. There is no saving knowledge of, faith in, or fellowship with, God, but through him. Infinite was his condescension in becoming his Father's servant, and cheerfully yielding up himself to obedience and sufferings. And great is the glory to which he is advanced as his reward. It is a sure confirmation to our faith that all his predictions are exactly accomplished. And strong is the consolation to our souls that he is our new and living way to God and glory; and that he has risen from the dead, and in our nature ascended to heaven, to secure our interest there, and provide delightful mansions for us. In death, and at the resurrection, he will therefore receive us to, and keep us for ever with, himself. His life secures ours, spiritual and eternal; and his and his Father's presence, and his Spirit's indwelling influence, shall refresh and comfort our hearts; his peace allays our troubles and our fears; his answers to our prayers supply our wants; and his instructions and influences infallibly conduct us to the heavenly mansions, where we shall sit with him on his throne, and see him as he is. Astonishing is it that he should thus manifest himself unto us and not unto the world! And if we desire further discoveries of his glory, and experience of his goodness, let us love him, keep his commandments, and faithfully follow him whithersoever he goeth. And dying with him now, we shall experience, in resurrection glory, the blessedness of a good hope through faith.

FOR WE WRESTLE NOT AGAINST FLESH AND BLOOD, BUT AGAINST PRINCIPALITIES, AGAINST POWERS, AGAINST THE RULERS OF THE DARKNESS OF THIS WORLD, AGAINST SPIRITUAL WICKEDNESS IN HIGH PLACES.—Ephes vi. 12.

No. 87 continued.—[Lesson 88.]—The consolation and mutual love of Christ and his people, under the parable of the True Vine. 18 Comfort under the hatred and persecution of the world. 26 The office of the Holy Ghost.—John xv.

ANALYSIS.

Jno. xv. 1. Jesus is the True Vine, and his Father the husbandman.

—— 2. The different result of trial in the cases of the unfruitful and of the fruitful branches.

—— 3. The disciples made clean through Jesus' words.

—— 4. 5. Only by abiding in Christ can they be expected to bring forth fruit. He that abideth in Christ, and Christ in him, bringeth forth much fruit.

—— 6. He that abideth not in Christ is cast forth, withered, gathered by men, cast into the fire, burned.

—— 7. As abiding in Christ, and having his words abiding in us, our prayers are heard of God.

—— 8. It is by bringing forth much fruit that the disciples of Christ glorify his Father and act as becomes his disciples.

—— 9—11. Jesus intimates that he hath loved them, not only with the love of pity, but of complacency, as the Father hath loved Him; and he tells them how they may continue the objects of his delight, and have in themselves a fulness of joy.

—— 12, 13. What is implied in Christ's commandment, that they love one another, as he has loved them.

—— 14, 15. How they may enjoy his friendship. Why he calls them not servants but friends.

—— 16, 17. They have not chosen him, but he them; the design of their appointment, and their privilege in the case of bringing forth fruit perseveringly. Why he commands these things.

Jno. xv. 18, 19. Jesus shews why they may expect to be hated by the world.

—— 20, 21. He reminds them of what he had said, ch. xiii. 16; and again warns them to expect the same treatment as their Master, men being ignorant of Him by whom He was sent into the world.

—— 22, 23. Jesus declares the Jews' unbelief sinful and inexcusable. If he had not come and spoken unto them they would have been comparatively guiltless: in hating Him they hated also the Father.

—— 24. If he had not done among them works that gave full proof of his being the Son of God, and that his mission is approved of the Father, they would have been less guilty; but now they have seen and hated both Him and his Father.

—— 25. Even the unreasonable rejection of Jesus by the Jews may confirm the faith of his true disciples: that rejection being in fulfilment of Old Testament prophecy respecting him.

—— 26, 27. Beside his own witness, ver. 22, 23, and the Father's witness by works, ver. 24, and in the scriptures, ver. 25, Jesus shews that a double witness was yet to come forth respecting him—the witness of the Spirit of Truth, sent by him from the Father; and, secondly, the witness of the apostles, in their recording what they saw and heard, as having been with Jesus during his public ministry.

JOHN xv. 1—3.

1 I am the true vine ἡ ἀμπελος ἡ ἀληθινη, and my Father is the husbandman. 2, Every branch in me that-beareth not fruit he-taketh-away: and every branch that beareth 3 fruit, he-purgeth καθαιρει it, that it-may-bring-forth more fruit. Now ye are clean

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xv. 1. I am the true vine—In the blessing of Judah, there was a special reference to the vine—Ge. xlix. 11, 'Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine;'—Judah was a deceitful vine, although he gave promise of being the Lord's 'pleasant plant,' &c., Is. v. 7—the spreading vine of low stature that 'despised the oath by breaking the covenant,' Eze. xvii. 6—18—see also xix. 10—4—In opposition to the degenerate vine, Jesus was 'The True Vine.'

husbandman—see Mt. xxi. 33, § 84, p. 286—1 Co. iii 9, 'Ye are God's husbandry,' purgeth it—so with regard to Peter, ch. xiii. 6—10, 36—.8, pp. 366, .74. supra—who afterwards was eminently fruitful—see Ac. ii., iv., x., &c.

2. taketh away—exemplified in the case of Judas, ch. xiii. 26—30, supra, p. 372—see on Mt. xv. 13, § 44, p. 8.

3. clean through the word, &c.—We must use the word as the great instrument of cleansing, if we would have the intercession of Christ, ch. xvii. 17, p. 402, infra—'Divers washings' were imposed 'until the time of reformation,' He. ix. 10—but the true 'washing of water by the word,' Eph. v. 26, is, 1 Pe. i. 22, 'in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren,'—see on Mt. xvi. 17, § 50, p. 37, 'Simon.'

NOTES.

Jno. xv. 1. I am the true vine. As the nourishment of each branch or tendril of the vine that produces fruit passes through the main stem, so Jesus is the source of all blessing whereby our souls are nourished to eternal life. So the true bread, ch. vi. 32, § 43, p. 328.

[The Jewish church had been symbolized in the Old Testament by a choice vine, Ps. lxxx. 8—11; Is. v. 1—7; Je. ii. 21; but when this highly-favoured vine degenerated, it was threatened to be rooted up and superseded by the christian church, founded in Christ himself, as the true vine, of which his disciples were to be the members or branches.]

My Father is the husbandman. Is he who trains and cultivates the vine that it may bear fruit.

2. Every branch that beareth fruit. To bear fruit is to shew by our lives that we are under the influence of christian principles. Some branches of the vine are showy; while others, with more modest pretensions, and less luxuriant appearance, like the timid and humble believer, produce much fruit.

[He purgeth it. He pruneth. The branch which bears not fruit, the husbandman, αἱρει αὐτό, taketh IT away; but the branch that beareth fruit, καθαιρει αὐτό, he taketh away FROM it, i.e., he prunes away excrescences, and removes everything that might hinder its increasing fruitfulness.]

That it may bring forth more fruit. This is one of the noblest rewards God can bestow on former acts of obedience, to render us fit for more eminent service.

More fruit. πλειονα καρπον. Not only more fruit, but better in quality; for the difference between the works done under the gospel, and those of mere nature, is like that which exists between the fruit of wild, and that of cultivated, trees.

3. Ye are clean. καθαροί ἐστε, 'ye are pruned.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xv. 1, 2. It is only as united to Christ 'THE TRUE VINE,' and as humbly submitting ourselves unto the Father through him, that we can expect to bring forth fruit unto God.

[The unfruitful Christian must either be himself taken away, or else have that which occasions his unfruitfulness removed. Let us willingly submit to the most painful dispensations of Divine Providence, knowing that our heavenly Father intends our good in them all.]

[3 ver. Let the word of Christ be spoken in all faithfulness; and it will not only tend to the purification of believers, but to the purging out of false professors. Let his word—not the words of men—be the instrument of cutting off the unfruitful branches.]

4 ver. See margin.

LET US BE FOUND IN CHRIST FOR OUR JUSTIFICATION, AS WE WOULD HAVE HIM IN US FOR OUR SANCTIFICATION.

IT IS ONLY AS BEING SAVED BY HIS GRACE, THAT WE CAN BE FRUITFUL IN THE GRACES OF THE SPIRIT OF HOLINESS.

JOHN xv. 4—11.

4 καθαροι through the word which I-have-spoken unto-you. Abide in me, and-I in you.
As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it-abide in the vine; no-more can ye, 5 except ye-abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that-abideth in me, and-I in him, the-same bringeth-forth much fruit: for without χωρις me ye-can do 6 nothing. If a-man abide not in me, he-is-cast forth as a branch, and is-withered; and 7 men gather them, and cast them into the-fire, and they-are-burned. If ye-abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye-shall-ask what ye-will, and it-shall-be-done unto-you.
8 Herein is-my Father-glorified, that ye-bear much fruit; so shall-ye-be my disciples.
9 As the Father hath-loved me, so have I-loved you: continue-ye μειναατε in my love.
10 If ye-keep my commandments, ye-shall-abide in my love; even-as I have-kept my 11 Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These-things have-I-spoken unto-you,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xv. 4. Abide in me, &c.—In order that we be fruitful, we must not only become separate from uncleanness, ver. 2, 3, but we must simply depend upon Jesus, deriving from him all needful nourishment, Col. i. 6, 21, 3—see Jno. xiv. 20, p. 384, supra—The motives which truly influence to holy acting, spring from the consideration of our being in Christ, so Eph. iv. 32; v. 2—1 Jno. ii. 28, 'And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.'

I in you—If we would enjoy the comfort of knowing our abiding in Christ, we must be willing that he also abide in us, 1 Jno. v. 1—3, 13.

5. I am the vine, ye... the branches—Of the church of Rome, previous to her being cut off, it is said, Rom. xi. 18, 'Thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.'—When we are in Christ for our justification, and he is in us for our sanctification, 2 Pe. i. 1—4, we are to give all diligence that we be not 'unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ,' 5—9—see the fruit of the Spirit described, Ga. v. 22, .3; Eph. v. 9; Ja. iii. 17, .8.

much fruit—Ho. xiv. 8, 'From me is thy fruit found.'—It is when he feels his own utter worthlessness, turns from every creature dependence, and puts his trust simply in the Lord, that Israel will become abundantly fruitful, as described, ver. 5—8—Is. xxvii. 5, 6, 'Let him take hold of my strength, ... Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.'

6. Cast forth, &c.—see described the case of those communities who have lost confidence in Christ as their only and all-sufficient Saviour, and who have consequently become unfruitful—Is. xxvii. 11, 'When the boughs thereof are withered,' &c.—The Romans were thus threatened, ch. xi. 20—2—see on salt which has 'lost his savour,' Mt. v. 13, § 19, p. 122.

7. ye shall ask—see ver. 16, infra; Mt. vii. 7—11.

8. Herein is my Father glorified, &c.—Mt. v. 16, § 19, p. 123, 'May see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.'—1 Pe. ii. 12, 'May by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.'—Jno. xiv. 13, p. 382, 'That the Father may be glorified in the Son.'

9. As the Father, &c.—see ch. xvii. 24, infra.

10. If ye keep—see ch. xiii. 13—.7, 34, supra, pp. 367, .74; xiv. 15, supra, p. 382; 1 Jno. iv. 21.

my Father's commandments—ch. x. 17, .8, § 55, p. 116, 'Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, ... This commandment have I received of my Father.'—1 Jno. iv. 11, 'Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love,' &c.

NOTES.

[Jno. xv. 3. Through the word. And τον λογον, through that word—that doctrine of holiness which I have incessantly preached unto you, and which ye have received. Perhaps our Lord more immediately refers here to the words which he had spoken concerning Judas, ch. xiii. 21—30, p. 370, in consequence of which, Judas went out and finished his bargain with the chief priests; he being gone off, the body of the apostles was purified; and thus he might say, 'Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.']

4. Abide in me. Comp. ver. 7, 10, .2, .4, where our Lord points out to his disciples the means whereby they might abide in him.

And I in you. The sense is, That I also may abide in you.

5. Ye are the branches. The apostles were to receive nourishment from the grace of the Lord; and to spread abroad, declaring the goodness of God in the abundant blessing presented in the gospel.

Without me. Or, 'severed from me.'

7. My words. My doctrine; my commandments.

Abide in you. Not only are remembered, but are suffered to remain in you as a living principle, to regulate your affections and life.

Ye shall ask. Prayers themselves are a fruit of faith, and they produce more fruit.

8. Herein is my Father glorified. God is honoured in the sight of men, when his children do good as they have opportunity. In so doing they imitate God, and the world sees that the whole tendency of the Divine administration and character is to produce in us that which is lovely, and true, and honest, and of good report.—Comp. Mic. vii. 20, § 19, p. 140; Ph. iv. 8.

That ye bear much fruit. Always abounding in the work of the Lord. This honours God, and makes men speak to his praise.

So shall ye be my disciples. This is a true test of character. It is not by profession, but it is by a holy life, that the character is tried.

9. Continue ye in my love. That is, as appears from the words immediately preceding, 'continue to be loved by me; continue to possess that love with which I at present love you.'

10. Ye shall abide in my love. Enjoy its continuance.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xv. 5. Let us never forget that it is by bringing forth much fruit, our discipleship is to be known. It is only by having our life in and from Christ, that fruitfulness can be at all produced in us. Our trust must be simply in Christ, and let us manifest this, not by merely abstaining from evil, but by bringing forth much fruit unto God.

[6 ver. That which is here spoken of an individual, is true of a church: when it ceases to look to Christ alone for life, it ceases to have life from him; it is withered, and is then gathered by the hands of men: it goes into the furnace, not for purification, but for consumption. It is not as being gathered together by man, but as abiding in the Lord, that the churches are placed in safety.]

7 ver As trusting entirely in Christ our all-powerful Intercessor, and as having his Spirit making intercession in us, we ask according to the mind of God, and so as to receive whatever we ask.

8 ver. See margin.

[9 ver. The Father loved the Son, having delight in him who was obedient in all things, even unto death. O that we may enjoy and continue in the love of the Son, as he abode in the love of the Father!]

10 ver. By doing as our Lord has commanded may we be such as He can delight in—disciples whom Jesus loves. It was thus that he honoured the Father; and thus was he honoured of Him.

11 ver. Let us know the instructions of Christ, and diligently follow them; as we desire that he should have joy in us, and we the fulness of joy in Him.

JOHN xv. 12—.6.

12 that my joy ἡ χαρα ἡ ἐμη might-remain in you, and that your joy might-be-full. This is my commandment ἡ ἐντολη ἡ ἐμη, That ye-love one-another, as I-have-loved you.
13 Greater love hath no-man than-this, that a-man lay-down his life for his friends.
14 Ye are my friends, if ye-do whatsoever I command you. 15, Henceforth-'I-call you'-not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I-have-called you friends; for all-things that I-have-heard of my Father I-have-made-known unto-you.
16 Ye have-not-chosen ἐξελεξασθε me, but I have-chosen you, and ordained ἐθηκα you, that ye should-go and bring-forth fruit, and that your fruit should-remain: that what-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xv. 11. my joy, &c.—ch. xvi. 24, infra, p. 396; xvii. 13, infra, p. 402; 1 Jno. i. 4.

12. my commandment, &c.—see on ch. xiii. 34, p. 374.

13 Greater love hath, &c.—1 Jno. iii. 16. 'Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us:'—so iv. 9, 10—see also Jno. iii. 16, § 12, p. 86; x. 11, .8, § 55, pp. 115, .7; Rom. v. 7, 8; Eph. v. 2; 1 Pe. iii. 18.

14. friends—Abraham, who 'believed in the Lord,' Ge. xv. 6, having also acted according to the law of love, xiii. 8, 9; xiv. 22—4; xviii. 1—8—' was called the Frn of God,' Ja. ii. 23—see Is. xli. 8.

15. friends; for all, &c.—Ge. xviii. 17, 'The LORD said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?'—Ps. xxv. 14, 'The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him; and he will shew them his covenant.'

have made known, &c.—ch. xvii. 8, 26, p. 400, infra—When the Lord, Psa. cxlvii. 2, 'gathereth together the outcasts of Israel,' it will be said, ver. 11, 'The LORD taketh pleasure in them that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy.'—19, 20, 'He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation:'

16. Ye have not, &c.—1 Jno. iv. 10, 'Not that we loved God,' &c.

I have chosen you—Is. xli. 8, 9, 'But thou, Israel, art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away.'

ordained you—The choosing of the twelve apostles is mentioned, Lu. vi. 13—.6, § 27, p. 206—see also Mt. x. 1, § 39, p. 294—Our Lord had before referred to his having chosen them, Jno. vi. 70, § 43, p. 334; xiii. 18, p. 370, supra.

that ye should go—Mt. x. 6, § 39, p. 295. 'Go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.'—See also xxviii. 19, § 96; Mk. xvi. 15, § 98.

and bring forth fruit—The gospel, Col. i. 6, 'is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth:'

and that your fruit should remain—Is. lv. 11, 'So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the

NOTES.

[Jno. xv. 11. That my joy, &c. 'That is, as the best commentators explain, "that my joy in you [as your love, faith, and obedience] may be enduring, and that your joy [continuing in my love] may be complete and perfect."—See ch. xvi. 24, 33, p. 396; xvii. 13, p. 401; 1 Jno. i. 4; 2 Jno., ver. 12. Χαρὰ ἐν ἡμῖν denotes "joy felt on your account," and is distinguished from ἡ χαρὰ ἡμῶν.'—Bloomf.]

12. This is my commandment. The peculiar law of Christianity, called hence the new commandment.—See ch. xiii. 34, p. 374.

As I have loved you. That is, with the same kind of tender affection, willing to endure trials, to practise self-denials, and, if need be, to lay down your lives for each other, 1 Jno. iii. 16.

[13. Greater love, &c. 'The connection of this verse with ver. 12, will appear from supplying after it some such words as these:—"This love I am about to shew towards you (see NOTE, ch. x. 15, § 55, p. 116), and ye must be prepared to shew the like towards one another."—Comp 1 Jno. iii. 16.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

It greatly enhances the love of Christ, that while the instances of those who have been willing to die for friends have been so rare, he was willing to die for enemies—bitter foes, who rejected his reign, persecuted him, reviled him, and sought his life, 1 Jno. iv. 10; Rom. v. 6—10. It also shews us the extent of his love, that he gave himself up, not to common sufferings, but to the most bitter, painful, and protracted, that man had devised, and that he thus suffered, not for himself, not for friends, but for a thoughtless and unbelieving world.

[15. Henceforth I call you not, &c. 'The full sense hers (not very clearly developed) may best be expressed by the following paraphrastic version: '[I say friends; for] I no longer style you servants, since the servant [differeth from the friend, inasmuch as he] knoweth not what his master is doing (i.e., his plans of action). But you I call friends, [and as such I have treated you,] since whatsoever I have learned from my Father I have made known to you, [thus treating you with the most unreserved confidence,] called them servants, though he had not treated them as such.'—Bloomf.]

[All things, &c. 'Expressing in general terms the freeness with which our Lord had communicated to the apostles what he had heard from his Father: and not as meaning literally that he had already made known to them all things which he was commissioned by his Father to teach them; for many of these things were kept back from them for the present.—Comp. ch. xvi. 12; xvii. 26, p. 401.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

16. Ye have not chosen me. Ye have not elected me as your Teacher: I have called you to be my disciples; witnesses and depositories of the truth. It was customary among the Jews for every person to choose his own teacher. This is said to excite them to gratitude and obedience, by shewing them that the obligation was all on their side. By his effectual sovereign grace he called them to the honourable office of apostles.

Bring forth fruit. That you should be rich in good works; faithful and successful in spreading my

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xv. 12. How kind the commandment of Christ, that we love one another! But ah! how difficult to love, like Him, through life, and even unto death, such erring, faithless creatures as we are. Do we not sometimes find it difficult even to bear with each other? We must look to our Divine Pattern, if we would possess a copy of the love which was, and is, in Christ towards us.]

13 ver. With what kindness does the Saviour introduce his disciples to each other! He calls them his friends whom he hath redeemed with his own blood. Can they then dislike or despise each other? Can we treat with indifference the friends of Him who died for us, and who hath directed us to shew our gratitude unto Him, by our kindness to each other?

14 ver. It is alone in the way of humble obedience that we can become truly exalted. Let us shew that we are indeed the friends of Jesus, by our acknowledging his right to rule over us.

15 ver. See margin.

[16 ver. Be it ours to submit entirely to the disposal of our Lord, who hath bought us for himself

JOHN XV. 17—22.

17 soever ye-shall-ask of the Father in my name, he-may-give it you. These-things I-18 command you, that ye-love one-another. If the world hate you, ye-know that it-hated 19 me before it hated you. If ye-were of the world, the world would love his-own to a-love:
but because ye-are not of the world, but I have-chosen you out-of the world, therefore 20 the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto-you, The-servant is not greater than his lord. If they-have-persecuted me, they-will-also-persecute you; if 21 they-have-kept my saying, they-will-keep your's also. But all these-things will-they-do 22 unto-you for my name's-sake, because they-know not him that-sent me. If I-had-not-come and spoken unto-them, they-had-not-had sin: but now they-have no cloke

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

thing whereto I sent it.'—So Isa. 21; lxi. 1—3, —The work must abide the trial by fire, 1 Co. iii. 12—5—1 Jno. ii. 28, 'Abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.'—2 Jno., ver. 8, 'Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.'

Jno. xv. 16. that whatsoever, &c.—1 Jno. iii. 22, 3, 'And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him,' &c.

18. If the world hate you—see Mt. x. 25, § 39, p. 300—1 Jno. iii. 13, 'Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.'

19. the world would love his own—1 Jno. iv. 5.

ye are not of the world—The same recognised, ch. xvii. 14, infra, p. 402.

chosen you out of, &c.—2 Co. vi. 17, 'Wherefore come out from among them,' &c.—1 Pe. ii. 9, 'A peculiar people;'—who must be prepared to 'suffer for righteousness' sake,' iii. 14—8—and for having separated from the world, iv. 2—6.

20. Remember the word—which he spoke at the time of their appointment to the apostleship, Lu. vi. 40, § 27, p. 209—see also Mt. x. 17, 24, § 39, pp. 298, 300, 'The disciple is not above his master,'—see on Mk. viii. 34, § 50, p. 42, 'And follow me.'

persecuted me, &c.—ch vii. 1, § 52, p. 71, 'The Jews sought to kill him.'—Lu. xiii. 31, § 66, p. 178, 'Depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.'—The Saviour's words were soon fulfilled, Ac. v. 17, 8; xii. 1—3.

kept my saying, &c.—They watched Jesus that they might catch him in his words, Lu. xi. 53, 4, § 62, p. 157; xx. 20, § 84, p. 236—Fulfilment to the disciples, Ac. vi. 13, 4.

21. my name's sake, &c.—1 Pe. iv. 12—4.

know not—Rom. x. 2, 'I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.'—1 Co. ii. 8, 'Which none of the princes of this world knew:'

22. spoken unto them—They had acknowledged the superiority of his teaching, Mt. vii. 28, 9, § 19, p. 142; Jno. vii. 46, § 55, p. 95—ix. 41, § 85, p. 113, 'If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.'

no cloke—Lu. xii. 47, § 63, p. 168, 'That servant, which knew his lord's will,' &c.—As having the light of nature, we are without excuse, Rom. i. 20, 1, 32—Much more were the Jews, as being instructed out of the law, ii. 17, 8, 23—see also 2 Pe. ii. 20, 2.

NOTES.

gospel. This was the great business to which they were set apart, and this they faithfully accomplished. It may be added, that this is the great end for which Christians are chosen. It is to do good, and to spread abroad the rich temporal and spiritual blessings which the gospel is fitted to confer on mankind.

Jno. xv. 18—21. If the world hate you, &c. Having given the above injunction to mutual love, our Lord adverts to what would afford an additional argument for its cultivation, the hatred of the world towards them; and fortifies them against the persecutions to which they would be thereby exposed, by the consideration that whatever they may have to endure, is no more than their Master has endured before them.

19. If ye were of the world. Ἐκ, as it properly denotes descent from, so it may very well figuratively import affinity to. Render, 'If ye had been of the world, the world would have loved its own.'

21. Because they know not, &c. διὰ τοῦτο. Importing not an involuntary ignorance, but self-produced blindness, as to the true nature of the evidence for a Divine legation. And in all ages and nations, they who know not God, will for this cause hate and persecute those who do.

[22. And spoken unto them. Declared unto them the will of God, and made known his requirements. Jesus had not less by his own arguments shewn that he was the Messiah, and truly commissioned by God, than he had by his miracles. By both these kinds of proof their guilt was to be measured.—See ver. 26. No small part of the gospel of John consists of arguments by the Saviour to convince the Jews that he came from God. He here says if he had not used these arguments, and proved to them his Divine mission, they had not had sin. And this sin, and the punishment to which it exposed them, remain; for they still reject the Lord who bought them.]

They had not had sin. That is, their rejection of

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

with his own blood; and unto whose sovereign grace we are to ascribe whatever we are according to the will of God. May we feel that we are given our position, not by our own power, but according to the design of God, that we should be his messengers to the nations.]

[If we desire that God should hear and answer our requests, then let us see that we answer the design of God, in the case of those to whom we are sent, or among whom we are placed: but let not our confidence in prayer be grounded upon our own performances; it is only in the name of Jesus that we can approach our heavenly Father acceptably.]

[Jno. xv. 17. Let us shew the truthfulness of our service to Christ, by our love one to another. Our love one to another can only be maintained by our continuing to bring forth fruit unto God in prayerful dependence upon the supplies of his grace, through the Son of his love.]

The bringing forth fruit by missionary exertion, and otherwise doing good in the world, looking to God for direction and blessing, is the best way for sustaining love among the brethren. If Christians neglect communion with God, and philanthropic effort, they will not long enjoy the blessing of brotherly love among themselves.

18, 9 ver. The Christian must not be cast down on account of being hated by the world. Let us look to our Lord, and see what he suffered, although he was perfection itself, and the very Delight of God.

[It is expected of even the world, that it love its own. How much more should we esteem and cherish those who are in Christ Jesus, and who require the manifestation of our love the more, on account of their being hated by the world!]

[20 ver. The Christian should not complain, if he suffer the like contempt and persecution from the world which Christ hath suffered for him. After all his forewarnings, are we surprised that we have to follow the Captain of our salvation in painful conflict with the powers of darkness?]

Our Lord does not approve of his disciples indulging in vain expectations. He would have them so forewarned of opposition and discouragements, as that they may never be disconcerted, and may always have to thank God that their sufferings are so light, and their mercies so many and so great.

[21 ver. Lamentable is the world's ignorance, not

WHAT OVERWEENING PRIDE WOULD IT BE IN US, TO SUPPOSE THAT WE OUGHT TO BE EXEMPT FROM THOSE INDIGNITIES TO WHICH THE SON OF GOD WAS FOR OUR SAKES EXPOSED!

JOHN xv. 23—.7.

23 προφασιν for their sin. He that-hateth me hateth my Father also. 24, If I-had-not-done among them the works which none-other-man did, they-had-not-had sin: but 25 now have-they-both-seen and hated both me and my Father. But this cometh to pass, that the word might-be-fulfilled that is-written in their law, They-hated me without-a-
26 cause δωρεαν. But when the Comforter is-come, whom I will-send unto-you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall-testify of 27 me: and ye also shall-bear-witness, because ye-have-been with me from the-beginning.*

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xv. 23. He that hateth, &c.—1 Jno. ii. 23—Let us beware of flattering unbelieving Jews with the lies that they are the people of the God of Abraham, Jno. viii. 44, § 55, p. 106.

24. works—ch. vii. 31, § 55, p. 94; Ac. ii. 22.

seen—ch. xiv. 9, supra, p. 381, 'He that hath seen me hath seen the Father;'

and hated, &c.—see ver. 23—so that in them was to be fulfilled the threatening against idolaters, the breakers of the second commandment; and it has been fulfilled in the Jews, notwithstanding their supposed freedom from idolatry—Ex. xx. 5, 'I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto,' &c.

25. But . . . . that the word might be fulfilled—The word written in the second commandment as above, see on ver. 20—Ps. xxxv. 19, 'Mine enemies wrongfully,' &c.—lxix. 4—9, 'They that hate me without a cause,' &c.—cix. 3, 'Fought against me without a cause.'—God would not execute the long-threatened wrath until he had utterly left them without excuse, until they had indeed hated him gratuitously, Is. lxv. 2, 6, 7; Mt. xxiv. 34—.7, § 86, p. 340.

26. the Comforter—see on ch. xiv. 16, supra, p. 383.

from the Father—Rom. viii. 15, 'The Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.'

the Spirit of truth—see ch. xiv. 17, p. 383.

shall testify of me—It is the special work of the Spirit to testify of Jesus; and the Spirit of God is by this to be distinguished from the spirit of error, 1 Co. xii. 3; 1 Jno. iv. 2, 3.

27. ye also shall bear witness—see on Lu. i. 2, § 1.

NOTES.

me would not have been laid to their charge. The rejection of the Messiah was the great crowning act of rebellion which brought down the vengeance of God, and laid on their peculiar national calamities.

[Jno. xv. 24. But now have they both seen, &c. 'That is, But now they have seen both me working, and my Father working in me—comp. ch. xiv. 9—11, p. 382—and yet have hated and rejected us both; so that they are without excuse.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

[25. Written in their law. See on ch. x. 34, § 56, p. 122. These words are taken from Ps. lxix. 4. This psalm is applied to Christ, Jno. ii. 17, § 12, p. 81; xix. 28, § 91, p. 467; to the vengeance of God against Judæa, Ac. i. 20. The psalm seems entirely prophetic of Christ. His deep abasement is referred to, ver. 2—5; his prayer for his people and followers, ver. 6; that for himself, in the garden of Gethsemane, ver. 15—.9; his crucifixion, ver. 20—.2; the vengeance of God against the Jews, from ver. 23—.9; the glorious manner in which he gets out of all his sufferings, ver. 30; the abolition of the Mosaic rites and ceremonies, ver. 31, compared with Is. lxvi. 3; and, finally, the establishment of the gospel through the whole world, in the 33rd and following verses. The reader will do well to consult the psalm.'—A. C.]

26. The Comforter . . . . the Spirit of truth. See NOTES on ch. xiv. 16, .7, p. 383.

[Whom I will send unto you from the Father. 'Our Lord, having in ch. xiv. 16, 26, pp. 383, .4, told the apostles that, at his desire, the Father would send the Holy Ghost to them here, and in xvi. 7, p. 393, declares that he himself "will send" the Holy Ghost to them "from the Father"—comp. Ac. ii. 33—thus shewing himself to be "in the bosom of the Father"—comp. Jno. i. 18, § 7, p. 46—and one in will, power, and nature, with the Father.—See NOTES, ch. i. 1, [§ ib. p. 46].'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

Which proceedeth from the Father. 'These words, when taken together with that which is said of the sending of the Holy Ghost "from the Father," and by both the Father and the Son—see preceding note—shew a perfect unity of nature in the Three Persons of the Trinity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.'—Ibid.

[26, .7. He shall testify . . . . and ye also shall bear witness. 'The connection here is obscure, and has therefore been disputed. . . . . The true connection is, I apprehend, best pointed out by Calvin, as follows:—"The world will indeed persecute you; your doctrine will be mocked at by some, and be reviled by others; but no violence of men will be able to shake the firmness of your faith, when the Holy Spirit shall have been given unto you, to confirm and stablish you by his testimony."'—Bloomf.]

27. From the beginning. This qualification in their selection of one in the room of Judas, the apostles were careful to observe, Ac. i. 21—.6.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

so much of worldly things, as of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; ignorance of the message and evidence to the mission of the Son of God, the Saviour of the world. Let us seek to make persecution cease, by making the world better acquainted with the truth which it opposes, and against which we may well expect that war should be waged by the powers of darkness.]

Jno. xv. 22. See margin.

[23 ver. He who rejects the Saviour is not to be acknowledged as a worshipper of the true God, who can only be approached in Christ Jesus. The unbelieving Jews, although not like their idolatrous fathers, were yet contemplated in the second commandment, in which God threatens to visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate him.]

[24 ver. Let us beware of treating with indifference the seal of the Most High God. Let us not only attend to the written word of God, but behold Him in his working as foretold in the scriptures. The Jews boasted of their reverence for the words of God, but they regarded not the operation of his hands—the revelation which God was making of himself in their own day: this was their sin and their destruction. May our hearts be ever open for the living God.]

25 ver. Those who have the scriptures, and yet refuse to see their fulfilment, are likely to have the scriptures fulfilled in their own condemnation, to the confirmation of the true believer.

26 ver. May we, as being true believers, know that the Holy Ghost is the Comforter, sent by the Son, from the Father.

[27 ver. Although the great witness for Jesus is the Living Spirit of God; yet this is not to prevent, but encourage man in bearing testimony to the truth. The witness of the apostles with regard to what they had seen and heard during their attendance upon Christ, in his going about doing good, has been put upon record in the gospels, affording indubitable evidence to the truth that Jesus is indeed the Christ, the Son of the living God.]

[Having been with Jesus from the beginning, the disciples were especially qualified to testify of his identity when raised from the dead. And this was the subject of the united testimony of them and of the Holy Ghost, Ac. iv. 33.—See Ac. ii. 3, 'How shall we,' &c.]

* [Our Lord has throughout this discourse a principal reference to the apostles; but it may be observed that—1. The spiritual union spoken of by Christ is not necessary for the primitive disciples alone, but

LET US REJOICE WITH TREMBLING WHEN WE CONTEMPLATE OUR PRIVILEGES WITH REGARD TO THE GOSPEL.

HAVE OUR UNDERSTANDINGS BEEN ENLIGHTENED BY THIS SPIRIT OF TRUTH? HAVE OUR HEARTS BEEN REJOICED BY THE COMFORTER?

No. 87 continued.—[Lesson 89.]—Christ fortifieth his disciples against tribulation by the promise of the Holy Ghost, and of his resurrection and ascension: 23 their prayers made in his name acceptable to his Father. 33 Peace in Christ.—John xvi.

ANALYSIS.

Jno. xvi. 1—3. Jesus forewarns his disciples that the time approaches when through ignorance their brethren will think that by putting them to death they are doing God service.

—— 4. Jesus tells them why he so forewarns them, and did not, so plainly, at the beginning.

—— 5, 6. None of the disciples now ask whither Jesus is going; sorrow having so filled them.

—— 7. It is 'THE TRUTH;' and it is also expedient for them that he go away: without this the Comforter cannot come.

—— 8. The Comforter having come, will convince the world of sin, &c.

—— 9. How convince of sin.

—— 10. How convince of righteousness.

—— 11. How convince of judgment.

—— 12, .3. The disciples cannot yet bear all that Jesus has to communicate: but the Spirit of truth, when come, will guide them into all truth.

—— 14, .5. The Spirit will glorify Jesus—shewing that what belongs to the Father, belongs also to the Son.

Jno. xvi. 16—.8. Jesus speaks enigmatically of his death and resurrection.

—— 19—22. He replies to their unexpressed desire to know the import of his words; comparing their approaching anguish and subsequent joy to those attendant upon the birth of a man child.

—— 23, .4. Jesus encourages the disciples to ask the Father in his name.

—— 25—.7. These things have been spoken in proverbs, but the time approaches when he will shew them plainly of the Father: then they will ask in his name, and will know the Father's love for them, as having loved and believed in the Son.

—— 28. He tells them of his pre-existence with the Father and his incarnation, also of his ascension and glorification.

—— 29, 30. The disciples acknowledge that now he speaks plainly; and thus speaking to their thoughts, he gives evidence of his Divine origin.

—— 31, .2. Jesus questions whether they believe; saying, that the hour is come when they will all be scattered, leaving him alone with the Father.

—— 33. These things Jesus has spoken, that in him the disciples may have peace.

JOHN xvi. 1—3.

1 These-things have-I-spoken unto-you, that ye-should-not'-be-offended. 2 They-shall-put you out-of-the-synagogues: yea, the-time cometh, that whosoever killeth you 3 will-think that-he-doeth προσφερειν God service λατρειαν. And these-things will-they-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvi. 1. These things, &c.—Jesus had forewarned his disciples of the hatred they were to meet with from the world, ch. xv. 18, .9, supra, p. 390—They were to be dealt with as their Lord had been, ver. 20—The guilt of their persecutors was that of ignorance, ver. 21—but it is implied that their own guilt would be greater, should they be offended in Jesus, after having so much better opportunity of hearing his words and beholding his works, ver. 22—.4, and having such promise of Divine aid, ver. 26, .7.

offended—so John the Baptist, Mt. xi. 6, [Lu. vii. 23,] § 29, p. 223—The stony ground hearer, xiii. 20, .1, § 33, p. 255, 'when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.'—xxiv. 10, § 80, p. 328—comp. 1 Th. iii. 3, 4, 'That no man should be moved by these afflictions:' &c.—1 Pe. v. 9, 'knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.'

2. out of the synagogues—Thus literally they had dealt with Jesus, Lu. iv. 28, .9, § 15, p. 105—The Jews had already agreed to excommunicate those who confessed him to be the Christ, Jno. ix. 22, § 55, p. 111—and they had acted accordingly, ver. 34, p. 113—xii. 42, .3, § 85, p. 310, 'Among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved,' &c.

whosoever killeth you—This was soon fulfilled in Stephen's case, Ac. vii. 58, .9—comp. viii. 1; ix. 1, 2.

God service—Paul, when a religious Pharisee, verily thought with himself that he 'ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus,' Ac. xxvi. 9—11—He mentions it as an evidence of his zeal for the Jewish religion, that he had persecuted 'the church;' Ph. iii. 6—He was perfectly sincere, doing 'it ignorantly in unbelief,' 1 Ti. i. 13—Pr. xiv. 12, 'There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.'

NOTES.

Jno. xvi. 1. These things, &c. See SCRIP. ILLUS.

Not be offended. See on Mt. v. 29, § 19, p. 125. ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε, 'that ye should not be stumbled.'

2. They shall put you out of the synagogues. They will excommunicate you, and consider you as execrable, and utterly unworthy to hold any commerce with God by religion, or with man by civil fellowship. In these excommunications they were spoiled of all their substance—see Ezr. x. 8; see also Ho. x. 34—and deprived of their character, their influence, and every necessary of life.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra, and NOTE, ch. ix. 22, § 55, p. 111.

[Whosoever killeth . . . God service. ὅδεν λατρείαν προσφέρειν ν. ϑ. 'Λατρεύειν properly signifies, "to serve any one as a slave." But in the New Test., and Sept., it is always used to denote the offering of sacrifice, or rendering worship and service of any kind. Hence λατρεία denotes religious service: and (especially as προσφέρειν is a sacrificial term) προσφέρειν λατρείαν will signify "to offer a sacrifice," or a religious service in general. The sense then is, "He will think he is rendering an acceptable religious service to God." Doddridge thinks there is here an allusion to such sort of deeds as the assassination of Paul, planned by the forty conspirators—see Ac. xxiii.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xvi. 1. We should endeavour to become well acquainted with the forewarnings of prophecy, that so we may be prepared for those persecutions or tribulations by which we might otherwise be caused to stumble in our christian course.

2 ver. The Christian should be prepared to bear testimony for the truth, whatever the opposition, or however great the sacrifice.—See margin. It is not enough that we are sincere; let us see that our sincerity is according to truth.

also for all who would be Christians on earth, and beatified spirits in heaven.—2. The brotherly love here inculcated is the duty and interest of every christian soul on the face of the earth.—3. The necessity of adorning the christian profession, by bringing forth corresponding fruits, is the duty of all who name the name of the Lord Jesus.—4. The appointment to, and preparation for, the work of the sacred ministry, must ever be primarily with Christ: for those who have no higher authority than that which they derive from man, are never likely to be useful in christianizing the world.—5. The persecution to which the apostles were exposed, has been the common lot of Christians from the foundation of Christianity.—6. The consolations and influences of Christ's Spirit have not been the exclusive privileges of the apostles; they are the birthright of all the sons and daughters of God.]

CAUSE ME TO HEAR THY LOVINGKINDNESS IN THE MORNING; FOR IN THEE DO I TRUST:. CAUSE ME TO KNOW THE WAY WHEREIN I SHOULD WALK; FOR I LIFT UP MY SOUL UNTO THEE.—Psa. cxliii. 8.

JOHN xvi. 4—10.

4 do unto-you, because they-have-not-known the Father, nor me. But these-things have-I-told you, that when the time shall-come, ye-may-remember that I told you of-them. And these-things I-said not unto-you at-the-beginning, because I-was with you.
5 But now I-go-my-way to him that-sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest-
6 thou? But because I-have-said these-things unto-you, sorrow hath-filled your heart.
7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it-is-expedient for-you that I go-away: for if I-go-not-away, the Comforter will-not-come unto you; but if I-depart, I-will-send him 8 unto you. And when-he-is-come, he-will-reprove ελεγξει the world of sin, and of 9 righteousness, and of judgment: of sin, because they-believe not on me; 10, of righte-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvi 3. have not known, &c.—But he had said to his disciples, ch. xiv. 7, supra, p. 381, 'from henceforth ye know him.'—Their guilt therefore would have been greater than that of their unbelieving brethren, had they turned away 'from the holy commandment,' 2 Pe. ii. 21—The fact that men religiously do wrong, thinking it to be right, may well make 'us search and try our ways,' La. iii. 40—but it is a less awful state than that of those whose conduct is inconsistent with their convictions of right, Lu. xii. 47, .8, § 63, p 168; Ja. iv. 17.

4. that when the time, &c.—For the confirmation of their faith in the fulfilment of prophecy, he had already predicted his betrayal by one of the twelve, ch. xiii. 18, .9, p. 370, supra—and spoken of the Father's blessing them, x.v. 26—.9, p. 385, supra.

said not unto you, &c.—He had forewarned of persecution, Mt. v. 11, .2, § 19, p. 122—and when he sent them forth, he had faithfully pointed out the dangers of the way, x. 16—25, § 39, pp. 238—300—but he here intimates that much as he had said, they were not as yet duly impressed with the importance of the subject—comp. xxvi. 56, § 88. p. 421.

I was with you—Mt. ix. 15, § 36, p. 278—' Can,' &c.

5. Whither goest thou?—If they had rightly inquired into what our Lord had said on the subject, they would have found cause of rejoicing—ch. xiv. 28, p. 385, supra, 'I go unto the Father:'—xiv. 2, p. 380, supra, 'I go to prepare a place for you.'—Not only for their future enjoyment in glory, but also for their present enjoyment of grace—xvi. 7, supra, 'If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you;'

7. I tell you the truth, &c.—It was not merely a truth that it was good for the disciples Jesus should go away, as was proved when the Holy Ghost did come upon them, Ac. ii., but it was 'the truth' of the Old Testament types—The High Priest had first to enter within the vail, ere the worshippers could have the comfortable assurance of their acceptance with God, by the knowledge that He who appeared for them died not, Ex. xxviii. 35—so were the disciples to know that He who hath entered for us 'into heaven itself' ever liveth to make, &c., He. ix. 23—.8, &c.

the Comforter, &c.—He was to come forth and lead the waiting worshippers into sympathy with the intercession of our Advocate within the vail, ch. xiv. 16, .6, p. 382, supra; Rom. viii. 26, .7.

8. And when he is come—'The firstfruits of the Spirit' were given in the apostolic age, Rom. viii. 23, but the fulness of the blessing was yet to be given—comp. 1 Co. xiii. 9, 10, with Eph. iv. 12, .3.

he will reprove—or convince—the same word is used, ch. viii. 46, § 55, p.106—see NOTE, infra, ver. 8—11.

of sin—Peter convicted the Jews of their sin—the sin of rejecting their King, Ac. iii. 13—.8.

of righteousness—As the Father testified of Jesus, as being his beloved Son in whom he is well pleased, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55, so the Spirit, by Peter, reasoned concerning 'the LORD our righteousness.'—Our great High Priest, who has been accepted in heaven, and through whom there is the blotting out of sin, Ac. iii. 19—21.

and of judgment—Peter, after convincing of sin and of righteousness, proceeded to speak of the judgment which shall fall upon those who refuse to obey 'the Holy One and the Just,' Ac. iii. 22—.4—so Paul, after having spoken 'concerning the faith in Christ,' proceeded to reason 'of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come,' xxiv. 24, .5.

9. because they believe not on me—Not having faith in him who hath done so much to win our confidence, Rom. v. 7, .8, see margin, p. 374, is the blackest ingratitude, and one of the worst crimes; and on every one that is guilty of this crime, 'the wrath of God abideth,' Jno. iii 36, § 13, p. 91; He. x. 29.

NOTES.

14, seq.—and in which they gloried: and certain it is that the greatest enormities recorded in Josephus were perpetrated by the Zelotæ, who originally were religious zealots.'—Bloomf.]—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

Jno. xvi. 3. Because they have not known the Father. See on ch. xv. 25, p. 391. 'Ignorance of the benevolence of GOD, and of the philanthropy of CHRIST, is the grand fountain of all religious persecution.'—A. C.

7. The Comforter. The Spirit is represented as being to the church in the place of Christ, and for this reason is styled 'the Comforter,' because his proper office is to comfort the faithful with his gifts and graces until our Lord's second coming.

8. He will reprove. Marg. 'convince.' 'Ελέγξει. He will demonstrate these matters so clearly, as to leave no doubt on the minds of those who are simple of heart; and so fully, as to confound and shut the mouths of those who are gainsayers.—See Ac. ii 1, &c.

[Reprove. ἐλέγξει. 'It is difficult to give in one word the deep meaning; "convince" approaches perhaps the nearest to it, but does not express the double sense of ἐλέγχειν, which is manifestly here intended—of a convincing unto salvation and a convicting unto condemnation: "reprove" is far too weak, conveying merely the idea of an objective rebuke; whereas ἐλέγξει reaches unto the heart, and works subjectively in both the above-mentioned ways. . . . The effect of the ἐλέγχος of the Divine Spirit in the world may be to harden; but its aim is the deliverance of the world.'—Alford.]

Of righteousness. Of his righteousness and innocence; of the justice of his cause, and the perfection of his obedience to the Divine will.

Of judgment. That is, Divine judgment, soon to be manifested in the punishment of an incredulous nation, and in defence of the truth.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xvi. 3. Those who have been brought into fellowship with the Father and the Son may be expected to love and cherish the children of God, the brethren of Christ. As we desire to extinguish the fire of persecution, let us spread abroad the knowledge of redeeming love.

4 ver. Let us attend to what our Saviour is pleased to communicate; although it may give us present pain, it will at some future period be found useful.

[7 ver. How difficult it has been to communicate to man the truth of God regarding his salvation! By prophet and priest, the atonement and intercession of our Blessed Redeemer were pointed forward to from the beginning: and yet those who were the most favoured with revelation were unprepared to acknowledge a suffering Saviour. By the coming of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the world was given abundant evidence that Jesus was indeed the Christ, and that men are guilty in neglecting to obey the Father by putting their trust in his beloved Son.]

9 ver. May we see and avoid the sin of not believing in Him to whom the Law and the Prophets bear witness; and who is commended to our belief by so

JOHN xvi. 11—.3.

11 ousness, because I-go to my Father, and ye-see θεωρειτε me no more; of judgment, 12 because the prince of this world is-judged. I-have yet many-things to-say unto-you, but 13 ye-can not bear βασταζειν them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is-come, he-will-guide you into all truth: for he-shall-not-speak of himself; but whatsoever he-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvi. 10. because I go to my Father—It is by his going away that Jesus hath brought 'in everlasting righteousness,' as predicted, Da. ix. 24—see Ke. ix. 11, .2—To this proof of the innocence of Jesus the apostles often refer. Ac. ii. 22—.4; xvii. 31; Rom. i. 4; 1 Ti. iii. 16—1 Co. i. 30, 'Of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption:'

12. I have yet many things—Eph. iii. 5, 'Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto the holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;'

ye can not bear them now—so even after his resurrection, he says to them, Ac. i. 7, 8, § 98, 'It is not for you to know the times . . . . But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you:'

—so the apostle, 1 Co. iii. 2, 'I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it.'—He. v. 11, 'We have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.'

13. the Spirit of truth—so called, ch. xiv. 17, p. 383, supra; xv. 26, p. 391, supra.

will guide you into all truth—1 Co. ii. 10, 'For the Spirit searcheth all things.'—He. iv. 13, 'All things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.'—1 Jno. ii. 27, 'The same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie,' &c.

whatsoever he shall hear—The Father hath said of the Son, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 56. 'Hear ye him.'—And the Son hath said, Rev. iii. 7, 'He that hath an ear, let

NOTES.

Jno. xvi. 10. Because I go to my Father, &c. 'I am going to be exalted at my Father's right hand, in testimony of his having entirely approved of and accepted me as one that has answered all his demands.'

Ye see me no more. That is, in this humble state of suffering and abasement.—See ch. xvii. 24, p. 404.

[8—11. He will reprove the world, &c. Ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον, &c. 'The sense of this portion, as it is not a little obscure, has been much disputed. The difficulty chiefly hinges on the expression, τὸν κόσμον; by which some understand the world at large; others, the Jewish world; i. e., the Jews only. And, according as they adopt one or the other view, they assign to the passage either a general or a particular sense. The former is maintained by Grotius, Hammond, and Lampe; the latter by most of the recent commentators, especially Kuinoel and Tittmau, who explain the meaning to be, that "He will shew clearly —i. The great sin of the Jews in disbelieving and rejecting Jesus, by the conversion of many thousands of Jews in consequence of the effusion of the Spirit; 2. He will evince the righteousness and innocence of him whom they had accused and condemned, by teaching, through the apostles, that God had received him into heaven; 3. He will shew that all the opposition of the rulers of this world to the cause of the gospel will be in vain; for the truth shall prevail, and their policy shall be judged and condemned." Thus the sense might be expressed as follows: "He will convict the world (meaning the Jews) of the sin of unbelief, and He will convince them both of my righteousness, and of the victory obtained by me over the prince of this world." And if he was condemned, so would his followers be, whether Jews or Gentiles, and punishment be executed on them, both in this world and in the next. Such appears to be the true meaning of the whole passage, at least in its primary import; but besides that, another and secondary one seems meant to be included,—and that far more important than the other,—by which the words may be referred to the general and internal operation of the Spirit on the hearts of men of every age and country. And this esoteric sense is ably drawn forth by Lampe and Mr. Scott. According to the former view, the term world must be understood of the Jewish world; according to the latter, the whole world."—Bloomf.]

'The faith of the gospel discovers unto us three different states of man: it shews him—1. Under sin, in which there is nothing but infidelity towards God, because there is no faith in Jesus Christ.

'2. Under grace, in which sin is pardoned, and righteousness acquired by faith in Christ; who is gone to the Father to carry on, by his intercession, the great work of redemption.

'3. In the peace and glory of heaven, where Christ will reign with his members; the devil, with his angels and servants, being banished into hell by the last judgment.

'Thus, in the christian revelation, we are made acquainted with three grand truths, which contain the sum and substance of all true religion.

'The first is the general corruption of human nature and the reign of sin.

'The second is the reparation of our nature by the Lord Jesus, and the reign of righteousness by his grace, Rom. v. 21.

'The third is the condemnation of sinners, and the total destruction of the kingdom of sin, and of all the power of the devil, by the last judgment.'—A. C.

'The coming of the Holy Ghost will, by virtue of my death, and in consequence of my resurrection and exaltation, carry on my cause in this lower world, demonstratively convincing both Jews and Gentiles of their sinfulness and misery, of the insufficiency of all their works to recommend them to the favour of God, of the sufficiency of my obedience and suffering to justify them in his sight; and of my judicial power to reform the world, overthrow the kingdom of Satan, and at last condemn to punishment the unbelieving and unrighteous.'—Brown.

12. Ye can not bear them now. Because of their prejudices in favour of their own nation, the law of Moses, &c.—Comp. Lu. xxiv. 25, § 94, p. —.

[Christ had many things to say, but he found that his disciples could only bear general truths; yet, in saying what he did, he sowed the seeds of the whole system of theological knowledge, and heavenly wisdom, which the Holy Spirit afterwards watered and ripened into a glorious harvest of light and salvation, by the ministry of the apostles.'—A. C.]

13. He will guide you. See on ch. xiv. 17, 26, pp. 383, .4.

Into all truth. 'All the truth,' that is, the whole of those doctrines which ye will have to preach, but of which ye are now able to receive only a part.—See ver. 12, and comp. Ac. xx. 27.

[He shall not speak of himself, &c. 'Our Lord repeatedly said of his own teaching, that he spoke not from himself alone, but according to what he had heard from his Father; and he here makes a similar declaration with respect to the teaching of many indubitable proofs, in addition to those on account of their neglecting to attend to which, the Jews were left to die in their sins, and their posterity to wander so long in darkness.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xvi. 10 By his ascension to the Father let us be assured that the righteousness which the Son of God came to fulfil is complete, and that those who follow him are complete in him. He hath by one sacrifice for ever perfected them that are sanctified. Those who say they see him still offered up anew in the sacrifice of the mass must be grossly deceived.]

11 ver. That our Lord will return to judge the world, we may be certain from the fact that the prince of this world is judged; but there is 'no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.' May we be found of him without spot and blameless.

[12, .3 ver. Let us look for a fuller revelation of

IT IS OUR PRIVILEGE TO ATTEND, NOT ONLY TO THE FULL DEVELOPMENT OF GOSPEL TRUTH, AS GIVEN IN THE EPISTLES; BUT ALSO TO THAT WONDERFUL DISCOVERY OF THINGS TO COME, WITH WHICH THE SERVANTS OF GOD ARE FAVOURED IN THE APOCALYPSE.

JOHN xvi. 14—21.

14 shall-hear, that shall-he-speak: and he-will-shew you things to-come. He shall-glorify 15 me: for he-shall-receive of mine, and shall-shew it unto-you. All-things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said-I, that he-shall-take of mine, and shew it unto-16 you. A-little-while, and ye-shall-not-see me: and again, a-little-while, and ye-shall-see me, because I go to the Father.
17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he-saith unto-us,
A-little-while, and ye-shall-not-see me: and again, a-little-while, and ye-shall-see me:
18 and, Because I go to the Father? They-said therefore, What is this that he-saith, A 19 little-while? we-cannot tell what he-saith. Now Jesus knew that they-were-de-irous to-ask him, and said unto-them, Do-ye-inquire among yourselves of that I-said, A-little-20 while, and-ye-shall-not-see me: and again, a-little-while, and ye-shall-see me? Verily, verily, I-say unto-you, That ye shall-weep and lament, but the world shall-rejoice: and 21 ye shall-be-sorrowful, but your sorrow shall-be-turned into joy. A woman when she-is-in-travail hath sorrow, because her hour is-come: but as-soon-as she-is-delivered-of the

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches;'—see on Mt. xvi. 17, § 50, p. 37.

Jno. xvi. 13. shew you things to come—Thus, by Agabus, a 'great dearth throughout all the world' was foretold, Ac. xi. 28—also Paul's imprisonment at Jerusalem, xxi. 10, .1—see Rev. i. 3.

14. shall glorify me—The Spirit glorifies Jesus as being ministered through him, Ti. iii. 5, 6—sent by him, Jno. xvi. 7, p. 393, supra—as testifying of him, xv. 26, p. 391, supra; 1 Co. xii. 3; 1 Jno. iv. 2, 3—as causing to be produced 'the fruits of righteousness,' Ph. i. 11—Ga. v. 22, 'The fruit of the Spirit'—Eph. v. 9.

receive of mine—It is the light and power of Jesus which the Spirit manifests, Mt. xxviii. 18, § 96; Rev. iii. 1; v. 6.

and shall shew, &c.—'Taught of God,' ch. vi. 45, § 43, p. 330—1 Co. ii. 10, 'God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit:'

15 are mine—see the great commission, Mt. xxviii. 18—20, § 96—Eph. i. 22, Christ 'head over all things to the church.'—Col. ii. 9, 'In him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.'

16. A little while—An expression used by our Lord in reference to his stay upon earth, ch. vii. 34, § 55, p. 94; xii. 35, § 82, p. 269; xiii. 33, p. 373, supra; xiv. 19, p. 383, supra—The expression occurs, Ps. xxxvii. 10; Is. xxix. 17; Hag. ii. 6; He. x. 37.

because I go to the Father—His going to the Father was both to occasion his absence from earth, Ac. iii. 21; 2 Co. v. 6—8—and their seeing him more clearly as to his Divinity, Mt. xxviii. 20, § 96—He. ii. 9, 'We see Jesus.'—xii. 2, 'Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith;'

17. What is this—The words of the Israelites respecting the bread that came down from heaven, Ex xvi. 15—see on Jno. vi. 49—52, § 43, p. 331.

18. we cannot tell, &c.—Can we tell what is its import in other instances, as, Ps. xxxvii. 10; Is. xxix. 17; Hag. ii. 6; He. x. 37?

20. ye shall weep and lament—Lu. xxiii. 27, .8, § 91, p. 457; xxiv. 17, § 94, p. 484; Jno xx .., § 93, p. 490; ver. 19, § 95, p. 498.

the world shall rejoice—Lu. xxiii. 35—.7, § 91, p. 463.

turned into joy—Lu. xxiv. 52, § 99; Jno. xx. 20—.3, § 95, p. 498—1 Pe. i. 8, 'Rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:'

NOTES.

the Holy Spirit. For he says, that the Holy Spirit shall speak not from himself alone, but according to what he shall hear and receive from the Son, and, by consequence, from the Father; since the Father has nothing that does not belong equally to the Son.—Comp. ch. xvii. 10, p. 400. We have here a remarkable mention of the three persons of the Trinity as distinct from each other, and yet as united in the work of revealing the gospel to mankind.'—Lonsdale.]

Jno. xvi. 14. Shall receive of mine. Literally, 'shall take of, or from, me.' He shall receive his commission and instructions as an ambassador from me.

[' The purpose of these words seems to be, to shew that the Holy Spirit, in all which he shall reveal and teach, will have in view the glory of Christ. So that, in glorifying him, he shews him to the believer as the Lord of all, the object of all worship, obedience, love, and praise. On the strong attestation hence supplied of the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, see Smith's Script. Test., vol. ii. p. 312.'—Bloomf.]

16. Shall see me. Referring either to his resurrection, or the forty days between that and the ascension.

19. Said unto them, &c. Preventing their question. [Do ye inquire? This sentence is generally regarded as interrogative, but by the best expositors as declarative; which latter has been thought more suitable to that omniscience, by which our Lord was rendered thoroughly acquainted both with what they had been saying, and their desire for information.—Comp. ver. 30, p. 397.]

[20. Verily, verily, I say, &c. 'Our Lord did not, for the reason above mentioned, give any explanation. And thus his silence may be supposed to imply, "Yet it is so. What I have said you will find true." In order, however, to more deeply impress their minds, he points to the circumstances which should accompany the events in question; namely, at first the sorrow of his disciples, and the triumphant exultation of the world; then the grief of the disciples soon afterwards turned into joy.'—Bloomf.]

But the world shall rejoice. The chief priests, scribes, Pharisees, and persecuting Jews in general, will triumph, trusting that their bad cause is crowned with success.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the things of Christ, by the ministration of the Spirit in the apostolic writings, than even that which was made by the personal teaching of our Lord when upon earth: but by a due improvement of this, let us prepare for being profited by the other. There is an order in Divine revelation of which we should take advantage both for ourselves and those who may come under our instructions.]

Jno. xvi. 14, .5. See margin.

16 ver. Let us endeavour to improve the present opportunity in preparing for approaching trial; and let us endure trial, knowing that it is but a little while, and the Lord will appear for our deliverance.

17, .8 ver. Let us not content ourselves with knowing merely the words of our Lord. Let us ponder them deeply: the dark sayings of scripture are full of important truth, which their enigmatical form may be intended the more to impress on us.

19 ver. Jesus has still a sympathy with the mind that earnestly inquires after the meaning of his words; and by his Spirit can as easily reveal to his disciples now, as when he was personally upon earth. ' The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God,' 1 Co. ii. 10.

20 ver. As truly as the disciples of Jesus were given cause to weep and lament, so truly was their sorrow turned into joy. So it has been, and will be, with all who take up their cross and follow Him.

[21 ver. Let us sympathize with the labours and

JOHN xvi. 22—8.

child, she-remembereth no more the anguish θλιψεως, for joy that a-man is-born into the 22 world. And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I-will-see you again, and your heart 23 shall-rejoice, and your joy no-man taketh from you. And in that day ye-shall-ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I-say unto-you, Whatsoever ye-shall-ask the Father in my 24 name, he-will-give it you. Hitherto have-ye-asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye-25 shall-receive, that your joy may-be full πεπληρωμενη. These-things have-I-spoken unto-you in proverbs: but the-time cometh, when I-shall-no more-speak unto-you in 26 proverbs, but I-shall-shew αναγγελω you plainly παρρησια of the Father. At that day ye-shall-ask in my name: and I-say not unto-you, that I will-pray the Father for you:
27 for the Father himself loveth you, because ye have-loved me, and have-believed that I
28 came-out from God. I-came-forth from the Father, and am-come into the world: again,
I-leave the world, and go to the Father.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvi. 22. your heart shall rejoice—see on ver. 20.

your joy no man taketh from you—The command to the believer is, Ph. iv. 4, 'Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.'—1 Th. v. 16, 'Rejoice evermore.'

23 shall ask me nothing—2 Co. v. 16, 'Yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.'

ask the Father, &c.—ch. xv. 16, p. 389, supra.

24. Hitherto, &c.—see ver. 13—7, p. 394, supra.

that your joy, &c.—ch. xv. 11, p. 388, supra; 1 Jno. i. 4.

25. in proverbs—or parables—The things spoken in parables were to be made plain to the disciples, while they would still remain only as parables to those that are without, Lu. viii. 10, § 33, pp. 253, 4—It is looked for in the disciples that they understand all parables, Mk. iv. 13, § 18, p. 254.

26. ask in my name—Ga. iv. 6, 'God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.'

27. because ye have loved me—We are loved of the Father, as being found in the Son, Eph. i. 4, 6, 'according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, ... to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted,' &c.

28. I came forth, &c.—Mi. v. 2, 'Whose goings,' &c.

NOTES.

Jno. xvi. 22. Your joy no man taketh from you. Or, shall take away. 'Some excellent MSS. and versions read the verb in the future tense. Our Lord's meaning appears to have been this: that his resurrection should be so completely demonstrated to them, that they should never have a doubt concerning it; and consequently that their joy should be great and permanent, knowing that the atonement was made, the victory gained, and the kingdom of heaven opened to all believers. Therefore is it said, Ac. iv. 33, "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus:"'—A. C.

23. And in that day, &c. And in that time of your enduring joy, ye shall make your requests known not to me, but to 'the Father in my name': and 'Verily,' &c.—Comp. ch. xiv. 13, 4, and NOTES there, p. 382.

Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father, &c. 'Whatsoever ye shall ask, assisted by the Spirit.'—Guyse.

[On the subject of putting questions, Christ engrafts that of preferring requests; and shews that, whatever else they might have to ask for, in his cause, whether spiritual illumination or courage in action, the Father would deny them nothing.]

[24. Have ye asked nothing in my name. 'Ye have hitherto indeed been accustomed to pray to the Father, but not "in my name" as ye shall hereafter pray to him. Ye have not as yet considered me as the great Mediator between God and man; but this is one of the truths which shall be more fully revealed to you by the Holy Spirit.'—Lonsdale.]

25. In proverbs. 'In dark sayings;' that is, words which, besides their plain, literal meaning, have another, viz., a spiritual or figurative one. I have represented heavenly things to you through the medium of earthly.

The time cometh. Namely, the interval from his resurrection to his ascension, which consisted of forty days, during which he instructed his disciples in the most sublime histories and truths of his kingdom, Ac. i. 3.

[I shall shew you plainly of the Father. '"Shall shew you plainly," in what relation "the Father" stands to me, and to you. This was fulfilled to the apostles, by the personal teaching of our Lord after his resurrection, Lu. xxiv. 27, 45—7, §§ 94, 8, pp. 495, 512: Ac. i. 3; and by the coming of the Holy Ghost, as promised, Jno. xvi. 13, 4.'—Lonsdale.]

[By περι του πατρος we may suppose to be meant 'concerning the perfections and attributes of the Father,' the way of access to him, and his counsels for the salvation of men and the establishment of the christian church. The fulfilment of the present promise is alluded to at Lu. xxiv. 26—44, and Ac. i. 3.]

26. I say not unto you, &c. 'I say not unto you that I will pray the Father for you, but I say more than this, viz., that the Father himself loveth you, on account of your loving me, and believing that I came out from him.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

27. For the Father himself loveth you, &c. 'For the heart of the Father himself is toward you as a God of peace, through my blood,' &c.—Guyse.

28. I came forth from the Father. With whom I existed from eternity in glory.

Am come into the world. By my incarnation.

I leave the world. By my death.

And go to the Father. By my ascension. These

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

trials of those whose hearts' desire is, that Christ may be formed in the rising generation, the hope of glory; assured that their light afflictions, which are but for a moment, are working for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.—See 2 Co. iv. 17.]

Jno. xvi. 22. Jesus was taken from the disciples, but he nevertheless kept his promise: he did see them again, and their hearts did rejoice; and they were given the Comforter to abide with them for ever. May we also be partakers of that joy which the world can neither give nor take away.

23 ver. Let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, presenting our petitions unto the Father in Jesus' name.—And see margin.

24 ver. May we be given the Spirit of intercession, that in the name of Christ we may ask and receive so as to be filled with the Spirit of joy.

[25 ver. Let us attentively consider the import of what Christ is pleased to speak to us in parables, waiting the time when he will shew us plainly of the Father.]

[26 ver. Those who are enabled to pray in the Spirit do not require to be told that Christ will pray for them. The power to ask in his name, is itself procured by Jesus' intercession.]

27 ver. See margin.

28 ver. Let us deeply reflect upon these great subjects of revelation—the Divine origin, the incarnation, the death, and the ascension into glory of

JOHN xvi. 29—33.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.
30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should 31 ask thee: by this we believe that thou comest forth from God. Jesus answered them, 32 Do ye now believe? Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, 33 because the Father is with me. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.*

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvi. 29. now speakest thou plainly—That which had perplexed them was contained in ver. 16—comp. ver. 17—9, 'A little while, and ye shall not see me:' &c.—This he had now explained by saying, ver. 28, 'Again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.'

30. Now are we sure—ch. ii. 24, .5, § 12, p. 82, 'Knew what was in man.'

by this we believe, &c.—so Nathanael, upon having evidence given him of the omniscience of Jesus, made confession, ch. i. 49, § 10, p. 73, 'Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.'

31. Do ye now believe?—They believed that he was the Shiloh, or the 'Sent of the Father,' ver. 27—but the faith of some of them was as yet very weak and wavering, Lu. xxiv. 21, § 94, p. 494; Jno. xx. 24, .5, § 95, p. 500.

32. Behold, the hour cometh—Mt. xxvi. 31, p. 406.

to his own—'Unto their own home,' ch. xx. 10, § 93, p. 490—Some of them went a fishing, xxi. 1—3, § 97, pp. 505, .6.

leave me alone—There is a time coming when he will not be alone, Rev. xiv. 1, &c.

33. that in me ye might have peace—It is only in Christ that we can have peace, Mt. xi. 28, .9, § 29, p. 228; Jno. xiv. 27, p. 385, supra; Eph. ii. 14—22, see margin; Ph. iv. 7; Col. i. 20; iii. 15—1 Pe. v. 14, 'Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.'

In the world . . . . tribulation—If we would have peace, we should be as little in the world as our Master's service will allow, 1 Co. vii. 29—35; 1 Ti. vi. 8—10; 2 Ti. ii. 4—see the case of Lot in Sodom, Ge. xiii. 10—.3; xiv. 11, .2; xix. 14—26.

I have overcome the world—see the temptation, Mt. iv. 1l, § 9, p. 66—By the word he overcame, ver. 4, p. 64; ver. 7, p. 65; ver. 10, p. 66—We must follow the Captain of our salvation in using the same weapons, if we also would overcome, Eph. vi. 10—.7; 1 Jno. ii. 14—.6—We overcome through our union with Jesus—iv. 4, 'Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.'—v. 4, 'Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith,' &c.—Rom. viii. 37, 'Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.'

NOTES.

four words (see PRAC. REFLEC.) contain the whole economy of the gospel of man's salvation, and a consummate abridgment of the christian faith. This gave the disciples a key to the whole of our Lord's discourse; and especially to that part, ver. 16, p. 395, that had so exceedingly embarrassed them, as appears by ver. 17, .8, p. 2b.

[And it may be observed that our Lord's declarations elsewhere, and especially in these chapters, wherein he discourses concerning his death, resurrection, ascension to the Father, and the coming of the Holy Ghost, though they may to us seem plain, yet to the apostles, labouring, as they were, under Jewish prejudices, and loath to believe that their Lord was about to die—they could not but appear obscure and involved in mystery.]

Jno. xvi. 30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things. By this proof of thy Divine knowledge 'we believe' ye more firmly than before—comp. ver. 27—'that thou camest forth from God.'

[31. Do ye now believe. ἄρτι πιστεύετε. 'Our Lord checks their excessive confidence, and inculcates diffidence in their own strength; q.d., "Do ye now really and fully believe?" The interrogation here is, as Calvin points out, ironical, and involves a delicate sarcasm; q.d., "Do you boast such great things, as if you fully believed? But, alas! there will soon occur that which will discover your emptiness."'—Bloomf.]

This question was evidently asked to put them on a full examination of their hearts.

33. That in me ye might have peace. I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things. That through trust in me, and in the assurances which I have now given you, ye might have peace within, notwithstanding your 'tribulation' from without. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the Divine favour, unction of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c., and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

our Lord Jesus Christ. By these we have the assurance that all which God hath promised, he will most surely perform.

Jno. xvi. 29, 30. Let us never neglect to strengthen our faith in the Saviour, by the consideration of the evidence we are afforded of his knowing all things, and especially of his being the Searcher of the reins and the hearts.

[31, .2 ver. The disciples thought that now they truly believed and knew the truth; but it is evident that much was wanting to the perfection of either their knowledge or their faith.]

[When left alone in the hour of sorrow or temptation, let us remember that our blessed Redeemer had experience of our situation, and can well sympathize with us therein.]

[33 ver. As we desire peace, let us seek for it in Christ; and as we would find it in him, let us treasure up his sayings, and thereby be enabled to follow him in overcoming the world. It is only the Israelite indeed who can expect to inhabit with God the new Jerusalem—where the perfection of peace is to be enjoyed by those who in and with Christ overcome.]

* 'One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ, having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father; and, under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should, with humble confidence, ask the blessings he has purchased. We may consider, also, that pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider, also, that his appearance before the throne, in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven in that he appears before the throne: this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed, and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ we approach God; through the mediation of Christ God comes down to man. —A. C.

LET US NOT BE TOO EASILY SATISFIED WITH THE UNDERSTANDING WE HAVE OF THE WORDS OF CHRIST. WITH OUR BLESSED LORD, LET US EVER REMEMBER THAT WE ARE NOT ALONE, BECAUSE THE FATHER IS WITH US.

No. 87 continued.—(G. 91.)—[*Lesson 90.]—Christ prays his Father to glorify him, 6 to preserve his apostles, 11 in unity, 17 and truth, 20 to glorify them and all other believers with him.—John xvii.

INTRODUCTION.

'As the Jewish high priest, on the day of atonement, was required to make annual intercession for himself, for his household, the priests and Levites, and for the whole nation. Le. xvi. 17, so our all-sufficient High Priest, once for all, He. ix. 26, .8; Rom. vi. 10, on this HIS great day of atonement, solemnly interceded with God his Father for himself that he might be received into glory, his original glory in heaven, Jno xvii. 1–5; for his household, the apostles and disciples, that God would preserve them in his name, or in the true religion, give them a spirit of unity and concord, and protect them in and from the wicked world, ver. 6—19; and that, finally, they might partake of his glory in heaven, and also be supported by his love and presence on earth, ver. 24—6, and also for all future believers, through their preaching, that they might be endued with the same spirit of unity and concord, and for the conversion of the whole world, ver. 20—3.—See Dr. Hales, Anal., vol. iii. p. 196.'—Bloomf., introd.

This chapter contains the easiest words and the deepest sense of any in all the scripture.

ANALYSIS.

Jno. xvii. 1. Having spoken to his disciples as recorded, ch. xiii.—vi., in which so much is said respecting the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, by whom the Son of God was to be glorified, through the instrumentality of the disciples; Jesus, raising his eyes to heaven, addresses the Father, intimating his knowledge that the hour of his departure is at hand, and praying the Father to glorify his Son, that the Son, through the instrumentality of the disciples, may glorify the Father.

Having thus adverted to the general subject of petition, Jesus proceeds, in verses 2–5, to speak of his own personal relation thereto.

—— 2. Acknowledgment by Jesus, of power over all flesh having been given him by his Father; the purpose of this gift being, that he might give eternal life to those given him of the Father.

—— 3. Life eternal consists in the knowledge of the one 'true God,' and of 'Jesus Christ,' the Sent of the Father.

—— 4. Jesus states what he has done—has glorified the Father on the earth, has finished the work which the Father gave him to do.

—— 5. Jesus asks that he may now be glorified in the Godhead, with the glory he had with the Father before the world was.

Having prayed for himself, Jesus intercedes in behalf of his more immediate followers, the twelve apostles.

—— 6–8. He declares what he has done for his disciples; and how they have profited by his instructions.

—— 9, 10. Jesus distinguishes the special objects of his present intercession, as being not the world, but his disciples—those chosen to be apostles; yet all who are Christ's are the Father's, and all who belong to the Father are Christ's: but these about to be left by him in the world are the first objects of his mediatorial care.

—— 11. Addressing God as 'Holy Father!' Jesus prays for the sanctification of the disciples, that they may be kept through the Father's own name, that so they may be one, as He and the Father are one.

—— 12. Jesus, while upon earth, has kept them in the Father's name; none of them is lost, but he who lost himself, in whose case the scripture is fulfilled.

Jno. xvii. 13. Jesus desires that the eleven may have the joy of their Lord fulfilled in themselves.

—— 14. He has given them the word of the Father; and the world hath hated them, because as he is separate from the world, so are they.

—— 15, .6. He prays, not for their removal from the world, but for separation from the evil; and repeats what he had just said, respecting their conformity to him.

—— 17. He intercedes for their sanctification, not by rites and ceremonies, but through the truth, the word of God.

—— 18. Their mission from him is the same as his from the Father.

19. He has for their sakes separated himself, that they, through the truth, may be sanctified.

—— 20. Having prayed for his own immediate followers, in whom, at the beginning, were to be exemplified the blessings of grace, desired by Christ for his people; Jesus next intercedes for those unto whom the twelve were more especially sent; and who, through the words of the apostles (not the traditions of the church), were to be led to rely upon Christ as their only Foundation.

—— 21. He prays for the oneness of the long-scattered people; that they thus united may be given success in their great mission of evangelizing the world.

—— 22, .3. They are appointed to be heirs of that glory, which in the anointing of the Holy Ghost was given Him, and whereby their oneness is effected. He prays that their unity in the Father and the Son may be perfected, that so the truth of Christ's mission and the love of the Father may be made known to all the world.

—— 24. Having prayed that his people may be perfected in Grace, he asks for their introduction into Glory.

—— 25, .6. He laments the world's ignorance of God, and recognises his disciples' preparedness for the knowledge which he will progressively communicate, to their increase in Grace, the perfection of which is Christ in them 'THE HOPE OF GLORY.'

JOHN xvii.

1 These words spake Jesus, and lifted-up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour
2 is-come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may-glorify thee: as thou-hast-given him

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvii. 1. lifted up his eyes, &c.—The language of hope, Ps. cxxiii. 1, 'Unto thee lift I up mine eyes, O thou that dwellest in the heavens.'

the hour is come—so ch. xii. 23, § 82, p. 267.

glorify thy Son—When the Holy Ghost was given, the apostle said, Ac. iii. 13, that God had 'glorified his Son Jesus;'—He also says, 1 Pe. i. 21, God 'raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.'

may glorify thee—ch. xv. 8, 'Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.'—1 Pe. iv. 14, 'If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.'—i. 7.

NOTES.

Jno. xvii. 1. The hour is come. Our Lord here speaks of the hour in which he was about to finish, by his death, the work which his Father had given him to do 'on the earth.'—Comp. ver. 4; ch. vii. 30; viii. 20, § 55, pp. 94, 101.

Glorify thy Son, &c. See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

* Lesson 90, in the 'System of Graduated Simultaneous Instruction,' includes Mt. xxvi. 30—.5; Mk. xiv. 26—31; Lu. xxii. 39; Jno. xvii.—xviii. 1.

JOHN xvii. 3—6.

power-over all flesh, that he-should-give eternal life to-as-many as thou-hast-given him.
3 And this is life eternal, that they-might-know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ,
4 whom thou-hast-sent. I have-glorified thee on the earth: I-have-finished ἐτελείωσα
5 the work which thou-gavest me to do ἵνα ποιήσω. And now, O-Father, glorify thou me
6 with thine-own-self with-the glory which I-had with thee before the world was. I-have-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:'—2 Th. i. 10, 'When he shall come to be glorified,' &c.

Jno. xvii. 2. power over all flesh, &c.—Which is especially to be manifested in the bestowment of resurrection life, ch. v. 19—29, § 23, p. 177—and, even in the present life, his power is so exerted, Rom. viii. 28, 'that all things work together for good to them that love God,'—All power for christian edification belongs to him, 1 Co. iii. 21—3, 'Let no man glory in men. For all things are your's; 22, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are your's; 23, and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.'

hast given him*—see ver. 6, 9, 24, infra; vi. 37, § 43, p. 329, 'All that the Father giveth me shall come to me;'

3. life eternal, ... know thee, &c.—Je. ix. 24, 'Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me,'—This knowledge is revealed in Jesus. He. i. 3, 'the brightness of his [the Father's] glory, and the express image of his person,'—And it is as being taught of the Spirit, 1 Co. ii. 10—2, and 'knit together in love,' that this knowledge is made to abound in believers, Col. ii. 2—This knowledge implies fellowship with the Father and the Son, who is eternal life, 1 Jno. i. 1—3—v. 20, 'And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.'

4. I have glorified thee—By the works of mercy performed through his Divine power, he had led multitudes to glorify God, Mt. ix. 8, § 22, p. 167; xv. 31, § 46, p. 25; Lu. xviii. 43, § 78, p. 240; Jno. xi. 4, 40, § 58, pp. 127, 31.

finished the work, &c.*—ch. iv. 34, § 13, p. 95, 'My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.'—v. 36, § 23, p. 179, 'The works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.'—See also his last words upon the cross, xix. 30, § 91, p. 468—Ph. ii. 8, 'Being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.'

had with thee, &c.*—The pre-existence of the Son, and his oneness with the Father, is frequently intimated in scripture, as ch. i. 1, 2, § 7, p. 46; viii. 58, § 55, p. 108; Ph. ii. 6; Col. i. 15—17; He. i. 3—10.

6. I have manifested, &c.—Ps. xxii. 22—He. ii. 12,

NOTES.

[Jno. xvii. 3. This is life eternal. A life never to end; hence called αἰώνιος ζωή, life ever living; from αἰ, always, and ὤν, being or existence. And indeed no words can more forcibly convey the idea of eternity than these. It is called ἡ αἰώνιος ζωή, THAT eternal life, by way of eminence. There may be an eternal existence without blessedness; but this is that eternal life with which infinite happiness is inseparably connected.]

[Might know thee. The word know here, as in other places, expresses more than a mere speculative acquaintance with the character and perfections of God. It includes all the impressions on the mind and life which a just view of God and his Saviour is fitted to produce. It includes of course love, reverence, obedience, honour, gratitude, supreme affection. To know God as he is, is to know and regard him as a lawgiver, a sovereign, a parent, a friend. It is to yield the whole soul to him, and strive to obey his law.]

1—3. 'O Father, the time fixed in thy eternal counsel for completing my course of obedience on earth is now come. Own and support me as thy Son under my sufferings, that, in finishing all righteousness, triumphing over sin, Satan, and death, and in ascending to heaven, I may manifest and spread the honour of all thy perfections in the world; that in the exercise of that mediatorial authority over all mankind which thou hast allotted me as the reward of my obedience, I may freely and effectually bestow the great blessing of eternal life upon all those whom thou hast, in thy great love, committed to me as my peculiar property, trust, and treasure. And the way to, the beginning, earnest, and evidence of right to, this eternal life, and even the complete enjoyment of it, is by an approving and fiducial knowledge of thee as the only true and faithful God, in opposition to all idols; and of me as the anointed Saviour and the only Mediator, in opposition to all others.'—Brown.

The only true God.* Jesus is so called by John, in 1 Ep. v. 20.

4. I have glorified thee. τὸ ἔργον—τοῦδε. Not the work of teaching only, but also that of atonement by his death and passion, which was then near commencing.

[5. Glorify thou me. δόξασόν με σύ, &c. Here again our Lord sets forth his Divine majesty as the Son of God. 1. He professes that he had δόξαν (Heb. כָּבוֹד), i.e., the Divine majesty, embracing the whole compass of the Divine nature, attributes, counsels, and works. . . . . 2. He makes the asseveration, "I had this glory, παρὰ σοί, i.e., with God in heaven." Therefore he was in heaven before he came into the world, or was in the bosom of the Father, ch. i. 18, § 7, p. 48. 3. He professes that he had glory with the Father before he came to the earth; nay, before the world was; or, as St. John expresses it, ἐν ἀρχῇ, i.e., from eternity. 4. He prays that the glory and majesty which, as Son of God, he enjoyed from all eternity, the Father would now invest him with, as Son of man, and Saviour of the human race. What is meant by this glorifying of Christ by the Divine Father, is well shewn in vol. ii. p. 141, of Dr. Pye Smith's Scrip. Test. It may be briefly explained (with him) the manifestation of his name, the unveiling of the same moral and spiritual excellence, the same absolutes and infinite perfection, in the person and character of the Son of God, to be effected by the extension and success of the christian religion.'—Bloomf.]

6. I have manifested thy name. All thy attributes; and in particular, thy paternal relation to believers; to the men whom thou hast given me—the apostles. And so ver. 12, p. 401. They were thine—by creation and by descent from Abraham. And thou hast given

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xvii. 2. As the great purpose for which Christ exerts his wonder-working power is that he may give eternal life to those whom the Father hath given him, may we earnestly seek to derive spiritual good from all that he does, as well as from all that he says.]

3 ver. May we enjoy that assured pledge of the life everlasting which indeed will constitute the joy of eternity, the knowledge of 'the only true God, and Jesus Christ,' in whom and by whom the Father is revealed.

4 ver. Let us be earnest in our endeavours to glorify God upon the earth, as well as desirous of enjoying his glory in heaven; and let us not seek to escape from the work unto which we are appointed until, with our Lord, we can say, 'I have finished,' &c.

[5 ver. The Son of God did not begin to exist when he became the Son of the Virgin. He enjoyed the glory of the Father before the world was. Our Instructor knows both time and eternity, the lowest condition upon earth, and the highest in heaven.]

EVERY TRUE DISCIPLE OF CHRIST IS DEVOTED UNTO GOD, AND BY EVERY TRUE WORSHIPPER OF THE FATHER THE SON IS GLORIFIED.

WHILE WE CONTEMPLATE THE GRACE OF GOD IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, LET US NEVER FORGET THAT THE LORD OUR GOD IS HOLY.

JOHN xvii. 7—10.

manifested thy name unto-the men which thou-gavest me out-of the world: thine they-7 were, and thou-gavest them me; and they-have-kept thy word. Now they-have-known 8 that all-things whatsoever thou-hast-given me are of thee. For I-have-given unto-them the words which thou-gavest me; and they have-received them, and have-known surely 9 that I-came-out from thee, and they-have-believed that thou didst-send me. I pray ερωτω for them: I-pray not for the world, but for them-which thou-hast-given me; for 10 they-are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I-am-glorified in

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

'I will declare thy name unto my brethren.'—Jno. i. 18, § 7, p. 48. 'The only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.'

Jno. xvii 6. thy name—The name of the Father, which the Son especially manifested, was Love—1 Jno. iv. 8—10. 'He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. 9, In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. 10. Herein is love,' &c.—This love Jesus had manifested to those who were constantly with him, and that in circumstances the most discouraging: as when he washed his disciples' feet, Jno. xiii. 1—5, p. 365, supra—Ac. x. 38, He 'went about doing good.'

gavest me out of the world—see on ver. 2, p. 399, supra; x. 29, § 56, p. 122; xv. 19, p. 390—Although we are to do good unto all as we have opportunity, and especially unto those who are of the household of faith; yet, in the providence of God, there are those given to each of us who have special claims upon our attention, 1 Ti. v. 8—who are to be received as gifts from God; and by kindness to whom we are to express the gratitude we feel towards our Great Benefactor, Mt. xviii. 2, 5, § 53, p. 82.

kept thy word—The word, which by the gospel is preached, is that which teaches the brethren to love one another with pure hearts fervently, 1 Pe. i. 22, .5.

7. are of thee—From God, as a Father manifesting his love, should we receive all things, through the Son of his love, and thus 'in every thing give thanks,' Eph. v. 20; 1 Th. v. 18.

8. words which thou gavest me—The words promised, De. xviii. 18, .9; Jno. xv. 15, p. 389, supra.

known surely—so Peter confessed, ch. vi. 69, § 43, p. 334, 'We believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.'—Mt. xvi. 16, § 50, p. 38.

9. I pray for them—Here Jesus is praying for the disciples who had accompanied him in his public ministry and private walk; and unto whom more particularly he had performed the duties of some of the more intimate relations of life, ch. xiii. 13, 4, p. 367, supra—and especially that for which the father of the faithful was distinguished, Ge. xviii. 19—comp with Jno. xvii. 6—12—Afterwards Jesus prays for others beside these, ver. 20, p. 403, infra.

not for the world—Although Jesus does not here pray for the world, yet he afterwards does so—when he prays that his people may, in love, be brought into the manifestation of the truth, so that the world may believe that Jesus is the Sent of God, ver. 21, infra—see the purpose for which he was sent, ch. iii. 16, .7, § 12, p. 86, 'God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.'

hast given me—see on 'gavest me,' &c., ver. 6, supra.

for they are thine—Jesus said of them, ver. 6, 'Thine they were.' He now speaks of them as having been kept in the name of the Father, and says, 'They are thine.'

10. And all mine are thine—It is as being made Christ's, and as being conformed to his image, that we truly fulfil the purpose of our first creation, which was to glorify God, Ps. cxlv. 10; 2 Co. iii. 18; Col. iii. 10; Rev. i. 5, 6; iv. 11; v. 9, 10.

and thine are mine—Jesus has a claim, not merely upon the obedience of a few, but upon the homage of the whole creation—Ph. ii. 10, .1, 'At the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.'—Comp. Rev. v. 13, .4.

and I am glorified in them—It was through the word ministered by the apostles, as sanctified unto them me—by giving them faith in what I have spoken. So ver. 8, supra.

NOTES.

Jno. xvii. 6. I have manifested thy name. ἐφανέρωσα, 'I have brought it into light, and caused it to shine in itself and to illuminate others.' Nature showed a little in creation—the Mosaic dispensation more in revelation; but the full manifestation of God, his nature, and attributes, came only by Christ.

[Thine they were. σοὶ ἦσαν. Thine, 1, by right of creation and preservation; and 2, by the bond of sincere attachment to thee.

[Have kept thy word. Τὸν λόγον σου τετ. means the doctrine of the gospel, delivered to them through Christ by God the Father.']

7. That all things, &c. 'That is, as appears from the next verse, that all "the words" [the doctrines] whatsoever thou hast commissioned me to speak, are indeed from thee. There is nothing in the original answering to the word things.'—Lowndale and Hale.

[8. That I came out from thee. 'Here (observes Tittman) we must be careful to distinguish the proceeding of Jesus from God, ch. xvi. 28, p. 397, and coming to the earth, ver. 3, from his being sent by God as the Messiah. It should, however, seem that ἐξῆλθον here includes both these particulars; one referring to his Divine nature, as SON OF GOD, the other to his office of Messiah, or Son of man, as commissioned from the Father, and sent to redeem mankind. The best comment on this passage is ch. viii. 42, ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἥκω (scil. εἰς τὸν κόσμον).'—Bloomf.]

9. I pray not for the world, &c. Not at present.

For they are thine. ὅτι σοί εἰσιν. Here is added a reason why God should protect them; 'for they are thine;' i.e., now by adoption (see 1 Jno. iii. 2), as heretofore by creation, &c.—See NOTE, supra, ver. 6. This special prayer of Christ for his disciples is continued to the end of ver. 19.

10. All mine are thine, and thine are mine. These are very high and strong expressions too grand for

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xvii. 6. How much ought we to be above the common motives of worldly men! We were, in our fathers, separated from among the nations, to be unto the Lord 'a peculiar people' above all the nations of the earth; and having thus been chosen of the Father, we have been given by Him to the Son of his love.]

[Let us never forget that the purpose for which the disciples were given unto the Son was that he might manifest unto them the name of the Father—and that it is as keeping his word that we are profited by this manifestation. Soon may the ministry of our High Priest be effectual, in his pouring upon the children of Israel the name of the Lord.]

7 ver. May we know that all things are of God, who hath reconciled us unto himself by Christ Jesus our Lord.

[8 ver. It is not enough that the words of God are given unto us, we must also receive them. Soon may Jesus be practically acknowledged by his people as 'THAT PROPHET' of whom the Father spoke by Moses, De. xviii. 18, .9.]

9 ver. Jesus, our great High Priest, hath given us

JOHN xvii. 11—3.

11 them. And now I-am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine-own name those-whom thou-hast-given me, 12 that they-may-be one, as we are. While I-was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: those-that thou-gavest me I-have-kept, and none of them is-lost, but the son 13 of perdition; that the scripture might-be-fulfilled. And now come-I to thee; and these-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

their great work by the Holy Spirit, that Jesus was to be glorified on the earth—they were the media through which the blessing was to be universally diffused—on which account they were the first and special objects of the Redeemer's intercession—see on ver. 1, p. 398, supra—When the word, sent forth through them, hath resulted in the promised harvest, they will doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them, Ps. cxxvi. 5, 6—and they will be given to 'sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, Mt. xix. 28, § 75, p. 228.

Jno. xvii. 11. And now, &c.—He had just before spoken to the disciples of his departure out of this world, ch. xiii. 1, p. 385, supra; xvi. 28, p. 396, supra.

but these are in the world—The purpose for which Jesus had come into the world was now to be carried forward through their instrumentality—comp. ch. viii. 12, § 55, p. 100. with Mt. v. 14, § 19, p. 122; Jno. xx. 21—3, § 95, p. 498.

Holy Father, keep, &c.—Jesus now prays more especially for the sanctification of his disciples, 11—3.

keep through thine own name—see on 'thy name,' ver. 6, p. 400, supra—It is only through love, through that wondrous manifestation of Divine love, which is given in the gospel, that we can be preserved, and be given the victory, 1 Jno. iv. 10, 1; v. 1—4—Jude, ver. 21, 'Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.'

that they may be one—This prayer seems to have been answered in the case of the disciples, more especially after Jesus' resurrection, and preparatory to the pentecostal anointing—Ac. ii. 1, 'They were all with one accord in one place.'—And thereafter, iv. 32, 'the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul:'—And that their oneness, as bound together by love, might continue—There are any mere creature to use; as implying that all things whatsoever, inclusive of the Divine nature, perfections, and operations, are the common property of the Father and the Son. And this is the original ground of that peculiar property, which both the Father and the Son have in the persons given to Christ as Mediator.

NOTES.

[Jno. xvii. 10. And I am glorified in them. 'καὶ δεδόξασμαι ἐν αὐτοῖς. These words seem meant to express something beyond the preceding; q.d., "they are not only mine, but I am glorified in and through them; therefore they are effectively mine." But the present, in an action of continued progression, like the spreading of the gospel, is so intermingled with the future, that the future may also be included. Thus the full sense is:—"I have been, am being, and am to be, glorified."'—Bloomf.]

11. Keep through thine own name. 'Τήρησον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου, 'preserve them in thy name.' When mention is made in scripture of making God's name known to the heathen, it means his nature and attributes; but by manifesting his name to those who enjoyed the old dispensation, the communication of clearer light, and of those truths which peculiarly characterize the new dispensation.

[May be one. 'One body, united by one spirit to me their living Head.'—See Note, ch. xiv. 18—20, p. 383. The whole passage should be read thus:—'Holy Father, keep them through thy own name WHICH thou hast given, that they may be one,' &c.]

12. That the scripture might be fulfilled. See the words of Peter, Ac. i. 20, from which we gather that our Lord here refers to Ps. lxix. 25; cix. 8.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

an example both of order and of particularity in prayer.—See margin.

Jno. xvii. 11. Are not these words of our Saviour a direct contradiction to the blasphemous assumption of the Romish priesthood, who say that by the words of consecration, in the mass, the wafer is transubstantiated into the body, blood, soul, and divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ? If on every Romish altar, all over the world, Christ is to be met with whole and entire, in what sense could he have said that he is no more in the world?—See margin, p. 400.

[Not through the force or the artifice of man, but by God's own name, can the disciples of Christ be preserved. Let us, in dependence upon Divine power, manifest continually the truth and love of God, and God will be our defence.]

[12 ver. The whole teaching of Jesus, and equally his acting toward his disciples, was calculated to keep them in the Father's name, his new best name many exhortations by the apostles—Rom. xii. 16, 'Be of the same mind one toward another.'—xv. 5, 'The God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to Christ Jesus:'—1 Co. i. 10, 'I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, ... that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind,' &c.—see also 2 Co. xiii. 11; Eph. iv. 1—3; Ph. i. 27; ii. 2; iii. 15, 16; iv. 2; 1 Pe. iii. 8.

12. I kept them in thy name—see on 'thy name,' ver. 6, p. 400—and 'thine own name,' ver. 11, supra—Read his lessons of love designed to keep them from falling into malice and envy, when they began to strive for the mastery, Mt. xviii., § 53, p. 82; xx. 20—8, § 77, pp. 237—..9; Lu. xxii. 24—30, p. 375, supra; Jno. xiii. 1—17, p. 385—..7, supra.

those that thou gavest me—see on ver. 6, 9, p. 400—Is. viii. 18, 'Behold, I and the children whom the LORD hath given me are for signs and for wonders in Israel from the LORD of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion.'—He. ii. 13.

none of them—none of the twelve—see before on ver. 9, p. 400.

but the son of perdition—see on ch. xiii. 18—30, pp. 370—..2, supra—The same name is given to the man of sin, 2 Th. ii. 3—10, who should in after times betray 'the Son of man with a kiss,' as did Judas. Lu. xxii. 48, § 88, p. 419—2 Co. xi. 13—..5, 'Such are false apostles,' &c.—2 Ti. iii. 5—9, 'Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof:' &c.

13. And now come I to thee—He. vi. 20, 'Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.'—See also vii. 24—8; ix. 24—xii. 1, 2, 'Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him,' &c.

AS HE WHICH HATH CALLED YOU IS HOLY, SO BE YE HOLY IN ALL MANNER OF CONVERSATION.—1 Pet. i. 15.

AS NEWBORN BABES, DESIRE THE SINCERE MILK OF THE WORD, THAT YE MAY GROW THEREBY.—1 Pet. ii. 2.

John xvii. 14—.9.

14 things I-speak in the world, that they-might-have my joy fulfilled in themselves. I have-given them thy word; and the world hath-hated them, because they-are not of the 15 world, even-as I am not of the world. I-pray not that thou-shouldest-take them out-of 16 the world, but that thou-shouldest-keep them from the evil τον πονηρον. They-are not 17 of the world, even-as I am not of the world. Sanctify them thr ough εν thy truth: thy 18 word is truth. As thou-hast-sent me into the world, even-so have-I also -sent them into 19 the world. And for their-sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might-be sanctified

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvii. 13. my joy—1 Th. ii. 19, 20, 'What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? For ye are our glory and joy.'—2 Th. iv. 7, 8 —comp. Phil. ver. 20.

14. given them thy word—see on ver. 8, p. 400—The joy of the man of God is in 'the word'—Ps. i. 2, 'His delight is in the law of the LORD; and in his law doth he meditate day and night.'—Je. xv. 16, 'Thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called by thy name, O LORD God of hosts.'

the world hath hated them—Another cause of rejoicing. Mt. v. 11, 2, § 19, p. 122, 'Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you . . . . Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.'

15. I pray not, &c.—It is not by going out of the world (as the monks pretended to do), 1 Co. v. 10, but by going into the world, as Christ was in the world, that Christians fulfil their mission, ver. 18, supra —1 Ti. vi. 12, 'Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life,'—With patience we are to wait for the promised reward, Rom. viii. 25.

keep them from the evil—as in the sixth petition of the Lord's prayer, Mt. vi. 13, § 19, p. 133—Ga. i. 4, 'From this present evil world,'—2 Th. iii. 3, 'Keep you from evil.'—Ja. i. 27, 'Unspotted from the world.' —1 Jno. v. 18, 'He that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.'

16. not of the world—see ver. 14, &c.; xv. 19, p. 390,

NOTES.

Jno. xvii. 13. That they might have my joy, &c. See on ch. xv. 11, p. 389.

14. Thy word. τὸν λόγον σου, 'thy doctrine;' so John often uses λογος, 'word.'

15. From the evil. The evil one; the temptations which surround them.

[I do not plead that Thou, to deliver them from their troubles, shouldst deprive this world of their holy example and useful ministrations; but that thou wouldst preserve them from the temptations of Satan and their own remaining corruptions; and support them under, sanctify to them, and carry them through all the persecutions which they may meet with before they have finished their work.]

[17. Sanctify them. 'Αγιασον, from a, negative, and γη, the earth. This word has two meanings—1. It signifies to consecrate, to separate from earth and common use, and to devote or dedicate to God and his service. 2. It signifies to make holy or pure. The prayer of Christ may be understood in both these senses. He prayed—1. That they might be supra; 1 Pe. ii. 21—5; iv. 3—6—so as regards principles of action, Mt. vi. 31—4, § 19, p. 135—comp with Jno. iv. 34, § 13, p. 95—and reward, Mt. xix. 28, 9, § 75, p. 228; 1 Jno. ii. 17.

17. Sanctify, &c.—Ps. cxix. 9, 'Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.'—Jno. xv. 3, p. 387, supra, 'Clean through the word,' &c.—Ac. xv. 9, 'Purifying their hearts by faith.'—Eph. v. 26, 'With the washing of water by the word,'—2 Th. ii. 13, 'Through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:'—1 Pe. i. 22, 'Purified your souls in obeying the truth'—see the power which God exerts by the knowledge of the truth—in separating from evil, 2 Pe. i. 4, and producing good, ver. 5—8.

thy word is truth—Mt. xiii. 16—9, §§ 32, 3, pp. 246, 54, 'The word of the kingdom,' &c.—Eph. i. 13, 'The word of truth, the gospel of your salvation:' —The word respecting the kingdom is not a cunningly devised fable, but witnessed to by God the Father, 2 Pe. i. 16—8—and 'by the Holy Ghost,' ver. 19—21—1 Jno. v. 9—11, 'If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater:' &c.

18. sent them—see on Mt. x. 5—8, 16, 40, § 39, pp. 295, 298, 302—Jno. xx. 21, § 96, 'As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.'

19. I sanctify myself—Jesus separated himself for us. He. ii. 11—8, unto the accursed 'death of the cross,' Ph. ii. 8; Ga. iii. 13; He. xiii. 12, 3—In willingly yielding himself, he claimed exemption for his disciples, Jno. xviii. 8, § 88, p. 418—He 'suffered for us, leaving us an example,' &c., 1 Pe. ii. 21—4.

NOTES.

18. As thou hast sent me . . . so have I also sent them. The apostles had the same commission which Christ had, considered as men—they were endued with the same Spirit, and his word through them was accompanied with even the same success.

19. I sanctify myself. I devote myself as a victim, to be sacrificed. There seems to be here an allusion to the entering of the high priest into the Holy of Holies, when, having offered the sacrifice, he sprinkled the blood before the ark of the covenant So Jesus entered into the holiest of all by his own blood, in order to obtain everlasting redemption for men.—See He. ix. 11—.3.

Meaning, not only that they should have in Christ an example of this devoted service, but that they should be sanctified and consecrated thereto by the effect of Christ sanctifying himself.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xvii. 13. As truly as the scripture was fulfilled in the case of 'the son of perdition,' who perished in the bitterness of remorse—so truly may the joy of the Lord be fulfilled in us, by our being given repentance unto life; and so bringing forth the fruits of righteousness, which are through Jesus Christ unto the praise and glory of God.]

14 ver. Let us highly prize the word of God which Christ hath committed to our keeping, and whereby we may be enabled to bring forth fruit unto God. But let us also count the cost, and be content to be as Christ was in the world.

15 ver. It is from the evil which is in the world the disciples of Christ should separate and endeavour to keep themselves clear.—See margin.

16 ver. The separation from the world which the disciples of Christ are to seek after, is that which fully consecrated to the work of the ministry, and separated from all worldly concerns. 2. That they might be holy, and patterns of all holiness to those to whom they announced the salvation of God.]

18. As thou hast sent me . . . so have I also sent them. The apostles had the same commission which Christ had, considered as men—they were endued with the same Spirit, and his word through them was accompanied with even the same success.

19. I sanctify myself. I devote myself as a victim, to be sacrificed. There seems to be here an allusion to the entering of the high priest into the Holy of Holies, when, having offered the sacrifice, he sprinkled the blood before the ark of the covenant So Jesus entered into the holiest of all by his own blood, in order to obtain everlasting redemption for men.—See He. ix. 11—.3.

Meaning, not only that they should have in Christ an example of this devoted service, but that they should be sanctified and consecrated thereto by the effect of Christ sanctifying himself.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

was exemplified in our Lord, who went about doing good; before all, and in every place testifying to the truth.

[17 ver. As without holiness no man can see the Lord, so only by the cleansing word of God can this holiness be wrought within us. Not by any beggarly elements of human consecration, but by the cleansing word of God, can we be sanctified unto the holy service of God.]

18 ver. The mission of Christ was to be carried forward by the apostles, whose true successors those are who, being called by the grace of God, act as if they were sent into the world, not to do their own will but the will of Him who sent them.

[19 ver. Christ separated himself unto the work of our redemption, that we might be sanctified by

JOHN xvii. 20—.2.

20 through the-truth. Neither pray-I for these alone, but for them also which-shall-believe 21 on me through their word; that they-all-may-be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and-I in thee, that they also may-be one in us: that the world may-believe that thou hast-sent 22 me. And the glory which thou-gavest me I have-given them; that they-may-be one,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvii. 20. these—the first disciples, more especially the apostles, to whom were fulfilled the immediately preceding petitions—see on ver. 6, 9, 11, .2, p. 400.

for them also, &c.—ch. x. 16, § 55, p. 116, 'Other sheep I have,' &c.—xi. 52, § 58, p. 133, 'The children of God that were scattered abroad.'

through their word—Those unto whom the apostles were especially sent, were 'the lost sheep of the house of Israel,' Mt. x. 6, § 39, p. 295—The ultimate destination of the apostle of the Gentiles was to 'the children of Israel,' Ac. ix. 15; unto whom, as having come to the glorious consummation of the christian dispensation, is the epistle to the Hebrews, xii. 22—.9; and unto them in their scattered condition, those of James and Peter are sent, Ja. i. 1; 1 Pe. i. 1—so also the Apocalypse, Rev. vii. 2—4—The word, 'which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord,' He. ii. 3, was not to return 'void,' Is. lv. 11—The word was to find them in the 'islands,' and 'the ends of the earth,' xli. 1, 5, 9; xlii. 10; xlv 22—.5; Je. xxxi. 10; and they are, from all quarters, to flow together, Is. xlix. 18; lx. 4, 8, 9; Je. xxxi. 10—4—ver. 12, 'They shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD,'—The good Shepherd, Eze. xxxvii. 21, .2, 'will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:'

21. That they all may be one—Ge. xlix. 10, 'Unto him [Shiloh, the Sent of God] shall the gathering of the people be.'—Ps. xlvii. 9, 'The people of the God of Abraham:'—spoken of, Ge. xlviii. 14—.9—Zec. ix. 16, 'They shall be as the stones of a crown, lifted up as an ensign upon his land.'—Je. xxxii. 38—40, 'They shall be my people, and I will be their God: 39, and I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: 40, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them,' &c.

as thou, Father, &c.—see as to the unity of the Father and the Son, ch. x. 38, § 56, p. 123; xiv. 11, p. 382.

one in us—Zec. viii. 23, 'Ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him [Christ, Ge. xlix. 8, 10] that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.'—Comp. Mt. i. 23, § 2, p. 14; xxviii. 20, § 96—It is as being joined to the Lord in an everlasting covenant, that the tribes 'scattered abroad' are to be gathered into oneness, Je. xxxi. 31—.4; xxxii. 40—.2—After the utter desolation of the land, this union is to be realized, 1. 3—5—this oneness in Christ is the consummation of the christian ministry, which is, Eph. iv. 11—.6—ver. 13, 'till we all come in [marg. into] the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God,.... 16, from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint suppleth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.'

that the world, &c.—It is when the gathering of the election of Israel hath taken place, Is. xlii. 5—7, that all the nations will indeed be called upon to acknowledge the truth of the gospel testimony, 8, 9, &c.

22. the glory which thou gavest me—2 Pe. i. 17, 'He received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son,' &c.—Jno. i. 12, § 7, p. 47, 'As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God,'

NOTES.

[Jno. xvii. 20. But for them also, &c. Not only for the first believers, who were together with one accord, and one mind, at Jerusalem, and who were chiefly of the Jewish fold; but for the other sheep, especially the lost sheep of the house of Israel, unto whom the word spoken by the apostles was to go forth, and who were ultimately to be gathered into such oneness, as to convince the world that Jesus is indeed the Sent of the Father.]

21. That they all may be one. One in every desire to glorify thee by faith in me; loving as brethren; united in soul and spirit, to serve thee with all their heart, with all their mind, and with all their strength. See ver. 11, supra, p. 401.

As thou, Father, art in me. This also is to be understood in a way of similitude, and not of sameness or equality.

That the world may believe. 'Here Christ prays for the world. Observe the sum of his whole prayer—1. Receive me into thy own and my glory. 2. Let my apostles share therein. 3. And all other believers. 4. And let all the world believe.'—Wesley.

20, .1, may be paraphrased—'Nor do I only pray for such preserving, supporting, sanctifying, and comforting influenes to my apostles; but to all who, in this and the following ages, shall be brought to a saving faith in me by means of their publication of the gospel; that the whole number of believers in all generations may be joined together as one body, in faith and love, worship and obedience, by one Spirit, in as near a resemblance as possible to that union which we have by our mutual in-being; and that, in their measure, they may be united to us; that others, beholding the powerful effects of the gospel on them, may be induced to believe in me as the promised Messiah.'—Brown.

[22. And the glory, &c. The sense appears to be, And I have given to them a portion of that glorious Spirit, which thou gavest me.—See ch. iii. 34, § 13, p. 91; 2 Co. iii. 18. Christ here, as in ver. 18, speaks of that which he would surely do, as if it were already done.]

May be one, even as we are one. Evincing, as the Father and the Son had always done, the same

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

the truth: the truth of those shadowy rites and sacrifices of which he was himself the substance. He put an end to the typical priesthood, that he might make his disciples 'a royal priesthood,' who should offer up spiritual sacrifices—the sacrifice of prayer and praise, acceptable unto God through Jesus Christ.]

[Jno. xvii. 20. In praying for others besides his immediate followers, Jesus prays for them as those who are his, not according to the word of the fathers, the councils, or the popes. It was through the words of the apostles, as contained in the New Testament, that we came to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. Blessed be God, we are so far in the very condition of those for whom more especially intercession is made by our one Mediator. He does not pray for those who believe in his blessed mother, or in holy mother church, or in the bishop of Rome: but for those who are simply believers in Christ, who claim a right to receive instruction immediately from the apostolic writings, and who hold the great Protestant doctrine of justification by faith—who, in opposition to the church of Rome, weakened, and our enemies laugh among themselves. Our wants are known to the Saviour—He prays that our contentions may cease, that we all may be one—He prays for a unity of which Rome cannot boast. Our Exemplar is Divine, 'as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us:']

[The unity for which our Redeemer prays is desirable, not for its own sake alone, but on account

JOHN xvii. 23—6.

23 even-as we are one: I in them, and thou in me, that they-may-be made-perfect τετελειωμενοι in one εις ἑν; and that the world may-know that thou hast-sent me, and hast-
24 loved them, as thou-hast-loved me. Father, I-will θελω that they-also, whom thou-hast-given me, be with me where I am; that they-may-behold θεωρωσι my glory, which thou-25 hast-given me: for thou-lovedst me before the-foundation of-the-world. O-righteous Father, the world hath-not-known thee: but I have-known thee, and these have-26 known that thou hast-sent me. And I-have-declared unto-them thy name, and will-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xvii. 22. one, even as we are one—see on ver. 11 p. 401.

23. I in them, and thou in me—Col. i. 27, 'Christ in you, the hope of glory:'—The Son of man, in whom, ii. 9, 'dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.' —Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43, 'Shall come in the glory of his Father'—and fully manifest power in raising from the dead. &c., Jno. v. 25—.9, § 23, p. 178.

perfect in one—Eph. i. 10, 'That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth: even in him:'—Ph. iii. 20, 21, 'For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.'—He. xi. 40, 'God having provided [marg. foreseen] some better thing for us, that they (the Old Testament saints) without us should not be made perfect.'—xii. 23, 'The spirits of just men made perfect,' that the world may know—Ps. cvii. 42, 'The righteous shall see it, and rejoice: and all iniquity shall stop her mouth.'—Is. xlix. 26, 'All flesh shall know that I the LORD am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.'—Mt. xxv. 31—46, § 86, pp. 351—.4, 'When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them,' &c.

and hast loved them, &c.—1 Jno. iii. 1, 2, 'Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.'

24. be with me where I am—ch. xii. 26, § 82, p. 327, 'If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.'—xiv. 2, 3, p. 380, supra, 'In my Father's house are many mansions:.... I go to prepare a place for you.... I will come again, and receive you unto myself: that where I am, there ye may be also.'—Mt. xxv. 34, § 86, p. 352, 'Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father,' &c.—1 Th. iv. 17, 'And so shall we ever be with the Lord.'

behold my glory—Rev. xxi. 10, .1, 'And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God:' &c.—1 Co. ii. 7—10, 'We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:' &c.

before the foundation of the world—'Before the world was,' ver. 5, p. 399, supra.

25. righteous Father—Jesus Christ hath been, Rom. iii. 24—.6, 'set forth' to declare the Father's righteousness, 'that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.'

but I have known thee—ch. i. 18, § 7, p. 48, 'No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.'—Comp. iii. 11, .3, § 12, p. 84.

and these have known, &c.—see the prayer for this knowledge, Eph. i. 15—23—the supplanting power of the knowledge of Christ, iv. 17—32—in directing us in our general conduct through life, v. 1—21—in teaching us how to act in the different relations of life, 22—33; vi. 1—9, &c.—The apostle counted all as nothing—yea, as less than nothing, in comparison of 'the excellency of the knowledge of Christ,' which he was still most earnestly seeking to obtain, Ph. iii. 8—15—2 Pe. i. 3, 'All things that pertain unto life and godliness, [are given unto us] through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:'

26. have declared unto them thy name—ver. 6, 11, .2, pp. 399, 401, supra—see the name, 1 Jno. iv. 8, 'God is love,' Mt. v. 44—.8, § 19, p. 128, 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you'.... That ye may be the children great aim and plan, not pursuing different interests, or counteracting each other's purposes, or forming parties, but seeking the same ends, by the same means. This is the union between the Father and the Son. Always in the creation, preservation, and redemption of the world, they have sought the same object. And this is to be the model on which Christians should act.

NOTES.

Jno. xvii. 23. That the world may know, &c. When they shall see the concord and agreement of the saints in doctrine, worship, and affection at the latter day.

24. Behold. The word 'behold' implies more than simply seeing. It means also to participate, to enjoy.

25. Righteous Father. The admission of believers to God through Christ, flows even from the justice of God.

26. I have declared unto them thy name. Thy new, best name of LOVE.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

of the advantage that is thence to accrue to the world at large, with all parts of which we have so remarkably been brought into connection; and that as seeking to make all the races of mankind acquainted with the truth of the gospel of the grace of God. It remains that we concentrate and unite our efforts, and that our testimony be accompanied by that long-promised miracle, the scattered tribes of Israel gathered into that oneness for which our Saviour prays.]

[We cannot expect the apostleship of Christ to be acknowledged by the world, until it is effectual in the case of those unto whom He was more especially sent, 'the lost sheep of the house of Israel'—'the twelve tribes scattered abroad.' When in their case is seen the fulfilment of Old Testament prophecy, and the design of God in sending the gospel so directly north-westward; when the unity of the Divine purpose, as expressed in creation, providence, and revelation, is seen in the redemption of Israel; then will the world be indeed given evidence that Jesus is the Christ.]

Jno. xvii. 22. See margin.

23 ver. Oh, that Christ may dwell within us, and the Father in Christ put forth his almighty power, that the disciples of Christ may be made perfect in one! So will the truth of Jesus' Divine mission and of God's love for his people be made manifest in all the earth.

24 ver. It is when we have glorified God upon the earth that we may expect to enjoy the New Jerusalem, our Father's house eternal in the heavens.

[25 ver. The world cannot teach us the knowledge of God—nor can we ourselves in our present imperfect state receive the fulness of this knowledge; but it is all treasured up in Christ our glorious Head, and will be dispensed to the members of his body according as we are able to bear it.]

JOHN xvii. 26.

declare it: that the love wherewith thou-hast-loved me may-be in them, and-I in them.

(G. 92.)—Jesus departs from the supper chamber to the mount of Olives; he foretells a third time that Peter should thrice deny him; he promises to appear to the disciples in Galilee after his resurrection. Jerusalem.*

MATT. xxvi. 30—.5. (Ver. 29, p. 379.)	MARK xiv. 26—31. (Ver. 25, p. ib.)	LUKE xxii. 39. (Ver. 38, p. 377.)	JOHN xviii. 1.
			[a] When-Jesus-had- I spoken these words,[b]
30 And when-they-had-sung-an-hymn, they-went-out	26 [b] And when-they-had-sung-an-hymn,[c] they-went-out	And 39
		[c] he-came-out, and-went, as he was-wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.[d] (Ver. 40, p. 418.)	he-went-forth into the mount of Olives.	into the mount of Olives.		with his disciples
			[d] over the brook Cedron,[e]

[For remainder of ver. 1, see p. 412.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

of your Father which is in heaven: ... Be ye therefore perfect [perfect in love], even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect'—Jno. iii. 16, § 12, p. 86, 'For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son,' &c.

Jno. xvii. 26. that the love, &c.—1 Pe. i. 22, 'Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:'—This love, as contrasted with that of the flesh, is unfading, ver. 23—.5—and comp. with 1 Jno. ii. 15—7.

and I in them—Ga. ii. 20, 'Not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.'—See Jno. xv. 1—4, p. 387, supra.

Mt. xxvi. 30. And when they had sung an hymn—Probably before leaving the apartment in which they had celebrated the passover, and thus at the close of the address, Jno. xiv., p. 386, supra—If the hymn were the fourth of the six (Ps cxiii.—cxviii.) usually sung at the passover, it was both appropriate to the preceding discourse—comp. ver. xiv. 31, p. 386, supra, 'I love the Father,' &c., with Ps. cxvi., 'I love the LORD:'—and it was also a fit introduction to the scene in the garden—comp. ver 3, 4, with Mt. xxvi. 38, 39, § 88, p. 413 — Hymns are referred to, Eph. v. 19; Col. iii. 16.

Lu. xxii. 39. as he was wont—see Jno. viii. 1, § 55, p. 97; Mt. xxiv. 3, § 86, p. 324.

mount of Olives — where, while the multitude rejoiced, ch. xix. 37, § 82, p. 263, Jesus 'beheld the city, and wept over it,' ver. 41— 4, § ib, p. 264.

Jno. xviii. 1. over the brook Cedron—'The brook Kidron,' 2 Sa. xv. 23; 1 Ki. xv. 13; 2 Ki. xxiii. 6, 12; Je. xxxi. 40, &c.

NOTES.

Jno. xvii. 25, .6, may be paraphrased—And as, according to my commission, I have fully declared to them whatever was proper, and have savingly enlightened them in the knowledge of thyself, I will, after my resurrection, by personal visits; and after my ascension by the effusion of my Spirit, more clearly and fully acquaint them with thy glorious perfections and will, that the infinite love with which thou hast from eternity loved me, may extend to, and manifest itself in them; and that I may dwell in their hearts by faith, till they arrive at that perfection of eternal blessedness which, in thy distinguishing love, thou hast prepared for them.

Mt. xxvi. 30 Sung an hymn. The Jews usually sung, after their repasts, verses or pious songs. The psalms which our Saviour and his disciples sung or recited, immediately before their departure to the mount of Olives, were probably the cxv., cxvi., cxvii., and cxviii. The hymn, or Hallel, which was usually sung or recited at the passover, consisted of the six psalms from the cxiii., to cxviii., inclusive. The first two were recited at an early part of the supper, the remaining four were recited at the conclusion.

Lu. xxii. 39. As he was wont. Comp. ch. xxi. 37, § 86, p. 357.

Jno. xviii. 1. Over the brook Cedron. This brook had its name probably from קדר, Kadar, he was black; it being the place into which the blood of the sacrifices, and other filth of the city, ran. It was rather, says Lightfoot, the sink, or the common sewer, of the city, than a brook. Some copyists, mistaking Κέδρων for Greek, have changed τῶν into τῶν, and thus have written τῶν Κέδρων, of cedars, instead of τοῦ Κέδρου, the brook of Cedron: but this last is undoubtedly the genuine reading.—See GROT. NOTICE, p. 407.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xvii 26. The knowledge of God is increasingly revealed, not for our mere intellectual gratification, but that we may be more and more formed after the Divine image—that we may be able to say, 'I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me:' (Ga. ii. 20). Oh, that the prayer of Jesus may be answered in us!]

Mt. xxvi 30. In that night Jesus had much to say, to do, and to suffer—but still he found opportunity to join in the customary hymn with his disciples. In this also, his ready obedience to his Father's will, let us follow his example; and rejoice in being counted worthy to suffer with him.

* 'Our Lord would set out for the mount of Olives in the last hour of the second watch of the night, or between our eleven and twelve o'clock. The period of the year was the vernal equinox, and the day of the month about two days before the full of the moon: in which case the moon would be now not very far past her meridian, and the night would be enlightened until a late hour towards the morning. The suburbs of Jerusalem were full of gardens (Jos. B. Jud. v. iii. 2, vi. i. 1), and Gethsemane, as the name implies (denoting the place of the wine-presse-), was one of these, or in the vicinity of one of these, to the east of Jerusalem, and five or six stades remote from the walls of the city, across the valley or torrent of Cedron.'—Greswell.

MATT. xxvi. 31—5.

31 'Then saith Jesus unto-them,
All ye shall-be-offended because-of me εν εμοι this night: for it-is-written,
I-will-smite the shepherd, and the sheep of-the flock shall-be-scattered-abroad
32 But after I am-risen-again, I-will-go
-before προαξω you into Galilee.
33 Peter answered and-said unto-him,
Though all men shall-be-offended because-of thee, yet will-I never-be-offended.ƒ 34 Jesus said unto-him, Verily I-say unto-thee, That this night, before the-cock crow,
thou-shalt-deny me thrice.
35 Peter said unto-him,

Though I should die with thee,
yet will-I-not-deny thee.
ε Likewise also said all the disciples.
(Ver. 36, § 88, p. 412.)

MARK xiv. 27—31.

And Jesus saith unto-them, 27
All ye-shall-be-offended because-of
me εν εμοι this night: for it-is-written,
I-will-smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall-be-scattered.
But after that I am-risen, I-will-go- 28
before προαξω you into Galilee.
But Peter said unto-him, 29
Although all shall-be-offended, yet will not I.
ƒ And Jesus saith unto-him, Verily I-say 30 unto-thee, That this-day, even in this night, before the-cock crow
twice, thou-shalt-deny me thrice.
But he-spake the- 31
more vehemently εκ περισσου,
If I should die-with thee,
I-will-not-deny thee in-any-wise.ε
Likewise also said-they all.
(Ver. 32, § ibid.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 31. offended—ch. xi. 6, § 29, p. 223, 'Blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.'—It is as remembering and knowing in truth the words of Jesus, that the disciples are kept from being offended, Jno. xvi. 1, p. 392, supra.

it is written, I will smite, &c.—Zec. xiii. 7, 'Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the LORD of hosts: smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered:' &c.

32. after I am risen again, &c.—These words would naturally lead the minds of the disciples back to the mountain on which the transfiguration had taken place, Mk. ix. 9, 10, § 51, p. 57—It was immediately before that event, viii. 31, § 50, p. 40, and after it, ix. 31, § 52, p. 71, that he most pointedly predicted his death and resurrection.

into Galilee—see Lu. xxiv. 6, 7, § 93, p. 488.

33. Though all men shall be offended, &c.—see the warning to all the disciples, ver. 31, supra—Peter had before been particularly warned, Jno. xiii. 36—8, p. 374, supra; Lu. xxii. 31—4, p. 376.

Mk. xiv. 31. vehemently—As vehemently does he appear to have expressed his third denial, ch. xiv. 71, § 89, p. 432.

Mt. xxvi. 35. Likewise also said all the disciples—And yet very shortly after, even that very night, ver. 56, § 88, p. 421, 'All the disciples forsook him, and fled.' —1 Co. x. 12, 'Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.'—Mk. xiii. 37, § 86, p. 342, 'And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 32. Will go before, &c. προαξω υμας εις τ. Γ. Here there is a continuation of the pastoral metaphor of the preceding verse; and the force of the figure becomes clear by bearing in mind the oriental custom of the shepherd not following but preceding and leading the sheep.—See Jno. x. 4, § 55, p. 114.

33. Peter answered... Though all, &c. The word men is improperly inserted here by the translators. Peter meant only to affirm this of the disciples. Though all the disciples, &c. This confidence of Peter was entirely characteristic. He was ardent, sincere, and really attached to his Master. This declaration was made evidently—1. From true love to Jesus. 2. From too much reliance on his own strength. 3. From ignorance of himself, and of the trials which he was soon to pass through. And it most impressively teaches us—1. That no strength of attachment to Jesus can justify such confident promises of fidelity, made without dependence on him. 2. That all promises to adhere to him, should be made relying on him for aid. 3. That we little know how feeble we are, till we are tried.

34. Before the cock crow. During the time of our Saviour, the night was divided into four watches, a fourth watch having been introduced among the Jews from the Romans, who derived it from the Greeks. The second and third watches are mentioned Lu. xii 38, § 63, p. 167; the fourth in Mt. xiv. 25, § 41, p. 319; and the four are all distinctly mentioned in Mk. xiii. 35, § 86, p. 342, 'Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even (οψε, or the late watch), or at midnight (μεσονυκτιον), or at the cockcrowing (αλεκτοροφωνιας), or in the morning (πρωι, the early watch).' Here the first watch was at even, and continued from six till nine; the second commenced at nine and ended at twelve, or midnight; the third watch, called by the Romans gallicinium, lasted from twelve to three; and the morning watch closed at six.

[It has been thought a contradiction, that Mk. xiv 30, says, πριν ἢ δις φωνησαι. But there will be none, if it be considered that the heathens reckoned two cock crowings; of which the second (about daybreak) was the more remarkable, and was that called, κατ' ἐξοχην, the cock-crowing: thus the sense will be, "before that time of night, or early morn, which is especially called the cock-crowing, thou shalt deny me thrice." In Mark (who relates the thing more circumstantially, but with no real discrepancy,) the expression και ἀλεκτωρ ἐφωνησε may be rendered, "and it was cock-crowing time;" in Luke and John, οὐ μη ἀλεκτωρ φωνησει, "it shall not be cock-crowing time." '—Bloomf.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvi. 31. It is well to be forewarned of the dangers that lie before us—the evil may not thereby be altogether prevented; but it is something if we are convinced of our own weakness, and are led into a fuller view of the truthfulness of God. We know that we are in the circumstances contemplated by the Redeemer of Israel, and out of which he hath promised to redeem; and that He will gather together into one the children of God that were scattered abroad.]

[That man is not to be regarded as an outcast who is severely and even frequently rebuked by his Lord. Peter, after being fully convinced of his own need of forgiveness, was soon to have the honour of being the most zealous and successful in proclaiming the grace of God to others.]

35 ver. Let us beware of vowing, in our own strength; but let us pray earnestly that we may not be allowed by our Lord to deny him in any wise. His warnings are invitatious to seek in Him all we need.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.

CEDRON—KIDRON.—John xviii. 1, p. 405.

'KIDRON (קִדְרוֹן), the turbid; Sept., κέδρων), the brook or winter torrent, which flows through the valley of Jehoshaphat (as it is now called), on the east side of Jerusalem. "The brook Kidron" is the only name by which "the valley" itself is known in scripture; for it is by no means certain, nor even probable, that the name "valley of Jehoshaphat," in Joel iii. 12, was intended to apply to this valley. The word rendered "brook," 2 Sa. xv. 23; 1 Ki. ii. 37, &c., is נַחַל, nachal, which may be taken as equivalent to the Arabic, wady, meaning a stream, and its bed or valley, or properly the valley of a stream, even when the stream is dry. The Septuagint, Josephus, and the evangelist, Jno. xviii. 1, designate it χειμάρρους, a storm brook, or winter torrent.

'The BROOK KIDRON derives all its importance from its vicinity to the holy city, being nothing more than the dry bed of a winter torrent, bearing marks of being occasionally swept over by a large volume of water. No stream flows through it, except during the heavy rains of winter, when the waters descend into it from the neighbouring hills. But even in winter there is no constant flow, and the resident missionaries assured Dr. Robinson that they had not, during several years, seen a stream running through the valley. The ravine in which the stream is collected takes its origin above a mile to the north-east of the city. This ravine deepens as it proceeds, and forms an angle opposite the temple. It then takes a south-east direction, and passing between the village of Siloam and the city, runs off in the direction of the Dead Sea, through a singularly wild gorge, the course of which few travellers have traced (Pictorial Palestine, Introd. p. cxciv.) It is in this ravine that the celebrated monastery of Santa Saba is situated.'—Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature.

In 'A Narrative of Journeyings in the Land of Israel,' by Robert Willan, Feb. 1843, the author says, 'From thence (the pool of Siloam) I descended to the bottom of the hill, and turned up the road leading northward to the valley of Jehoshaphat. This is marked in many maps as a stream of water—the BROOK KIDRON; but the road in which I walked was in the very centre of the valley, and there were no traces of water having run over it. As a great quantity of rain had previously fallen, I had expected to see some traces of the "wintry torrent," spoken of by Dr. Robinson, but saw none. On my right, frightful high rocks rose precipitously; above which, on the very edge of the precipice, was the village of Siloam. A considerable quantity of rain fell after this, during my stay at Jerusalem, but never sufficient to cause any flow down the valley.'—Pp. 106, 7.

In 'A Pastor's Memorial of . . . . Jerusalem,' &c.,* the author, in describing his journey to the Dead Sea, says, p. 238, after leaving Jerusalem, 'The route lay south-east between a rapid succession of hills of a beautiful form and considerable magnitude, some of them partially covered with short grass and other herbage, and the others rugged and bare. The fantastically winding course of the brook Kidron was at our feet on the right; and beyond it, at about an hour and a half distant from Jerusalem, we found a rather large Arab encampment under the brow of a hill, and near it numerous flocks of sheep and goats grazing. We were too distant to exchange salutations with the shepherds. An Arab encampment is unlike what many would suppose. The tents are very low, not sufficiently high to admit of an adult person standing upright in them. They are pitched together in rows, and made of camel's hair, stained or dyed black. Altogether they are as unpicturesque as their inhabitants are the reverse.

'The bridle ways in these mountain passes not being wide enough for even two persons to ride abreast, except now and then for a few yards, we continued our route in lengthened procession, entertaining it as we might by snatches of conversation. Every part of the scene was extremely wild and beautiful; and it was quite surprising to see how our little compact Arab palfreys climbed and scrambled over the most difficult places which lay in our way, more like cats or monkeys than anything else. Let them but have their heads, and take their own course, and they carry you through wonderfully. But if you try to shew yourself wiser than your horse, it is ten to one but he may chance to stumble with you. I have tried the experiment.

'After about three hours, the bed of the Kidron assumes a remarkably bold and peculiar aspect. It is, in fact, a vast and terrible chasm. I cannot venture to compute its depth. It appears as if ocean streams had once forced their wilful way through it, and made the stubborn rocks submissive. It winds rapidly and abruptly, and presents the appearance of a vast amphitheatre at every bend, in which the seats, or rather rows of seats, lying along in the greatest regularity, consist of the natural, horizontal strata of the dark rocks. In the thousands of fissures on either side, numberless birds had their nests, and were skimming about in the depth below. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and stupendous magnificence of this ravine, at the very edge of which lay our narrow path—the path trodden for ages—the only path. It looks like a scene of tremendous natural convulsions.

'While riveted to the enjoyment of this extraordinary picture (upon about a mile of which I could look back as already passed), I gazed eagerly forward towards a new turn in the road, and immediately before us—built up from the very bed of the ravine, and ascending to the level on which we were passing, stood the most wonderful structure of its kind I have ever seen—a place of immense strength, castellated, and unassailable except by a heavy cannonade. It was the convent of Mar Saba, to the superior of which we had obtained a letter of recommendation from the Greek convent of Jerusalem, Mar Saba itself belonging to the same community. Here we had resolved to make a claim of hospitality, and to pass the night.'

'Mr. Madden, who went through the valley to the Dead Sea, thus speaks of the character which it assumes as it approaches the monastery:—"After traversing for the last hour a wild ravine, formed by two rugged perpendicular mountains, the sides of which contained innumerable caverns, which once formed a sort of troglodyte city, in which the early Christians resided, the sight of the convent in this desolate place was like a glimpse of paradise." On leaving the convent the next day, he says that he 'marched through the bed of the KIDRON, along the horrible ravine which he entered the day before; but he gives no account of its outlet into the Dead Sea. This defect is supplied by Dr. Robinson (Biblical Researches, Vol. II. p. 249), who, on passing along the western borders of the lake, came "to the deep and almost impassable ravine of the KIDRON, running down by Mar Saba, and thence called Wady-er-Rahib, 'Monk's Valley,' but here also bearing the name of Wady-en-Nar, 'Fire Valley.' At this place it was running E.S.E., in a deep narrow channel, between perpendicular walls of rock, as if worn away by the rushing waters between these desolate chalky hills. There was, however, no water in it now; nor had there apparently been any for a long time."'—Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature.

* 'Most travellers who take this journey from Jerusalem, proceed direct to Jericho on the first day, and pitch their tents for the night. On the following morning they visit the northern shore of the Dead Sea, which is somewhere about two hours distant in a direct route; then the river Jordan, distant about an hour and a half from the Dead Sea, and return to their tents worn and exhausted by the almost intolerable heat. On the third day they commonly return to Jerusalem by the way they came, or by way of Mar Saba; in which latter case they visit the Jordan first, and then the Dead Sea. We made our journey in a manner quite the reverse of this, and though it was performed on the thirtieth of June, and the two first days of July, yet we suffered no real inconvenience. Indeed, the severity of the heat was in a great degree avoided. Having made the experiment so successfully, I would strongly recommend all travellers to do as we did, and make a condition about it while bargaining with their shiekh for the escort.'—Ibid.

CAST AWAY FROM YOU ALL YOUR TRANSGRESSIONS, WHEREBY YE HAVE TRANSGRESSED; AND MAKE YOU A NEW HEART AND A NEW SPIRIT: FOR WHY WILL YE DIE, O HOUSE OF ISRAEL?—Ezek. xviii. 31.

ADDENDA.

ON THE TIME OF THE CELEBRATION OF THE LAST SUPPER.

See Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xli. pp. 133—.72, and Diss. xlii. pp. 173—.83.

'That the supper, which our Lord celebrated with the apostles the night before he suffered, is called and is to be considered, in some sense, as a Passover, appears indisputably from Mt. xxvi. 17—30; Mk. xiv. 12—.7, and Lu. xxii. 7—14 (p. 362): but especially from Lu. xxii. 15 (p. 364), when the celebration was actually begun. That this was the same supper as that which begins to be related Jno. xvii. 1 (p. 365), and continues to be related until ch. xviii. 1 (p. 405), is equally certain both from many common circumstances belonging to each, and because the event of the supper was the same in each; viz., that Jesus, the same night and after the celebration of this supper, was betrayed.

'Yet this supper, at the very commencement of the thirteenth chapter, is declared to be πρὸ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα: during its celebration the feast is supposed to be still to come, ch. xviii. 28, p. 376: the morning after the supper is called the παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, ch. xix. 14, § 90 (p. 445); the Jews, who brought our Lord that morning to Pilate, would not enter the prætorium, lest they should be defiled, but ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πάσχα, ch. xviii. 28, § 86. (p. 440); and in the course of the deliberations, respecting the disposal of Jesus, Pilate speaks of the passover as either at hand or only just begun that morning, but not yet past, ver. 39, § 86. (p. 443).

'The import of all these testimonies is clearly to establish the conclusion that, at the time of the supper the night before, the feast of the passover was not yet come: and to this effect the first of the number, perhaps, is the most important, and the most decisive of any. It is possible to distinguish between the paschal sacrifice as such, and the feast of unleavened bread. The proper name of the former is τὸ πάσχα—the proper name of the latter τὰ ἄζυμα; the proper time of the former was the fourteenth of the month Nisan—the proper time of the latter from the fifteenth to the twenty-first inclusive. The sacrifice, however, of the passover was so intimately the prelude to the feast of unleavened bread, and the absence of leaven was so essential a condition to the ceremonial of the passover itself, that neither the phrase τὰ ἄζυμα, or ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν ἀζύμων, can be employed ἁπλῶς, without including the paschal supper, nor the phrase τὸ πάσχα, or ἡ ἑορτὴ τοῦ πάσχα, without including the feast of unleavened bread. Much less is it possible that the phrase, ἡ ἑορτὴ τοῦ πάσχα, should be so employed for the feast of unleavened bread in the complex, and not include the feast of the paschal sacrifice in particular. Such at least is not the usage of St. John, nor of any other of the writers of the New Testament; for examples, see p. 136, Vol. III.

'We have no option except to assume that our Lord in particular antedated, by one day, the true time of the passover: and if it can be made to appear that he had special reasons for so doing—reasons, which rendered it absolutely impossible that he could keep the passover at the usual time on the occasion before he suffered—the truth of the alternative may be considered as sufficiently established.

'I take it for granted that the legal period, at which only the passover could be duly celebrated, was the fourteenth of the month Abib, Nisan, or Xanthicus, κατὰ σελήνην (Ex. xii. ; xiii. 4—8; xxiii. 15; xxxiv. 18; Le. xxiii. 5—8; Nu. ix. 2, 3; xxviii. 16—25; xxxiii. 3; De. xvi. 1—8; Jos. v. 10, 11; 2 Chr. xxix. ; xxx. 1—3, 15, 21; xxxv. 1—19; Ezra vi. 19)—and consequently, that the question is, whether our Lord celebrated it on this day or on the day before it; on the fourteenth, or on the thirteenth, of the month prescribed. As to the day of the week there can be no uncertainty. It was the day before he suffered: and that day was Friday: his passover therefore was kept on the night of the Thursday.

'In St. Matthew's account of our Saviour's message to the man in the city, the particular stress which is laid upon the circumstance ὁ καιρός μου ἐγγύς ἐστιν, ch. xxvi. 18, may justly be considered to imply that the passover, about to be celebrated, was something out of course. The man, to whom the message was sent, was probably a believer in Christ; or our Saviour would not address him in such terms as the Master saith. Now the injunction of the law, and the invariable practice of the Jews, both required that the passover should be kept within Jerusalem; and our Lord manifestly complies with each so far as to send his disciples to make ready for him in the city. But when it is considered that the resort of strangers, at the seasons of the feasts and in peaceful times, was such as many times to double its ordinary population, it will be evident that, for the accommodation of so great an influx of visitors, the houses of the regular inhabitants must all have been thrown open to their reception. Μέρισι γαρ ἀπὸ μυρίων δεων πλέων, οἱ μὲν διὰ γῆς οἱ δὲ διὰ θαλάττης, ἐξ ἁπανταχῆς καὶ ὀδοιπορίας, καὶ ἔμπορος καὶ μισηθρίας, καθ' ἑκάστην ἑορτὴν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν συνάγονται (Philo. Jud. ii. 223, l. 15—8, De Monar. ii.). And that this is no exaggerated description appears from the numbers assembled at the passovers U.C. 819, and U.C. 823, respectively. Vide Appendix. The former of which amounted to two or three millions, and the latter to more than one million. It was an ὄχλος πάμπολυς, says Josephus, b. iv. iii. 3, to receive into Jerusalem, καὶ τὸ ἀμφθαλὲς ἀναχαρτήσαι. Nor was even this facility of admission, at such times as those of the passovers, sufficient for the reception and entertainment of all parties, without the further necessity of forming themselves into ἑταιρίας, sodalitia, companies, or households; varying from ten to twenty in number.

'The message of our Lord, then, though sent to an householder in Jerusalem, announcing in his own name, and in that of his twelve disciples, that he meant to keep the passover at his house, if sent at the regular time, would have been nothing extraordinary. It was what any one, under such circumstances, might have undertaken to send; the right of admission into some house within the city belonged, at every season, whether from Judea, from Galilee, or from abroad, who came up to attend the feast. What necessity, then, for an especial reason—or even for any reason at all—in claiming it now? and why should not the simple notification of our Lord's wish, if made at the regular season and in the regular manner, have been sufficient, particularly for a disciple? . . .

'If we are to believe the testimony of Philo Judæus, the master of every household, or some one of person in the name and on the behalf of a particular paschal company, which in the present instance would be Peter and John, without having recourse to the ministry of the regular priesthood, was empowered to act as his own priest: and consequently, as we may presume, at home, not in the temple, for the immolation of their peculiar paschal victim. . . .

'The circumstances of the first passover, Ex. xii. 6, must evidently have been such as Philo describes; and if we consider the vast multitude of victims which were required to be sacrificed on such occasions, a multitude which Josephus computed at 256,500, and the short space of time within which they must all have been sacrificed, which he states likewise at merely two hours, ἀπὸ δυοῖν ὡρῶν, μάλιστ' ἐνδεκάτην, it is utterly impossible that so many could have been offered within such a time, unless all had been offered at once, that is, unless every master of a family was sacrificing and preparing his own victim at the same moment with another. I have been the more diffuse on this subject, with a view to anticipate a possible objection; viz., how our Lord could have celebrated his paschal supper, out of the usual course, without attracting any particular notice.

'Though the sanhedrim, in their consultation on the evening of Wednesday, Mt. xxvi. 3—5; Mk xiv. 1, 2 (p. 355), came to the resolution indeed of putting Jesus to death, yet they had concluded also not to effect the resolution, at least during the feast; ἵνα μὴ θόρυβος γένηται ἐν τῷ λαῷ. The feast, as it would be useless to deny, must have been begun when the passover day was arrived and past: hence if Jesus was apprehended on the day after that, he must have been apprehended in the midst of the feast. Where, however, is the proof of any change in the resolution of the sanhedrim, which had come to a contrary conclusion? It cannot be said that the overture of Judas, though made directly afterwards, must have produced it; for that overture would rather confirm than alter the pre-existing determination. The object of the sanhedrim was twofold; to get possession of Jesus ἄδλῳ first, and to put him to death afterwards; and what they were at a loss about for a time was the first of these two things. The proposal of Judas, being the offer of a confidential disciple to betray his master, clearly removed the difficulty upon this head: but they must still have stipulated with him that he should effect his engagement as secretly as possible, or St. Matthew, St. Mark, and especially St. Luke, would not say that, after concluding it, ἐζήτει εὐκαιρίαν τοῦ παραδοῦναι αὐτὸν αὐτοῖς ἄτερ ὄχλου, ch. xxii. 6 (μ. 357): which means, without trouble, tumult, or disturbance; and not, without a multitude, much less the multitude.

REPENT, AND TURN . . . . FROM ALL YOUR TRANSGRESSIONS; SO INIQUITY SHALL NOT BE YOUR RUIN.—Ezek. xviii. 30.
I HAVE NO PLEASURE IN THE DEATH OF HIM THAT DIETH, SAITH THE LORD GOD:—Ezek. xviii. 32.

WHOSOEVER SHALL EAT THIS BREAD, AND DRINK THIS CUP OF THE LORD, UNWORTHILY, SHALL BE GUILTY OF THE BODY AND BLOOD OF THE LORD.—1 Cor. xi. 27.

'The original precaution, then, of not attempting the apprehension of Jesus during the feast, or in the open day before the people, was not abandoned even at last; as the very circumstances of the apprehension itself prove. And this would still be in unison with the event, if our Lord was arrested on the night of the Thursday, and put to death on the morning of the Friday; before the feast was yet begun.....

'The Divine Providence might so order it, that the proposal of Judas should be made to the sanhedrim before the feast, and neither during it nor after it; and the same Providence might likewise so order it, that the necessary opportunity for effecting his purpose should occur the very night before the feast, and neither earlier nor later. Now when he went out, as we shall see hereafter, upon receiving the sop, the night was somewhat advanced, but the paschal ceremony was far from being over: and he went out, as the rest of the company supposed, to buy what was wanted against the feast. He would go, then, as they supposed, to the shops, or where such things were to be procured. If so, neither could it have been late in the evening on any day, nor could it have been the evening of the passover on that day in particular. After sunset, on the evening of the passover, both because of the sabbath which would then have begun, and because of the celebration of the passover which would be going on, no shop would be open in Jerusalem, nor any dealings of buying or selling any longer practicable: all persons, both old and young, both male and female, both the inhabitants and the stranger, would then be simultaneously engaged until midnight at least.....

'It is certain, however, that Judas must have gone straight to the sanhedrim, expecting to have access to it; and as he received from the sanhedrim the force with which he accomplished his purpose, it is certain also that he must have had access to it. The members of that council, therefore, were either assembled at the time of his arrival, or easily got together afterwards; which renders it exceedingly improbable that they were previously engaged on their respective pursuits. The same thing is true of the band; all of whom, the cohort, the captains, and the servants, we may take it for granted, consisted of Jews; the former, of those who had the custody of the temple, the latter, of officers of the sanhedrim. If so, these too would have been bound to keep the passover that year; and unless it had been already kept, or unless they had been purposely disturbed while keeping it, they could not have come on such an errand as this that night: it is not even probable that they would have been sent upon it. ...

'If our arrangement of the preceding days of the week be correct, the course of particulars closed with the evening of Wednesday, and with the prophecy on the mount. At the end of that prophecy the following words were subjoined, Mt. xxvi. 1, 2—And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of all these sayings, that he said to his disciples, Ye know that after two days the passover taketh place, and the Son of man is to be delivered up to be crucified. Now two days from the evening of Wednesday cannot possibly denote a less time than the day but one after; that is, the Friday following. Unless, then, it can be shewn that we are wrong in supposing these words, ver. 1, 2, to have been spoken on the Wednesday, that is, in supposing the day of our Lord's procession to have been the Monday, the argument deducible from the authority of this passage, that the passover would take place on the Friday, and consequently that the Friday would be the fourteenth of Nisan, amounts to a demonstration.

'The strictness with which, at this period of their history, and indeed at every period before, when the law possessed its due force, the Jews observed the sabbath, must be among the strongest presumptive disproofs, amounting to a moral impossibility, that any one of the numerous particulars, connected with the apprehension, the examination, the judgment, and the execution, of our Lord, could have taken place on that day. It is well known that for a time they would not defend their lives on the sabbath day, nor afterwards, except in case of an attack. On more than one occasion the capture of Jerusalem was mainly due to this single cause; and the folly of the Jews, in that respect, as it was considered by the Gentiles, appeared most unaccountable, and exposed them to constant sarcasm and reproach, Ant. Jud. xii. ii.

'Both the arrival and the expiration of the sabbatic rest were formerly notified to the people by the sound of a trumpet; that they might know when to suspend and when to resume their ordinary employments, Bell. iv. ix. 12. ....

'The people, who could consider such forbearances as these to be points of conscience upon the sabbath were not likely to be parties in that profanation of its sanctity, which every circumstance in our Lord's passion must otherwise have produced. Now if our Lord kept his passover at the usual time, on the night after the fourteenth of Nisan, he was apprehended, tried, and crucified, on the fifteenth: and the fifteenth, being the first of the seven days ἄζυμων, as well as the twenty-first which was the last, by express appointment was an extraordinary sabbath; possessing, if possible, whensoever it might fall, greater holiness, and certainly not less, than the ordinary.

'Or though this should be conceded with respect to our Lord, why, at the same juncture and on the same occasion, it may yet be demanded, were two common malefactors, in whose case there was clearly nothing more than ordinary, put to death along with him? What urgent necessity or special reason made these, as well as our Saviour, to be executed on a sabbath? It appears to me that the crucifixion of the two thieves along with Christ, besides its subserviency to the fulfilment of prophecy, which was the final end proposed by Providence in permitting it, proves that the feast was just at hand, but not yet come. They had not been executed before it, and they could not be executed during it; the case of St. Peter, in the twelfth chapter of the Acts, must be a clear proof that, while the great legal solemnities were going on, no criminal nor prisoner, for whatever offence, or however obnoxious to the people themselves, was wont to be put to death. ....

'The piety of some of our Lord's disciples would not allow them to prepare the spices for his embalmment on the sabbath: would the same motive have allowed Nicodemus and Joseph to take down reverently from the cross—to handle it—to lift it up—to carry it about—to embalm it as well as the time would permit—to deposit it in the sepulchre—to roll away, and to roll to, the stone at the mouth of the cave—all which were opera servilia, and unquestionably forbidden on the sabbath? The Jews of the time had obtained a concession from the Roman government, extending the sanctity of the sabbath even to the three hours' Parasceue before it, Ant. Jud. xvi. vi. 2, so far at least as not to be compelled to attend to any civil business from the beginning of that time to the first hour of the ensuing week. It was a regard to the holiness of the sabbath which made the sanhedrim request of Pilate that the deaths of the crucified parties might be prematurely accelerated; a request which, it is obvious, must have coincided as nearly as possible with the ninth hour, or the beginning of the Parasceue itself: and that this was no unusual custom, on the eve of great solemnities, is attested by Philo, adv. Flaccum. Oper. ii. 529. l. 17—20. It is not likely then, that they would have suffered those persons to be executed on the sabbath, whose bodies they would not suffer to continue hanging upon the cross on the sabbath. Nor do I think that the Divine Providence would permit our Saviour to be crucified on the sabbath, though it might ordain that he should expire and be buried critically before the sabbath; that so his body might rest in the grave during the sabbath.

'The sabbath which followed the day of the crucifixion, and which there is no doubt was the ordinary seventh day of the week, is called a great day, Jno. xix. 31, § 92, p. 473: The day of that sabbath was a great day: for which peculiar greatness, distinct from the sanctity of the ordinary sabbath, there is no mode of accounting satisfactorily, but one; an extraordinary and an ordinary sabbath, the fifteenth of Nisan and the seventh day of the week, coincided together; and being each of them a sabbath, produced by this coincidence a double sabbath, a sabbath of double sanctity, solemnized by peculiar offerings, Nu. xxviii 19–23, both those of the ordinary sabbath, in themselves twice as costly as the offerings on any other day of the week, ver. 3—10, Ant. Jud. iii. x. 1, and those appointed for the first of the days of unleavened bread; on the morrow after which, too, the first-fruits of barley-harvest were to be consecrated in the wave-sheaf, and the computation of the fifty days until the next feast, the feast of Pentecost, was also to begin. This was enough to render that sabbath-day an high day....

'But, the strongest argument that, if our Saviour celebrated any passover, upon this occasion, he celebrated it out of course, is deducible from the necessity of fulfilling, in two most important respects, the legal equity; which could not otherwise be fulfilled. And this argument, though in my opinion it is sufficient of itself to decide the present controversy, commentators, both those who maintain and those who impugn the supposition at issue, have by a strange fatality attended to the least of any....

'Now if the sacrifice of the Jewish passover was thus typical of the sacrifice of the death of Christ, then the circumstances of time and place become of paramount importance to the sacrifice of the death of Christ, because they were of paramount importance to the sacrifice of the Jewish passover. This sacrifice was limited from the first, in point of time, to one day in the whole year, the fourteenth of Abib, or Nisan; and in point of place, to that particular quarter, out of all possible situations, which God should select to fix his name there—De. xii. 5—14; xvi. 2, 5, 6; Josh. ix. 27;—which quarter, before the building of the temple, might be variable, and according to Maimonides, De ædificio Templi, i. 2, either Gilgal, or Shiloh, or Nob, or Gibeah, or Jerusalem; in all which places the tabernacle was successively erected: but after the building of the temple became permanently fixed to Jerusalem, Josh. v. 10; xviii. 1; 1 Sa. i. 3; vii. 2; xxi. 1; xxii. 19; 2 Sa. vi. 3, 12; 1 Ki. xi. 32; 1 Chr. xxi. 29....

'The circumstances of the Passion, so far as they are related, are all such as to coincide with this view of its secret character, or typical designation. Not to mention that most significant particular, expressly specified by St. John, ch. xix. 36, to shew the fulfilment of a well-known condition to the integrity of the paschal victim, Ex. xii. 46; Ps. xxxiv. 20, "A bone of him shall not be broken"—the place where our Lord suffered was unquestionably Jerusalem; that is, one of the two essential requisites to the sacrifice of the passover, propriety of place, was visibly true of his death: and if he suffered on the fourteenth of Nisan, as St. John clearly implies, the other, propriety of time, was so too. But the analogy goes further than this. At the ninth hour of the day when he suffered our Lord expired; and in his expiration, that is, in the separation of his soul from his body, in the rendering up his life to God, not in his previous attachment to, or suspension from, the cross, must the article of his sacrifice properly be made to consist. At the ninth hour, on the proper day, Josephus informed us, b. vi. ix. 3, the sacrifices of the Jewish passover began to be offered, continuing to be offered until the eleventh.

'The ninth hour, then, according to the usage of the Jews, which is necessarily the best interpreter of the written precepts of their law, was understood to be the time prescribed for the purpose, in the terms, Between the evenings.

'According to Maimonides, De sacrificiis jugibus, it was considered evening as soon as the shadows began visibly to lengthen; that is, about half-past twelve at noon; and the evening sacrifice, beginning at half-past two, was generally over at half-past three. The morning sacrifice, also though commonly begun before the sun was risen, might yet not be completed before the fourth hour of the day, vide Mishn. i. 13, 4. Our Saviour, therefore, who was attached to the cross at the third hour, might answer even to that.

'But the same authority informs us that, on the passover day, all the usual evening service was antedated, so as to be over before the ninth hour when the paschal service was to begin. Si vespera paschalis, says the Mishna, ii. 150, .5, incideret in sabbathum (which would be the case when the fourteenth of Nisan coincided with the Friday) mactabatur (sacrificium juge) sexta et media; et offerebatur septima et media; et deinde pascha. At this particular time, then, the evening sacrifice was completed an hour sooner than usual, beginning soon after the sixth hour, and being over before the ninth: wherein also we may perceive a remarkable coincidence. The miraculous darkness which commenced about the sixth hour, and continued until the ninth, on the day of the crucifixion, would continue during the whole of the daily evening service in the temple; and, for aught we know, it might have a specific relation to it: it might be intended to shew that, while the great sacrifice was accomplished or accomplishing on the cross, the temple and the temple service were obscured for a time, and ready to be superseded for ever.

'Again, as the paschal sacrifice was a lively type of the death of Christ, so was the offering of the wave-sheaf of his resurrection: and in allusion to the former as St. Paul styles him our passover, so in allusion to the latter he calls him the first-fruits of them that slept, 1 Co. xv. 20. To the fulfilment of the legal equity, then, it was just as necessary that the time of the resurrection should coincide with the time of the presentation of the first fruits, as that the time of the passion should coincide with the time of the passover. That presentation was fixed to the hour of πρωΐ on the morning of the second day of the Azyma, that is, of the sixteenth of Nisan; which if Christ suffered on the fourteenth of Nisan was actually the time of his rising again. For if he suffered the day before the sabbath, and rose again the day after it—if the Friday when he suffered was the fourteenth, the Sunday when he rose again was the sixteenth: and as to the hour when he rose, according to St. Mark it was the prescribed hour, the hour of πρωΐ itself: Ἀναστὰς δὲ, he rose, πρωΐ, xvi. 9. So exactly on this one supposition that our Lord suffered on the Jewish passover day, does every circumstance in the legal symbol, both as concerns his death and as concerns his resurrection, harmonize with the symbolized verity; and so ill, per contra, on any other. For if Christ kept the Jewish passover on the fourteenth—he must have suffered on the fifteenth; he must have lain in the grave all the sixteenth; and he could not have risen again until the seventeenth: in which case not one of the above circumstances could have anything to do with his passion....

'It ought always to be remembered that the last Jewish passover was the first christian supper; it was not more a passover than an eucharist; and to convert the legal into the evangelical ceremony was doubtless one great cause of that anxious desire to celebrate the passover for that time with his disciples, before he suffered, which our Lord expressed, Lu. xxii. 15 (p. 364). Now the christian supper, as an institution, expressly and formally commemorative of the death of Christ, if it was established at this time was proleptically established; for the death of Christ was not yet transacted. And the circumstance that it was so instituted is among the other arguments both that the passover in general, out of which ceremony it arose, was typical of the death of Christ in general, and that this passover in particular, at which it was proleptically instituted, was proleptically celebrated also.

'St. Matthew's τῇ δὲ πρώτῃ τῶν ἀζύμων, ch. xxvi. 17—St. Mark's, Τῇ πρώτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν ἀζύμων, ch. xiv. 12—St. Luke's, ἦλθε δὲ ἡ ἡμέρα τῶν ἀζύμων, ἐν ᾗ ἔδει θύεσθαι τὸ πάσχα, ch. xxii. 7—all which are intended to designate the day when the apostles came to our Lord to inquire about preparing the passover, understood on the principle laid down by Maimonides, De sacris solemn. ii. 5, that the proper beginning of any feast day was reckoned from the night which preceded it, may all be intended to designate the night of the thirteenth of Nisan, the beginning of the Jewish fourteenth. The whole of this νυχθήμερον from sunset on Thursday to sunset on Friday, was considered and might be called the first day of unleavened bread. Josephus himself makes the paschal octave an octave of days, reckoning the fourteenth of Nisan as the first of the number. And it might be truly so reckoned; for the putting away of all leaven and of everything leavened, began with the evening of the thirteenth, Mishn. ii. 134. 1.

'We have but to suppose that the disciples came with their inquiry at sunset on Thursday, and were sent at that time accordingly; and the assertion would be strictly correct. The circumstance that, on entering the city, they were to meet a man returning home with a pitcher of water, is a presumptive proof that they entered it in the evening, at one of the times when water was wont to be fetched. The room, too, which they were to find ready ἐστρωμένον, must have been set out for that evening's repast; which would consequently be for supper.

'I prefer his mode of construing these phrases because it applies to each of the three cases alike; and because, by this means, if the passover was actually got ready on the Jewish fourteenth of Nisan, though not at the legitimate time, which was the end rather than the beginning of that day, still it would be as nearly regular, and as close to the proper time, as the nature of the case would permit. The ordinary supper time, as we saw from Josephus, was probably so late as the first or second hour of the night; and with a view to such a repast as the passover we may take it for granted it would be for the passover was always to be killed on the fourteenth and eaten on the fifteenth: in which case the actual business of eating it could not begin until after sunset on that day at least.'—Vol. III. Diss. xli. pp. 133—72.

'The institution of the christian sacrament is altogether omitted by St. John; and for an obvious reason, he could not be expected to record it. With regard to St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke, they all agree in representing the institution of the bread as prior to that of the cup, and they all agree in placing the institution of the bread during, not after, the supper; the two former expressly, in the words, ἐσθιόντων αὐτῶν—the latter by implication, where, speaking of the appointment of the cup as μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι, he virtually recognises the ordinance of the bread as ἐν τῷ δειπνεῖν. Beyond this there is some disagreement. St. Luke, confirmed by St. Paul in the well-known passage, 1 Cor. xi. 25, places the institution of the cup after the supper, and consequently, at a different time from the institution of the bread, which was during it: St. Matthew and St. Mark record them both in conjunction, and, therefore, apparently at least place them both at the same time.

'In order to explain this difference we must look at the final end proposed by these two evangelists more particularly, in their account of the proceedings within the upper chamber: which end was manifestly this—out of a great variety of circumstances or discourses, which then occurred, to notice nothing distinctly except what related directly to two points—the consummation of the treachery of Judas, and the sacramental ordinance. With regard to the first of these, they had given an account of the original formation, and of the first overt act in the execution of his design: nothing then, remained but to relate the completion; which the event proved was to ensue that same night, and after that very supper. Now that Judas had fixed upon this night, before the supper, does not appear; that Satan entered into his heart, in consequence of something which happened at the supper, and urged him to perpetrate his scheme that night, does appear. The connection, therefore, between the circumstances of the last supper and the design, the prosecution, and the effect of the treachery of Judas, becomes decided; and as each of the evangelists had given an account of the first two of these things, it was but natural that they should also specify the last.

'Without the previous and significant allusion to his approaching betrayal, and by such a means as the instrumental agency of this disciple, which made part of the history of the supper just before; their account of our Lord's ultimate apprehension in the garden, by a band under the guidance of Judas, would have been an inexplicable effect. . . .

'Nor was the allusion in question, even in St. Matthew or in St. Mark, so altogether minute as to leave no room for the supply of a very important particular by St. John. From the comparison of their accounts before and at the time of our Lord's apprehension, respectively, it is evident that they have left to conjecture an essential step in the progress of events; the departure of Judas from the upper chamber, where he was present at the commencement of the supper, before the setting out to the garden, whither he could not possibly have accompanied the rest. This omission is exactly supplied by St. John; who distinctly specifies both when he went out, and why.

'With regard to the second point—or to the sacramental institution; it was the institution of one integral ceremony, but with two significant parts. Hence if the evangelists desired to record the whole as such, though each of the parts might have been separately and individually appointed, they would record them both in conjunction. The example of St. Luke proves the necessity of so doing. As giving an account of the same entire ceremony, he connects the respective institution of each of its parts; yet gives at the same time a clear intimation that the time of the one was, in reality, somewhat later than that of the other; that the bread was ordained during the supper, the cup was prescribed after it.

'It follows, then, that the history of the christian sacrament, considered as one whole made up of two component parts, coinciding with the proper time of the institution of either, must so far have antedated or postponed the proper time of the institution of the other; and yet, as an account of one and the same ceremony, to the perfection of which the part antedated or postponed was as necessary and as essential as the other, it could not in either case be regarded strictly as an anticipation, or as a trajection. This is the distinction which holds good in the several evangelists, with reference to the present question: and this is the principle on which we may satisfactorily explain it. St. Luke records the institution of the bread at its proper time, and, therefore, anticipates that of the cup; St. Matthew and St. Mark record the institution of the cup at its proper time, and, therefore, postpone that of the bread. In either case this is done respectively with the one purely for the sake of the other. If both could not be recorded in their own time and place as one pair (which in the nature of things was impossible), one must be recorded out of its place, though the other might not; and if both were to be recorded together, though the one might be regular where it stood, the other would be so far irregular. As to which of the two should be selected to give the law of narration to the other, this would be indifferent: historical precision might require it to be the account of the bread—the integrity of the whole ceremony might require it to be that of the cup. The sacrament began to be instituted when the use of the former was prescribed; but it was not complete until the latter had been prescribed also. St. Luke's scrupulous exactness determined him to pitch upon the former; the design of St. Matthew and St. Mark, which was to place on record the institution of the ceremony as such, made them prefer the latter. Yet St. Luke shews clearly that the account of the consecration of the cup, which he subjoins to the account of that of the bread, is subjoined entirely as a parenthesis; and St. Matthew or St. Mark by no means implies that the institution of the bread immediately preceded, though it is related before, the institution of the cup.

'It will follow, therefore, that the continuation of what was actually said or done along with the institution of the bread is carried on in St. Luke from xxii. 19, to 21, 2: xxii. 20, is entirely parenthetic.'—Vol. III. Diss. xlii. pp. 173—83; and for continuation, see foot notes, p. 370, et seq., of 'Ivens. Harm.'

SECTION 88.—(G. 93, .4.)—[Lesson 91.]—PARTICULARS OF THE TRANSACTIONS IN THE GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE, BETWEEN THE TIME OF THE ARRIVAL OF JESUS THERE, AND THE APPROACH OF JUDAS, WITH THE BAND, TO APPREHEND HIM. —Matt. xxvi. 36—56. Mark xiv. 32—52. Luke xxii. 40—53. John xviii. 1—11.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvi. 36. Mk. xiv. 32. Lu. xxii. 40. Jno. xviii. 1.
Jesus having with his disciples come to Gethsemane, he bids them pray that they enter not into temptation, and to sit near the entrance whilst he removes further for the purpose of prayer.

— xxvi. 37, .8. — xiv. 33, .4. —
He takes with him the three disciples who had witnessed his transfiguration, and who now behold him so overwhelmed with sorrow and affliction, that he exclaims, 'My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death:'

— xxvi. 38, .9. — xiv. 34, .5. — xxii. 41. —
Having bid the three to stay here and watch, Jesus removes still farther off, and falling on the ground, prays that, if it be possible, the hour may pass from him.

— xxvi. 39. — xiv. 36. — xxii. 42. —
He earnestly beseeches the Father, with whom all things are possible, that if willing he would remove from him this cup, but he is entirely submissive to the will of the Father.

— — — xxii. 43, .4. —
An angel from heaven is seen strengthening Jesus, whose agony is so great, that his sweat is as great drops of blood falling to the ground.

— xxvi. 40, .1. — xiv. 37, .8. —
Jesus comes to his disciples; and finding them asleep, he reproaches Peter, and repeats the injunction to watch and pray: they are exposed to temptation which in their own strength they are unable to resist.

— xxvi. 42. — xiv. 39. —
Jesus goes away a second time, and prays as before.

— xxvi. 43. — xiv. 40. —
Having returned to his disciples, he again finds them sleeping: their eyes are heavy, and they are unable to answer him.

— xxvi. 44. —
Jesus leaves his disciples, and a third time prays as in the two former instances.

— xxvi. 45, .6. — xiv. 41, .2. —
He comes the third time to his disciples, and remarks that they sleep on now, and take their rest, when their Master is betrayed into the hands of sinners. He bids them rise and be going, for the betrayer is at hand.

— — — xxii. 45, .6. —
Having come to the other disciples, he finds them sleeping for sorrow, and asks, 'Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.'

— xxvi. 47. — xiv. 43. — xxii. 47. — xviii. 2, .3.
This garden being the place to which Jesus has been accustomed to resort, is known to Judas, one of the twelve, who having procured from the chief priests officers and an armed force, approaches 'with lanterns and torches and weapons.'

Mt. xxvi. — Mk. xiv. — Lu. xxii. — Jno. xviii. 4, .5.
Jesus goes forth to meet them; when, in reply to his inquiry, they say they have come to apprehend 'Jesus of Nazareth.'

— — — — xviii. 5, .6.
Jesus says, 'I am.' They go backward, and fall to the ground.

— — — — xviii. 7-9.
Again he asks, 'Whom seek ye?' and receives the same answer. He again declares himself, adding, 'if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:' (the disciples are as yet unprepared to accompany their Lord unto suffering and death).

— xxvi. 48, .9. — xiv. 44, .5. — xxii. 47. —
Judas, like his successor, 'the son of perdition,' betrays his Master with a kiss.

— xxvi. 50. — — xxii. 48. —
Jesus intimates his knowledge of Judas' treachery, saying, 'Friend, wherefore art thou come?'

— xxvi. 50. — xiv. 46. —
Those who have come out with Judas lay hold upon Jesus.

— — — xxii. 49. —
The disciples, seeing their Master about to be made prisoner, ask, 'Lord, shall we smite with the sword?'

— xxvi. 51. — xiv. 47. — xxii. 50. — xviii. 10.
Not waiting for Jesus' reply, Peter draws a sword, and therewith wounds Malchus, the servant of the high priest, cutting off his right ear.

— — — — xxii. 51. —
In reply to the question of the disciples, ver. 49, Jesus says, 'Suffer ye thus far.' He heals the wounded servant of the high priest.

— xxvi. 52, .4. — — — xviii. 11.
Jesus tells Peter to sheath his sword, adding, 'all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword;' suggesting, in an interrogative form, three several reasons for submission.

— xxvi. 55. — xiv. 48, .9. — xxii. 52. —
Jesus asks the priests, &c., if they are come 'as against a thief with swords and staves' to take him? and reminds them that he was daily with them in the temple publicly exercising his ministry, when, had they been careful to act openly, they had opportunity of apprehending him, but that now is their 'hour, and the power of darkness.'

— xxvi. 56. — xiv. 49. Fulfilment of scripture.

— xxvi. 56. — xiv. 50. —
The disciples seek safety in flight.

— — — xiv. 51, .2. — —
A young man follows Jesus, 'having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; the young men lay hold on him:' he leaves the linen cloth in their hands and escapes 'from them naked.'

(G. 93.)—No. 88.—Jesus' agony. Gethsemane.

MATT. xxvi. 36—.9.

36 [a]Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane,[b]

MARK xiv. 32—.6.

32 And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane:

LUKE xxii. 40—.4. (Ver. 39, § 87, p. 405.)

JOHN xviii. 1.*

[For previous part of ver. 1, see § 87, p. 405.]

[b]where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.[c] (Ver. 2, p. 417.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 36. Gethsemane—or 'oil valley,' at the foot of the mount of Olives, to which Jesus had gone, Lu. xxii. 39, 'over the brook Cedron,' or 'mourning,' Jno. xviii. 1—it was said to Moses, Ex. xxvii. 20, 'Command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp to burn always,' &c.—And it is worthy of remark, that He through whom the 'oil of joy' doth come,

* 'Of the agony, St. John, though he brings our Saviour to the garden before it, and makes him to be apprehended in the garden after it, gives no account; and clearly because the other evangelists had given a

MATT. xxvi. 37, .8.	MARK xiv. 33—.4.	LUKE xxii. 40, .1.	JOHN.
and saith unto the disciples,	and he-saith to his disciples,	[a]And when-he was at the place, he-said unto them, Pray that-ye-enter not into temptation. [a]	40
[a] Sit-ye here, while I-go and-pray yonder.[a]	Sit-ye here, while I-shall-pray.
		[b]And he was-withdrawn ἀπεσπάσθη from them about a-stone's cast,[b]	41
37 [f]And he-took-with him Peter and the two sons of-Zebedee, [g] [h]and-began to-be-sorrowful λυπεῖσθαι and very-heavy ἀδημονεῖν.	33 And he-taketh with him Peter and [g]James and John, [h] and began to-be-sore-amazed ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, and to-be-very-heavy ἀδημονεῖν;
38 Then saith-he unto-them, My soul is exceeding-sorrowful, even-unto death: tarry-ye here, and watch with me.	34 and saith unto-them, My soul is exceeding-sorrowful unto death: tarry-ye here, and watch.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Is. lxi. 3, was bruised for us, liii. 4, 5; Lu. xxii. 44, in this very place, which was 'over against the temple.' Mk. xiii. 3, § 86, p. 324—In that building was the symbol, Ex. xxvii. 21, of the ministration of the Spirit, Rev. iv. 5, which was to be obtained through the sufferings of Christ, Jno. xvi. 7, § 87, p. 393, and which testifies 'the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow,' 1 Pe. i. 10—.2.

Lu. xxii. 40. Pray that ye enter not, &c.—Jesus had come to the place of his agonizing conflict with the prince of this world; but it was in obedience to the Father's commandment, Jno. xiv. 30, .1, § 87, p. 386—and even then he prayed that, if it were possible, the cup might pass from him. Mt. xxvi. 39, p. 414, as also before, vi. 13, § 19, p. 133—Jesus had already warned them of this peculiar temptation to which they were now to be exposed, xxvi. 31—.5, § 87, p. 406.

Mt. xxvi. 37. Peter and the two sons, &c.—At the transfiguration, the same three were chosen to be with Jesus, ch. xvii. 1, 2, § 51, p. 52—Peter styles himself, 1 Ep. v. 1, 'A witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:'

38. My soul is exceeding, &c.—so upon coming to Jerusalem this time, Jno. xii. 27, § 82, p. 267, 'Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour.'—Is. liii. 3, 'A man of sorrows,'—4, 'Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows:'—12, 'He hath poured out his soul unto death:'

and watch with me—1 Pe. iv. 7, Watch unto prayer.'—Eph. vi. 18, 'Watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints;'—Rev. xvi. 15, 'Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 36. A place called Gethsemane. Γεθσημανῆ, Heb. גַּת שְׁמָנִא, 'place of oil-presses;' situated at the foot of the mount of Olives. Not, what some have supposed, the village in which the produce of the mount of Olives was prepared for use. There are still several ancient olive trees in the place; as ancient, indeed, that Lamartine, Pilgrim., vol. i. p. 78, thinks they are coeval with the age of Christ.—See GEOG. NOTICE, p. 422.

Sit ye here. At the entrance.

Mk. xiv. 33. Sore amazed. 'The original word imports the most shocking amazement mingled with grief: and that word in the next verse which we render sorrowful, intimates, that he was surrounded with sorrow on every side, breaking in upon him with such violence, as was ready to separate his soul from his body.'—Wesley.

Mt. xxvi. 37. Began to be sorrowful. Ἀνπεισθαι, from λυω, to dissolve—exquisite sorrow, such as dissolves the natural vigour, and threatens to separate soul and body.

And very heavy. Overwhelmed with anguish, ἀδημονεῖν. This word is used by the Greeks to denote the most extreme anguish which the soul can feel—excruciating anxiety and torture of spirit.

'In λυπεῖσθαι καὶ ἀδημονεῖν there is a sort of climax; for the latter is a much stronger term than the former, and signifies to be so overwhelmed, as to become insensible, Jno. xii. 27, § 82, p. 267.'—Bloomf.

[38. Exceeding sorrowful, even unto death. 'These words do not express a sorrow proceeding from a fear of death, or such as would continue till death, but the utmost degree of sorrow; such as of itself might be sufficient to cause death. Similar forms of expression occur, in Jn. xvi. 16; Ps. cxvii. 3; Jonah iv. 9.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

And watch with me. Be vigilant in prayer with me; sympathize in my suffering.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxii. 40. Presumptuous must those be who, without the call of God, are found in the place of temptation; or who, when there, neglect to pray, as our Lord directs, and has given us example.]

Mt. xxvi. 37. Those who, like Peter, James, and John, have been given the brightest views of the glory, ought more especially to prepare for being partakers of the sufferings of Christ.

38 ver. Let us not sink in despair even though we should experience sorrow the most severe; the Saviour himself was, 'sorrowful, even unto death.' full account. Yet Paley has observed that in our Lord's allusion to his cup, ch. xviii. 11, there is, even in St. John, a tacit reference to the thoughts and the expressions of the agony itself; such as might naturally ensue on so recent an event.'—Grotwell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 194.

WATCH YE, STAND FAST IN THE FAITH, QUIT YOU LIKE MEN, BE STRONG.—1 Cor. xvi. 13. WATCH THOU IN ALL THINGS, ENDURE AFFLICTIONS, DO THE WORK OF AN EVANGELIST,—2 Tim. iv. 5.

Matt. xxvi. 39.	Mark xiv. 35, .6.	Luke xxii. 42—.4.	John.
39 And he-went a-little-farther, [t]	35 And he-went-forward a-little,	[t] and kneeled down, [t]
[t] and-fell on his face, [t]	and-fell [t] on the ground, and prayed, saying,	and prayed that, if it-were possible, the hour might-pass from him.	and-prayed, saying, 42
	36 And he-said, Abba, Father, all-things are possible unto-thee; [*]
O-my Father, if it-be possible, [*]		Father,
let-this cup-pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.	take-away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.	[*] if thou-be-willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be-done.

And there-appeared an-angel 43 * unto-him from heaven, strengthening ενισχυων him. And being 44 in an-agony he-prayed more-earnestly εκτενεστερον: and his sweat was as-it-were great-drops θρομβοι of-blood falling-down καταβαινοντες to the ground.

[Ver. 45, p. 416.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 39. fell on his face, &c.—The posture of humble and earnest supplication, Nu. xvi. 22; Ne. viii. 6 — Believers are exhorted, 1 Pe. v. 6, 'Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:'

Mk. xiv. 36. all things . . . possible, &c.—see Lu. i. 37, § 2, p. 10; xviii. 27, § 75, p. 227.

this cup, &c.—see Mt. xx. 22, § 77, p. 237.

Lu. xxii. 42. not my will, &c.—so are we directed to pray, Mt. vi. 10, § 19, p. 132, 'Thy will be done,' &c.—see on Jno. xx. 18, § 93, p. 492—v. 30, § 23, p. 178, 'I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.'

43. an angel—so after his temptations in the wilderness, Mt. iv. 11, § 9, p. 66, 'Angels came and ministered unto him.'—He. i. 14, 'Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?'

44. being in an agony, &c.—He. v. 7, 'Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him,' &c.—see on Jno. xviii. 6, infra, p. 418.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 39. Fell on his face. See the Note on Lu. xxii. 44, next col. This was the ordinary posture of the supplicant when the favour asked was great, and deep humiliation required. The head was put between the knees, and the forehead brought to touch the earth; this was not only a humiliating, but a very painful posture also.—See Scrip. Illus.

Prayed, &c. Jesus prayed that he might not sink under his sufferings previous to his being offered up upon the cross. He poured out strong crying and tears to Him who was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared.

[t] et this cup, &c. There may be an allusion in this passage to a very ancient method of punishing criminals. A cup of poison was put into their hands, which they were obliged to drink. Socrates was put to death in this manner.—See He. ii. 9, which is probably an allusion to this kind of death.

[Not as I will, &c. Here θελω in the Hebrew idiom, which has no potential or optative mood, is put for θελοιμι, vellem quidem; but be it, not as I might wish, but as Thou wilt. Thus, contrary to the natural love of life, his will became the same as the Divine, Ac. xxi. 13; Rev. xii. 11.

The former part of our Lord's petition, 'If it be possible,' &c., is the voice of human nature, yielding to those feelings which God, who planted them in man, cannot disapprove when duly regulated. The latter part is the voice of the same human nature according to that principle of reason and duty which sets bounds to our desires, checks and controls our passions and inclinations, and represents it as a becoming and necessary act of obedience, to resign ourselves entirely to the merciful providence of God.]

Lu. xxii. 43. There appeared an angel . . . . from heaven. It was necessary that the fullest evidence should be given, not only of our Lord's divinity, but also of his humanity: his miracles sufficiently attested the former; his hunger, weariness, and agony in the garden, as well as his death and burial, were proofs of the latter. As man, he needs the assistance of an angel to support his body, worn down by fatigue and suffering.—See at the end of ver. 44.

44. Prayed more earnestly. With greater emphasis and earnestness than usual, 'with strong crying and tears,' He. v. 7; the reason given for which is, that he was in an agony.—See the Note on Mt. xxvi. 38.

Drops of blood. * Some have thought that the

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 39. He, who was innocence itself, prayed to be delivered from afflictions, shame, and bodily sufferings; and we, without any reflection on our virtue, may do the same. But we must always remember to do so, with that limitation and reserve, of which our blessed Lord has left us so admirable a pattern.

Lu. xxii. 43. The Son of God hath given us example, not only of meek resignation in suffering, but of submitting to receive assistance by such agency as our heavenly Father is pleased to appoint.

44 ver. See margin. How wonderful that the Son of God should so suffer for us! O that we may give evidence of having some sense of the value of that precious blood which flowed in Gethsemane, even before it was shed upon Calvary!

* 'St. Luke records no part of the agony except what plainly relates to the first trial, and the first prayer; and so far his account may appear more succinct than that of St. Matthew or of St. Mark. But, even in Jesus cometh to his disciples.

MATT. xxvi. 40, .1.	MARK xiv. 37, .5.
40 [c]And he-cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter,[b]	And he-cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, [b]Simon, sleepest-thou?[c]	37
[c]What, could-ye not watch with me one hour?	couldest-not-thou watch one hour?
41 Watch and pray, that ye-enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing προθυμον, but the flesh is weak.	Watch-ye and pray, lest ye-enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready προθυμον, but the flesh is weak.	38

Jesus goeth away, and prayeth a second time.

MATT. xxvi. 42.	MARK xiv. 39.
42 [c]He-went-away again the-second-time, and-prayed,[b]	And again he-went-away, and-prayed,	39
[c]saying, O-my Father, if this cup may not pass-away from me, except I-drink it, thy will be-done.	[b]and-spake the same words.[c]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 40. asleep—so at the transfiguration, Lu. ix. 32, § 51, p. 54, 'Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep:'

Mk. xiv. 37. Simon, sleepest thou?—This conduct was peculiarly unbecoming in Peter, considering the terms in which he had boasted, and the manner in which he had been forewarned, Lu. xxii. 31—.4, § 87, p. 376—Peter remembered the lesson afterwards, 1 Pe. iv. 7, 'Watch unto prayer.'—.7, 8, 'Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:'

Mt. xxvi. 41. the spirit, &c.—Ga. v. 17, 'The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.'—24, .5, 'And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.'—Peter afterwards remembered the lesson he was thus taught, 1 Pe. ii. 11; iv. 1, 6—see margin.

42. if this cup . . . . thy will be done—Jesus had come to do the will of God, for the redemption of man, Ps. xl. 7, 8—He. x. 10, 'By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once,' &c.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 40. Findeth them asleep. Dr. Rush says, 'There is another symptom of grief which is not often noticed, and that is profound sleep. I have often witnessed it even in mothers, immediately after the death of a child. Criminals, we are told by Mr. Akerman, the keeper of Newgate in London, often sleep soundly the night before their execution. The son of General Custine slept nine hours the night before he was led to the guillotine in Paris.'—Diseases of the Mind, p. 319.

41. Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. 'In the christian warfare, the two great defensives against temptation are watching and prayer.

Mk. xiv. 37. Simon, sleepest thou?—Jesus had before said, 'Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted.'—Mt. v. 4. Now he is grieved at their want of sympathy with him in his sorrow. He had also pointed out the need of their seeking help from above.

42. if this cup . . . . thy will be done—Jesus had come to do the will of God, for the redemption of man, Ps. xl. 7, 8—He. x. 10, 'By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once,' &c.

meaning of the words is, that the sweat was so profuse, that every drop was as large as a drop of blood, not that the sweat was blood itself: but this does not appear likely. There have been cases in which persons in a debilitated state of body, or through horror of soul, have had their sweat tinged with blood. Dr. Mead from Galen observes, "Cases sometimes happen in which, through mental pressure, the pores may be so dilated that the blood may issue from them; so that there may be a bloody sweat." And Bishop Pearce gives an instance from Thuanus (De Thou) of an Italian gentleman being so distressed with the fear of death, that his body was covered with a bloody sweat.'—A. C.

Mt. xxvi. 40. Findeth them asleep. Dr. Rush says, 'There is another symptom of grief which is not often noticed, and that is profound sleep. I have often witnessed it even in mothers, immediately after the death of a child. Criminals, we are told by Mr. Akerman, the keeper of Newgate in London, often sleep soundly the night before their execution. The son of General Custine slept nine hours the night before he was led to the guillotine in Paris.'—Diseases of the Mind, p. 319.

41. Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. 'In the christian warfare, the two great defensives against temptation are watching and prayer.

A celebrated preacher says—1. That watching implies, in the first place, a sense of the greatness of the evil we contend against; 2ndly, a diligent survey of the power of the enemy, compared with the weakness and treachery of our own hearts; 3rdly, a consideration of the ways by which temptation has prevailed on ourselves or others; 4thly, a continual attention to the danger, in opposition to remissness; 5thly, a constant and rigid temperance. II. That prayer is rendered effectual, 1st, by fervency or importunity; 2ndly, by constancy or perseverance. III. That watching and prayer must be always united; the first without the last being but presumption; the last without the first a mockery.'—South.

[That ye enter, &c. εισελθητε. Εισερχεσθαι is here used, like ημιτιτειν in 1 Ti. vi. 9, in the sense to fall under, meaning to succumb. Our Lord does not direct them to pray to God that no temptation might befal them; but that they might not be overcome by the temptations in which they must be involved; and to pray for extraordinary spiritual assistance under them.]

The spirit indeed is willing, &c. This was a gentle rebuke and kind apology; especially at a time when our Lord's own mind was so weighed down with sorrow. It also pointed out the need of their seeking help from above.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 40, .1. Let us endeavour to watch with prayer, lest we enter into temptation; and let us pray with watching, seeing that through the flesh we are so weak and ready to be overcome.

[Mk. xiv. 39. Vain repetitions in prayer are to be avoided, as Mt. vi. 7, § 19, but not the repeated expression from the heart, of submission to the will of our heavenly Father.]

---

relation to this, he records certain particulars distinctly from them, which shew that he had it in view to supply their omissions here as well as elsewhere; viz., the appearance of the angel who strengthened Christ; and that most expressive token of the intensity of the agony, the bloody sweat.

'Independently of these additions, his account, compared with theirs, is studiedly concise. On the second and the third repetition of the prayer in question, the violence of our Lord's emotion previously was sensibly diminished, and his mind was recovering its wonted composure. These, therefore, he omits altogether. And as to the rest, it seems to me that he proposed to supply a further deficiency in St. Matthew and St. Mark; viz., the account of what passed personally between Jesus and the EIGHT disciples, in contradistinction to what passed between Jesus and the THREE, before and after the agony, respectively. They had sufficiently, or rather exclusively, specified the latter, but had said nothing of the former.'—See Lu. xxii. 45, .6, p. 416.—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 196.

Jesus cometh to his disciples a second time.

MATT. xxvi. 43.	MARK xiv. 40.
43 And he-came and-found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy	40 [a]And when-he-returned, he-found them asleep again, (for their eyes were heavy,) neither wist-they what to-answer him.

Jesus prayeth a third time.

MATT. xxvi. 44.
44 And he-left them, and-went-away again, and-prayed the-third-time, saying the same words.

Jesus cometh to his disciples a third time.[*]

MATT. xxvi. 45, 46.	MARK xiv. 41, 42.
45 Then cometh-he [b]to his disciples, and saith unto-them, Sleep-on now τὸ λοιπὸν, and take-your-rest:[c]	41 [a]And he-cometh the third-time,[b] and saith unto-them, Sleep-on now τὸ λοιπὸν, and take-your-rest: [c]it-is-enough away![d]
[d]behold, the hour is-at-hand, and the Son of man is-betrayed into the-hands of-sinners.	the hour is-come; behold, the Son of man is-betrayed into the hands of sinners.
46 Rise, let-us-be-going: behold, he-is-at-hand that-doth-betray me.	Rise-up, let-us-go; lo, 42 he that-betrayeth me is-at-hand.

Jesus goeth to the eight.—Luke xxii. 45, 46.—[Ver. 44, p. 414.]†

45 And when-he-rose-up from prayer, and-was-come to his disciples, he-found them 46 sleeping for sorrow, and said unto-them, Why sleep-ye? rise and-pray, lest ye-enter into temptation.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 40. —neither wist they, &c.—so at the transfiguration, ch. ix. 6, § 51, p. 55. Peter 'wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.'

Mt. xxvi. 45. Sleep on now, and take . . . . rest—comp. with Mk. and Lu.; in the former, xiv. 41, the expression, 'it is enough,' implies that the time was gone by for taking rest; and in the latter, xxii. 46, the question is accordingly put, 'Why sleep ye?'

the hour—His hour was near that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, Jno. xiii. 1, § 87, p. 285.—He had several times adverted to his departure as being near, xiv. 19; xvi. 5, 16; xvii. 1, § 4b., pp. 383, 393, 395, 398.

into the hands of sinners—This he had before predicted, ch. xx. 19, § 77, p. 235, 'And shall deliver him to the Gentiles'—The term sinners is even by the apostle of the Gentiles applied to the Gentiles as opposed to the Jews—see Ga. ii. 15, 'We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,'—The Jews were not less guilty as transgressors of the law of God—but they were not like the Gentiles, living without any regard whatever to the law, the case of those who were emphatically denominated sinners—both are involved in the judgment denounced, Is. i. 28—and to both the same salvation is presented, Rom. ii. 28, 9.

he is at hand, &c.—The betrayal of their Lord by one of their own number was a third reason for wakefulness—The case of Judas was in fulfilment of their Lord's prediction, Mk. xiv. 20, § 87, p. 371, and was full of warning to them all, Mt. xxvi. 31, § 4b., p. 406.

NOTES.

Mk. xiv. 40. Wist they. Knew they.

Mt. xxvi. 44. Saying the same words. Praying to the same effect.

46. Rise, let us be going. Not to attempt an escape, but rather let us meet them, giving thereby proof that I know their designs, and might have by flight, or otherwise, provided for my own safety; but I go willingly to meet that death which their malice designs for me, and through death provide for the life of the world.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mt. xxvi. 45. Do we sleep on, and endeavour to find rest in the world, when the Son of man, either in his cause or his people, 'is betrayed into the hands of sinners?'

---

[a] 'It is evident from the testimony of St. John, that as the agony took place in the garden, so before the agony our Lord, and his eleven disciples, all entered into the garden; and after the agony, that Jesus at the head of, or apart from, the same disciples, went out from the garden to meet the approaching band of Judas. Hence, if all the eleven, before and after the agony, were in the garden, though the three in particular might have been nearer spectators of the scene, yet the eight also must have been partially witnesses of it: and though, before the agony, Jesus withdrew himself with the three to some distance from the eight, yet, after the agony, and before the arrival of the band of Judas, he must have rejoined the eight. St. Luke's definition of the distance, ἀπὸ λίθου βολῆς, to which he withdrew himself from those whom he supposes him afterwards to address, accords better to the case of the eight, left by themselves at the entrance of the garden, than to the case of the three whom he took with him farther on into it: for, from these, according to St. Mark, he went but a little way off before he began to pray; whereas λίθου βολὴ implies the distance of a stone's cast from a sling; which could not be properly called a little way off, and would be much greater than could have permitted that clear view, especially in the night time, of his mental and his bodily distress, with which these three in particular were favoured.'—Ibid.

[b] 'The concluding sentence of our Lord's address to his disciples in St. Matthew and St. Mark, καθεύδετε τὸ λοιπὸν, καὶ ἀναπαύεσθε, which most commentators have so inexplicably mistaken for ironical (and what could irony have to do with so solemn and so serious an occasion as this, or with the frame of the speaker's mind at the time?), is to be interrogatively understood, like each of the preceding addresses: Sleep ye on still, and take ye your rest? Are ye sleeping, even for the little time which remains? It is enough; let it suffice you to have slept thus long; the hour is come, and the Son of man is delivered up into the hands of sinners. This sense of τὸ λοιπὸν is the most common imaginable.'—Ibid., p. 194.

† 'Jesus, after addressing his last admonition to these three, as recorded by St. Matthew and St. Mark, may be supposed to have gone on to the rest, left probably at the entrance of the garden: and if he found them asleep also, it would not be more surprising than that he should have found the three others, thrice successively

'THE HEALTH AND VIGOUR OF THE TRUE GOSPEL PRINCIPLE, THOUGH PLANTED IN FAITH, AND ROOTED IN LOVE, MUST YET BE MAINTAINED, EVEN IN THE BEST DISPOSITIONS, BY THE FEEDING AND WATERING OF THE GRACE OF GOD.'—Greswell.

(G. 94.)—Particulars of the transactions between the time of the arrival of Judas, with the band, and the apprehension of Jesus.[a] Gethsemane.

MATT. xxvi. 47—56. MARK xiv. 43—52. LUKE xxii. 47—53. JOHN xviii. 2—11.

[Ver. 1, p. 412.]

[a]And Judas also, which betrayed 2 him, knew the place: for Jesus oft-times resorted thither with his disciples. Judas then, having-received 3 a band of men and officers from the chief-priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.[b]

47 And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief-priests and elders [c]of the people.[d]	43 [b]And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief-priests and the scribes and the elders.[c]	And 47 while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them.

[d]Jesus therefore, knowing all 4 things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 3. band—Prediction, Ps. ii. 1, 2; xxii. 12.

weapons—those referred to were probably no other than clubs, staves, and instruments of that kind, as we may gather from Mt. xxvi. 55; Mk. xiv. 48; Lu. xxii. 52, p. 421. The swords mentioned by the other evangelists were probably those of the Roman soldiers; the clubs and staves belonged to the chief priest's officers.

4. knowing all things, &c.—Jesus knew that his hour was come, ch. xiii. 1, § 87, p. 365—xix. 28, § 91, p. 467, 'Knowing that all things were now accomplished,' knowing all things that should come upon him. According to the original, 'All the things that were coming.'—Comp. ch. xiii. 1, 3, § 87, p. 365; and see § 77, p. 235. Jesus' predictions of his sufferings, where we have proof, both that he had an exact foreknowledge of all which was about to happen to him, and that his submission to it was altogether voluntary.

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 2. Jesus oftimes resorted thither. We are not told much of the private habits of Jesus, but we are permitted to know so much of him as to be assured that he was accustomed to seek for a place of retirement; and during the great feasts of the Jews, the mount of Olives was the place which he chose, Lu. xxi. 37, § 85, p. 357; Mt. xxi. 17, § 82, p. 269; Jno. viii. 1, § 55, p. 97.

3. A band. This band was probably those Roman soldiers given by the governor for the defence of the temple; and the officers were those who belonged to the sanhedrim.—See on Lu. xxii. 4, § 86, p. 366, and ver. 52, p. 421, infra.

With lanterns and torches. With these they had intended to search the corners and caverns, provided Christ had hidden himself; for they could not have needed them for any other purpose, it being now the fourteenth day of the moon's age, in the month Nisan, and consequently she appeared full and bright.

Mt. xxvi. 47. One of the twelve. 'One of the twelve apostles. These words at once mark the wickedness of the traitor, and the honesty of the evangelist, in recording that one of our Lord's chosen friends was the betrayer. Judas is so designated, ver. 14.—Comp. Jno. vi. 71, § 43, p. 334; also xii. 4, § 81, p. 254.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Chief priests. See ch. ii. 4, § 5, p. 32.

Elders of the people. See ch. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xviii. 2. It is good for those who follow the example of Jesus in his public ministry to be also frequent in private devotion.

[Mt. xxvi. 47; Mk. xiv. 43; Lu. xxii. 47. It is remarkable that here three of the evangelists call Judas 'One of the twelve,' as if warning against treachery to Christ, even in those who are peculiarly his. It is not safe to follow unreservedly 'apostolical succession,' any more than it was to follow 'One of the twelve,' in delivering up Jesus into the hands of the priests.]

---

sively, in the same situation before. Yet for their being found asleep St. Luke has assigned a reason, which might indeed have applied to the three, but is specified solely of the eight. They were asleep from grief and dejection of spirit; affections which the course of events hitherto, the many ominous declarations of their Master respecting himself and them, the ingratitude and perfidy of Judas, by this time perhaps only too reasonably suspected, the power and agency of evil spirits, now permitted to molest and disturb them in some manner more than usual; but above all, sympathy with their Master, in the spectacle of mental and of corporeal anguish, so recently exhibited, however imperfectly to their observation, were well calculated to have excited, to which we may add the natural effect of the lateness of the hour itself.'—Ibid., p. 196.

'We may conclude that the duration of the agony was probably a little more than one hour. The first, and by far the most intense of its paroxysms, seems to have occupied, proportionably, the greatest part of the time; and the duration of that, as we may infer from the words addressed to Peter on the first return, Simon, sleepest thou? hast thou not been able to wake one hour? was nearly an hour. Both the others, we may presume, would be transacted in half the same time; whence, if our Lord arrived in the garden a little before, or not later than midnight, the whole would be over soon after one in the morning, or the first hour of the third watch.'—Ibid., p. 197.

[a] 'With regard to the subsequent events, the supplementary character of St. John's gospel enables us to arrange them as follows. First, upon the approach of the band, our Lord issued from the garden for the

MATT. xxvi. 48, .9. MARK xiv. 44, .5. LUKE xxii. 47. JOHN xviii. 5—9.

them, Whom seek-ye? They-answered 5 him, Jesus of-Nazareth. Jesus saith unto-them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.
As-soon-as-he-had-said unto-them, 6
I am he, they-went backward, and fell to-the-ground. Then asked-he them 7 again, Whom seek-ye? And they said, Jesus of-Nazareth. Jesus answered, I- 8 have-told you that I am he: if therefore ye-seek me, let these go-their-way: that the saying might-be-fulfilled, which he-spake, Of them which thou-gavest me 9 have-I-lost none.*

48 *Now he that betrayed him, gave them a-sign, saying, Whomsoever I-shall-kiss, that-same is he: hold-him-fast κρατησατε.†

*44 And he that-betrayed him, had-given them a-token, saying, Whomsoever I-shall-kiss, that-same is he: take him κρατησατε αυτον, †and lead-him-away safely ασφαλως.

49 And forthwith he-came to-Jesus,

45 And as-soon-as-he-was-come, he-goeth straightway ‡ to-him,

‡ and drew-near unto-Jesus

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 5. I am—see Ex. iii. 14; Jno. viii. 58, p. 108.

6. went backward, &c.—Prediction, Ps. xxvii. 2, 3—This was in proof of what he had stated in the commencement of his intercessory prayer, Jno. xvii. 2, § 87, p. 398—He. v. 7, he 'was heard in that he feared;' (marg. for his piety)—see his piety or submission to the Father's will, Mt. xxvi. 42, p. 415.

8. let these go their way—ch. xvii. 19, § 87, p. 402, 'For their sakes I sanctify [or, separate] myself.'

9. that the saying might be fulfilled, &c.—What he had expressed in the prayer for the disciples, ch. xvii. 11—.9, § 87, p. 401.

Mt. xxvi. 48. Whomsoever I shall kiss—This shews how near, in outward form, 'the son of perdition' may go to the letter of the requirement, and yet fall short of true obedience to the command of the Father—Ps. ii. 12, 'Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way.'

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 6. Went backward, and fell. Our Lord must have spoken with majesty, and exerted his power to produce such an effect; and by this he shewed that he could have escaped had it been his intention to do so. Thus by the blast of God they might have perished, and by the breath of his nostrils they might have been consumed, Job iv. 9. In persevering after this, they resisted the convictions of conscience, and hardened their hearts against the astonishing proof they had felt of the Divine power of the Saviour.

Let these go. That is, the eleven apostles. These words are rather words of authority than entreaty. I will not exert my power in my own behalf, for I will lay down my life for the sheep; but I will not permit you to injure the least of these.

Mt. xxvi. 48. Gave them a sign. 'Had before given them.'—Comp. Mk. xiv. 44. How coolly deliberate is this dire apostate! The man whom I shall kiss—how deeply hypocritical! That is he, seize him, hold him fast—how diabolically malicious!

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. viii. 8, 9. Jesus is the Good Shepherd; he exposes himself to bonds, that his people may go free.

[Mt. xxvi. 48, .9. The forerunner of the anti-Christ, who is emphatically called a liar, betrayed his Master with a kiss, and an acknowledgment of discipleship; let us, therefore, not be deceived by the plea of the 'man of sin,' 'the son of perdition,' who says that he professes Christianity and cannot therefore be anti-Christ: to be like Judas, it is necessary that he should acknowledge Jesus in word, but deny him in deed; seeking to make merchandise of the Lord of Glory.]

purpose specified by that evangelist; and those particulars ensued, including the prostration of the band, which are recorded, Jno. xviii. 3—9. The provision of lamps and torches, which is mentioned by St. John alone, might be no excess of precaution even in a moonlight night, especially two days before the full, but due to various conceivable reasons, which it is not necessary to specify.

'Secondly, the supernatural impression produced, both upon the band and on their conductor, by the appearance and the address of Jesus, being now removed, the accounts of the other evangelists may come in to fill up a perceptible hiatus in St. John's. For it is clear that at this moment, though he does not mention the fact, our Lord must have been arrested, or some attempt made to arrest him, if Simon Peter now drew his sword (a fact which he does mention), and began to offer resistance. At this point of time, then, the preconcerted signal, by which Jesus was to be recognised, might take place in Judas' stepping up to and kissing him; and if our Lord's address to him, in consequence of this act, is differently represented in St. Matthew and in St. Luke respectively, the difference may be accounted for by supposing it to have been made up of both: 'Ἰούδα, φιλεῖς; ἀφ' ᾧ πάρει; φιλήματι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδως. The recognition of Jesus would be followed directly by the seizure of his person; and the seizure of his person by the attempted resistance of Peter, whose possession of a μαχαίρα, or sword, is critically explained by Luke xxii. 8, and 38; the owner of the other sword being probably St. John.'—Ibid., p. 198.

Matt. xxvi. 50, .1.	Mark xiv. 46, .7.	Luke xxii. 48—50.	John xviii. 10.
and-said, [d] Hail, [e] master; and kissed him.	[d] and-saith, [e] [f] Master, master; and kissed him.	to-kiss him.
50 [g] And Jesus said unto-him, Friend, wherefore art-thou-come? [m]		But Jesus said unto-him, Judas, [m] betrayest-thou the Son of man with-a-kiss? [n]	46
[n] Then came-they, and-laid hands on Jesus, and took εκρατησαν him. [o]	46 And they laid their hands on him, and took εκρατησαν him	[o] When-they which were about him saw what would-follow, they-said unto-him, Lord, shall-we smite with the-sword? [p]	49
51 And, behold, one of-them which were [q] with Jesus stretched-	47 [r] And one of-them that-stood-by [q]	And one of them	50 Then Simon Peter having a-sword 10

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 45. Master, master—Mt. vii. 21, § 19, p. 140, 'Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.'

Mt. xxvi. 50. Friend, &c.—Ps. xxxv. 14, 'I behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother:' —xli. 9, 'Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread,' &c.—lv. 13, .4, 'Thou, a man mine equal, my guide,' &c. — comp. with Jno. xiii. 1—5, 20—30, § 87, pp. 365, .70, .2.

wherefore art thou come?—Ezc. xxxiii. 31, 'They come unto thee as the people cometh, ... with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness.'

Lu. xxii. 48. betrayest thou, &c.—Betrayers, such as Judas, rather than open enemies, are the most dangerous foes of the truth, Ps. lv. 12—.4—2 Th. ii. 8, 'Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming:'—Well may we pray that God may soon accomplish his promise, Ezc. xx. 38, 'I will purge out from among you the rebels,'—that it may be as it was, Ac. v 13, when 'of the rest durst no man join himself to them:'

50. one of them—The three former gospels do not mention the disciple by name; but John, who wrote after the death of that disciple, states that it was Simon Peter, Jno. xviii. 10.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 49. Hail. Χαῖρε, peace. Hail! does not seem at all proper as a term of familiarity. The above interpretation preserves the customary Hebrew salutation, salem.

Mk. xiv. 45. Master, master. As if expressing great joy that he had found him again.

Kissed him. 'A kiss was an ordinary mode of salutation among the ancient Jews, as appears from Lu. vii. 45 (§ 29, p. 231). But the original word here used (which is used also in Lu. vii. 45; xv. 20 (§ 68, p. 133); Ac. xx. 37, denotes that Judas kissed his Master with a more than ordinary shew of earnestness and affection [he kissed him again and again]; doing this to prevent any mistake about the sign by which he had agreed to point out the person of Jesus. —Comp. 2 Sa. xx. 9, 10, where a similar instance of treachery is recorded.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Mt. xxvi. 50. Friend. In the Greek there are two words which our translators have rendered friend; one implying affection and regard, the other not. One is properly rendered friend; the other expresses more nearly what we mean by companion. It is this latter word which is given to the disaffected labourer in the vineyard—'Friend, I do thee no wrong,' Mt. xx. 13, § 76, p. 233; to the guest who had not on the wedding garment, in the parable of the marriage feast, Mt. xxii. 12, § 84, p. 293; and to Judas, in this place. It was a common form of address, but marking courteous distance and strangeness.

Wherefore art thou come? These are not words of inquiry, but an appeal to the conscience of Judas, as to the purpose for which he was come.—See Lu. xxii. 48.

Our Saviour seems to have put this question to the traitor, not as desiring a reply, but to strike him with a deeper conviction of his guilt. How must these words have cut the very soul of Judas, if he had had any sensibility left! Surely, thou who hast been my companion, art not come against me, thy Lord, Teacher, and Friend? What is the human heart not capable of, when abandoned by God, and influenced by Satan and the love of money!

Lu. xxii. 48. Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss? 'φιλήματι τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδως. The three terms contained in this assertion are all emphatical, and there is a sort of climax; q.d., "Betrayest thou thy Master, and him the Son of man, and that with a kiss?"'—Bloomf.

[The heroic behaviour of the blessed Jesus, in the whole period of his sufferings, will be observed by every attentive eye, and felt by every pious heart; although the sacred historians, according to their usual but wonderful simplicity, make no encomiums upon it. With what composure does he go forth to meet the traitor! With what calmness receive that malignant kiss! With what dignity does he deliver himself into the hands of his enemies! Yet plainly shewing his superiority over them, and even then leading, as it were, captivity captive.]

Mt. xxvi. 51. One of them which were with Jesus. John informs us that this was Peter.

Jno. xviii. 10. Simon Peter. The apostles were not commonly armed. On this occasion they were provided with two swords, Lu. xxii. 38, § 86, p. 377. They were under a necessity of providing means of defend-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.—Mt. xxvi. 50. See margin.

[r] The suppression of the name of Peter, in the three former accounts, may be attributed to the circumstance of his being alive when they were written; which would be an argument that none of these gospels was later than the eleventh of Nero, which was probably the time when he suffered: and its mention by St. John we may attribute to the circumstance of his being dead when St. John's gospel was written; a conclusion which is suggested also by Jno. xxi. 19, § 97, p. 509. The name of the wounded servant, likewise omitted by them, is similarly supplied by him; but in return he omits, what they had mentioned, the fact of

Matt. xxvi. 52, 3.	Mark xiv. 47.	Luke xxii. 51.	John xviii. 11.
out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high-priest's, and smote off his ear.	drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high-priest, and cut off his ear.	smote the servant of the high-priest, and cut off his right ear.	drew it, and smote the high-priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.
		'And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.' 51
52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: "for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."			'Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath:"
			"the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?". (Ver. 12, § 89, p. 425.)
53 "Thinkest thou that I can not now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give παρασησει

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxii. 51. Suffer ye thus far—which was farther than could be borne, if this kind of sword were at all to be used for the advancement of his kingdom—see Jno. xviii. 36, § 90, p. 441—comp. Lu. xxii. 38, § 87, 'It is enough.'

Jno. xviii. 11. Put up thy sword—see on Lu. xxii. 36—8, § 87, p. 377.

Mt xxvi 52. shall perish with the sword—The Jews, who used the Roman sword against Jesus, miserably perished by the sword of the Romans, ch. xxiv. 6, 7, § 86, p. 325; Lu. xix. 41—4, § 82, p. 264—The Jews and Romans, who were now united in taking Jesus, were afterwards given up to kill one another, as predicted by the symbol of a great sword, on the opening of the second seal, Rev. vi. 4—And with regard to his enemy, the pretended successor of Peter, it is said, Rev. xiii. 10, 'He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword.'—As to the last grand conflict, just before the millennium, Rev. xix. 21, 'And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth:'

Jno. xviii. 11. cup—see Mk. xiv. 36, p. 414.

Mt. xxvi. 53. pray to my Father, &c.—He had prayed for the escape of his disciples, and that was given him—see on Jno. xviii. 9, p. 418—And the power of the 'I am,' whereby these were allowed to go their way, had also been made manifest, ver. 5—8, ib.

NOTES.

ing themselves against the robbers that infested the country. Josephus informs us, the people were accustomed to carry swords under their garments, as they went up to Jerusalem.

[Lu. xxii. 51. Suffer ye thus far. 'It appears best to understand the word as an answer to the question of the apostles in ver. 49, and as a command to them to cease from their resistance. The sense will be, "Suffer these men to proceed to execute their purpose." This interpretation seems preferable, both because in Mt. xxvi. 52—4; Jno. xviii. 11, we find our Lord on this occasion reproving Peter for the use of his sword and commanding him to sheath it; and, also, because in ver. 52, St. Luke appears plainly to distinguish the address of our Lord to "the chief priests" and their followers, from his words in ver. 51.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

[Mt. xxvi. 52. Shall perish with the sword. 'A prediction of the approaching ruin of the Jews and of the Romans. The words most naturally refer to Peter, who was reproved for using force, by the general principle laid down, that all who took the sword, meaning as he took it, should perish by it. Our Lord manifestly designed to teach that injuries for the sake of religion are not to be repelled by retaliative violence, but submitted to with patience; and that his cause was not to be maintained or promoted by the strifes of an earthly warfare, or by civil coercion.'—R. Watson.]

[Jno. xviii. 11. Shall I not drink it? See on Mt. xxvi. 39, 54, pp. 414, 21. The interrogation, accompanied with a double negation, involves a strong affirmation, and the whole is expressive of perfect acquiescence in the will of his Father.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxii. 49—51; Jno. xviii. 10, 1. When we ask counsel of the Lord, let us wait for his reply, and not act from the promptings of our own minds, as did Peter when he smote with the sword.

[If the disciples of Christ were to endure thus far, surely they are altogether left without a warrant for using the sword in behalf of that kingdom which is not of this world.]

[Mt. xxvi. 52. Let us be warned by this saying of our Lord, so abundantly confirmed in the experience of mankind, but so utterly neglected by him who is said to occupy St. Peter's chair (rather the seat of the dragon, Rev. xiii. 2), and of whom it is pointedly said, 'He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword, Rev. xiii. 10.

53 ver. The cause of the disciple, like that of his his immediate cure: a miracle, which proved so strikingly the prudence and composure of our Lord on this trying occasion. The rest of the narrative of the present transaction; comprehending what Jesus said to Peter and to the multitude, before the cure of Malchus, what to the members of the sanhedrim, or their confidential officers, who conducted the band, down to the time of the desertion and the dispersion of all the apostles, except Peter and John, who still followed him afar off: is easily to be reconciled together, as the Harmony will shew. The last fact in particular, as having been distinctly recorded by St. Matthew and by St. Mark, and yet as not creditable to the disciples themselves, St. Luke, with a becoming regard to their honour, does not unnecessarily repeat: and the anecdote, over and above all this, concerning the young man whose seizure and escape are next mentioned by St. Mark, are peculiar to his gospel."—And see on Mk. xiv. 51, p. 422, infra.—Ibid., p. 199.

MATT. xxvi. 54—6.	MARK xiv. 48—50.	LUKE xxii. 52, 3.	JOHN me more than twelve legions of angels?
54 But-how then shall the scriptures be-fulfilled, that thus it-must be?
55 In that-same hour said Jesus to-the multitudes,	48 And Jesus answered and said unto-them,	Then 52 Jesus said unto the chief-priests, and captains of-the temple, and the-elders, which were come to him,
Are-ye-come-out as against a-thief, with swords and staves for-to-take me? I-sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye-laid-no-hold-on me.	Are-ye-come-out, as against a-thief, with swords and with staves to-take me? 49 I-was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye-took me not;	Be-ye-come-out, as against a-thief, with swords and staves? When-I-was daily 53 with you in the temple, ye-stretched-forth no hands against me:
56 But all this was-done, that the scriptures of-the prophets might-be-fulfilled. Then all the disciples forsook αὐτὸν him, and-fled.	but the scriptures must-be-fulfilled. 50 And they-all forsook αὐτὸν him, and-fled.	but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 53. twelve legions—Not merely two swords among twelve disciples, Lu. xxii. 38, § 87, p. 377, nor only one angel to strengthen, ver. 43, p. 414, but a legion of angels to each of his twelve followers; as to Elisha, 2 Ki. vi. 17—The angels are spoken of as the hosts or armies of God, Ge. xxxii. 2; Job xxv. 3; Ps. lxviii. 17; Da. iv. 35; Lu. ii. 13, § 4, p. 21—The name legion is applied to evil spirits, Mk. v. 9, 15, [Lu. viii. 30,] § 35, p. 271.

the scriptures—such as Ps. xxii.; lxix.; Is. liii.; Da. ix. 24—6—and the law of sacrifices, of which Christ is the end 'for righteousness,' Rom. x. 4.

Lu. xxii. 53. power of darkness—comp. Mt. xxvi. 18, § 87, p. 362; Eph. vi. 12; Col. i. 13—Is. lx. 2, 'Behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people:'—Mr. vi. 23, § 19, p. 134, 'If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!'—2 Co. iii. 14, 'Their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away,' &c.—iv. 4, 'The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, Eph. vi. 12, 'We wrestle . . . . against the rulers of the darkness of this world,'—Col. i. 12, 3, 'The Father, ... hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son:' (or, the Son of his love)—Rev. xii. 10, 'Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down,'

Mt. xxvi. 56. might be fulfilled—as, for instance, relative to Judas, Ps. xli. 9—relative to Christ being treated as a transgressor, Is. liii. 12—relative to the desertion of the disciples, Zec. xiii. 7.

Mk. xiv. 50. all forsook him—see Mt. xxvi. 31, § 87, p. 406—Their escape was at the Redeemer's request—comp. Jno. xviii. 12—9, § 87, p. 401, with xviii. 8, 9.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 53. Twelve legions. The word 'legion' was a military term, with which the conquest of Judæa by the Romans had made the Jews familiar; the Roman legion consisted of 6,000 soldiers. . . . . In several places of scripture, the angels are spoken of as the host, or army of God.—See SCRIP. ILLUS.

54. How then, &c. In this assertion of his power to deliver himself from death, our Lord shewed the perfect willingness of his submission to it.—See ver. 39, 42, pp. 414, .5; and comp. Jno. x. 18, § 55, p. 117.

[Lu. xxii. 52. Captains of the temple. 'That these were Jewish and not Roman officers, appears from their being in these two places (see ver. 4, p. 356) found with "the chief priests" "and the elders."'—Comp. Ac. iv. 1; v. 21—7; from the latter of which passages we learn that "the captain of the temple," the chief of these officers, was a member of the great council of the Jewish nation; we learn, also, from Josephus, that there was a constant nightly watch in the temple, which was under the command of these captains.'—Lonsdale and Hale. And see on Lu. xxii. 4, § 86, p. 4.]

A thief. The original word properly means, 'a robber,' one who plunders by open violence.

Mt. xxvi. 55. I sat daily, &c. Our Lord appears to refer more particularly to his last teaching in the temple, for several days together.

[Lu. xxii. 53. This is your hour. 'The sense appears to be, this hour of the night (see Jno. xiii. 30, § 87, p. 372) is the hour suited to you whose deeds cannot bear the light of day; and this power which ye are permitted to exercise over me, is the power of the prince of darkness, and is therefore fitly exercised in the time of darkness.'—See NOTE, ch. iv. 13, § 9, p. 66.]

Mt. xxvi. 56. All this was done. 'Rather, "all this has been done." That these are the words of Christ, and not of St. Matthew, is clear from comparing St. Mark xiv. 49.'—Lonsdale.

All the disciples forsook him, and fled. 'Thus at

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lord, is in the hands of our heavenly Father, who, if he see meet, can send abundant help from above. And we have for our intercessor Him whom the Father heareth alway.

Mt. xxvi. 54. See margin.

[56 ver. How distinct, how altogether apart, is that 'ONE FOUNDATION' upon which only our hopes for eternity can be built! Notwithstanding all their

MATT.	MARK xiv. 51, 52.	LUKE.	JOHN.
	51 [b] And there-followed him a certain young-man, having-a-linen-cloth-cast-about his naked body; and the young-men laid-hold-on him: 52 and he left the linen-cloth, and-fled from them naked.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATION.

Mk. xiv. 52. naked—Rev. xvi. 15, 'Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.'

NOTES.

once verifying our Lord's prediction, ver. 31, § 87, p. 406, and shewing on how weak a foundation their professions of faithfulness, ver. 35, ib., had been built. This statement of the desertion of Jesus by "all the disciples," is one of the most remarkable instances of that honesty which led the evangelists to record facts, though to their own dishonour.'

[Mk. xiv. 51. A certain young man. Mr. Greswell says, 'I conjecture the young man alluded to was St. Mark the evangelist; though not yet a convert to the gospel. For on no principle except that of the personal connection of this anecdote with the history of the writer, can we conceive a reason sufficient to have caused its introduction into the body of a narrative, with which it would otherwise have absolutely nothing to do. . . . He calls this individual οἰς τις νεανίσκος: a term which implies that he was under thirty, but more than twenty years of age: and so, five-and-twenty years, or more, before the first epistle of St. Peter was written, St. Mark, we might reasonably suppose, would be.'—Vol. I. Diss. ii. p. 99.]

Having a linen cloth cast about, &c. σινδόνα. See Mt. xxvii. 59, § 92, p. 470 'The sense is here somewhat different. For as the word primarily denoted a web of cloth, so it came to mean a wrapper, denoting properly a kind of cloak, like the Scotch plaid, and still in use in the East, but also an upper gown, such as was used for a night-vest: and this is doubtless the sense here, Mk. xiv.'—Bloomf.

The young men. The Roman soldiers. They were called young men, because they were originally made up chiefly of youth. This was a Jewish mode of speaking.—See Ge. xiv. 24; 2 Sa. ii. 14; Is. xiii. 18.

53. Naked. 'This does not always in scripture mean literally so, but without the upper garment.' —R. Watson.

In the East the natives can suddenly disengage themselves from their loose clothing. When two Hindoos are struggling, and one seizes the clothing of the other, often the latter will leave his clothes in the hands of his opponent, and flee away naked.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

boastings, not one of the apostles is with Jesus when led away as a sacrifice. Surely they are altogether inexcusable, who would join others with Christ, in making atonement for our sins. Those who were most near to him, more so than mother, or sister, or brother, 'all forsook him, and fled.' He was alone in his agony in the garden; and alone he was thence 'led as a sheep to the slaughter.']

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.

GETHSEMANE, p. 412.

"Gethsemane, can I forget?
Or there thy conflict see,
Thine agony, and bloody sweat,—
And not remember thee?"

'GETHSEMANE (Γεθσημανῆ, seemingly from the Hebrew גַּת, press, and שֶׁמֶן, oil, i.e., oil-press), the name of a small field, or garden, just out of Jerusalem, over the brook Kidron, and at the foot of the mount of Olives.'—A Pastor's Memorial, p. 251.

'Passing out of St. Stephen's gate, on the eastern side of the city, the eye rests upon the mount of Olives, that object of deep and endearing interest, with its white chalky soil. Here a path winds down from the gate on a course south-east by east, and crosses the valley of Jehoshaphat, the brook Kidron of the scriptures (see KIDRON, p. 407), by a bridge over the dry water course. The path and bridge are on a causeway, or rather terrace, built up across the valley, perpendicular on the south side, the earth being filled in on the northern side up to the level of the bridge. The bridge itself consists of an arch, open on the south side, and seventeen feet high from the bed of the channel below; but the north side is built up, with two subterranean drains entering it from above, one of which comes from the sunken court of the Virgin's tomb, and the other from the fields further in the north-west. (This bridge is ascribed to Helena.) The breadth of the valley at this point will appear from the measurements—

	Geog. ft.
1. From St. Stephen's gate to the brow of the descent, level	135
2. Bottom of the slope, the angle of the descent being sixteen and a half degrees	415
3. Bridge, level	140
4. North-west corner of Gethsemane, slight rise	145
5. North-east corner of Gethsemane, slight rise	150

'The three last numbers give the breadth of the proper bottom of the valley at this spot, viz., 435 feet, or 145 yards.

'Having crossed the bridge, on the left is the half subterranean church of the Virgin Mary, with an excavated grotto, or chapel, called her tomb.'—Robinson's Bib. Res., Vol. I. pp. 345, 346.

'Mary, however, did not die at Jerusalem, but, as the most enlightened critics have shewn, at Ephesus. The monks easily get over this, and say that she was miraculously transported, and buried at Gethsemane by the apostles. Still, she did not remain even there long; for "St. Thomas having caused the coffin to be opened, nothing was found in it but a virgin's robe, the simple and mean garment of that queen of glory, whom the angels had conveyed to heaven." The Romanists annually celebrate the assumption.

'The vault or cave which they shew is very spacious, and must have been hewn out of the hard limestone rock with great labour. Whoever was originally buried there must have been a person of some consequence. And it is not likely that the early Christians could have had it in their power to bury Mary in so splendid a manner. The sepulchre of the Virgin lies in the bottom of a large excavation in the rock, to which there is a descent of forty steps. On the sides of the passages, about half way down, are two small recesses, called chapels, in which are shewn the tombs of Joachim and Anna, the father and mother of Mary, and that of Joseph, her husband. The different christian sects have their altars, where they say she was buried.'—Bible in Palestine, p. 343 *

'From the bridge three paths lead up to the summit of the mount of Olives. One, a mere footpath, strikes up in a direct course along a steep, projecting part of the hill, which leads to the church of the Ascension; a second passes up more circuitously to the left, where the hill retires a little, and has a more gradual slope; and the third winds up along the face further south. Near the bridge and church, on the right, is the place fixed on by early tradition as the site of the garden of Gethsemane. It is a plat of ground nearly square, enclosed by an ordinary stone wall. The north-west corner is 145 feet distant from the bridge. The west side measures 150 feet. The spot was not improbably fixed upon during the visit of Helena to Jerusalem, A.D. 326, when the places of the crucifixion, &c., were supposed to be identified. Before that time no such tradition is alluded to. Eusebius, writing apparently a few years afterwards, says Gethsemane was at the mount of Olives, and was then a place of prayer for the faithful. Sixty years or more afterwards, Jerome places it at the foot of the mountain, and says that it had been built over it, which is also mentioned by Theophanes, as existing near the end of the seventeenth century. The garden was likewise spoken of by Antoninus Martyr, at the end of the sixth century, by Adamnanus, and by writers of the time of the crusades. There would seem, therefore, little reason to doubt that the present site is the same to which Eusebius alludes; whether it is the true site is perhaps a matter of more question.'—Robinson's Bib. Res., Vol. I. p. 346.

'The inspired records of the agony and bloody sweat of our blessed Redeemer, must be understood and felt in its mysterious bearing upon the eternal prospects of our souls, before we can tread the dust of Gethsemane with a fitting impression of its sanctity. We must have a due sense of the marvellous nature of that Almighty Being, from whose flesh there was drawn forth the embittered avowal, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death:" we must have some acquaintance with the cause of that deep and unutterable anguish of soul which forced from his lips the reiterated petition, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." And we must feel, too, that calm and fixed determination of heart and of purpose with which he stood forth as the Captain of our salvation to be made "perfect through sufferings," for the purpose of "bringing many sons unto glory;" nor must we forget how omnipotence gave way, for power to lay its malignant and deadly hand upon him—though we cannot enter into the mystery of such submission. And when we have done all this, and got our minds imbued with the deep and awful pathos of the narrative, we have gone but little way if we cannot add to it the appropriating assurance of faith, and say, "All this was for me, a lost sinner, and for my redemption."

'Are you thus prepared?—Then come to Gethsemane; weep, and be humbled there; and thence let faith go upward on her saving mission to the mercy-seat. Tears of blood were there shed for you: and faith more than human was there exercised for you; and fidelity unparalleled was there displayed on your behalf. Come, as a sinner should who knows that the Father "spared not" his only Son, "but delivered him up"—on that very spot—"for us all," into the hands of cruel and wicked men. Alas! for the cause and the need.

'At the base of the mount of Olives, just over the brook Kidron, where the road to Jericho joins that to Bethany, on your right hand, lies a bare and sterile plat of ground surrounded by a wall of unhewn stone. It is shaded by eight aged and gnarled olive trees, upon which the suns of many centuries have risen and set. It is a place of loneliness and seclusion, overhung by the mount of Olives on the one side, and the western heights of the valley of Jehoshaphat and the embattled walls of Jerusalem on the other. It is just such a spot as a soul desiring to be alone with God would choose, when the shades of evening were gathered over it. Such is Gethsemane. I have gazed down upon it from the heights on either side. I have traversed again and again its length and breadth. I have mused and meditated and prayed beneath its venerable shade; and in my mind's eye possesses a charm beyond all other scenes in the world; for I cannot doubt—none I believe have ever doubted—of its identity. And to think that to that very spot Jesus oftimes resorted with his disciples; that there God incarnate walked, and wept, and agonized, and prayed, and submitted!

'That the olive trees now growing in Gethsemane have sprung from the roots of those existing in our Lord's time, is, I think, very probable. Their size, apparent age, and general character, indicate it. It is likely that the original trees were standing when, in preparation for his siege, Titus cut down all the timber around the city; but there is no reason for supposing that he would be at the labour and cost of removing the roots of trees felled for such a purpose. It is well known that the bole of the olive tree, when its trunk has been felled, will in due time send forth shoots or suckers in great numbers, which grow up intertwined, so as to form one compacted stem. Upon a careful examination of some of these venerable trees, such is their appearance. They bear upon them the proof of having grown in the manner I have described. Their roots, which are very large and wide spreading, are, in many parts, far above the surface of the soil. They are protected by earth and stones heaped up against them. At the south-eastern corner is a small space fenced off, which tradition has marked as the scene of Judas' act of treachery. It is called "terra damnata." Near that spot is a ledge of rock on which it is said the disciples reclined when "their eyes were heavy." But I needed not this attempt at minute identification, while I knew that somewhere within the compass of that small plat of ground the Saviour awaited the consummation of treachery, and uttered the mild remonstrance, "Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?"'—A Pastor's Memorial, pp. 267—9.

* 'We arose, and perceiving the door of the Virgin's sepulchre open, we went in, and having descended about fifty steps in the dark, during which time I sometimes lost sight of Nicalo, we arrived at the bottom. Here we were favoured with a magnificent sight: from the roof of a large room or cave exquisitely fitted up as a chapel, were suspended some hundreds of silver lamps, about one tenth of which were lighted; while around the walls were suspended a great number of rich and beautiful paintings of the Prophets, Apostles, and Martyrs.

'The glimmering light of the lamps, the representation of so many of the ancient worthies, with all the other instruments of religious service, had an imposing appearance, and produced that feeling of sacred awe, which monastics and sentimentalists frequently put in the room of spiritual devotion and self-abasement, before the mercy-seat of the King of kings. We then stooped down to get through a hole, to where, it is said, the Virgin's body is laid: the place is so small that it will hold no more than six or seven persons, standing as close as they can. Silver lamps and splendid paintings also adorn this little recess, or room. There were two females within engaged in devotion, a chief part of which consisted in kissing the marble slab, which, they say, covers the Virgin's remains; having concluded, they laid some money on a tray, placed there for the purpose, and departed, apparently much affected, and wiping the tears from their eyes. My servant, who was a person easily operated upon by such things, next took their place; so kneeling down, he kissed the marble slab, and then did not forget to tell me that I must pay some money; in compliance with his wish, and the pious custom of the place, I laid down a piaster and came away.'—Lowthian's Palestine, p. 61

WHO IS AS THE WISE MAN? AND WHO KNOWETH THE INTERPRETATION OF A THING? A MAN'S WISDOM MAKETH HIS FACE TO SHINE, AND THE BOLDNESS OF HIS FACE SHALL BE CHANGED.—Eccles. viii. 1.

SECTION 89.—(G. 95—7.)—[Lesson 92.]—JESUS IS TAKEN TO ANNAS, AND AFTERWARDS TO CAIAPHAS. PETER FOLLOWETH AFAR OFF. PARTICULARS OF THE TRANSACTIONS IN THE PALACE OF CAIAPHAS: JESUS BEING EXAMINED ONCE AND AGAIN; AND, AS HE HAD FORETOLD, THRICE DENIED BY PETER; IS EXAMINED A THIRD TIME, AND LED AWAY TO PILATE. JUDAS REPENTS.—Matt. xxvi. 57—xxvii. 10. Mark xiv. 53—xv. 1. Luke xxii. 54—xxiii. 1. John xviii. 12—28.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jno. xviii. 12—4. Jesus having been apprehended in the garden, is led away bound to Annas, father-in-law to Caiaphas the high priest, who before, ch. xi. 47—53. § 58, p. 132, counselled the Jewish rulers to sacrifice Jesus to expediency.

Mt. xxvi. 57. Mk. xiv. 53. Lu. xxii. 54. Jno. xviii. 24. Jesus is by Annas sent to Caiaphas.

— — — —

(No. 89.)—Jesus is led to Annas and Caiaphas. Jerusalem.*

Matt. xxvi. 57.	Mark xiv. 53.	Luke xxii. 54.	John xviii. 12—4. (Ver. 11, ‖ lxxxviii. p. 420.)
			"Then the band and the captain 12 and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him, and led him 13 away to Annas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-priest that same year. Now Caiaphas was he, which gave 14 counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die ἀπολεσθαι for the people."
57 "And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high-priest,"	53 And they led Jesus away to the high-priest:	Then took they him, and led him,	54 "and brought him into the high-priest's house.

Peter followeth afar off.—John xviii. 15, .6.

15 And Simon Peter followed Jesus and so did another disciple: that disciple was known unto the high-priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high-priest. 16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high-priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter. [Ver. 17, .8, p. 430.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 12. band—who had come to take Jesus—see on ch. xviii. 3, § 88, p. 417 bound—This had been represented in the types, Ge. xxii. 9; Ps. cxviii. 27.

13. Annas—He and Caiaphas were high priests when the word of God came to John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness, Lu. iii. 2, Note, § 7, p. 49—He is again mentioned with Caiaphas, as having Peter and John brought before him, Ac. iv. 6.

14. Caiaphas—By him Jesus had been already appointed to death, upon the principle of expediency, Caiaphas interpreting according to the liking of his own darkened mind, the Divine utterance through himself, ch. xi. 47—53, § 86, p. 132.

Lu. xxii. 54. brought him into the high priest's—Is. liii. 7, 'He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter,' &c.

Jno. xviii. 15. Simon Peter . . . . . and . . another disciple—Beside James, who was an early martyr for the truth, Ac. xii. 2, Peter and John had been chosen to behold Christ in his kingly glory, Mt. xvii. 1, 2, § 51, p. 52—and also to be with him during his agony in the garden, xxvi. 37, § 88, p. 413—Peter and John appear to have been witnesses of his sufferings throughout; and, after the women, were the first at the sepulchre, Jno. xx. 2—4, § 93, p. 469—and they were afterwards the most forward in declaring the truth respecting the crucified and ascended Redeemer, Ac. ii., iii., iv.—see also their epistles.

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 13. The captain. The original word, translated 'high captains,' Mk. vi. 21, § 40, p. 306, and in several places of the Acts, 'chief captains,' properly means 'a commander of a thousand men.' It answers to our term 'colonel.' The Romans called them military tribunes.

13. To Annas first. He had been himself a long time high priest; he had had five sons who successively enjoyed the office of high priest; and that office was now filled by his son-in-law. It was of importance, therefore, to obtain his sanction and counsel in their work of evil.—Ver. 24 comes in properly after ver. 13.

14. Now Caiaphas was he, &c. See on ch. xi. 49, § 86, p. 132, and on Mt. xxvi. 3, § 86, p. 356.

Mt. xxvi. 57. Led him away to Caiaphas. 'Ἀπήγαγον πρὸς Κ., i.e., 'after having been first taken to Annas,' as we learn from Jno. xviii. 13, in order, it should seem, to do him honour, and while the sanhedrim was collecting. 'Απήγαγον is a term appropriate to leading any one to trial or execution.'—Bloomf.

Jno. xviii. 15. Another disciple. This disciple has generally been considered to have been John himself. Adam Clarke quotes Grotius, that most likely it was the person at whose house Jesus had supped.

Palace. Rather, 'the hall.'—Lonsdale.

16. Her that kept the door. τῇ θυρωρῷ. This office, though it was among the Greeks and Romans confined to men, was, in the greater simplicity of Jewish manners, chiefly exercised by maidservants.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xviii. 12, .3. Let us ever admire the gracious condescension of our Saviour in giving himself up into the hands of wicked men: the Lamb of God suffered himself to be bound that we might go free.

[14 ver. How dangerous it is to interpret prophecy according to the will of man!—to give counsel upon the words of the Spirit of grace, without the counsellor being himself possessed of a gracious spirit!]

* 'The first thing done with our Lord, as we learn from St. John, was to conduct him to the house of Annas; partly, perhaps, because in proceeding to the palace of the high priest, it might be necessary to pass by the house of Annas: for that palace, being somewhere contiguous to the temple, would probably be situated in the northern division of the city; whereas the mount of Olives lay to the east; (the exact site of the temple, according to Josephus' account, b. v., iv. 3, and v., seems to have been the north-eastern angle of the city wall, standing in that situation opposite to the Psephine tower on the north-west. The palace of the high priest was most probably somewhere in the same division between these two; though the modern delineations of Jerusalem exhibit it in a much different situation, viz., in the quarter called mount Sion, to the south-west;) partly because he was the father-in-law of the high priest himself: and partly and principally because he was also his vicar, the next in dignity to him, and the vice-president of the sanhedrim. In doing this, however, from whatsoever motive, it seems certain that the band acted of their own accord, and not in obedience to any orders before received: for, according to Jno. xviii. 24 (a notice parenthetically inserted, and to be taken in conjunction with ver. 13, in order to explain what follows from

O MY GOD, I TRUST IN THEE: LET ME NOT BE ASHAMED, LET NOT MINE ENEMIES TRIUMPH OVER ME.—Psa. xxv. 2. YEA, LET NONE THAT WAIT ON THEE BE ASHAMED: LET THEM BE ASHAMED WHICH TRANSGRESS WITHOUT CAUSE.—Psa. xxv. 3.

Jesus before Caiaphas.—John xviii. 19—24.

19 The high-priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine. 20, Jesus answered him, I spake openly to-the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the 21 temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have-I-said nothing. Why askest-thou me? ask them which-heard me, what I-have-said unto-them: behold, they 22 know what I said. And when-he'-had-thus'-spoken, one of-the officers which-stood-by struck Jesus with-the-palm-of-his-hand εδωκε ραπισμα, saying, Answerest-thou the 23 high-priest so? Jesus answered him, If I-have-spoken evil, bear-witness of the evil: 24 but if well, why smitest-thou me? Now Annas had-sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high-priest. [Ver. 25, p. 431.]

Matt. xxvi. 57, .8	Mark xiv. 53, .4.	Luke xxii. 54, .5.
where the scribes and the elders were-assembled.	"and with-'him' were-assembled all the chief-priests and the elders and the scribes.
58 But Peter followed him afar off	54 And Peter followed him afar-off,	And Peter followed afar-off.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 20. openly to the world—so he had commanded his apostles, Mt. x. 27, § 39, p. 300, 'What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light: and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops.'

I ever taught in the synagogue—Lu. iv. 16, § 15, p. 102, 'As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day,'—Mt. iv. 23, § 18, p. 115, 'Teaching in their synagogues,' and in the temple—ch. viii. 2, § 55, p. 99, 'And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.'—Mt. xxvi. 55, § 88, p. 421 'I sat daily with you teaching in the temple,' in secret—He had said much to his disciples privately, in explanation of his public teaching, Mk. iv. 34, § 32, p. 249, but nothing that he did not wish made public (see above on 'openly'), nothing inconsistent with his public teaching, nothing to disturb the public peace, but rather the better to prepare his followers for patient continuance in well-doing—see Jno. xiii.—xvii., § 87, pp. 365—405.

21. ask them which heard—see Paul's defence before Felix, Ac. xxiv. 12, .3.

23. struck Jesus—This was a preparation for that farther smiting the Teacher and Judge of Israel, which had been predicted, Is. l. 6; Mi. v. 1—Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, Je. xx. 2—The like affliction was afterward accomplished in Paul, by order of the high priest Ananias, Ac. xxiii. 2.

Answerest thou, &c.—Ac. xxiii. 4, 'Revilest thou God's high priest?'

23. If I have spoken evil, &c.—2 Co. x. 1, 'The meekness and gentleness of Christ.'—1 Pe. ii. 22, .3, 'who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again;'

but if well, &c.—He had spoken well according to the law, which required that every word should be established, De. xvii. 6, 'At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses,'—xix. 15; 2 Co. xiii. 1.

24. Annas had sent—Jesus had been first taken to Annas, ver. 13, supra.

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 19. Of his disciples. The charge on which they wished to arraign him was that of sedition, or of rebellion against Cæsar.

And of his doctrine. 'He probably asked him by what authority, or in virtue of what right, he collected disciples, formed a different sect, preached a new doctrine, and set himself up for a public reformer? As religion was interested in these things, the high priest was considered as being the proper judge.'—A. C.

20. I spake openly—as to the manner; continually—as to the time; in the synagogue and in the temple—as to the place; in secret have I said nothing—no point of doctrine which I have not taught in public. Whatsoever I have taught has been with all openness, plainness, and freedom, to all sorts of people, in the most public places, and on the most solemn occasions. Nor did I ever teach aught in private that I did not teach openly. Let then my hearers, whether friends or foes, be examined as to what they heard me deliver.

23. If I have spoken evil. That is, if I have spoken to the high priest in a way that deserves punishment, shew in what respect I have so spoken.

24. The proper place for this verse is immediately after ver. 13.—See p. 425.

Mt. xxvi. 57. The scribes and the elders. The men composing the great council of the nation or sanhedrim.—See on ver. 3, § 86, p. 355.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xviii. 19—23. A prisoner should not be required to witness against himself. Whatever our suspicions, his trial should proceed upon the fair report of his conduct as witnessed to by others. What thanks do we owe the Saviour for even the civil liberty the poorest among us enjoy! The claim for just judgment made by the Judge of all, when standing in the place of the oppressed, has even in a temporal respect been for the salvation of many.]

20, .1 ver. See margin.

Our Saviour occupied the place of a poor and friendless man, when brought before human judges: a warning to these to deal out justice to all, and especially to those for whom no man seems to care, and an encouragement to the oppressed to commit their cause into the hands of Him who judgeth righteously, and who has himself had experience of their case.

ver. 15, where the scene is evidently placed in the palace of Caiaphas itself), our Lord was directly consigned, still bound and without any examination, to the high priest as the proper authority before whom his trial was to take place. With the arrival at the palace of the high priest St. John's account begins to be so far joined by the rest; but the history of our Lord's examinations is still distinct in each: and if St. Matthew's and St. Mark's be both reckoned on account of one and the same examination, there are three such examinations on record in all.

'The first was an examination before Caiaphas, and Caiaphas alone, when Jesus was first brought in, and the assembling of any part of the sanhedrim besides had not yet taken place; and is peculiar to St. John: . . probably not later than two in the morning: . . . our Lord answers the questions of the high priest now, but declines to answer them on the next occasion; which may justly imply that he knew himself not to be put formally on his trial now, as he certainly was then. This examination was purely preliminary, turning upon two points only, our Lord's doctrine and his disciples. . . . In this part of the narrative, nothing is recorded in detail by John which had not been passed over by the other evangelists. The insult also now offered to our Saviour, as related at ver. 22, though it might be the first of its kind, was yet a different incident from anything like it which transpired afterwards.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 390.

FOR THE INDULGENCE OF CURIOSITY, OR EVEN FROM A BETTER MOTIVE, IT IS DANGEROUS TO VENTURE INTO TEMPTATION IN OUR OWN STRENGTH, OR WITHOUT A DIVINE WARRANT.

MATT. xxvi. 58.	MARK xiv. 54.	LUKE xxii. 55.
unto the high-priest's palace, and went in.	even into the palace of-the high-priest: [b]	[b] And when-they-had-kindled 55 a-fire in the-midst of-the hall, and were-set-down-together, Peter sat-down among [c]
and-sat with the servants,	and he-sat with [a] the servants,	them.
[d] to-see the end.	and warmed-himself at the fire. [d]	(Ver 56, p. 430.)

*Jesus is examined by the Sanhedrim.

MATT. xxvi. 59—68.	MARK xiv. 55—65.	LUKE.
59 [e] Now the chief-priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false-witness against Jesus, to put-him'-to-death;	55 And the chief-priests and all the council sought-for witness against Jesus to put-him'-to-death,
60 but found none: yea, though-many false-witnesses'-came, yet found-they none. [b]	and found none. 56 For many bare-false-witness against him, but [b] their witness agreed not together. [c]
[e] At-the-last came two false-witnesses, [d]	57 And there-arose certain, [d] and-bare-false-witness against him,
61 and-said, This fellow said, [e] I-am-able to-destroy the temple of God, [f]	saying, 58 We heard him say, [e] I will-destroy this temple

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 58. the servants. των ὑπηρετων, officers. The word means servants of the public, or official servants of those in authority of a judicatory; and is translated officers in ch. v. 25, § 19, p. 125, and in Jno. vii. 32, 45, 46, § 55, pp. 94, 96; xviii. 3, § 88, p. 417; ver. 12, 8, pp. 425, 31; in the last of which verses the 'officers' are distinguished from the 'servants.'

59. sought false witness, &c.—By such means did Jezebel procure the death of Naboth, in order to get possession of his vineyard, 1 Ki. xxi. 9—16, which comp. with Mt. xxi. 38, § 84, p. 289—Ps. lxiv. 5, 6, 'They commune of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them? . . . they accomplish a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.'

60. many false, &c.—Ps. xxvii. 12, 'False witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty.'—xxxv. 11, 'False witnesses did rise up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not.'

two—see De. xvii. 6; xix. 15.

[61. This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple, &c. 'The saying of our Lord to which these witnesses referred is recorded in Jno. ii. 19—21 [§ 12, p. 82], but they were false in their report of it; for he had not said, "I am able to destroy the temple of God," or (as it is in Mk. xiv. 58), "I will destroy this temple that is made with hands," but "destroy this temple;" which words did not express any purpose, on his part, of destroying the temple of Jerusalem. They were, in fact, spoken figuratively, and related, as we learn from Jno. ii. 21, to the Jews' purpose of destroying "the temple of his body." The object of these false witnesses was to fasten upon Jesus the guilt of intending to destroy the temple; and with this we find him afterwards reproached, while he hung upon the cross, Mt. xxvii. 40, § 91. In like manner, when false witnesses appeared against Stephen, Ac. vi. 13, 14, their first charge was, that he had "spoken blasphemous words" against the temple, saying that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy this place.'—Lonsdale and Hale.] destroy the temple, &c.—Jesus had predicted that in the event of their destroying the temple of his body, he would in three days raise it up, Jno. ii. 19—21, § 12, p. 82; which prediction, although thus perversely applied, appears to have been somewhat understood by the priests, Mt. xxvii. 62—4, § 92, p. 477.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 58. Palace. αυλην signifies an open court.—See on Jno. xviii. 15, p. 425. From ver. 69, infra, as well as from what we are told in the other gospels, it is evident that Peter was only in the court without, which, though enclosed on all sides, was open above; nor was it at all extraordinary that a fire should be kindled in such a place, Lu. xxii. 55.

Mk. xiv. 54. At the fire. Προς το φως, literally, at the light, i.e., a fire that cast considerable light, in consequence of which, the maidservant was the better able to distinguish him.—See ver. 67, p. 430.

Mt. xxvi. 60. Found none. No evidence on which they could put Jesus to death, no two agreeing in testimony, without which the law forbade them to put any man to death.

Mk. xiv. 56. Their witness agreed not together. 'The original means, "Their testimonies were not sufficient for the purpose for which they were brought forward; were not enough to form the ground of a sentence of death against Jesus."—Comp. ver. 63, p. 429. It was on account of this want of evidence, that the high priest bethought himself of the expedient of putting a question to Jesus, which might lead him to criminate himself.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Mt. xxvi. 61. I am able. δυναμαι—αυτον. 'This was (as appears from Mk. xiv. 58, and Jno. ii. 19) in effect a falsity, by the suppression of some words of Christ, together with the action which explained them, and adding others. Hence the witnesses are justly termed ψευδομαρτυρες. By this temple our Lord plainly meant his body.'—Bloomf.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.—Mt. xxvi. 58. See margin.

* 'This was a second examination, about one hour, if not somewhat more, later than the former, recorded by St. Matthew and St. Mark; whose account of it is in every circumstance the same. This was an examination before the sanhedrim; as might be inferred even from the circumstance that it is the only

MATT. xxvi. 62, .3.	MARK xiv. 59—61.	LUKE.
and to-build it in three days.	that is-made-with-hands, and within three days I-will-build another made-without-hands.
	59 But neither so did their witness agree-together.
62 And the high-priest arose,	60 And the high-priest stood-up in the midst, and-said unto-him, Answerest-thou nothing? what is it which these witness- against thee?	and-asked Jesus, saying, Answerest-thou nothing? what is it which these witness- against thee?
63 But Jesus held-his-peace.	61 But he held-his-peace, and answered nothing.
And the high-priest answered and-said unto-him, [a] I-adjure thee by the living God, that thou-tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God.[A]	Again the high-priest asked him, and said unto-him,[c] Art thou the Christ, [A] the Son-of-the Blessed?[d]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 58. without hands—Ac. vii. 48. 'The most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands:'—2 Co. v. 1, 'A building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.'

60. Answerest thou nothing?—He had before been struck when he did answer, Jno. xviii. 22, p. 426, supra.

61. held his peace—Ps. xxxviii. 13, 'As a dumb man that openeth not his mouth.'—Is. liii. 7, 'He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth:' &c.—1 Pe. ii. 23.

Mt. xxvi. 63. I adjure thee—The prophet Micaiah was adjured by the wicked king Ahab, 1 Ki. xxii. 16, 7.

the Christ, the Son of God—acknowledged by the Father, at Jesus' baptism, ch. iii. 17, § 8, p. 60, and on the holy mount, 2 Pe. i. 17, 8—Confessed by devils, at the commencement of our Lord's ministry, Lu. iv. 41, § 17, p. 112—The importance of this confession, as made by Peter, recognised by our Lord, Mt. xvi. 16, 7, § 50, p. 36.

Mk. xiv. 61. Son of the Blessed—The Son so much spoken of in the Psalms of David; each of the five books of which concludes with a psalm making distinct reference to the Son; while each of these psalms ends with declaring the Lord God of Israel 'blessed,'

NOTES.

[Mt. xxvi. 62. What is it which these. Τί is sometimes put for διατί, 'why,' as ch. viii. 26, § 34, p. 256; Lu. ii. 48, § 6, p. 41; Jno. i. 25, § 10, p. 68; Mk. ii. 16, § 22, p. 168. Then the sense may be—Why do these witness against thee, if it were not true? Or, it is perhaps a very probable conjecture, if we suppose the passage to be elliptical. The high priest finding our Saviour make no reply to the accusations brought against him, might address him as follows—Hearest thou what it is which these, &c.]

63. I adjure thee. In thus addressing our Lord, the high priest acted according to the provisions of the Jewish law, which required oaths to be put to accused persons and witnesses in certain cases.

[' This seems to have been the most solemn form of administering an oath. Ὁρκίζειν and Ἅπαξ. are used in the LXX to express the Heb. הִשְׁבִּיעַ, to make to swear, to swear in, to put to one's oath. The syntax is an accus. of the person sworn (whether witness or criminal), and a genit. with ἐκ, or sometimes an accus., without a preposition, of the deity sworn by. The ἵνα denotes the exaction of the oath; and ἐκ has reference to the stretching of the hand upon or towards the person or object sworn by. As this oath of adjuration brought an obligation, under the curse of the law, it imperatively claimed a reply, when the adjuration accompanied an interrogation; and the answer thus returned was regarded as an answer on oath; in which case falsity was accounted perjury. Thus, our Lord, who had before disdained to reply to an unfounded, and even absurd charge (especially before judges who had predetermined to find him guilty), now thought himself bound to answer, as an example to others of reverence towards so solemn a form.'—Bloomf.]

The living God. 'God is called in scripture the living God, both that he may be thus distinguished from the lifeless idols of the heathen, and also because he alone, of all beings, hath life in himself (see Jno. v. 26, § 23, p. 178; vi. 57, § 43, p. 283), without beginning and without end.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., Mt. xvi. 16, § 50, p. 37. Hence the expression so often met with in the Old Testament, "As I live, saith the Lord," and "As the LORD liveth."'—Lonsdale and Hale.

[The Christ, the Son of God. 'Among the Hebrews it was customary to consecrate kings, priests, and prophets to their offices by anointing their heads.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xiv. 58. We may cease to wonder at such a perversion of the words of the Redeemer, when we think of the manner in which many who call themselves his disciples, have perverted such expressions of his, as that recorded, Mt. xvi. 18, § 50, p. 38, 'Upon this rock I will build my church.' There can be little doubt but that the infatuated blindness of multitudes professing Christianity is even greater than that of these Jews. The more so, when we consider that following out the same system of interpretation, upon the words, 'This is my body,' they have exalted into the place of worship, the veriest creature of man's formation, a wafer! a little piece of biscuit! and which is no sooner worshipped, than it is swallowed by the worshipper!]

[59, 60 ver. Let us be thankful that we are not under the power of rulers bound to obey the doctrine practically held by these Jewish priests, and still more openly avowed in the church of Rome that the end justifies the means.]

examination which these two evangelists record, before the delivery up of our Saviour to Pilate: for our law, say the Jews to the high priest Hyrcanus, Jos. Ant. Jud. xiv. ix. 3. forbids even a malefactor to be put to death, who has not been previously condemned by the sanhedrim. Some examination, then, of our Lord by the sanhedrim, before his condemnation and much more his execution, was necessarily to be expected: which examination, as far as regards St. Matthew or St. Mark, must be either this present one or none. It is strongly implied by Mark xiv. 53, that the council had been convoked and come together posterior to the arrival of Jesus; and the place in which they assembled was certainly the palace of the high priest, whither Jesus had been first conducted. Nor is this at variance with Mt. xxvi. 57: for though they were not actually collected when our Lord first came in, the assertion would still be true if they were got together before the ensuing examination itself. The interval of an hour, or somewhat more, would be abundantly sufficient for that purpose....

WHOSO KEEPETH HIS MOUTH AND HIS TONGUE KEEPETH HIS SOUL FROM TROUBLES.—Prov. xxi. 23.

PROUD AND HAUGHTY SCORNER IS HIS NAME, WHO DEALETH IN PROUD WRATH.—Prov. xxi. 24.

MATT. xxvi. 64—.6.	MARK xiv. 62—.4.	LUKE xxii. 63.
64 'Jesus saith unto-him, Thou hast-said: nevertheless I-say unto-you, Hereafter ap' arti shall-ye-see the Son of man sitting on the-right-hand of power, and coming in epi the clouds of heaven.	62 And Jesus said, I am: and ye-shall-see the Son of man sitting on the-right-hand of power, and coming in meta the clouds of heaven.
65 Then the high-priest rent his clothes, saying, He-hath-spoken blasphemy; what further need have-we of witnesses? behold, now ye-have-heard his blasphemy.	63 Then the high-priest rent his clothes, and-saith, What need-we any-further witnesses?
66 What think ye? [b] They answered and-said, He-is guilty of-death.	64 Ye-have-heard the blasphemy what think ye? [b] And they all condemned him to-be guilty of-death.[1]

(Ver. 62, p. 433.)

[1] 'And the men that held Jesus*63 mocked him, and-smote him.'*

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ps. xli. 13; lxxii. 18, .9; lxxxix. 52; cvi. 48; cxlv. 21—He is, Rom. i. 25, 'the Creator, who is blessed for ever.'—2 Co. xi. 31, 'The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is blessed for evermore,'—1 Ti. i. 11, 'The blessed God.'

Mt. xxvi. 64. Thou hast said—Caiaphas had already said what Jesus was now to be, a propitiatory sacrifice; one appointed unto death, that the whole nation perish not, Jno. xi. 49—5., § 58, pp. 132, .3.

nevertheless, &c.—as if contrasting his present appearance before an unjust judge with his glorious appearing as the Judge of all, ch. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 42—when before him shall be gathered all nations, xxv. 31, .2, § 86, p. 351—Rom. xiv. 10, 'We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.'

Hereafter shall ye see, &c.—There were then present some who had already been given to see the Son of man coming in his kingdom, ch. xvi. 28; xvii. 1—5, § 50, .1, pp. 44, 51—.6—and who were of those unto whom his coming hereafter is matter of promise. 1 Th. v. 1—10—He. ix. 28, 'Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.'

65. blasphemy—An Israelitish woman's son blasphemed the name of the Lord, on account of which he was condemned to be stoned, Le. xxiv. 11—.6—This punishment inflicted on Naboth, in consequence of a false accusation of blasphemy, 1 Ki. xxi. 9, 10, .4— The king of Assyria was accused of this crime by Him that judgeth righteously, 2 Ki. xix. 6—also the fathers of these self-righteous Jews, who inherited the guilt of their fathers, Is. lxv. 5, 7—Jesus had been before accused of blasphemy, on account of his forgiving sins, Mt. ix. 2, 3, § 22, p. 164—They would before have stoned him, because he said he was the 'Son of God,' Jno. x. 33, .6, § 56, pp. 122, .3.

Mk. xiv. 64. condemned him—This he had himself foretold upon his last approach to Jerusalem, Mt. xx. 18, § 77, p. 235.

Lu. xxii. 63. mocked him—predicted, Ps. xxii. 6, 7, 13; Is. xlix. 7; liii.—He had himself foretold that he should suffer many things of the chief priests, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40—He gave us an example of patiently bearing reproach and shame, He. xii. 2; 1 Pe. ii. 23.

smote—Jno. xviii. 22, supra, 'One of the officers, &c.

NOTES.

Hence the name of Christ, or Messiah, that is, the Anointed One, was eminently applicable to the Saviour, who, in the eternal counsels of the Godhead, was consecrated to be a king, a priest, and a prophet to his people.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

Mt. xxvi. 64. Thou hast said. The meaning of this answer is plain from the parallel passage of Mk. xiv. 62, where instead of 'Thou hast said,' the answer is, 'I am.' The force of the expression is to answer a question in the affirmative.—See ver. 25, § 87, p. 372.

Nevertheless. πλην, 'moreover.'

The right hand of power. This expression denotes the highest place of glory in the presence of God.—See Lu. xxii. 69, p. 434, infra.

65. Rent his clothes. It was a custom among the ancients to express the more violent passions, especially grief and indignation, by rending the garments, either partly, or from top to bottom, but sometimes from bottom to top. 'In some cases this was forbidden to the high priest, Le. x. 6; xxi. 10. Caiaphas here shewed his horror at hearing so mean a person claim the sovereignty over Israel, and a seat at the right hand of God, and this when adjured upon oath.'

In place of investigating the righteousness of his claim to be the Messiah, who had not only been predicted to appear in humiliation as now, but hereafter in glory, they condemn him as guilty of death, for confessing the truth, when required, by the highest recognised authority to do so upon oath.

66. Guilty of death. That is, the crime of which we here adjudge him to be guilty, subjects him, by the law of Moses, to the punishment of death.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 63, .4. Jesus was at no pains to defend himself against frivolous and unjust charges, but he was careful to maintain the truth, to bear witness to which he had come into the world.

[This is the Rock, 'Christ, the Son of the living God,' the Foundation Stone which had been confessed by Peter; and which was here set at nought by the Jewish builders—the same is made the head of the corner. From the depth of his humiliation Christ points to his glorious exaltation; just as on the mount of Transfiguration, and immediately before and after, he conversed about the decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.]

Let us learn to moderate the influence of present circumstances, by having a due regard to what God has been pleased to make known to us of the future.

65 ver. See margin.

Well would it have been for the high priest had he been obedient to the admonition, 'Rend your heart and not your garments,'—had he confessed before God his own guilt, in place of affecting such indignant surprise at the confession of Jesus.

* 'Of this examination, Luke records no more than the fact of the injurious and insulting usage which was heaped upon our Lord at its close.—See ch. xxii. 63—.5, supra.

'Ver. 64 is a critical proof that Jesus was now, and had been before, formally put upon his trial. To have endured this particular kind of affront, he must have been bare-headed; and to remove the covering of the head from an accused person when brought to trial, especially in cases of a more aggravated description, was a practice among the Jews.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 202.

HE THAT ACCUSES OTHERS OF BLASPHEMY, IS NOT UNFREQUENTLY HIMSELF THE GREATEST BLASPHEMER.
A WICKED MAN HARDENETH HIS FACE: BUT AS FOR THE UPRIGHT, HE DIRECTETH HIS WAY.—PROV. xxi. 29.

Matt. xxvi. 67, .8.	Mark xiv. 65.	Luke xxii. 64, .5.
67 Then did-they-spit in his face, and buffeted him;	65 [m]And some began to-spit on-him, and to-cover his face, and to-buffet him,[n]	[n]And when-they-had-blindfolded him, they-struck him-on the face,[o]
[o]and others smote-him-with-the-palms-of-their-hands,
68 saying, Prophesy unto-us, thou Christ, Who is he that-smote thee?[p]	and to-say unto-him, Prophesy: and the servants did -strike him with-the-palms-of-their-hands.	and asked him, saying, Prophesy, who is-it that smote thee?
		[r]And many other-things blasphem-ously spake-they against him. (Ver. 66, p. 434.)

*Peter denies Christ.

Matt. xxvi. 69, 70.	Mark xiv. 66—.8.	Luke xxii. 56, .7 (Ver. 55, p. 427.)	John xviii. 17.
69 Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came-unto him,	66 [s]And as-Peter-was beneath in the palace, there-cometh one of-the maids of-the high-priest:[t]	But a-certain 56 maid	(Ver. 16, p. 425.) Then saith 17 [t]the damsel that kept-the-door[v] unto Peter,
67 [o]and

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xiv. 65. spit—Is. l. 6, 'I hid not my face from shame and spitting.'

Mt. xxvi. 68. Prophesy—This was in fulfilment both of the old prophets, and of what Jesus had himself predicted—see on Lu. xxii. 63—They had been forewarned, Is. xxviii. 22, 'Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong:' &c.—They did mock, and so have been left deaf to the words of prophecy, and blind to the working of God, in accomplishment of the prophetic word; and in the open view of the world, they have been left a derision unto all nations—The fulfilment of the prophecies in their case, has been among the most popular confirmations to the truth of Divine revelation, Exe. xiv. 21—.3.

Mk. xiv. 66. one of the maids—Jno. xviii. 17, 'The damsel that kept the door'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 67. They. That is, not the members of the council (ver. 59, p. 427), who had just pronounced Jesus 'guilty of death,' but 'the men that held Jesus.' —Comp. Lu. xxii. 63; Mk. xiv. 65.—See on ver. 68, inf.

Spit in his face. A mark of extreme contempt and abhorrence. Even to spit on the ground before a person is still a bitter disgrace in the East.

And buffeted him. According to Theophylact, κολαφίζω signifies to beat with the hand, the fingers being clenched.

[Smote him with the palms of their hands. 'Paπίζω is by some rendered ῥάβδος, a rod or wand; hence ῥαπίσαι, to strike with a rod. But most commentators explain it by expalmo, alapo, to strike with the open hand. Thus the Saviour of the world was treated with indignity in all its various and vexatious forms.]

[68. Prophesy. Rather, 'divine to us.' The English verb, to prophesy, denotes to foretel what is future; here a declaration is required concerning what is past. The word divine is applicable to either, as it denotes simply to declare any truth not discoverable by the natural powers of man. From the evangelists, Mark and Luke, it appears that our Lord was at this time blindfolded. Criminals, immediately after sentence of condemnation, had their faces covered or hooded, as if unworthy to enjoy the benefit of the light any longer. In cases of treason, the Roman law (according to which our Lord was executed) ran thus:—'If the sentence be confirmed, let the criminal's hands be bound, let him be veiled or hoodwinked, and hanged on a cursed tree, after having been scourged either within or without the Pomerium.'—See Livy, i. 27. The custom of veiling condemned criminals was observed likewise among the eastern nations. Est. vii. 8, 'As the word went out of the king's mouth, they covered Haman's face.']

Lu. xxii. 64. Prophesy, &c. This usage of Christ refers to that sport so ordinary among children, called μυῖνδα, in which it is the manner first to blindfold, then to strike (ver. 63), then to ask who gave the blow, and not to let the person go till he name the one who struck him. It was used on this occasion to reproach our blessed Lord, and to expose him to ridicule.—See Mt. xxvi. 68, supra.

[Mt. xxvi. 69. Peter sat without in the palace. This passage would be more accurately translated, Peter sat without in the court.]

Without. Ἔξω, i.e., outside of the place where Jesus was examined by the council; which was the vestibule, called, ver. 71, πύλων, but by Mark, xiv. 68, προαύλιον. We may suppose, therefore, that he was in the lower part of the hall. He might, however, be so placed that he could both see and be seen by Je-us.

A damsel. 'That kept the door' of the high priest's house, and had admitted Peter.—See Jno. xviii. 16, p. 425, and ver. 17, supra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 67. Let us be willing to suffer for Christ's sake. He suffered much for us.—See Isa. l. 6.

68 ver. Let us beware of making a jest of prophecy.

* See foot-note, p. 433, on Peter's denials of Christ.

MATT. xxvi. 70.	MARK xiv. 68.	LUKE xxii. 57.	JOHN xviii. 17
	when-she-saw Peter [d] [e]warming-himself, she-looked upon-him, and-said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth. [f]	beheld him [d] as-he-sat by the fire, [e] and earnestly-looked-upon him, and-said, This man was also with him.
saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.			[f] Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? [g]
70 [g] But he denied before them all, saying, [h]	68 But he denied, saying,	And he 57 denied him, saying, [h] Woman,	He saith,
I-know not what thou-sayest.	I-know not, [i] neither understand-I what thou sayest. And he-went out into the porch; and the-cock crew.	I-know him not. [i]	I-am not.

Peter denies Christ a second time

MATT. xxvi. 71, 72.	MARK xiv. 69, 70	LUKE xxii. 58.	JOHN xviii. 18, 25.
		[a] And the servants and officers 18 stood there, who had-made a-fire-of-coals; for it was cold: and they-warmed-themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed-himself. [b] (Ver. 19—24, p. 426.)
		[b] And after 58 a-little-while [c]
71 [c] And when he was gone out into the porch,
			And Simon Peter 25 stood and warmed-himself.
another maid saw him, and said unto-them that were there; [d]	69 And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by,	another saw him, and said,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxii. 56. by the fire—Jno. xviii. 18, supra, 'The servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; for it was cold:'

Mk. xiv. 67. warming himself—Jno. xviii. 18, supra, 'And Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.'

looked upon him—Lu. xxii. 56, 'Earnestly looked upon him,'—She may have recognised him as having been introduced by the other disciple, Jno. xviii. 16, supra, p. 425.

68. But he denied—Peter's first denial appears to have been before all [Mt. xxvi. 70], but especially to the woman who had charged him with being a disciple of Jesus [Lu. xxii. 57].

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 70. But he denied before them all. So the evil principle gained ground. Before, he followed at a distance; now he denies. This is the second gradation in his fall.

Mk. xiv. 68. The cock crew. 'The words of our Lord's warning to Peter, as recorded by Mark (see ver. 30, § 87, p. 406), are "before the cock crow twice." In the other evangelists the words are "before the cock crow." St. Mark, therefore, alone records this first crowing of the cock.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Jno. xviii. 18. Officers. See on ver. 3, § 88, p. 417.

Mt. xxvi. 71. The porch. The entrance, or the small apartment between the outer door and the large hall in the centre of the building. Peter was embarrassed and confused by the question, and went away from the fire into the porch, where he expected to be unobserved; yet in vain. By the very movement to avoid detection he came into contact with another who knew him, and repeated the charge. How clearly does it prove that our Lord was omniscient, that all these things were foreseen.

[Another maid saw him. "Αλλη; in St. Luke, ἕτερος. Where the person is uncertain, the masculine ἕτερος may be used; of which Grotius brings many examples. But St. Luke fixes it by the reply of Peter, "Man, I am not." Therefore, rather say, the maid spoke to the standers-by, on which one of the men accosts Peter himself, saying, Σύ, 'Thou art also of them.'—Wasse.]

['There is a similar variation, without any contradiction, between St. Luke on the one hand, and St. Matthew and St. Mark on the other, in their accounts of Peter's third denial. St. Luke, ver. 59, asserting, respecting one particular person, that which the two other evangelists (Mt. xxvi. 73; Mk. xiv. 70), assert respecting the by-standers generally.' —Lonsdale and Hale.] [Lu. xxii. 58. Another saw him, and said. 'Observe here, in order to reconcile the four evangelists, that divers persons concurred in charging Peter with belonging to Christ. 1. The maid that let him in, afterwards seeing him at the fire, first put the ques-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 69, 70. See margin.
Jno. xviii. 18. Let us beware of seeking comfort in the society of the wicked. Let us take heed that what is in itself innocent, does not become a snare to us.

MATT. xxvi. 72.	MARK xiv. 70.	LUKE xxii. 59.	JOHN xviii. 25.
'This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.'	'This is one of them.'	Thou art also of them.
			'They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples?' He denied it, and said, 72 'And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.	70 And he denied it again.	And Peter said, Man, I am not.	I am not.

Peter denies Christ the third time.

MATT. xxvi. 73—75.	MARK xiv. 70—72.	LUKE xxii. 59—62.	JOHN xviii. 26, 27.
73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.	'they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilæan, and thy speech agreeth thereto.'	'And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him: for he is a Galilæan.	'One of the servants of the high priest, being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?'
74 Then began he to curse and to swear,	71 'But he began to curse and to swear,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 72. again he denied—This second denial appears to have been in another place, ver. 71, and occasioned by another maid telling to this other company, that Peter was one of Jesus' disciples, Mk. xiv. 69—That company, and particularly one of them, spoke to him accordingly, when a second and still stronger denial was given by Peter; which denial is not said to be given to the woman who raised the report, but to the man who directly made the charge, and who probably saw in Peter's appearance something that justified the report, Lu. xxii. 58—comp. with Mt. xxvi. 71, .2; Mk. xiv. 69, 70; Jno. xviii. 25.

Mk. xiv. 71. he began to curse, &c.—Peter appears to have been making himself familiar with those that stood by; in doing so, his provincial accent tended to confirm the suspicion, that he had indeed been a follower of the Galilæan, Mt. xxvi. 73; [Mk. xiv. 70; Lu. xxii. 59]—The charge might now be the more annoying to Peter, as being made by a kinsman of Malchus, whose ear Peter had cut off, and who, it would seem, recollected seeing him in the place where that act was committed, Jno. xviii. 26, supra, and on account of which he might now feel that he was in danger—see Mt. xxvi. 52, § 88, p. 420.

NOTES.

tion to him, and then positively affirmed that he was with Christ. 2. Another maid accused him to the standers-by, and gave occasion to the man here mentioned to renew the charge against him, which caused the second denial. 3. Others of the company took notice of his being a Galilæan, and were seconded by the kinsman of Malchus, who affirmed he had seen him in the garden. And this drew on the third denial.'—Wesley.]

Mt. xxvi. 71. Unto them that were there. Instead of λέγει τοῖς ἐκεῖ, καὶ, many MSS., amongst which are some of the most ancient and of the first authority, read λέγει αὐτοῖς ἐκεῖ καὶ οὗτος ἦν, 'said to them, this man too was there.' No doubt that is the genuine reading of the passage. Griesbach and many other learned commentators approve of this reading.

73. And again he denied with an oath. This is a third gradation of his iniquity. He has told a lie, and he swears to support it. A liar has always some suspicion that his testimony is not credited, for he is conscious to his own falsity, and is therefore naturally led to support his assertions by oaths.

73. And after a while. That is, about an hour after. Peter, by this time, had returned into the palace or hall, and stood warming himself by the fire, Jno. xviii. 25.

Thy speech bewrayeth thee. 'ἡ λαλιά σου δῆλόν σε ποιεῖ, "thy dialect bewrayeth thee." Different provinces of the same country have usually their distinct idioms, accent, &c., which in the remoter parts are more strongly marked. That this was the case with Galilee, we learn from the Rabbinical writers, who tell us that the speech of the Galilæans was broad and rustic.'—Bloomf.

74. Then began he to curse and to swear. 'The progress of Peter from one degree of guilt to another is distinctly marked out in its several steps by the faithful evangelist. He first denied, then added an oath to strengthen his denial, and at last, repeating his oath, accompanied it with curses upon himself, if he were swearing falsely.'—Lonsdale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mt. xxvi. 72—4. How fully was it made manifest that Peter was but a stone liable to be moved about, and that Jesus, who was left alone in his testimony is alone the Rock!

WHOSO DIGGETH A PIT SHALL FALL THEREIN: AND HE THAT ROLLETH A STONE, IT WILL RETURN UPON HIM.—Prov. xxvi. 27.
A LIAR DOTH HATE THOSE WHOM HE HURTETH BY FLATTERING MOUTH WORKETH RUIN. Prov. xxvi. 28.

MATT. xxvi. 75.	MARK xiv. 72.	LUKE xxii. 60—2.	JOHN xviii. 27.
saying,	saying,	And Peter said, 60	Peter 27
I-know not the man.	I-know not this man of-whom ye-speak.[e]	Man, I-know not what thou-sayest.	then denied again:
And immediately	72 And [f] the-second-time[g]	[f] And immediately,	and immediately
		[g] while-he yet-spake, the-cock crew.	the-cock crew.	the cock crew.	the-cock crew.
		And the Lord 61 turned, and-looked-upon Peter	(Ver. 28, p. 435.)
75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which-	And Peter called-to-mind the word that Jesus	And Peter remembered the word of-the Lord, how he-had-said unto-him,	said unto-him,	said unto-him,[e]
Before the-cock crow,	[h] Before the-cock crow twice,	Before the-cock crow, thou-shalt-deny me thrice.	thou-shalt-deny me thrice.	thou-shalt-deny me thrice.
And	And when-he-thought-thereon,[i]
[i] he-went out, and-wept bitterly* πικρως.	he-wept.	And Peter 62 went out, and wept bitterly πικρως.
(Ch. xxvii. 1, p. 434.)	(Ch. xv. 1, ib.)	(Ver. 63, p. 429.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxii. 61. looked upon Peter, &c.—It was well that Peter was at length convinced of his weakness, and that, although at the expense of feeling his own deep debasement, his Lord's truthfulness was at last brought to mind—see our Lord's prediction, ver. 33, .4, § 87, pp. 376, .7.

62. wept bitterly—Je. ii. 19, 'Know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God.'—Ps. xxxviii. 18, 'I will be sorry for my sin.'—2 Co. vii. 10, 'Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of:'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvi. 74, .5. Immediately the cock crew. Lu. xxii. 60, 'Immediately, while he yet spake.' The crowing of the cock (see on Mt. xxvi. 34, § 87, p. 406), to which his attention was called by the Lord's turning and looking upon him (comp. Lu. xxii. 61) at once brought to his remembrance the saying of Jesus, which had forewarned him of his fall.

Lu. xxii. 61. The Lord turned, and looked, &c. 'The delicacy of this reproof was great. Peter must be reproved and alarmed. Christ is in bonds, and cannot go and speak to him; if he call aloud, the disciple is discovered, and falls a victim to Jewish malice and Roman jealousy: he therefore does the whole by a look.'—A. C.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvi. 75. 'When abandoned of God, the smallest thing may become the occasion of a fall; and, when in the hand of God, the smallest matter may become the instrument of our restoration. Let us never think lightly of what are termed little sins: the smallest one has the seed of eternal ruin in it. Let us never think contemptibly of the feeblest means of grace: each may have the seed of eternal salvation in it. Let us ever remember that the great apostle Peter fell through fear of a servant maid, and rose through the crowing of a cock.'

Jesus shews that it is he who judgeth the heart, and yet he submits to the unjust judgment of men: He is fully prepared for suffering, being mindful also of the joy set before him.

* 'The reflections that crowd upon the mind from this most affecting incident of Peter's denial of his Master, are various and important. This event should first be well remarked, as it affords a clear and striking accomplishment of our Lord's prediction, that before crowing of the cock, Peter should deny him thrice: and next, as it affords a melancholy proof of the infirmity of human nature, the weakness of our best resolutions when we are left to ourselves, and the extreme danger of confiding in our own strength. That Peter was most warmly attached to Jesus, that his intentions were upright, and his professions at the moment sincere, there can be no doubt. But his temper was too hot, and his confidence in himself too great. When our blessed Lord told him and all the other apostles, that they would desert him that night, Peter was the first to say, 'Though all men should be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.' And when Jesus again assured him, that before the cock crew he should deny him thrice, St. Peter insisted with still greater vehemence on his unshaken fidelity, and declared, that though he should die with him, yet would he not deny him. Yet deny him he did, with execrations and oaths; and left a memorable lesson, even to the best of men, not to entertain too high an opinion of their own constancy and firmness in the hour of temptation.—(See 1 Cor. x. 12.) Hence we see the wisdom and necessity of looking beyond ourselves, of looking up to heaven for the support and assistance of which we always stand in need in the discharge of our duty.

'There can scarcely be a stronger proof of the candour and humility of the sacred writers, than is afforded by the manner in which they speak of their own characters, and their own faults and weaknesses. The crime of Peter in denying his Lord, and that of Paul in his bitter persecution of the church, are not suppressed, though their reputation must have been deemed so essential to the christian cause, and though their transitory but great offences, were followed by a whole life of repentance. Throughout every part of their writings all is open and undisguised; no secret is made of the names, the errors, or the transgressions of any of the apostles; the slowness of their understandings, their prejudices and their bigotry, their temporal views and contentions for power, their desertions of their Divine Master in the hour of his distress, the accidental differences which occurred among them in the course of their ministry, are all fully and plainly related.'

(G. 96.)—*On the morning of the sixth day of the week, Friday, the fourteenth of Nisan, Jesus is again examined in the usual council chamber of the Jewish council.—Luke xxii. 66—71. In the temple.

[Ch. xxii. 65, p. 430.]

66 And as-soon-as it-was day, the elders το πρεσβυτεριον of-the people and the-chief-67 priests and the-scribes came-together, and led him into their council, saying, Art thou 68 the Christ? tell us. And he-said unto-them, If I-tell you, ye-will-not-believe: and if 69 I-also-ask you, ye-will-not-answer me, nor let-me-go. Hereafter απο του νυν shall the 70 Son of man sit εσται καθημενος on the-right-hand of-the power of God. Then said-they 71 all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need-we any-further witness? for we-ourselves-have-heard of his-own mouth.

(G. 97.)—Jesus being condemned is taken from the council to Pontius Pilate. Judas Iscariot repents.

MATT. xxvii. 1, 2. (Ver. 75, p. 433.)	MARK xv. 1. (Ch. xiv. 72, ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 1.	JOHN xviii. 28. (Ver. 27, ib.)
1 [b]When the morning was come, all the chief-priests[c] and elders [d]of the people[d] took counsel	1 [a]And straightway[b] in the morning the chief-priests [c]held a consultation with the elders[d]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxii. 66. the elders, &c. — see on Mt. xxvii. 7, infra; and comp. Ps. ii. 2; Je. xix. 7.

67. ye will not believe—Thus did our Lord in effect pronounce sentence upon his judges, by recognising them as being in that state, which was the declared ripeness for the fulness of judgment predicted, Je. xix. 8, 9—ver. 15, 'They have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.'

68. will not answer—Is. l. 2, 'Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer?'—lxvi. 4, 'I also will choose their delusions, ... because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear:'

69. Hereafter, &c.—see Mt. xxvi. 64, supra, p. 429.

70. the Son of God—see Mt. xxvi. 63, supra, p. 428.

Ye say that I am—Mt. xxvi. 64, p. 429, 'Thou hast said:'—Jno. xviii. 8, 'I am'

71. What need, &c.—Mt. xxvi. 65, p. 429, 'What further need,' &c.

we ourselves have heard, &c.—They had heard him testify to the truth respecting himself, ver. 69, 70—and for this he was adjudged worthy of death, Mk. xiv. 64, p. 429—All he had said and done since his appearance among men, abundantly bore witness to the truth of what he had now finally declared to themselves upon oath—see Jno. xv. 22—5, § 87, p. 390.

Mt. xxvii. 1. When the morning was come—Mk. xv. 1, 'And straightway in the morning'—Lu. xxii. 66, supra, 'As soon as it was day,'—Jno. xviii. 28, p. 435, 'And it was early;'

Mk. xv. 1. held a consultation—When they had prejudged his case, and agreed upon his sentence, then, for form's sake, he was brought before them for judgment, as described, Lu. xxii. 66—71, supra.

NOTES.

[Lu. xxii. 67. Art thou the Christ? 'These words admit of being rendered in three different ways:—1. 'Art thou the Christ? tell us.' 2. 'If thou be the Christ, tell us [so].' 3. 'Tell us whether thou be the Christ [or not].' The first mode has far less to recommend it than the second and third, of which the latter seems, on account of its greater suitableness to the occasion and the context (especially the words of the answer), to be entitled to the preference.'—Bloomf.]

67, 8. If I tell you, &c. The sense, then, may be thus expressed:—'If I simply tell you [that I am the Christ], ye will not believe me; and if I propose questions in argument [to support my claim], ye will not answer me, nor, though convinced, will you release me.'

69. Hereafter, &c. See on Mt. xxvi. 64, p. 429.

70. Art thou then the Son of God? Both these, the Son of God, and the Son of man, were known titles of the Messiah, the one taken from his Divine, and the other from his human nature.

Ye say that I am. The sense is, 'I am he of whom ye speak.'—Comp. Mt. xxvi. 64, p. 429.—See NOTE.

71. We ourselves have heard, &c. Comp. Mt. xxvi. 65; Mk. xiv. 63, .4, p. 429.

Mt. xxvii. 1. When the morning was come. From ch. xxvi. 59, p. 427, it is evident that they had begun this consultation the preceding evening. But as it was contrary to all forms of law, and expressly forbidden in their own canons, to spend the night in judging of a capital cause, or to proceed against a person's life by night, they seem to have separated for a few hours, and then, at the break of day, to have come together again, pretending to conduct the business according to the forms of law.

Took counsel. 'Their objects were, to obtain the confirmation of their sentence from Pilate; and by charges of sedition, to engage the Roman governor to carry into effect the Roman method of execution by crucifixion.'—So R. Watson.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxii. 66—70. Peter fell, but our Foundation standeth sure. Jesus had before the high priest acknowledged himself to be 'the Christ, the Son of the living God.' He here again makes the same confession, and essentially the same he afterwards makes to Pilate—so that as often as Peter denies his Lord, Jesus affirms that truth on account of his confessing which Peter had before been pronounced blessed. But how comforting it is that our blessedness does not depend upon Peter, but upon the Rock, THE CHRIST, THE SON OF THE LIVING GOD!]

71 ver. It was from a perverted application of a prophetic utterance through the high priest that these Jewish rulers had resolved upon their present evil course — and now the words of Christ himself afford them, as they suppose, sufficient ground for carrying their purpose into effect.

* 'The second examination having been finished soon after three, it would begin to be day, as St. Luke expresses it, soon after four; and the third having been speedily completed, our Lord might be taken to Pilate soon after five; a time which St. John would naturally describe by πρωΐ, because earlier than sunrise, or πρωΐ, though much later than the dawn of day.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. p. 216.

THE DAY OF THE LORD OF HOSTS SHALL BE UPON EVERY ONE THAT IS PROUD AND LOFTY, AND UPON EVERY ONE THAT IS LIFTED UP; AND HE SHALL BE BROUGHT LOW:—Isa. ii. 12.

MATT. xxvii. 2.	MARK xv. 1.	LUKE xxiii. 1.	JOHN xviii. 28.
	and scribes and the whole council, f
f against Jesus to put him to death,
2 and when they had bound him, g	and bound Jesus,	And	Then 28
		g the whole multitude of them arose, and led him h
they led him away i	and carried him away,		led they Jesus i from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: k
k and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor. l *	and delivered him to Pilate. (Ver. 2, § xc. p. 445.)	unto Pilate. (Ver. 2, ibid.)	l and it was early;

[For remainder of ver. 28, see § 90, p. 440.]

Judas repents.—Matt. xxvii. 3—10. In the temple.

3 Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself μεταμεληθεις, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests
4 and elders, saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And 5 they said, What is that to us? see thou to that. And he cast down the pieces of silver

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 2. delivered him to, &c.—Jesus had forewarned his disciples that the chief priests, after condemning him to death, would deliver him to the Gentiles, to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify, Mt. xx. 18, .9, § 77, p. 235.

Pontius Pilate—He was likely to take a willing part in a work of this kind—He had already mingled the blood of Galilæans with their sacrifices, Lu. xiii. 1, § 64, p. 173.

3. repented himself—Esau, after selling his birthright, found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears, Ge. xxv. 33, .4; xxvii. 30—.8; He. xii. 15—.7.

4. I have sinned—see the confession of the brethren of Joseph, Ge. xlii. 21—Many have made such an acknowledgment of sin, whose repentance we do not know to have been unto life, as Pharaoh, Ex. ix. 27; x. 16, .7—Saul, 1 Sa. xv. 24—Ahab, 1 Ki. xxi. 27—The guilt of Judas, as well as of the chief priests, &c., is charged upon the unbelieving Jews, Ac. vii. 52.

innocent blood—Jerusalem already stood charged with the shedding of innocent blood, 2 Ki. xxiv. 4—Je. xix. 4, 'Blood of innocents;'

5. cast down the pieces, &c.—Zec. xi. 13, 'And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 1. To put him to death. To devise some way by which he might be put to death under the authority of the Roman governor.

2. When they had bound him. Jesus had been before bound, for security, by the officers who apprehended him, see Jno. xviii. 12, p. 425; he was now bound as a condemned malefactor.

Lu. xxiii. 1. The whole multitude of them. 'The whole of the elders, chief priests, and scribes, mentioned in ch. xxii. 66, p. 434, as composing the council.—See Ac. xv. 12; xxiii. 7, where, as in this place, the word "multitude" is applied not to a crowd of the common people, but to a deliberative assembly consisting of many persons in authority.'—L. & H.

Mt. xxvii. 2. Pontius Pilate. See § 7, ADD., p. 55.

2. The governor. ἡγεμων. 'This title belonged to the proconsular or propretorian governors of the Roman provinces; because, though only procurator of Judæa, which was an inferior dignity, he had the proconsular power of life and death, which was not unusual in the lesser provinces.'—R. Watson.

Properly there was but one president in Syria, of which Judea was a part, and he who had the superintendency of this part was styled imperatoris procurator. Pilate was a man of impetuous and obstinate temper, he disturbed the peace of Judea, and gave occasion to the troubles and revolt that followed. Philo, the Jew, describes Pilate as a judge accustomed to sell justice; and for money to pronounce any sentence that was desired. He mentions his rapines, his murders, the torments he inflicted on the innocent, the persons he put to death without form or process, and affirms that he was a man who exercised excessive cruelty during his government.

Jno. xviii. 28. The hall of judgment. τὸ πραιτωριον, "The prætorium," the governor's palace. Properly speaking, the prætorium was that part of the palace where the soldiers kept guard, Mk. xv. 16, § 91, but in common language it was applied to the palace in general.'—Beza.

Mt. xxvii. 3. Repented himself. St. Matthew expresses by this word the remorse which Judas had on account of his crime; but it was not a true repentance, since it was followed by despair; whereas true repentance is never without confidence in the mercy of God, because it is never without faith and love. Judas began to be terrified in his conscience, but he had not a heart to beg forgiveness, nor to apply to Christ for a remedy.

['The original word, μεταμεληθεις, is not the same with μετανοησας, translated "repent," in ch. iii. 2, § 7, p. 50, and in other similar places in the New Testament.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]

The thirty pieces of silver. See on ch. xxvi. 15, § 86, p. 357.

4. In that I have betrayed the innocent blood. That is, in betraying an innocent being to death. Blood is put here for life, or for the man. The meaning is, that he knew and felt that Jesus was innocent.—A Hebrew idiom.

5. Cast down the ..... silver in the temple. Ναὸς, properly signifies the sanctuary or temple, round which

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mt. xxvii. 3, 4. It is not enough that, like Judas, we be convinced of sin, and of the innocence of Jesus; if we would have repentance unto life, and not like him unto death, we must regard that blood as making atonement for our guilt. It is a dangerous matter to think of making worldly gain by Christ. The gain which is made by the betrayal of Christ will be found to be but loss and ruin.]

* 'The abduction of Jesus to Pilate was not that he might be condemned afresh, but the necessary consequence of his being condemned already. The judgment of the council had pronounced him worthy of death, which, in the absence of the power of life and death, was the utmost it could do. But to give effect to the judgment, it was necessary to resort to the civil governor. The abduction to Pilate, therefore, might be justly considered the sign and seal of our Saviour's death.'—Ibid., p. 217.

BECAUSE TO EVERY PURPOSE THERE IS TIME AND JUDGMENT, THEREFORE THE MISERY OF MAN IS GREAT UPON HIM.—Eccles. viii. 6
FOR HE KNOWETH NOT THAT WHICH SHALL BE: FOR WHO CAN TELL HIM WHEN IT SHALL BE?—Eccles. viii. 7.

MATT. xxvii. 6—8.

6 in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself. And the chief priests took the silver-pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it 7 is the price of blood. And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, 8 to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 5. hanged himself—Ac. i. 18, 'Falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.'—His manner of death seems to have shadowed forth the miserable end of the Jews, who took upon them the responsibility of shedding the innocent blood, Mt. xxvii. 25, § 90, p. 453—The death of that generation was most suicidal, and multitudes of them had their bowels laid open and searched by the Roman soldiers for pieces of gold they were supposed to have concealed by swallowing: so literally was fulfilled in them the case of the hypocrite, Job xx. 15, 'He hath swallowed down riches, and he shall vomit them up again: God shall cast them out of his belly.'

6. it is the price of blood—Zec. xi. 13, 'The LORD said unto me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prised at of them.'

7. took counsel—They who took counsel were the chief priests, ver. 6, with whom appear to have been the elders of the people, ver. 1, supra—The two parties of whom Jeremiah was to take witnesses, to his declaring that the Lord would, Je. xix. 7, 'make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place;'

potter's field—Jeremiah, in the case above mentioned, was to take with him a potter's earthen vessel, Je. xix. 1, to a place in that neighbourhood, if not to the very spot afterwards called the potter's field, which was near the valley of the son of Hinnom, over against the sun-gate, and a little way up the hill of evil counsel: there the prophet was to break the bottle, ver. 10, and say, ver. 11, 'Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again:'—comp. Ps. ii. 9; Is. xxx. 14.

to bury strangers in—The valley of the son of Hinnom, or Tophet, being the place where dead bodies were cast, that had none to bury them, and that being near the dwelling of the priests, they may in their counsel have entertained the idea of freeing themselves from such a nuisance; but their evil counsel was not to stand—Je. xix. 11, 3, 'They shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury. Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet:'—So far from their counsel being successful, as to that use of the price of the innocent blood, the case of Tophet was to be aggravated, so that it would be called 'the valley of slaughter;' and the city itself was to be made as that place of unburied dead bodies, where also fires were continually kept for consuming them, and from which are derived the name (Gehenna), and the description of the place of the reprobate, 'Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched;'—comp. ver. 11—5, with Is. xxx. 33; lxvi. 24; Mk. v. 22, § 19, p. 124; Mk. ix. 43—9, § 52, p. 77.

8. The field of blood—see on ver. 4—7, supra.

NOTES.

the courts were built; a place into which Judas, not being a priest, could not enter. The words ἐν τῷ ναῷ, must therefore either signify, near the temple, by the temple door, where the boxes stood to receive the free-will offerings of the people, for the support and repairs of the sacred edifice; or, that part of the temple where the sanhedrim assembled, and where it was at that time. Josephus uses the word ναός, as in this passage, to signify one of the courts of the temple.

Mt. xxvii. 6. The treasury. The place whither the people brought their free-will offerings for the service of the temple. According to Josephus, there were several chests fixed in the courts of the temple to receive the gifts of the people. The unlawfulness of putting the thirty shekels into these repositories, arose from the circumstance, that they contained the treasure consecrated to God, and that they were prohibited by the law to deposit in the sacred treasury any money arising from base or unlawful gains; so they interpreted the precept.—See De. xxiii. 18, and Talmud, 112. It is true, that there it is only forbidden for the pretium supri to be put into the sacred treasury; but in the Jewish law, idolatry, fornication, and murder, are crimes usually classed together. By so doing, however, they condemned themselves, since they execrated that in the seller, of which they were themselves the buyers.

The treasury. In the original this place is called 'corbanas,' a gift of the kind just mentioned being called 'corban.'—See NOTE, ch. xv. 5, § 44, p. 6; and comp. Lu. xxi. 1, § 85, p. 308. Judas, by throwing down the thirty shekels in the temple among the priests, meant it to be corban, and thus in some measure expiate his atrocity.

7. The potter's field. This plot of ground, which probably had been the site of a pottery, lay without the wall of the city, on the south-east corner, about a mile from the temple. The price may seem small; but this may be accounted for by supposing that the soil had been so entirely exhausted by the potters, as to render it unfit for the purposes of husbandry.

Modern travellers inform us, that this piece of ground is to this day distinctly marked out, that it is about thirty yards long, and fifteen broad; one half of which is taken up by a fabric, built for a charnel house, which is twelve yards in height. Into this building, dead bodies are let down from the top, there being five holes left open for that purpose, through which they may be seen under several degrees of decay. From the veneration this piece of land has obtained among Christians, it is called the Holy Field.

[To bury strangers in. It has been supposed that these strangers were Jews, who came from other parts of the world to attend the great feasts at Jerusalem. This, however, may be called into question. Mr. Wilde, in his interesting narrative, has (vol. ii. pp. 337—57) given a description of what he supposes to be the place of burial here adverted to. He gives engravings of specimens of the skulls found in the three compartments of it, the dissimilarity of which to each other, and to the Jewish head, would seem to indicate that they were strangers not merely as to place, but also as to race, and that they were of the various families descended from the three sons of Noah, but none of them of that improved race of which are the Jews and the modern Europeans. Having described the different forms of the skulls found in the cave, he says, 'Now none of these curious heads belonged to the Jewish race, for not one single European or well-marked Caucasian head could I find among the numbers scattered in the chambers; and as all who did not belong to that family must have been strangers in Jerusalem, and as these heads belonged to races of mankind that we know did not inhabit Judæa for the last two thousand years, they must have been foreigners; and this

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 4, 5. Here is one of the most striking examples, if not the only example, which we find in scripture, of confession to the priests! but, although accompanied, to appearance, with all willingness to make restitution and do penance, we do not find that it was productive of the least advantage. Can we believe that if he had made confession to Jesus, and sought his forgiveness, the end of Judas would have been so miserable?

[6, 7 ver. It is worthy of remark that the priests were extremely scrupulous in avoiding what they called unlawful—as to putting into the treasury; at the same time their conduct was in direct opposition to the whole spirit of the law, and even to the very letter.

MATT. xxvii. 9, 10.

9 day. Then was-fulfilled that which-was-spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces-of-silver, the price of-him that-was-valued, whom they of the-10 children of-Israel did-value; and gave them for the potter's field, as the-Lord appointed me. [Ch. xxvii. 11, &c. p. 445.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 9. Jeremy—Although so intimately connected with the prophecy in Je. xix., the words following are not found among the writings of Jeremiah: it does not, however, follow that they were not spoken by him; for certainly we have not in writing all that the prophets spoke — Similar words, however, are recorded by Zechariah, xi. 12, .3.

the children of Israel—This sentence might more literally be rendered, whom they valued after the children of Israel, of whom Jesus, as being the promised Messiah, claimed to be King—Ten of the tribes were now lost, and were declared to be, in their estranged condition, like bones spread in the open valley, very many and very dry, Eze. xxvii. 1, 2—It may have been in ridicule of his being the King of such a people, that the thirty, the three times ten pieces of silver, were at first given as his price by the representatives of the three tribes, Judah, Benjamin, and Levi; and now in their profanity, they may have thought it appropriate to purchase with the price of their King, a burying place for his subjects, the estranged ten tribes, unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem had said, xi. 15, 'Get you far from the LORD:' &c., and who were, according to prophecy, lying in an unburied state, xxxvii. 11—That the tribes scattered abroad were really called strangers, comp. Ja. i. 1, with 1 Pe. i. 1; ii. 9—11—That the Jewish priests, &c., really made his being the King of Israel a matter of jest, see Mt. xxvii. 41, 2, § 91, p. 463—When the Jews do in truth begin to consider the prophetic word, so as to see its fulfilment in their own destroyed condition, then will it be found that Jesus did not say in vain, he was especially sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel—Je. xxxi. 1, 'At the same time, saith the LORD, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.'

NOTES.

has led me to conjecture that this tomb, which is situated in the acknowledged field of blood, may be one of those sepulchres of the actual Aceldama that was purchased by the priests to bury strangers in.' As accounting for the identification of the European head with the Jewish, above alluded to by Mr. Wilde, see Wilson on our Israelitish Origin, Pole's Remarks on the Destiny of the Ten Tribes, &c.]

Mt. xxvii. 8. The field of blood. The field purchased by the price of blood. The name by which this field was called was Aceldama, Ac. i. 19.

[9. Jeremy the prophet. The words here quoted are not found in Jeremiah, but in Zec. xi. 12. Among the various conjectures which have been formed upon this subject, it has been supposed that we ought either to admit that a trivial error had crept into the text (for a change of a single letter, according to the abbreviated manner in which names are written in the old MSS., would suffice to occasion the mistake); or, that the evangelist wrote only the prophet, without naming him, and that some person at an early period inserted, by mistake, in his manuscript, the name of Jeremiah instead of Zechariah, which mistake was afterward generally inserted in the text.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.]

[They took the thirty pieces, &c. The manner in which the ingenious Knatchbull translates this passage, gives more perspicuity to it, than the common version conveys. It is as follows:—'I took the thirty shekels (the price of him that was valued, whom they valued) from the sons of Israel (and they gave them for the potter's field) as the Lord appointed me.']

10. As the Lord appointed me. To write, to record. [As the Lord appointed me. 'That is, commanded me. The meaning of the place in Zechariah is this: He was directed to go to the Jews as a prophet—a pastor of the people. They treated him, as they had done others, with great contempt. He asks them to give him his price—i. e., the price which they thought he and his pastoral labours were worth, or to show their estimate of his office. If they thought it of value, they were to pay him accordingly; if not, they were to "forbear"—that is, to give nothing. To show their great contempt of him and his office, and of God who had sent him, they gave him thirty pieces of silver, the price of a slave. This God commanded, or appointed him to give to the potter, or to throw into the pottery—to throw away. So in the time of Jesus the same thing was substantially repeated. Jesus came as the Messiah. They hated and rejected him. To shew their contempt of him and his cause, they valued him at the price of a slave. This was thrown down in the temple, taken by the priests, and appropriated to the purchase of a field owned by a potter, worn out, and of little or no value; all shewing at how low a price, through the whole transaction, the Son of God was estimated. Though the words quoted here are not precisely like those in Zechariah, yet the sense and general structure are the same.'—Barnes.]—But see supra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

There was a pretence of piety, but it is likely there was selfishness in their counsel. The priests lived in the neighbourhood of Tophet, where unburied bodies were cast, and by the measure proposed they may have expected to free themselves from a nuisance; but their wickedness caused the city itself to be made as Tophet, Jer. xix. It is possible also that by this use of the money they may have expected to connect with the last remembrance of Jesus the ideas of loathsomeness, and contempt. Soon were they to be themselves reduced to the utmost depths of degradation—and so in a great measure they have remained. Well had it been for them had they listened to the warning voice, Is. xxviii. 22, 'Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord GOD of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth.'—Or, land.]

ADDENDA.

OF THE TIMES OF THE DENIALS OF PETER, pp. 430—.3.

With regard to the times of the denials of Peter, they synchronized with the first and the second of the above examinations of our Lord; that is, the first denial happened a little before the first examination, and the third a little before the close of the second. The second, therefore, came between the two.

'For St. John informs us that when Jesus was first conducted to the hall of the high priest, which must have been from the house of Annas, Peter and himself followed him thither; and the other evangelists, so far as regards the attendance of Peter, unanimously confirm St. John. He informs us, also, that being personally known to the high priest, and consequently to the keeper of his door, in this instance one of his female servants; nor was the practice of having female doorkeepers unusual among the Jews, but on the contrary of great antiquity, Μετα την Θυρωρον διαγωνιαν, Ant. Jud. vii., ii. 1; being a statement of Josephus' with reference to the time of David, he spoke to her in behalf of Peter, who had not yet ventured to come in; and so brought him into the palace also. At this time, as each of the accounts attests, it was early in the morning; and, it being likewise the spring-time of the year, the night, always cold in Judæa, was perhaps more so than usual: and consequently a fire had been lighted in the lower part of the hall to warm the parties present: down by which Peter sat with the rest, to observe, as we are told, the event.

'Hereupon, as we are informed by St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke (and it is by no means inconsistent with the account of the same thing by St. John), the female who kept the door, and had recently let him in, and whose suspicions of the fact had perhaps been raised by the very circumstance of John's speaking to her in his behalf, challenged him as a disciple of Jesus. It is implied by her words that she knew John to be such a disciple; and, therefore, she would conclude that one of his friends must be so too. Or, at least, as Peter was obviously a stranger, and did not belong to the house, it was a natural inference that he would not have ventured to come in if he had not been, in some way or other, connected with Jesus; who had been recently brought thither, and who was still there.

'As to any difference in the terms of her address to him, this is of no moment in the harmony of the several accounts. The main fact is implied substantially under all its forms; and the simplicity of the gospels, prefers to convey the plainest matter of fact, relating to any person's conduct, in the shape of something said directly by him: which must yet be considered equivalent to indirect narration. The first denial now took place; and to judge from the course of circumstances, as it took place so soon after the arrival in the hall, it might be prior, but it could not be posterior, to the first examination.

'With regard to the second and the third denials, if there is any difficulty, it arises out of the conciseness of the several accounts. On each of these occasions, more parties than one simultaneously taxed Peter with his relation to Jesus; to whom, however, he made answer, in general terms, at once.

'After being challenged by the maiden, he withdrew from the centre of the hall to the προαύλιον, where however, as St. John implies, he would not be altogether out of the reach of the fire. Here, according to St. Mark, the same maiden, whose proper station was also the porch; and according to St. Matthew another maiden, most probably one of her companions; and according to St. Luke and St. John others in general, whose curiosity, or whose suspicions, might have been excited by what had passed already; repeated the challenge, and the second denial took place.

'After this, and perhaps to avoid the vicinity of the woman who had recognised him twice, and whom he might leave at her post in the porch; or to support the character of a stranger with so much the more confidence; he must have returned to his former station near the fire, and even mixed in the conversation passing around him; for which, as St. Luke shews, there would be ample time; until some of the company, remarking the peculiarity of his dialect, which was Galilæan, according to the united testimony of the three evangelists taxed him on that very account with being a follower of the Galilæan; and one of them in particular, a kinsman of Malchus, charged him, according to St. John, with having seen him in the garden. If this man had witnessed the violence experienced by his relative, and that at the hands of Peter, his recognising him now was exceedingly natural and probable. To these general attacks Peter returned the most positive and the most aggravated denial of all: and now it was, that the look of Jesus, who was still present at the upper end of the hall, turning about critically at this moment, and steadily fixed upon Peter, recalled him to a pungent sense of his misconduct; reviving the recollection of his Master's predictions, and overwhelming him with the consciousness of his own fulfilment of them. There is no circumstance in our Lord's examinations more picturesque than this, or by its moral beauty more calculated to illustrate the benignity of his own disposition, and the instinctive force of conscience. We are indebted for it exclusively to St. Luke; and it shews that Jesus' second examination was now going on, and, to judge from what follows, almost arrived at a close. St. Mark, however, specifies in the liveliest manner the impression produced by the glance —ἐπιβαλὼν ἔκλαιεν—he drew his mantle over his head, so should the word be rendered (before, or while, doing which he must immediately have gone out), and wept.

'The account of these denials, then, is clearly interposed between the first and the second examination of Jesus: the times of the denials will consequently be the times of those examinations, or nearly so: and these times are ascertained by the crowing of the cock. Directly after the first, the cock crew for the first time, and directly after the third, for the second. The second denial, too, followed sooner after the first, than the third after the second; which we have seen was otherwise a probable effect: for between the second and the third, Lu. xxii. 59, compared with Mk. xiv. 70, shews there was something less than one hour; which Lu. xxii. 58, alone must prove could not have been the case between the second and the first.

'Now, if Jno. xiii. 38, § 87, p. 375: Mt. xxvi. 34, 75, §§ 87, 9, pp. 406, 33; Lu. xxii. 34, 61, §§ ib., pp. 377, 433; be all compared with Mk. xiv. 30, 72, §§ ib., pp. 406, 33; it will appear that whereas, in predicting these denials, our Lord actually said, Before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice, which the event also proves to have been the case, but St. Mark only specifies accurately; the other three say simply, Before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice. It follows, therefore, that they mean the second of the above cock-crowings, and by that second, the period of the night ordinarily known by the name of cock-crow; for none else could be specified either as a limit of time under any circumstances, or ἅπαξ in particular instance, but that. They imply, then, that whensoever the three denials might begin they would be all over before the time of cock-crow ἅπαξ, which was a definite time of the night.

'The night being divided into four watches, of three hours each, beginning at sunset in the evening and ending at sunrise in the morning; a fact which is too notorious to require any proof; this time coincides with the end of the third, and the beginning of the fourth, watch of the night; or about the time of the vernal equinox with our three in the morning. Hence the propriety of the following divisions of time in St. Mk. xiii. 35, § 86, p. 342:—ὀψέ, which stands for the close of the first watch; μεσονύκτιον (midnight), which stands for the close of the second; ἀλεκτοροφωνίας (or cock-crow), which denotes the end of the third; and πρωΐ, which is sunrise in the morning, and therefore the end of the fourth. At the equinox, the last cock-crow would, it may be supposed, be about four in the morning: and consequently the first about two, and the second about three: for experience shews that between two successive cock-crows, as such, the interval is commonly one hour: from which natural effect, too, the division of time itself, as founded upon it, must have been originally taken. The observation of experience would be confirmed by what happened in the present instance. Between the second and the third of Peter's denials, which means in fact between the first and the second of the cock-crowings in question, there was this interval.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. pp. 207—11, 16.

JUDAS' REPENTANCE.—Mt. xxvii. 3—10, p. 435.

'The repentance followed by the death of Judas is recorded by St. Matthew only.... That condemnation of our Lord, which is said to have produced this change of mind, is clearly referred by St. Matthew, xxvii. 3, [§ 89, p. 435,] to the condemnation by the sanhedrim, xxvi. 66, [§ ib. p. 429,] before: it can have nothing to do with the condemnation by Pilate; first, because no such condemnation had yet taken place; and secondly, because that was not a distinct condemnation, independent of this, but merely the execution of the sentence of the sanhedrim in this.'—See foot-note, p. 435.

'If all this was known to Judas, that is, if he had been present, during the course of proceedings from the time of the seizure of the person of Jesus, until now, or in any situation to have been subsequently a spectator of the event (which supposition there is no reason to call in question), then, if his repentance at the issue of his perfidy ever took place, it would most naturally occur at this critical moment, when the fate of his Master seemed to have been decided upon. With the motives of his repentance, which were probably connected with the motives of his perfidy, we have nothing to do. It is possible that he might not wish, or at least might not expect, such a result as ensued. He might suppose that our Lord would deliver himself at last by miracle; or that the violence of his enemies would not be allowed to proceed so far against him as ultimately to put him to death. Or, if he expected and even desired the result beforehand, still his conduct subsequently might be the simple effect of remorse; when it had come to pass.

'If, however, the transaction between him and the sanhedrim occurred at this point of time, viz., just after the abduction of our Lord to Pilate, then the scene where it happened, and the time of the day, are implicitly an argument that this abduction ensued upon such a third examination, and at such a time, as St. Luke gave us reason to suppose. For the scene was certainly the temple, and the temple was the regular place for holding the assemblies of the council; the time was πρωΐα, a period earlier than πρωΐ, and, therefore, coincident with the time when preparations usually began for the morning sacrifice, which was to be offered a little before πρωΐ. Mane etiam, says Josephus, Contra Apion. ii. 7, p. 244, aperto templo, oportebat facientes traditas hostias introire, et meredie rursus, dum clauderetur templum.

'At this time, then, the sanhedrim, or most of their body, would be in the temple of course; and it is clear that Judas was there too, a spectator, as it would seem, of the result: and if he was there in any such capacity, our Lord must have been there also. Consequently he had been removed from the palace of the high priest thither. Had not this been the case, the transaction between Judas and the council, which ended in his throwing down the pieces of silver, would have taken place in the palace of the high priest, not in the temple: for there is no reason to suppose he made choice of the latter intentionally. Our Lord's final examination, then, and his ultimate abduction to Pilate, took place in and from the temple. Nor do I think that the providence of God, with a view to the preservation of the typical character in which he was to suffer, would allow them to take place in and from any other quarter.

'The sequel of the history of the repentance of Judas, excepting his death which might have happened immediately afterwards, from 6—10 in St. Matthew's account, is manifestly somewhat prolepticl. The purchase of the potter's field with the money returned by him must, in the nature of things, have been a later occurrence; which is specified now merely to make an end of the account. The allusion to the name of this field, as still current in the time of the writer, is one among other internal evidences that St. Matthew's gospel was written early, and among the Jews, or on the spot.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. pp. 217—.9.

SECTION 90.—(G. 98, .9.)—[Lesson 93.*]—PARTICULARS OF THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE PILATE, FROM THE TIME JESUS IS BROUGHT BEFORE HIM, UNTIL HE SITS DOWN ON THE JUDGMENT SEAT, AND JESUS IS OFFICIALLY ARRAIGNED. ALSO FROM THE TIME PILATE SENDS HIM TO HEROD, UNTIL HE IS DELIVERED TO BE CRUCIFIED.—Matt. xxvii. 11—26. Mark xv. 2—15. Luke xxiii. 2—25. John xviii. 28—xix. 16.†

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jno. xviii. 28. The sanhedrim having brought Jesus to deliver him up to Pilate, enter not into the judgment hall themselves, being afraid of ceremonial defilement, at the very time they are imbruing their hands in the blood of the innocent.

—— 29. Pilate, accommodating himself to their scruples, comes out to them, and asks what charge they have against 'this man?'

—— 30. They wish it to be taken for granted that the prisoner must be a malefactor from the mere fact of their delivering him up to the governor.

—— 31, .2. Upon Pilate telling them to take and judge Jesus according to their law, they reply that it is not lawful for them to inflict capital punishment. Jesus before intimated that his death would be by crucifixion—not by stoning, as among the Jews.

—— 33. Pilate returns to the judgment hall, and calling Jesus, asks whether he be 'the King of the Jews?'

—— 34. This not having been mentioned in the public communications of the Jews with Pilate, it appears that they had been privately representing his case to the governor: Jesus accordingly asks Pilate how he came to put such a question?

—— 35. Pilate asks, 'Am I a Jew?' and tells Jesus that his own nation, and the chief priests, have given him in charge: 'What hast thou done?'

Jno. xviii. 36. Jesus explains that his kingdom is not of this world, otherwise his servants would have endeavoured to defend him against the Jews.

—— 37. Pilate asks, 'Art thou a king then?' Jesus acknowledges that he is a king, but the object of his present coming into the world is to bear witness to the truth; all who are of the truth listen to his voice.

—— 38. Pilate asks, 'What is truth?' but waits not for Jesus' reply. He goes out again to the Jews, and declares to them that he finds nothing against Jesus on account of which he should be reckoned a malefactor.

—— 39. Reminding them of their custom of having a prisoner released at the passover, he asks whether he should release to them 'the King of the Jews?'

—— 40. They prefer one Barubbas, a robber!

—— xix. 1—3. Pilate scourges Jesus; and in mockery of his being King of the Jews, the soldiers put on him a crown of thorns and a purple robe, and, saluting him, strike him with their hands.

—— 4, 5. Pilate having declared that he finds no fault in Jesus, brings him forth arrayed in mock royalty, and says unto them, 'Behold the man!'

* Section xc. includes Lessons 93, .4, in the 'Graduated Simultaneous System.' Lesson 93 embraces Mt. xxvii. 11—.4; Mk. xv. 2—5; Lu. xxiii. 2—5; Jno. xviii. 28—xix. 14.

† 'Our business in this part of the Gospel Harmony is not to reduce the details of St. John to an agreement with those of the rest, as if all were the account of the same things; but to determine, if possible, the precise point of time where his narrative will terminate, and theirs will begin: in other words, after what part of St. John's account we ought to insert theirs, or before what part of theirs we ought to place St. John's.... There was a determinate period in the course of the proceedings before Pilate, after our Lord was brought to him, until which he was not examined in public, or pro tribunali; but after which he was: and that the circumstantial part of the narrative of St. John belongs entirely to the time before that point; the circumstantial part of the narrative of the rest belongs entirely to the time after it.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 222.

THE EYES OF THE LORD ARE UPON THE RIGHTEOUS, AND HIS EARS ARE OPEN UNTO THEIR CRY.—Psa. xxxiv. 15.
THE LORD IS NIGH UNTO THEM THAT ARE OF A BROKEN HEART; AND SAVETH SUCH AS BE OF A CONTRITE SPIRIT.—Psa. xxxiv. 18.

Jno. xix. 6. The chief priests, &c., cry out, 'Crucify him, crucify him.' Pilate tells them they must take the whole responsibility of such an act; for that he must pronounce Jesus altogether guiltless.

—— 7. The Jews say, that, according to their law, Jesus ought to die, because of his calling 'himself the Son of God.'

—— 8, 9. Pilate, upon hearing this, is rather afraid; and again entering into the judgment hall, asks Jesus with regard to his origin.

—— 10. Jesus gives no reply. Pilate expresses surprise, and asks if Jesus is not aware that he (the governor) can either adjudge him to the severest punishment or set him at liberty?

—— 11. Jesus answers that Pilate could have no power against him except by the Divine appointment, and intimates the fact of his possessing this power increases the guilt of the man who delivered him up to him.

—— 12. From this time Pilate seeks to release Jesus; but the Jews cry out that if he let this man go, they will charge him with disloyalty to Cæsar.

—— 13, 14. Pilate having heard such a charge insinuated against himself, brings Jesus forth from the judgment hall, and taking his seat in the place called 'the Pavement,' prepares for a formal hearing of the case, it being now the 'sixth hour.'—See NOTE, p. 445.

Mt. xxvii. 11. Jesus stands before the governor.

———— ———— Lu. xxiii. 2. They accuse Jesus of 'perverting the nation, . . . forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar,' and of representing himself as 'Christ a King.'

— xxvii. 11. Mk. xv. 2. — xxiii. 3. The governor now puts the same question in public which before he had put to Jesus in private, 'Art thou the King of the Jews?' Jesus enters not now into any explanation, but simply replies, 'Thou sayest.'

— xxvii. 12. — xv. 3. ———— The chief priests accuse Jesus, but he answers nothing.

— xxvii. 13, 14. — xv. 4, 5. ———— Pilate is greatly surprised that Jesus should remain entirely silent under such accusations from the chief priests.

———— ———— — xxiii. 4, 5. Pilate declares he can find no fault in this man; but they accuse him the more fiercely, saying that from Galilee to this place he stirreth up the people.

No. 90.—(G. 98.)—Pilate comes out to the Sanhedrim.—John* xviii. 28—32.

[For former part of ver. 28, see § 89, p. 435.]

and they-themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they-should-be-defiled; but 29 that they-might-eat the passover. Pilate then went-out unto them, and said, What 30 accusation bring-ye against this man? They answered and said unto-him, If he were 31 not a-malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee. Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 28. lest . . . defiled—see Ac. x. 28; xi. 3, &c. —comp. Pr. xxx. 12—4—Although they were clean in their own sight, their sacrifices were loathsome in the sight of the Lord, Is. lxvi. 3, 4—They were bringing upon their city the curse of Tophet, Je. xix. 12—5 —see on Mt. xxiii. 33, § 85, p. 319.

29. What accusation, &c.—They had not yet publicly made a definite charge against Jesus to Pilate; but from what is recorded, ver. 33, 4, infra, it would appear that they had been privately endeavouring to injure Jesus in the eyes of the governor, by representing him as seeking to become king of the Jews.

30. If he were not, &c.—Although the Jews had been deprived by the Romans of the power of putting to death, yet they seem to have taken it for granted, that in order to procure the execution of their sentence, they had only to deliver Jesus to Pilate. Judas seems to have taken the same view of the matter, Mt. xxvii. 3—5, § 89, p. 435.

31. Take ye him, and judge, &c.—Pilate may have been aware that they had prejudged the case, Mk. xiv. 64, § ib., although they had failed to procure witnesses for substantiating any reasonable charge before him, ver. 55—9, § ib., p. 427—He knew that it was for envy they had delivered up Jesus, xv. 10, p. 450 —and he may have been unwilling to make himself the mere instrument of their malice, which he afterwards allowed himself to become, Lu. xxiii. 23—5, p. 452, infra.

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 28. Lest they should be defiled. The prætor's hall was full of Roman soldiers; and a legal pollution was contracted by the Jews, by their being present among Gentiles, especially on occasions of peculiar purity, as was the passover.

[That they might eat the passover. This defilement produced by contact with a Gentile, they considered as equivalent to that of the contact of a dead body, &c., Le. xxii. 4—6; Nu. v. 1, 2; and as disqualifying them from taking the passover in a proper manner; which proves that the Jewish passover was not yet celebrated. Our Lord being allowed to celebrate the passover previously, was in answer to a special request which he had made for the comfort of his disciples, as we learn, Lu. xxii. 15, 'With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer.']

29. Pilate. See § 7, ADDENDA, p. 55.

Pilate then went out unto them. 'Pilate therefore went unto them;' that is, because their fear of contracting uncleanness prevented them from going into his judgment hall.

30. If he were not a malefactor. So they did not want to make Pilate the judge, but the executor of the sentence which they had already illegally passed.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xviii. 28. It is possible for men to be pure in their own eyes, and careful to avoid ceremonial defilement, whilst they are all the while perpetrating the greatest wickedness, and are abominable in the sight of God.]

[Men may be anxious to partake of religious ordinances, and yet know nothing of the truths they imply; and so be as unprofited by them as the Jews were in eating their typical passover with hands that before God were stained with the innocent blood.]

[30 ver. The highest ecclesiastical power is not to be implicitly depended upon so far as to prevent men from exercising their own judgments upon their decisions. Here the leaders of the Lord's chosen people were altogether in error, and it became the duty of even a heathen to interpose for the rescue of the Holy and the Just, from being according to their sentence put to death as one of the vilest malefactors.]

31 ver. Pilate's pride seems to have been hurt at the idea of being made merely the executioner of the

* 'When Jesus was first brought to Pilate, the Jews, we are told, for the reason specified in the text, entered not into the prætorium; and, consequently, Pilate came out to them. Hence it is evident that, as yet, neither they nor Jesus had entered the prætorium: and while our Lord was still without, the conversation ensued which is recorded ver. 29—32.'—Ibid.

JOHN xviii. 32.

32 said unto-him, It-is-not-lawful for-us to-put-any-man-to-death: that the saying of Jesus might-be-fulfilled, which he-spake, signifying what death he-should die.

Pilate converses with Jesus in private.—John* xviii. 33—.8.

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto-34 him, Art thou the King of-the Jews? Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this-thing of 35 thyself, or did-others-tell it thee of me? Pilate answered, Am I a-Jew? Thine-own 36 nation and the chief-priests have-delivered thee unto-me: what hast-thou-done? Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then-would my servants fight ἠγωνίζοντο, that I-should-not-be-delivered to-the Jews:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 31. not lawful, &c.—The sceptre was departed—In rejecting Jesus as their king, the Jews themselves had to acknowledge, ch. xix. 15, p. 448, infra, 'We have no king but Cæsar:'—a further proof that Jesus was the Shiloh, the Sent of God, Ge. xlix. 10.

32. what death, &c.—Had Jesus been put to death for the crime of which the priests had falsely accused him, Mt. xxvi. 65, § 89, p. 429, he would have been stoned, Le. xxiv. 14—6; but it was to be fulfilled of him as of the paschal lamb, 'A bone of him shall not be broken:'—comp. Ex. xii. 46; Jno. xix. 36, 7, § 93, p. 473—He was to be lifted up, iii. 14, § 12, p. 85; viii. 28, § 55, p. 103; xii. 32, .3, § 82, p. 268—The being hanged upon a tree was an accursed death, De. xxi. 22, .3—He was 'made a curse for us,' Ga. iii. 13.

33. King of the Jews—The title given to Christ by the wise men from the East, Mt. ii. 2, § 5, p. 31—It is not likely that Pilate would of himself have interpreted the title 'Christ' by that of 'King of the Jews,' unless he had been prompted by the haters of our Lord, as Jno. xix. 12, p. 444, infra.

34. did others tell, &c.—This was a searching question, if the enemies of Jesus had been attempting to prejudice the mind of Pilate against him in a secret manner, in order to prepare him for carrying their sentence into execution, without the case coming before him in open trial—Ps. lxiv. 4, 5, 'That they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not. They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them?'

36. not of this world, &c.—In opposition to the principles which too often regulate the governments of this world, the law of his kingdom is love, Ja. ii. 8—His kingdom is, Rom. xiv. 17, 'righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.'—It is not of this world, but of God the Father, who, Col. i. 12, .3, 'hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light: who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son:'—Paul, having exhorted Timothy against worldliness, and unto heavenly mindedness, 1 Ti. vi. 3—12, saith, ver. 13, 'I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession;' &c.

not be delivered to the Jews—intimating that he regarded the Jews not as his faithful subjects, but his bitterest enemies—comp. Lu. xix. 12, .4, 27, § 80, pp. 248, .50.

NOTES.

Jno. xviii. 31. It is not lawful. It is supposed that the power of life and death was taken from the Jews when, on the banishment of Archelaus, Judæa was reduced to a Roman province, and a Roman governor was placed over its inhabitants, under the title of procurator, subordinate to the governor of Syria. Thus our Lord foretold they would condemn him, and deliver him to the Gentiles. They could adjudge a man guilty; the Roman governor alone could inflict capital punishment.

[34. Sayest thou, &c. 'Ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, "proprio motu;" meaning, "from thy own knowledge or suspicion of my having been concerned in seditious practices, or from the suggestion of others," as was really the case. —See Lu. xxiii. 2, p. 445.'—Bloomf.]

[35. Am I a Jew? μήτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖος, &c. 'The full sense is well expressed by Kuinoel in the following paraphrase: "No; I have not asked thee of my own thought: I have found nothing hitherto in thee which would afford any colour to such a charge as thine enemies advance; but it does not hence follow that thou art innocent. Of thee and thy case I know nothing. I am not a Jew, to know or care about such things. It is on the representations of thy countrymen and the chief priests that I examine thee. What hast thou done to afford ground for this accusation?"'—Bloomf.]

[36. My kingdom, &c. He here substantially admits that he did claim to be a king, but not in the sense in which the Jews understood it. Jesus says that his sentence pronounced by Jewish judges, and he may have been desirous of making them feel their weakness—and his own importance: but the issue proved that pride is but a poor substitute for probity.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Their own confession, that the sceptre had departed from Judah, and a lawgiver from between his feet, so that they had no longer the power of carrying their own sentence into effect, ought to have led the Jewish priests to question the truth of their sentence, seeing that it had been predicted such would not take place until Messiah should come. Let us beware lest prophecy be fulfilled in our case also, without our being profited thereby.]

Jno. xviii. 32. Our Passover was to be slain, as had been foreshadowed and foretold; his hands and feet were to be pierced—but a bone of him was not to be broken; and so he must die, not by Jewish stoning, but by Roman crucifixion. How truthful is the word of prophecy! How truthful our Redeemer in fulfilling that word!

[33, .4 ver. Let none endeavour to prejudice the mind of a judge by secret ex-parte representations. The Jewish priests appear to have been endeavouring to prepare the mind of Pilate for their purpose by insinuating that Jesus pretended to be King of the Jews. Hence Pilate's question, and our Saviour's answer.]

[35 ver. Pilate seems to smart under the mild rebuke of Jesus: he is not a Jew that he should deal in such treacherous practices—although, indeed, he might reasonably be expected to listen to the report of those holding the highest and most sacred offices belonging to the nation.]

36 ver. The Jews had doubtless reported Jesus to Pilate as aspiring to be their King. Jesus condescends to explain to the Roman governor his actual position as the Christ—contradistinguished from a king of the Jews according to the conception of a Roman.

[The kingdom of Christ is not to be advanced by maxims of worldly policy. Men are not to look to the power of the sword, as to that which is to give it an establishment in the world.]

Although Christ's kingdom was not to be then fully developed, yet we know that it will at length cover the whole earth: for this let us labour and pray, for then all nations will be blessed in Him and call Him Blessed.

* 'After this Pilate returned into the prætorium, and called Jesus in to him; leaving the Jews his accusers, for the same reason as before, still without: and while he and Jesus were within by themselves; consequently while they were alone and in private, the conversation takes place between them, ver. 33—.8, far as οὐ νῦν βασιλεία.'—Ibid.

REJOICE IN THE LORD, O YE RIGHTEOUS: FOR PRAISE IS COMELY FOR THE UPRIGHT.—Psa. xxxiii. 1.
MY SOUL SHALL BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD: IT SHALL REJOICE IN HIS SALVATION.—Psa. xxxv. 9.

JOHN xviii. 37, .8.

37 but now is my kingdom not from-hence ἐντεῦθεν. Pilate therefore said unto-him, Art thou a-king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a-king. To this end was-I-born, and for this cause came-I into the world, that I-should-bear-witness unto-the truth.
38 Every-one that is of the truth heareth my voice. Pilate saith unto-him, What is truth?

Pilate's first intercession for Jesus' release.—John* xviii. 38—40.

And when-he-had-said this, he-went-out again unto the Jews, and saith unto-them, I 39 find in him no-'fault'-at-all. But ye have a-custom, that I-should-release unto-you one

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 36. but now, &c.—Now was the Son of David to be received up, to sit upon the right hand of his Father in heaven, until his enemies should be made his footstool, Ps. cx. 1—comp. Mt. xxii. 44, § 85, p. 307; Ac. ii. 34, .5. Although Christ's kingdom is not of this world, yet hath he a right to reign over the kingdoms of this world—see on ver. 37.—The right of Christ to the kingdoms of this world will yet be vindicated, Da. ii. 44; vii. 14; Re. v. 9, 10; xi. 15—.8; xix. 16; xx. 4.

37. Art thou a king then?—The answer of Jesus, ver. 36, had been clearly a denial that he regarded the Jews as constituting his kingdom, but rather as being enemies; yet still he spoke of a kingdom being his, but in a sense which probably Pilate did not understand, and therefore the present inquiry.

I am a king—ch. v. 22, .7, § 23, pp. 177, ..8, 'The Father . . . . hath committed all judgment unto the Son: . . . . and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.'

To this end was I born—Is. ix. 6, 'For unto us a child is born,' &c.—Confirmation, Lu. ii. 11, § 4, p. 21, 'Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.'

came I into the world—He came down from heaven to do the will of the Father, ch. vi. 38, § 43, p. 329; xiv. 31, § 87, p. 386—Rom. viii. 3, 4, 'For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.'

bear witness unto the truth—Jesus is 'the true Light,' ch. i. 9, § 7, p. 47—The truth of what had been typified by the law, ver. 17, § ib., p. 48, 'For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.'—Rev. i. 5, 'The faithful witness,'—iii. 14, 'The Amen, the faithful and true witness,'—xix. 11, 'Faithful and True,' of the truth, &c.—ch. viii. 47, § 55, p. 106, 'He that is of God heareth God's words:'—Every one who in truth believes in Christ as having fulfilled the law, and brought in everlasting righteousness, is brought to obey the kingdom's law, which is love—x. 27, § 55, p. 121, 'My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:'—1 Jno. iii. 18, .9, 'Let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth,' &c.—Let us obey the decree, Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55, 'Hear ye him.'—1 Pe. i. 22, 'Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:'—He. xii. 25—.8, 'See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven: 26, whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. 27, And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. 28, Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear:'

38. What is truth?—Jesus had already answered the question to those who patiently waited for his word, ch. xiv. 6, § 87, p. 381, 'I am the way, the truth, and the life:'

no fault—comp. ch. xix. 4, 6, p. 443; Mt. xxvii. 4, § 89, p. 435; Lu. xxiii. 4, p. 446.

NOTES.

'kingdom is not of this world.' Not that the kingdoms of this world are not at any time to become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, but now is my kingdom not from hence. It is to be in the 'world to come,' whereof so much is said both in the prophets and by the apostles, when the saints have been prepared to share the kingdom with him, under the whole heaven; for this they must both be renewed in spirit, and be given glorified bodies, for 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.']

[Jno. xviii. 37. Thou sayest, &c. 'That is, "thou truly sayest that I am a king; it is very true: I am a king." Σὺ λέγεις signifies it is so;' a phrase of modest assent and affirmation. Our Lord now proceeds to shew the nature of his kingdom, and in what sense he is a king.'—Bloomf.]

That I should bear witness unto the truth. By his word, and in his death and resurrection, prove his power over the grave, and the certainty of the resurrection of his saints, to whom shall be given the dominion under the whole heaven in his kingdom of glory.

[38. What is truth? It should rather seem that by this question, 'What is truth?' he meant to say (with a reference to the endless disputations of philosophers on the subject), 'Ay, but what is truth? Define it; that is the great point.' That Pilate was indifferent about the answer which our Lord might give to this question, may be inferred from his going out immediately afterwards, and not waiting to hear what our Lord would say. And it may be observed, that by thus neglecting to listen to the truth, Pilate passed sentence upon himself according to the judgment just delivered, ver. 37, last clause.]

39, 40. But ye have a custom. See on Mt. xxvii. 15—.7, p. 449.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xviii. 37. He who came to 'bear witness unto the truth,' and who sealed the testimony with his blood, will assuredly come in the glory of his kingdom, and realize all that has been promised by God. —See margin.

[The falsity of those who, like the Jewish priests, occupy a prominent place in the religious world, is apt to give encouragement in others to a sceptical disregard of everything sacred: those who, like Pilate, are careless about the restraints of conscience, are prone to seize upon such opportunities of sneering at all pretensions to truth.]—Ver. 38, .9, see margin, p. 443.

* 'Pilate, without waiting for the answer to his question, issued a second time from the pretorium; by himself, and leaving Jesus alone within; to speak to his accusers without: and the conversation recorded ver. 38, from καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν, to the end of the chapter, now took place. In this was included the first express declaration of his conviction of the innocence of Jesus, and the first express proposal, in deference to the privilege of the feast, that he should be released, followed by the first express demand for the liberation of Barabbas in his stead. All this time, it must be evident that Jesus himself was still in the pretorium, apart from Pilate, from his accusers, and from the multitude, who were all without.'—Ibid.

EVERY ONE WHO TRUSTS IN THE ONE ATONEMENT AND ALL-POWERFUL INTERCESSION OF CHRIST, WILL ALSO HEAR HIM AS HIS PROPHET, AND OBEY HIM AS HIS KING.

JOHN xviii. 40.

40 at the passover: will-ye therefore that-I-release unto-you the King of-the Jews? Then cried-they all again, saying, Not this-man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a-robber.

Jesus is scourged.—John* xix. 1—3.

1 Then Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him. 2 And the soldiers platted a-3 crown of thorns, and-put-it-on his head, and they-put-on him a-purple robe, and said, Hail, King of-the Jews! and they-smote him with-their-hands ἐδίδουν ῥαπίσματα.

Pilate's second intercession, and Jesus presented to the people.†—John xix. 4—8.

4 Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto-them, Behold, I-bring him forth to-
5 you, that ye-may-know that I-find no fault in him. Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of-thorns, and the purple robe And Pilate saith unto-them, Behold the 6 man! When the chief-priests therefore and officers saw him, they-cried-out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto-them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for 7 I find no fault in him. The Jews answered him, We have a-law, and by our law he-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xviii. 39. the King of the Jews—Notwithstanding the implied denial of Jesus, ver. 36, Pilate, perhaps in ridicule of the Jews, whom he seems to have heartily despised, calls Jesus their king—The title as thus given meant a king despised and rejected—This may be one of the reasons that Jesus afterwards submits to be so called by Pilate, Mt. xxvii. 11, p. 445, infra, p. 446.

40. a robber—Is. l. 23, 'Thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves:' &c.

Ch. xix. 1. scourged—Ps. cxxix. 3, 'The plowers plowed upon my back: they made long their furrows.'—Is. liii. 5, 'The chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.'—This scourging foretold by Jesus, Mt. xx. 19, § 77, p. 235—The apostles were so used, Ac. xvi. 22, 3—Paul, as being a Roman citizen, claimed exemption from this punishment, xxii. 24, 5; yet, of the Jews, he 'five times received . . forty stripes save one,' 2 Co. xi. 24.

7. We have a law, &c.—Jesus was accused of blasphemy, the punishment for which crime under the law was stoning, Le. xxiv. 16—Death was appointed for those who falsely pretended to a Divine mission, De. xviii. 20.

NOTES.

'Scarlet robe.'—And see on Lu. xxiii. 11, p. 448, 'A gorgeous robe.'

4. That ye may know. By this my declaration in his and your presence.

6. Take ye him, and crucify him. 'These words are not to be taken as an actual permission to the Jews to crucify Jesus, which Pilate did not give till afterwards—see ver. 16, p. 453; but only as a strong mode of expressing Pilate's sense of the injustice of their clamour for his death; as though he had said, Ye may take and crucify him if ye please; I will be no party to such a proceeding, "for I find no fault in him."—See Lu. xxiii. 4, p. 446.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xviii. 40. Let us not, like the Jewish priesthood, give our suffrages in favour of evil-doers to the rejection of those who are as Christ was in the world: but this we do, if we bestow upon convicted criminals that kindness which we deny to our innocent poor. He who pleads for the release of the murderer, does in effect deliver up the innocent to death.]

[xix. 1—3. Pilate has now fully committed himself to an unrighteous course—whether to shew his despite of the Jews, by making a mockery of their King—whether in defiance of this popular tumult in his behalf of which the chief priests seem to have been at first afraid—or whether to prove to them that their accusations were altogether groundless, and that therefore Jesus ought to be released—the course he entered upon is altogether unjust, and one from which he will not be able to extricate himself. The proud oppressor will in this instance make himself a most ignoble slave, the executioner of a most unrighteous sentence, at the mere will of a people he despises. Unlike Pilate, let us seriously inquire, WHAT IS TRUTH? and abide therein.]

The governor having made a mockery of the kingship of Christ, and shewn a disregard of common justice by punishing an innocent person, it is no wonder that those under him were encouraged to indulge their vulgar and cruel sport in derision of the 'Man of sorrows.'

4—6 ver. 'BEHOLD THE MAN!' This is indeed He! the 'Man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief'—the despised and rejected of men. Will the Jewish priesthood see in him 'the end of the Law for righteousness'—the long-promised Saviour bearing our griefs? Ah, no! They know him not—they are the first to cry out 'Crucify him, crucify him.' How true it is that the very truth of prophecy may be before the eyes of those who have the best opportunity of knowing it, and yet they remain altogether blind to its fulfilment!

6 ver. Pilate proceeds in his evil course. It is true he knows that if the Jews were to put Jesus to death, they would exceed the limits allowed them by their masters the Romans—but why does he propose to stand by, and allow them to shed innocent blood if they dare? Should he not rather at once rid the righteous out of the hand of the wicked?

* 'His proposal, for the relief of Jesus, having been thus received, Pilate, ... again left the people outside, and returned into the prætorium a second time; where Jesus was: and, apparently with the hope of mitigating the people by the infliction of some chastisement upon him, caused him, for the first time to be scourged by the soldiers of his guard, and arrayed out of mockery in purple.'—Ibid., p. 223.

† 'After this, we are told expressly, ch. xix. 4, that he came out again, whence it is clear that meanwhile he must have gone in; which will be the third time of his coming forth. But he came out alone; for he informed the people that he was going to bring out Jesus unto them; that so they might be convinced, from the manner in which he had decorated him, that he found no fault in him; he considered the charge of affected royalty as nothing serious or dangerous. Accordingly, Jesus did come forth, for the first time since his entering in, wearing the purple robe and the crown of thorns with which the soldiers had invested him. These particulars are all recorded, ver. 1—5.

'While Jesus was still in public, exposed, and in such a dress, to the gaze of the people, the conversation ensued which is related ver. 6—8, including a second attempt of Pilate to procure his liberation.'—Ibid.

IT IS A DANGEROUS THING FOR A JUDGE TO TRIFLE WITH JUSTICE, TO TRUCKLE TO EXPEDIENCY, AND PRETEND TO GIVE AS A BOON THAT WHICH IS DEMANDED BY SIMPLE JUSTICE.

JOHN xix. 8.

8 ought to-die, because he-made himself the-Son of God. When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he-was-the-more-afraid;

Pilate goes in again.—John* xix. 9—11.

9 and went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But 10 Jesus gave him no answer. Then saith Pilate unto-him, Speakest-thou not unto-me? knowest-thou not that I-have power to-crucify thee, and have power to-release thee?
11 Jesus answered, Thou-couldest-have no power at-all against me, except it-were given thee from-above: therefore he that-delivered me unto-thee hath the-greater sin.

Pilate intercedes a third time for Jesus' release.†—John xix. 12.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to-release him: but the Jews cried-out, saying, If thou-let-this-man-go, thou-art not Cæsar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a-king speaketh-against Cæsar.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 7. Son of God—see the adjuration of the high priest, Mt. xxvi. 63, § 89, p. 428—Now they bring the accusation in a form different from that in which it was at first presented to Pilate, Jno. xviii. 33, p. 441, supra, and with which accusation he had made himself merry, ver. 39, 40; xix. 1—5, pp. 442, ..3, supra.

8. the more afraid—The word here translated 'more' should be 'rather,' as in Mt. xxv. 9, § 86, p. 347; He. xii. 13—It does not appear that Pilate had before this manifested any appearance of fear, but rather disregard of either truth, justice, or mercy.

11. except it were given thee, &c.—It was according to the purpose, the determinate counsel of God, Ac. ii. 23, as pre-figured by the sacrifices under the law, and last of all expressed through Caiaphas the high priest, Jno. xi. 49—52, § 58, p. 132.

from above—comp. ch. iii. 31, § 13, p. 90; Ja. i. 17, 'Every good,' &c.

12. If thou let this man go, &c. The Jews, finding that Pilate would not condemn Jesus for a crime committed against the law of Moses—see ver. 7—here return to the charge which they had brought against him of assuming the title of King.—See ch. xviii. 33—7, p. 441; and on Mt. xxvii. 11, p. 445.

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 7. He ought to die. That is, he has sinned, and ought to pay the penalty of death.—See on Mt. xxvi. 65, .6, § 89, p. 429.

He made himself the Son of God. This was the testimony of those who sought his death. By this they meant he made himself the Messiah, and claimed equality with God, which they accounted blasphemy.

[9. Whence art thou? πόθεν εἶ σύ. 'This cannot mean, as some commentators imagine, "Of what country art thou?" for Pilate knew him to be a Galilæan; but, as others interpret, "What is thy origin, descent, and parentage?" So 2 Sa. i. 13, πόθεν εἶ σύ; Jos. ix. 8, πόθεν ἦτε; for Pilate now knew that Jesus claimed to be of celestial origin, Υἱὸς Θεοῦ.'—Bloomf.]

11. From above. 'This penetrating insight into his thoughts, and candid judgment of his conduct, seems to have much affected Pilate for the moment, and hence (ἐκ τούτου) he made another effort to save Jesus.'—Ibid.

12. If thou let this man go, &c. 'The Jews, however, perceiving that Pilate was studying every method of releasing Jesus, and that he paid little attention to their second charge of blasphemy—as not falling under his cognizance—now return to their first alleged crime, which especially belonged to the procurator, namely, that of sedition, and treason against Cæsar.'—Ibid.

Not Cæsar's friend. This was a powerful appeal to Pilate; for Tiberius Cæsar, the Roman emperor, was jealous of any opposition to his government, and punished with death all political crimes.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xix. 7. Let us beware lest when we think we are doing God service we are persecuting those who fulfil his commandments, and in our own wilful ignorance of his word are opposing his truth.

9 ver. Jesus makes no endeavour to obtain from Pilate his release upon the ground of his being the 'SON OF GOD.' He occupies the place of the poor and needy—and will take his portion with the oppressed; and if justice is not accorded to him on the ground of innocence, he will claim it on no other.

10 ver. The judge here speaks to his own condemnation. If he has the power of which he boasts, why does he not release the prisoner in whom he declares he can find no fault at all?—See margin.

[In rejecting Jesus the Jews denied the truth of their own prophecies.—See on ch. xviii. 31, supra. They shut their eyes against the clearest evidence presented them in the very act in which they were engaged. This should have arrested them in their race to perdition—but it did not; they aggravated their guilt, they had the greater sin by refusing to attend to the signs of their time.]

Let us be warned, and whilst we take our guidance from the plain precepts of scripture—let us also seek to profit by the word of prophecy.

[12 ver. The Jews have weakened rather than strengthened their cause, by bringing forward their second charge; and now they revert to the first—and artfully attempt to turn the fear of the governor into another channel. The charge of disloyalty to the civil government ought not to be too readily listened to, especially when brought by a corrupted priesthood against those who have exposed their corruptions.]

* 'After this, however, it is evident that Pilate entered the prætorium for the third time, and either took Jesus back with him, or caused him to be summoned to his presence thither a second time, in order that the conversation between them, ver. 9—11, may take place as before, within the prætorium, and apart from the people.'—Ibid., p. 224.

† 'When this was over, it is also manifest that Pilate must have come out again by himself, for the fourth time, leaving Jesus, as before, alone and within; or that third intercession with the people, which is recorded at ver. 12, could not have taken place without.'—Ibid.

'Hitherto there is no proof of any formal examination of our Lord at all, or of none which had been transacted in public: whatever had passed, which might be construed into an examination, had passed between himself and Pilate, within the prætorium, apart from and unobserved by the people. Twice only, in the course of proceedings, as far as they had yet extended, had Jesus been visible without; once, when he was first brought to the governor (xviii. 29, p. 440), and again, when he was produced to the people, arrayed in the mockery of a kingly dress (xix. 5, p. 443). But he had been speedily removed within; and at this very time it must be evident that he was still within.'—Ibid.

'In consequence, however, of that last declaration of the people, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend—every one who maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar; which implied a resolution, POWER, AS BRINGING WITH IT CORRESPONDENT RESPONSIBILITY, IS MORE PROPERLY A CAUSE OF HUMILITY THAN OF PRIDE.

IF ANY OF YOU LACK WISDOM, LET HIM ASK OF GOD, THAT GIVETH TO ALL MEN LIBERALLY, AND UPBRAIDETH NOT;—Jas. i. 5.

Pilate sits down on the judgment seat.—John xix. 13, 14

13 When-·Pilate therefore·heard that saying, he·brought Jesus forth, and sat-down in the judgment-seat in a-place that-is-called the-Pavement, but in-the-Hebrew, Gabbatha.
14 And it-was the-preparation of-the passover, and about the-sixth hour· (see p. 448).

(G. 99.)—PARTICULARS OF THE PROCEEDINGS AT THE TRIAL OF JESUS, FROM THE TIME PILATE SAT DOWN ON THE JUDGMENT SEAT, UNTIL JESUS IS DELIVERED TO BE CRUCIFIED.

Christ before Pilate, officially arraigned.

MATT. xxvii. 11—4. (Ver. 10, ‖ lxxxix. p. 437.)	MARK xv. 2—5. (Ver. 1, ‖ ib., p. 435.)	LUKE xxiii. 2, 3 (Ver. 1, ib.)	JOHN.
11 "And Jesus stood before the governor: [b]
	[b] And they-began to-accuse him, say-ing, We-found this fellow perverting διαστρέφοντα the nation, and forbid-ding to-give tribute to-Cæsar, saying that-he-himself is Christ a-King.
and 2	And Pilate	And Pilate [c]	3

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 2. perverting the nation—Ahab to Elijah, 1 Ki. xviii. 17, 'Art thou he that troubleth Israel?'—so Jeremiah was accused, xxxviii. 4; and Amos, vii. 10; and afterwards the apostles, Ac. xvi. 20, .1; xvii. 6—8; xxiv. 5.

forbidding, &c.—Ps. xxxv. 11, 'They laid to my charge things that I knew not.'—See his answer to the Herodians, when the Pharisees sought to entangle him in his talk, Mt. xxii. 17—21, § 84, p. 296—comp. the apostles' doctrine on paying tribute, &c., Rom. xiii. 6, 7; 1 Pe. ii. 13—.7.

Christ a King—They seem now to have been ashamed to speak of Jesus as even pretending to be King of the Jews, and revert to that which to Pilate would be a very indefinite charge, and against which there was no law whereby Pilate could justly con-

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 13. Sat down. ἐκάθισεν. A forensic term, signifying, sat for judgment.

In the judgment seat. An elevated seat or throne erected in the open air, in a place called 'the Pavement,' adjoining to the judgment hall in which Pilate had examined Jesus.

['Ἀπὸ λιθόστρωτον, Pavement, supply ἔδαφος, which is expressed in 2 Chr. vii. 3. This was a pavement formed of pieces of marble or stone of various colours; such as were called vermiculata, and tessellata. A sort of luxury which had arisen in the time of Sylla, and had extended even to the most remote provinces. Julius Cæsar (as we learn from Sueton., Vit. 46) carried about with him in his expeditions such pieces of sawn marble and variegated stone with which to adorn his prætorium, on which the βῆμα was placed. The fashion seems to have been brought from the East at the Roman conquests in Asia. It had probably long been in use there. So Aristeas, ap. Euseb. Præp. Evang. p. 453, says of the temple at Jerusalem, τὸ δὲ πᾶν ἔδαφος λιθόστρωτον καθέστηκε.'—Bloomf.]

A place . . . . called the Pavement, ... Gabbatha. 'The word "Gabbatha" means "a raised place."' Thus it appears that the Jews named the place upon which the judgment seat stood, from the elevation of the ground; the Romans, from the pavement with which it was adorned.'—Alford.

14. It was the preparation of the passover. For this reason both the Jews and Pilate were desirous to bring the matter to a conclusion. Every Friday was called the preparation (namely, for the sabbath). And as often as the passover fell on a Friday, that day was called the preparation of the passover.

About the sixth hour.—See foot-note.

[Lu. xxiii. 2. Perverting the nation. 'This charge was intended to represent the result of their previous judgment, ἐφέρσαν (we found); whereas in fact no such matter had been before them: but they falsely allege it before Pilate, knowing that it was the point on which his judgment was likely to be most severe. The words themselves which they use are not so false as the spirit and impression which they convey. The πολλοστὸν σ. θ. διά was, however, false entirely, and is just one of those instances where those who are determined to effect their purpose by falsehood do so, in spite of the fact having been precisely the contrary to that which they assert.'—Alford.]

Christ a King. See ch. xix. 38, § 82, p. 263; Jno. i. 49, § 10, p. 73.—And see on Lu. i. 32, § 2, p. 10.

did he refuse any longer to comply with their wish, to accuse him to Tiberius, or at least was to put the question upon a new footing, directly affecting his duty as the lieutenant of Cæsar; he brought out Jesus we are told, (which clearly demonstrates that before he was within,) and consequently for the third time of his appearing in public—and sat down himself ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον λιθόστρωτον, ver. 13.

'Now what Pilate was thus doing, it is manifest he was doing in public: and what he was thus doing in public now, it is also manifest he could not have done in public before. But from the very terms of the account itself, from the mention of the βῆμα, as the seat on which he proceeded to sit, and from the name given to the place where that βῆμα was fixed λιθόστρωτον, it must be evident that he was preparing to try our Saviour in a new capacity; he was sitting down pro tribunali, in his judicial or official character; in the ordinary place, and on the ordinary seat, where, as the deputy of Cæsar, as the civil magistrate, as the administrator of justice and the arbiter of life and death, he was accustomed to hear, and to decide upon, all causes brought before his cognizance.' . . . .—Ibid., p. 225.

'We have, then, the clearest evidence that, at this moment, Pilate was preparing to do something which he had not done yet; viz., to judge our Lord in good earnest, sitting officially and pro tribunali: which being the case, whatever had preceded this point of time, that is, the whole of the previous account, was either extra-judicial, either no examination at all, or an examination entirely preliminary and private. This point of time the narrative specifies in a manner which might be strictly applicable; for we have seen that our Lord would first be brought before Pilate about τρισὶν, that is, soon after five in the morning; and if we assign the space of time to the intermediate events, we assign what is abundantly sufficient for them, down to the time of this sitting pro tribunali; which would consequently be soon after six. And the evangelist so defines it accordingly—Ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα ὥρα ὡς ἕκτη, ver. 14. There is no authority for changing this reading into τρίτη.'—Ibid., pp. 228, .9.

'This point, then, being presumptively established, we may arrange the order of events from that time forward, in conformity to it, as follows:

'1. Pilate being seated pro tribunali, and Jesus officially arraigned before him, the accusation of the chief priests and of the rest of the sanhedrim, as recorded by St. Luke: the nature of which was such as evidently to concern the jurisdiction of the lieutenant of Cæsar.

RENDER THEREFORE TO ALL THEIR DUES: TRIBUTE TO WHOM TRIBUTE IS DUE; CUSTOM TO WHOM CUSTOM; FEAR TO WHOM FEAR; HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR.—Rom. xiii. 7.

MATT. xxvii. 12—4.	MARK xv. 3—5	LUKE xxiii. 3.	JOHN.
[c] the governor * asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest. [d]	asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it.	asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it
	3 [d] And the chief-priests † accused him of many things. *
12 [e] And when he was accused of the chief-priests and elders, he answered nothing. [f]	but he answered nothing.
13 Then said Pilate unto him,	4 [f] And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? [g] behold
[g] Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?	how many things they witness against thee.
14 And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.	5 But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled.

[For Matt. xxvii. 15; Mark xv. 6, see p. 449.]

Pilate intercedes a fourth time for the release of Jesus. ‡—Luke xxiii. 4, 5.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief-priests and to the people, I find no fault in this man.
5 And they were the more fierce ἐνίσχυον, saying, He stirreth up ἀνασείει the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

demn, which is acknowledged, Lu. xxiii. 4, infra—Jesus was indeed 'the Christ,' Mt. xvi. 16, § 50, p. 37—But this he was not forward to say of himself, ver. 20, p. 39—It was revealed of the Father, ver. 17, § ib., p. 37; xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55—When the people would have taken him by force to make him a king, he avoided their importunity, Jno. vi. 15, § 41, p. 318—Upon his last approach to Jerusalem he had been saluted as 'the King that cometh in the name of the Lord,' Lu. xix. 38, § 82, p. 263.

Mt. xxvii. 11. Art thou, &c.—Pilate reverts to the more palpable charge which Jesus had in effect denied, Jno. xviii. 36, p. 441, supra.

Thou sayest—He who thus allowed himself to be despised as being called the King of the Jews, is the King of Nations, Je. x. 7—Rev. xix. 16, 'KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.'—Unto whom, Ph. ii. 10, 11, 'every knee should bow, ... every tongue . . confess'—as anticipated in the blessing of Judah, Ge. xlix. 8—Judah means 'praise,' or 'confession'—and of a people believingly confessing his truth, and worshipping God in spirit and in truth, Jesus is Christ, the King—In this sense the term Jew may be given to the faithful subjects of our blessed and only Potentate—Rom. ii. 29, 'He is a Jew, ... whose praise is not of men, but of God.'—Rev. ii. 9; iii. 9.

12. answered nothing—He had already made answer, according to truth, to the high priest, ch. xxvi. 64, .5, § 89, p. 429; and to Pilate, Jno. xviii. 34—7, p. 441, supra—He was now in the place of the poor and needy, giving the Jews an opportunity of fulfilling the terms required, Ps. lxxxii. 3, 'Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy.' —See also Is. i. 17—20—On account of their disobedience, the pleasant land was laid desolate, Zec. vii. 8—14.

Lu. xxiii. 5. from Galilee—see on Mt. ix. 35, § 33, p. 293—comp. xiii. 1, § 64, p. 173.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 12. When he was accused . . . he answered nothing. To the direct question of Pilate whether he were a king, Jesus answered in the affirmative, as he had before answered the high priest's question, whether he were 'the Christ, the Son of God,' ch. xxvi. 63, .4, § 89, p. 428. But as he had returned no answer to the false accusations brought against him before the high priest, ver. 62, .3, ib., so now he returned none to those brought against him before Pilate.

Lu. xxiii. 4. I find no fault in this man. Comp. ver. 14, .5, 22, pp. 449, .52. I do not find that he either asserts or attempts anything injurious to Cæsar.

5. Jewry. Judæa. The original word is the same with that which is translated 'Judæa' throughout the New Testament except here and in Jno. vii. 1.

Beginning from Galilee. It was in Galilee the first opposition to the payment of tribute to the Romans was raised by Judas.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxiii. 3. Those who had the name, and who abounded in the form of Judaism, did not in truth praise the Lord, they did not 'confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father,' Phil. ii 11. O that we may be lovingly obedient to our King—confessors of the truth, who 'worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus,' &c., iii. 3.]

[Mt. xxvii. 12. Let us make no endeavour to obtain our object by clamour. God's witnesses, after having stated the truth, may in answer to the manifestly false accusations of their enemies, remain like their Lord in silence, 'who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that,' &c., 1 Pe. ii. 23.]

* † II. The question of Pilate addressed to Jesus, antecedently by it; Art thou the King of the Jews? that good confession, witnessed before Pilate, referred to, 1 Ti. vi. 13), founded upon the previous accusation, and explained with the answer of Jesus in the affirmative (which is recorded alike by all the three.

† ‡ III. The continuance, in the next place, of what may be considered the reiterated accusations of the Scribes and Pharisees, as attested by St. Matthew and St. Mark and the silence of Jesus against them all—a silence which excited the surprise of Pilate, and produced the repetition of his questioning him.

‡ IV. The address of Pilate to the leading men and to the multitude present, according to St. Luke—declaring his conviction of the innocence of Jesus, as founded upon the preceding examination; which, if it

SIN IS LIKE A RIVER WHICH BEGINS IN A QUIET SPRING, BUT ENDS IN A TUMULTUOUS SEA.
HARDEN NOT YOUR HEARTS, AS IN THE PROVOCATION, IN THE DAY OF TEMPTATION IN THE WILDERNESS.—Heb. iii. 8.

[Lesson 94.] — PARTICULARS AT THE TRIAL OF JESUS, FROM THE TIME WHEN PILATE SENDS HIM TO HEROD, UNTIL HE IS DELIVERED TO BE CRUCIFIED.—Matt. xxvii. 15—26. Mark xv. 6—15. Luke xxiii. 6—25. John xix. 14—.6.

ANALYSIS.

Lu. xxiii. 6, 7. Pilate, on being told that Jesus is a Galilæan, sends him to Herod, Galilee being under the jurisdiction of the latter, who is also at this time in Jerusalem.

—— 8, 9. Herod is glad to see Jesus, expecting that he will display his miraculous power before him; he makes many efforts to draw him into conversation, but Jesus answers him nothing.

—— 10. The chief priests and scribes vehemently accuse him to Herod.

—— 11. Herod, with his men of war, affect to despise Jesus; in mockery they array him in a robe such as eastern monarchs are accustomed to wear, and return him again to Pilate.

—— 12. Pilate and Herod having thus complimented each other, are reconciled.

Jno. xix. 14, .5. Pilate presents Jesus to the Jews, saying, 'Behold your King!' They cry, 'Away with him, ... crucify him.' Pilate asks whether he shall crucify their King? The priests reply that they 'have no king but Cæsar.'

Lu. xxiii. 13—.6. Pilate expostulates with the chief priests, rulers, and people, saying, that after examination before them, he can find no fault in the man they have accused of perverting the nation, &c. Neither has Herod found anything worthy of death in him. Pilate, in conclusion, proposes to chastise Jesus and let him go.

Mt. xxvii. 15—.8. Mk. xv. 6. Lu. xxiii. 17. At the passover, Pilate is accustomed to release to them a prisoner, whomsoever they will; he asks whether they will have 'Barabbas (a rebel and murderer), or Jesus which is called Christ?' Pilate thus appeals to the people, knowing that through envy Jesus has been delivered up to him by the chief priests.

Mt. xxvii. 19. Mk. xv. — Lu. xxiii. — Whilst on the judgment seat, Pilate receives a message from his wife, begging him to do nothing against this just person, she having suffered much in a dream because of him.

— xxvii. 20. ——— ——— The chief priests and elders persuade the people to ask Barabbas rather than Jesus.

——— ——— — xxiii. 18, .9. They all at once cry out in rejection of Jesus, and for the release of Barabbas.

— xxvii. 21, .2. — xv. 12, .3. — xxiii. 20, .1. The governor, willing to release Jesus, puts the question again to them; and when they again prefer Barabbas, he asks what they would have done with Jesus? They all, true to the promptings of the priests, cry out, 'Crucify him.'

— xxvii. 23. — xv. 14. — xxiii. 22, .3. Pilate, asks them what evidence they have to justify such a sentence? The poor priest-led people have nothing to produce in the way of argument, but they cry out the more vociferously, 'Crucify him.'

— xxvii. 24. ——— ——— Pilate, feeling that he cannot prevail, makes a shew of being in a manner coerced. He takes water, and washes his hands before the people, declaring himself clear of the blood of this just person:'

— xxvii. 25. ——— ——— The whole people take upon themselves and their posterity the guilt of shedding the blood of Jesus.

——— ——— — xxiii. 23. The voices of the people and of their priests prevail.

— xxvii. 26. — xv. 15. — xxiii. 24, .5. Jn. xix. 16. Pilate, willing to content the people, releases Barabbas; and having scourged Jesus, delivers him up according to their desire to be crucified.

No. 90, continued. Jesus is sent to Herod.—Luke xxiii. 6, 7.*

6 When-'Pilate'-heard-of Galilee, he-asked whether the man were a-Galilæan. 7 And as-soon-as-he-knew that he-belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who-himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

Jesus before Herod; is sent back to Pilate.—Ver. xxiii. 8—12.

8 And when-'Herod'-saw Jesus, he-was-'exceeding'-glad: for he-was desirous to-see him of a-long season, because he-had-heard many-things of him; and he-hoped to-have-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 6. When Pilate heard, &c.—The effect of the last accusation appears to have been different from what the Jews expected, ver. 7—It occasioned the innocence of Jesus to be more fully acknowledged, ver. 15, p. 419, infra.

7. Herod—ch. iii. 1, § 7, p. 49, 'Tetrarch of Galilee,' —Had been reproved by John, ver. 19, p. 55—Had laid hold on John, and beheaded him, Mt. xiv. 3—12.

8. desirous to see him—Herod had heard of all that Jesus had done, ch. ix. 7—9, § 40, pp. 304, .5, 'And he desired to see him.'—Jesus had sent to say to Herod, that only by coming to him within three days could he see Jesus perform miracles, xiii. 32, § 66, p. 176.

because he had heard, &c.—Mt. xiv. 1, [Mk. vi. 14,] § 40, p. 304.

NOTES.

Lu. xxiii. 7. Belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction. As being an inhabitant of Galilee, of which Herod was tetrarch. This was Herod Antipas, who had put John the Baptist to death, and was the son of Herod the Great, who attempted to destroy the infant Jesus.

Sent him to Herod. Pilate, conscious that he must either do the duty of an upright judge and offend the Jews, or sacrifice his duty to his popularity, attempts to get rid of the matter altogether by sending his prisoner to Herod.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 6, 7. Let us not, like Pilate, seek to shift the responsibility of wrongfully treating the righteous: rather let us embrace whatever opportunity Providence may give us of befriending him.

8, 9 ver. Christ did not display his power for the amusement of the great, but exercised it for the relief of the poor: not to gratify the curious, but to glorify God.

was an attempt to procure his liberation, was the first such attempt in the course of this examination, but the fourth which had occurred in all: then, their renewed accusations, denying his innocence; and from the mention of Galilee, arising out of those accusations, Pilate's inquiry if Jesus were a Galilæan; and, upon finding that to be the case (according to the common opinion that our Lord was born at Nazareth), his sending him forthwith to Herod Antipas, the Tetrarch of Galilee (who was present himself in Jerusalem at the same occasion of the passover), as to his proper master.

* 'This mission, we may presume, would take place about the end of the first hour of the day, or our seven in the morning; but not later. Of its probable motive—of the quarrel pre-existing between Herod and

SUBMIT YOURSELVES TO EVERY ORDINANCE OF MAN FOR THE LORD'S SAKE: WHETHER IT BE TO THE KING, AS SUPREME; OR UNTO GOVERNORS, AS UNTO THEM THAT ARE SENT BY HIM FOR THE PUNISHMENT OF EVILDOERS, AND FOR THE PRAISE OF THEM THAT DO WELL.—1 Pet. ii. 13, .4.

LUKE xxiii. 9—12.

9 seen some miracle done by him. Then he-questioned-with him in many words; but he 10 answered him nothing. And the chief-priests and scribes stood and-vehemently εὐτόνως
11 accused him. And Herod with his men-of-war set-'him'-at-nought, and mocked him, and-arrayed him in a-gorgeous robe, and-sent-'him'-again to Pilate.
12 And the same day Pilate and Herod were-made friends together: for before they-were at enmity between themselves.

Jesus is again presented to the people.—John* xix. 14, .5.—(Ver. 14, p. 445.)

15 and he-saith unto-the Jews, Behold your King! But they cried-out, Away-with him, away-with him Αρον, αρον; crucify him. Pilate saith unto-them, Shall-I-crucify your King? The chief-priests answered, We-have no king but Cæsar. [Ver. 16, p. 453.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 9. answered him nothing—see also to the high priest, Mk. xiv. 60, § 89, p. 428, and to Pilate, Mt. xxvii. 12—4, p. 446, supra—as predicted, Ps. xxxviii. 13, .4; Is. liii. 7—Herod, as having heard of all that was done by Jesus, Lu. ix. 7, § 40, p. 304, needed not to make inquiry regarding his innocence, xxiii. 15, p. 449—and Jesus, although standing in the place of the poor and needy, gave an example of the meek dignity becoming the sons of God, as walking worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called, Eph. iv. 1—Ps. xv. 4, 'In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the LORD.'

10. vehemently accused him—Ps. xxii. 13, 'They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion.'

11. set him at nought—This had been predicted of Esau (and Herod was of Esau), to whom it was said, in reference to Jacob, Ge. xxvii. 40, 'It shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.'—Ps. ii. 2, 3, 'The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.'—They set at nought the common principles of justice and mercy, thinking that with regard to the poor and needy they might do so with impunity; but not so—see ver. 4, 5 —These predictions are noticed, Ac. iv. 25—.8—and hereafter is to be their fuller accomplishment, Rev. xix. 19—21.

mocked—see Is. xlix. 7; liii. 3—see similar mockery by the soldiers under Pilate, Jno. xix. 1—5, p. 443.

12. made friends together—Pilate seems, in a former instance, to have invaded Herod's jurisdiction, ch. xiii. 1, (see NOTE, § 64, p. 173)—now they compliment each other, as treating Jesus with indignity and contempt, ver. 7, 11, p. 447, supra.

Jno. xix. 14. Behold your King!—Pilate had before presented him to them, with 'Behold the man!' ver. 5, p. 443, supra.

15. Away with him—so of Paul, Ac. xxii. 22, 'Away with such a fellow from the earth:'

crucify—The former demand of the chief priests, ver. 6, p. 443, supra.

We have no king, &c.—Their choice of the desolating Roman eagle, in place of Him who would have

NOTES.

Lu. xxiii. 10. Vehemently accused him. The accusations of worldly kingship and of blasphemy would probably be here united, as Herod was a Jew, and able to appreciate the latter.

11. A gorgeous robe. ἐσθῆτα λαμπράν. The word λαμπρος was used for 'white;' the application of it by Polybius to the toga worn by the candidates for offices at Rome, if there were no other evidence, would be sufficient. Such white and splendid robes were worn in the East by sovereigns. Herod caused our Lord to be dressed in such a garment, not, probably, to signify the opinion he had of his innocence, but in derision of his pretensions to royalty. The Roman princes wore purple robes, and Pilate therefore put such a robe on Jesus. The Jewish kings wore a white robe, which was often rendered very shining or gorgeous by much tinsel or silver interwoven. Josephus says that the robe which Agrippa wore was so bright with silver, that when the sun shone on it, it so dazzled the eyes that it was difficult to look on it. The Jews and Romans therefore decked him in the manner appropriate to their own country, for purposes of mockery.

Jno. xix. 14. Behold your King! These words, and

15. Shall I crucify your King? seem to have been spoken by Pilate in contempt of the Jews, who could suppose that such a person as Jesus then appeared to be was likely to be set up as a King against Cæsar. —See ver. 12, supra.

We have no king but Cæsar. A degrading confession from the chief priests of that people of whom it

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxiii. 10, .1. He who is intrusted with the ministration of the law; who sees the wicked ready to destroy the righteous, and yet leaves him in his hand; is as verily guilty as the man who perpetrates the murder. Herod was guilty of the blood of Jesus, as well as of beheading his forerunner, John.]

13 ver. See margin.

Jno. xix. 14, .5. See margin. The Jews obtained the crucifixion of Jesus, the Christ; and they also soon came to know, by painful experience, what it was to have 'NO KING BUT CÆSAR.'

Pilate—and of the reconciliation between them, effected this day, and in consequence, as it would seem, of this very act, something has been said.—(See Diss. xxxv. Vol. III.) For the mention, however, of the fact, and for the account of what passed before Herod, to whom our Lord's accusers were sent as well as himself, similar altogether to what had just passed before Pilate, we are indebted solely to St. Luke. The going and the returning, with the transaction of the proceedings between, would necessarily take up some time; yet not so much but that Pilate might still wait in his seat upon the tribunal for the return of the prisoner and of his accusers. His object in sending them to Herod might be not only to pay a compliment to that prince, but also to strengthen the argument for the release of Jesus; if it should appear that Herod likewise, as well as himself, found no fault in him.

† 'V. During this interval, therefore, and while he was still sitting pro tribunali, I would place the message of his wife.—See p. 450, Mt. xxvii. 19, (where the order of the gospel is retained).

* 'VI. Upon the re-appearance of Jesus, whom Herod had sent back, clothed in the mockery of a royal dress, as he had been by Pilate, and with the same view in this instance also, viz., to express his contempt of the charge brought against him; I suppose those words to have immediately ensued, which conclude the account of St. John, xix. 14, from καὶ λέγει τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, to 15, inclusive, prior to the delivery of Jesus up to be crucified. In calling him their King it is manifest that Pilate was speaking ironically; and even the irony is naturally accounted for by the return and production of Jesus, still wearing the purple robe, which Herod had put upon him

THAT FRIENDSHIP IS ILL FOUNDED WHICH ORIGINATES IN DESPISING THE RIGHTEOUS.
LET US TAKE HEED, LEST, IN OBTAINING OUR DESIRE, WE PROCURE OUR OWN DESTRUCTION.

Pilate intercedes the fifth time for Jesus' release.—Luke xxiii. 13—.6.*

13 And Pilate, when-he-had-called-together the chief-priests and the 14 people, said unto them, Ye-have-brought this man unto-me, as one that-perverteth ἀποστρέφοντα the people: and, behold, I, having-examined him before you, have-found 15 no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye-accuse him: no, nor-yet Herod: 16 for I-sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of-death is done unto-him. I-will-therefore'-chastise him, and-release him.

Pilate intercedes the sixth time for Jesus' release.

MATT. xxvii. 15—.8. (Ver. 14, p. 446.)	MARK xv. 6—10. (Ver. 5, ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 17—.9.	JOHN.
15 [a] Now at that feast the governor was-wont to-release unto-the people [b] a prisoner, whom they-would.	Now at that feast he-released unto-them [b] one prisoner, whomsoever they-desired. [c]	[c] (For of-necessity 17 he-must release one unto-them at-the-feast.) [d]
16 [d] And they-had then a-notable prisoner δέσμιον ἐπίσημον, called Barabbas. [e]	7 And there-was one named Barabbas, [e] which lay bound with them that-had-made-insurrection-with-him, who had-committed murder in the insurrection.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

gathered the children of Jerusalem, as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings, resulted in the utter destruction of their place and nation, Is. viii. 8; Mt. xxiii. 37, § 85, p. 320; xxiv. 28, § 86, p. 336; Lu. xix. 41—.4, § 82, pp. 264, .5.

Lu. xxiii. 14. as one that perverteth, &c.—see on ver. 2, p. 445.

found no fault—1 Pe. ii. 15, 'So is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:'

15. no, nor yet Herod—who had opportunity of knowing the truth respecting Jesus' guilt, if there had been any, ch. ix. 7, § 40, p. 304.

16. I will therefore chastise, &c.—Pr. xii. 10, 'The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.'

Mt. xxvii. 15. was wont to release—Jno. xviii. 39, p. 442, supra.

Mk. xv. 7. insurrection—Barabbas was actually guilty of that with which Jesus had been wrongfully charged, Lu. xxiii. 2, p. 445, stirring up sedition—besides which he was a murderer.

NOTES.

is said, 1 Sa. xii. 12, 'The LORD your God was your king.' Some of those who now cried this, died miserably in rebellion against Cæsar about forty years afterwards. It was a mere pretence; since the Jews always maintained that they owed no allegiance to any earthly monarch, but were subjects of God only. They were so eager to accomplish the destruction of Jesus, that they did not scruple to make such an acknowledgment of Cæsar's sovereignty over them, as was at variance with all their national principles and feelings.—See on Mt. xxii. 17, § 84, p. 296.

Lu. xxiii. 14. Having examined him, &c. See on ver. 4, p. 446.

15. And, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. 'The meaning is, "And, lo, nothing suitable to the case of one who deserves death has been done to Jesus by Herod." But the original admits of a different translation, and may mean, "And now it is evident that nothing worthy of death has been done by Jesus." '—Lonsdale and Hale.

16. I will therefore chastise him. Here Pilate began to give ground, which only encouraged them to press on.

[* παιδεύσας, "having chastised." παιδεύειν properly signifies to educate a child; and then, from the adjunct, to correct, either generally, or in some particular manner, expressed or understood. Here punishment by flagellation is meant; which, among the Romans, always preceded capital punishment. The kind of flagellation varied according to the offence, being sometimes simply flogging with rods; in most cases scourging with the flagella. Here, however, the flagellation meant must be that spoken of by St. Paul, 2 Co. xi. 25, "Thrice was I beaten with rods."—Comp. Jno. xix. 1, p. 443.'—Bloomf.]

Mt. xxvii. 15. Was wont to release unto the people, &c. It is impossible to ascertain with any certainty at what time, or by whom, this custom originated. Livy acquaints us that in Rome, on some certain holidays, the prisoners were freed from their chains.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Lu. xxiii. 13—.6. It argues little for the consistency or probity of the judge, to acknowledge the prisoner innocent, and yet propose to punish him, pretending at the same time to complain of the injustice of his accusers. A ruler altogether weakens his own authority as well as that of the law, who, under the influence of even priestly or popular clamour, perpetrates palpable injustice.]

* 'VII. The chief priests, therefore, as our Lord's accusers, and the rest of the multitude, being again assembled before Pilate sitting pro tribunali in his former attitude, and Jesus also being present in public, the language of irony is dropped, and the people are addressed in the serious manner recorded by St. Luke, xxiii. 13—.6, concluding with a proposal to inflict a moderate chastisement on the accused party, such as might seem to be due for aspiring, however innocently, at the name of King, and so let him go; the fact of which proposal, under such circumstances, is substantially confirmed by St. Matthew and by St. Mark; and makes the second instance of the kind since the commencement of this examination, but the fifth which had occurred upon the whole.

MATT. xxvii. 17, 18.	MARK xv. 8—10.	LUKE.
	8 And the multitude crying-aloud began to-desire him to do as he-had-ever-done unto-them.[f]
17 [f]Therefore when-they-were-gathered-together, Pilate said unto-them, Whom will-ye that-I-release unto-you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is-called Christ?[5]	9 But Pilate answered them, saying, Will-ye that-I-release unto-you [5]the King of-the Jews?
18 For he-knew that for envy they-had-delivered him.	10 For he-knew that the chief-priests had-delivered him for envy.

*Pilate's wife's message, &c.

MATT. xxvii. 19, 20.	MARK.	LUKE.	JOHN.
19 [a]When-he-was-set-down on the judgment-seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing todo with that just man: for I-have-suffered many-things this-day in a-dream because-of him.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 17. Barabbas, or Jesus—Ac. iii. 14, 'Ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;'

Christ—The name he had been accused of assuming, Lu. xxiii. 2, p. 445.

Mk. xv. 10. For he knew, &c.—He expected that the people would not be so bloodthirsty as their spiritual guides—But the words of the prophet were singularly fulfilled, Is. ix. 16, 'The leaders of this people cause them to err;'

envy—Cain envied his brother Abel, because of God's accepting him, Ge. iv. 4, 5—Joseph's 'brethren envied him,' xxxvii. 11—Ps. cvi. 16, 'They envied Moses also in the camp,'—Pr. xxvii. 4, 'Who is able to stand before envy?'—Ac. xiii. 45, 'When the Jews saw the multitudes,' come to Paul's preaching, 'they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.'—Ph. i. 15, 'Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife;'—Ja. iii. 16, 'Where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work.'

Mt. xxvii. 19. dream—so in a dream God warned Abimelech, Ge. xx. 3—6—and Laban, xxxi. 24, 29—Job xxxiii. 14—7, 'For God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not. 15, In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; 16, then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction, 17, that he may withdraw man from his purpose, and hide pride from man.'—And see on Mt. i. 20, § 2, p. 13.

NOTES.

It is probable that Augustus might commission the governors of Judæa to exercise this custom which came from Rome. It was designed to add to the solemnity of the festival, and to express the respect of the Romans for it. This custom was followed afterwards by some of the christian emperors at Easter.

Mt. xxvii. 17. Whom will ye that I release? As Barabbas was a noted criminal, Pilate doubtless concluded that the people would unanimously prefer Jesus to him.

18. Envy. φθόνον, hatred, or malice. Envy of the favour in which Jesus had been held by the people, and which gave Pilate the more reason to expect that the people would demand his release.

19. Judgment seat. The Roman custom was, that causes should be heard in the prætorium, or the president's house; but that judgment should be pronounced publicly on a βῆμα, erected in some lofty and conspicuous spot in the vicinity of the prætorium.

[His wife, &c. Her name was Claudia Procula. Grotius observes that this circumstance marks the time of the event, and affords an incidental proof of the veracity of the evangelist; for it was only in the reign of Tiberius that the wives of governors obtained permission to attend them in the provinces. Perhaps she was afraid that the vengeance of heaven would follow her husband and family if he condemned the innocent. 'That just man.' The word 'just' here has the sense of innocent, or not guilty. She might have been satisfied of his innocence from other sources, as well as from the dream. 'I have suffered many things,' &c. Dreams were occasionally considered as indications of the Divine will. Great reliance was placed on them.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 17. Jesus might have been delivered by Pilate, by Herod, or by the people: yet none consistently interfered for his release from the malicious persecution of the Jewish priesthood.

18 ver. Let us avoid fostering in ourselves a spirit of envy, nor let us needlessly provoke it in others. But let no one be surprised should he have to encounter its baneful influence. Even Jesus, who in a most unostentatious manner 'went about doing good' unto all—even Jesus did not escape.

* See foot-note (V.), p. 448.

'VIII. Though the proposal was rejected—yet was it renewed once and again; making together the third

MATT. xxvii. 20.	MARK xv. 11.	LUKE xxiii. 18, .9.	JOHN.
20 But the chief-priests and elders persuaded	11 But the chief-priests moved επεισαν the multitude that they-should-ask[b]	ανεσεισαν the people, [b] that he-should-rather'-release Barabbas unto-them.[e]
Barabbas,
[e] and destroy Jesus.[d]
		[d]And they-cried-out all-at-once 18 παμπληθει, saying, Away-with Αιρε this man, and release unto-us Barabbas: (who for a-certain 19 sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

Pilate's seventh and last intercession for Jesus' release.

MATT. xxvii. 21—.5.	MARK xv. 12—.4.	LUKE xxiii. 20—.3.	JOHN.
21 The governor answered and-	12 And Pilate answered and-	[c] Pilate therefore, 20 willing to-release Jesus, said unto-them, [b]Whether of the twain will-ye that-I-release unto-you? They said, Barabbas.	said again unto-them,	spake-again'-to-them.[c]
22 Pilate saith unto-them, What
	What will-ye then that-I-shall-do shall-I-do-then'-with Jesus which is-called Christ?[c] [c] unto him whom ye-call the-King of-the Jews?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 20. persuaded—Je. v. 30, .1, 'A wonderful and horrible thing ... The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so:'—Ho. vi. 9, 'And as troops of robbers wait for a man, so the company of priests murder,' &c.—Mi. iii. 5, 6, 'Thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that make my people err, ... Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision;'—Mt. xv. 14, § 44, p. 9, 'They be blind leaders of the blind.'

Lu. xxiii. 20. willing to release Jesus—Pilate, &c. iii. 13, 'was determined to let him go.'—And yet both he and Herod are recognised as being against Christ, iv. 27—They acknowledged his innocence, Lu. xxiii. 13—.5, p. 449, supra, and gave him the titles and the forms of royalty, but this as despising his authority, Jno. xix. 1—5, p. 443, supra; Lu. xxiii. 11, p. 448, supra—and delivering him into the hands of his enemies, whilst making a shew of resistance to the malignity of the chief priests, Mt. xxvii. 24, .5, p. 452, infra.

Mt. xxvii. 22. Christ—see before, ver. 17, p. 450.

Mk. xv. 12. whom ye call, &c.—The Jews appear to have accused Jesus of claiming to be their King—His own view of the kingdom is not so limited, Is. xlv. 22, 'Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth:—25, In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.'—See on Jno. xviii. 33—.7, p. 441, supra.

King of the Jews—It does not appear that Jesus called himself the King of the Jews, or that he was so called by his disciples—By Nathanael he had been confessed, Jno. i. 49, § 10, p. 73, 'the Son of God; .... the King of Israel.'—By Peter, Mt. xvi. 15, § 50, p. 37, 'The Christ, the Son of the living God.'—and he speaks of himself as sent 'unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.' xv. 24, § 45, p. 14—At an early period of his ministry, many of the Jews, even at Jerusalem, 'believed in his name,' but he 'did not commit himself unto them,' knowing 'what was in man,' Jno. ii. 23—.5, § 12, p. 82—And when Nicodemus, one of the rulers, came to him by night, so far from lending himself to any seditious design, in order to become King of the Jews, he gave essentially the same description of his kingdom as he afterwards did to Pilate—comp. iii. 3—21, § ib., pp. 83—.7, with xviii. 36, .7, p. 441, supra.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 20. Persuaded the multitude, &c. The exciting of the crowd seems to have taken place while Pilate was receiving the message from his wife.

Ask Barabbas, who had raised an insurrection and committed murder;

And destroy Jesus, who had, during the space of three years and a half, gone about unwearied, from village to village, instructing the ignorant, healing the diseased, and raising the dead.

Lu. xxiii. 18. All at once. παμπληθει, 'the whole multitude together.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.—Mt. xxvii. 20. See margin.

and fourth instances respectively, since the beginning of this trial in public, but the sixth and the seventh in all: and these are instances recorded by each of the three evangelists, and in terms, especially as concerns the second of them, very much the same.

LET US BE THANKFUL TO GOD THAT WE LIVE IN A LAND WHERE THE MINISTRATION OF THE LAW IS UNINFLUENCED BY POPULAR CLAMOUR, STIRRED INTO MADNESS BY PRIESTLY INTRIGUE.

MATT. xxvii. 23, .4.	MARK xv. 13, .4.	LUKE xxiii. 21—.3.	JOHN.
They-all-say unto-him,	13 And they cried-out again, d	But they cried, 21
'Let-him-be-crucified.	Crucify him.	d saying, e Crucify him, crucify him.
23 And the governor said, f	14 Then Pilate said unto-them,	And he 22 said f unto them the-third-time,
Why, what evil hath-he-done?	Why, what evil hath-he-done?	Why, what evil hath-he-done? I-have-found no cause-of-death in him: I-will-therefore-chastise him, and-let-him-go.
But they cried-out the-more, saying,	5 And they cried-out the-more-exceedingly,	And they were- 23 instant ἐπέκειντο with-loud voices, requiring that-
Let-him-be-crucified.	Crucify him. h	he-might-be-crucified. g
24 h When-Pilate-saw that he-could-prevail nothing, but that rather a-tumult was-made, he-took water, and-washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I-am innocent of the blood of this just-person:

IN ALL LABOUR THERE IS PROFIT: BUT THE TALK OF THE LIPS TENDETH ONLY TO PENURY.—Prov. xiv. 23.

THE CROWN OF THE WISE IS THEIR RICHES: BUT THE FOOLISHNESS OF FOOLS IS FOLLY.—Prov. xiv. 24.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 22. what evil, &c.—so for David did Jonathan plead with Saul his father, and said, 1 Sa. xix. 4, 5, 'Wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause?'—xx. 32, 'Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?'

Mt. xxvii. 24. washed his hands—If a person were found slain in the land of Israel, the elders of the nearest city were to wash their hands over a heifer, the head of which had been struck off, in a valley that had been neither ploughed nor sown, and they were to say, De. xxi. 7, 8, 'Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it. Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, and lay not innocent blood unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.'—Pilate might have added the words of Job to his miserable subterfuge, ch. ix. 30, .1, 'If I wash myself with snow water, and make my hands never so clean; yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall abhor me.'—He that would ascend into the hill of the Lord, and stand in his holy place, must have clean hands, Ps. xxiv. 3, 4—But it is not any ceremonial washing that can answer the demand, Is. i. 16, 'Wash you, make you clean;'—Ps. xxvi. 6, 'I will wash mine hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O LORD:'—Pr. xviii. 5, 'It is not good to accept the person of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.'—Ps. xliii. 1, 'Judge me, O God, and plead my cause against an ungodly nation: O deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man.'

this just, &c.—Is. liii. 11, 'By his knowledge'—which Pilate stopped not to acquire, Jno. xviii. 38, p. 442, supra—'shall my righteous servant justify many:'—Je. xxiii. 6, 'THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.'—2 Co. v. 21, 'For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.'—1 Pe. iii. 18, 'For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God,'

NOTES.

Lu. xxiii. 22. What evil hath he done? From this, it is evident that Pilate was convinced that there was nothing laid to his charge, for which, consistently with the Roman laws, he could condemn him.

Mt. xxvii. 23. They cried out the more. Trying, by the increased violence of their clamour, to make up for their inability to answer the reasonable question of the governor.

24. A tumult was made. And he might fear the consequences of it, if he disregarded their request.

He took water, &c. The washing of the hands to be oken (innocence from blood-guiltiness is prescribed, De. xxi. 6—8; and alluded to Ps. xxvi. 6; and Pilate uses it here as intelligible to the Jews.

It was also the custom among the heathens, when they had shed blood, to wash their hands in water to purify themselves. So, also, a judge on passing sentence upon a criminal, usually raised his hands towards heaven, and testified he was guiltless, &c., of the blood of the person condemned.

[The reluctance of Pilate to sentence Christ, considering his merciless character, is signally remarkable; and, still more, his repeated protestations of the innocence of his prisoner, although he had generally made no scruple of confounding the innocent with the guilty. But he was unquestionably influenced by the overruling providence of God, to make the righteousness of his Son appear in the clearest light, by the fullest, the most authentic, and the most public evidence—1st, by the testimony even of his judges;—2ndly, by the message of Pilate's wife;—3rdly, by the testimony of the traitor who hanged himself in despair for betraying the innocent blood;—4thly, by the testimony of the Roman centurion and guard at his crucifixion; and lastly, of his fellow-sufferer on the cross. Never was innocence attested like unto his.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 20. It is not enough to be willing to do right: we should be determined at all risks to act justly and consistently.

23 ver. Clamour is but a poor substitute for reason and evidence: in having recourse to it, men are eschewing the example of Christ, and following that of his persecutors.

[Mt. xxvii. 24. An expressive act, had Pilate been truly innocent; but his washing was as ineffectual in clearing him of guilt, as is any other outward baptism, apart from the holiness of life, thereby represented.]

IX. The obstinacy of the Jews remaining invincible, Pilate now takes water; and to attest his own innocency in consenting to the death of Jesus out of deference to their importunity, performs before the eyes of the people the symbolical action recorded by St. Matthew alone.

MATT. xxvii. 25.	MARK.	LUKE xxiii. 23.
25 see ye to it. Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.[s]

[s] And the voices of them and of the chief-priests prevailed κατισχυον

Jesus is scourged, and delivered to the people.

MATT. xxvii. 26.	MARK xv. 15.	LUKE xxiii. 24, .5.	JOHN xix. 16.
	15 [a] And so Pilate, willing to-content το ικανον ποιησαι the people, [b]	And Pilate 24 gave-sentence that-it-should-be as-they required.
26 Then released-he Barabbas unto-them:	released Barabbas unto-them,	And he-released 25 unto-them him that-for sedition and murder was-cast into prison, whom they-had-desired;	(Ver. 15, p 448.) Then delivered- 16 he him and when-he-had-scourged Jesus, he-delivered him to be-crucified.	and delivered Jesus, [c] when-he-had-scourged him, [d] to be-crucified.	but he-delivered Jesus [c] to their will. [d]	therefore unto-them [c] to be-crucified.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 25. His blood be on us, &c.—Nu. xxxv. 33, 'Blood it defileth the land: and the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it.'—De. xix. 10, 'That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, ... and so blood be upon thee.'—Ps. ix. 10, 'They that know thy name will put their trust in thee:'—12, 'When he maketh inquisition for blood, he remembereth them: he forgetteth not the cry of the humble.'—By their slaying the messengers of peace, even the visits of mercy were to the Jews to be turned into curse, Mt. xxiii. 34, .5, § 85, p. 319. 'Behold, I send unto you prophets, ... That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias,' &c.—He. x. 29—31, 'Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? 30, For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. 31, It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.'

Lu. xxiii. 24. as they required—It is to be observed that the death of Jesus had been determined on before his enemies had fixed upon a particular form of accusation. The accusation, 'King of the Jews,' was not once mentioned in his examination before the high priest, but 'Christ, the Son of God,' which to Pilate could not be a very intelligible accusation, except it were understood, that by that title Jesus claimed to rule, as a temporal prince, over the Jews, in opposition to the Roman government—Although this was a false accusation, it was the only feasible one with which they could come before Pilate—But dreading a popular demonstration in favour of Jesus, Mt. xxvi. 4, 5, § 86, p. 356, they wished to dispose of him as speedily and quietly as was consistent with the forms of law, and according to a secret understanding they had wished to have with the governor, Jno. xviii. 30, p. 440, supra, and without giving that publicity which ultimately was given to the supposed claims of Jesus as the Christ—Their eagerness to gratify their malevolence, in a manner so characteristic of treacherous Judah, see Je. iii. 11, appears to have irritated the Roman governor into a course of conduct the very opposite to that which the Jewish priests had desired—He shewed how utterly he could despise any popular feeling in behalf of one bearing the title of King of the Jews, until, emboldened by his conduct, the priests began to feel they might act less covertly, and guide, rather than stand in awe of, the public clamour, so as to compel Pilate in a manner to change places with them, and from a bold despiser of justice, become a base betrayer of it.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 24. See ye to it. Take it upon yourselves, for ye put him to death.

25. His blood be on us, &c. Among the Greeks and Romans this kind of denunciation or devotement was used by the witnesses. It was therefore appositely expressed before a Roman tribunal. It was as much as to say, if this man be innocent, and we put him to death as a guilty person, may the punishment due to such a crime be visited upon us, and upon our children after us! What a dreadful imprecation! and how literally fulfilled! The notes on ch. xxiv. § 86, will shew how they fell victims to their own imprecation, being visited with a series of calamities unexampled in the history of the world.

Mk. xv. 15. Willing to content the, &c. το ὀχλῳ τὸ ἱκανὸν ποιῆσαι. 'To satisfy the wishes of the people,' or, as Grotius explains it, agreeably to the usage of satis facere in Latin writers, 'to remove all causes of complaint on their part.'—Comp. Jno. xix. 1, 16, p. 443.

Mt. xxvii. 26. When he had scourged Jesus. Among the Romans scourging was always inflicted previously to crucifixion, as appears from several passages in their writings.

The Jews used a whip of three cords, and limited the number of stripes to thirty-nine, 2 Co. xi. 24; but the Romans' most usual way of scourging was with such rods or wands as the lictors carried in a bundle before the chief magistrates; and this scourging was exceedingly cruel, tearing the flesh to the veins and arteries.

Delivered him to be crucified. Tacitus, the Roman historian, mentions the death of Christ in very remarkable terms:—'Nero put those who commonly went by the name of Christians to the most exquisite tortures. The author of this name was CHRIST, who was capitally punished in the reign of TIBERIUS, by PONTIUS PILATE the PROCURATOR.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 25. Let us take heed—fearfully has that prayer of the Jews been answered.—And see margin.

[Mk. xv. 15. What an unjust judge! 'Willing to content the people!']

[Let the awful consequences of disregarding justice in the case of 'this one poor man,' the despised Prophet of Nazareth, teach the utter unprofitableness of consulting expediency in preference to the claims of justice and of truth.]

[a] X. This being done, and the sacrifice of Jesus to the will of the people being now resolved upon—as a necessary preliminary to the execution of his sentence, according to the custom of the Roman law—he is

LET US PRAY THAT THE BLOOD OF JESUS WHICH HAS BEEN SO LONG UPON THE JEWS FOR CONDEMNATION, MAY SOON BE FOUND UPON THEM FOR JUSTIFICATION.

SECTION 91.—(G. 100.)—[Lesson 95.]—PARTICULARS WHICH TRANSPIRED AFTER JESUS WAS DELIVERED TO BE CRUCIFIED, UNTIL THE TIME OF HIS DEATH. —Matt. xxvii. 27—50. Mark xv. 16—37. Luke xxiii. 26—46. John xix. 16—30.—See Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. pp. 236—40.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt.xxvii.27. Mk.xv.16. The order for crucifixion having been given by Pilate, Jesus is led by the Roman soldiers into their common hall, where they gather unto him the whole band.

— xxvii.28,.9. — xv.17,.8. In mockery they array him in a royal robe, put a crown of thorns on his head, and a reed in his right hand; and bowing the knee before him, they salute him with 'Hail, king of the Jews!'

— xxvii.30. — xv.19. They spit upon him; and taking the mock sceptre from his hand, they strike him therewith on the head.

— xxvii.31. — xv.20. Having mocked him, they remove the purple robe, put his own raiment on him, and lead him away to execution.

— xxvii.32. — xv.21. Lu.xxiii.26. Jno.xix.16, .7. The soldiers lay hold upon Simon, a Cyrenian, whom they meet coming out of the country, and him they compel to assist Jesus in bearing his cross.

——— ——— — xxiii.27. A multitude follow Jesus, among whom are many women, weeping and compassionating the 'man of sorrows.'

——— ——— — xxiii.28-31. Jesus turns, and addressing the daughters of Jerusalem, tells them to weep rather for themselves and their children; for the days draw nigh when, because of the misery coming upon their offspring, they will no longer regard barrenness as a curse, but a blessing; when, rather than face the calamity they dread, they will call on the mountains to fall on them. If the things they witness are done to one altogether innocent, what must become of those who, by reason of their sins, are ripe for destruction?

——— ——— — xxiii.32. Two others, malefactors, are led away with Jesus to execution.

— xxvii.33. — xv.22. — xxiii.33. Jno.xix.17. They come to the place of execution, called Golgotha, or Calvary, in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem.

Mt.xxvii.34. Mk.xv.23. Lu.xxiii. — Jno.xix. — They give Jesus wine mingled with gall to drink, but he refuses to be in this way rendered insensible to the torture he is about to undergo.

——— ——— — xxiii.33. — xix.18. They affix Jesus to the cross, placing him between the two malefactors who are crucified with him.

——— ——— — xxiii.34. ——— Jesus prays the Father in behalf of his executioners.

——— ——— — xix.19. Pilate causes the accusation of Jesus to be affixed to the cross. The writing is, 'JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.'

——— ——— — xix.20. This title is read by many Jews, the place of execution being not far from the city; and the writing being in Hebrew, the language of the country; in Greek, generally understood by Jews from abroad; and in Latin, the language of the governor and other Romans.

——— ——— — xix.21,.2. The chief priests object to the title, 'THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS' (see Mt. xxvii. 37); but Pilate refuses to alter the writing.

— xxvii.35. — xv.24. — xxiii.34. — xix.23,.4. Jesus' garments are parted among the soldiers; and for his coat, which is without seam, they cast lots; thus fulfilling the scripture, Ps. xxii. 18.

——— — xv.25. ——— Jesus is crucified at the third hour, or nine o'clock, A.M.

— xxvii.36. ——— The soldiers sit down to watch Jesus.

— xxvii.37. — xv.26. — xxiii.(38.) — xix.(20.) The accusation over his head upon the cross is conspicuous, declaring him to be 'THE KING OF THE JEWS.'

— xxvii.38. — xv.27,.8. — xxiii.(33.) — xix.(18.) Two thieves are crucified with him, on each side one, Jesus being in the midst—fulfilment of Is. liii. 12.

(For remainder of INTRODUCTION, &c., see p. 462.)

first scourged with rods, and then given up to the insults of the soldiers, assembled together for that purpose. Compare with this account of the honours paid in mockery to our Saviour, the description of the affronts put upon Herod Agrippa by the Alexandrian mob, as recorded by Philo Judæus, ii. 522, l. 26, et seq. Adv. Flaccum. The scourging took place in public, and was the second instance of the infliction of such violence upon our Saviour this morning; but the mockery was confined to the prætorium, where the robe and the crown of thorns, spoken of here by St. Matthew and St. Mark, had been employed, as we learned from St. John, for a like purpose not long before; and would consequently be ready for the same use now. The purple robe, in which Jesus returned from Herod, either had been taken off from him before the address of Pilate recorded under Article VII. [p. 449], or would necessarily be removed from his person previous to the infliction of the scourging: and that putting of such a robe on again, which is here ascribed to the soldiers, might literally have taken place. Upon the detail of these particulars, both as something minutely related by his predecessors, and, as part of the history of our Lord's contumelious treatment in general, because they bore no indefinite resemblance to what had been experienced from the sanhedrim before, St. Luke, with his usual regard to conciseness, is silent.

'XI. The insults of the band being concluded, and Jesus being again clothed in his own raiment, he is finally consigned to the four soldiers who were to accomplish his execution, and led away from the prætorium to be crucified..... (See Mt. xxvii. 27—31, &c., p. 455.)

'The demeanour of our Lord, from the time when Pilate ascended the tribunal, assumed a new appearance: for whereas in his examination before Pilate, apart from the people and within the prætorium, his conduct exhibited no marks of reserve and no intentional silence whatever, yet now, on being produced to the multitude, and arraigned pro tribunali—saving that one reply to a question of the judge's, and not an accusation by the people, which St. Paul denominates the good confession—it does not appear that he so much as opened his lips. The same fact is observable in his deportment before Herod likewise. It was now, consequently, that the language of prophecy, respecting this part of the Messiah's demeanour under his sufferings, the importance of which to its fulfilment we may judge of from the testimony of St. Peter, 1 Ep. ii. 21—3, compared with Is. liii. 7, began to be strictly verified by the event.

'The mission to Herod, and the consequent trial of Jesus before the Tetrarch of Galilee as well as before the Jewish council and the Roman governor, was one of the incidents belonging to this period in particular; and the importance of that fact also to the fulfilment of prophecy may be estimated from the reference made to it, Ac. iv. 27.....

'The supposition of some such proceedings between Jesus and Pilate, as recorded by St. John, anterior to the proceedings in the other evangelists, possesses its use in clearing up or explaining certain things which occur in them. As first; it would not have appeared from their account why the charge, brought against our Lord at the outset of his examination, was the specific charge of stirring up the people, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar; and why, ever after, this insinuation should lie at the bottom of any other subsequently advanced. It is seen, however, from St. John, that the other charges—charges more purely of a FORASMUCH . . . AS THE CHILDREN ARE PARTAKERS OF FLESH AND BLOOD, HE ALSO HIMSELF LIKEWISE TOOK PART OF THE SAME; THAT THROUGH DEATH HE MIGHT DESTROY HIM THAT HAD THE POWER OF DEATH, THAT IS, THE DEVIL.—Heb. ii. 14.

No. 91.—Jesus is crowned and mocked.

Matt. xxvii. 27—31. [Ver. 26, p. 453.]	Mark xv. 16—20. [Ver. 15, ib.]
27 [a] Then the soldiers of-the governor took Jesus into the common-hall, [b]	And the soldiers led-him'-away into the hall, [b] called Prætorium; [c] 16
[c] and-gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.	and they-call-together the whole band.
28 And they-stripped him, and-put-on him a-scarlet robe.	And they-clothed-him'- with purple, 17
29 And when-they-had-platted a-crown of thorns, they-put it upon his head, and a-reed in his right-hand: and they-bowed-the-knee before him, [d] εμπροσθεν,	and platted a-crown of-thorns, and-put-it-about his head

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 28. put on him a scarlet robe—'Clothed him with purple' [Mk. xv. 17]—This appears to have been supplied by Pilate's soldiers, Jno. xix. 2, § 90, p. 443—They put on him a purple or royal robe, in mockery of his being called 'King of the Jews,' Mk. xv. 18.

29. a crown of thorns—see also Jno. xix. 2, § 90, p. 443.

a reed in his right hand—in mockery of the sceptre, whereby kings indicated their will, as Ahasuerus to Esther, v. 2—It was predicted, Nu. xxiv. 17, 'a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.'—The sceptre of Christ is yet to prove 'a rod of iron,' Ps. ii. 9; Rev. xix. 15—A rod of strength out of Zion, with which he is to rule in the midst of his enemies, Ps. cx. 2.

bowed the knee—The homage which was thus given to the Saviour in mockery, will yet be given to him in truth, Ge. xlix. 8, 'Thy father's children shall bow down before thee.'—Ps. lxxii. 11, 'Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him.'—Is. xlv. 23, 'I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear.'—Ph. ii. 10, 'That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;'—see this universal homage paid to the Redeemer, Rev. v. 8—14, 'And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints. 9, And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; 10, And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth. 11, And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 27. The common hall. 'According to the original, the "prætorium," as Mk. xv. 16, from which passage we gather, that the place called the prætorium was a public hall in the Roman governor's house.—See the same word translated "the judgment hall," Jno. xviii. 28, 33; xix. 9, § 90, pp. 440, ..1, ..4.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Unto him. Rather, 'against him.'

The whole band. Or, cohort. This was a body of foot, commanded by the governor, appointed to prevent disorders and tumults, especially on solemn occasions.

28. They stripped him. 'Possibly of the mantle in which he had been sent back by Herod.'—Alford.

[A scarlet robe. χλαμυδα κοκκινην. Rather, a kind of purple robe, which is esteemed the regal colour. Dr. Macknight affirms that scarlet was named purple by the ancients, and that they designated all colours by that name which had any mixture of red in them. St. Mark, xv. 17, and St. John, xix. 2, speak of Jesus being clad in a purple robe; a variety of expression which is found in other ancient authors when describing the same colours.]

29. Had platted. The word platted here means woven together, or having made a wreath.

'Hasselquist, a Swedish naturalist, supposes a very common plant, naba, or nabka of the Arabs, with many small and sharp spines; soft, round, and pliant branches; leaves much resembling ivy, of a very deep green, as if in designed mockery of a victor's wreath.'—Alford.

Upon his head. In the form of a garland or diadem. The whole head was not covered, but it was placed in a circle round the temples.

And a reed in his right hand. A reed is a straight, slender herb growing in marshy places, and abundant on the banks of the Jordan. It was often used for the purpose of making staves for walking. Kings commonly carried a sceptre, made of ivory or gold, as a sign of their office or rank, Est. iv. 11; viii. 4. This reed or staff they put in his hand, in imitation of a sceptre, to deride also his pretensions of kingship.

Bowed the knee. The phrase signifies 'to place the knees (i.e., on the ground).' The sense is, 'on bended knees.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvii. 27. Jesus, who, at the instigation of the Jewish priesthood, was given over to be the sport of the Roman soldiers, was the Holy and the Just One: who reckons as done to himself, that which is done to the meanest of his followers. Let us take heed how we regard the victims of priestly intolerance. With the case of Jesus before their eyes, it is no wonder that the sympathy of British Christians should be with the oppressed, however despised, rather than with their persecutors, whatever their political power or ecclesiastical authority.]

28, 29 ver. See margin.

---

legal character—on which his enemies denounced him at first, having been urged and failed, the course of proceedings had of necessity conducted to this. Secondly, it would not have appeared why Pilate, without any examination, properly so called, of the prisoner, should so soon have expressed himself satisfied of his innocence. It is seen, however, from St. John, that he was convinced of it, or predisposed to acquiesce in such a belief, already. In like manner it would not have appeared how he came to know, or to conclude, that our Lord's accusers had delivered him up through envy: but St. John shews that he had seen reason enough to suspect that. Nor would it have appeared why all at once, and without any previous statement of his motives for desiring it, he should have been so anxious to release Jesus instead of Barabbas; nor, subsequently, why he should have been so reluctant to consent to his death at last. But it must appear from St. John that this was no new alternative; and that his conviction of the innocence of Jesus, even before he began to try him officially, was so strong as not to be easily overcome by any considerations whatever.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. pp. 233—.40.

MATT. xxvii. 30, .1.	MARK xv. 18—20.
	d and began to-salute him,* 18
* and-mocked him, saying, Hail, King of-the Jews! f	Hail, King of-the Jews!
30 And they-spit upon him, and-took the reed, and smote him on the head.	f And they-smote him on-the head with- 19 a-reed, and did-spit-upon him, and bowing their knees worshipped him.
31 And after-that they-had-mocked him, they-took-the robe-off-from him, and put-his-own raiment-on him, and led-him-away to crucify him.	And when they-had-mocked him, 20 they-took-off-the purple-from him, and put-his-own clothes-on him, and led-him-out to crucify him.

*Jesus bears his cross to crucifixion.

MATT. xxvii. 32.	MARK xv. 21.	LUKE xxiii. 26. (Ver. 25, § 90, p. 453.)	JOHN xix. 16. (See ibid.)
			And they-took Jesus, and led-him-away.
32 And as-they-came-out, they-found a-man of-	21 And † they-compel	a And as they- 26 led-him-away, they-laid-hold-upon	(Ver. 17, p. 458.)
Cyrene, Simon by-name:	one Simon a-Cyrenian,	one Simon, a-Cyrenian, b

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; 12, saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. 13, And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. 14, And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.'

Mt. xxvii. 29. Hail, King of the Jews!—Jno. xix. 3, § 90, p. 448—and yet this is He of whom Jacob spake, Ge. xlix. 8, 'Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise:'—and of whom David wrote, Ps. lxxii. 15, 'Prayer also shall be made for him continually; and daily shall he be praised.'—19, 'And blessed be his glorious name for ever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen.'

Mk. xv. 19. smote him on the head—Yet this is He with regard to whom the word shall be found fulfilled, Ps. cx. 6, 'He shall judge among the heathen, he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he shall wound the heads over many countries.'—Hab. iii. 13, 'Thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked,'—Je. xxx. 23, 'The whirlwind of the LORD goeth forth with fury, a continuing whirlwind: it shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked.'

and did spit, &c.—Jesus could say, Is. l. 6, 'I hid not my face from shame and spitting.'—Heb. xii. 2, 'Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame,' &c.—He foretold the shame he was thus to suffer from the Gentiles, Mk. x. 33, § 77, p. 236—He had previously been exposed to it from the Jews, Mt. xxvi. 67, [Mk. xiv. 65,] § 89, p. 430.

20. mocked—The criminal folly of which the soldiers were here guilty is peculiar neither to them nor to the Jews—Pr. xvii. 5, 'Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker:'—xxx. 17, 'The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.'

out, &c.—Naboth, falsely accused of blasphemy, they carried out 'forth out of the city, and stoned,' 1 Ki. xxi. 13—so did the Jews with Stephen, Ac. vii. 58—The sin offering was burnt 'without the camp,' Le. iv. 11, .2, 21; ix. 11; xvi. 27; He. xiii. 11—4—ver. 12, .3, 'Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.'

21. Cyrenian—comp. Ac. ii. 10; vi. 9—The compulsion here used upon this inhabitant of Africa, seems

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 29. Hail, King of the Jews! The term hail was a common mode of salutation to a king, or even to a friend. It implies commonly the highest respect for office, as well as for the person, and is an invocation of blessings on the person. Here it was used to carry on what they thought to be the farce of his being a king.

30. And they spit upon him. This was a token of the deepest contempt and insult.

Mk. xv. 19. Worshipped him. Mocked him with the appearance of homage. The word worship here denotes the honour done to princes and kings.

Mt. xxvii. 32. Came out. 'Out of the city; for, as in the wilderness offenders were executed without the camp, so at Jerusalem without the walls of the city. There was a typical allusion in this.—See He. xiii. 11—3.'—R. Watson.

A man of Cyrene. Cyrene was a city of that part of Africa called Libya, on the Mediterranean sea;

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xv. 18, .9. Let us not renew the mockery of Jesus, by pretending to worship him with the lip and the knee, while the heart has no appreciation of his worth, and the hand is wickedly employed in smiting him in his poor and despised followers upon earth.

[19 ver. Let him who, by Christ Jesus, aspires to glory, honour, and immortality, be unmoved though he should meet with contempt and mockery from man. So was it with the Son of God himself; but he is not the less acknowledged of God, nor is he now the less glorified of men.]

Mt. xxvii. 31. See margin.

* 'The setting out of Jesus from the prætorium (is) a fact specified by all the evangelists; and along with Jesus of two others, malefactors and λῃσταί—a fact which, though implicitly recognised by all, is mentioned in this, which is its proper place, solely by St. Luke, xxiii. 39 (p. 458). These men . . . . were probably companions or accomplices of Barabbas, whom St. John also calls a λῃστής. . . . . With regard to the number of soldiers by whom this procession would be escorted, as there were four appointed for the execution of Jesus in particular, there might be as many more for each of the two others; or twelve in all, under the command of the same centurion.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Dies. xiii. p. 240.

† 'The object of this detention was certainly not to relieve our Lord from his cross altogether—to carry which was, under all circumstances, a preliminary part of the punishment of persons condemned to be crucified—but to divide the burthen of it with him: for St. John is express that part of it, at least, was carried by our Lord himself; and the other evangelists, especially St. Luke, are equally so that part of it was laid upon Simon. . . . .'—Ibid., p. 241.—And see NOTE, Mt. xxvii. 32, next page.

MATT. xxvii. 32.	MARK xv. 21.	LUKE xxiii. 26.	JOHN.
	[b] who-passed-by, coming out-of the-country, the father of- Alexander and Rufus,[c]	coming out-of the country,
[c] him they-compelled [d] to bear his cross. (Ver. 33, p. 458.)	to bear his cross. (Ver. 22, p. ib.)	[d] and on-him they-laid the cross, that-he-might-bear it after Jesus.

Jesus turns round to the women who bewail him.—Luke xxiii. 27—31.*

27 And there-followed him a-great company of people, and of-women, which also bewailed
28 and lamented him. But Jesus turning unto them said, Daughters of-Jerusalem, weep 29 not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For, behold, the-days are-coming, in the-which they-shall-say, Blessed are the barren, and the-wombs that never to have been turned into blessing unto his children and neighbours, by its bringing him into acquaintance with Jesus, the truth respecting whom he may thus have learned, and thence communicated unto them—Men of Cyrene are mentioned among the first preachers of the gospel to the Grecians, Ac. xi. 20—Mention is made, xiii. 1, of 'Lucius of Cyrene,'

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xv. 21. Alexander and Rufus—The familiarity with which these children of the Cyrenian are mentioned by Mark, who, it is said, wrote his gospel for the Christians at Rome, would seem to intimate that they were well known to the believers there; and if the acquaintance of the disciples with the family of Simon began with the circumstance of his being compelled to bear the cross after Jesus, then it is likely that they would also become well known to the apostles; and as much as this is intimated in Paul's Epistle to the Romans, xvi. 7, 13, with regard to Andronicus and Rufus, the remarkable expression is used, 'chosen in the Lord,'—Both appear to have been nearly related to the apostle, or at least to have become very dear to him: the 'Junia' mentioned along with the former, ver. 7, was probably of the same family, and the mother is mentioned along with Rufus, ver. 13—It would appear that salvation had early come to the whole household.

Lu. xxiii. 28. weep for yourselves, &c.—see the evil case of Jerusalem, when the Lord would bring upon it his long-threatened four sore judgments, Eze. xiv. 12—21, 'The word of the LORD came again to me, saying, 13, Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it: 14, though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls by their righteousness, saith the Lord GOD. 15, If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts: 16, though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate. 17, Or if I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I cut off man and beast from it: 18, though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves. 19, Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast: 20, though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness. 21, For thus saith the Lord GOD; How much more when I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?'

29. the days are coming—see ch. xix. 43, § 82, p. 264—They had been predicted by Moses, De. xxviii. 33—7, 'The fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat where, as we learn from Josephus, great numbers of Jews were settled. This man was therefore probably a Jew, who had come up from Cyrene to keep the passover.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 32. Him they compelled to bear his cross. 'Pressed him into their service that he might bear.' John says, xix. 17, that Jesus went forth bearing his cross. Luke says, xxiii. 26, that 'they laid the cross' on Simon, 'that he might bear it after Jesus.' There is no contradiction in these accounts. It was laid at first on Jesus, and he went forth, as John says, bearing it. Weak, however, and exhausted by suffering and watchfulness, he probably sunk under the heavy burden, and they laid hold of Simon that he might bear one end of the cross, as Luke says, after Jesus.

The assistance of some one to bear the cross after Jesus would be the more necessary if the place of crucifixion was upon a height outside the city, and not upon a comparatively level place within, as is the locality now pointed out, and to which they give the name of the Holy Sepulchre.

Lu. xxiii. 26. After Jesus. 'The original does not mean that Simon bore the cross after Jesus had ceased to bear it, but only that he bore it behind, or following Jesus.'—Lonsdale.

27. There followed him . . . . of women, &c. These were not the women who had followed him from Galilee, but the ordinary crowd collected in the streets on such occasions, and consisting, as is usually the case (and especially at an execution), principally of women.

28. Weep for yourselves, &c. This refers to the calamities that were about to come upon them in the desolation of their city by the Romans. Those who were now young wives would not be more than sixty, when, A.D. 70, the city was taken.

29. Days . . . in the which they, &c. On this saying, comp. Ho. ix., especially ver. 12—6.—See SCR. ILLUS.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xv. 21. This was doubtless one of the greatest aggravations of the sufferings of Jesus, that another should be compelled to suffer on his account: yet it may have led to Simon's acquaintance with the Saviour, and have introduced salvation to his house. The greatest cross that comes in our way can be rendered conducive to our obtaining the crown of glory.

Lu. xxiii. 27, 8. It matters little how much we grieve over the sufferings of Christ, unless they bring tears of repentance on account of our own sins, and excite us to anxious concern that posterity may escape the awful condemnation of those who reject the Saviour.

[29 ver. Such is the awful nature of sin, that it turns even the blessing of God into a curse. That people are far from being in a righteous and happy condition, among whom a childless state is to be preferred.]

* 'This pause, which no doubt was involuntary on the part of the soldiers, must have been produced by the same kind of awe which influenced the hand in the garden.'—Ibid., p. 242.

LET US . . . FEAR, LEST, A PROMISE BEING LEFT US OF ENTERING INTO HIS REST, ANY . . . SHOULD SEEM TO COME SHORT OF IT.—Heb. iv. 1.
BURELY GOODNESS AND MERCY SHALL FOLLOW ME ALL THE DAYS OF MY LIFE: AND I WILL DWELL IN THE HOUSE OF THE LORD FOR EVER.—Ps. xxiii. 6.

LUKE xxiii. 30, .1.

30 bare, and the-paps which never gave-suck. Then shall-they-begin to-say to-the moun-
31 tains, Fall on us; and to-the hills, Cover us. For if they-do these-things in a green tree, what shall-be-done in the dry?

Of two thieves.—Luke xxiii. 32.

32 And there-were-also two others, malefactors, led with him to-be-put-to-death.

Vinegar and gall offered, at Golgotha.

MATT. xxvii. 33, 4. (Ver. 32, p. 457.)	MARK xv. 22, .3. (Ver. 21, ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 33.	JOHN xix. 17. (Ver. 16, p. 456.)
33 [b]And when-they-were-come unto a-place called Golgotha,[c]	22 And they-bring him unto the-place Golgotha,	And when they-33 were-come to the place, [c]which is-called Calvary,[d]	[c]And he-bearing 17 his cross went-forth [b] into a place called the place of-a-skull,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway: 34, so that thou shalt be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. 35, The LORD shall smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head. 36, The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone. 37, And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.'—Ephraim had already experienced the truth of the prophetic threatening, Ho. ix. 12, 'Though they bring up their children, yet will I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left: yea, woe also to them when I depart from them!'—17, 'My God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him: and they shall be wanderers among the nations.'—See also as to Samaria, the capital of Israel, xiii. 16, 'Samaria shall become desolate; for she hath rebelled against her God: they shall fall by the sword: their infants shall be dashed in pieces, and their women with child shall be ripped up.'—And the like judgment was to be accomplished upon the Jews and Jerusalem, Je. vii. 15, .6, 'I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim. Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.'

Lu. xxiii. 30. Fall on us—The same had been predicted of the other house of Israel, Ho. x. 8, 'The high places also of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: the thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars; and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us.'—Similar language is used with regard to the day when the Lord ariseth to shake terribly the earth, Is. ii. 19, 'And they shall go into the holes,' &c.—See the great day of the wrath, &c., Rev. vi. 16.

31. what shall be done in the dry?—Pr. xi. 31, 'Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth: much more the wicked and the sinner.'—Is. xxx. 33, 'For Tophet is ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large: the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.' —See again the judgment of Tophet, Je. xix. 6—13, 'Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor The valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of slaughter. 7, And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives: and their carcases will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. 8, And I will make this city desolate, and an hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof. 9, And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them. 10, Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee, 11, and shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again: and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury. 12, Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet: 13, and the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink offerings unto other gods.' —See Eze. xx. 47, .8.—This the Lord had threatened of old, De. xxxii. 22, 'For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn unto the lowest hell,' &c.— The wasteful men that ruled the people in Jerusalem, Is. xxviii. 14, had disregarded the warning, ver. 15—21 —ver. 22, 'Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord GOD of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth.'—See Jno. xv. 6, margin.

Mt. xxvii. 33. Golgotha—Supposed to be a word from the same root as Galilee, and the first part of

NOTES.

Lu. xxiii. 30. Then shall they begin, &c. 'This is a strong figurative description of a people in such extremity of terror and despair, as to desire to be buried alive under their own mountains and hills, rather than meet the wrath of an offended God. This was partially and primarily accomplished when multitudes of the Jews towards the end of the siege sought to escape death by hiding themselves in the subterranean passages and sewers under the city.'—Alford.

31. If they do these things in a green tree, &c. 'The Hebrews were accustomed to figuratively call the righteous green trees, and the wicked dry ones; as if to intimate that the righteous are undeserving of punishment, as a green tree is unfit for burning.—See Abp. Newcome.—Comp. 1 Pe. iv. 18.'—Bloomf.

[32. Two other, malefactors, &c. 'Τρεῖς δὲ κακοῦργοι should be rendered "two others, malefactors."'—A. C. 'The best translation is, "two others, malefactors."'—Alford. 'As St. Luke only records our Lord's declaration that the prophecy in Is. liii. 12, which had foretold that the Messiah should be "numbered with the transgressors," ch. xxii. 37, § 87, p. 377, was on the point of being fulfilled in him, so the same evangelist alone has informed us that it was fulfilled, not only by his being crucified between two malefactors, see Mk. xv. 27, p. 462, but also by their being "led with him" to the place of crucifixion. That these malefactors were robbers, we learn from Mt. xxvii. 38, [Mk. xv. 27,] p. ib.'—Lonsdale.]

Mt. xxvii. 33. A place called Golgotha, &c. It is

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 30. Let us seek shelter in the Rock of ages cleft for us; so need we never be left to the fearful alternative of the rejectors of Christ, that of calling to the mountains to fall on us.

31 ver. If God spared not his own Son, the spotless Lamb of God, when our sins were found upon him, how can sinners hope to escape? It is only as being found in Him.

IF A MAN ABIDE NOT IN ME, HE IS CAST FORTH AS A BRANCH, AND IS WITHERED; AND MEN GATHER THEM, AND CAST THEM INTO THE FIRE, AND THEY ARE BURNED.—John xv. 6.

MATT. xxvii. 34.	MARK xv. 23.	LUKE.	JOHN xix. 17.
that is to-say, a place of-a-skull,	[d] which is, being-interpreted, The-place of-a-skull.		which is-called in-the-Hebrew Golgotha:
34 they-gave him vinegar to-drink mingled with gall: [e] and when-he-had-tasted thereof, he-would not drink.* (Ver. 35, p. 461.)	23 And they-gave him to-drink wine mingled-with-myrrh: [e] but he received it not. (Ver. 24, ib.)

Jesus is nailed to the cross.

LUKE xxiii. 33.	JOHN xix. 18.
[a] there they-crucified him, and the [b] [c] malefactors, [d]	where they-crucified him, and [b] two [c] other [d] with him, [e]
[e] one on-the-right-hand, and the-other on the-left.	[f] on-either-side one εντευθεν και εντευθεν, [f] and Jesus in-the-midst.

Jesus' prayer.—Luke xxiii. 34.

34 Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they-know not what they-do.—(See p. 461.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Gilead, 'round heap of witness,' and Gilgal, so called from being the place where the Lord rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off the Israelites, Jos. v. 9, when the great circumcising of Israel took place, ver. 2—8—Col. ii. 10, .1, 'And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power: in whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:'

Mt. xxvii. 34. vinegar . . . gall—Ps. lxix. 21, 'They gave me also gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.'—See again, Mt. xxvii. 48, p. 467, infra.

Lu. xxiii. 33. crucified—Ac. iv. 10, 'Whom ye crucified,' &c.—v. 30, 'Whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.'—An accursed death, De. xxi. 23—Gal. vi. 14, 'But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.'—To this depth of humiliation Jesus, Ph. ii. 8, 'humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.'—Col. i. 20, 'Made peace through the blood of his cross.'—1 Pe. ii. 24, 'Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree,'

34. forgive them—Thus Jesus exemplified his own precept, Mt. v. 44—see margin—so afterwards the first martyr, Ac. vii. 60—so the apostles exhorted, Rom. xii. 14—see margin—1 Pe. iii. 9, 'Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.'

know not what they do—The Roman soldiers conducted the crucifixion, Mt. xxvii. 27, p. 455, supra—see ver. 54, § 92, p. 471—Ac. iii. 17, 'I wot that through uncertain on what account this place was so called. In Lu. xxiii. 33, it is called 'Calvary,' a word of the same meaning with that here translated 'skull.' That this place 'was nigh to the city,' we learn from Jno. xix. 20, p. 460.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxvii. 34. They gave him vinegar . . . mingled with gall. The vinegar was a sour kind of light wine, and the usual beverage of the Roman soldiers. The word gall is used to denote anything bitter. The offering of it appears to be a fulfilment of Ps. lxix. 21. We may observe here how Matthew often adopts in his narrative the very words of prophecy, where one or more of the other evangelists give the matter of fact detail.]

Lu. xxiii. 33. There they crucified him. To 'crucify,' means to put to death on a cross. The manner of the crucifixion was as follows:—After the criminal had carried the cross to the place of execution, a hole was dug in the earth to receive the foot of it. The cross was laid on the ground; the person condemned to suffer was stripped, and was distended on it, and the soldiers fastened the hands and feet. After they had fixed the nails deeply in the wood, they elevated the cross with the agonizing sufferer on it; and in order to fix it more firmly in the earth, they let it fall violently into the hole which they had dug to receive it. This sudden fall must have given to the person that was nailed to it a most violent and convulsive shock, so as greatly to increase his sufferings. The crucified person was then suffered to hang commonly till pain, exhaustion, thirst, and hunger ended his life. The punishment was deemed the most disgraceful and ignominious that was practised among the Romans. It was the way in which slaves, robbers, and the most notorious and abandoned wretches were commonly put to death. As it was the most ignominious punishment known, so it was the most painful. The position of the arms and body was unnatural, the arms being extended back, and almost immoveable. The least motion gave violent pain. The nails being driven through the parts of the hands and feet which abound with nerves and tendons, created most exquisite anguish. The exposure of so many wounds to the air brought on a violent inflammation, which greatly increased the poignancy of the suffering. The free circulation of the blood was prevented. The consequence was intense pressure in the blood vessels, which was the source of inexpressible misery. The pain gradually increased. There was no relaxation and no rest. The sufferer was commonly able to endure it till the third, and sometimes even to the seventh day.

34. Father, forgive them. This also fulfilled the same prophecy, Is. liii. 12. He 'made intercession for

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 33, .4. Let us patiently endure all that our heavenly Father may appoint.

Lu. xxiii. 33. Let us not regard as alike guilty all those whom the world casts out as evil.

* 'While the preparations were making to erect the cross, the offer of the wine mixed with myrrh, which St. Matthew expresses by vinegar and gall (the former capable of being literally understood, because it may denote the ordinary beverage of the Roman soldiers, who, having to keep watch about the crosses for the rest of the day, must have brought their provisions with them; the latter a general description for something bitter), may have taken place: Ps. lxix. 21. If this potion was intended to produce a stupifying effect, and so to deaden the sensibility of pain, it might be no uncommon thing under such circumstances; or at least in the present instance it might be the act of some compassionate by-stander, whether one of the soldiers or not. To accomplish prophecy, which had specified this circumstance in particular, our Lord, as St. Matthew informs us, tasted of it; but that he might not diminish or alleviate by artificial means the entire burthen of his sufferings, as both St. Matthew and St. Mark apprise us, he would not drink of it.'—Ibid., p. 244.

I SAY UNTO YOU, LOVE YOUR ENEMIES, BLESS THEM THAT CURSE YOU, DO GOOD TO THEM THAT HATE YOU, AND PRAY FOR THEM WHICH DESPITEFULLY USE YOU, AND PERSECUTE YOU;—Matt. v. 44.

His superscription.—John xix. 19—22.*

19 And Pilate wrote a-title, and put it on the cross. And the-writing was, JESUS OF-20 NAZARETH THE KING OF-THE JEWS. This title then read many of-the Jews: for the place where Jesus was-crucified was nigh-to the city: and it-was written in-Hebrew, 21 and Greek, and Latin. Then said the chief-priests of-the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers' (the Romans).—1 Co. ii. 8, 'Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.'—Paul, who had been a bitter persecutor, obtained mercy, because he did it ignorantly in unbelief, 1 Ti. i. 13.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 19. the writing—Col. ii. 14, 'Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;'

Jesus—The Lord the Saviour, Is. xlv. 21, .2, 'A just God and a Saviour; . . . . Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else.'

of Nazareth—A name of reproach, 'separated'—Jesus was, Re. xxii. 16, 'holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners.'—The word may also mean a branch or slip out off for planting—And this is he of whom it was written, Eze. xvii. 22, .3, 'Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it:'—see the transfiguration, Mt. xvii. 1—8, § 51, pp. 51—6.

the King of the Jews—Jesus is the King of 'a royal priesthood, an holy nation,' 1 Pe. ii. 9, by whom he shall be praised, as having washed them from their 'sins in his own blood,' Rev. i. 5, 6—He is Jesus (the Saviour) 'of Nazareth,' the branch separated from his brethren, Ge. xlix. 26, whom Ephraim was at length to hear say, Ho. xiv. 8, 'From me is thy fruit found.'—And with those who are Jews in truth, Rom. ii. 29, 'whose praise is not of men, but of God,' are to be made one in Christ, Eph. ii. 14—6, 'For he is our peace, ... 15, having abolished in his flesh the enmity, ... 16, that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby:'

20. Hebrew, . . . Greek, . . . Latin—The languages through which the word came, to the people unto whom more especially it was sent, 'the lost sheep of the house of Israel,'—Je. xxxi. 3, 'The LORD hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee.'—10, 'Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.'

NOTES.

the transgressors.' This was a prayer for both Jews and Romans: the Jews ignorantly condemned him as a blasphemer, and the Romans ridiculed his pretensions to be a king.

['Our Lord passed most of the time on the cross in silence: yet seven sentences which he spoke thereon are recorded by the four evangelists, though no one evangelist has recorded them all. Hence it appears, that the four gospels are, as it were, four parts, which, joined together, make one symphony; sometimes one of these only, sometimes two or three, sometimes all sound together. Father—so he speaks both in the beginning and at the end of his sufferings on the cross: forgive them—how striking is this passage! While they are actually nailing him to the cross, he seems to feel the injury they did to their own souls, more than the wounds they gave him; and as it were to forget his own anguish out of a concern for their salvation.]

'And how eminently was his prayer heard! It procured forgiveness for all that were penitent, and a suspension of vengeance even for the impenitent.' —Wesley.

[Lu. xxiii. 34. Forgive them. 'That is, the soldiers, whose work it had been to crucify him. The πατερ, points directly at this . . . . for they were sinners even as others, and their obedient and formal performance of their duty was not without a sinful pleasure in doing it. . . . But not only to them, but to them as representatives of the sin of the world, does this prayer apply. The nominative to πατερ, is ὁ ἄνθρωπος—mankind, the Jewish nation, as the next moving agent in his death—but all of us, inasmuch as for our sins he was bruised.'—Alford.]

They know not what they do. It was done 'through ignorance,' Ac. iii. 17. Paul says, that 'had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory,' 1 Co. ii. 8. Ignorance does not excuse altogether a crime if the ignorance be wilful, but it diminishes its guilt. They had evidence, they might have learned his character, and might have known what they were doing. And thus they might be held answerable for all this.

[Jno. xix. 19. A title. 'Τίτλος answers to the Latin titulus, a diminutive from titus, derived from τίνω, and that from Τιω, which signifies primarily to hold up or out. Thus τίτλος meant simply a board fastened to anything, to hold out, i. e., notify something connected with it. Here it denotes that board (painted white, with an inscription in black letters) which was fixed up publicly to indicate the cause of any one's condemnation. The custom of affixing these τίτλοι to every malefactor about to be executed, is an oriental one of the most remote antiquity, and still retained in the East, especially in Turkey, where the τίτλος is called Yafta, a writing.'—Bloomf.]

20. In Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin. We learn from Josephus that it was usual about this period to set up public notices in different languages. This made it legible by all; they all understood one or other of these languages; and the Jews carefully brought up their children to read.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 34. Let us pray for our enemies, more especially for those who are so in ignorance, that they may be made acquainted with the truth, and be brought to know the forgiving grace of God.

[Jno. xix. 19. Let us be grateful that the writing of divorce, which was against Israel, has been taken out of the way. It was nailed to the Redeemer's cross. The Lord as King of the Jews, the remnant of Israel, had given All Israel a bill of divorce and sent her away, but now he dies, that he may take up resurrection life, and in that life receive back to his embrace her that was made 'Lo-ammi,' but who is now espoused unto the Lord according to the new and everlasting covenant.]

* 'To this part above the head the title declaring the crime for which he suffered . . . . would be attached; and of the several forms of the inscription, each of the evangelists records one: St. Matthew, as was to be expected, the native Hebrew or Aramaic; St. Mark, with equal propriety, the Latin; and St. Luke, as consistently, the Greek. It is observable, however, that none of them notices the fact of the inscription in the same place except St. Matthew and St. Mark: St. John's reason for mentioning it will appear presently; and St. Luke's is manifestly its connection with the history of the two thieves, and with their different conduct towards our Lord on the cross, respectively. The same inscription, setting him forth as the King of the Jews, that is as the Christ, produced the railing address of the one, and the expression of

THE LORD IS KNOWN BY THE JUDGMENT WHICH HE EXECUTETH: THE WICKED IS SNARED IN THE WORK OF HIS OWN HANDS.—Psa. ix. 16. UPON THE WICKED HE SHALL RAIN SNARES, FIRE AND BRIMSTONE, AND AN HORRIBLE TEMPEST:... THE PORTION OF THEIR CUP.—Psa. xi. 6.

JOHN xix. 22.

22 King of-the Jews; but that he said, I-am King of-the Jews. Pilate answered, What I-have-written I-have-written.

Lots are cast for his garments.

MATT. xxvii. 35. (Ver. 34, p. 459.)	MARK xv. 24, .5. (Ver. 23, ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 34. (See p. 459.)	JOHN xix. 23, .4.
35 And they-crucified him, and-parted his garments,	24 And when-they-had-crucified him, they-parted his garments,	And they-parted his raiment,	[a]Then the soldiers, 23 when they-had-crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to-every soldier a-part; and-also his coat: now the coat was without-seam, woven from the top throughout. They-said therefore 24 among themselves, Let-us-not-rend it, but casting lots.	casting lots upon them, what every-man should-take.	and-cast lots.	cast-lots for it, whose it-shall-be:
that it-might-be-fulfilled [b]which was-spoken by the prophet, They-parted my garments among-them, and upon my vesture did-they-cast lots.[c]			that the scripture might-be-fulfilled,[b] which saith, They-parted my raiment among-them, and for my vesture they-did-cast lots. [c]These-things therefore the soldiers did.[d] (Ver. 25, p. 465.)
	25 [d]And it-was the-third hour, and they-crucified him.

Sitting down, they watch him

MATT. xxvii. 36—.8.	MARK xv. 26—.8.
36 [a]And sitting-down they-watched him there;

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 21. said, I am King—Is. xliii. 21, 'This people have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise.'—Ps. lxxxiv. 3, 4, 'O LORD of hosts, my King, and my God. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee. Selah.'

23. crucified Jesus—Ps. xxii. 16, 'They pierced my hands and my feet.'

24. The scripture, &c.—Ps. xxii. 18, 'They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.'

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 22. What have written I have written. The same spirit of mockery of the Jews shewed itself in the title as before, see ver. 14, § 90, p. 448. They had prevailed on Pilate by urging this point, that Jesus had set himself up for a king; and Pilate is willing to remind them of it by these taunts. Hence their complaint and his answer.

23. His garments. To these the Roman soldiers were entitled, as executioners.

The coat. Called 'vesture,' ver. 24, the inner garment. Josephus, Ant. Bell. iii. ch. vii. § 4, says of the garment or coat of the high priest, that 'This vesture was not composed of two pieces, nor was it sewed together upon the shoulders and the sides. It reached from the neck to the feet, and was fastened round the throat with a clasp. It was also parted where the hands were to come out.' It seems that the Lord Jesus, the great High Priest of his people, had also a coat made in a similar manner.

24. That the scripture might be fulfilled, &c. The words here quoted are found in Ps. xxii. 18. The whole psalm is usually referred to Christ, and is a most striking description of his sufferings and death.

[No circumstance of David's life bore any resemblance to this, or to several other passages in the 22nd Psalm. So that in this scripture, as in some others, the prophet seems to have been thrown into a preternatural ecstasy, wherein personating the Messiah, he spoke barely what the Spirit dictated, without any regard to himself.]

Mk. xv. 25. It was the third hour. See on Mt. xxvii. 45, p. 466.

Mt. xxvii. 36. And sitting down they watched him there. To prevent his disciples or relatives from taking away his body, or affording any relief to the sufferer.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xix. 21, .2. The proud and crafty Jews were caught in their own snare. They wished to avoid the shame of having such a king as Jesus of Nazareth; and this shame they were forced to endure, with the farther ignominy of having their king crucified.

[23, .4 ver. Let us prize the seamless robe of the Redeemer's righteousness, and the more so as we each may have it entire, without depriving another of that in which only any of us can appear before God.]

---

the faith of the other. On this account St. Luke mentions it where he does; and, but for this, it is probable that he would not have alluded to it at all.'—(See ver. 38—43, p. 464.)—Ibid., p. 246.

[d] 'With this event we may date the arrival of the third hour of the day. For St. Mark is express that it was at this hour Jesus was crucified; and if the procession had left the prætorium soon after the second hour of the day (which is manifestly possible), then Calvary being near to the city, and probably not three quarters of a Roman mile from the prætorium itself, though we made every allowance for the slowness of its motion, and for the proceedings by the way, still the crosses might all have been set up, and the sufferers affixed to them, before the third hour was actually come.'—Ibid., p. 247.

LET ALL THOSE THAT PUT THEIR TRUST IN THEE REJOICE: LET THEM EVER SHOUT FOR JOY, BECAUSE THOU DEFENDEST THEM: LET THEM ALSO THAT LOVE THY NAME BE JOYFUL IN THEE.—Psa. v. 11.

Matt. xxvii. 37, .8.	Mark xv. 26—.8.
37 and set-up over his head his accusation [b] written, [c] This is Jesus the King of the Jews.[d]	[b] And the superscription of his accusation was written-over,[c] The King of the Jews.
38 Then were-there-two thieves-crucified with him, one on the-right-hand, and another on the-left.	[d] And with him they-crucify two thieves; 27 the-one on his-right-hand, and the-other on his left.
	And the scripture was-fulfilled, which saith, 28 And he-was-numbered with the-transgressors.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xv. 26. superscription—It was written in different languages, Lu. xxiii. 38, p. 464, infra; Jno. xix. 20, p. 460, supra, and so may have been in different forms —That recorded by John, ver. 19, p. 25., supra, which is the more full, is likely to have been that in Hebrew —To the Romans, for whom we may suppose it was written in Latin, it would be sufficient to say, as here, 'The King of the Jews.'—See on Jno. xix. 20, p. 460, supra.

28. numbered with the transgressors—Is. liii. 12.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 37. His accusation. It was a common custom to affix a label to the cross, giving a statement of the crime for which the person suffered. This is still the case in China, when a person is crucified.

It is with much propriety that Matthew calls this αιτια, accusation; for it was false that ever Christ pretended to be King of the Jews, in the sense the inscription held forth: he was accused of this, but there was no proof of the accusation; however it was affixed to the cross.—And see on Jno. xix. 19, p. 460.

38. Then were there two thieves crucified with him, &c. This was done with the view of adding to the ignominy of our Saviour's sufferings. But this act of malignity, like many other instances of the same nature, answered a purpose little intended by the authors of it. It was the fulfilment of a prophecy of Isaiah, in which, alluding to this very transaction, he says of the Messiah, 'He was numbered with the transgressors.'—Comp. Lu. xxii. 37, § 87, p. 377.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Mk. xv. 27, .8. What an effort to sink into the lowest depths of infamy, Him who was 'holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners,' who came to save a ruined world, and died that we might live! He is sent out of the world in the midst of those who seem to have acknowledged themselves as the offscourings of society—as justly condemned to the death of the cross.]

(G. 101.)—[Lesson 95, continued.]—Particulars of what transpired from the time when Jesus was affixed to the cross, to the time when he gave up the ghost.—Matt. xxvii. 39—50. Mark xv. 29—37. Luke xxiii. 35—46. John xix. 25—30.—See Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xlii. pp. 248—.52.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvii. 39, 40. Mk. xv. 29, 30. Lu. xxiii. 35. Jno. xix. — Jesus is reviled by the people, who make a mockery of his sayings, and of his very name, the Saviour; and of his being called 'the Son of God.'

— xxvii. 41–.3. — xv. 31, .2. — xxiii. 35. ———

The chief priests, scribes, and rulers, also jeer at his being called the Saviour, the 'Christ, the chosen of God,' 'the King of Israel.' They also fulfil Ps. xxii. 8.

——— ——— — xxiii. 36–.8. ———

The soldiers mock him, offering him vinegar, and making taunting allusions to the superscription, which declares him to be the King of the Jews.

— xxvii. 44. — xv. 32. — xxiii. 39. ———

The very thieves that are being crucified with Jesus revile him, one of them saying, 'If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.'

——— ——— — xxiii. 40–.2. ———

One of the thieves, rebuking his fellow, acknowledges the justice of their sentence, declares his conviction of the innocence of Jesus, and prays Jesus to remember him when He comes into his kingdom.

——— ——— — xxiii. 43. ———

Jesus assures the penitent malefactor that to-day he will be with Him in paradise.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 25.

The three Marys stand beside the cross of Jesus.

——— ——— ——— ——— — xix. 26, .7.

Jesus commends his mother and the beloved disciple to each other's love and care.

Mt. xxvii. 45. Mk. xv. 33. Lu. xxiii. 44, .5. Jno. xix. — It is noon, but there is darkness over all the land, and for three whole hours thereafter.

— xxvii. 46. — xv. 34. ———

About three in the afternoon, being the ninth hour of the Jewish day, Jesus cries as in the commencement of Ps. xxii.; which Psalm so strikingly describes the sufferings of Christ, and the latter part of it the glory that should follow.

— xxvii. 47. — xv. 35. ———

Some, turning the words he has uttered into mockery, pretend that he calls for Elias.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 28.

Jesus 'saith, I thirst.'

— xxvii. 48. — xv. 36. ——— — xix. 29.

One runs, fills a sponge with vinegar, puts it on a reed, and gives him to drink.

— xxvii. 49. — xv. 36. ———

Others cry to let him alone, and see what Elias will do for him.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 30.

Jesus having received the vinegar, says, 'It is finished:'

——— ——— — xxiii. 45. ———

The veil of the temple is rent in the midst.

— xxvii. 50. — xv. 37. — xxiii. 46. — xix. 30.

Jesus having 'cried with a loud voice,' says, 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit:' and bowing his head, he gives up the ghost.

No. 91, continued. *Passers by rail on him.

MATT. xxvii. 39—43.	MARK xv. 29—32.	LUKE xxiii. 35.
39 And they that-passed-by reviled him, wagging their heads,	29 And they that-passed by] railed-on him, [b] wagging their heads,	[a]And the people 35 stood beholding.[b]
40 and saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. [c]If thou-be the-Son of God, come-down from the cross.	and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, 30 save thyself,[c] and come-down from the cross.
41 Likewise also the chief-priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders,[d] said,	31 Likewise also the chief-priests mocking said among themselves with the scribes,	[d]And the rulers also with them derided εξεμυκτηριζον him, saying,
42 He-saved others; [e]himself he-can not save.[f]	He-saved others; himself he-can not save.	He-saved others;[e] [f]let-him-save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.[g]
[g]If he-be the-King of-Israel,	32 Let-Christ the King of-Israel-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xv. 29. railed on him—Ps. xxii. 6, 'A reproach of men, and despised of the people.'—This had been predicted by Simeon at Jesus' presentation in the temple, Lu. ii. 34, § 4, p. 26, and by himself to his disciples, Mt. xx. 19, [Mk. x. 34; Lu. xviii. 32,] § 77, p. 235.

wagging their heads—Ps. xxii. 7, 'All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head,' &c.—see also cix. 25, 'I became also a reproach unto them: when they looked upon me they shaked their heads.'

Ah—Οὐά—comp. Ps. xxii. 7—lxix. 20, 'Reproach hath broken my heart; and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for some to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.'

destroyest the temple—Their construction of his saying, Jno. ii. 19, § 12, p. 82, which they had failed to form into an accusation against him, Mt. xxvi. 61, § 89, p. 427.

30. save thyself—As if in ridicule of his name Jesus, the Saviour—so 'also the chief priests,' &c., mocked, saying, ver. 31, infra, 'He saved others; himself he cannot save.'—So 'the soldiers,' Lu. xxiii. 36, 7, infra—Mt. xxvii. 44, 'The thieves also, ... cast the same in his teeth.'

Lu. xxiii. 35. chosen of God—He was, 1 Pe. ii. 4, 'disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,'—As predicted, Is. xxviii. 16, 'Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste.'—xlii. 1, 'Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.'—And acknowledged by the Father, Mt. iii. 17, § 8, p. 59.

The Jews appear to have given the title of 'the chosen,' or 'elect of God,' to their expected Messiah, from Is. xlii. 1, and which is applied to our Lord in Mt. xii. 17, 8, § 26, p. 201.

Mt. xxvii. 42. the King of Israel—Is. xliv. 6, 'Thus saith the LORD the King of Israel, and his redeemer the LORD of hosts; I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God.'

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 39. They that passed by. In the road to or from Jerusalem; for, it seems, the crosses were placed by the way side.

Reviled. ἐβλασφήμουν. They blasphemed him.

Wagging their heads. In token of derision and insult.—See Job xvi. 4.

Mk. xv. 29. Οὐά. An interjection of derision and insult, like the Latin vah, and our hoa! oho! ah-ah! which, however, are used, like all interjections, with much latitude of signification, and are adapted to express most of the violent emotions.

Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, &c. That is, Thou that saidst, 'Thou wast able,' &c. They brought this accusation against him at his trial, being a perversion of his saying at the first passover (see Sect. xii.), when he referred to the temple, his body, which he would raise again the third day from the grave. Cruelty is obliged to take refuge in lies in order to vindicate its infamous proceedings.

Mt. xxvii. 42. He saved others; himself he cannot save. Or, Cannot he save himself? Several MSS. read this with the mark of interrogation as above; and this makes the sarcasm still more keen. He saved others from their maladies, let him now save his own life.

If he be the King of Israel. In Mark, 'Christ the King of Israel.' The Jews had been accustomed thus to speak of their coming Messiah.—See ch. ii. 2, § 5, p. 31.—Comp. Jno. i. 49, § 10, p. 73; xii. 13, § 82, p. 260.

Lu. xxiii. 35. If he be Christ.—37. If thou be the king. The priests deride the name of Messiah; the soldiers the name of King.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xv. 29. This taunt, like many of the objections brought against Christianity, arose from a misapprehension of what really was said—the words as spoken were in the course of rapid fulfilment. On this eventful day they had destroyed that of which the temple was a shadow; to be as surely, on the third day, raised up again in resurrection glory.]

31 ver. It was in order that he might save others that himself he did not save. Notwithstanding all the taunts of the chief priests, we know that he is rightly called JESUS. May we confess him to be so—by . . . being saved from our sins!

32 ver. What thanks do we owe to the patient kindness of our Redeemer, that he did not descend from the cross, but finished that which he was appointed to suffer, as well as the work given him to do! This we see, and thus we believe.

* 'The remarks of the multitude present, as specified by St. Luke: the various contumelies heaped upon Jesus, still hanging alive on the cross, partly by the passers by, according to St. Matthew and St. Mark—partly by the members of the sanhedrim, according to the three first evangelists, in whose words, as reported

THE WICKED BEND THEIR BOW, THEY MAKE READY THEIR ARROW UPON THE STRING,

THAT THEY MAY PRIVILY SHOOT AT THE UPRIGHT IN HEART.—Psa. xi. 2.

Matt. xxvii. 43.	Mark xv. 32.	Luke.
let-him-now-come-down from the cross,[4]	descend now from the cross, [4] that we-may-see[t] and believe.
[t] and we-will-believe him.
43 He-trusted in God; let-him-deliver him now, if he-will-have him: for he-said, I-am the-Son of-God.

Vinegar offered.—Luke xxiii. 36—8.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming-to him, and offering him vinegar, 37, and 38 saying, If thou be the king of-the Jews, save thyself. And a superscription also was written over him in-letters of-Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, This is the King of-the Jews.

The thieves revile him.

Matt. xxvii. 44.	Mark xv. 32.	Luke xxiii. 39.
44 [a]The thieves also, which were-crucified-with him, cast-the same-in-his-teeth ωνειδιζον.[b] (Ver. 45, p. 466.)	And they that-were-crucified-with him reviled ωνειδιζον him. (Ver. 33, p. ib.)	[b]And one of-the malefactors 39 which-were-hanged railed-on him εβλασφημει, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

The penitent thief.—Luke xxiii. 40—3.

40 But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost-not thou-fear God, seeing thou-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xv. 32. that we may see, &c.—Mt. xvi 1—4, § 47, pp. 28—30, 'A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas.'—And when this sign was given in his rising from the dead on the third day, the words were fulfilled, Lu. xvi. 31, § 68, p. 202, 'If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.'—See Mt. xxviii. 13, .3. § 93, p. 487.

Mt. xxvii. 43. He trusted, &c.—Ps. xxii. 8, 'He trusted on the Lord that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him.'—See also iii. 2, 'Many there be which say of my soul, There is no help for him in God. Selah.'—xlii. 10, 'As with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me; while they say daily unto me, Where is thy God?'—lxxi. 11, 'Saying, God hath forsaken him: persecute and take him; for there is none to deliver him.'

for he said, &c.—He commonly called himself the Son of man, ch. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43; but he was in truth the Son of God, iii. 17, § 8. p. 59, Lu. xxiii. 38. superscription—see on Jno. xix. 19—21, and Mk. xv. 26, pp. 460, .2, supra.

This is, &c.—Rev. 1. 8, 'Which is, and which was, and which is to come,'—18, 'He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore,'

40. rebuked—Even in the last extremity the penitent malefactor had thus an opportunity of obeying the royal law, which called upon him not to 'suffer sin' upon his neighbour, Lev. xix. 17.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 42. We will believe him. 'Instead of αυτῳ, him, many excellent MSS. have σ' αυτῳ, IN him: this is a reading which Griesbach and other eminent critics have adopted.'—A. C.

Lu. xxiii. 36. Offering him vinegar. It was about the time of the midday meal of the soldiers; and they in mockery offered him their posca, or sour wine, to drink with them. This was the second time wine was offered to him—the first, Mt. xxvii. 34, p. 459; and so it was again the third time, ver. 48, p. 467.

38. A superscription . . . over him. On the projecting, upright beam of the cross.

In letters of Greek, &c. See on Jno. xix. 20, p. 460.

39—43. Peculiar to Luke. Matthew and Mark have merely a general report of the same incident. All were now mocking—the soldiers, the rulers, the mob; and the evil-minded thief, perhaps out of bravado before the crowd, puts in his scoff also.

40. The other . . . . rebuked him, &c. The silence of the penitent is broken by the φαῦλος of the other compromising him in the scoff.

The other . . . . rebuked him. 'What a surprising degree was here of repentance, faith, and other graces! And what abundance of good works, in his public confession of his sin, reproof of his fellow-criminal, his honourable testimony to Christ, and profession of faith in him, while he was in so disgraceful circumstances, as were stumbling even to his disciples! This shews the power of Divine grace. But it encourages none to put off their repentance to

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvii. 43. It is not always by what happens to individuals on this side the grave that we can see how worthy our God is to be trusted in. Let us not be too hasty in drawing the conclusion that men are forsaken of God when we see them subjected to suffering and shame—there is another season of reckoning for which may we ever stand prepared.]

Lu. xxiii. 38—8. Let us beware of mocking our King by presenting what is unworthy his acceptance; but let us yield him the homage of our hearts, and therewith that with which we are intrusted for the relief of the distressed members of his body.

39 ver. People, priests, rulers, soldiers, and thieves, all made a jest of the Saviour—and all because that rather than save himself he would bear that which was necessary to the salvation of his people.

by St. Matthew, there is an unintentional coincidence with Ps. xxii. 8—partly by the soldiers who were keeping watch over him, coming to him, according to St. Luke, and offering him their posca to drink (a circumstance which seems to imply the arrival of their usual dinner hour, the fifth hour of the day) with an allusion to the inscription on the cross—and partly by one of the malefactors, crucified along with him; which last circumstance St. Matthew and St. Mark express in general terms; but St. Luke, with a stricter

THERE IS NO FAITHFULNESS IN THEIR MOUTH: THEIR INWARD PART IS VERY WICKEDNESS: THEIR THROAT IS AN OPEN SEPULCHRE; THEY FLATTER WITH THEIR TONGUE.—Psa. v. 9.

LUKE xxiii. 41—.3.

41 art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward
42 of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, 43 remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily
I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise. [Ver. 44, p. 466.]

Jesus commends his mother to the care of John.—John xix. 25—.7.* [Ver. 24, p. 461.]

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the 26 wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother and

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 41. nothing amiss.—The innocence of Jesus was acknowledged both by Judas, who betrayed him, Mt. xxvii. 4, § 89, p. 435, and by the judge that condemned him, Lu. xxiii. 14, .5, § 90, p. 449.

42. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, &c.—Rom. x. 10, 'For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.'

remember me—see the prayer of Job as looking down into the grave and forward to the resurrection ch. xiv. 13, 'O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!'—And of the psalmist, Ps. xxv. 6, 7—see also the prayer of the publican, Lu. xviii. 13, § 73, p. 217.

when thou comest—ch. xii. 8, § 63, p. 308, 'Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:'—see also Jno. vi. 39, 40, § 43, p. 329; 1 Th. iv. 16—.8; 2 Ti. i. 12—The coming of this kingdom had been contemplated in Ps. xxii., the first part of which was so strikingly fulfilled in the sufferings of Christ upon the cross, ver. 1—21: in the latter part, which regards the glory that should follow, ver. 22—31, after speaking of the kingdom, ver. 27—.9, it is said, ver. 30, .1, 'A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation. They shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this.'

43. Jesus said—Mi. vii. 18, 'Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy.'—The Son of man came to save the lost, Lu. xix. 10, § 80, p. 247—1 Ti. i. 15, 'A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners;'—He. vii. 25, 'Able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him,' with me—see on Jno. xiv. 3, § 87, p. 381; xvii. 24, § ib., p. 404—2 Co. v. 8, 'To be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.'—Ph. i. 23, 'Having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:'

in paradise—2 Co. xii. 4, 'Caught up into paradise,'—Rev. ii. 7, 'The tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.'

Jno. xix. 25. mother—It had been said to her by Simeon, Lu. ii. 35, § 4, p. 26, 'Yea, a sword,' &c.

NOTES.

the last hour; since, as far as appears, this was the first time this criminal had an opportunity of knowing anything of Christ. And his conversion was designed to put a peculiar glory on our Saviour, in his lowest estate, while his enemies derided him, and his own disciples either denied or forsook him.' —Wesley.

['οὐδὲ alludes to the multitude—Dost thou too not fear God? ὅτι (as thou oughtest to do), seeing that, &c.'...—Alford.]

Lu. xxiii. 41. And we. He classes himself with the other in condemnation, but not in his prayer afterwards.

42. Into thy kingdom. The original is, 'When thou comest in thy kingdom.'—See the same, Mt. xvi. 28, § 50, p. 44.

He acknowledges him a king, and such a king, as after he is dead can profit the dead. The apostles themselves had not then so clear conceptions of the kingdom of Christ.

43. And Jesus said, &c. It is remarkable how, in three following sayings, the Lord appears as Prophet, Priest, and King:—as Prophet to the 'daughters of Jerusalem'—Priest, interceding for forgiveness—King, acknowledged by the penitent thief, and answering his prayer.

[Verily.... To-day, &c. 'The Lord surpasses his prayer in his answer; the ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, σήμερον, is the reply to the uncertain ἅταν of the thief—σήμερον, "This day;" before the close of this natural day. The attempt to join it with λέγω σοι, considering that it not only violates common sense, but destroys the force of the Lord's promise, is surely something worse than silly.—See below. Μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔσῃ, can bear no other meaning than "thou shalt be with Me" in the ordinary sense of the words, "I shall be in paradise, and thou with Me." ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ. On these words rest the whole exegesis of the saying. What is this paradise? The word is used of the garden of Eden by the LXX., Ge. ii. 8, &c., and subsequently became, in the Jewish theology, the name of that part of Hades, the abode of the dead, where the souls of the righteous await the resurrection. But it was also the name for a supernal or heavenly abode.—See 2 Co. xii. 4; Rev. ii. 7. The former of these is, I believe, here primarily to be understood; but only as introductory, and that immediately to the latter.' —Alford.]—See § 69, ADDENDA, p. 203, 'Hades,' 3rd par.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxiii. 40—.2. Faith in Christ should be accompanied by correspondent fruit—it was so even in the thief upon the cross. He performed his duty to his neighbour by reproving him for his sin, and calling him to repentance towards God. He confessed the Saviour to be the Righteous One, the Messiah, who ought to be acknowledged by every true fearer of God; and, finally, with regard to himself, he performed his duty, in commending himself in death to the care of his Redeemer.]

[In the case of the penitent thief upon the cross, we are shewn what that baptism is which the Lord requireth,—'not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,' 1 Pe. iii. 21. The penitent had the reality without the figure, and entered into peace, whereas those who had the figure without the reality were left in condemnation.]

Let the penitent look alone to the Saviour, who can give him instant and entire salvation, although it may be, as in the case of the thief upon the cross, at the eleventh hour.

attention to historical precision, distinctly attributes to the right person; specifying the rebuke which he received from his comrade, as well as what subsequently passed between this penitent and believing thief and our Lord himself.

'The sixth hour, or noon, was now at hand; that is, the preceding transactions had extended through almost the space of three hours.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xliii. p. 248.

* 'Now the affecting incident, related solely by St. John, and regarding our Lord's commendation of his mother to his care, (both having hitherto been present, whether they both continued to be so still or

IF YE ABIDE IN ME, AND MY WORDS ABIDE IN YOU, YE SHALL ASK WHAT YE WILL, AND IT SHALL BE DONE UNTO YOU.—John xv. 7.
I WILL BE GLAD AND REJOICE IN THEE: I WILL SING PRAISE TO THY NAME, O THOU MOST HIGH.—Psa. ix. 2.

JOHN xix. 27.

the disciple standing-by, whom he-loved, he-saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy 27 son! Then saith-he to-the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his-own home. [Ver. 28, p. 467.]

Darkness from the sixth to the ninth hour.

MATT. xxvii. 45—.7. (Ver. 44, p. 464.)	MARK xv. 33—.5. (Ver. 32, p. ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 44, .5. (Ver. 43, p. 465.)
45 Now from the sixth hour there-was darkness over all the land unto the-ninth hour.	33 [a] And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.[b]	44 And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour. [b] And the sun was darkened,[c] 45
46 [c] And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani?[d]	34 And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eloi, Eloi, lamma sabachthani?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 26. thy son—referring to the beloved disciple, whom Mary was now to regard as her son, in place of him of whom it is written, 2 Co. v. 16, 'Yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.'

27. thy mother—It was to the beloved disciple Jesus committed the care of his mother, that he might fulfil to her the commandment, Ex. xx. 12—see ADDENDA, p. 469, 'Of Mary,' &c.

Lu. xxiii. 45. the sun was darkened—Is. l. 3, 'I clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering.'—Am. viii. 9, 'And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord GOD, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day:'

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 26. Woman. Thus, as at the marriage in Cana, when his official independence of her was to be testified, no now, He addresses her as Woman!

[27. Behold thy mother! 'The Romanist idea that the Lord commended all his disciples, as represented by the beloved, to the patronage of his mother (!!), is simply absurd. The converse is true. —Comp. Acts i. 14.'—Alford.]

Lu. xxiii. 44. Darkness over all the earth. 'The darkness began at the sixth hour, about our twelve o'clock at noon, and lasted till the ninth hour, which answered to our three o'clock in the afternoon.'—A. C.—So Lonsdale and Hale.—See Greswell, infra.

Mt. xxvii. 45. There was darkness. This obscuration of the sun must have been preternatural, not only from the opposition of the moon to the sun, but also from its extent and duration, since it is known, that no natural eclipse of the sun ever occasions a total darkness above twelve or fifteen minutes. Wherefore it must have been produced by the Divine power in a manner which cannot be explained.

Ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν, all the land, may mean only the land of Judæa; but many passages in history of good credit determine it to mean all the parts of the world where the sun was not below the horizon.

46. About the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice. 'Our Lord's great agony probably continued these three whole hours, at the conclusion of which he thus cried out, while he suffered from God himself what was unutterable. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?—Our Lord hereby at once expressed his trust in God, and a most distressing sense of his letting loose the powers of darkness upon him, withdrawing the comfortable discoveries of his presence, and filling his soul with a terrible sense of the wrath due to the sins which he was bearing.'—Wesley.

[Eli, Eli, &c. Quoted from Ps. xxii. 1. These are not the precise Hebrew words, but in the Syro-Chaldaic dialect, which accounts for their being misunderstood by some of the by-standers, ver. 47, who probably came from a distance, and did not well understand the dialect spoken at Jerusalem.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xix. 25—.7. Let the bereaved mother, in place of indulging unavailing sorrow, turn her motherly regard upon the beloved disciple, and let the beloved disciple take under his especial care those who are widows indeed.]

[Mt. xxvii. 46. How stumbling must it have been to the faltering faith of the disciples to hear their Master in the agonies of death complain of being forsaken by God! yet even in the utterance of this exclamation he was giving further evidence of being that very Christ who had been spoken of in the Psalms, and by the prophets.]

It becomes us to attend to this inquiry of our dying Redeemer. Searching in the light of New Testament scripture for God's reply to the words of Jesus, 'Why hast thou forsaken me?' we may be well assured that it was because our sins were laid upon him, that Jesus was abandoned to such suffering, and so much cruel mocking upon the accursed tree.

not,) may most fitly be considered to have taken place. (It is probable that St. John immediately conducted the mother of our Lord home, as soon as she had been commended to him; and that this is the reason why her name is not specified among those of the other women who were present at our Lord's expiration, and when he was taken down from the cross, and committed to the grave: though it appears that she was actually present at the crucifixion, as well as they.) The next fact, recorded in his gospel, was one which a comparison with the rest proves to have followed the ninth hour, though but by a little; and the preternatural darkness, interposed between the sixth hour and the ninth, may justly be regarded as incompatible with the occurrence of such a transaction after the former but before the latter; or while that darkness was still in being.

'The darkness in question is resolvable into no physical cause of known operation; for the moon was not yet at the full, though considerably past the change; which began, according to St. Luke, a little before or a little after the sixth hour, at the time when, on the passover day, the evening sacrifice would begin to be got ready in the temple: and the effect of which was to obscure the sun, which before must have been shining brightly, and to cover the face of the land until the ninth hour, when all the three evangelists make it to cease.'—Ibid., p. 249.

'With the time of the arrival of the ninth hour, and the dispersion of the darkness, when the offering of the paschal sacrifices was ready to begin, Jesus uttered the first verse of the twenty-second Psalm, as recorded by St. Matthew and St. Mark..... After this, and with no sensible delay, he exclaimed, "I thirst."

MATT. xxvii. 47.	MARK xv. 35.	LUKE.
that is to say, My God, my God, why hast-thou-	[a] which is, being-interpreted, My God, my God, why hast-thou-forsaken εγκατελιπες me?	forsaken εγκατελιπες me?
47 Some of-them that- stood there, when-they- heard that, said, This man calleth-for Elias.	35 And some of-them that- stood-by, when-they- heard it, said, Behold, he- calleth Elias.

Jesus said, 'I thirst.'—John* xix. 28. (Ver. 27, p. 466).

28 After this, Jesus knowing that all-things were-now'-accomplished τετελεσται, that the scripture might-be-fulfilled, saith, I-thirst.

Sponge offered. 'It is finished.'

MATT. xxvii. 48, .9.	MARK xv. 36.	LUKE xxiii. 45.	JOHN xix. 29, 30.
			[a] Now there-was-set a- 29 vessel full of-vinegar: [b] and they
48 [b] And straightway one of them ran, and took a-spunge, and filled it with-vinegar, and put-it-on a-reed, and gave-'him'- to-drink.	36 And one ran and filled a-spunge- full of-vinegar, and put-it-on a-reed, and gave-'him'- to-drink,		filled a-spunge with-vinegar, and put-it-upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.
49 The rest said, Let-be, let-us-see whether Elias will- come to-save him.[c]	saying, Let-alone; let-us-see whether Elias will- come to-take-'him'-down.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xv. 34. My God, my God, &c.—The first words of the psalm which so remarkably expresses the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow, Ps. xxii. 1, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?'—See on Lu. xxiii. 42, p. 465, supra.

forsaken me—In the Hebrew, God is said to leave or forsake any person when he suffers him to be under great miseries—so Isaiah, of Zion, xlix. 14; and the psalmist, Ps. x. 11; xliii. 2: which he explains, xxii. 2, 3, 4, 'I cry in the daytime, but thou hearest not;'

35. Elias—predicted to come, Mal. iv. 5, 'Before the . . . . great and dreadful day of the LORD:'—see Mt. xvii. 10—2, § 51, p. 57.

NOTES.

In the words, 'My God,' there speaks the same union with the Divine will, and abiding in the everlasting covenant purpose, as in those, 'Not my will, but thine.'

[A person suffering thus, might address God as if he was forsaken—given up to extreme anguish. He himself had also said that this was 'the power of darkness,' Lu. xxii. 53, § 88, p. 421. When he was tempted, iv. 12, it was said, ver. 13, that the tempter departed from him for a season. There is no improbability in supposing that he might be permitted to return at the time of his death, and increase the sufferings of the Lord Jesus. In what way this might be done, can be only conjectured. He died in our place, on our account, that he might bring us near to God. It was this doubtless that caused his intense sufferings. It was the manifestation of God's hatred of sin to his soul, in some way which he has not explained, that he experienced in this dread hour. It was suffering endured by him, that was due to us; and suffering by which, and by which alone, we can be saved from eternal death.]

Mt. xxvii. 47. This man calleth for Elias. Elijah was daily expected to appear as the forerunner of the Messiah, whose arrival, under the character of a mighty prince, was, throughout the East, generally supposed to be at hand.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

48. And straightway, &c. This was on account of the words 'I thirst.'—See Jno. xix. 28. Mark's account is somewhat different; there the same person gives the vinegar and utters the scoff which follows. This is quite intelligible; contempt mingled with pity, would doubtless find a type among the bystanders. This is the third instance of vinegar being offered to Jesus on the cross. His bodily state had greatly changed since the time indicated at Lu. xxiii. 36, p. 464; and what was then offered in mockery might well be now asked for in the agony of death, and received when presented, as in the text.

Jno. xix. 29. Put it upon hyssop. 'There are several species of the hyssop; one of which (and no doubt the one here meant) has a woody, reedlike stalk, of two feet or more in length, and which is mentioned by the Rabbinical writers as bound up in bundles for firing. "Hyssop," then, is here put for "a reed of hyssop," (hence called by Matthew and Mark a reed, as being rough and reedy;) and this, if of the length above mentioned, might easily enable a person to reach the mouth of Jesus on the cross, which was so low, that the feet of the crucified person were not more than a yard from the ground.'—Bloomf.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xix. 28. Jesus thirsted upon the cross that he might be to us the fountain of joy; yea, that from us might flow rivers of living water.

Mt. xxvii. 48, .9. Let us learn to bear with patience what is perhaps the most difficult to bear—unjust reproaches and cruel mockings: even the dying groans of the Saviour were turned into a jest.

* 'In consequence of this exclamation, the spunge filled with vinegar, that is, with the posca of the soldiers present, was placed upon a wand or stick of hyssop wood . . . . and so offered to him. This fact by which the twenty-first verse of the sixty-ninth Psalm was fulfilled, related succinctly by St. Matthew and by St. Mark, is given in detail by St. John.'—Ibid., p. 250.

[a] When this was over, which would be a little after the ninth hour, Jesus, knowing that whatever had been

O YE SONS OF MEN, HOW LONG WILL YE TURN MY GLORY INTO SHAME? HOW LONG WILL YE LOVE VANITY, AND SEEK AFTER LEASING?—Psa. iv. 2. BUT KNOW THAT THE LORD HATH SET APART HIM THAT IS GODLY FOR HIMSELF: THE LORD WILL HEAR WHEN I CALL UNTO HIM.—Psa. iv. 3.

MATT.	MARK.	LUKE xxiii. 45.	JOHN xix. 30.
			[c]When Jesus therefore had- 30 received the vinegar, he said, It-is-finished Τετελεσται: [d] [d]and the veil of-the temple was-rent in-the-midst.

Jesus gave up the ghost.

MATT. xxvii. 50.	MARK xv. 37.	LUKE xxiii. 46.	JOHN xix. 30.
50 Jesus, when-he-had-cried again with-a-loud voice,	37 And Jesus cried- with αφεις a-loud voice,	[e]And when-Jesus- 46 had-cried with-a-loud voice, he-said, Father, into thy hands I-commend my spirit: and having-said thus, [f]	and yielded-up the ghost	and-gave-up-the-ghost	he-gave-up-the-ghost	[f]he-bowed his head, and gave-up the ghost
αφηκε το πνευμα. (Ver. 51, ℘ 92, p. 470.)	εξεπνευσε. (Ver. 38, ib.)	εξεπνευσεν. (Ver. 47, p. 471.)	παρεδωκε το πνευμα. (Ver. 31, p. 473.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 30. It is finished—see on ch. iv. 34, § 13, p. 95; xvii. 4, § 87, p. 399—Ps. xxii. 31, 'That he hath done'—Da. ix. 24, 'To finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness,'—Rom. x. 4, 'For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.'—See He. ix. 11—28; x. 1—14; xii. 2; Je. xxx. 24—With regard to those who refuse to flee to Jesus from the wrath to come, it shall yet be said, Eze. xxxix. 8, 'Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God; this is the day whereof I have spoken.'—Rev. x. 7, 'In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.'—xi. 18, 'The nations were angry, and thy wrath is come,'—xvi. 17, 'And there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It is done.'—xxi. 6, 'And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega,' &c.

Lu. xxiii. 45. veil—Ex. xxvi. 31—He. ix. 3, 'After the second veil, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all;'—see also vi. 19; x. 20—Is. xxv. 7, 'He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations.'—xl. 5, 'And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together:'—so when that veil is destroyed, at the sounding of the seventh trumpet, it is said, Rev. xi. 19, 'And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament:'—see before on 'finished.'

46. into thy hands, &c.—see Ps. xxxi. 5, margin—so Stephen, Ac. vii. 59—1 Pe. ii. 23, 'committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:'

gave up the ghost—1 Pe. iii. 18, 'Christ... hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:'

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 30. It is finished. Τετελεσται expresses the fulfilling of that course of humiliation, obedience, and suffering, which our Lord had undertaken. From this time, 'the joy that was set before him' begins.

Mt. xxvii 50. When he had cried . . . with a loud voice. 'To shew that his life was still whole in him. He dismissed his spirit. So the original expression may be literally translated: an expression admirably suited to our Lord's words, Jno. x. 18, 'No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself.' He died by a voluntary act of his own, and in a way peculiar to himself. He alone of all men that ever were, could have continued alive, even in the greatest tortures, as long as he pleased, or have retired from the body whenever he thought fit.'—Wesley.

Yielded up the ghost. 'Αφηκε το πνευμα, 'dismissed his spirit.' 'This is the view of Doddridge, Clarke, and others. The notion that our Lord voluntarily hastened his death by an act of his Divine power, dying, not as exhausted by his sufferings, but by cutting them short, is incorrect. If it were so, if our Lord died not as the effect of his crucifixion, but of an exertion of his Divine power, he was not put to death by the Jews, and he did not, as St. Paul says, become "obedient unto the death . . . of the cross," although he died upon it; but the Jews "killed the Prince of life." The passage (Jno. x. 18) teaches us, that although possessing the power to prevent men from inflicting death on him, he would not exert it, but surrender himself to their will; for to lay down his life was surely to yield up himself to be put to death by his enemies.'—R. Watson.—So Bloomf.—See Greswell, p. 469, infra.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS

[Jno. xix. 30. 'IT IS FINISHED:'—'He hath done'—are the concluding words of Psalm xxii., the first words of which, as uttered by our Saviour upon the cross, had been turned into ridicule. As truly as Christ endured the sufferings expressed in that psalm, ver. 1—21, so truly will the glory described in ver. 22—31, be perfected. The promised salvation was infallibly secured by the doing and dying of our blessed Redeemer. Let us be followers of him who, when he hanged upon the cross, had that support to his soul which the world knew not of. He meditated upon the word; and 'for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame,' He. xii. 2.]

Lu. xxiii. 45. The veil is indeed rent. The scene of sacrifice and the glorious high throne are beheld in one view. Let us rejoice that life and immortality have been brought to light by the gospel. 2 Tim. i. 10.

[46 ver. The first and last words of Christ upon the cross are words of prayer—first for his murderers, and lastly as committing his spirit into the hands of his Father. Let us learn from our Lord's example to begin and end all our works in God. And that we may truly do so, may a knowledge of why our Redeemer so suffered be bestowed upon us—that we may turn altogether from sin unto the love of God our Saviour, and so into humble and holy devotedness to the will of our Father in heaven. May we be conformed unto the image of him who loved us and gave himself for us—who esteemed it his meat and his drink to do the will of Him who sent Him.]

---

predicted respecting his sufferings before his death had now been accomplished, exclaimed, according to St. John, τετελεσται—and then, that the accomplishment of those things which had been predicted, as to happen after his death, might next begin, uttering a loud voice, according to St. Matthew and St. Mark—and repeating the prayer also, Into thy hands I commend my spirit, Ps. xxxi. 5, according to St. Luke—and simply bowing the head, to denote the instant extinction of life, according to St. John—all which circumstances might have followed upon each other in this order—gave up the ghost—as all the accounts are agreed.

INTO THINE HAND I COMMIT MY SPIRIT: THOU HAST REDEEMED ME, O LORD GOD OF TRUTH.—Psa. xxxi. 5.
I WILL BOTH LAY ME DOWN IN PEACE, AND SLEEP: FOR THOU, LORD, ONLY MAKEST ME DWELL IN SAFETY.—Psa. iv. 8.

ADDENDA.

OF MARY THE MOTHER OF JESUS.

'The first hint which I received on the point, is at the last verse of the first chapter of St. Matthew. I saw that Jesus was called the "first-born" son of Mary; and that Joseph did not live with her, as her husband, "till" the birth of Jesus. The two words which I here underline, appear to me significant. But this time also I would not hasten to a conclusion, and I liked better to believe, before a still more evident proof to the contrary, that Mary had no other children besides Jesus.

'Such was the tendency of my mind after reading the first chapter of St. Matthew; and I greatly hoped that nothing, in advancing in the perusal, would oblige me to resist it. It was almost with terror that on reaching chap. xiii. ver. 46, (§ 31, p. 240,) I encountered these words:—"As Jesus was speaking to the people, his mother and his brothers, who were outside, asked to speak to him." "His brothers!" I cried; "if Jesus had brothers, Mary then had several children! No, no; it must not be thus! No doubt the word brother here means cousin; let us pass over it, and may God grant that no other difficulties may recall me to the argument!"

'I went on, and immediately found the following lines, ver. 47—50—"And some one said to Jesus, Behold, thy mother and thy brothers are without, and ask to speak to thee. But Jesus answered him, Who is my mother? and who are my brothers? And stretching out his hands over the disciples he said, Behold my mother and my brothers! for whoever does the will of my Father who is in heaven, he is my brother, my sister, and my mother!"

'This close of the story only added to my embarrassment. For if, I reflected, the word brother means cousin in the first line, it ought also to mean cousin in the second. And in that case, Jesus would seriously have addressed to the crowd this burlesque phrase: "He who does the will of my Father who is in heaven, the same is my cousin!" This supposition is ridiculous, absurd, impossible! This is to clothe in a grotesque form that thought—so touching in the noble expression of the Saviour—that we are brothers and sisters of Jesus Christ.

'You perceive it here becomes necessary to choose between two translations and their consequences: either, Mary was accompanied by her nephews, therefore it is to cousins that Jesus compares the apostles, and thereby we lose the beautiful name of his brothers; or else, she was surrounded by her own children, but thus Mary loses her glorious title to a perpetual virginity. For my own part, I confess that if one must absolutely make the election, I would rather think that Mary had several children than disinherit the whole church, the Christians of all ages, of the beautiful prerogative of being brothers and sisters of Jesus Christ.

'Nevertheless, we do not so easily renounce the ideas held since our tenderest infancy, and nourished during a whole life; although my mind was convinced, my heart was not won. I still inwardly resisted, and I hoped for an almost miracle to restore to me my former illusion.

'I turned the leaf, and I read the following chapter. Would you believe it? To my great surprise, I saw at verses 55 and 56, (§ 37, p. 287,) that not only brothers of Jesus were mentioned, but sisters too. The word cousin might possibly have been put for brother, for the Greek term (as a note in your Bible informs me) will bear both senses; but, alas! the word sister absolutely cannot be taken in the sense of cousin; for . . . these two words are never used interchangeably in the original text of the New Testament. You may, therefore, yourself judge of the force of my argument, and that without understanding either Hebrew, Greek, or Latin. I reflected:—There are in this passage the Greek words adelphos and adelphe; now, since adelphe always in the scriptures signifies sister and never cousin, is it not evident that adelphos here means brother, and not cousin?

'As for the rest, one reflection suggested by good sense settles the question: to make the word adelphos signify brother, it need only be taken in its ordinary sense; but, to make it mean cousin, it must be understood in its exceptional sense. If those who wrote the Bible, had believed the perpetual virginity of Mary, surely they would have avoided the ambiguity.

'Directly I had admitted this interpretation, a thousand other details came to the confirmation of my new opinion. Thus in a passage which I am examining, the Nazarenes, astonished that Jesus, who had passed his childhood among them, should to-day be working miracles, exclaim: "Is not this the son of the carpenter? is not his mother called Mary? his brothers, James, Joses, Simon, and Jude? and are not his sisters also with us?" (ver. 55..6, p. 287.)

'Now, when neighbours enumerate the members of a family, is it not natural to think that, after having named the father and mother, they would mention the names of the brothers and sisters rather than those of the cousins?

'Finally, if Jesus were the only child of Mary, why does not the holy scripture say so? It says, indeed, and that several times, that Jesus is the only Son of God; why does it not say also, at least once, that he is the only son of Mary? If the words are different, it is because the facts are different also. We must suppose that authors, inspired by the Holy Spirit, knew how to choose their expressions, and that they speak with equal truth when they call Jesus only Son of God, and first-born son of Mary.

'From these considerations we must necessarily come to this conclusion:—Mary, after having conceived by the Holy Spirit, carried in her virgin womb a body free from pollution, and brought into the world the only Son of God, had accomplished her supernatural task, and from that time re-entered into the ordinary course of nature; i.e., became in all things the chaste wife of her husband Joseph.

'Now then, according to this thirteenth chapter of St. Matthew, Jesus had at this period four brothers and some sisters. The plural of the word sisters represents at least the number two; I therefore draw this final inference: Mary had as children:—

Jesus, her first-born;
His four brothers; and his two sisters;

in other words, Mary was mother of seven children.'
—The Portrait of Mary in Heaven, translated from the French of Rev. Napoleon Roussel.

'It must be evident, that in this separation of his soul from his body our Lord did not wait for the natural progress of dissolution, but exerted his Divine power, in anticipation of the effect: the reason of which was the necessity of so timing his death, that in all the circumstances, which took place afterwards, the scriptures might be fulfilled, as they had been fulfilled before; that he might be taken down from the cross and committed to the grave before sunset—without which, and if he was to rise again on the Sunday, he could not, even according to the Jewish computation of time, have been previously three days and three nights in the earth; that, when the soldiers came to accelerate the deaths of the parties crucified, they might find him dead already, and so offer no violence to his body, but what instead of infringing, was rather the fulfilment of, prophecy, Ex. xii. 46; Ps. xxxiv. 20: A bone of him shall not be broken—and, "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced," Zec. xii. 10.

'Simultaneously with the expiration of Christ, the vail of the tabernacle, according to the three first evangelists, is rent in twain, (so simultaneously, that it might be mentioned, as it is by St. Luke, even before the mention of the expiration itself,) the earthquake ensues—the rocks are rent—the graves are opened—and the bodies of many holy men are resuscitated—though their entering into Jerusalem, and appearing alive unto many, do not take place until after the resurrection of our Lord himself, who was the proper first-fruits of such as slept: all which circumstances, though they may be implicitly alluded to in St. Luke, are specified distinctly by St. Matthew only; the confession of the centurion, in relating which both the others agree with St. Luke, is extorted from him—and the people who had come to the spectacle return, according to St. Luke, with minds changed, and beating their breasts, as under the consciousness of some great sin.'—Ibid., p. 252.

CHRIST WAS ONCE OFFERED TO BEAR THE SINS OF MANY; AND UNTO THEM THAT LOOK FOR HIM SHALL HE APPEAR THE SECOND TIME WITHOUT SIN UNTO SALVATION.—Heb. ix. 28.

SECTION 92.—(G. 102, ..3.)—[Lesson 96.]—PARTICULARS OF WHAT TRANSPIRED AFTER JESUS GAVE UP THE GHOST, UNTIL HE WAS TAKEN DOWN FROM THE CROSS, AND BURIED, AND A GUARD SET UPON THE SEPULCHRE.—Matt. xxvii. 51—66. Mark xv. 38—47. Luke xxiii. 47—56. John xix. 31—42.—See Greswell, Vol. III. pp. 252—..6.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxvii. 51. Mk. xv. 38. Upon the Redeemer committing his spirit into the hands of his Father, 'the veil of the temple' is 'rent in twain from the top to the bottom;'

— xxvii. 51–3. ——— The earth quakes, the rocks are rent, the tombs are thrown open; and, after the resurrection of Jesus, 'many bodies of the saints which slept' arise, go into the holy city, and appear unto many.

— xxvii. 54. — xv. 39. Lu. xxiii. 47. The centurion seeing creation as if responding to the expiring cry of Jesus, acknowledges the hand of God in it, saying, 'Certainly this was a righteous man;' in truth 'this was the Son of God.'

——— ——— — xxiii. 48. The people who have come to look at the crucifixion, seeing what has happened, smite upon their breasts and return to the city.

— xxvii. 55, .6. — xv. 40, .1. — xxiii. 49. Jesus' acquaintance, and the women who followed from Galilee, ministering unto him, stand afar off: among them are Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joses, and Salome the mother of James and John.

——— ——— Jno. xix. 31. The Jews request Pilate to have the legs of the crucified broken, that so their death may be hastened, and their bodies removed ere the next day, that being a sabbath of peculiar solemnity.

——— — xix. 32. The soldiers accordingly break the legs of the two that are crucified with Jesus.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 33, .4. Finding Jesus already dead, they break not his legs; but to make sure that he is dead, one of the soldiers thrusts a spear into his side, causing to flow therefrom blood and water.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 35–7. These things seen by the evangelist, he deems it important to notice, inasmuch as it had been predicted of our paschal sacrifice, 'A bone of him shall not be broken;' and of our Messiah 'They shall look on him whom they pierced.'

Mt. xxvii. 57, .8. Mk. xv. 42, .3. Lu. xxiii. 50–.2. Jno. xix. 38. Evening being come, Joseph of Arimathæa, an honourable counsellor, a good man, and just, one who had not consented to Jesus' death, but rather was his disciple, though secretly for fear of the Jews, with unwonted courage goes now to Pilate, and asks that he may be given the body of Jesus.

— xxvii. 58. — xv. 44, .5. ——— — xix. 38. Pilate having ascertained from the centurion that Jesus had been dead some time, commands that the body be delivered to Joseph.

——— ——— ——— — xix. 39. Nicodemus also, who at first came to Jesus by night, now comes, bringing with him an hundred weight of a mixture for embalming his body.

— xxvii. 59. — xv. 46. — xxiii. 53. — xix. 40. Joseph having received the body, they wrap it with the spices in fine linen.

— xxvii. 60. — xv. 46. — xxiii. 53, .4. — xix. 41, .2. There was in the place of crucifixion a garden, and in the garden a new tomb belonging to Joseph, in which no one had hitherto been buried: being the eve of the sabbath, for convenience they lay the body of Jesus there, and roll a great stone to the door of the sepulchre.

— xxvii. 61. — xv. 47. — xxiii. 55, .6. The women from Galilee having seen where the body of Jesus is laid, return and prepare spices and ointments; but although anxious to complete what they deem needful with regard to Jesus' burial, they rest on 'the sabbath day according to the commandment.'

— xxvii. 62–.4. On the evening of the succeeding day, the sabbath being past, the chief priests and Pharisees come to Pilate, telling him they remember Jesus, whom they call a 'deceiver,' had, when alive, said something respecting his rising again after being dead three days; they therefore request that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, in order to prevent his disciples stealing him away, and then reporting him to be risen from the dead.

— xxvii. 65. Pilate grants their request.

— xxvii. 66. They go, and make 'the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

No. 92.—(G. 102.)—The veil of the temple rent.

MATT. xxvii. 51.
(Ver. 50, ∛ 91, p. 468.)

51 And, behold, the veil of the temple was-rent in twain from the-top to the-bottom;

MARK xv. 38.
(Ver. 37, ib.)

And the veil of the temple was- 38
rent in twain from the-top to the-bottom.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 51. veil of the temple—The veil of the tabernacle was made 'of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims,' and was hung upon four pillars overlaid with gold—Within the veil was placed the ark of the testimony; the veil thus divided the holy place from the most holy, Ex. xxvi. 31—.3—The high priest was not at all times to come into the holy place, within the veil, before the mercy seat, lest he should die, Le. xvi. 2—was to come with 'a censer full of burning coals . . . . from off the altar,' and incense to burn thereon, and the blood of atonement, to sprinkle the mercy seat, ver. 12—.5—Called 'the second veil,' He. ix. 3—x. 19, 20, 'Having . . . . . brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;'—Is. xxv. 7, 'He will destroy . . . . the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations.'—Upon the sounding of the seventh trumpet, Rev. xi. 15—.8—ver. 19, 'the temple of God was opened in heaven, and [the veil being removed] there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament:'—In the vision of the glory, ch. iv., both the veils being removed, the 'seven lamps of fire' outside the inner veil, and the 'sea of glass' outside the first veil, are all seen in connection with the throne or mercy seat, ver. 5, 6, &c.

NOTE.

Mt. xxvii. 51. The veil of the temple. There were two veils of the temple; one at the entrance into the holy place, the other between the holy place and the sanctuary, called 'the inner veil;' and it is called, He. ix. 3, 'the second veil,' to distinguish it from a curtain which was hung at the entrance of the holy place. It is particularly described, Ex. xxvi. 31—.3, and is the veil here intended. It was of the strongest contexture, the richest materials, and the finest workmanship.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvii. 51. The way into the holiest of all hath been opened unto us, through the rent veil of the Redeemer's flesh. Let us embrace the privilege of the royal priesthood, and draw near unto God, through Him in whom the Father is well pleased.]

[The veil concealing the mystery of the kingdom has been rent, and we can now look into that state which was prefigured by the throne and cherubim, and of which such glorious things have been spoken by the prophets; we see that it lies beyond the grave

HE IS OUR PEACE, WHO HATH MADE BOTH ONE, AND HATH BROKEN DOWN THE MIDDLE WALL OF PARTITION;—Ephes. ii. 14.

HAVING ABOLISHED IN HIS FLESH THE ENMITY, EVEN THE LAW OF COMMANDMENTS CONTAINED IN ORDINANCES, ETC.—Ephes. ii. 15.

MATT. xxvii. 51. MARK.

and the earth did-quake, and the rocks rent;

The graves are opened, &c.—Matt. xxvii. 52, 53.

52 and the graves were-opened; and many bodies of-the saints which-slept arose, 53, and came-out of the graves after his resurrection ἐγερσιν, and-went into the holy city, and appeared-ᵉ ἐνεφανισθησαν-unto many.

The centurion's confession.

MATT. xxvii. 54—.6. MARK xv. 39—41. LUKE xxiii. 47—.9. [Ver. 46, § 91, p. 468.]

54 Now when-the centurion 39 ᵃAnd when-ᵇthe centurion, Now when-ᵇthe centurion- 47 which stood over against him,-ᵃ ᵇ and they that-were- with him,-watching Jesus, saw saw saw the earthquake, and those-things that-were-done,ᵉ ᶜ that he-so-cried-out, what was-done, and-gave-up-the-ghost,ᵈ ᵈ they-feared greatly,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 51. did quake—Ps. xviii. 6, 7, 'In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: he heard my voice out of his temple, ... then the earth shook and trembled;'—Not only the earth is to be shaken, but also heaven, He. xii. 26, 27—Great earthquake at the opening of the sixth seal, Rev. vi. 12, &c. — immediately before the seventh trumpet, xi. 13—after the pouring out of the seventh vial, xvi. 18.

52. graves were opened—A pledge of the triumph referred to, Is. xxv. 8, 'He will swallow up death in victory;'—1 Co. xv. 55, 'O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?'

slept, &c.—The term sleep is sometimes applied to those who have died in the Lord, 1 Co. xv. 51; 1 Th. iv. 14—see also Jno. xi. 11, § 58, p. 128, 'Our friend,' &c.

arose— An assurance that a resurrection will be given to the saints who sleep, Is. xxvi. 19; Jno. v. 25, 29, § 23, p. 178; 1 Co. xv. 20; Rev. xx. 4—6.

53. the holy city—Jerusalem was so called, Ne. xi. 1—The Jews 'call themselves of the holy city,' Is. xlviii. 2—In his temptations, the devil took Jesus up into the holy city, and placed him on a pinnacle of the temple, Mt. iv. 5, § 9, p. 64—The holy city is yet to arise and sit down, being indeed made holy, Is. lii. 1, 2—The new Jerusalem that cometh down from God out of heaven is called 'the holy city,' Rev. xxi. 2.

54. the centurion, &c.—Jesus had prayed for those who crucified him, see Lu. xxiii. 34, § 91, p. 459, and the prayer seems to have been answered in the conversion of at least some of those who were engaged in his crucifixion— The very centurion was led to glorify God, and not only to acknowledge that Jesus 'was a righteous man,' ver. 47, but that 'Truly this man was the Son of God,' Mk. xv. 39, infra.

NOTES.

Mt. xxvii. 51. The earth did quake. This is thought to have been the very great earthquake, which happened in the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, by which twelve cities in Asia were destroyed. It was a general token, in various places, and to all nations, of God's indignation against the wickedness of mankind, as Ps. xviii. 7; Joel iii. 16.

[About one yard and a half distant from the hole in which tradition says the foot of our Saviour's cross was fixed, is to be seen a fissure in the rock supposed to have been made by the earthquake which happened when the Son of God resigned his spirit. This cleft, as to what now appears of it, is about a span wide, at its upper part, and two deep, after which it closes; but it opens again below (as may be seen in a chapel contiguous to the side of what is called Calvary), and runs down to an unknown depth in the earth. That this fissure was made by the earthquake that happened at our Lord's passion, there is only tradition to prove; but that it is a natural and a genuine breach, and not counterfeited by any art, is very evident; for the sides of it fit like two tallies to each other; and yet it runs in such intricate windings as could not well be counterfeited by art, nor arrived at by any instruments.]

52. And the graves were opened. 'Graves, or sepulchres, were most commonly made among the Jews in solid rocks, or in caves of rocks. The graves were opened at the moment of the death of the Lord; but inasmuch as he is the first-fruits from the dead—the Resurrection and the Life—the bodies of the saints in them did not arise till He rose, and having appeared unto many after his resurrection—possibly during the forty days—went up with him into glory.' —Alford.

Many bodies of the saints, &c. See on ch. xii. 38, § 31, p. 238. It would appear, that these saints were disciples who had died but lately: for when they went into the city, they were known to be saints by the persons who saw them; which could not well have happened had they not been their contemporaries. Christ was the first-fruits from the dead; and there is given us a comfortable assurance, that when he comes in glory, his saints will come with him: a pledge of which appears to have been given at our Lord's resurrection.

'The purpose of this temporary resuscitation (for such I conceive it was) seems to have been to convince the unbelieving Jews of the Messiahship of Jesus, since they themselves admitted that some of the dead should be resuscitated at the time of the Messiah.'—Bloomf.

54. The centurion. The Roman officer who superintended the execution.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

—we see that 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God:' but that in immortal blessedness it will be inherited by the many sons Christ is leading into glory. —And see margin.]

Mt. xxvii. 52. Jesus hath by his death thrown open the gates of the grave, and prepared for the safe return of all who are willing to be disenthralled from the dominion of death, and given through Christ a blessed immortality.

53 ver. A pledge of the resurrection of all the saints was given, not only in Christ rising from the dead, but by his giving the dead to hear his voice and live, come out of their graves, and enter into the holy city, and appear unto many.

[May we be enabled to evidence the truth of our trust in Christ, by now rising from the death of sin, having our citizenship in heaven; and by our appearing unto many as the redeemed of the Lord.]

MAY THE WORD OF GOD, TESTIFYING OF A CRUCIFIED REDEEMER, BE PROVED ABUNDANTLY POWERFUL FOR BREAKING THE HARD ROCK IN PIECES.

WITH THE CLEARER LIGHT WHICH GOD HAS GRANTED US, LET OUR HOPE AND OUR AFFECTIONS BE PLACED UPON THINGS ABOVE.

IF YE BE REPROACHED FOR THE NAME OF CHRIST, HAPPY ARE YE; FOR THE SPIRIT OF GLORY AND OF GOD RESTETH UPON YOU, ETC.—1 Pet. iv. 14.

IF ANY MAN SUFFER AS A CHRISTIAN, LET HIM NOT BE ASHAMED; BUT LET HIM GLORIFY GOD ON THIS BEHALF.—1 Pet. iv. 16.

MATT. xxvii. 55, .6.	MARK xv. 40 .1.	LUKE xxiii. 48, .9.
		he-glorified God,
saying,	he-said,	saying,
Truly this was the-Son of-God.	Truly this man was the-Son of-God.	Certainly this was a-righteous man.
		And all the people that-came- 48 together to that sight θεωριαν, beholding the-things which-were-done, smote their breasts, and-returned.
55 And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed [f] Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto-him: [g]	40 There-were also women looking-on afar off:	And all his acquaintance, 49 and the women that-followed [f] him from Galilee,
		[g] stood afar-off, beholding these-things. [h] (Ver. 50, p. 474.)
56 among which was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joses, and [i] the mother of Zebedee's children. [k] (Ver. 57, p. 474.)	[h] among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome; [i]
	41 [k] (who also, when he-was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto-him;) and many other-women which came-up-with him unto Jerusalem. (Ver. 42, ib.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 48. smote, &c.—so the publican, ch. xviii. 13, § 73, p. 217.

Mt. xxvii. 55. ministering—Mk. xv. 41—Lu. viii. 3, § 30, p. 233, 'ministered unto him of their substance.'

—Ph. iv. 3, 'I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel,'

56. James and Joses—In ch. xiii. 55, § 37, p. 237, they are called 'his brethren.'

NOTES.

Mk. xv. 39. Truly this man, &c. It is extremely probable the centurion was present at the trial of our Lord, and knew that he was delivered to death for maintaining that claim, though nominally condemned for sedition.

[Lu. xxiii 47. Certainly this was a righteous man. 'The general sense is, "Truly this man was innocent:" and if innocent (nay, more, blessed, just, truthful), he was the Son of God, for he had asserted it.'—Alford.]

48. Smote their breasts. In token of alarm, fear, and anguish. They saw the judgment of God; they saw the guilt of the rulers; and they feared the further displeasure of the Almighty.

[Mt. xxvii. 55 Many women. The frequent mention which is made in the evangelists of the generous and courageous zeal of some pious women in the service of Christ, and especially of the faithful and resolute constancy with which they attended him in these last scenes of his sufferings, might very possibly be intended to obviate that haughty and senseless contempt which the pride of men, often irritated by those vexations to which their own irregular passions have exposed them, has in all ages affected to throw on that sex which, probably in the sight of God, constitute by far the better half of mankind; and to whose care and tenderness the wisest and best of men generally owe and ascribe much of the daily comfort and enjoyment of their lives.]

Ministering unto him. Attending him, and providing for his bodily wants, out of their own worldly means.—Comp. Lu. viii. 2, 3, § 30, p. 233.

56. Mary Magdalene. See on Lu. viii. 37, § 29, p. 230; Jno. xii. 3, § 81, p. 253.

'Mary the mother of our Lord is not mentioned as being now present—she had probably been led away by the beloved apostle [disciple?] immediately on the speaking of the words. "Behold thy mother!"'—Alford.—See on Jno. xix. 25—.7. § 91, p. 465.

Mary the mother of James and Joses. 'Mary the sister of our Lord's mother, and the wife of Cleophas.'—Lonsdale.

Mk. xv. 40. James the less. 'Called the son of Alphæus,' Mt. x. 3, [§ 27, p. 207].—Lonsdale.

Mt. xxvii. 56. The mother of Zebedee's children. 'Salome,' Mk. xv. 40.—Lonsdale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvii. 54; Lu. xxiii. 47. If by those signs the centurion was forced to confess that God had acknowledged the claims of Jesus, surely much more might we, who have seen added to these signs eighteen centuries' fulfilment of his predictions with regard to Jerusalem and the Jews. Surely God would not during so many ages have attested the truth of the words of Jesus, to the utter and continued rejection of his long highly-favoured people, unless they had been in the wrong, and he truly a righteous man, the very Christ, whom God the Father hath sealed.]

Lu. xxiii. 48. Do we remain comparatively unimpressed by that awful scene—the death of the Son of God—which so deeply affected the beholders; or do we only see in it the guilt and danger of the Jews, who said, 'His blood be on us, and on our children'? Let us remember that it was for us that he suffered—that our sins were laid upon him; that he 'bare our sins in his own body on the tree.'

[Mt. xxvii. 55. Even those who had previously ministered to Jesus, stood afar off in the hour of his death. Let us, while we may, minister to the servants of God, so will we have the less cause for self-reproach when we would alleviate suffering, but cannot.]

Jesus is pierced.—John xix. 31—37.

[Ver. 30, ¥ 91, p. 468.]

31 The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath-day, (for that sabbath-day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.*
32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was 33 crucified with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already,
34 they brake not his legs: but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forth-35 with came thereout blood and water. And he that saw it bare record, and his record is 36 true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe. For these things

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 31. the preparation—see Mk. xv. 42, infra, p. 474.

bodies should not remain, &c.—De. xxi. 22, 23, 'And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree: his body shall not remain all night upon the tree,' that sabbath day was an high day—being the fifteenth of Nisan, as well as the seventh day of the week—see Le. xxiii. 5—8.

legs might be broken, &c.—They would thus have prevented his answering to the type of the paschal lamb—see ver. 36, infra.

34. blood and water—1 Jno. v. 6, 'This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood.'—As to the blood, see He. ix. 13, 22; x. 19—22; 1 Jno. i. 7; Rev. i. 5; vii. 14; and the water, Ps. li. 7; Eze. xxxvi. 25; Zec. xiii. 1; Ac. xxii. 16; 1 Co. vi. 11; Eph. v. 26; Tit. iii. 14; iii. 5—8; 1 Pe. iii. 21.

35. he that saw it bare record, &c.—Peter also calls himself, 1 Pe. v. 1, 'a witness of the sufferings of Christ,'—1 Jno. v. 9, 'If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater:'—And by the Spirit, the water, and the blood, God testifieth still to the truth of the atonement, ver. 8—10.

that ye might believe—see ch. xx. 31, § 100, p. 518.

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 31. The preparation. παρασκευη. Namely, the προσάββατον. The afternoon of the day, on which the passover was eaten in the evening.

[An high day. μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα. 'A very solemn festival;' as being not only an ordinary sabbath, but the extraordinary one on the 15th of Nisan, from whence they reckoned the weeks to Pentecost; and also the day for presenting and offering the sheaf of new corn: so that it was a treble solemnity.']

Their legs might be broken. It was a common custom to break the legs or other bones of criminals on the cross: and this appears to have been a kind of coup de grace, the sooner to put them out of pain.

[34. And forthwith came thereout blood and water. 'Some difference of opinion exists—1. As to the intent of the evangelist in this attestation. It has been generally supposed that he meant to establish the fact of the real death of Christ; while some (as Dr. Burton) think it was his intent to refute the Docetæ, who held that Jesus had not a real body, but was only a phantom. 2. As to the phenomenon itself, the earlier commentators in general regard it as miraculous; but the researches of modern pathologists have established the fact, that the effusion would have taken place in any case, being the natural consequence of such a wound; and that it is, under all circumstances, decisive evidence of the actual death of Christ. Medical writers are, indeed, not quite agreed whether by αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ be meant the small portion of water found in the pericardium, called lymph, or (which is more probable) the sanguineous and aqueous liquor found in the cavities of the pleura after a mortal wound, or that follows a stab in the pleura, when the pericardium has been pierced, which is always mortal; consequently a proof that if Christ had not been already dead, this wound would certainly have extinguished the last remains of life; which was doubtless the intent of the soldier.'—Bloomf.]

This fact it was of importance to prove, that it might not be pretended that he had only suffered a syncope, or had fainted.

The piercing appears to have taken place because his legs were not broken; and, as the law in this case stated that the criminals were to continue on the cross till they died, the side of our Lord was pierced to secure the accomplishment of the law; and the issuing of the blood and water appears to be only a natural effect of the above cause, and probably nothing mystical or spiritual was intended by it. However it affords the fullest proof that Jesus died for our sins. Dr. Lightfoot thinks that there is a reference here to the rock in the wilderness which Moses smote twice, and which, according to the Jews, Shemoth Rabba, fol. 122, 'poured out blood at the first stroke, and water at the second.' Now St. Paul says, 1 Co. x. 4, 'that Rock was Christ;' and here the evangelist says, the soldier 'pierced his side, and forthwith came thereout blood and water.' St. John therefore, in what he asserts in the 35th and 36th verses, wishes to call the attention of the Jews to this point, in order to shew them that this Jesus was the true Messiah, who was typified by the rock in the wilderness: 'He knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe,' ver. 35.

Those who read this account may believe (comp. ch. xx. 31, § 100, p. 518) that Christ really suffered in the flesh. It is probable that the issuing of blood and water from the wound in the side of Jesus was recorded by St. John, to prove the reality of Christ's suffering in the flesh, against those heretics, who asserted that Christ had a human body only in appearance; and who are on that account condemned in St. John's epistles.—See 1 Jno. iv. 2, 3; 2 Jno. ver. 7; also 1 Jno. v. 6, 8; He. ii. 14.'—Lonsdale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xix. 31—4. How very scrupulous people may be about the outward observances of religion, especially with regard to holidays, and yet all the time be plotting mischief against the Lord of the sabbath!

The prophecy had been so far literally fulfilled, in that Jesus had not been put to death by stoning, in which case his bones must have been broken; still it is resolved by the Jews, and granted by the governor, that his legs shall be broken. This, however, only tends to the further accomplishment of what was predicted respecting the circumstances of his death. Let us be thankful for the abundant evidence we are given by prophecy, of the foreknowledge of God attesting the truth of our salvation.

34 ver. Let us have recourse to the fountain opened to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. May we trust in the atoning blood of Jesus, and have our uncleanness removed by the washing of water by his purifying word.

* 'Josephus will shew that, agreeably to the Divine mandate (B. Jud. iv. v. 2, De. xxi. 22, 23), this would have been done, under similar circumstances, before sunset even upon a common day; and much more before sunset on the eve of a high day.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xiii. p. 253.

LET US DRAW NEAR WITH A TRUE HEART IN FULL ASSURANCE OF FAITH, HAVING OUR HEARTS SPRINKLED FROM AN EVIL CONSCIENCE, AND OUR BODIES WASHED WITH PURE WATER.—Heb. x. 22.

JOHN xix. 37.

were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken 37 συντριβησεται. And again another scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they pierced.

*Jesus taken down from the cross.

MATT. xxvii. 57—9. (Ver. 56, p. 472.)	MARK xv. 42—6. (Ver. 41, ib.)	LUKE xxiii. 50—3. (Ver. 49, p. ib.)	JOHN xix. 38—40.
	42 And now		"And after this 38
57 When the even was come,	when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath, there came a rich man of Arimathæa, named Joseph,	43 Joseph of Arimathæa, an honourable counsellor,	And, behold, there was a good man named Joseph, a counsellor;	Joseph and he was a good man, and a just: (the same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathæa,	51 of Arimathæa,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 36. shall not be broken.—This had been foreshewn of Jesus our passover—see the type, Ex. xii. 46; Nu. ix. 12—Ps. xxxiv. 20, 'He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken.'—Which type and prophecy were fulfilled, notwithstanding the evil design of his enemies, ver. 31, supra.

37. They shall look on him, &c.—The prediction referred to is Zec. xii. 10—as the result of the pouring out of 'the spirit of grace and of supplication' 'upon the house of David' (or the royal priesthood), 'they shall look upon me (saith the blessed Saviour) whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him' (Judah), for whom Jesus bade the daughters of Jerusalem weep, Lu. xxiii. 28, § 91, p. 457.—'In the midst of the throne' was beheld 'a Lamb as it had been slain,' Rev. v. 6.

38. Joseph.—He seems to have worthily kept in memory the name of Joseph the son of Jacob, who was so remarkable a type of Christ, and upon whose posterity the blessing in Christ was more especially promised to come, as predicted both by Jacob, Ge. xlviii. 15—20; xlix. 22—6, and by Moses, De. xxxiii. 13—7.

Mk. xv. 43. an honourable counsellor, &c.—so Joseph was made to Pharaoh, over all the land of Egypt, Ge. xli. 33—45.

Lu. xxiii. 50. a good man, and a just—so in the sight of God was Joseph in his stewardship, Ge.

NOTES.

Jno. xix. 36. A bone of him shall not be broken. What can offer so probable a reason for the otherwise unaccountable injunction, that not a bone of the paschal lamb should be broken, as that it might point to the sacrifice of that lamb as a type of the sacrifice of Christ?

[There is evidently a correspondence between the type and antitype. And as the passage referred to at the next verse, in the margin, is (as Lampe and Tittman prove) plainly prophetic of the piercing of the Redeemer's side, so we have here both a correspondence of type and antitype, and a fulfilment of prophecy, viz., of the piercing.]

37. Again another scripture, &c. 'Comp. Rev. i. 7, from which passage it appears that this prophecy, Zec. xii. 10, will have its complete fulfilment at our Lord's second coming.'—Lonsdale.

Mt. xxvii. 57. When the even was come. This even ended at sunset, when, according to the Jewish mode of computation, the sabbath day began. The Jews were forbidden in their law to suffer the bodies of persons who were hanged upon a tree to remain there all night.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., Jno. xix. 31, supra.

[When the even.—'This must have been about three o'clock, or a little after; for our Lord having expired about three o'clock, ver. 46, § 91, p. 466, and the Jewish passover beginning about four, it was necessary that Joseph, who would not fail to eat the passover at the usual time, should have obtained and buried the body of Christ some time before four o'clock. But such was the general consternation, occasioned by the prodigies that took place on this most awful occasion, that we may safely conjecture nothing was done in order, and perhaps the passover itself was not eaten at the usual hour, if at all that day.'—A. C.]

[Mk. xv. 43. Arimathæa.—'This place, in Luke called "a city of the Jews," is supposed to have been the same with "Ramathaim," or "Ramah," mentioned as the city of the parents of Samuel, 1 Sa. i. 19. "In the tribe of Benjamin."'—A. C.—See GEOG. NOTICE, p. 479.]

An honourable counsellor. The word honourable

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xix. 35—7. Let us be truly grateful for the assurance we are given that Jesus our passover, who was crucified for us, is indeed the Christ of God.

[36 ver. Let us compare type and antitype, prediction and fulfilment. Is it not presumption to suppose that our faith is independent of those means which God has provided for its establishment and sustenance?—that we can, without serious spiritual injury to ourselves, allow the contents of either the Old or the New Testament to remain a dead letter?]

37 ver. Soon may that scripture be fulfilled in mercy, 'They shall look upon me whom they have pierced.' Zec. xii. 10. Awful must be the case of those who refuse to look upon Christ until they see him coming to judgment.

Mk. xv. 42. Let us not merely rest on the sabbath, but make due preparation for doing so; that both we ourselves and those under our care may do so according to the commandment.

[Lu. xxiii. 50—2. Among the twelve disciples

* 'The time which these particulars (Mt. xxvii. 57—61, [Mk. xv. 42—7; Lu. xxiii. 50—6; Jno. xix. 38—42]) would take up may be defined in general as comprehended between the ninth hour of the day and sunset—after the one but before the other—and perhaps equi-distant from both. And here the events of the fourteenth of Nisan would properly expire.'—Ibid., p. 254.

MOST MEN WILL PROCLAIM EVERY ONE HIS OWN GOODNESS: BUT A FAITHFUL MAN WHO CAN FIND? THE JUST MAN WALKETH IN HIS INTEGRITY: HIS CHILDREN ARE BLESSED AFTER HIM.—PROV. XX. 6, 7.

MATT. xxvii. 58.	MARK xv. 44, 45.	LUKE xxiii. 52.	JOHN xix. 39.
		a-city of-the Jews:
who also himself was-Jesus'-disciple:	which also waited-for the kingdom of God,	who also himself waited-for the kingdom of God,[f]	[f]being a-disciple of Jesus, but secretly κεκρυμμενος for fear of-the Jews,[g]
58 he went	came, and-went-[A]in boldly τολμησας	[5]This man went[A] 52	besought to Pilate, and-begged	unto Pilate,[i] and craved	unto Pilate, [i]and-begged[B]	Pilate
			[A]that he-might-take-away
the body of Jesus.	the body of Jesus.	the body of Jesus.	the body of Jesus[l]
	44 [l]And Pilate marvelled if he-were-already-dead: and calling-unto him the centurion, he-asked him whether he-had-been-any-while-dead. 45 And when-he-knew it of the centurion,[m]
[m]Then Pilate commanded the body to-be-delivered.[n]	he-gave the body [n]to Joseph.[o]		and Pilate gave-him-leave.
		[o]He-came therefore, and took the body of Jesus. And there-came 39 also Nicodemus, which at-the-first came to Jesus by-night, and-brought a-mixture of-myrrh and aloes, about an-hundred pound weight.[p]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

xxxix. 1—9—ver. 2, 'And the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man;'—When tempted to unfaithfulness, he said, ver. 9, 'How . . . . can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

Lu. xxiii. 51. waited for the kingdom of God—Was anxiously desirous of the appearance of the Messiah; he was 'a good man, and a just;' he had nobly set himself against the wicked purposes of the sanhedrim; he was 'a disciple of Jesus,' though he was not openly his follower, because he feared the Jews, Jno. xix. 38—Jacob, when blessing his sons, says, Ge. xlix. 18, 'I have waited for thy salvation, O LORD.'—See in the blessing of Judah the king described, ver. 8—12; and the kingdom in the blessing of Joseph, ver. 22—6.

Jno. xix. 38. for fear of the Jews—ch. xx. 19, § 95, p. 498, 'The doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews,' when Jesus after his resurrection first appeared in the midst of them.

Mk. xv. 43. boldly, &c.—The disciple who at first had been the boldest, became in the time of trial the most cowardly of all, Mt. xxvi. 70, § 89, p. 431—And he who had secretly been a disciple, was at last the most courageous—1 Ki. xx. 11, 'Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.'

44. the centurion—Mt. xxvii. 54, p. 471, supra.

45. gave the body to Joseph—He was, Is. liii. 9, 'with the rich in his death;'—see the rich preparation for his interment, Lu. xxiii. 56, p. 477; Jno. xix. 39.

Jno. xix. 39. Nicodemus—He, like Joseph of Arimathæa, appears to have now come forward boldly, and not as at the first, ch. iii. 1, 2, § 12, p. 83.

myrrh and aloes—see* Ge. l. 2—13.

NOTES.

here is not a mere title of office, but is given in reference to his personal character, as being a man of integrity and blameless life.

Mk. xv. 43. Went in boldly unto Pilate. Rather, 'taking courage.' The word translated 'boldly,' seems to be added with reference to his previous conduct, who was, according to Jno. xix. 38, 'A disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews,'

The disciples of Jesus had fled, and if they had not, they had no influence with Pilate. Unless there had been a special application to Pilate, in behalf of Jesus, his body would have been buried that night in the common grave with the malefactors: for it was a law of the Jews that the body of an executed man should not remain on the cross on the sabbath.

Mt. xxvii. 58. Begged the body of Jesus. Malefactors were buried ignominiously; but at the request of relatives or friends, permission was given to bury an executed criminal in the regular way. Cicero reckons it among the greatest crimes of Verres, that when in Sicily, he sold this permission for gold; and Tacitus reckons it among the cruelties of the last years of Tiberius, that he refused burial to those who were executed by his orders.

Mk. xv. 44. Pilate marvelled if, &c. Wondered if he was dead; or wondered that he was so soon dead. It was not usual for persons crucified to expire under two or three days, sometimes not until the sixth or seventh. The bodies of persons executed for treason (and generally of crucified persons) were seldom buried.

Jno. xix. 39. Myrrh and aloes. It should seem (as the best commentators are agreed) that we are not to suppose the myrrh and aloes (or the latter at least) to have been in a liquid state (namely, the distillation from the trees), but to have been the wood of those trees, dried and pulverized. This, indeed, appears by the great weight of the spices (100 lb. troy weight). The body could not have been regularly embalmed, since there was not time sufficient for that; but spices and unguents were brought to wash and anoint the body, and to envelop it in aromatic drugs.

An hundred pound weight. 'Spices were some-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

chosen by Christ to be his apostles, there was one Judas Iscariot; and belonging to the Jewish sanhedrim by whom Jesus was condemned, there was at least one Joseph of Arimathæa. Let us discriminate, not only class, but also individual character and conduct.]

[Mk. xv. 43. God can raise up instruments to accomplish his good pleasure even from quarters the least expected. Who would have thought that Joseph, who seems not to have openly confessed Christ when living, should yet boldly come forward in order to provide for the dead body of the Redeemer!]

[It is worthy of notice, that it was a Judas who betrayed Christ to be crucified, and that it was a Joseph who came forward in behalf of Christ crucified.]

Jno. xix. 39. Let us pray that we may escape the error both of Peter and of Nicodemus—may we meekly but boldly confess Christ at all times and in all circumstances.

THE SPIRIT OF MAN IS THE CANDLE OF THE LORD, SEARCHING ALL THE INWARD PARTS OF THE BELLY.—Prov. xx. 27.
IT IS BETTER, IF THE WILL OF GOD BE SO, THAT YE SUFFER FOR WELL DOING, THAN FOR EVIL DOING.—1 Pet. iii. 17

GOD FORBID THAT I SHOULD GLORY, SAVE IN THE CROSS OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, BY WHOM THE WORLD IS CRUCIFIED UNTO ME, AND I UNTO THE WORLD.—Gal. vi. 14.

MATT. xxvii. 59.	MARK xv. 46.	LUKE xxiii. 53.	JOHN xix. 40.
	46 And he-bought fine-linen,
59 [r]And when-Joseph-had-taken the body,[q]	and took-him-down, [r]down,	And he-took-it-down,	53 Then took-they 40 the body of Jesus,
[r] he-wrapped it in-a-clean linen-cloth, [s]	and-wrapped him in-the linen,	and-wrapped it in-linen,	and wound it in-linen-clothes [s]with the spices, as the-manner-of-the Jews is to-bury.

Jesus is laid in the tomb.

MATT. xxvii. 60, .1.	MARK xv. 46, .7.	LUKE xxiii 53—.6.	JOHN xix. 41, .2.
			[c]Now in the place 41 where he-was-crucified there-was a-garden; and in the garden a-new sepulchre, wherein was-never man-yet-laid.
60 and laid it [t]in his-own new tomb, which he-had-hewn-out in the rock: [u]	and laid him in a-sepulchre which was hewn-out of a-rock,	and laid it in a-sepulchre that-was-hewn-in-stone, wherein never man before was laid.	There laid-they 42 Jesus therefore [t]
[d]and he-rolled a-great stone to-the door of-the sepulchre, and-departed.[v]	and rolled a-stone unto the door of-the sepulchre.		[c]because-of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh-at-hand.[d] (Ch. xx. 1, § 93, p. 489.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xix. 41. the place—'of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha,' ver. 17, § 91, p. 458—Probably not the place which is usually pointed out as the place of crucifixion, but the mount south of Jerusalem, now called the hill of evil counsel, over the valley of the son of Hinnom, into which the bodies of malefactors were cast, and where they were burnt—The north face of that hill appears to have been used by the rich for the interment of their dead, and seems to be the place indicated, Is. xxii. 16—It is full of sepulchres hewn in the rock, Mk. xv. 46—As being buried on the side of Gehenna, and in the tomb of Joseph, Jesus would most literally fulfil the prediction, Is. liii. 9, 'He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death;'

Mk. xv. 46. a stone—This stone is afterwards referred to as being sealed, Mt. xxvii. 66, p. 478—as 'rolled back' by the angel, xxviii. 2, § 93, p. 485.

NOTES.

times used in such quantities as to form a heap or bed, on which the dead body was laid. Thus it is said of Asa, 2 Chr. xvi. 14, they 'laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours and divers kinds of spices,' &c. Both materials appear to have been pulverized (the wood by crisping or burning?), and strewed in the folds of the linen in which the body was wrapped—perhaps the whole body was encased, after the wrapping, in the mixture, and an outer wrapper fastened over all. The proceeding was hurried, on account of the approaching sabbath: and apparently an understanding entered into with the women, that it should be more completely done after the sabbath was over.'—Alford.

[A great quantity was used at the funeral of Aristobulus; and it is said that five hundred servants bearing aromatics attended the funeral of Herod.—See Josephus, Ant. b. xv. c. 3, s. 4; and b. xvii. c. 8, s. 3: and fourscore pounds of spices were used at the funeral of R. Gamaliel the elder.]

Jno. xix. 40. Wound it, &c. See ch. xi. 44, § 58, p. 132.

To bury. ἐνταφιάζειν. 'To prepare for sepulture, either by anointing, rolling up, or in any other way.'

Mt. xxvii. 60. In his own new tomb. In this tomb Luke and John inform us that no man had been laid. This was so ordered, in the providence of God, doubtless, that there might be no suspicion about his identity when he rose; that it might not be alleged that another person had risen; or that he was raised by touching the bones of some prophet, as happened to the corpse that touched the bones of Elisha, 2 Kl. xiii. 21. Further, by being buried here, an important prophecy was remarkably fulfilled, Is. liii. 9, 'He made his grave . . . . with the rich in his death.' A circumstance apparently at variance with part of the same prophecy, ver. 12, which spoke of him as 'numbered with the transgressors,' and unlikely to happen to one who was crucified as a malefactor.

Hewn out in the rock. The ancients had not that indecent and unwholesome custom which now prevails, of crowding all their dead in the midst of their towns and cities, within the narrow precincts of a place reputed sacred, much less of amassing them in the bosom of their fanes and temples. The burying places of the Romans were at a distance from their towns; and the Jews had their sepulchres in gardens (Jno. xix. 41), in fields, and in the sides of mountains. In the former of these places, we find that Joseph of Arimathæa, mindful of his mortality, had hewn out of the rock in his garden a sepulchre, in which he intended his own remains should be deposited. We are informed by modern travellers that numerous excavations of this kind remain to the present day, and not only afford places of shelter for the wearied traveller; but are likewise hiding places for thieves and murderers, who sally forth from them to commit their nocturnal depredations.

[This circumstance relative to the burial of our Lord, and the place in which he lay, minute as it may appear, completely obviated the absurd objection of the Jews, that 'his disciples . . . . stole him away;' since, from such a tomb as this, there was no possible way by which his body could be removed, except by the mouth or door of the cave, at which (as we are afterwards told) a guard was placed, and where a great stone was rolled. It is worthy of

MATT. xxvii. 61.	MARK xv. 47.	LUKE xxiii. 54—.6.	JOHN.
		54 And that-day was the-preparation, and the-sabbath drew-on ἐπέφωσκε.
61 And there was ſ Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, § sitting over-against the sepulchre. ♣	47 And Mary Magdalene and Mary § the mother of-Joses ♣ beheld where he was-laid. (Ch. xvi. 1, § 93, p. 484.)	55 And the-women also ſ ♣ which came-with him from Galilee, followed-after, and ♣ beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was-laid. And they-returned, 56 and-prepared spices and ointments; and rested ἡσυχασαν the sabbath-day according-to the commandment. (Ch. xxiv. 1, § ib., p. 488.)

(G. 103.)—On the evening of the seventh day of the week, Saturday, the sixteenth of the Jewish Nisan, a guard is placed at the sepulchre of Jesus.—Matt. xxvii. 62—.6.*

62 Now the next-day, that followed the day-of-the-preparation, the chief-priests and 63 Pharisees came-together unto Pilate, saying, Sir, we-remember that that deceiver said,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiii. 56. prepared, &c.—Luke does not give the names of these women who prepared the spices and ointments before the sabbath—see ch. xxiv. 1, § 93, p. 488.

the commandment—Ex. xx. 8—11—The conduct of the disciples on this trying occasion was a sufficient refutation of the accusation against Jesus, with regard to the sabbath, Jno. v. 18, § 23, p. 177—Certain it is that the followers of Jesus had not learned from him to think lightly of the sabbath.

NOTES.

observation, that the evangelists are not more particular in anything relating to the Saviour than in the narrative of his burial. They seem to have been thus particular for the purpose of proving, beyond all possibility of doubt, these two great points of the Christian religion, the death and resurrection of Jesus. It was necessary that every possible conviction should be given to the world of these two events. If we were not well assured that he was really dead, we should not be certain that an atonement was made for the sins of the world; and if we had any doubt respecting his resurrection, we could not depend on that atonement being accepted.]

[Mk. xv. 47. Beheld where he was laid. The courage and affection of these holy women cannot be too much admired. The strength of the Lord is perfected in weakness; for here, a timid man, and a few weak women, acknowledge Jesus in death, when the strong and the mighty utterly forsook him.]

'Human strength and human weakness are only names in religion. The mightiest MAN, in the hour of trial, can do nothing without the strength of God; and the weakest WOMAN can do all things, if Christ strengthen her. These truths are sufficiently exemplified in the case of Peter and all his brother disciples on the one hand; and Joseph of Arimathæa and the two Marys on the other. And all this is recorded equally to prevent both presumption and despair. Reader, let not these examples be produced before thee in vain.'—A. C.

Mt. xxvii. 61. Sitting over against the sepulchre. In the time of our Saviour it was usual for the nearest relative to visit the grave of the deceased, and to weep there. We are informed also by many modern travellers that this custom prevails at this day in Egypt, and many parts in the East.

Lu. xxiii. 56. Prepared spices and ointments, &c. 'They bought their spices in the short time before sunset.'—Alford. This was in order to embalm him; which sufficiently proves that they had no hope of his resurrection the third day.

Mt. xxvii. 62. The next day that followed . . . . the preparation. That is, of the sabbath. 'The chief priests, &c., did not go to Pilate on the sabbath, but in the evening after the termination of the sabbath.' —Alford.

['The day before the sabbath being called "the preparation," Mk. xv. 42, p. 474. It was so called, because on that day of the week the Jews made the necessary preparation for the solemn rest of the sabbath. It must, however, be remembered that the day of the preparation ended and that the sabbath began at sunset, the Jews reckoning their days from sunset to sunset. The application expressed by 'the chief priests and Pharisees' to Pilate, lest the disciples of Jesus should 'come by night, and steal him away,' shews that their application to have the sepulchre secured must have been made before the night came on. By 'the next day,' therefore, we must here understand, not the next day, according to our mode of reckoning, but the time which immediately followed the setting of the sun on the day of preparation. The Jewish sabbath being on a Saturday, this time answers to our Friday evening.'—Lonsdale and Hale.]—See Greswell, infra.

63. Sir. The word Κύριε, is here very properly translated Sir, which in many other places is as improperly translated Lord. When a Roman is the speaker, the person addressed, Κύριε should always be translated Sir; when strangers address our Lord, the word is a title of civil respect; and should, in general, be translated in the same way.

That deceiver. One of the charges against him was, that he deceived the people. By this title they still chose to designate him, thinking that his death had fully confirmed the truth of the charges against him.

* 'The next period in the gospel history will extend from sunset on the fourteenth to sunset on the fifteenth of the same month, or throughout the whole of the Jewish sabbath, and from thence to the morning of the sixteenth, when our Saviour rose again from the dead.

'The times of the two incidents, viz.—the application of the sanhedrim to Pilate for permission to set a guard over the door of the sepulchre, and the appointment of that guard accordingly, might possibly be different: the application might be made in the course of the sabbath, or just when the sabbath was about to expire—but the setting of the guard we may conclude for various reasons could not have been until after.

THERE ARE MANY DEVICES IN A MAN'S HEART; NEVERTHELESS THE COUNSEL OF THE LORD, THAT SHALL STAND.—Prov. xix. 21.

COUNSEL IN THE HEART OF MAN IS LIKE DEEP WATER; BUT A MAN OF UNDERSTANDING WILL DRAW IT OUT.—Prov. xx. 5.

MATT. xxvii. 64—.6.

64 while-he-was-yet-alive, After three days I-will-rise-again. Command therefore that-the sepulchre be-made-sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by-night, and-steal-him-away, and say unto-the people, He-is-risen from the dead: so the last error shall-65 be worse than-the first. Pilate said unto-them, Ye-have a-watch: go-your-way, make-66 it-as-sure as ye-can. So they went, and-made-the sepulchre-sure, sealing the stone, and setting-a-watch. [Ch. xxviii. 1, ¿ 93, p. 484.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxvii. 63. that deceiver—And when some had said, Jno. vii. 12, § 55, p. 91, 'He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.'—Ver. 47, § 56., p. 96, 'Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?'

After three days, &c.—Jesus had predicted this at his first cleansing of the temple, see Jno. ii. 19, § 12, p. 82—also before and after the transfiguration, Mt. xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40, and xvii. 23, § 52, p. 71—and upon his last journey to Jerusalem, xx. 19, § 77, p. 235.

64. Command therefore—Thus they helped to render more evident the truth of our Lord's resurrection—see ch. xxviii. 13, § 93, p. 487.

65. as sure as ye can—Job v. 12, .3, 'He disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise. He taketh the wise in their own craftiness: and the counsel of the froward is carried headlong.'—xii. 17, 'He leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.'—Pr. xix. 21, 'The counsel of the LORD, that shall stand.'—xxi. 30, 'No wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD.'—Isa. viii. 10, 'Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand: for God is with us.'

66. sealing the stone—When Daniel was cast into the lion's den, a stone being 'laid upon the mouth of the den; . . the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords,' Da. vi. 17.

NOTES.

[Mt. xxvii. 63. After three days. Μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας. Rather, 'within three days,' or on the third day, according to the Jewish mode of speaking. Thus, in the next verse we read 'until the third day.'—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra. So in 2 Chr. x. 5, where Rehoboam said to the people, 'Come again unto me after three days,' it is added, in ver. 12, 'So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.']

64. The last error. That is, the people's state of delusion, should they be persuaded that this man 'is risen from the dead,' will be worse than that in which they have hitherto been with respect to him.

65. Ye have a watch. This alludes to the guard of Roman soldiers which was at this time allowed the Jewish rulers, for the purpose of quelling tumults, and preserving the public peace. We learn from Josephus, that the tower of Antonia, which overlooked the temple, was always garrisoned by a legion of Roman soldiers; and that, on the side where it joined to the porticos of the temple, there were stairs reaching to each portico, by which a company, band, or detachment descended, and kept guard (φυλακὴν ἦγον) in these porticos, to prevent any tumults at the great festivals. It was a detachment of these soldiers that Pilate gave the Jews leave to employ to watch the tomb.

66. Sealing the stone, and setting a watch. They set Pilate's signet, or the public seal of the sanhedrim, upon a fastening which they had put on the stone. And all this uncommon caution was overruled by the providence of God, to give the strongest proofs of Christ's ensuing resurrection; since there could be no room for the least suspicion of deceit, when it should be found, that his body was raised out of a new tomb, where there was no other corpse, and this tomb hewn out of a rock, the mouth of which was secured by a great stone, under a seal, and a guard of soldiers.

['So everything was done which human policy and prudence could, to prevent a resurrection, which these very precautions had the most direct tendency to authenticate and establish. How wonderful are the wisdom and goodness of God!—and how true is it, that there is neither might nor counsel against him!—1. The death of Christ was ordered so as to be witnessed by thousands; and if his resurrection take place, it must be demonstrated; and it cannot take place without being incontestable, such are the precautions used here to prevent all imposture.—2. The more the circumstances of the death of Christ are examined, the more astonishing the whole will appear. The death is uncommon—the person uncommon—and the object uncommon; and the whole is grand, majestic, and awful. Nature itself is thrown into unusual action, and by means and causes wholly supernatural. In every part, the finger of God most evidently appears.—3. How glorious does Christ appear in his death! Were it not for his thirst, his exclamation on the cross, and the piercing of his side, we should have found it difficult to believe that such a person could ever have entered the empire of death; but the divinity and the manhood equally appear, and thus the certainty of the atonement is indubitably established.'—A. C.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxvii. 62, .3. It is strange how the hopes and the fears of men will modify their powers of perception. The disciples, whose hopes were so different, could not understand what Christ had plainly predicted respecting his death and resurrection; whereas the chief priests, who dreaded his influence when living, could more truly guess at his meaning while denying the whole truth respecting him.]

[62—.6 ver. How wonderfully everything was arranged so as to make the death of Christ and his resurrection well known and well authenticated! His death was in the view of all men; it was officially ascertained, and expressly acknowledged, by his enemies, as well as witnessed to by the heavens and by the earth. His entombment also is public, and secured with the seal of the governor.

His enemies who pursue him, not only unto death, but who even attempt to fix upon him the design of playing the deceiver after death, are given all power to counteract such design—but this only makes more undeniable the fact of his resurrection.]

'First, because it is not probable that the sanhedrim themselves would take such a step during the continuance of the sabbath; for that would have been to break the sabbath. Secondly, in the day-time on the sabbath, and for so public a place as Calvary, there would have been no occasion to set a guard over the grave at all. Thirdly, they had not applied for the same permission, nor, therefore, thought it necessary to appoint such a guard, on the eve of the sabbath; they must consequently, have supposed that the grave would be sufficiently protected, during the sabbath, for the proposed end of setting a guard would be answered by stationing it at the sepulchre on the eve of the first day of the week: for the night of that eve was the first and the only time when any attempt at the removal of the body of Christ by his disciples for such a purpose as they suppose, could be expected to take place. Fifthly, the design of the measure being expressly to defeat any clandestine attempt on the part of the followers of our Lord, it was natural that the step should be taken with as much secrecy as possible, especially with respect to them: and it is certain that the women, who visited the sepulchre on the morning of the resurrection, were ignorant at the time of the existence of the watch about it: but this could scarcely have been the case, had the guard been posted at an earlier period than the night preceding.'—Ibid., p. 235.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICES.

ARIMATHÆA.—Matt. xxvii. 57, p. 474.

'Eusebius and Jerome regard the Arimathæa of Joseph as the same place as the Ramathaim of Samuel, and place it near Lydda, or Diospolis. Hence it has by some been identified with the existing Ramleh, because of the similarity of the names to that of Ramah (of which Ramathaim is the dual), and because it is near Lydda or Diospolis. Professor Robinson, however, disputes this conclusion on the following grounds:—1. That Abulfida alleges Ramleh to have been built after the time of Mohammed, or about A.D. 716, by Suleiman Abd-al-Malik.—2. That Ramah and Ramleh have not the same signification.—3. That Ramleh is in a plain, whilst Ramah implies a town on a hill. To this it may be answered, that Abulfida's statement may mean no more than that Suleiman rebuilt the town, which had previously been in ruins, just as Rehoboam and others are said to have built many towns which had existed long before their time; and that the Moslems seldom built towns but on old sites and out of old materials. . . . In such cases they retained the old names, or others resembling them in sound, if not in signification, which may account for the difference between Ramah and Ramleh. Neither are we assume that a place called Ramah could not be in a plain, unless we are ready to prove that Hebrew proper names were always significant and appropriate. This they were probably not. . . . Further, if Arimathæa, by being identified with Ramah, was necessarily in the mountains, it could not have been "near Lydda," from which the mountains are seven miles distant. This is alluded to, to shew that Dr. Robinson's objections have not entirely destroyed the grounds for following the usual course of describing Ramleh as representing the ancient Arimathæa.* Ramleh is in north latitude thirty-one degrees fifty-nine minutes, and east longitude thirty-five degrees twenty-eight minutes, eight miles south-east from Joppa, and twenty-four miles north-west from Jerusalem. It lies in the fine undulating plain of Sharon, upon the eastern side of a broad, low swell, rising from a fertile though sandy plain. Like Gaza and Jaffa, this town is surrounded by olive groves and gardens of vegetables and delicious fruits. Occasional palm trees are seen, as well as the kharob and the sycamore. The streets are fine; the houses are of stone, and many of them large and well built. There are five mosques, two or more of which are said to have been Christian churches; and there is here one of the largest Latin convents in Palestine. The place is supposed to contain about 3,000 inhabitants, of whom two-thirds are Moslems, and the rest chiefly of the Greek church, with a few Armenians. The inhabitants carry on some trade in cotton and soap. The great caravan road between Egypt and Damascus, Smyrna, and Constantinople, passes through Ramleh, as well as the most frequented road for European pilgrims and travellers between Joppa and Jerusalem. There is a tower of Saracenic architecture, square, and built with well-hewn stone, about 120 feet high, standing wholly isolated, a little to the west of the town: and bears date 718 A.H. (A.D. 1310).† Among the plantations surrounding the town occur, at every step, dry wells, cisterns fallen in, and vast vaulted reservoirs, which shew that the city must in former times have been upwards of a league and a half in extent.'—Kitto's Bib. Cyclop., pp. 209.—11.

JERUSALEM.—(Continued from Section xxiii. p. 185.)

DR. ROBINSON says:—'We entered the Yaffa Gate . . . . and I was in many respects agreeably disappointed. . . . I had expected to find the houses of the city miserable, the streets filthy, and the population squalid. . . . . The houses are in general better built, and the streets cleaner, than those of Alexandria, Smyrna, or even Constantinople. Indeed, of all the oriental cities which I visited, Jerusalem, after Cairo, is the cleanest and most solidly built. . . . The houses are of hewn stone, often large, and furnished with small domes upon the roofs. . . . These domes seem to be not merely for ornament; but are intended, on account of the scarcity of timber, to aid in supporting and strengthening the otherwise flat roofs. There is usually one or more over each room in a house.'—Robinson's Bib. Res., Vol. I. p. 326.

'JERUSALEM, as seen from mount Olivet, is a plain inclining gently and equably to the east. Once enter its gates, however, and it is found to be full of inequalities. The passenger is always ascending or descending. There are no level streets, and little skill or labour has been employed to remove or diminish the inequalities which nature has produced in sight. Houses are built upon mountains of rubbish, which are probably twenty, thirty, or fifty feet above the natural level, and the streets are constructed with the same disregard to convenience, with this difference, that some slight attention is paid to the possibility of carrying off surplus water. The latter are without exception narrow, seldom exceeding eight or ten feet in breadth. The houses often meet, and in some instances a building occupies both sides of the street, which runs under a succession of arches barely high enough to permit an equestrian to pass under them. A canopy of old mats or of planks is suspended over the principal streets when not arched. These covered ways are often pervaded by currents of air when a perfect calm prevails in other places. The principal streets of Jerusalem run nearly at right angles to each other. Very few if any of them bear names among the native population. They are badly paved, being merely laid irregularly with raised stones, with a deep square channel, for beasts of burden, in the middle; but the steepness of the ground contributes to keep them cleaner than in most oriental cities.

'The houses of Jerusalem are substantially built of the limestone of which the whole of this part of Palestine is composed: not usually hewn, but broken into regular forms, and making a solid wall of very respectable appearance. For the most part there are no windows next to the street, and the few which exist for the purposes of light or ventilation are completely masked by casements and lattice-work. The apartments receive their light from the open courts within. The ground plot is usually surrounded by a high enclosure, commonly forming the walls of the house only, but sometimes embracing a small garden and some vacant ground. . . . A large number of houses in Jerusalem are in a dilapidated and ruinous state. Nobody seems to make repairs so long as his dwelling does not absolutely refuse him shelter and safety. If one room tumbles about his ears he removes into another, and permits rubbish and vermin to accumulate as they will in the deserted halls. Tottering staircases are propped to prevent their fall; and when the edifice becomes untenantable, the occupant seeks another a little less ruinous, leaving the wreck to a smaller or more wretched family, or, more probably, to a goatherd and his flock. Habitations which have a very respectable appearance as seen from the street, are often found, upon entering them, to be little better than heaps of ruins.

'The Turkish governor of the town holds the rank of Pasha, but is responsible to the Pasha of Beirout. The government is somewhat milder than before the period of the Egyptian dominion; but it is said that the Jewish and Christian inhabitants at least have ample cause to regret the change of masters, and the American missionaries lament that change without reserve (Am. Bib. Repos. for 1843). Yet the Moslems reverence the same spots which the Jews and Christians account holy, the holy sepulchre only excepted; and this exception arises from their disbelief that Christ was crucified, or buried, or rose again.'—Kitto's Bib. Cyclop., pp. 104—.6.

* Professor Robinson says, 'The idea that this Ramah may have been the Arimathæa of the New Testament, is not in itself improbable; and it may be said too, that these fathers (Eusebius and Jerome) lived near the apostolic age, when a correct tradition might still be extant.'—Biblical Researches in Palestine, Vol. III. p. 41.

† 'This ruin is called the "Tower of the Martyrs." The martyrs of Sebaste, in Armenia, are said to have been buried at Ramleh.'—Bible in Palestine, p. 188.

SUPPLY OF WATER.*

'Jerusalem lies in the midst of a rocky limestone region, throughout which fountains and wells are comparatively rare. In the city itself, little if any living water is known; and in its immediate vicinity are only the three small fountains along the lower part of the valley of Jehoshaphat [see infra]. Yet with all these disadvantages of its position, the holy city would appear always to have had a full supply of water for its inhabitants, both in ancient and in modern times. In the numerous sieges to which in all ages it has been exposed, we nowhere read of any want of water within the city; while the besiegers have often suffered severely, and have been compelled to bring water from a great distance. During the siege by Titus, when the Jews, pressed with famine, had recourse to the most horrible expedients, and thousands daily died of hunger, there is no hint that thirst was added to their other sufferings. . . . Thus in every age the truth of Strabo's brief description has been manifest: "Jerusalem, a rocky, well-enclosed fortress; within well-watered, without wholly dry."'

CISTERNS.

'The main dependence of Jerusalem for water at the present day is on its cisterns; and this has probably always been the case. . . . . Almost every private house in Jerusalem, of any size, is understood to have at least one or more cisterns, excavated in the soft lime-stone rock on which the city is built. The house of Mr. Lanneau, in which we resided, had no less than four cisterns; and as these are but a specimen of the manner in which all the better class of houses are supplied, I subjoin here the dimensions:

	Length.	Breadth.	Depth.
I.	15 Feet.	8 Feet.	12 Feet.
II.	8 „	4 „	15 „
III.	10 Feet.	10 Feet.	15 Feet.
IV.	30 „	30 „	20 „

The Latin convent is said to be amply furnished; and in seasons of drought is able to deal out a sufficiency for all the christian inhabitants of the city. . . . There few wells are occasionally found, both in and around the city; but they are either dry, or the water is low and bad. . . .

'But although the cisterns of Jerusalem thus afford apparently an abundant supply, yet as a matter of convenience and luxury, water is brought during the summer, in considerable quantity, from fountains at a distance from the city.'

RESERVOIRS.

'These reservoirs we learned to consider as one of the least doubtful vestiges in all Palestine. . . .

'With such reservoirs Jerusalem was abundantly supplied. . . . Without the walls on the west side of the city are two very large reservoirs, viz., the Upper and Lower Pool, referred to in 2 Ki. xviii. 17; Is. vii. 3; xxii. 9; xxxvi. 2.

'Upper Pool. This is commonly called by the monks Gihon, and by the natives Birket el-Mamilla. It lies in the basin forming the head of the valley of Hinnom or Gehenna, about 700 yards W.N.W. from the Yaffa Gate. The dimensions are as follow: Length from east to west, 316 English feet; breadth at the west end, 200 feet; at the east end, 218 feet; depth at each end, 18 feet. There seemed to be no watercourse to bring water into it, and it is in a ruinous state.

'Lower Pool. Is situated in the same valley, southward of the Yaffa Gate. This reservoir is much larger than the upper, and was probably filled from the rains, and from the superfluous waters of the Upper Pool; but is now in ruins.

'Within the walls of the city are three reservoirs, viz.:

'1. Pool of Bathsheba. Is a mere pit, and lies just within the Yaffa Gate, on the north side of the street, over against the Castle of David.

'2. Pool of Hezekiah. The reservoir now so called, lies some distance N.E. of the Yaffa Gate. It is supplied by a small aqueduct or drain from the Upper Pool, Gihon.

'3. Bethesda. Sheep Pool.' See Section xxiii. p. 186.

FOUNTAINS.

'This fountain naturally reminds us of that mentioned by Tacitus (History, v. 12), and still more strongly of the language of Aristæus, when describing the ancient temple.

'There seems little reason to doubt that the whole work is artificial; and we may perhaps reasonably conjecture, that it stood in some connection with the ancient fountain of Gihon on the higher ground west of the city.

'Fountain of Gihon. The place to which Solomon was brought from Jerusalem to be anointed, was called Gihon; but the direction of it from the city is not specified [1 Ki. i. 33, 38]. At a later period we are told of King Hezekiah, that he "stopped the upper water-course [or upper out-flow of the waters] of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David" [2 Chr. xxxii. 30. Comp. also xxxiii. 14]. It is said too that "he took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; . . . so there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?" [2 Chr. xxxii. 3, 4]. The son of Sirach also informs us, that "Hezekiah strengthened his city, and brought in water into the midst of it; he dug with iron into the rock, and built fountains for the waters." Josephus mentions also the fountain of Gihon. From all these passages I am unable to arrive at any other conclusion, than that there existed anciently a fountain Gihon on the west of the city, which was "stopped" or covered over by Hezekiah, and its waters brought down by subterranean channels into the city. Before that time it would naturally have flowed down through the valley of Gihon or Hinnom; and probably it formed the "brook" which was stopped at the same time.' — Robinson's Biblical Researches, Vol. I. pp. 511—.3.

'Jerusalem lies in the midst of a rocky limestone region, throughout which fountains and wells are comparatively rare. In the city itself, little if any living water is known; and in its immediate vicinity are only the three small fountains along the lower part of the valley of Jehoshaphat [see infra]. Yet with all these disadvantages of its position, the holy city would appear always to have had a full supply of water for its inhabitants, both in ancient and in modern times. In the numerous sieges to which in all ages it has been exposed, we nowhere

'We repaired to the bath, which is supplied from the fountain, and situated in a covered passage leading to one of the western entrances of the enclosure of the mosk. It is called Hammum esh-Shefa, "Bath of healing," and apparently much used by those frequenting the Haram. After passing through several apartments, to the parallel street leading to the southern entrance of the mosk; . . . in a low arched room, we found two men drawing water from a narrow and deep well . . . . which proved to be eighty-two and a half feet, or about sixty-five feet below the surface of the ground: having three and a half feet of water. The distance from the well to the area of the mosk is about 135 feet.

'The elder of the two men offered to accompany us down. The water, he said, comes through a passage of masonry four or five feet high, from under the Sukhrah, or grand mosk. This passage is entered from the well by a doorway. It leads first through a room of considerable size, arched, and supported by fourteen marble columns with capitals; and terminates in a room under the Sukhrah, about eight or ten feet square, cut out of the rock; which is entered by another similar doorway. Here the water boils up from the rock in a basin at the bottom. He knew of no other passage . . . from this room, nor from the main passage, by which the water could flow off.

* See 'Robinson's Biblical Researches in Palestine,' Vol. I. pp. 479—514.

ZION.*

'MOUNT ZION. Of the hills by which the surface of the city was and is divided into various quarters, that of Sion is the most extensive and important. Its northern part or brow is just south of the street which leads down directly east from the Yaffa Gate, along the bed of the ancient Tyropœon. . . .

'On the west and south, Zion rises abruptly from the Valley of Hinnom, which sweeps around its S.W. corner almost at a right angle, descending very rapidly, first towards the south, and then towards the east, to the Valley of Jehoshaphat. This circumstance renders the S.W. brow of Zion apparently more lofty than any other point connected with the city now or anciently. This we measured approximately. Beginning at the first tower from the S.W. corner of the city wall, we measured 865 feet on a course due south to the brow of Zion. Hence the well of Job or Nehemiah bore S. 58° E. at an angle of depression of 12°. Descending now very steeply, still due south, we measured 140 feet at an angle of 1l° depression, and 530 feet at an angle of 23½°; and came thus to the bottom of the Valley of Hinnom. This gives an elevation above the valley at this point of 154 English feet; which is probably not very far from the truth. The height of Zion above the valley at the S.W. corner of the wall of the city, obtained in the same way, is 104 feet; and that of the ground at the Yaffa Gate, 44 feet. But these differences arise at least as much from the rapid sinking of the valley, as from the increased height of Zion towards the south. The elevation of the southern brow of Zion above the well of Nehemiah, . . . I should estimate at not less than 300 feet.

'The summit of Zion presents a level tract of considerable extent along its western brow. The eastern side of the hill slopes down steeply, but not in general abruptly, to the Tyropœon, which separates it from the narrow ridge south of the Haram, while at the extreme S.E. part, below Siloam, it extends quite down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat. Only the northern portion of Zion is included in the modern walls; and this is occupied chiefly by the Jewish quarter, and by the great Armenian convent. Here the eastern side of Zion within the city, adjacent to the Tyropœon after it bends south, is an abrupt precipice of rock from twenty to thirty feet high, lying over against the S.W. part of the area of the Haram esh-Sherif. This rock is still in its natural state; and probably presents the same appearance as it did in the days of Josephus; though the adjacent valley has doubtless been greatly filled up with rubbish.

'Without the walls, the level part of Zion is occupied by the christian cemeteries, the house of Caiaphas now an Armenian convent, the Cœnaculum or Muslim tomb of David, and the adjacent buildings, formerly a Latin convent. The rest of the surface is now tilled; and the city of David has become a ploughed field! The eastern slope is likewise in part cultivated; and paths wind down along the declivity to Siloam, and also more to the right to the bottom of the Valley of Hinnom. The aqueduct from Solomon's Pools, which crosses the Valley of Hinnom at a point N. of the S.W. corner of the city wall, is then carried along and around the S.W. part of Zion above the valley, till it comes out again high up along the eastern slope and enters the city.' . . . .

AKRA.

'North of Zion is the hill of Akra. It is the continuation, or rather the termination, of the broad ridge or swell of land which lies north of the basin at the head of the Valley of Hinnom, and extends into the city, forming its N.W. part. Indeed the N.W. corner of the city wall is directly on this ridge; from which spot the wall descends immediately towards the N.E., and also, though less rapidly, towards the S.E. . . . Within the walls, this hill or ridge is separated from Zion, as we have seen, by the upper part of the Tyropœon; which commences as a shallow depression near the Yaffa Gate.

'The church of the Holy Sepulchre† stands directly on the ridge of Akra; and from it and from that neighbourhood there is everywhere a considerable declivity towards the Damascus Gate. The ground also descends eastward from the Latin convent to the same church; and then again by a still steeper declivity from the church to the street along the valley between Akra and the area of the great mosk.'

BEZETHA.

'Eastward from the Damascus Gate, and northeasterly from Akra, lies the hill of Bezetha. It is separated from Akra by the rather broad valley which has its commencement in the plain just around the Damascus Gate, and runs in a southerly direction till it unites with the Tyropœon below the point of Akra. The western side of Bezetha is nearly or quite as high as Akra; while towards the east it slopes gradually down to the brow of the Valley of Jehoshaphat. The western side, near the gate of Damascus, is very steep; as are also the northern and southern sides in this quarter. Indeed the north wall of the city runs along its northern brow; and the rock on the outside is there precipitous; with a wide and deep trench at its base cut through the rock.

'The summit of Bezetha is now mostly covered with low buildings, or rather hovels; and on the S.E. part are also dwellings and the ruined church connected with the former nunnery of the house of Anna. But in the N.E. the whole slope within the city walls is occupied by gardens, fields, and olive yards, with comparatively few houses.'

MORIAH.

'The part of Jerusalem lying between the Valley of Jehoshaphat and the valley running down from the Damascus Gate to the Pool of Siloam, may be regarded as one ridge, lying on it the separate summits or hills Bezetha and Moriah; and corresponding further down perhaps to the ancient quarter Ophel. Moriah was apparently at first an elevated mound of rock, rising by itself upon this ridge, over against the eastern point of Akra. The temple was placed upon the levelled summit of this rock; and then immense walls were erected from its base on the four sides; and the interval between them and the sides filled in with earth, or built up with vaults; so as to form on the top a large area on a level with the temple. This area or court of the ancient temple was probably not very different from the present enclosure of the Haram esh-Sherif. This is now separated from the rocky brow of Zion by the Tyropœon; and from Akra by the valley which comes from the Damascus Gate. . . .

'On the north side, Moriah is not now separated from Bezetha by any valley or trench; except in part by the large reservoir commonly called Bethesda (see § 23, p. 186). The street which leads to the eastern gate of the city passes here; ascending somewhat from the valley near the N.W. corner of the area, having the steep path of Bezetha on the left; and then descending gradually to St. Stephen's Gate.'

OPHEL.

'This is the remainder of the ridge extending south from Moriah to Siloam, between the deep Valley of Jehoshaphat on the east, and the steep but shallower Tyropœon on the west. The top of the ridge is flat, descending rapidly towards the south, sometimes by offsets of rock; and planted . . . . At the northern end, just at the S.E. corner of the city wall (not that of the mosk), the surface is already 100 feet lower than the top of the wall of the area of the mosk. From this point I measured 1,550 feet, or about 516 yards on a course S. 20° W. to the end of the ridge, a rocky point forty or fifty feet above the Pool of Siloam in the mouth of the Tyropœon. The breadth of the ridge, as measured about the middle, I found to be 290 feet, or about 96 yards, from brow to brow.

* 'Robinson's Biblical Researches in Palestine,' Vol. I. pp. 384—98.—And see p. 42. Vol. I. Treas. Harm.

† 'In every point of view which I have been able to take of the question, both topographical and historical, whether on the spot or in the closet, and in spite of all my previous prepossessions, I am led irresistibly to the conclusion, that the Golgotha and the tomb now shown in the church of the Holy Sepulchre, are not upon the real places of the crucifixion and resurrection of our Lord.'—Ibid., Vol. II. p. 80.

PART FIFTH.

MATTHEW, CHAP. XXVIII. MARK XVI. LUKE XXIV. JOHN XX., XXI.

ARRANGED IN THE ORDER OF TIME.

COMPREHENDING THE SPACE OF FORTY DAYS' TIME; VIZ.,—FROM THE MORNING OF OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION, EASTER DAY, APRIL 7TH, UNTO THE DAY OF HIS ASCENSION INTO HEAVEN, THURSDAY, MAY 16TH, U.C. 783, A.D. 30.

PART FIFTH.

Matthew, Chap. XXVIII. Mark XVI. Luke XXIV. John XX., XXI.

ARRANGED IN THE ORDER OF TIME.

Comprehending the Space of Forty Days' Time; viz.,—from the Morning of our Lord's Resurrection, Easter Day, April 7th, unto the Day of his Ascension into Heaven, Thursday, May 16th, U.C. 783, A.D. 30.

SECTION 93.—(G. 1—6.)—[Lesson 97.]—Particulars of Jesus' resurrection, on the morning of the first day of the week, Sunday, the seventeenth of Nisan.—Matt. xxviii. 1—8, 11—.5. Mark xvi. 1—11. Luke xxiv. 1—12. John xx. 1—18.—See Gresweil, Vol. III. Diss. xliii. pp. 257—320, On the Harmony of the accounts of the Resurrection.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

RESURRECTION OF JESUS. THE PARTY OF SALOME VISIT THE SEPULCHRE, p. 424.

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. 1. On the evening after the sabbath, the two Marys and Salome buy sweet spices, that they may come and anoint Jesus.

— xxviii. 1. — xvi. 2. On the first day of the week, before sun-rising, they come to see the sepulchre.

— xxviii. 2—4. ——— An angel from heaven has rolled back the stone from the door of the sepulchre. His look is like lightning, his clothing white as snow; and at the sight of him the guards of the sepulchre tremble, and are panic struck.

——— — xvi. 3, 4. The women, ignorant, it would seem, of the priests' setting the watch, and of what has been done by the angel, question among themselves how they shall get the stone rolled from the door of the sepulchre; but when they come, they find it already removed.

Mt. xxviii. 5, 6. Mk. xvi. — The angel tells the women that they need not fear. He is aware of their errand; they seek Jesus who was crucified, but he is not in the tomb. He is risen as he promised. They are invited to see the place where the Lord lay.

——— — xvi. 5, 6. The women enter the sepulchre, and are by another heavenly messenger addressed in nearly the same words.

— xxviii. 7. — xvi. 7. The women are commanded to go quickly, and tell the disciples and Peter, that he whom they seek is risen from the dead; and as he foretold, goeth before them into Galilee, where they shall see him.

— xxviii. 8. — xvi. 8. The women, with mingled feelings of fear and joy, and in mute astonishment, run to bring the disciples word.

THE GUARD RETURNS INTO THE CITY, p. 427.

Mt. xxviii. 11—.5. In the meantime some of those appointed to watch return, and report to the chief priests what has taken place, who, having assembled with the elders, take counsel as to what is to be done upon the new emergency. They resolve upon bribing the soldiers to say that while they slept the body of Jesus was stolen by his disciples, the chief priests promising to screen them from the wrath of the governor, should he hear of the supposed dereliction of duty. They take the money, and do as they are bid.

VISIT OF THE SECOND PARTY OF WOMEN, p. 428.

Lu. xxiv. 1. On the same morning that the two Marys, with Salome, visited the sepulchre, and probably somewhat later, those women who had prepared spices and ointments previous to the sabbath, ch. xxiii. 55, .6, § 92, p. 477, come bringing with them what they had prepared.

— xxiv. 2, 3. These also find the stone removed; and entering in, find not the body of Jesus.

— xxiv. 4. While perplexed at finding the sepulchre open, and the body of Jesus removed, they perceive two men in shining garments standing beside them.

Lu. xxiv. 5—7. They are struck with fear and awe, and are questioned by the angels, why they seek the Living One among those that are dead? In words much the same as those spoken to the women who were first at the sepulchre, they are told that Jesus is risen; they are reminded of his discourse to them in Galilee respecting his death by the hands of sinful men, and his resurrection on the third day.

— xxiv. 8, 9, 11. The women remember the words of Jesus, and on returning from the sepulchre, report to the eleven, and other disciples, the things they have seen and heard; but those to whom they are told believe them not.

MARY OF MAGDALA REPORTS TO PETER AND JOHN, p. 429.

Mt. xxviii. Mk. xvi. Lu. xxiv. Jno. xx. 1, 2. Mary Magdalene, who had been one of the first at the sepulchre, Mt. xxviii. 1, and who had seen that the stone was removed, has hastened to Peter and John, saying, 'They have taken away the Lord . . . . and,' &c.

Mt. xxviii. Mk. xvi. Lu. xxiv. 10. Jno. xx. — The report is brought to the apostles, not only by Mary Magdalene, but by other women, both of her party and of the other.

PETER AND JOHN VISIT THE SEPULCHRE, p. 490.

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. — Lu. xxiv. 12. Jno. xx. 3. Peter and John hasten to the sepulchre.

——— ——— ——— — xx. 4, 5. The beloved disciple reaches the sepulchre first, and stooping down, sees the linen in which the body of Jesus had been wrapped.

——— ——— — xxiv. 12. — xx. 6, 7. Peter having arrived, enters in, and sees not only the linen clothes, but also the napkin that was about the head. It is wrapped together in a place apart.

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. — Lu. xxiv. — Jno. xx. 8, 9. John now enters, sees, and believes: as yet they are ignorant that Jesus must rise from the dead.

——— ——— — xxiv. 12. — xx. 10. The two disciples return home, wondering at that which has come to pass.

MARY OF MAGDALA SEETH TWO ANGELS, p. 491.

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. — Lu. xxiv. — Jno. xx. 11–13. As Mary remains outside the sepulchre weeping, she happens to stoop, and sees within the sepulchre two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain. They say to her, 'Woman, why weepest thou?' She answers as she had reported to the two disciples, only now she speaks for herself alone, saying, 'They have taken away MY LORD, and I know not where they have laid him.'

JESUS APPEARS TO MARY OF MAGDALA, p. ib.

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. 9. Lu. xxiv. — Jno. xx. — Jesus having arisen early on this first day of the week, appears first to Mary Magdalene, who at one time seemed likely to be the last to enjoy such a favour.

——— ——— ——— — xx. 14. Mary at the tomb had been complaining that the body of her Lord was removed, when she turns and sees Jesus, but does not at first recognise him.

——— ——— ——— — xx. 15. Jesus asks, as did the angel, 'Why weepest thou?' and puts the question, 'Whom seekest thou?'

——— ——— ——— — xx. 15. Mary having her mind still fixed upon the one idea, that the body of Jesus is removed, supposes him to be the gardener, and beseeches him that if he has taken him hence, he would tell her where he is laid, that she may take him away.

——— ——— — xx. 16. Jesus saith unto her, 'Mary.'

Mt. xxviii. — Mk. xvi. — Lu. xxiv. — Jno. xx. 16. Mary at length recognises the well-known voice, and exclaims, 'Rabboni!'

——— ——— ——— — xx. 17. Mary would willingly have grasped the dead body of Jesus, and carried it where she could find for it a resting place: how much more gladly may she be supposed to embrace a living Christ, now returned no more to be taken from her? But Jesus corrects her mistake, saying, 'Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'

——— ——— — xvi. 10, 11. ——— — xx. 18. Mary Magdalene comes to the disciples while they mourn and weep; she tells them she has seen the Lord, and delivers them the message she received from the risen Redeemer, respecting his speedy ascension, but they believe her not.

No. 93.—(G. 1.)—On the morning of the first day of the week, Sunday, the seventeenth of Nisan, the party of Salome visit the sepulchre of Jesus. Particulars of what transpires both without and within the sepulchre. An angel descends.

MATT. xxviii. 1—4.
(Ch. xxvii. 66, § 92, p. 478.)

MARK xvi. 1, 2.
(Ch. xv. 47, § ib., p. 477.)

[a]And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet-spices, that they might come and anoint him.[b]

1 [b]In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn* toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see θεωρησαι the sepulchre.[c]

And very early in the morning 2 the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre
[c]at the rising of the sun.[d]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xvi. 1. had bought sweet spices, &c.—Some of the women who came with Jesus from Galilee had prepared spices and ointments the evening before the sabbath, Lu. xxiii. 56, § 92, p. 477—Nicodemus also had brought a [a]mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight,' Jno. xix. 39—42, § ib., p. 475—Nevertheless, as Jesus had intimated, the only anointing of the kind which his body received, was that of the pound of spikenard, at Bethany, Mt. xxvi. 6—13, [Mk. xiv. 3—9; Jno. xii. 2—8,] § 81, pp. 253—7.

NOTES.

Mt. xxviii. .. In the end of the sabbath. The Jewish day began at the rising, and ended at the setting of the sun; all the rest of the time, from the setting to the rising of the sun, they termed night; hence the same word in Hebrew, signifies both evening and night, Ge. i. 5; Mk. vi. 47, § 41, p. 318. St. Matthew has employed the word in this extensive sense here, pointing out the latter part of the Jewish night, that which immediately preceded the rising of the sun, and not that first part which we call the evening. The transaction mentioned here, evidently took place early on the morning of the third day after our Lord's crucifixion; answering to our Sunday morning, or first day of the next week.

To see the sepulchre. The true import of the word θεωρησαι is to take a view; and thus implies their going to see if all things were in the same condition as when they had seen the body laid in the sepulchre.

Mk. xvi. 1. Sweet spices. Aromatics. Substances used in embalming. The idea of sweetness is not implied in the original. Many of the substances used for embalming were bitter; as, e.g., myrrh; and none of them, perhaps, could properly be called sweet. The word spices expresses all that is in the original.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mk. xvi. 1, 2. Let us be thankful that on the first day of the week we are invited to come, not with spices to embalm the dead body of Jesus, but with the incense of prayer and praise to rejoice in the triumphs and ascension of our risen and blessed Redeemer.

* 'Τῇ ἐπιφωσκουσῃ, Mt. xxviii. 1, or ἀλίαν νυκτὸς, Mk. xvi. 2, or "Ορθρου βαθέος, Lu. xxiv. 1, Βαθέως ἔτι σκότους, Jno. xx. 1, are descriptions, as nearly as possible, of the same point of time, on the first day of the week, the

MATT. xxviii. 2—4. MARK.

2 And, behold, there-was a-great earthquake: for the-angel of-the-Lord descended from heaven, and-came and-rolled-back the stone from the door, and sat upon 3 it. His countenance ἡ ἰδέα was like lightning, and his 4 raiment white as snow: and for fear of-him the keepers did-shake, and became as dead-men.

Conversation of the women by the way.—MARK xvi. 3, 4.

And they-said among themselves, Who shall-roll-us-away the stone 3 from the door of-the sepulchre? And when-they-looked, they-saw 4 that the stone was-rolled-away: for it-was very great.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 2. the angel of the Lord, &c.—1 Ti. iii. 16, 'And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels,' &c.

3. like lightning—Ps. civ. 4, 'Who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire:'—Da. x. 6, 'His face as the appearance of lightning,' raiment white as snow—so had Jesus appeared in the transfiguration, Mk. ix. 3, § 51, p. 53—Celestial beings are usually represented as clothed in white, Ac. i. 10; Da. vii. 9; Rev. iii 4, 5; iv. 4; vii. 13, 4.

4. the keepers, &c.—who had been set to watch the sepulchre, ch. xxvii. 62—6, § 92—Ac. ii. 24, 'It was not possible that he should be holden of it.'

Mk. xvi. 3, 4 Who shall roll us away, &c.—Difficulties are rolled away from before the people of God, as, under the Divine guidance, they go forward—see the case of the children of Israel, Ex. xiv. 10—22.

NOTES.

Mt. xxviii. 2. And, behold, there was a great earthquake. '"There had been," as in the margin.'

[Mr. Alford says, 'This must not be taken as pluperfect, which would be altogether inconsistent with the text. καὶ ἰδοὺ ἐγένετο must mean that the women were witnesses of the earthquake, and that which happened. σεισμὸς was not properly an earthquake, but was the sudden opening of the tomb by the descending angel, as the γὰρ shews. The rolling away was not done naturally, but by a shock, which σεισμός. It must not be supposed that the resurrection of the Lord took place at this time, as sometimes imagined and represented in paintings. It had taken place before—ἠγέρθη, are the words of the angel. It was not for Him, to whom (see Jno. xx. 19, 26, § 95, p. 498.) the stone was no hindrance, but for the women and the disciples, it was rolled away.'—See foot-note, first par.]

3. Like lightning. 'Corruscations of glory continually flaming from his face.'—A. C.

His raiment white as snow. He was clothed in garments emblematical of the glad tidings which he came to announce.

4. The keepers... became as dead men. God can, by one and the same means, comfort his servants, and terrify his enemies. The resurrection of Christ is a subject of terror to the servants of sin, and a subject of consolation to the sons of God; because it is a proof of the resurrection of both, the one to shame and everlasting contempt—the other to eternal glory.

Mk. xvi. 4. Who shall roll us away the stone. This seems to have been the only difficulty they apprehended. So they knew nothing of the priests' having sealed the stone, and placed a guard of soldiers there.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 2. The same power which moved heaven and earth in loosing the bands of death in the case of the Son of God, will be displayed in behalf of each of the many sons he is leading into glory.

Let us earnestly endeavour to awaken men to an early preparation for that day of the Lord.

3, 4 ver. How the wicked shall tremble when the Lord ariseth to shake terribly the earth!

---

sixteenth of the Jewish Nisan, and the seventh of the Julian April, two parties of women, disciples of our Lord and natives of Galilee, who had concerted among themselves, so early as the evening of the Friday before, to meet at the holy sepulchre, and complete the embalment of the dead body of Christ—the one the party of Salome, and the other the party of Joanna—set out accordingly, but from different quarters, and perhaps at somewhat different times, to proceed thither.

'About the same time, or soon after their departure, and while they were all upon the road, the angels descend from heaven, the earthquake ensues, the stone is removed from the entrance of the tomb, and our Saviour rises from the dead,'Mt. xxviii. 2—4; Mk. xvi. 9; at the time when the daily sacrifice, accompanied by the offering of the wave sheaf, was just beginning in the temple.

'The party of Salome, being the earlier of the two, in about an hour after their departure, and consequently ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου, Mk. xvi. 2, with sunrise or soon after it, arrive first at the tomb; and perceiving as they drew near that the stone had been removed from the mouth, and that the entrance was beset by a number of strangers, they conclude that the grave has been opened, and the body taken away. Mary Magdalene, as the youngest of the party, is sent back immediately to report this intelligence to Peter and John.—See on Jno. xx. 1, 2, p. 489. The other two women (after promising, perhaps, to wait there for her return, accompanied by Peter and John) proceed to the sepulchre, to be satisfied what was the matter. Upon this the particulars ensue, both outside and inside of the tomb, followed immediately by their departure, which are related, Mt. xxviii. 5—8, and Mk. xvi. 5—8. Though they might have promised to wait for the return of their companion, yet the vision which they saw in the tomb, and the message which they received for the apostles, are abundant reasons why they should not stay, but make the best of their way back.'—Greswell, Vol. III. Diss. xliii. pp. 312, ..3.

'The mission of the angels must have had for its object one of two purposes, or both: either to minister to the resurrection of our Lord himself, or to facilitate the access of the women to the sepulchre, as the first link necessary to the integrity of the chain of the evidence by which the fact of the resurrection was about to be confirmed; or, what is equally possible, to do both. On either of these suppositions the descent of the angel would nearly coincide with the time of the setting out of the women; for our Lord rose soon after the dawn of day, and they set out at the dawn of day. Much more, if it was designed for the latter of the above-mentioned purposes. To that end two things would be requisite, each of them effected by the presence or the agency of the angels; one to intimidate the guard, the other to remove the stone. The guard would have resisted the admission of the women, though the stone had created no difficulty; and yet the stone by itself was greater than they could remove.'—Ibid., p. 269.

'Having accomplished these purposes, the angel sat down on the stone at the entrance of the cave; and was found there, still seated, when the women arrived, Mt. xxviii. 2. The guard, too, must have continued in their original position; being so far overcome by their fear itself, as to have lost the power of motion: nor did they recover themselves, or venture to quit their situation, until the women were departed again, and the angel also had ceased to be visible without the tomb, ver. 1—4.

'Now the appearance of the angel was as likely to intimidate the women as the soldiers; the former being

THE HEARING EAR, AND THE SEEING EYE, THE LORD HATH MADE EVEN BOTH OF THEM.—Prov. xx. 12.
THERE IS GOLD, AND A MULTITUDE OF RUBIES: BUT THE LIPS OF KNOWLEDGE ARE A PRECIOUS JEWEL.—Prov. xx. 15

'He is risen.'—MATT. xxviii. 5, 6.

5 And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for 6 I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

Within the tomb.—MARK xvi. 5, 6.

And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on 5 the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: ye seek 6 Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here:
behold the place where they laid him.

The women depart from the tomb.

MATT. xxviii. 7, 8.	MARK xvi. 7, 8.
7 And go	[a] But go your way, [b] 7
[b] quickly, and tell his disciples [c]	tell his disciples
	[c] and Peter [d]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 5. Fear not ye, &c.—Contrast herewith the case of the keepers, ver. 4—and still more that of those who, in procuring their appointment, had said, ch. xxvii. 64, § 92, p. 478, 'lest his disciples, &c., so the last error shall be worse than the first.'—And who, in conspiring against Jesus, had said, Jno. xi. 48, § 56, 'If we let him thus alone, ... the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.'

6. He is not here, &c.—Jesus is not to be sought for in the sepulchre—see again, Lu. xxiv. 5, 6, p. 488, infra—This one idea seems to have been impressed on the mind of Mary, that her Lord was not now to be found in the sepulchre—see her report to Peter, Jno. xx. 2, p. 489.

the Lord—Not your Lord, but the Lord; thus acknowledging the crucified and risen Jesus to be his Lord, no less than theirs—see He. i. 6—Thus is he denominated by the angel, for he who is raised from the dead is set, Eph. i. 21, 'far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come:'—comp. ver. 6; 1 Pe. iii. 22; Ac. x. 36.

Mk. xvi. 5. And entering, &c.—as invited by the first angel, Mt. xxviii. 6.

6. Be not affrighted, &c.—comp. with the words of the first angel, whose testimony was thus confirmed, Mt. xxviii. 5, 6.

7. his disciples and Peter, &c.—Peter had denied that he was one of Jesus' disciples, Jno. xviii. 17, § 89, p. 431.

NOTES.

Mt. xxviii. 6. The place where the Lord lay. The place where a body was placed in a sepulchre was commonly a niche cut in the wall of the sepulchre.

Mk. xvi. 5. A young man. An angel, having the appearance of a young man.—See Lu. xxiv. 4, p. 488.

7. His disciples. τοῖς μαθηταῖς a. Many recent commentators understand, by this expression, Christ's followers in general. But the older ones (and lately Fritz.) seem right in taking it to denote the apostles, by a frequent figure of speech, whereby a part is put for the whole.

And Peter—means here, 'especially Peter.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 5, 6. The same angel who put the keepers in terror, removed out of the way of the women the obstacle to their entering the sepulchre, and met them with the comforting words, 'Fear not ye,' &c.

Mk. xvi. 7. Let us admire our Lord's compassionate regard for Peter, who had denied being Jesus' disciple, but had repented afterwards, weeping bitterly. The Redeemer would not that Peter should be swallowed up of overmuch sorrow.

[Jesus revealed himself to the disciples several times

---

just as unprepared for it as the latter; and such was the effect which it produced at first upon them. The language of the angel, then, is very naturally, and yet very clearly, addressed first of all to their fears: Μὴ φοβεῖσθε ὑμεῖς. Do not ye be afraid: a very distinct intimation that there were others present and others afraid as well as they; who, considering for what purpose they were there, had good reason to be afraid. But not so they, who had come with the pious and praiseworthy intent of doing honour to the crucified body of Jesus, Mt. xxviii. 5.

'Having thus shewn them that he was acquainted with their motive in visiting the tomb, he adds, in the next place (what was clearly to be expected in reference to such a purpose), that Jesus, whom they sought, was not to be found there; for he was risen. Next, in direct confirmation of the truth of this assertion, he appeals to the sensible testimony of the place where his body had been deposited; in which place they themselves had seen it laid, and which was now empty. Mt. xxviii. 6; Mk. xvi. 5, 6. Lastly, he promises a still clearer proof of its truth, by a personal manifestation of Jesus himself as soon as they returned into Galilee; whither he should precede them, as they had attended him from thence. Mt. xxviii. 7, 8; Mk. xvi. 7, 8. All these particulars are naturally connected together, agreeable to the circumstances of the case, and such altogether as might be expected, a priori, in an address to the first party of our Saviour's friends and disciples, who might have visited his tomb on the morning of the resurrection for any such purpose as is specified in the gospel narrative.

'It must strike every one who compares them together, that as the address in St. Matthew is characterized by a tone of encouragement, gentleness, and condescension, so the address in St. Luke is distinguished by a tone of severity and reproof. It begins with an expostulation (xxiv. 5, p. 488): Why seek ye the living, or rather the living one, among the dead? and the tone of this expostulation is maintained throughout; . . . . Nothing so severe as this is to be met with in St. Matthew: nor, in fact, have the two addresses anything in common, except merely the particulars interposed between these two members, the repeated assurance that Jesus was not there, but risen; which, however, is so natural and appropriate, under any circumstances of distinction besides, that it can prove nothing of the identity of the two occasions.'—Ibid., pp. 270, 1.

'As St. Matthew makes everything take place without the tomb, so does St. Mark make everything take place within the tomb. Upon entering in, the women, says he, found a young man sitting on their right hand; that is, as the topography of the holy sepulchre probably would demonstrate, near the site of what had been the grave of Christ. This angel in St. Mark, if his account is supplementary to St. Matthew's, or, if it is equally true with that, whether supplementary to it or not, must clearly have been a second angel, or a different one from the angel discovered outside at first. Laying, then, the two accounts together, we possess in them both in conjunction the evidence of two angels being concerned in the present transaction;

Matt. xxviii. 8.	Mark xvi. 8.
[d] that he-is-risen from the dead; and, behold, he-goeth-before you into Galilee; there shall-ye-see him: [e]	that he-goeth-before you into Galilee; there shall-ye-see him, [e] as he-said unto-you. [f]
[f] lo, I-have-told you. [g]
8 And they-departed quickly from the sepulchre [h] with fear and great joy;	[g] And they-went-out quickly, 8 and-fled from the sepulchre; [h]
[h] and-did-run to-bring-his disciples'-word. [i] (Ver. 9, § 95, p. 501.)	[i] for they trembled and were amazed: [k] neither said-they any-thing to-any man; for they-were-afraid. (Ver. 9, p. 491.)

(G. 2.)—Upon the departure of the first company of women, the guard betake themselves into the city.—Matt. xxviii. 11—.5.

[Ver. 10, § 95, p. 501.]

11 Now when-they'-were-going, behold, some-of-the watch came into the city, and 12 shewed unto-the chief-priests all the-things that-were-done. And when-they-were-assembled with the elders, and had-taken counsel, they-gave large ἱκανα money unto-the 13 soldiers, saying, Say-ye, His disciples came by-night, and-stole him away while-'we'-

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xvi. 7. into Galilee—whither they went after long delay, first in Jerusalem, Jno. xx. 19—29, § 95, p. 498, and probably by the sea of Galilee, xxi. § 97, p. 504—before following Jesus, ver. 19, to the mountain appointed, Mt. xxviii. 16—20, § 96, p. 502—see Note, b.

there shall ye see him, &c.—Previous to his presenting himself on the mountain, he did not appear in glory, but as in disguise—and so to the two disciples going to Emmaus, Lu. xxiv. 15, 6, § 94, p. 493—and at the sea of Galilee, Jno. xxi. 4, § 97, p. 506—but on the mountain they saw him and worshipped him, Mt. xxviii. 17, § 96, p. 502.

as he said unto you—Mt. xxvi. 32, [Mk. xiv. 28,] § 87, p. 406, 'After I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.'

8. neither said they any thing to any—It does not appear that the women spoke to either of the angels, 'for they were afraid.'—They were naturally thrown into a tumult of feeling, so that it was 'with fear and great joy' they 'did run to bring his disciples word,' Mt. xxviii. 8, supra.

Mt. xxviii. 11. shewed unto the chief priests, &c.—The news of the resurrection, it would seem, reached the disciples and the priests about the same time—The report of the women appeared to the disciples 'as idle tales,' Lu. xxiv. 11, p. 489, infra—It was less wonder that the priests did not believe, or that they acted as they did, Mt. xxviii. 12—4, supra.

13. while we slept—Wishing perhaps to regard as a dream that which had happened at the resurrection, ver. 2—4, p. 485, supra.

NOTES.

Mt. xxviii. 7. He goeth before, &c. 'The προάγει here is not to be understood as implying the journeying on the part of the Lord himself. It is cited from his own words, ch. xxvi. 32, § 87, p. 406; and there, as here, merely implies that he would be there when they arrived. It has a reference to the collecting of the flock which had been scattered by the smiting of the Shepherd.'—Alford.—See Jno. x. 4, [§ 55, p. 114].

Into Galilee. He had many disciples there whom he destined to be witnesses of his resurrection, and there he appeared to five hundred brethren at once, 1 Co. xv. 6, § 96, p. 502.

8. Fear and great joy. Fear, produced by the appearance of this glorious messenger of God; and great joy, occasioned by the glad tidings of the resurrection of their Lord and Master. At the mention of unexpected good news, fear and joy are generally intermingled.

11. Shewed unto the chief priests. To Annas and Caiaphas.

12. The elders. That is, the senators of the great sanhedrim or Jewish council of state; called in other parts of scripture, the elders of the people; they might now meet, as the sabbath was over.

[And had taken counsel. 'We must account for their incredulity and obstinacy by considering that they were men given up by God to the blind and malevolent passions of their own bad hearts.'—R. Watson.]

[13. Stole him away while we slept. This was a falsehood that confuted itself, and was the most effectual acknowledgment of the obstinacy and malice of those who invented it that can be imagined. Had all the soldiers been asleep, they could not have known anything which passed; if some were awake, why did they not alarm the others? Moreover, if they had slept, they would not have dared to certainly it, as it was death for a Roman guard to be found off his watch, as appears from the following passage in Josephus, Bell. Jud. iii. 5, 7, where he says, 'the Roman laws punish with death not only such as quit their ranks, but also such as are guilty of small neglects of duty;' and had this neglect of duty been discovered, the Jewish rulers would certainly have done their utmost to bring them to condign punishment. If there had been also the least shadow of probability in the accusation, they would assuredly have prosecuted the apostles with the most unrelenting vengeance. For, their credit and authority were very deeply concerned; so that this single omission was a full demonstration, that they did not believe in Judea, before they saw him in Galilee—but it appears to have been there that he was seen by them collectively. It is to the disciples in unity that he promises to reveal himself. So all the manifestations of his grace now, to us individually or in companies, are preparatory to our meeting him in glory, when in holiness and love we are gathered into oneness.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 8. Let us not only do, but do with alacrity, whatever God has directed us to perform.

which is a critical circumstance; for it will prove that, with respect to this fact at least, St. Matthew and St. Mark, instead of being at variance, are exactly consistent with St. Luke and St. John; and by the distinct angel, whose presence they each of them specify individually, both together equivalent to the two which appear simultaneously in St. Luke and St. John, they are tantamount to either.'—Ibid., p. 278.

MATT. xxviii. 14, 5.

14 slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure
15 ἀμερίμνους ποιήσομεν you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported διεφημίσθη among the Jews until this day. [Ver. 16, p. 502.]

(G. 3.)—The party of Joanna, the wife of Chuza, visit the sepulchre of Jesus. Particulars which then transpired.—Luke xxiv. 1—9, 11.

[Ch. xxiii. 56, § 92, p. 477.]

1 Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning ὄρθρου βαθέος, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain
2 others with them. And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. 3, And 4 they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed διαπορεῖσθαι thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining
5 garments: and as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said
6 unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 15. they took the money, &c.—Some of the watch, ver. 11—It does not appear that all the watch were thus bribed; those who had not gone to the priests would not have the same motive to conceal the truth.

Lu. xxiv. 1. they came unto the sepulchre, &c.—This company of women, spoken of by Luke, as bringing with them the spices, &c., they had prepared, must be distinguished from those who had previously come to see the sepulchre, as noticed by Matthew, xxviii. 1—6, p. 494.

2. they found the stone, &c.—so the two Marys and Salome, Mk. xvi. 4, p. 485, supra—By these the two angels had been already seen; the first outside the sepulchre, Mt. xxviii. 2—6, and the second inside, Mk. xvi. 5, 6, p. 486, supra.

4. much perplexed, &c.—Either they had not heard the report of the women who had been first at the sepulchre, Jno. xx. 2, p. 483, or having heard the report, treated it as an idle tale, as was their own statement by the eleven, Lu. xxiv. 9, 11, sb.

5. Why seek ye, &c.—There appears to be something like reproof in the angel's address to this second company—Contrast with the words addressed to the two Marys, &c., Mt. xxviii. 5, 6; Mk. xvi 6, p. 486—see the words of Jesus to Mary upon her second visit, Jno. xx. 15, p. 491, infra, 'Whom seekest thou?'

NOTES.

one word of the report which they so industriously circulated. It was also improbable in the extreme, that the intimidated apostles should attempt such an action, which would have been excessively rash even in the most experienced soldiers; it was still more improbable that they should succeed; and if they had, reproach, torture, and death were the whole recompense, which they could possibly have expected. The Jewish rulers were determined not to confess the truth; therefore not knowing what to say, they were reduced to the distressing necessity of circulating one of the most senseless lies that ever was fabricated.]

Mt. xxviii. 15. This saying as ... reported. This account of the disappearance of the body of Jesus from the sepulchre is commonly given.

Until this day. The time when Matthew wrote this gospel, i.e., about twelve or thirteen years after the resurrection.—See the date, Vol. I. p. xxvi.

Lu. xxiv. 1. Very early in the morning. Βρόρου βαθέως. 'Deep dawn,' i.e., just beginning to dawn.

4. In shining garments. 'Shining like lightning.'

5. The living. τὸν ζῶντα. Simply 'the living;' 'Him who liveth.'—Alford.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 11—5. Priestly pride submits to the meanest arts.

Lu. xxiv. 4. That which causes perplexity may, when properly understood, be the occasion of joy unspeakable; as was the cause of our Lord's removal from the tomb.

[5, 6 ver. If the women were reproved for seeking the living among the dead, when the resurrection of Christ was so little known, how much more to be blamed are those who, professing to believe in a risen and ascended Saviour, still visit the tomb, or have recourse to even more imbecile means for bringing them near to the once crucified Jesus! 'He is not here, but is risen:']

'According to St. Luke, the party of Joanna got their spices ready on the day of the preparation, as soon as they returned from the garden, after the burial, but before the sabbath, and rested, as he expresses it, subsequently during the sabbath, according to the commandment; whereas it is expressly affirmed by St. Mark, xvi. 1, (p. 484,) that the party of Salome did not get theirs ready until after the sabbath; that is, a night and a day later:—Διαγορασάντων τοῦ σαββάτου .... ἠγόρασαν ἀρώματα, ἵνα ἐλθοῦσαι ἀλείψωσιν αὐτόν. This must be sufficient to prove that the two parties were so far distinct, and acted independently of each other...

'If we contrast the account of the visit in St. Matthew with the account of the visit in St. Luke, when the women arrived at the tomb, according to the former, they found the stone removed from the entrance, an angel sitting upon it, and the watch still present about the sepulchre, but in a state of great alarm and consternation; according to the latter, they found the stone removed indeed, but no one visible, either in or about the tomb, and the entrance in particular entirely unoccupied and free. If the visits were one and the same, these different accounts would not be consistent; but if the visits themselves were distinct, both of them may be true. ....

'If we compare St. Mark's account with St. Luke's, according to the former, upon entering the tomb, and before they had time to examine whether the body was still to be seen or not, the women perceived an angel in a sitting posture, and on their right: according to St. Luke, upon entering the tomb they saw no one present; and before the appearance of any angel they had time to examine and to discover that the body was missing, and to feel all the effects of the surprise and the perplexity produced by the discovery: and after this, when the angels appeared to them, they appeared both together, or at once, and not in a sitting, but in a standing position. ...

'If we compare St. Matthew and St. Mark, in conjunction with St. Luke, then, though there had been no other appearance of discrepancy between them, yet the language ascribed to the angels respectively in each, is so different, as to prove that the visions themselves, and the occasions out of which they arose, must have been distinct. ... There was this difference in the situation of the parties addressed, which might produce a corresponding difference in the terms of the address, that the first party having seen the angel before they had any the least evidence of the resurrection, were bereft of their presence of mind from the first; they had neither time nor capacity for summoning their recollection to their aid, and remembering the predictions of Christ; but the second party having entered the tomb without seeing any one, and examined the interior without finding anything there, had leisure and opportunity to have reasoned, from existing appearances, to the fact of the resurrection of Christ—confirming the conclusion by the recollection of his own assurances—before they were alarmed by the sudden manifestation of the angels: which yet it is evident they did not do; and for this dulness, or this unbelief, they might incur a specific rebuke.'—Ibid., pp 265—73.

WORLDLY WISDOM IS APT TO DISPLAY THE MOST ARRANT FOLLY IN ITS MANNER OF OPPOSING THE TRUTH.
THE WAYS OF MAN ARE BEFORE THE EYES OF THE LORD, AND HE PONDERETH ALL HIS GOINGS.—Prov. v. 21.

LUKE xxiv. 7—9, 11.

7 remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise-8 again. And they remembered his words, 9, and returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest. [Ver. 10, infra.]
11 And their words seemed to them as idle tales λῆρος, and they believed them not.
[Ver. 12, p. 490.]

(G. 4.)—Mary of Magdala, one of the party of Salome, brings word to Peter and John that the body of Jesus was taken away from the sepulchre.

LUKE xxiv. 10. (Ver. 9, supra.)

JOHN xx. 1, 2. (Ch. xix. 42, § 92, p. 476.)*

"The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene 1 early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre. Then 2 she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them,
They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him."

10 Then went It was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.† [Ver. 11, supra.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 6, 7. remember how, &c.—Jesus, when in Galilee, had predicted his death and resurrection, ch. ix. 22, 43—5, §§ 50, .2, pp. 40, 71.

11. believed them not—Ps. cxxvi. 1, 'When the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream.'—Peter, when delivered from prison by the angel, 'thought he saw a vision,' Ac. xii. 9—Nor could those by whom 'prayer was made without ceasing . . . unto God for him,' believe that he was delivered, ver. 5, 12—.5.

Jno. xx. 2. whom Jesus loved—see ch. i. 47, § 10, p. 72; xiii. 23, § 87, p. 371.

Lu. xxiv. 10. It was Mary Magdalene, &c.—She was with the first company, Mt. xxviii. 1, p. 484; and seems to have brought the first and very imperfect report, Jno. xx. 2, supra.

Joanna—was probably with the company mentioned, ver. 1—9, p. 488, supra.

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 6. When he was yet in Galilee. The mention of Galilee is remarkable, as occurring in the angelic speeches in Matthew and Mark (see p. 487) in quite another connexion. Here it is said to the women, as being from Galilee, see ch. xxiii. 55, [§ 92, p. 477,] and meaning, 'when he was yet with you.'

7. Sinful men. Or heathens, ἀνθρώπων ἁμαρτωλῶν, i.e., the Romans, by whom only he could be put to death; for the Jews themselves acknowledged that this power was now vested in the hands of the Roman governor alone.—See Jno. xix. 15, § 90, p. 448.

8. They remembered his words. Those sayings of our Lord in which he had foretold that he should 'be crucified, and the third day rise again.'

9. All the rest. All the other disciples of Jesus who at this time companied with the eleven apostles. —Comp. ver. 33, § 95, p. 497; Ac. i. 15, 21.

Jno. xx. 1. The first day of the week. On what we call Sunday, the morning after the Jewish sabbath.

Cometh Mary Magdalene. She was not alone when mentioned by Mark, xvi. 1, p 484. Does this appear in the oldest below? One thing we may conclude for certain, that she, for some reason, did not see the vision, Mt. xxviii. 1—3, ib.

Mary Magdalene. 'She was with the first party, but did not go unto the sepulchre, so as to hear the words of the angel; but seeing as she approached it, that the stone was removed, she concluded that the first report may be discredited. Those who for a while slight our testimony may ultimately become its boldest advocates.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 6—9. See margin. The words of prophecy, even when not understood previous to the event, may yet have a powerful influence in establishing us in the faith after the fulfilment is made plain to us.

9, 11 ver. Let us not be discouraged although our

Jno. xx. 1, 2. Had Mary waited to receive the angel's message, she would not have uttered so unfounded a complaint.

* 'St. John has related two visits to the tomb; the first of which, xx. 1, 2, as made at the same time with the visit in St. Matthew and St. Mark, and by one among others who was equally concerned in that; the second as a visit which arose out of the report of the party who had made the first, and as a visit ascribed to Simon Peter in particular, this is the same with the second in Luke. The circumstances of the two visits are perfectly consistent with each other; the only difference between them is that St. John enters more into particulars.

'Early in the morning, on the first day of the week, while it was still dark, Mary of Magdala, Jno. xx. 1, 2, ἔρχεται, which may very well mean sets out to go, to the tomb, and seeth the stone removed from the tomb. There is no intimation in these words that she had yet entered the tomb. She runneth, therefore, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, to make a report of this discovery. The language of the original is descriptive of haste and surprise, and leads to the same conclusion, that she could not have stayed to enter the tomb, but as soon as she saw that the stone had been removed, must have run back directly, to tell Peter and John. . . .

'What then do we observe to take place? Mary Magdalene, a single woman, the youngest, and therefore the most active of the party, runneth immediately, and cometh to Peter and John with a report to this effect—They have taken away the body of the Lord, and we know not where they have laid it. These words prove two things: first, that she has some particular persons in her eye when she says, they have taken away the body of the Lord, such as the guard might be; and secondly, that she was not alone, she had not made the observation by herself; there were others with her if she says we know not where they have laid it. Compare this language, now, with what follows at ver. 13, when she was unquestionably by herself, and is repeating the same declaration to the angels—"They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him."—Ibid., pp. 288—.91.

† 'It is not impossible that the party of Salome, after arriving first, and visiting the tomb first, as related by St. Matthew and St. Mark, had fallen in upon their return with the party of Joanna and accompanied them to the sepulchre again.'—Ibid., p. 274.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF TIME AND PLACE ARE OF GREAT USE IN HELPING THE MEMORY. WHO EVER PERISHED, BRING INNOCENT? OR WHERE WERE THE RIGHTEOUS CUT OFF?—Job iv. 7.

(G. 5.)—Peter and John visit the sepulchre in haste: and return, without seeing Jesus.

LUKE xxiv. 12. (Ver. 11, p. 489.)

12 Then arose Peter, and-ran unto the sepulchre and stooping-down,

he-beheld the linen-cloths laid by-themselves, and departed,

[a] wondering in himself at-that which-was-come-to-pass.
(Ch. xxiv. 13, § 94, p. 493.)

JOHN xx. 3—10.

[*] Peter therefore went-forth, 3 and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.
So they-ran both together: and the other 4 disciple did-out-run προέδραμε τάχιον
Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.
And he-stooping-down, and looking in, 5 saw the linen-clothes lying; yet went-he-not-in. Then cometh Simon Peter fol- 6 lowing him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth θεωρεῖ the linen-clothes lie, and 7 the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen-clothes, but wrapped-together ἐντετυλιγμένον in a place by-itself χωρίς. Then went-in also that other 8 disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he-saw, and believed. For as-yet-they- 9 knew-not the scripture, that he must rise-again from the dead. Then the disciples 10 went-away again unto their-own-home.[a]

(G. 6.)—AFTER THE DEPARTURE OF PETER AND JOHN, JESUS APPEARS TO MARY OF MAGDALA IN THE GARDEN: WHICH IS HIS FIRST APPEARANCE AFTER HIS RESURRECTION.—Mark xvi. 9—11. John xx. 11—.8.[*]

The vision of the angels to Mary Magdalene. In the garden.

JOHN xx. 11—.3.

But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she-wept, 11

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xx. 5. linen clothes—ch. xix. 40, § 92, p. 476.

7. napkin — see at the raising of Lazarus, ch. xi. 44, § 58, p. 132.

8. believed—what had been reported by Mary, ver. 2.

9. the scripture, &c.—Ps. xvi. 10—Referred to by Peter, Ac. ii. 25—31; and by Paul, xiii. 35—.7.

NOTES.

body of her Lord was removed also, and hastily returned to the disciples to bring them word; and in a city of such magnitude as Jerusalem, it is nothing surprising that she did not meet with Joanna and the other women. From this it is clear, that Mary Magdalene did not go on to the sepulchre with Mary the mother of James or Salome, nor with Joanna, or she could not have said "they have taken away," &c., for both parties heard the angel say, "He is risen."†—Gresswell.

Jno. xx. 5. Went he not in. 'Why? Because he was fully satisfied that the body was not there. But why did he not seize upon the linen clothes, and keep them as a most precious relic? Because he had too much religion and too much sense; and the time of superstition and nonsense was not yet arrived, in which bits of rotten wood, rags of rotten cloth, decayed bones (to whom originally belonging no one knows), and bramble bushes should become objects of religious adoration.'—A. C.

6. The linen clothes. Not linen apparel, but the linen cloths in which the body of Jesus had been bound.—See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra.

7. Wrapped together in a place by itself. The providence of God ordered these very little matters so that they became the fullest proofs against the lie of the chief priests, that the body had been stolen away by the disciples.

8. That other disciple. John.

Saw. That the body was not there.

And believed. That it had been taken away, as Mary had said; but he did not believe that he was risen from the dead.

On this circumstance it is well remarked by Racine (in his observations on particular passages of scripture), that 'the linen clothes thus placed and disposed apart from one another, plainly shewed that the body had not been carried away by thieves. Those who steal are not observed to do things in such a quiet, orderly manner.'

[10. πρὸς ἑαυτούς. Render, 'to themselves,' i.e., their companions, who then, jointly with them, occupied the same house. Thus it comes to mean 'to their homes;' of which sense many examples are adduced by the commentators, as Josephus, Ant. v ii. 4, 6, πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἕκαστος ἀπῆεσαν. Nu. xxiv. 25, ἀπῆλθε πρὸς ἑαυτόν.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xx. 9. When we think of the ignorance of the scripture testimony with regard to Christ manifested by those who so long enjoyed the instructions of the best of Teachers, who so frequently and earnestly discoursed to them respecting his approaching death and resurrection—let us be less disposed to reproach their dulness of apprehension, than to suspect our own selves. There may be many things both in Revelation and in Providence of which we are profoundly ignorant, although we have been given ample means of information regarding them.]

[It becomes us not only to make ourselves acquainted with fulfilled prophecy, but also with those portions of the scriptures which speak of the future; that so we may be prepared for their fulfilment, and be enabled to take a larger and more connected view of the great working of God in providence and in grace.]

[a] 'Mary's return perhaps was not earlier than the second or third hour of the day, if she had to go back as far as Bethany to make her report, Lu. xxiv. 12; Jno. xx. 2—10.'—Ibid., p. 313.

[*] 'Upon the departure of Peter and John, which might not be until after the third hour of the day, Mary,

JOHN XX. 12, 13.

she-stooped-down, and looked into the sepulchre, and seeth two angels 12 in white sitting, the-one at the head, and the-other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had-lain. And they say unto-her, Woman, why weepest- 13 thou? She-saith unto-them, Because they-have-taken-away my Lord, and I-know not where they-have-laid him.

Jesus appears to Mary of Magdala.

MARK xvi. 9—11. JOHN xx. 14—18.
(Ver. 8, p. 487.)

9 Now when-Jesus-was-risen early the-first day of-the-week, he-appeared first to-Mary Magdalene, out-of whom he-had-cast seven devils.

"And when-she-had-thus-said, she-turned-herself 14 back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it-was Jesus. Jesus saith unto-her, Woman, why 15 weepest-thou? whom seekest-thou? She, supposing him-to-be the gardener, saith unto-him, Sir, if thou have-borne-him-hence, tell me where thou-hast-laid him, and-I will-take-him-away. Jesus saith unto- 16 her, Mary. She turned-herself, and-saith unto-him, Rabboni; which is-to-say, Master. Jesus saith unto- 17

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xx. 12. two angels, &c.—Angels had appeared upon the first visit to the sepulchre, Mt. xxviii. 1—6; Mk. xvi. 1—6, p. 484, supra—The two angels had appeared to the second company of women, as two men, Lu. xxiv. 4, p. 488—but they are not said to have been seen by the two disciples immediately before their appearing to Mary the second time, Jno. xx. 5—9.

13. why weepest thou?—She needed not have wept, had she in truth heard the words spoken by the angels upon the first visit to the sepulchre, Mt. xxviii. 5, 6; Mk. xvi. 6, 7, p. 486.

they have taken away, &c.—The words spoken to Peter, ver. 2, p. 483, in place of the message the women had been sent to deliver, Mk. xvi. 7, p. 486.

14. saw Jesus, &c.—Mk. xvi. 9, supra, 'He appeared first to Mary Magdalene,' knew not that it was Jesus—so the two disciples, Lu. xxiv. 15—31, § 94, p. 493—The consternation into which the women had been thrown by the appearance of the angels upon their first visit, shews the wisdom and condescension of Jesus, in thus veiling his glory, and gradually and more familiarly making himself known to them as risen from the dead.

15. whom seekest thou?—That which Mary had fixed her thoughts upon, was the dead body of Jesus, ver. 13, supra—But Jesus, who had predicted his resurrection, is 'the faithful and true witness,' Rev. iii. 14—1. 17, 18, 'I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.'

NOTES.

Jno. xx. 12. Two angels in white sitting. The party of women, with whom Mary did not go forward when she saw that the stone was removed (see Mk. xvi. 4), saw, first outside of the tomb an angel sitting on the stone (see Mt. xxviii. 2); afterwards they entered into the tomb, and 'saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment;' (see Mk. xvi. 5—7). These, together, Mary saw when she stooped down and looked into the sepulchre.

'What wonder if the heavenly hosts were variously and often visible on this great day?'

13. Why weepest thou? &c. Here again the finest psychological truth underlies the narrative. The other women, Mk. xvi. 5, p. 486; Lu. xxiv. 5, p. 488, were afraid at the vision; but now Mary, having but one thought or desire, to recover the lost body of her Lord, feels no fear.

[15. Supposing him to be the gardener. Κηπουρος, the inspector, or overseer of the garden, from κηπος, a garden, and ουρος, an inspector; the person who had the charge of the workmen, and the care of the produce of the garden, and who rendered account to the owner.]

Sir. κυριε. The appellation of courtesy to an unknown person.

[16. Mary. With one word, and that word her name, the Lord awakens all the consciousness of his presence, calling her in that tone doubtless in which her soul had been so often summoned to receive Divine knowledge and precious comfort.]

Rabboni. "'My master," or merely "Master." She gives way to no impassioned exclamations, but pours out her satisfaction and joy in this one word, according to the deepest psychological truth.'—Alford.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xx. 12. How wonderful that the Lord of life and glory should condescend to inhabit the tomb! These things the angels desire to look into; nor should they be less interesting to us, for whose sake it was that he died and rose again.

[13 ver. Mary had led even Peter and John to believe in opposition to scripture and the uniform teaching of our Lord himself, see ver. 8, 9. She here repeats her error in the presence of the angels, who had witnessed his resurrection; nay, afterwards to our Lord himself, she speaks of his having been borne away out of the sepulchre. Let us beware of running away, like Mary, with hasty impressions, and our own suppositions in place of waiting to receive the truth.]

14 ver. It often happens still, although in a different sense, that Jesus is near when the disciple knows not that it is Jesus.

15 ver. We should have a sympathy with others in distress even when their sorrow is groundless—we should patiently and perseveringly set ourselves to correct the serious mistakes especially of those who love the truth, but may for the time be in error.

16 ver. See margin.

being left by herself (which might be for some time longer), has the vision of the angels, Jno. xx. 11—13; and immediately after, ver. 14—18, Mk. xvi. 9—11, a personal manifestation to herself of Jesus Christ alive: which is the first of its kind. Her report of this manifestation could not be much earlier than the fifth or even the sixth hou. of the day.'—Ibid.

'A personal manifestation of Christ alive again to those who had known him before his death was demonstrative proof of his resurrection. This irresistible evidence was not all at once vouchsafed; nor would it perhaps have been proper that it should be. The minor or subordinate evidence was first to produce its effect. The personal inspection of the tomb, and the testimony of the angels, were the only media of conviction for a time. These were submitted to the women; and through them to the rest of the disciples: and some interval was necessary to ascertain their proper effect, before the sensible evidence of the appear-

MARK xvi. 10, .1.

10 [a]And-she went and-told[e] them
[d]that-had-been with him, as-they-mourned and wept.[e]

11 / And-they, when-they-had-heard that he-was-alive, and had-been-seen of her, believed-not.

JOHN xx. 17, .8.

her, Touch me not Μή μου ἅπτου; for I-am not-yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto-them, I-ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.[b]

Mary Magdalene came and-told 18
[c]the disciples[d]
[e]that she-had-seen the Lord, and that he-had-spoken these-things unto-her[f]
(Ver. 19, § 95, p. 498.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xx. 17. Touch me not—Mary was not to think of laying hold upon Jesus, as if he were now returned to abide upon earth with his disciples; she was not thus to understand the words he had spoken, ch. xvi. 22, § 87, p. 398.

go to my brethren, &c.—Mt. xxviii. 10, 'Go tell my brethren'—Ps. xxii. 22, 'I will declare thy name unto my brethren:'—Rom. viii. 29, he is 'the firstborn among many brethren.'—Ile. ii. 11, 'Both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them,' &c.

your Father—God as a Father provides for his children, Mt. vi. 31—4, § 19, p. 135—Rom. viii. 15, 'Ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.'—Ga. iv. 6, 7—2 Co. vi. 18, I 'will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons,' &c.

my God—2 Co. i. 3, 'Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;'—Eph. i. 3, 'Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,'—17, 'the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory,' your God—God said to Abraham, Ge. xvii. 7, I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.'—Ps. xliii. 4, I will 'praise thee, O God my God.'—xlviii. 14, 'This God is our God for ever and ever:'—Is. xli. 10, 'Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed: for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.'—Je. xxxi. 33, 'This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.'—See also Ezs. xxxvi. 28, 'And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.'—Rom. iii. 29, 'Is he the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:'—Rev. xxi. 3, 'Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.'—Comp. with Zec. ii. 10, .1.

18. told the disciples, &c.—Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501, 'Go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.'—Lu. xxiv. 10, p. 488, 'It was Mary Magdalene, ... which told these things unto the apostles.'

Mk. xvi. 11. believed not—so Lu. xxiv. 11, 41.—Thus were the apostles taught to deal patiently with others' slowness of heart, and dulness of understanding, Ac. iii. 17—21.

NOTES.

Jno. xx. 17. Touch me not. 'μή μου ἅπτου. The verb signifies "to embrace," "clasp the knees," "fall at the feet." "Forbear to touch me;" in other words, "Let me go; waste not the time in expressing your joy, but tell the brethren this comforting message;—in a little time I shall ascend," &c. The knees were embraced in the East as a mark of profound respect.'—Bloomf.

I am not yet ascended. He warned her not to think of now holding him, as if he were returned to remain. For he must first ascend to his Father, to appear before God for us. After which it is, that he will come to set up his kingdom, and we shall 'ever be with the Lord.'

[But go to my brethren. 'Thus does he intimate in the strongest manner the forgiveness of their fault, even without ever mentioning it. These exquisite touches, which everywhere abound in the evangelical writings, shew how perfectly Christ knew our frame.—I ascend. He anticipates it in his thoughts, and so speaks of it as a thing already present.—Unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God. This uncommon expression shews, that the only begotten Son has all kind of fellowship with God. And a fellowship with God the Father, some way resembling his own, he bestows upon his brethren. Yet he does not say, our God; for no creature can be raised to an equality with him, but my God and your God; intimating that the Father is his in a singular and incommunicable manner, and ours through him in such a kind as a creature is capable of.'—Wesley.]

My brethren. This is the blessed relationship into which all true believers are brought.

I ascend unto my Father, &c. I go up, as I said, to prepare a place for you, and I will return again, ... that where I am, there ye may be also.

[' He says not, ascend to heaven; but, in order to remind them of the relation in which he stands to God, and they to him, he says, "unto my Father;" thus signifying that he who "was in the beginning with God," is going to act as their Mediator with God, who would now become their Father and their God: not by creation only, but by the spiritual paternity implied in the gospel covenant.'—Bloomf.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xx. 17. We should endeavour to moderate both our hopes and our fears according to the requirements of truth. Mary had been distressed about the supposed removal of the dead body of her Lord, when he was actually risen from the dead: and now she seems to have been ready to clasp him to her heart, as if he had returned no more to take from her; but Jesus, as he had already proved the folly of her fears, would also prevent the opposite delusion by which she was now in danger of being misled.]

Mary is sent in person to correct her own misstatement. If we have even unwittingly been instrumental in propagating error, we ought to be the more zealous in spreading a knowledge of the truth.

[The interest of Jesus in our welfare, and his power to befriend us, are not the less because of his removal to his Father and his God. His Father is our Father, who so loved us as to give his only begotten Son for us. His God is our God, whose power will be manifest, as it was in his case by our resurrection.]

[Mk. xvi. 10, .1. When we meet with unbelief in others respecting the great truths of Christianity, let us remember what instruction the first disciples had received—their dullness of apprehension and slowness to receive this one of the most important facts connected with man's redemption. And let us learn patiently to persevere in testifying of Jesus Christ crucified, nay, rather that is risen again—'who also maketh intercession for us.']

---

[a] Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501, 'Go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.'—Lu. xxiv. 10, p. 488, 'It was Mary Magdalene, ... which told these things unto the apostles.'

[b] Mk. xvi. 11. believed not—so Lu. xxiv. 11, 41.—Thus were the apostles taught to deal patiently with others' slowness of heart, and dulness of understanding, Ac. iii. 17—21.

[c] Jno. xx. 17. Touch me not—Mary was not to think of laying hold upon Jesus, as if he were now returned to abide upon earth with his disciples; she was not thus to understand the words he had spoken, ch. xvi. 22, § 87, p. 398.

go to my brethren, &c.—Mt. xxviii. 10, 'Go tell my brethren'—Ps. xxii. 22, 'I will declare thy name unto my brethren:'—Rom. viii. 29, he is 'the firstborn among many brethren.'—Ile. ii. 11, 'Both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them,' &c.

your Father—God as a Father provides for his children, Mt. vi. 31—4, § 19, p. 135—Rom. viii. 15, 'Ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.'—Ga. iv. 6, 7—2 Co. vi. 18, I 'will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons,' &c.

my God—2 Co. i. 3, 'Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;'—Eph. i. 3, 'Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,'—17, 'the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory,' your God—God said to Abraham, Ge. xvii. 7, I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.'—Ps. xliii. 4, I will 'praise thee, O God my God.'—xlviii. 14, 'This God is our God for ever and ever:'—Is. xli. 10, 'Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed: for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.'—Je. xxxi. 33, 'This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.'—See also Ezs. xxxvi. 28, 'And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.'—Rom. iii. 29, 'Is he the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:'—Rev. xxi. 3, 'Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.'—Comp. with Zec. ii. 10, .1.

18. told the disciples, &c.—Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501, 'Go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.'—Lu. xxiv. 10, p. 488, 'It was Mary Magdalene, ... which told these things unto the apostles.'

Mk. xvi. 11. believed not—so Lu. xxiv. 11, 41.—Thus were the apostles taught to deal patiently with others' slowness of heart, and dulness of understanding, Ac. iii. 17—21.

[d] Jno. xx. 17, .8. her, Touch me not Μή μου ἅπτου; for I-am not-yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto-them, I-ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

[e] Mary Magdalene came and-told 18 the disciples that she-had-seen the Lord, and that he-had-spoken these-things unto-her (Ver. 19, § 95, p. 498.)

[f] Mk. xvi. 10, .1. And-she went and-told them that-had-been with him, as-they-mourned and wept. And-they, when-they-had-heard that he-was-alive, and had-been-seen of her, believed-not.

Accordingly, even the first such manifestation, the manifestation to Mary, took place comparatively late in the morning; and the appearances, which came after it, still later in the course of the same day. Even this personal manifestation, though the first of its kind, was made but to one witness; the next, only to two witnesses; and the last or latest of all, to the whole body of the apostles in conjunction.'—Ibid., p. 296.

SECTION 94.—(G. 7.)—[Lesson 98.*]—No. 94.—JESUS APPEARS TO CLEOPAS AND ANOTHER OF THE DISCIPLES IN THE WAY TO EMMAUS; WHICH IS HIS SECOND APPEARANCE.—Mark xvi. 12. Luke xxiv. 13—32.†

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mk. xvi. 12. Lu. xxiv. 13. After the visit of the women to the sepulchre, on the same day, but previous to its being known to the disciples generally that Jesus had been seen by Mary, he appears to two of them as they are journeying to Emmaus, a village about seven and a half miles N. W. of Jerusalem.

Lu. xxiv. 14. The two disciples converse together about what has occurred in connexion with the death and reported resurrection of Jesus.

—— 15, .6. While they talk over and inquire into the truth and meaning of these things, Jesus himself comes up with them; but at first they do not recognise him to be their risen Lord.

—— 17. He inquires into the subject of the conversation, in which they appear to be so deeply and so painfully interested.

—— 18. One of them, named Cleopas, asks if he be only a stranger in Jerusalem, and knew not the things that have lately taken place there.

—— 19. Jesus asks, 'What things?'

—— 19, 20. They reply, 'Concerning Jesus of Nazareth,' a prophet acknowledged by God before all the people, and yet by the chief priests and rulers condemned and crucified.

—— 21. They had trusted that Jesus would have proved to be the Redeemer of Israel. They notice the crisis to which they have come. It is now the third day since his crucifixion; the day, according to some, on which, if a true prophet, he should arise from the dead.

Lu. xxiv. 22, .3. They speak of what is reported concerning the appearance and words of the angels to the women at the sepulchre.

—— 24. Some of themselves having visited the sepulchre, found it as described by the women; but the grand evidence of Jesus' resurrection was still wanting: 'him they saw not.'

—— 25. Jesus reproaches them for their dulness of perception and slowness to believe the prophetic scriptures.

—— 26. He reminds them of the keys necessary to unlock the treasures hid in Christ—the knowledge of his sufferings and of his glory.

—— 27. He gives them an example of that which he requires of those upon whom he bestows the power of the keys: beginning at Moses, and passing down through all the prophets, he opens up in all the scriptures the truth concerning himself.

—— 28, .9. They approach Emmaus, where Jesus, at their earnest request, goes in to tarry with them.

—— 30, .1. While sitting at meat, he takes bread, blesses, breaks, and gives to them, upon which their eyes are opened, and they know him.

—— 31, .2. Jesus removes himself from the view of the two disciples; who, being now given leisure to look back upon the way in which the Lord hath led them, say, 'Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?'

MARK xvi. 12.

12 [a]After that he-appeared εφανερωθη in another form μορφη unto-two of them,[b]

[c]as-they-walked, and-went into the-country.[d]
(Ver. 13, ℔ 95, p. 497.)

LUKE xxiv. 13—32.
(Ver. 12, ℔ 93, p. 490.)
And, behold, 13
two of them went
[b]that same day[c]

[d]to a-village called Emmaus, which-was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. And they talked ὁμίλουν together of all 14 these-things which-had-happened. And it 15 came-to-pass, that, while they communed εν τω ὁμιλειν together and reasoned συζητειν,

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xvi. 12. another form—Jesus' previous appearance, noticed ver. 9, p. 491, is more fully described, Jno. xx. 15—.7, ib.

Lu. xxiv. 15. while they communed—Mal. iii. 16, 'Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard,' &c.

NOTES.

Mk. xvi. 12. Another form. See on Lu. xxiv. 17, infra, p. 494.

Two of them. One of them, Lu. xxiv. 18, was called Cleopas. Many have supposed that the other was Luke, and that he omitted his own name from modesty.

Lu. xxiv. 13. Furlongs, ... threescore furlongs. 'Seven or eight miles west of Jerusalem; afterwards made a city and Roman colony, called Nicopolis. There was another Emmaus about twenty-two miles from Jerusalem.'—Wells.—This opinion is adopted by many—but see GEOG. NOTICE, p. 496.

[15. And reasoned. Συζητειν. Concerning the probability or improbability of Christ being the Messiah, or of his resurrection from the dead. It was a laudable custom of the Jews, and very common also, to converse about the law in all their journeyings: and now they had especial reason to discourse together, both of the law and the prophets, from the transactions which had recently taken place.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Lu. xxiv. 14. It is good for the disciples to talk together of what the Lord hath done and said—earnestly endeavouring to ascertain the truth and meaning of both.—See margin.

* Lesson 98, in the 'Graduated Simultaneous System,' includes Sections 94 and 95; and embraces Matt. xxviii. 9, 10; Mark xvi. 12—4; Luke xxiv. 13—43; 1 Cor. xv. 5; John xx. 19—29; Nos. 94, .5.

† 'The earliest manifestations of our Saviour were doubtless the most interesting, and perhaps the most

THE DISCIPLES SHOULD EVER SPEAK AND ACT AS IF JESUS HIMSELF FORMED ONE OF THE COMPANY. WHEN WE LEAST EXPECT IT, THE LORD MAY BE VERY NEAR TO REMOVE ALL OUR DOUBTS.

LUKE xxiv. 16—25.

16 Jesus himself drew-near, and-went-with them. But their eyes were-holden ἐκρατοῦντο 17 that they-should-'not'-know him. And he-said unto them, What-manner-of communications are these that ye-have ἀντιβάλλετε one-to-another, as-ye-walk, and are sad?
18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art-'thou only '-a-stranger in Jerusalem, and hast-'not'-known the-things which-are-come-to-pass there 19 in these days? And he-said unto-them, What-things? And they said unto-him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet ἀνὴρ προφήτης mighty in deed and 20 word before God and all the people: and how the chief-priests and our rulers delivered 21 him to be-condemned to-death, and have-crucified him. But we trusted ἠλπίζομεν that it-had-been he which should have-redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to-day is the 22 third day since these-things were-done. Yea, and certain women also of our-company 23 made-'us'-astonished, which-were early at the sepulchre; and when-they-found not his body, they-came, saying, that-they-had-'also'-seen a-vision of-angels, which said that-24 he'-was-alive. And certain of-them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found 25 it even-so as the women had-said: but him they-saw not. Then he said unto them, O

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 16. their eyes were holden, &c.—The same seems to have been the case of Mary, Jno. xx. 14, § 93, p. 491; and afterwards of the disciples at the sea of Galilee, xxi. 4, § 97, p. 506.

17. What manner, &c.—see also ver. 19—so the elder addressed John, when he meant to communicate the information that apostle required, Rev. vii. 13—The two disciples were in a reasoning mood, and Jesus conformed himself to their state of mind—so Paul, 1 Co. ix. 22, 'I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.'

18. Cleopas, &c.—Mary the wife of Cleopas, who was sister to Mary the mother of Jesus, appears to have been one of the first at the sepulchre; she is called mother of James, Mk. xvi. 1; Lu. xxiv. 10, § 93, p. 484, .9—see Jno. xix. 25, § 91, p. 465.

19. a prophet mighty in deed and word—as if tracing his likeness to Moses, who was 'mighty in words and in deeds,' Ac. vii. 22—and like to whom was the prophet that Israel was to hear in all things, De. xviii. 18, .9—The like testimony gave Peter before the Jews, Ac. ii. 22, 'A man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:' —iii. 22, .3—and as opening the gospel to the Gentiles, x. 38—43.

before God and all the people, &c.—ch. ii. 52, § 6, p. 42, 'In favour with God and man.'

20. how the chief priests, &c.—'The whole multitude of them,' &c., ch. xxiii. 1, § 89, p. 435—comp. xxii. 66, § ib., p. 434—see the testimony of Paul, Ac. xiii. 27, .8.

21. redeemed Israel, &c.—Israel had been utterly carried away into captivity, 2 Ki. xvii. 23—and lost, as predicted by Moses, De. xxviii. 48—but their redemption had been much the subject of scripture promise, Is. xliii. 1—7; xlv. 17—25; liv. 4—8; Je. xxiii. 5—8; xxx. 8; Eze. xi. 15—20; xxxvii. 21, .2; Ho. ii. 14—23; xiv.; Am. ix. 14, .5; Mi. vii. 15—20, &c.—The redemption of Israel was anticipated in the song of Zacharias, at the birth of the Baptist, Lu. i. 68, § 3, p. 16—It was implied in the promise given by Christ to the twelve, who are appointed to 'sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel,' Mt. xix. 28, § 75, p. 228.—and see § 51, p. 67.

the third day—and on which day it had been predicted he should rise again—see on Mt. xxvii. 63, § 92, p. 477.

22. certain women, &c.—see ver. 10, § 93, p. 489.

early at the sepulchre—Mt. xxviii. 1, &c., [Mk. xvi. 1, &c.,] § 93, p. 484; Lu. xxiv. 1, &c., p. 488; Jno. xx. 1, &c., § ib., p. 489.

24. certain of them, &c.—Peter and John, Jno. xx. 3, § 93, p. 490.

him they saw not—It was after the departure of Peter and John from the sepulchre that Jesus appeared unto Mary, Jno. xx. 10—7, ib.

NOTES.

[Lu. xxiv. 17. What manner of communications, &c. He had apparently been walking with them some little time before this was said. Ἀντιβάλλειν λόγους implies to dispute with some earnestness; but there is no blame implied in the words.]

[19. Which was a prophet. 'Ἀνὴρ προφήτης, a man prophet, a genuine prophet; but this has been considered as a Hebraism: "for, in Ex. ii. 14, a man prince is simply a prince; and in 1 Sa. xxi. 3, men archers mean no more than archers." But my own opinion is, that this word is often used to deepen the signification; so in the above quotations: "Who made thee a (man) prince (i.e., a mighty sovereign) and a judge over us?" Ex. ii. 14. And "the battle went sore against Saul, and the (men) archers (i.e., the stout, or well-aiming archers) hit him." 1 Sa. xxxi. 3. So ἀνὴρ προφήτης here signifies he was a genuine prophet, nothing like those false ones by whom the people have been so often deceived; and he has proved the divinity of his mission by his heavenly teaching and astonishing miracles.'—A. C.]

Mighty in deed and word, &c. Irresistibly eloquent. Powerful in deed, working miracles.

And all the people. Acknowledged by 'all the people' to be 'a teacher come from God.'

21. We trusted. ἠλπίζομεν. 'We hoped.'

Redeemed Israel. 'In the theocratic sense, including both the spiritual and political kingdom.—See ch. i. 68, .9, 75, § 3, pp. 16, .7; and comp. Ac. i. 6.'—Alford.

Beside all this, to-day is the third day, &c. "He is now in the third day since," &c. This is the usage of later Greek; and the words are spoken not without a reference, in the mind of the speaker, to his promise of rising on the third day.'—Ibid.

22. Yea, &c. ἀλλὰ καί, 'but moreover;' equivalent to 'certainly, thus much has happened, ...'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 17, .8. It is good to hear before we answer. Of this, Jesus gave us an example, not only when a child, but here also after his resurrection.

[In things indifferent we should adapt our conversation and manners to the persons with whom we associate—not needlessly repelling those we are desirous of attracting to the truth.]

19 ver. Let us be grateful for the abundant evidence, that God hath indeed been true to the promise made unto our fathers; that he has of our brethren, raised up unto us 'a prophet mighty in deed and word.'—And see margin.

[19, 20 ver. The reward which men meet with from men may be very different from that which is to be received from Him who judgeth righteously.]

[21 ver. The death of Jesus the righteous One, and the redemption of Israel, are both inscrutable mysteries, until their connection is seen in Christ. Let memorable. . . . . These disciples set out probably soon after the fifth hour of the day, when the ordinary mid-day repast of the Jews would be over, after the return of Salome and also of Peter, and consequently aware of what had happened to them; but before the return of Mary Magdalene, and therefore ignorant as

LET US SEEK TO BE FOLLOWERS OF CHRIST NOT ONLY IN WORD, BUT IN DEED AND IN TRUTH, IN THE SIGHT OF BOTH GOD AND MAN.

LUKE xxiv. 26—8.

26 fools ανοητοι, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have-spoken. ought not 27 Christ τον Χριστον to-have-suffered these-things, and to-enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he-expounded διηρμηνευεν unto-them in all the 28 scriptures the-things concerning himself. And they-drew-nigh unto the village, whither

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv 25. O fools, &c.—The word ανοητος means 'thoughtless,' or 'without understanding;' is translated 'unwise,' Rom. i. 14; 'foolish,' Ga. iii. 1; 1 Ti. vi. 9; Tit. iii. 3—not the same word as in Mt. v. 22, § 19, p. 125.

the prophets, &c.—Jesus does not here refer to his own distinct predictions respecting his death and resurrection, as Mk. viii. 31, § 50, p. 40—He gives us an example of how we should deal with those who are in doubt respecting his Messiahship, but who yet are willing to inquire into the subject, which appears to have been the case with these disciples—see on ver. 15, 21, supra, pp. 493, ..4.

26. Christ—Or, the Christ, Ps. ii. 2—David, an eminent type of the Anointed, had first to suffer many things before he entered into the possession of the kingdom, 2 Sa. xxii. 1—51.

suffered . . . . glory—'The sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow,' 1 Pe. i. 11, were the two subjects upon which our Lord discoursed immediately after promising to Peter 'the keys of the kingdom of heaven,' Mt. xvi. 19, § 50, p. 39.

27. Moses—The five books of Moses, the first of which, Genesis, contains, in the first promise of the Messiah, the truth which Jesus illustrated to the two disciples—Ge. iii. 15, 'It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.'—Besides Adam, the first federal head of mankind, see the typical persons, Abel, the first, suffered death, iv. 8; Joseph, the last, was betrayed by his own brethren into the hands of strangers; their intention with regard to him having been the same as that of Cain, xxxvii. 20—8; Ac. vii. 9—14—In Exodus the case of Moses, as being rejected at the first by the people he was sent to deliver out of Egyptian bondage, shews forth what He who was made like unto Moses was to experience, ver. 20—44—In Leviticus the sacrifices prefiguring the one great sacrifice of Christ had first to be offered, before the high priest could enter into the holiest of all, Heb ix. 7—14. In Numbers, we see the watchful caring and suffering goodness of the Shepherd of Israel; as preparing his people for the promised rest. In Deuteronomy we have the remarkable prophecy respecting Christ as being the Prophet like unto Moses, xviii. 15—.8—As the Rock, xxxii., &c.

the prophets—as in the seven larger books following the five books of Moses, and in the twelve minor prophets, Is. liii.; Mi. v. 1—3—see on Lu. xxiv. 44, § 98, p. 512.

the scriptures—As in Ps. ii., xxii., &c.

things concerning himself—'Not only prophecies, but types and symbols, as in the case of the brazen serpent—The passages, we may suppose, peculiarly dwelt upon, would be, Ge. iii. 15; xlix. 10; De. xviii. 15; Nu. xxi. 8, 9; Is. ix. 6, 7; liii.; Da. ix. 25—7; Ps. xvi.; xxii.; cx.; Mal. iv. 2—6.'—Bloomf.

NOTES.

[Lu. xxiv. 25. O fools, and slow of heart to believe. Ανοητοι, 'without understanding.' 'Slow of heart,' &c. βραδεις τῃ καρδιᾳ, 'sluggish in disposition to believe.' Inconsiderate men, justly termed such, because they had not properly attended to the description given of the Messiah by the prophets, nor to his teaching and miracles, as proofs that HE alone was the person they described. Not understanding the designs and works of God.]

To believe all that the prophets, &c. They, like some professing Christians of the present day, saw in the prophets only what suited their carnal affections; they looked for the glory of Immanuel's kingdom without his personal suffering; while modern partiality rests in his suffering, and denies his personal glory, when he shall reign from 'sea . . . to sea, and from the river . . . to the ends of the earth,' a King in righteousness; the Father having put all things under him.

26. Ought not Christ to have suffered? &c. οὐχὶ ἔδει παθεῖν τον Χριστὸν; 'was it not necessary that Christ should suffer?'—A. Clarke. 'Did ye not know that it was decreed (ἔδει) that the Messiah should attain to honour and glory through much tribulation?'—Rosenm., Kuinoel.

God's justice must be satisfied, and the death of his Son be the atonement for the sin of the world; after which Christ, the anointed One, must sit on his Father's throne until his foes are made his footstool.

27. He expounded. That is, 'thoroughly interpreted.'

[All the scriptures. 'I take the τὰ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ to mean something very different from mere prophetical passages. The whole scriptures are a testimony to Him; the whole history of the chosen people, with its types, and its laws, and its prophecies, is a shewing forth of Him; and it was here the whole πᾶσαι αἱ γραφαὶ that He laid out before them. This general leading into the meaning of the whole, as a whole, fulfilled in Him, would be much more opportune to the place and time occupied than a direct exposition of selected passages.'—Alford.]

The things concerning himself. Observe the testimony which this verse gives to the Divine authority, and the christian interpretation of the Old Testament scriptures: so that the denial of the references to Christ's death and glory in the Old Testament is henceforth nothing less than a denial of his own teaching.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

us not say, 'we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel:' but that, as the meritorious cause of this redemption is his suffering unto death, so assuredly must all that God hath promised be accomplished.]

Lu. xxiv. 25, .6. See margin.

[Let us prize the high privilege we possess, in being given the keys of the kingdom of heaven, whereby Christ himself opened up the scriptures to his disciples after his resurrection; giving us an example of the manner in which we should edify and comfort one another. Christ gives no encouragement to priestly domination; but as a stranger, and as simply possessing the authority of truth, he himself gives us an example, not only of the manner in which we should seek to communicate to others the knowledge of salvation, but also how we should receive instruction by whomsoever ministered. We should rejoice to have the scriptures expounded to us even by a wayfaring man of whom we know nothing—who has no other recommendation that we know of, except the possession of that knowledge of which we stand in need.]

yet of any personal reappearance of Christ: . . . this distance, which would thus be travelled in the heat of the day, and more especially for the lengthened conversation with our Lord which ensued upon it, we cannot allow less than three or four hours' time. They would consequently arrive at Emmaus about the ninth hour of the day: when it might truly be said that it was towards evening, and the day had begun to decline; though it could not be so late as sunset. Nor would this be much earlier than the ordinary time of the afternoon's repast. At the time of this repast, when it arrived, our Lord was made known to them; and they returned soon afterwards to Jerusalem.'—Ibid., p. 314.

WANT OF UNDERSTANDING IS VERY APT TO ACCOMPANY A TENDENCY TO UNBELIEF.

CHRIST IS THE SUBSTANCE OF ALL THAT THE PROPHETS HAVE SPOKEN.

LUKE xxiv. 29—32.

29 they-went: and he made-as-though he-would-have-gone further. But they-constrained παρεβιάσαντο him, saying, Abide with us: for it-is toward evening, and the day is-far-30 spent κεκλικεν. And he-went-in to tarry with them. And it-came-to-pass, as he sat-at-31 meat with them, he-took bread, and-blessed it, and brake, and-gave to-them. And their eyes were-opened, and they-knew him; and he vanished-out-of their-sight ἀφαντος 32 εγενετο. And they-said one-to-another, Did-not our heart-burn within us, while he-talked with-us by the way, and while he-opened to-us the scriptures?

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 28. made as though, &c.—so when walking upon the sea, Mk. vi. 48, § 41, p. 319, he 'would have passed by them.'— So he would have gone from Jacob, saying, Ge. xxxii. 26. 'Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.'

29. constrained him—so when the angels came to Lot, in Sodom, Ge. xix. 3, 'he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him,'—Lydia constrained Paul and Silas, Ac. xvi. 15, saying, 'If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there.'—He. xiii. 2, 'Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.'

30. blessed, &c.—so when he fed the multitudes, Mt. xiv. 19, § 40, p. 313; Mk. viii. 7, § 46, p. 327.

32. burn within us—Ps. xxxix. 3, 'My heart was hot within me, while I was musing the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue,'—Je. xxiii. 29, 'Is not my word like as a fire? saith the LORD; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?'

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 28. He made as though, &c. This was no dissimulation; he only behaved as common rules of civility would have obliged any stranger to do, that he might not seem to thrust himself upon their company.

29. The day is far spent. κεκλικεν ἡ ἡμερα, 'the day has declined.'

30. Took bread. κλασας. 'This was contrary to the custom of guests, that office belonging to the host; except when the host, out of respect, chose to resign it to the guest.'—Bloomf.

['We must not suppose any reference to, much less any celebration of, the sacrament of the Lord's supper. Neither of these disciples were present at its institution; and certainly it had never been celebrated since. With this simple consideration will fall to the ground all that Romanists have built on this incident, even to making it a defence of ministration in one kind only.'—Alford.]

31. Their eyes were opened, &c. 'His own will and permission to be seen by them opened their eyes to know him.'—Ibid.

That is, they began to know him. The expression is used by the Hebrews, not only of those whose eyes are physically, but morally closed; of those who at length perceive what they before failed to discern.—See Ge. iii. 5—7; xxi. 19; 2 Ki. vi. 17—20.

[He vanished, &c. 'ἀφαντος, not αὐτοις, which would imply his body to have remained invisible to them; but ἀπ' αὐτων, implying, besides the supernatural disappearance, a real objective removal from them.'—Alford.]

32. Burn. 'The word καιεσθαι, 'to burn,' is often used of vehement commotion and affection of the mind, especially joy.'

He talked with us. λαλει ἡμιν is more than συνελάλει ἡμιν. 'He spoke to us,' not merely 'with us.'

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 28, 29. The follower of Christ should not force himself upon the hospitality of others—but rather leave room for the manifestation of good-will.

It becomes the Christian to use hospitality, not only when it is asked, but also sometimes when it requires to be pressed upon the recipient.

[32 ver. May we often have occasion to congratulate each other upon the joyful seasons with which we have been favoured, while the scriptures were being unfolded to our view, revealing Christ in his sufferings and in his glory.]

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.

EMMAUS.

'EMMAUS (Ἐμμαούς, hot baths), a village, sixty stadia, or seven and a half miles from Jerusalem, noted for our Lord's interview with two disciples on the day of his resurrection, Lu. xxiv. 13. The same place is mentioned by Josephus (De Bell. Jud. vii. 6. 6), and placed at the same distance from Jerusalem, in stating that Vespasian left eight hundred soldiers in Judæa, to whom he gave the village of Emmaus. The site is not now known; for Dr. Robinson has shewn that El-Kubeibeh, which is usually indicated, is too distant from Jerusalem; and that the position of Emmaus, and all correct tradition respecting it, were lost before the time of Eusebius and Jerome, since these writers make it identical with the city of Emmaus, or Nicopolis, which lies not far from one hundred and sixty stadia from Jerusalem. He adds:—"There never was the slightest ground for connecting El-Kubeibeh in any way with Emmaus; nor is there any trace of its having been so connected before the fourteenth century."—(Bib. Res. iii. 65, .6.) The other Emmaus, also called Nicopolis, just mentioned, is identified with Lusium, about midway between Jerusalem and Ramleh. There was another Emmaus, near Tiberias, on the lake of the same name, where the hot baths which gave name to it are still frequented, and have a temperature of one hundred and thirty degrees Fahrenheit. Here the name of Emmaus is merely preserved in that of Hammam, which the Arabs give to hot baths, whether natural or artificial. Neither of these places is named in scripture.'—Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature, Vol. I. p. 626.

SECTION 95.—(G. 8—11.)—[Lesson 98, continued.]—THE TWO DISCIPLES, UPON THEIR RETURN TO JERUSALEM, ARE INFORMED THAT JESUS HAS APPEARED TO SIMON PETER: WHICH IS HIS THIRD APPEARANCE. JESUS APPEARS THE SAME EVENING TO THE ELEVEN, IN THE ABSENCE OF THOMAS: WHICH IS HIS FOURTH APPEARANCE IN ALL—BUT THE FIRST TO THE ELEVEN. EIGHT DAYS AFTER, JESUS APPEARS TO THE ELEVEN AGAIN, THOMAS BEING PRESENT: WHICH IS HIS FIFTH APPEARANCE. JESUS APPEARS TO ALL OR PART OF THE WOMEN WHO HAD FIRST VISITED THE SEPULCHRE ON THE MORNING OF THE RESURRECTION, AND SENDS A COMMAND BY THEM TO THE DISCIPLES TO DEPART INTO GALILEE.—Matt. xxviii. 9, 10. Mark xvi. 13, .4. Luke xxiv. 33—43. John xx. 19—29. 1 Cor. xv. 5.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mk. xvi. 13. Lu. xxiv. 33, .4. The two disciples, to whom Jesus appeared in the way to Emmaus, immediately return to Jerusalem, and find the eleven, and other disciples assembled, saying, 'The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.'

——— — xxiv. 35. The two disciples tell how Jesus conversed with them by the way, and was made known to them 'in breaking of bread.

——— — xxiv. 36. Jno. xx. 19. On the evening of the same day, the doors being shut for fear of the Jews, Jesus stands in the midst of his assembled disciples, and salutes them.

——— — xxiv. 37—40. — xx. 20. Some are terrified, supposing they have seen a spirit; but Jesus bids them handle him, and see that it is he himself. He shews them his side, his hands, and his feet.

——— — xxiv. 41. — xx. 20. The disciples rejoice, yet can scarcely be persuaded that what they see is a reality.

——— — xxiv. 42, .3. ——— Jesus affords them additional evidence of his corporeal presence, by eating before them.

——— ——— — xx. 21. Jesus again salutes them, and declares them to be sent by him, as he is the Sent of the Father.

——— ——— — xx 22. He breathes on them, saying, 'Receive ye the Holy Ghost'

Mk. xvi. — Lu. xxiv. — Jno. xx. 23. He gives them full authority to declare unto men upon what terms they have their sins forgiven, the evidence of a saved state, and also the marks of remaining in a state of condemnation.

——— ——— — xx. 24, .5. Thomas having been absent when the foregoing took place, he declares that, except he put his finger into the print of the nails, and his hand into the pierced side of the crucified Jesus, he will not believe.

— xvi. 14. ——— — xx. 26, .7. A week after Jesus' resurrection, Thomas with other disciples being together, Jesus again appears in their midst, salutes them as before, and offers Thomas the evidence he had declared was necessary to convince him of the truth of the resurrection.

——— ——— — xx. 28. Thomas exclaims, 'My Lord and my God.'

——— ——— — xx. 29. Jesus pronounces those blessed, who have believed without having seen him.

Mt. xxviii. 9. The women who were first at the sepulchre meet Jesus; they are saluted by him, and he is worshipped by them.

— xxviii. 10. Jesus tells the women not to fear, but to go and inform his brethren that he goes before them into Galilee, where they shall see him.

No. 95.—(G. 8.)—*The two disciples, upon their return to Jerusalem, are informed that Jesus has appeared to Simon Peter: which is his third appearance.

MARK xvi. 13.	LUKE xxiv. 33—.5.	1 COR. xv. 5.
13 And they went	33 [a]And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them,
	34 saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.	he was seen of Cephas, and told it unto the residue:	35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.[b]
[b]neither believed they them. (Ver. 14, p. 500.)

NOTE.

Mk. xvi. 13. Neither believed they them. They were moved a little by the testimony of these, added to that of St. Peter, Lu. xxiv. 34, supra. But they did not yet fully believe it.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Lu. xxiv. 35. Those who delight to refresh the souls of others will be amply rewarded, as were the two disciples by what they heard and saw upon their return to Jerusalem.—See ver. 34—.6.

* 'Between the time of the disappearance at Emmaus, and the time of the return to Jerusalem, Lu. xxiv. 34, confirmed by 1 Co. xv. 5, authorizes us to suppose an appearance to Peter: the third of its kind this day. At the time of that assembly of the apostles, which is spoken of at ver. 33, this appearance was clearly a

LET US MAKE NO UNNECESSARY DELAY IN COMMUNICATING GOOD NEWS TO OUR FELLOW-DISCIPLES

REJOICE, YE RIGHTEOUS: AND SHOUT FOR JOY, ALL YE THAT ARE UPRIGHT IN HEART.—Psa. xxxii. 11.

(G. 9.)—Jesus appears the same evening to the eleven, in the absence of Thomas: which is his fourth appearance in all—but the first to the eleven.

LUKE xxiv. 36—43.

36 [a]And as-they thus-spake,[b]
[c]Jesus himself stood in the-midst of-them, and saith unto-them, Peace be unto-you.
37 But they-were-terrified πτοηθεντες and affrighted, and-supposed that-they-had-38 seen a-spirit. And he-said unto-them, Why are-ye troubled?
and why do-thoughts διαλογισμοι-arise in your hearts?
39 Behold my hands and my feet, that it-is I myself: handle ψηλαφησατε me, and see; for a-spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye-see me have.
40 And when-he-had-thus-spoken, he-shewed them his hands and his feet.[d]
41 [e]And while-they yet-believed-not for joy, and wondered, he-said unto-them, Have-ye here any meat βρωσιμον?

JOHN xx. 19—25.
(Ver. 18, § 93, p. 492.)

Then 19
[b]the same day at-evening, being the first day of-the week, when-the doors-were-shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of-the Jews,[a] came Jesus and stood in the midst,
and saith unto-them, Peace be unto-you.

And when-he-had-so-said, 20
he-shewed unto-them his hands
[d]and his side. Then were-the disciples-glad, when-they-saw the Lord.[e]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 37. a spirit—πνευμα—When they, Mt. xiv. 26, § 41, p. 319, 'saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit (φαντασμα).'

39. handle me, &c.—so afterwards to Thomas, Jno. xx. 27, p. 501—The apostles could truly say, as 1 Jno. i. 1, 'Our hands have handled, of the Word of life;'

41. believed not—Upon hearing that Joseph was alive, and governor over all Egypt, Ge. xlv. 26, 'Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not.'

NOTES.

Jno. xx. 19. The same day at evening. That is, the day of his resurrection.

[When the doors were shut. 'As a beautiful economy similar to that which we observe in nature, may be discerned in our Lord's working of miracles, by which no more power is employed than is necessary to accomplish the purpose in view, we may suppose, with the best commentators (as Calvin, Grotius, Whitby, and Campbell), that our Lord caused the doors to preternaturally open of themselves; as the angel, Ac. v. 19, 23, "opened the prison doors" in which the apostles were confined.—See also xii. 10. Thus, as it is observed by Calvin, "the circumstance of the doors being barred was purposely introduced, as containing in it an illustrious specimen of the Divine power inherent in our exalted Saviour; who, we may suppose, by thus entering not without a miracle, intended to afford his disciples a striking proof of his Divinity." This seems alluded to at ver. 30.'—Bloomf.]

Lu. xxiv. 36. Peace be unto you. εἰρήνη ὑμῖν. This form of salutation was, indeed, in common use; but in the present case it was peculiarly suitable, as addressed to them in their present state of alarm, and coming from Him who had, before his death, said, 'Peace I leave with you.'—See Jno. xiv. 27, § 87, p. 385.

37. A spirit. πνευμα is a ghost or spectre, an appearance of the dead to the living; not exactly a φαντασμα (see SCRIP. ILLUS.), which might have been any appearance of a supernatural kind.

38. Thoughts. διαλογισμοι. Not merely 'thoughts,' but questionings, reasonings.

[39. Behold my hands, &c. 'There seems to be some doubt whether the reference to his hands and feet was on account of the marks of the nails, to prove his identity, or as being the uncovered parts of his body, and to prove his corporiety. Both views seem supported by the text, and I think both were united.—Comp. ver. 40, and Jno. xx. 20. . . . He declares to us the truth, that those appearances to which he was now likened by the disciples, and spirits in general, have not flesh and bones.'—Alford.]

41. Believed not for joy. ἀπιστούντων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ τῆς χ. This is sometimes the case on the occurrence of events very felicitous, which happen suddenly and unexpectedly. We think the news too good to be believed, and fancy we are dreaming.—See on Jno. xvi. 20—.2, § 87, p. 395.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xx. 19. How different now is the relative situation of Jews and Christians, from what it was when the latter were assembled together in one apartment, 'the doors were shut . . . . for fear of the Jews'!

It is worthy of remark, that this seems to have been the first assembly of Christians convened on the Lord's day, and in that assembly Jesus was present. Since that time the day has been observed in the church as the christian sabbath, particularly to commemorate the resurrection of Christ.

Lu. xxiv. 36. When assembled with our fellow-disciples, let us think of Christ standing in the midst of us, and saying, 'Peace be unto you;' and so in the spirit of peace, let us speak and act together.

37 ver. See margin.

38 ver. Let us inquire into the cause of our disquietude, and we may often find, that by what we fear to look upon, the Lord is giving us new evidence of his presence, and of his power to bless.

[39 ver. Jesus desires that his disciples should believe upon scriptural and rational evidence: to the two going to Emmaus, he proved from scripture that Christ should rise from the dead, and then he made himself known; and when these had returned to Jerusalem, and communicated what he had said and done to them, he again appeared, and fully confirmed the truth of their testimony: in both cases he gave them opportunity of forming scriptural expectations respecting his resurrection before he made himself known to them as risen from the dead.]

40 ver; Jno. xx. 20. See margin.

[Lu. xxiv. 41. Like the presence of their risen Master among the disciples, the goodness of God in the gospel may sometimes appear to us almost too good to be true, but we ought to consider that such kindness and condescension are worthy of God, although we may be altogether unworthy of his grace.]

recent event; and that assembly, it is equally evident from ver. 41—3, was about the time of the usual supper hour, which could not long have been passed when Jesus appeared among them.

WE ARE SOMETIMES THE MOST AFRAID WHEN WE HAVE THE LEAST OCCASION TO BE SO.
LET US NEVER FORGET THAT THE HANDS, AND FEET, AND SIDE, OF OUR REDEEMER WERE PIERCED FOR US.

LUKE xxiv. 42, .3. JOHN xx. 21—.3.

42 And they gave him a-piece of-a-broiled fish, and of an 43 honeycomb. And he-took it, and-did-eat before them./
(Ver. 44, § 93, p. 512.)

/ Then said Jesus to-them again, Peace be unto-you: as my 21
Father hath-sent me, even-so send I you. And when-he-had- 22 said this, he-breathed-on ἐνεφύσησε them, and saith unto-them, Receive-ye the-Holy Ghost: whose-soever sins ye-remit, they- 23

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 43. did eat—alluded to, Ac. x. 41.

Jno. xx. 21. Peace be unto you—With these words he had presented himself among the disciples, Lu. xxiv. 36, supra, and had given them abundant evidence of the truth of his resurrection, ver. 38—43, p. 498—Now he repeats these words as sending forth his disciples to communicate the truth of his resurrection to others, Jno. xx. 21—.3—The things belonging to her peace were now hid from the eyes of Jerusalem; but they were revealed unto the apostles, and were to be enjoyed by those who should receive their testimony, Eph. ii. 14—.7, 'For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; 15, having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; 16, and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: 17, and came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.'

as my Father hath sent me, &c.—see an acknowledgment of this in the intercessory prayer, immediately before his agony in the garden, ch. xvii. 18, § 87, p. 402.

send I you—He had already constituted them his apostles to Israel, Mt. x., § 38, and he gives them an apostleship to all the nations, xxviii. 18—20, § 96, p. 502.

22. he breathed on them, &c.—It does not appear that the Holy Ghost did now come upon them, Ac. i. 8—Like the washing, Jno. xiii. 8, § 87, p. 366, this seems to have been a symbolic act, representing that which actually took place on the day of Pentecost—Ac. ii. 4, 'They were all filled with the Holy Ghost,'

Receive ye, &c.—ch. xiv. 17, § ib., p. 383, 'The Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.'

23. whose soever sins ye remit, &c.—The apostles were commissioned to declare authoritatively the terms upon which the sins of men were to be forgiven—so Peter, Ac. ii. 38; iii. 19, 26; iv. 12—and Paul, xxvi. 18—see PRAC. REFLEC., infra.

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 42. Honeycomb. Honey abounded in Palestine, and was a very common article of food. Bees lived in caves of the rocks; in the hollows of trees; and were also kept as with us. The disciples gave probably just what was their own common fare, and what was ready at the time.

43. And he took it, and did eat, &c. This was done further to convince them of his corporiety.

[Jno. xx. 21. Peace be unto you. 'This is solemnly repeated (see ver. 26, p. 500), as the introduction of the sending which follows. The ministers and disciples of the Lord are messengers of peace.'—Alford.]

This is the foundation of the mission of a true gospel-minister, peace in his own soul, 2 Co. iv. 1.

[22. He breathed on them, &c. 'To understand this verse as the outpouring of the Spirit, the fulfilment of the promise of the Comforter, is against all consistency, and most against John himself.—See ch. xvi. 7, § 87, p. 383; xx. 17, § 93, p. 492.]

[' To understand it rightly, we have merely to recur to that great key to the scripture, the manifold and gradual unfolding of promise and prophecy in their fulfilment. The presence of the Lord among them now, was a slight and temporary fulfilment of his promise of returning to them; and so the imparting of the Spirit now, was a symbol and foretaste of that which they should receive at Pentecost, just as that itself was but the firstfruits and pledge, Rom. viii. 23; 2 Co. i. 22, of the fulness which we shall hereafter inherit. That no final gifts of apostleship were now formally conferred, is plain by the absence of Thomas, who in that case would be no apostle in the same sense as the rest. . . .]

['He breathed—(ἐνεφύσησε)—was the word expressing the act of God in the original infusion of the spirit of life into men. This act is now by God incarnate repeated sacramentally, representing the infusion of the new life, of which he is become, by his glorified Humanity, the source to his members. — See Job xxxiii. 4, "The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life."—Ps. xxxiii. 6, "By the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth." '—Alford.]

[23. Whose soever sins ye remit, they are, &c. The in-

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xx. 21. See margin.

22 ver. Let us earnestly desire that inspiration of the Holy Ghost which alone can qualify us for making known to others the riches of the grace of God.

[23 ver. Let us rejoice that the first disciples were empowered to declare so plainly the terms upon which men have the forgiveness of sins; and that these are the terms of free grace. Unlike the terms demanded by an avaricious and domineering priesthood, they are the same to rich and to poor; to all of every age, rank, and condition—'Repent ye, and believe the gospel,' Mk. i. 15. 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved,' Ac. xvi. 31. 'Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved,' iv. 12. Though even an angel from heaven were to preach any other gospel, he is not to be believed. Here let us rest—' The stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,' 1 Pe. ii. 7. ' In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth,' &c., Eph. ii. 21.]

' Soon after their arrival, Jesus himself appears to the apostles, Thomas alone being absent; . . . . . St. Luke's mention of τοὺς ἕνδεκα, notwithstanding his absence, constitutes no difficulty. It is a case in point with Mk. ix. 35, § 52, p. 74, where the number was eleven; and with 1 Co. xv. 5, τοῖς δώδεκα, though the number at that time was also eleven; and it stands merely as a designation for the apostles in particular, to discriminate them from τοὺς σὺν αὐτοῖς in general. Besides, as the absence of none of them was previously specified, their body could be spoken of only as collectively afterwards.'—Gresswell.

LET US FEEL THE DIGNITY OF OUR MISSION, AS BEING SENT BY THE SON TO MAKE KNOWN TO THE WORLD THE LOVE OF THE FATHER, AND LET US ENDEAVOUR TO WALK WORTHY OF THE HIGH CALLING WHEREWITH WE ARE CALLED.

JOHN xx. 24, .5.*

are-remitted unto-them; and whose-soever sins ye-retain κρατητε, they-are-retained κεκρατηνται. But Thomas, one of- 24 the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto-him, We-have- 25 seen the Lord. But he said unto-them, Except I-shall-see in his hands the print of-the nails, and put my finger into the print of-the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I-will-not-believe.

(G. 10.)—Eight days after Jesus appears to the eleven again, Thomas being present: which is his fifth appearance. At Jerusalem. †

MARK xvi. 14. (Ver. 13, p. 497.)

14 Afterward he-appeared εφανερωθη unto-the eleven δ as-they-sat at-meat,

1 COR. xv. 5.

then of-the twelve: (Ver. 6, § 96, p. 502.)

JOHN xx. 26—.9.

26 And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being-shut, and stood in the midst, ε and said, Peace be unto-you.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xx. 23. ye retain, &c.—The apostles had also power to point out those whose sins are retained—so Peter said to Simon the sorcerer, Ac. viii. 23, 'I perceive,' &c.—Paul gives a more general declaration, 1 Co. vi. 9, 10—As men can be saved only through faith in Christ, the knowledge of salvation by Christ was to be communicated to the world, through the instrumentality of the disciples—These were, therefore, under a solemn responsibility to preach the gospel—so Paul, as being put in trust therewith, said, Rom. i. 14, 'I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise.'—1 Co. ix. 16, 'For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!'—2 Co. ii. 14—.7, 'Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place. 15, For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish: 16, to the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things? 17, For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.'

24. Thomas, &c.—Upon Jesus' proposal to come into Judæa, Thomas had said unto his fellow-disciples, ch. xi. 16, § 58, p. 128, 'Let us also go, that we may die with him.'

not with them—It has been supposed that the foregoing words were spoken exclusively to the eleven: but it is to be observed, that as one of the apostles was absent, so there were others beside the apostles present: this being the meeting referred to, Lu. xxiv. 33, p. 497.

25. Except I shall see, &c.—The evidence here required was still more minute than that which had satisfied the other disciples, Lu. xxiv. 34, 9, p. 498, supra—It was afterwards given to Thomas, Jno. xx. 27, p. 501, infra.

26. after eight days, &c.—The first day of the week appears to have been specially honoured by our Lord as a time of meeting with his disciples—All the preceding appearances of our Lord are supposed to have taken place on the first day of the week, as that to Mary Magdalene, ver. 1, 14, § 93, pp. 489, 91; to the two disciples, Lu. xxiv. 13, .5, § 94; to Simon, 34, supra; then to the eleven, &c., 36—so afterwards to John in Patmos, Rev. i. 10.

the doors being shut, &c.—so at the former visit, ver. 19, p. 498, supra.

Peace be unto you—so ver. 19, 21, supra.

NOTES.

Jno. xx. 23. Thomas, one of the twelve. ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος. So said, because the regular number of members in any body is made use of to designate the name of the body, even though the number may not at the time be complete.

Was not with them. Perhaps he had abandoned hope; the strong evidence of his senses having finally convinced him that the pierced side and wounded hand betokened such a death that revivification was impossible.

25. Except I shall see, &c. That is, the mark or impression made by the nails. He means to say, that 'unless he have the testimony of both sight and touch as to the identity and real bodily presence of Jesus,' &c. For Thomas did not so much call in question the veracity of the disciples, as he supposed they had been deceived by some spirit.

[Mk. xvi. 14. Afterward he appeared, &c. This passage is apparently so connected with the preceding matter as to render it highly probable, at least, that the occurrence took place in a private house in or near Jerusalem, on the very evening of our Lord's resurrection.]

Jno. xx. 26. After eight days, in the Jewish idiom, signifies 'a week.' Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week (hence called the christian sabbath), and shewed himself then, and again on the next first day, to his disciples.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

[Jno. xx. 25. Let us not prescribe terms to the Lord, but gratefully examine the evidence he is pleased to afford, which to us is more important than the sensible evidence so highly valued by Thomas.]

* 'After the disappearance of Jesus, what passed between Thomas and the rest of the apostles, recorded Jno. xx. 24, .5, takes place either the same night or the following morning.'—Ibid.

† 'Eight days after the same time, inclusive of the sixteenth of Nisan, and consequently on the twenty-third, which, like that, would be on the first day of the week, our Lord appears again, at the same time and place as before; when Thomas was also present. This is the fifth manifestation on record; and as it was made to the whole body of apostles, I conclude it to be the same which is mentioned, 1 Co. xv. 5, and as accompanied by a specific reproach, on the score of unbelief, though that reproach might properly apply only, Jno. xx. 26—.9, to Thomas, it is also the appearance alluded to, Mk. xvi. 14.'—Ibid.

MARK xvi. 14.

[d] and upbraided them with [ωνείδισε] their unbelief and hardness-of-heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.[e] (Ver. 15, § 98, p. 515.)

JOHN xx. 27—9.

'Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy 27 finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. And 28 Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, 29 Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. (Ver. 30, § 100, p. 518.)

(G. 11.)—Jesus appears to all or part of the women who had first visited the sepulchre on the morning of the resurrection, and sends a command by them to the disciples to depart into Galilee: which is his sixth appearance.—Matt. xxviii. 9, 10. In the vicinity of Jerusalem. (Ver. 8, § 93, p. 487.)

9 And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And 10 they came and held [εκρατησαν] him by the feet, and worshipped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. (Ver. 11, ibid.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xx. 29. have not seen, &c.—Mt. xiii. 17, § 32, p. 246. Many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them;'—2 Co. v. 7, 'We walk by faith, not by sight;'—so Moses forsook Egypt, 'as seeing him who is invisible,' He. xi. 27;—Pe. i. 8, 'Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory;'—Previous to his making himself known to them in the breaking of bread, the two disciples appear to have believed upon scriptural evidence that Jesus must have risen from the dead, Lu. xxiv. 29—32, § 94, p. 495.

Mt. xxviii. 9. And as they went, &c.—The women who had been at the sepulchre, and who received a message from the angels to the disciples, had afterwards that message confirmed by Jesus himself ver. 10.

worshipped him, &c.—so the disciples on the mountain appointed, ver. 17, § 96, p. 502; and upon his ascension, Lu. xxiv. 52, § 99, p. 517.

10. my brethren, &c.—Jno. xx. 17, § 93, p. 492, 'But go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father;'

into Galilee, &c.—see the message sent by the angels, Mt. xxviii. 7, [Mk. xvi. 7,] § 93, p. 487; Lu. xxiv. 6, § ib., p. 489; Is. ix. 1, 2, 'Galilee of the nations. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.'—Comp. Mt. iv. 15, .6, § 16, pp. 107, .8; xvii. 1, 2, § 51, pp. 51—.3; xxviii. 16—20, § 96, p. 502.

NOTES.

[Jno. xx. 28. My Lord and my God. 'The Socinian view that these words are merely an exclamation, is refuted—1. By the fact that no such exclamations were in use among the Jews. 2. By the impossibility of referring ὁ κύριός μου to another than Jesus.—See ver. 13 [p. 491]. 3. By the New Testament usage of expressing the vocative by the nominative with an article. . . . . By intimate conjunction of πιστεύσας.—See below. Dismissing it, therefore, we observe that this is the highest confession of faith which has yet been made; and that it shews, though not yet fully, the meaning of the previous confessions of his being "the Son of God" was understood. Thus John, in the very close of his gospel (see on ver. 30, .1, p. 518), iterates the testimony with which he had begun it—to the Godhead of the Word who became flesh.'—Alford.]

[' On all accounts (as Dr. P. Smith observes, Scrip. Test. vol. ii. pp. 262—70) we are constrained to take the terms in their proper import and full measure of signification—MY LORD AND MY GOD—a combination of the two sacred names forming the strongest representation of Divine majesty of which the language is capable. The testimony, then, is clear, and the authority irrefragable; for by not refusing the name of God, now first applied to him by the apostles, our Lord virtually takes it to himself, as "thinking it (to use the words of the apostle) not robbery to be equal with God."'—Bloomf.]

[29. 'The ὅτι ἑώρακάς blames the slowness and required ground of faith; the πεπίστευκας recognises and commends the soundness of the faith just confessed.'—Alford.]

Mt. xxviii. 9. All hail. A word of friendly and affectionate salutation.

Worshipped him. They fell down before him in the lowest posture, thereby acknowledging that he who thus appeared to them after rising from the dead must be more than man.—See on ch. ii. 2, § 5, p. 31.

10. Go tell my brethren. I still own them as such, though they so lately disowned and forsook me.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mk. xvi. 14. It is our duty to believe upon credible evidence.

Jno. xx. 27, .8. We ought to be decided in our faith.—See margin.

May we, with Thomas, fully believe and unreservedly acknowledge Jesus to be both the Lord our righteousness, and God whom we ought to serve.

[29 ver. The two disciples were blessed when they believed the scriptures that Jesus should rise from the dead; although they did not then recognise in their teacher Him of whom the scriptures testify. They who were thus led to rejoice in the scripture evidence, had graciously vouchsafed to them every kind of evidence with which others were favoured.]

THOSE WHO WOULD FULLY ENJOY A RISEN REDEEMER MUST GO WHERE HE APPOINTS.

THE LIBERAL DEVISETH LIBERAL THINGS; AND BY LIBERAL THINGS SHALL HE STAND.—Isa. xxxii. 8.

SECTION 96.—(G. 12.)—[Lesson 99.*]—JESUS APPEARS TO THE APOSTLES, AND, AS IT IS PROBABLE, TO THE WHOLE BODY OF HIS DISCIPLES, ON A CERTAIN MOUNTAIN IN GALILEE: WHICH IS HIS SEVENTH APPEARANCE.†

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Mt. xxviii. 16. The eleven return to Galilee to an appointed meeting with Jesus upon a mountain.

—— 17. They see and worship him, even those of them who had before doubted the truth of his resurrection.

—— 18—20. Jesus comes near and delivers them the great commission.

In doing this he first declares, ver. 18, the ground of the universality of the gospel,—all power is given to him in heaven and in earth.

Secondly, he tells them, ver. 19, what they 'therefore' are to do—disciple all nations.

Thirdly, he describes the process of making disciples.

Fourthly, he assures them of his sympathetic care of them, that he will be with them, even until their work is fully accomplished.

No. 96.—Probably on the Holy Mount, in Galilee.

MATT. xxviii. 16—20.
(Ver. 15, § 93, p. 488.)

16 Then the eleven disciples went-away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus 17 had-appointed them. And when-they-saw him, they-worshipped him: but 18 some doubted. And Jesus came and-

1 COR. xv. 6.
(Ver. 5, § 95, p. 500.)

After-that, he-was-seen-of above five-6 hundred brethren at-once; of whom the greater-part remain unto this-present, but some are-fallen-asleep. (Ver. 7, § 97, p. 511.)

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 16. into Galilee—into which the disciples of Jesus had immediately after his resurrection, been directed to follow him, Mk. xvi. 7, § 93, p. 487—Jesus had invited them to meet him there, Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501.

into a mountain—Probably the mountain on which he had been transfigured, in coming down from which he had spoken of his resurrection from the dead, ch. xvii. 9, § 51, p. 57—and also before the transfiguration, xvi. 21, § 50, p. 40—and after it, xvii. 23, § 52, p. 71—They seem to have lingered by the sea of Galilee, before reaching the mountain where they were to meet their Lord—see on Jno. xxi. 1—22, § 97, p. 505.

appointed them—ch. xxvi. 32, [Mk. xiv. 28,] § 87, p. 406.

17. when they saw him, &c.—In his previous appearances, after his resurrection, he seems to have been beheld with his glory veiled, Jno. xx. 14, § 93, p. 491; Lu. xxiv. 15, .6, § 94, p. 494.

worshipped him, &c.—As had been predicted of him, Gen. xlix. 8.

but some doubted—May be rendered, 'even they who had doubted'—Many of them had at first greatly doubted, Lu. xxiv. 11; Mk. xvi. 11, .3, §§ 93, .5, pp. 488, .92, .7, especially Thomas, Jno. xx. 25, .6, who afterwards worshipped, ver. 28—It has been supposed that the words mean, 'and they were perplexed,' as was Isaiah, upon being given a vision of the Lord in glory, ch. vi. 5, and the disciples at the transfiguration; Mt. xvii. 6, § 51, p. 56—Even the beloved disciple, when he saw Jesus, as described, Rev. i. 10—.6, 'fell at his feet as dead,' ver. 17.

[The word translated 'doubted' is used by our Lord in addressing Peter, ch. xiv. 31, § 41, p. 321—These seem to be the only two cases in which it occurs in the New Testament—It means, 'to stand as between two ways'—as between fear and hope—dismay and rejoicing.]

[18. And Jesus came—It was after they had seen and rendered him homage, that Jesus approached them with condescension, and mingled again with them in familiar converse, shewing them that what they had seen was for their encouragement, and not for their dismay—so to Daniel, x. 11, .6, .8, .9—so to John, Rev. i. 17, 'And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and,' &c.]

NOTES.

Mt. xxviii. 16. Then the eleven disciples. Judas was dead, leaving but eleven of the original number of the apostles.

[17. The words οἱ δὲ ἐδίστασαν, may be rendered 'even those who had doubted.' An aorist being indefinite, admits of various interpretations, according to the general meaning of the passage; so that it may be 'some had doubted;' referring chiefly to Thomas. Or, with Dr Whitby, 'Some of the company doubted, not of the eleven, but of those who had not received the proofs of his real appearance and corporeal existence before.'—So also Dr. Doddridge.]

18. And Jesus came, &c. 'Came—rather, according to the original, approached—near to speak unto them.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

'They appear to have first seen him at a distance, probably on the top of the mountain.'—Alford.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 16. See margin.

[17 ver. Let us render not only the homage of the knee and the lip, but also of the heart and of the life, to Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords, who is exalted 'to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins,' Ac. v. 31.]

Let us be grateful that such assured evidence of Christ's resurrection was given to the first disciples; that even Thomas, who so doubted, was at length constrained to worship.

* Lesson 99, in the 'Graduated Simultaneous System,' includes Sections 96 and 97; and embraces Matt. xxviii. 16—20; 1 Cor. xv. 6, 7; Jno. xxi. 1—24.

† 'It is to record this single demonstrative proof of the resurrection of Christ, that St. Matthew's narrative is directed throughout; and it begins to prepare the reader for it long before it takes place. The prediction of our Lord, xxvi. 32, [§ 87, p. 406,] on the way from the supper chamber to the garden, first raised the expectation of it; the prediction of the angels on the morning of the resurrection, xxviii. 7, [§ 93, p. 487,] revived and reinforced the promise; the command, sent by our Lord himself, xxviii. 10, [§ 95, p. 501,] brought it still nearer to its accomplishment; and the actual manifestation at last, ver. 16, the end, confirmed and fulfilled the whole. . . . .

'This manifestation was doubtless the most solemn and most public of any which ever took place; for it was made according to an express appointment of our Lord himself, at a time and on a locality of his own fixing, in a country which had been the principal scene of his ministry, and if we may advance a reasonable conjecture, to an assembly of spectators who must have been collected for the purpose, and embraced, perhaps, the entire body of believers in Galilee; for I make no doubt that this was the very manifestation spoken of by St. Paul, 1 Co. xv. 6, as made to more than five hundred brethren at once. . . .

'That others were present at it besides the apostles is implied even by Matthew, xxviii. 17, for those who doubted upon this occasion could not be any of the eleven. Among these independent witnesses of the

MATT. xxviii. 19.

19 spake unto-them, saying, All power is-given unto-me in heaven and in earth. Go-ye therefore, and-teach all nations μαθητευσατε παντα τα εθνη, baptizing them in the name of-the Father, and of-the Son, and of-the Holy Ghost:

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mt. xxviii. 18. All power, &c.—so the Baptist had testified, Jno. iii. 35, § 13, p. 91—Not only the powers of nature, which were obedient to his commands, as Mk iv. 39, § 34, pp. 266, 267—'The kingdoms of this world,' which shall yet own his sway, Rev xi. 15, but especially the fulness of spiritual gifts, Eph. iv. 7—13.

19. Go ye therefore—The powers and presence of Jesus were not restricted to any particular locality, such as that in which they had now beheld him—They were not to become worshippers of that spot in which they had seen their Lord in glory, but feeling that the eye and the hand of their King were with them everywhere, they were now to go forth in that apostleship for which they had as disciples been in training, Mk. iii. 14, § 27, p. 206.

teach all nations—or disciple all nations—Ps. lxxii. 17, 'All nations shall call him blessed.'—19, 'And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen.'—Is. lv. 4, 5, 'Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people. Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the LORD thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.'

baptizing them in the name, &c.—Mk. i. 8, § 7, p. 54, John the Baptist had testified, 'I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.'—This purifying power was to come forth to the nations, through the instrumentality of his disciples, Jno. vii. 38, 39, § 55, pp. 95, 96, 'He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)'—Our Lord, after delivering to his disciples the great commission, and immediately before his ascension, again spoke of the baptism to which they were more especially to attend, Ac. i. 4, 5, § 98, p. 511—and Paul refers to this baptism when he says, 1 Co. vi. 11, 'But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.'

the name, &c.—That whereby God has more especially made himself known—his love in Christ Jesus, 1 Jno. iv. 8, 'God is love.'—See on Jno. xvii. § 87, p. 398.

the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, &c.—The three who had borne witness at Jesus' baptism, ch. iii. 15—7, § 8, pp. 58—60—The Son presenting himself as being willing to fulfil all righteousness, ver. 15—The Spirit of God descended like a dove, and lighted upon him, ver. 16—and the Father's voice was heard from heaven, 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased,' ver. 17—A distinct reference to each of the three persons of the blessed

NOTES.

[Mt. xxviii. 18. All power is given unto me. 'The words are a reference to Da. vii. 14, LXX., which compare. Given, by the Father in the fulfilment of the eternal covenant, in the unity of the Holy Spirit. Now first is this covenant, in its fulness, proclaimed upon earth. The Resurrection was its last seal—the Ascension was the taking possession of the Inheritance. But the Inheritance is already won; and the Heir is only remaining on earth for a temporary purpose—the assuring his joint heirs of the verity of his possession.'—Alford.]

19. Teach. μαθητευσατε, 'proselyte,' 'disciple,' or 'make disciples of.'

All nations. Our Lord in his first commission to the apostles, had charged them to go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, ch. x. 5, 6, § 39, p. 256, but here there is a wide signification.

In the name, &c. This phrase does not mean, here, by the authority of the Father, &c. To be baptized in the name of the Father, &c., is the same as to be baptized unto the Father; as to believe on the name of Christ is the same as to believe on Christ.—Jno. i. 12, § 7, p. 47; ii. 23, § 12, p. 82; iii. 18, § ib., p. 86; 1 Co. i. 13. To be baptized unto any one is publicly to receive and adopt him as a religious teacher or lawgiver, to receive his system of religion. Thus the Jews were baptized unto Moses, x. 2. That is, they received the system that he taught; they acknowledged him as their lawgiver and teacher. So Paul asks, i. 13, 'Were ye baptized in the name of Paul?' that is, Were you devoted to Paul by this rite? Did you bind yourselves to him, and give yourselves away to him, or to God?

[In the name. 'The name is ONE, not names. The persons [or subsistences] THREE, each of whom is manifestly represented as coequal, because the common objects of trust, obedience, and worship, and the source of blessing. Thus is the absolute unity and Divine character of that sacred Three unequivocally marked.'—R. Watson.]

In the name of the Father. Whose name is Love. He is the Fountain of all wisdom, and the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

And of the Son. Who hath manifested the Father's love to man, and because of whose atonement and intercession, the blessing is bestowed.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mt. xxviii. 18. See margin. All authority belongs to Christ: the power to become the sons of God, and to enjoy the inheritance of the saints in light—all emanates from Him. He is the one and all-sufficient ground of confidence. The Father giveth not the Spirit by measure unto Him. Let all who would have a perennial supply of blessing, seek it in Christ, in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.]

[19 ver. The disciples have not only the privilege of coming to Christ—they have also the duty of going forth into the world, and of seeking to communicate to others those streams of blessing which they themselves have received from the Fountain of life.]

[They whose supply is limited, may hesitate to bestow freely upon others lest their cistern should become dry; but those who are supplied from Christ, the inexhaustible Fountain, should therefore go forth dispensing liberally to all as they have opportunity, knowing that the more they give the more they will have; and, knowing that impoverishment comes by withholding, they will only fear lest they should fail in the manifestation of the Divine love.]

[Let Christians endeavour not only to make disciples of individuals, or of families among the nations, but of whole nations, yea, of 'ALL NATIONS.' The throne of universal sovereignty belongs to Jesus, and personal existence of Christ after his death and burial, that is, of his resurrection, the greater part, according to St. Paul, were alive at the time of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, twenty-five years after the event; and when St. Matthew's gospel was written, fourteen or fifteen years earlier, they might every one of them be so. . . . . Every other manifestation was either confined to the apostles, or made, at the utmost, to one or two persons distinct from them; and every other manifestation, in comparison of this, was in some sense a casual, and certainly an unexpected and unforeseen event. Of this only were the spectators apprised beforehand; and, consequently, of this only had they reason also to entertain the expectation beforehand. We may look upon this manifestation, then, as the manifestation κατ' ἐξοχήν, as that manifestation in particular by which our Saviour thought proper to confirm the reality of his resurrection with the greatest publicity, and in the most solemn manner.

'The words ὡς δὲ ἀπορεῖσθαι ἀναγγελλαι τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, xxviii. 9, by restricting the manifestation to the day of the resurrection, are at variance with it. But if these words were absent from the text, that verse

JESUS IS FAITHFUL TO HIS PROMISE: LET US COMPLY WITH HIS KIND INVITATION, AND OUR EXPECTATIONS, FOUNDED UPON HIS GRACIOUS WORD, WILL NOT BE DISAPPOINTED.

MATT. xxviii. 20.

20 teaching them to-observe τηρειν all-things whatsoever I-have-commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of-the world πασας τας ἡμερας, ἑως της συντελειας του αιωνος. Amen.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Trinity seems to be made in the three names of the first disciple, Simon—Barjona—Peter—We should be (Simon) hearing and learning of the Father: and (Barjona, son of a dove) born of the Spirit, represented by a dove; and (Peter, a stone) as lively stones built upon Christ, the Rock—see the Trinity referred to, Eph. ii. 18, 20—2—The apostles communicated to us those rivers of living water, the doctrine of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in which the nations are to be washed, and whereby they are to be presented in holiness to the Lord—Thus in the gospel according to John, the beloved disciple gives us more especially the doctrine of the Son of God—In his epistles the doctrine of the Holy Ghost, including rules for trying the spirits, and the Apocalypse is the gift of the Father, Rev. i. 1—so Peter, in his three writings correspondent to those of John—In the gospel according to Mark, said to be written under Peter's direction, we have the work of the Son described—In Peter's first epistle, the work of the Spirit; and in his second epistle, the work of the Father—see on Jno. xvi. 15—22, § 97, p. 507—Paul, who was more especially 'the apostle of the Gentiles,' or nations, Rom. xi. 13, although he was not sent to baptize (with water), 1 Co. i. 17, 'was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles,' 2 Co. xi. 5; xii. 11, in sending forth the rivers of living water, he 'laboured more abundantly than they all,' 1 Co. xv. 10—see Ac. xiii.—xviii., and the epistles from Romans to Philemon—In Paul's commission, Ac. xxvi. 16—18, that which had been expressed in the commission to the eleven, is explained, ver. 18, as being 'to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.'—The same cleansing power as proceeding from the Trinity is described, Ti. iii. 4—8—The NAME hath been manifested for the purpose of giving us 'the washing of regeneration,' which we have of God as a Father, ver. 4, 5, 'and renewing of the Holy Ghost;' which he shed on us abundantly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour,' ver. 6—'being justified by his grace, ... made heirs according to the hope of eternal life,' ver. 7—thus are men prepared to render to God holy service, ver. 8.

Mt. xxviii. 20. teaching them to observe—The belief of the truth respecting God our Father, and his Son our Redeemer, and the Holy Ghost the Sanctifier, not only cleanses from former filthiness, but prompts to loving obedience; for the right direction of which obedience, we have been given the commandments of Christ, and these exemplified in his own life and also in his death—see the practical use of the doctrine of the Trinity, Eph. ii. 1, 2, 8, 9; Ph. ii. 1—5—It may be noticed that in the greater number of the New Testament epistles, we have in the first place the purifying doctrine of the gospel, the knowledge of God our Saviour ministered, and in the latter part instruction in duty, correspondent to the direction of our Lord in the great commission.

lo, I am with you—His name, 'God with us,' ch. i. 23, § 3, p. 14; Gal. ii. 20, 'Christ liveth in me:'—He is with us to see how we do his work, Rev. ii. 2, 9, 13, 9; iii. 1, 8, 15—to help us with his almighty strength, Ph. iv. 13—to guide us by his wisdom, 1 Co. i. 30—to cheer us with his smile, Ac. xxiii. 11—and fully to assure us of victory, 2 Ti. iv. 17, 18.

unto the end of the world—or, completion of the age—When the iniquity of the inhabitants of the earth, being full, as in the world before the flood, Ge. vi. 11—3; Lu. xvii. 26, § 72, p. 212, the Lord will destroy those who destroy the earth, Rev. xi. 18—'But the meek shall inherit the earth,' Ps. xxxvii. 10, 11; Mt. v. 5, § 19, p. 120—Christ is still with his people, He. xiii. 5, 6—And however highly we may prize his personal presence, which is now removed to heaven, Ac. iii. 21, and however we may delight in the promise of his second advent, Ph. iii. 13—8, yet we ought not to think the less of his being always present as God, even till the time when we shall see him as he is and 'ever be with the Lord,' ver. 17; Col. iii. 4; 1 Jno. iii. 2.

Mt. xxviii. 20. Alway. πασας τας ἡμερας. All the appointed days.—Alford.

[Unto the end of the world. Του της συντελειας του αἰωνος. 'That time of which they had heard in so many parables, and about which they had asked, ch. xxiv. 3, [§ 86, p. 224,] the completion of the state of time. After that he will be no more, properly speaking, with us, but we with him [Jno. xvii. 24, § 87, p. 404] where he is. To understand ἀφ' ὧν only of the apostles and their (?) successors, is to destroy the whole force of their most weighty words.'—Ibid.]

NOTES.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

those kingdoms and states who recognise not his authority, are doing despite to their rightful sovereign, and cannot expect peace until their submission to him is sincere. Let us not be content to accept any inglorious terms for our Prince, any compromise with the powers of darkness; but ever claim for Christ the right to reign over all.]

[Mt. xxviii. 19, 20. The way to make disciples of all nations is as clearly stated as is the authority under which the work is to be performed. It is by ministering the saving and purifying truth respecting Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and by instructing them in the performance of the duties taught and exemplified by Christ, by leading them into the faith and walk becoming the Christian.]

[Let us not be content with any baptism, inferior to the baptism which it was promised Christ would minister; and in the administration of which he promised to employ his disciples, when he said, 'He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water,' Jno. vii. 38.]

[Let us regard the doctrine of the Trinity, not merely as objective truth, upon which the intellect is to be exercised, but as a practical revelation of the God in whom we trust; intended to purify and rejoice our hearts, and prepare us for the holy service of our God, serving him in the sonship, through the power of the Holy Ghost.]

[It is neither by coercive legislation, nor by priestly performances, that the nations are to be brought into subjection to Christ; but by flooding them with the knowledge of God, as having made himself known in the love of the Father, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the communion of the Holy Ghost.]

20 ver. We should not only seek to dispense the cleansing word—the doctrine of Christ, but also to train in the practice of all christian virtue, those who have received the knowledge of the truth.

The things we as Christians ought to observe, are the things which Christ commanded his disciples, which commandments we may reasonably expect to find embodied in the New Test. histories and epistles.

[The injunctions given to the disciples when our Lord was upon earth, belonged not alone to his immediate followers, but were given to them, that they might communicate them to all the nations—And it is the duty, not only of individuals, but of nations, as such, to do what Christ hath commanded—to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.—See his instructions, ch. v.—vii., § 19, pp. 120—42; x. § 39.]

[Christians are encouraged to do in the strength of Christ all that by his authority they are commanded. His sympathy is ever with his followers upon earth. His wisdom is able to direct, and his power to uphold them. He is ever with us, even until we 'shall ever be with the Lord.' There lie who now is really present with us, will also be so visibly.]

To all Christ hath taught, let us heartily say, AMEN.

would begin with καὶ ἰδού merely; the usual formulary, both of transition and of connection, which occurs so often in St. Matthew, when he would pass from one memorable particular to another, without affirming anything of the relative order between them, of which idiom, ix. 1, 2, [§§ 22, 35, pp. 164, 274,] in his gospel is decidedly an example. . . . .

BY THE SPIRIT'S INFLUENCE, THROUGH THE SON, WE KNOW THE LOVE OF GOD, AND WALK IN LOVE AS CHRIST HATH LOVED US.
THE THINGS THE SON OF GOD CONSTANTLY TAUGHT, MIGHT ALSO BE READ IN HIS WHOLE LIFE AND DEATH.

SECTION 97.—(G. 13.)—[Lesson 99, continued.]—JESUS APPEARS TO CERTAIN OF HIS DISCIPLES, WHILE FISHING ON THE LAKE OF GALILEE: WHICH IS HIS EIGHTH APPEARANCE.—John xxi. 1—24. HE APPEARS TO JAMES, "THE LORD'S BROTHER"—1 Cor. xv. 7: WHICH IS HIS NINTH APPEARANCE.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Jno. xxi. 1. Jesus shews himself to his disciples by the sea of Galilee.

—— 2, 3. Having received commandment from Jesus to go into Galilee, seven of them proceed as far as the sea of Galilee, when they stop short in their journey. Peter expresses his determination to go a fishing; the others readily agree to join him. They immediately take ship and commence operations; but, as in a former case, this night they catch nothing.—See on ver. 14, next column.

—— 4. In the morning Jesus stands on the shore; but the disciples know not that it is Jesus.

—— 5. As if to point out the unproductiveness of their self willed efforts, Jesus, addressing them as children, asks whether they have any food? They answer, 'No.'

—— 6. As in a former instance, Jesus bids them cast the net on the right side of the ship, and now, as before, the quantity of fish taken is so great as to be unmanageable.

—— 7, 8. The beloved disciple, probably remembering the former remarkable instance, immediately discerns that he who in this manner reproved their unfaithfulness before, has again been giving them a lesson of a like kind; he accordingly says to Peter, 'It is the Lord.' Upon which Peter, girding himself for more active exertion, casts himself into the sea; and the other disciples in a little boat come dragging the net full of fishes to land.

—— 9. As soon as they reach the shore, they witness the power and willingness of the Lord to spread for them a table in the wilderness.

—— 10. Jesus tells them to bring of the fish they have caught.

—— 11. Peter goes up, dragging the net to land, and it is probably from him that we are supplied with a description of the fish, a report of their number, and of the condition of the nets.

—— 12. Jesus invites them to 'come and dine.' They ask him no question, knowing that it is the Lord.

—— 13. Jesus comes, and both takes and gives of what is prepared.

Jno. xxi. 14. This is the third time of Christ's appearing to his disciples generally after his resurrection; twice probably in Jerusalem, and now at the sea of Galilee. This may, therefore, have preceded his appearance on the mountain, as recorded by Matthew. *

—— 15. Peter having been the leader in this divergence from the appointed course, and having so exerted himself in securing the draught, and particular in taking account of the nets and the fishes, in place of hastening to meet his Master; our Lord, giving him only the names he bore before becoming a disciple, asks, 'Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?'

It would ill become Peter now to boast of his love, as compared with that of his fellow-disciples, but surely he loves his Lord better than he does those things in which he had been so earnestly engaged; he answers, 'Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee.'

Jesus says to Peter, who has by his own means been seeking to obtain a living for himself, 'Feed my lambs.'

—— 16. Jesus questions whether it be so that Peter does at all love him; Peter answers as before, and Jesus gives him a command to shepherd his sheep.

—— 17. Jesus puts the question a 'third time,' whereat Peter is grieved, and answers, 'Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee.' Jesus says to him, 'Feed my sheep.'

—— 18, 19. Jesus reminds Peter of his former desertion of the service of his Lord, points forward to the manner in which he should finally glorify God, and directs to present duty, saying, 'Follow me.'

—— 20, 21. Peter, perhaps thinking that he is given an oversight of the other disciples, turns and sees the beloved disciple following, and asks, 'What shall this man do?'

—— 22. Jesus apprizes Peter that he is to leave to his Master the disposal of the beloved disciple, and apply himself to the performance of what his Lord has commanded him to do.

—— 23. The inference of the disciples from the words of Jesus with regard to John.

—— 24. The writer of these things writes with a consciousness of reporting the truth.

No. 97.—Jesus appears to certain of his disciples, while fishing on the lake of Galilee: which is his eighth appearance.—John xxi. 1—24. Lake Tiberias.

[Ch. xx. 31, § 100, p. 518.]

1 After these-things Jesus shewed himself again to-the disciples at the sea of Tiberias;
2 and on-this-wise shewed-he himself. There-were together Simon Peter, and Thomas

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xxi. 1. After these things—After twice appearing to his disciples collectively, first, the day he rose from the dead, ch. xx. 19, § 95, and again, a week after, ver. 26, § ib., both on the first day of the week. shewed himself—Ac i 3, 'He shewed himself alive . . . . by many infallible proofs,'—x. 41, 'Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God,' sea of Tiberias—called, ch. vi. 1, § 40, p. 310, 'the sea of Galilee.'—The message sent to the disciples when Jesus was risen from the dead, was, Mt. xxviii. 7, § 93, p. 487, 'Behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him:'—10, § 93, p. 501, 'Tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.'

NOTES.

Jno. xxi. 1. After these things. After the appearances mentioned in ch. xx.

At the sea of Tiberias. That is, the sea of Galilee. —See GEOG. NOTICE, §§ 26, 32, 42, pp. 203, 250, 323.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Jno. xxi. 1, 2. A seeming opportunity of making worldly gain, or even of obtaining a living by an accustomed and honest employment, may at times be only a temptation, and not by Divine providence designed for our acceptance. The disciples should have hastened to the place appointed for their meeting with Jesus, and not have lingered by the sea of Galilee.

* Mr. Greswell's arrangement is retained.—See § 96, p. 503.

BLESSED BE THE GOD AND FATHER OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, WHICH ACCORDING TO HIS ABUNDANT MERCY HATH BEGOTTEN US AGAIN UNTO A LIVELY HOPE BY THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST FROM THE DEAD.—1 Pet. i. 3.

JOHN xxi. 3—7.

called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two 3 other of his disciples. Simon Peter saith unto-them, I-go a-fishing. They-say unto-him, We also go with thee. They-went-forth, and entered into a ship immediately;
4 and that night they-caught nothing. But when-the-morning-was-now-come, Jesus
5 stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it-was Jesus. Then Jesus saith 6 unto-them, Children, have-ye any meat προσφαγιον? They-answered him, No. And he said unto-them, Cast the net on the right side-of-the ship, and ye-shall-find. They-cast therefore, and now they-were-not-able to-draw it for the multitude of fishes.
7 Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It-is the Lord. Now when-Simon Peter-heard that it-was the Lord, he-girt his fisher's-coat unto him, (for he-was

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xxi. 2. Nathanael of Cana, &c. — The Nathanael before mentioned is found among disciples from Bethsaida —see ch. i. 44—51, § 10, pp. 72, 3— This Nathanael is said to be of Cana in Galilee, thus distinguishing him from the former Nathanael, or John, the writer of this gospel, who does not here mention himself by name, but only as being 'of Zebedee.'

Zebedee—('my gift,' or 'rich present')—His two sons were James and John, Mt. x. 2, § 27, p. 206; the latter of whom appears to have been the Nathanael first mentioned—In Paul's epistle to the church with which the beloved disciple was afterwards so closely connected, we have a paraphrase, not only of the name of Zebedee, Eph. ii. 4—7, but also of the names of his two sons, James, a supplanter, ver. 1—3, and of John, Grace of the Lord, and Nathanael, Gift of God —ver. 8, 'By GRACE are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the GIFT OF GOD:'

3. I go a fishing—Peter, after receiving his new name, ch. i. 42, § 10, p. 71, went back to his fishing, and was called therefrom to become a fisher of men, Mt. iv. 18—20, § 16, p. 108—He had again gone back, and was rebuked by the miraculous draught of fishes —see Lu. v. 1—11, § 20, p. 153.

We also go with thee—They should not have followed Peter to the sea, but Jesus to the mountain, as he had appointed—see Mt. xxviii. 7, § 93, p. 487; ver. 10, § 95, p. 501; ver. 16, § 96, p. 502.

caught nothing—so it had been upon Peter's previous going back from the work unto which he had been called, Lu. v. 5, § 20, p. 154.

4. knew not—so was it with Mary, immediately after his resurrection, ch. xx. 14, § 93, p. 491—and also the two disciples going to Emmaus, Lu. xxiv. 16, § 94, p. 494.

5. Children—It was as brethren Jesus had invited them to follow him into Galilee, Mt. xxviii. 10, § 95, p. 501—but they had manifested the weakness of children in not having discernment or strength of faith sufficient to enable them to 'follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth,' and he manifests towards them the tenderness of a parent, as expressed, Ps. ciii. 13, 4, 'Like as a father pitieth his children,' &c. —see also Ho. xi. 3, 4, 'I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms; . . . and I laid meat unto them.'—See on Jno. xiii. 33, § 87, p. 373, 'Little children.' have ye any meat?—They had thought to provide for themselves in a way which, although in itself lawful, was not that which their Lord had appointed them, and they were mercifully allowed to feel that in such case their labour was in vain—They had early been given the rule, Mt. vi. 33, § 19, p. 136, 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.' —So the Jews were reproved, Hag. i. 4—6—ver. 5, 'Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.' —Ver. 7—11—ver. 8, 'Go up to the mountain,' &c.

6. Cast the net—as if reminding them of his former reproof when he shewed his ability to provide them a supply beyond their power to receive, Lu. v. 4—7, § 20, p. 154.

7. whom Jesus loved—see on ch. i. 47, § 10, p. 72— The disciple who leaned 'on Jesus' bosom' at supper, xiii. 23, § 87, p. 371, 'which testifieth of these things,' xxi. 20—4, p. 510, infra.

It is the Lord—John had been present when the Lord had before acted, as in the present case, Lu. v. 10, § 20, p. 155—and he had from the first been ready to discern the Lord, Jno. i. 49, § 10, p. 73.

NOTES.

Jno. xxi. 2. Nathanael of Cana. See SCRIP. ILLUS., supra, and § 27. ADDENDA, p. 216, 'John.'

The sons of Zebedee. Namely, the apostle James the Great, and John, the writer of this gospel.

3. That night they caught nothing. Having been called to preach the gospel, and to become 'fishers of men,' they ought to have obeyed the injunction of their Lord, and trusted to him for daily bread.—See on Lu. v. 1—11, § 20, p. 153.

4. Knew not that it was Jesus. Probably it was yet twilight, and in the distance they could not distinctly recognise him. Or, 'their eyes were holden,' as in the case of the disciples going to Emmaus, Lu. xxiv. 16, § 94, p. 494.

5. Children, have ye any meat? This seems to have been a gentle way of reproving them for their unbelief and self-confidence, as thinking that they were better able to provide for themselves by fishing, than Jesus was in the work unto which he had called them.

6. The multitude of fishes. 'This was a demonstration of the power of our Lord It was likewise an emblem of the great success which should attend them as fishers of men.'—Wesley.

7. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved, &c. 'The one, "therefore," seems distinctly to allude to the former occasion; the similarity of the incident having led "the beloved disciple" to scrutinise more clearly the person of Him who spoke to them.'—Alford.

Fisher's coat. The original word does not mean any particular dress worn by fishermen, but simply an upper garment.

He was naked. He was only in his vest. Γυμνος, naked, is often used to signify the absence of this upper garment only.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xxi. 3. He who has the power of influencing others, should consider well both what he says and what he does. He points out the way, and others follow. He is as much their leader as if he gave them the word of command. Upon him may depend the well-doing, and consequently the happiness, of many.]—See margin.

5 ver. When we have stopped in the course prescribed to us by our Lord, in order to obtain by our own means what we may think necessary, and when we come in consequence to be in want, let us hear the kindly reproof of the Lord, as to these disciples, 'Children, have ye any meat?'

[6, 7 ver. Immediately before finally calling Peter from his fishing, Jesus gave the same directions and with the like success. When such lessons are repeated, we may take it for granted that they are needed, and that God expects we should profit by them. It is a lesson which the disciples of Christ are frequently taught, and which they are too apt to forget—that Christ is better able to provide for them in minutely following his instructions than they are to provide for themselves in turning aside after the world. Let us be ready to recognise the Saviour's voice, and oft amid the disappointments of life, we shall have occasion to say, 'It is the Lord.']

IT IS A MERCY WHEN WE ARE DISAPPOINTED IN OUR OWN WAYS, AND ARE MADE TO FEEL, THAT IT IS OUR WISDOM TO FOLLOW THE INSTRUCTIONS OF CHRIST.

JOHN xxi. 8—15.

8 naked,) and did-cast himself into the sea. And the other disciples came in-a little-ship;
(for they-were not far from land, but as-it-were two-hundred cubits,) dragging the net
9 with fishes. As-soon-then-as they-were-come to land, they-saw a-fire-of-coals there, 10 and fish laid-thereon, and bread. Jesus saith unto-them, Bring of the fish which ye-11 have-now-caught. Simon Peter went-up, and drew the net to land full of-great fishes, an-hundred and-fifty-and-three: and for-all-there-were-so-many, yet was-not the net-12 broken ἐσχίσθη. Jesus saith unto-them, Come and dine. And none of-the disciples 13 durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it-was the Lord. Jesus then cometh, and 14 taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise. This is-now the-third-time-that Jesus shewed-himself ἐφανερώθη to his disciples, after-that-he-was-risen from the-dead.
15 So when they-had-dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of-Jonas, lovest-thou ἀγαπᾷς me more than-these? He-saith unto-him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xxi. 9. fish laid thereon, and bread—Thus still farther did Jesus convict them of folly in mistrusting his ability, or willingness to provide for them in his service—see on ver. 3, p. 506, supra.

11. yet was not the net broken—Thus was this case distinguished from the former, in which 'their net brake,' Lu. v. 6, § 20, p. 154.

14. This is now the third time—Both the former instances had taken place in a house, when the doors were shut for fear of the Jews, ch. xx. 19, 26, § 95, pp. 498, 500—The meeting, which had been specially appointed by Jesus for their seeing him, and for which they had been directed to go into Galilee, may not yet have taken place, otherwise this would be the fourth time—see Mt. xxviii. 16—20, § 96, p. 502.

15. more than these?—Peter having before this once and again gone back to his fishing after being first brought to Jesus—see on ver. 3, p. 506, supra—and this being the third time that his Lord, since his resurrection, had come to them, see on ver. 14, before Peter's reaching the place appointed; and now if in place of delighting in the society of his Lord, he busied himself about the fishes, counting them most carefully, 'an hundred and fifty and three,' looking well also to the condition of the nets, ver. 11, there is some occasion for Jesus asking him, 'Lovest thou me more than these?'—See NOTE, infra.

NOTES.

Jno. xxi. 7. Cast himself into the sea. 'It is likely that they were in very shallow water; and, as they were only two hundred cubits from the land (about one hundred and thirty-two English yards), it is possible that Peter only stepped into the water that he might assist them to draw the boat to land, which was now heavily laden. It is not likely that he went into the water in order to swim ashore; had he intended this, it is not to be supposed that he would have put his great coat on, which must have been an essential hindrance to him in getting to shore.'—A. C.

[9. They saw a fire, &c. 'This might, indeed, be accounted for without supposing miraculous agency; but from the air of the passage it should rather seem that the fire and food were not only provided by Christ, but provided miraculously, as the draught of fishes had been a little before. Both of the miracles being probably intended to teach them, by symbolical actions, that their Lord could, and would, abundantly supply the temporal as well as spiritual necessities of his disciples.'—Bloomf.]

[And fish. ὀψάριον. 'Render, "a fish;" not, as has been generally done, fish; for that use of the word, to suggest plurality, is not found either in the scriptural or classical writers.'—Ibid.]

11. Yet was not the net broken. Our Lord is able to disappoint us when we think ourselves most successful, as well as to prosper us when all things seem against us. In the former instance (see Lu. v. 1—11, § 20, p. 154) the net brake; in this, when they feared disaster, the net was not broken.

12. Come and dine. 'Ἀριστήσατε, "refresh yourselves." Homer uses the word for a morning's meal.'—Doddr.—See ver. 3, 4, supra.

And none . . . . durst ask him. They sat down in silence, wondering at, while at the same time they well knew, Him who was thus their Host.

13. Jesus . . . . taketh bread, &c. Reminds us of the similar occurrence at Emmaus, Lu. xxiv. 30, § 94, p. 496.

[3—13. 'There is much depth and richness of meaning in this whole narrative. The Lord appears to his disciples busied about their occupation for their daily bread; speaks and acts in a manner wonderfully similar to his words and actions on a former memorable occasion, when we know that by their toiling long and taking nothing, but at his word enclosing a multitude of fishes, was set forth what should happen to them as "fishers of men." Can we miss that application at this far more important epoch of their apostolic mission? Besides, He graciously provides for their present wants, and invites them to be his guests. Why, but to shew them that in their work hereafter they should never want, but he would provide? And as connected with the parable, Mt. xiii. 47, [§ 33, p. 262,] has this net enclosing "a great multitude," "and yet not broken," no meaning? Any one who recognises the teaching character of the acts of our Lord, can hardly cast all such applications from him; and those who do not, have yet the first rudiments of the gospel to learn.'—Alford.]

14. The third time he shewed himself to the disciples collectively; for the two former, see ch. xx. 19, 26, § 95, pp. 498, 500.

[15. Simon, son of Jonas. 'A reminiscence, probably, of Peter's original name and parentage, as distinguished from his apostolic name of honour, Cephas, or Peter.—See ch. i. 42, [§ 10, p. 717]. Thus we have Σ Βὰρ Ἰωνᾶ, Mt. xvi. 17, [§ 50, p. 37,] connected with his natural state of flesh and blood, which had not revealed to him the great truth just confessed; and Lu. xxii. 31, [§ 87, p. 376,] "Simon, Simon." when he is reminded of his natural weakness.'—Alford.]

[More than these. πλέον τούτων. 'Some (as Whitby, Pearce, and Myddleton) by τούτων understand "these fishes, or nets, boats, and other implements of his trade; q. d., "Dost thou prefer my service to these thy secular employments?" But to this somewhat jejune sense it has been well objected

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xxi. 9. How plainly the Lord made it appear that he could provide for them by the way; and that without his help they could do nothing!

[10, 11 ver. Peter appears to have been very exact in taking an account of the fishes, and also in examining the state of the nets. These were on this occasion quite uninjured, although the fish were large in size and in number 153. How strange that the disciples, and especially Peter, did not lose sight of such trifling concerns in their desire to enjoy the society of their Lord, so soon to be taken from them!]

12 ver. Jesus attends to the temporal necessities of his followers. Here even after his resurrection we find him providing for them a table in the wilderness. Let us use hospitality with such things as we have.

15 ver. See margin.

[It does not become us to say, that we love the Lord more than our fellow-disciples love him; this would be to judge the hearts of others, and to act even worse than did Peter, when, before the apprehension of Christ, he boasted of his own faithfulness.]

JOHN xxi, 16, .7.

16 that I-love φιλω thee. He-saith unto-him, Feed βοσκε my lambs. He-saith to-him again the-second-time, Simon, son of-Jonas, lovest-thou αγαπας me? He saith unto-him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I-love φιλω thee. He-saith unto-him, Feed
17 Ποιμαινε my sheep. He-saith unto-him the third-time, Simon, son of-Jonas, lovest-thou φιλεις me? Peter was-grieved because he-said unto-him the third-time, Lovest-thou

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xxi. 15. Feed my lambs—Peter, having been given such evidence of his own weakness, and of the chief Shepherd's compassion and care, might be expected to shew henceforth all tenderness for the weak of the flock—he may be supposed to have been obedient to this command, by his ministering, through Mark, that knowledge of our Saviour's history which is the nourishment best adapted for the lambs of his flock, and which ought never to be lost to the Christian's remembrance—see 2 Pe. i. 15—The beloved disciple, also, in the gospel according to John, ministered to the little children, as well as to the young men and fathers—see 1 Jno. ii. 13.

16. Feed my sheep—The word here translated feed, is different from that used in ver. 15, and means to rule or tend, and more especially regards those of the flock who are grown up, and require guidance, and perhaps some measure of correction, that so they may be directed aright in the use of their growing strength; of which kind of feeding we have an eminent example in Peter's first epistle, which presents a clear and practical view of christian doctrine, especially in regard to the purpose of our Lord's first coming, ch. i. ii. 1—10—it also abounds in warnings of danger, and in directions for those who are entering upon the sufferings and activities of the christian life, ver. 11—Christ in his sufferings is the great exemplar of the purity, i. 18, .9, and meekness, ii. 21—.5, there recommended—Peter himself uses the same word near the end of this epistle, v. 1—4, 'The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: 2, feed the flock of God which is among you, [marg. as much as in you is,] taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; 3, neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. 4, And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.' —Then he again addresses those younger, ver. 5—10, 'Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. 6, Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time: 7, casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you. 8, Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: 9, whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. 10, But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.'—For whose use this first epistle is more particularly designed, see i. 13, .4, 'Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance:'—The epistles of John are adapted more especially for the same class—the young men—although the little children and fathers are also addressed, 1 Ep. ii. 14—.8.

17. Lovest thou me?—The whole was calculated to remind Peter of his boastful profession, Lu. xxii. 33, § 87, p. 376, 'Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.'—Mk. xiv. 29, p. 406, 'Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.'—Ver. 31, 'If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise.'—And of his thrice denying him with oaths and curses, ver. 68—72, § 89, pp. 431—.3.

NOTES.

by Dr. Jortin, that Peter might love his Lord more than those, and yet not love him much. The true meaning seems rather to be (what the words in their obvious sense would suggest), "Dost thou love me more than those do?" an interpretation which was adopted by all the ancient, as it has been by the most eminent modern commentators, including Lampe, Campbell, Kuinoel, and Tittman. In this question our Lord may be supposed to have alluded to the profession of superior attachment to him, which Peter had made on a former occasion, Mt. xxvi. 33, "Though all men," &c.'—Bloomf. : and so Alford.]

Bishop Lonsdale supposes the question to be, 'Lovest thou me more than thou lovest these thy fellow-disciples?'—See in loc.—But see REFLECTIONS.

[The distinction between αγαπαω and φιλεω must not here be lost sight of. . . . . Why do the Lord's two first questions contain αγαπας, while Peter's have φιλω, whereas the third time the question and answer both have φιλεις? This does not look like accident.]

[Jno. xxi. 15. Feed my lambs. Βοσκε τα αρνια μου. 'We can hardly . . . hold βοσκαιν, ver. 15 and 17, and ποιμαινε, ver. 16, to be synonymous, or λυκια, ver. 15, and προβατα, ver. 16, .7. . . . Everything speaks for a gradation of meaning.—See Isa. xl. 11; 1 Jno. ii. 12, .3.'—Alford.]

Lambs . . . sheep. The flock of Christ is made up of young as well as old; and Christ would have each receive his proper kind of nourishment.

[In ver. 15 and 17, our Lord uses the verb βοσκειν, to feed, and in ver. 16 he uses the word ποιμαινειν, which signifies to tend a flock, not only to feed, but to take care of, guide, govern, defend, &c.; by which he seems to intimate that it is not sufficient merely to offer the bread of life to the congregation of the Lord, but he must take care that the sheep be properly collected, attended to, regulated, guided, &c.; and it appears that Peter perfectly comprehended our Lord's meaning, and saw that it was a direction given not only to him, and to the rest of the disciples, but to all their successors in the christian ministry; for himself says, 1 Ep. v. 2, 'Feed the flock of God (ποιμανατε το ποιμνιον του Θεου) which is among you, taking the oversight (επισκοπουντες, acting as superintendents and guardians) thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind.' Every spiritual shepherd of Christ has a flock, composed of LAMBS—young converts, and SHEEP—experienced Christians, to feed, guide, regulate, and govern. To be properly qualified for this, his wisdom and holiness should always exceed those of his flock. Who is sufficient for these things? The man who lives in God, and God in him.'—A. C.]

16. Yea, Lord. After all that had occurred, Peter certainly could not say that he loved Jesus more than the beloved disciple; but although his conduct had justly given occasion for Jesus' inquiry, he could say, notwithstanding his unfaithfulness in thrice denying his Lord, 'Thou knowest that I,' &c.

Feed my sheep. 'Rather, Be a shepherd to thy sheep. The word in the original is not the same as that translated feed in ver. 15, .7, but one which expresses all the duties of a shepherd to his flock.'

17. Peter was grieved. Not merely on account of the

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

If we at all love Jesus, we love him more than our worldly goods and gain. And yet how many of those who profess to be disciples of Christ, act as if they were more interested in the things of this world than in him or his work!—And see margin.

[Jno. xxi. 16. Love to Christ is an indispensable qualification, not only to the instructors of babes, but also for those who are to be employed in guiding in the Divine life those who are farther advanced.]

[Not only should the little children be fed, but

THE PRINCIPAL QUALIFICATION IN THOSE WHO ARE OCCUPIED IN TEACHING THE YOUNG, IS LOVE TO JESUS.
ONE PRINCIPAL WAY IN WHICH WE ARE TO SHEW OUR LOVE TO JESUS, IS A TENDER CARE FOR THE YOUNG OF HIS FLOCK.

John xxi. 18—20.

me? And he-said unto-him, Lord, thou knowest οιδας all-things; thou knowest 18 γινωσκεις that I-love φιλω thee. Jesus saith unto-him, Feed Βοσκε my sheep. Verily, verily, I-say unto-thee, When thou-wast young, thou-girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou-wouldest: but when thou-shalt-be-old, thou-shalt-stretch-forth thy hands, 19 and another shall-gird thee, and carry thee whither thou-wouldest not. This spake-he, signifying by-what death he-should-glorify God. And when-he-had-spoken this, he-20 saith unto-him, Follow me. Then Peter, turning-about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lord, thou knowest all things, &c.—An acknowledgment that Jesus had known him better than he knew himself, when the good Shepherd forewarned him of the coming danger, Lu. xxii. 31, .4, § 87, pp 376, .7; Mk. xiv. 27, p. 406—The knowledge of Christ is particularly dwelt upon in the commencement of Peter's second epistle, i. 3, 'According as his Divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:'—Jesus knows the temptations to which we may be exposed, and has accordingly ministered to us such promises as, if duly attended to, will withdraw our affections from all that is debasing, and enable us in patience to produce the fruits of faith in himself, ver. 4—8.

Jno. xxi. 17. Feed my sheep—Our Lord here uses the word (Βοσκε) which he had used when he said, ver. 15, 'Feed my lambs.'—The fathers in Christ, for whom more especially the second epistle of Peter seems designed, require to be nourished equally with the lambs, and ought, as directed, iii. 18, to 'grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.'—Wherefore, although they had been instructed in the facts of the gospel history at the commencement of their christian career, and thus had the rudiments of the knowledge of Christ already deposited in their memories, yet Peter would not be negligent to put them 'always in remembrance of these things,' i. 12, .3—He also avows his purpose to 'these things always in remembrance,' ver. 15, which is generally supposed to have been accomplished in the gospel according to Mark, written under the direction of Peter—Peter especially alludes, ver. 16—8, to that grand event in our Lord's life, the Transfiguration—to the true teaching which Jesus had promised to give, ver. 19—21, to the false teachers, whom he had predicted would arise, ii. 1—and also to his predictions respecting the last days, the preparation for the great consummation in 'the day of the Lord,' and the 'new heavens and a new earth,' iii. 13—The subjects treated of in Peter's second epistle, it may be observed, are of the same nature, and in much the same order, as the Apocalypse, so that the former may be regarded as a key to the latter.

18. whither thou wouldest—Peter seems to have repeatedly left his Master's work at his own pleasure—see on ver. 3, 15, pp. 505, .7. supra.

stretch forth thy hands—Peter seems to allude to this prediction of the manner of his death (by crucifixion) as a motive for increased diligence in the work to which his Lord had appointed him—2 Pe. i. 14, 'Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.'

19. signifying by what death, &c.—The same as that of his Lord, as before intimated, ch. xiii. 36, § 87, p 374, 'Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.'

Follow me—In his Lord's service he ought to have been willing to follow him at all hazards, even unto death—It is evident, however, that our Lord meant that Peter should now literally follow him—It would appear that Peter had not yet fully followed the Inapostles sent to the disciples to follow Jesus to the place appointed, Mk. xvi. 7, § 93, p. 487—see on Mk viii. 34, § 50, p. 42.

NOTES.

repetition of the question, but because of το τριτον, the number of his own denials of Christ. This is sufficient refutation of the silly idea of an exclusive primatical power being granted or confirmed to him. —See also 1 Pe. v. 1, 'The elders which are among you,' &c.—See supra Scrip. Illus.

Jno. xxi. 18. Thou girdedst thyself, &c. The Jews, in walking or running, girded their outer garments around them that they might not be impeded. The expression here denotes freedom. He did as he pleased; he girded himself or not—he went or remained, as he chose.

[When thou shalt be old. The termination of his pastoral office is announced to him—a proof of that omniscience which he had just confessed; a contrast to his denial of Christ, of which he had just been reminded; a proof to be hereafter given of the herereconciled genuineness of that love he professed.]

Carry thee, &c. In the lifting up after the fastening to the cross. This is a prophecy of the manner of Peter's death—see ver. 19—which is said to have taken place by crucifixion at Rome. St. Peter is reported to have been fixed to the cross with his head downwards at his own request; as though he were not worthy even to suffer in the same manner as his Lord. The words are descriptive of the practice mentioned by ancient authors, of stretching out the hands of criminals upon the two extremities of a yoke placed across the neck, and so carrying them to crucifixion. There appears to be a reference to this prophecy in 2 Pe. i. 14.—See Scrip. Illus., supra, 'Stretch forth thy hands.'

[Whither thou wouldest not. This is not said to intimate that Peter would be unwilling to suffer martyrdom; but it stands opposed to the freedom of his early life. Though willing when compelled to do it, yet he would not seek it; and though he would not needlessly expose himself to it, yet he would not shrink from it, when it was the will of God.]

19. Glorify God. The words seem to be a plain reference to ch. xiii. 36, [§ 87, p. 374,] and the following through the cross to glory.—See Mk. xvi. 24, [§ 50, p. 42]. . . . There was also a forcible reminding of Peter of the first time he had heard these words on the same shore, iv. 19, [§ 16, p. 108].

[20. Peter . . . . seeth the disciple . . . . following. 'There is a peculiar spirit and tenderness in this young men should have their growing strength nourished and directed by those who love the Lord.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Jno. xxi. 17. Those who are to be eminent in the Lord's service may lay their account with having their love to the Saviour called in question.

It will be well if, when we are asked, we can say, 'Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee.'

[15, .7 ver. Let each, whether babe, young man, or father, seek to improve, by the proper nourishment provided for him, under the direction of the chief Shepherd.]—See margin.

[18 ver. Peter is reminded of his repeated departures from the service of his Master—and although forgiven, yet is he told that even in the manner of his death God will remind him of his early defections. Let us beware of choosing at any time our own ways; although God may forgive our iniquity, yet will he take vengeance on our inventions.]

JOHN xxi. 21—4.

loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he 21 that-betrayeth thee? Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this-man 22 do? Jesus saith unto-him, If I-will that-he-tarry μενειν till I-come, what is that to 23 thee? follow thou me. Then went-this saying-abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should-not-die: yet Jesus said not unto-him, He-shall-not-die; but, If I-will that-he-tarry till I-come, what is that to thee?
24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these-things, and wrote these-things: and we-know that his testimony is true. [Ver. 25, § 100, p. 518.]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Jno. xxi. 20. leaned on his breast—see ch. xiii. 23—5, § 87, p. 371.

21. what shall this man do?—John has also done as Peter was directed, ver. 15—7.—He whom Jesus loved has provided food for the lambs in the gospel accordingly to John—He who leaned on his breast at supper, hath in his epistles presented those rules for the guidance of the more advanced disciples, whereby they may be kept in the love of God—He who asked concerning the betrayer, 'Lord, who is it?' has in the Apocalypse an abundant discovery made to him of 'the son of perdition,' of whom the betrayer was a type.

22. till I come—When the great Apocalypse will take place, 1 Co. iv. 5, '.Judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God.'—Rev. xxii. 7, 20, 'Behold, I come quickly:'—The second and glorious advent was, upon his ascension to heaven, most clearly foretold by the two men, Ac. i. 11, § 98, p. 517, 'Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.'

what is that to thee? &c.—Intimating that though John were to remain during the whole period of our Lord's absence from the earth, neither Peter nor any of his pretended successors would have any right to interfere with, or assume authority over him—Peter was to mind his own work, and John, from love, would do his—see on ver. 21—Peter and John were afterwards much together in their Master's service, Ac. iii. 1; iv. 13; viii. 14—see on Mt. xvi. 19, § 50, p. 39; Mk. viii. 34, § 76, p. 42.

NOTES.

plain passage. Christ orders St. Peter to follow him, in token of his readiness to be crucified in his cause. St. John stays not for the call; he rises and follows him too; but says not one word of his own love or zeal. He chose that the action only should speak this; and even when he records the circumstance, he tells not what that action meant, but with great simplicity relates the fact only. If here and there a generous heart sees and emulates it, be it so; but he is not solicitous that men should admire it. It was addressed to his beloved Master, and it was enough that he understood it."—Wesley.]

Jno. xxi. 22. Till I come. 'At the destruction of Jerusalem began that mighty series of events of which the Apocalypse is the prophetic record, and which is in the complex known as the "coming of the Lord," ending, as it shall, with his glorious and personal advent."—Alford.

[What is that to thee? τὶ πρὸς σέ&c. &c. 'Here, again, the sense is obscure, for the very same reason as before, and consequently has led to a great variety of interpretations; all of them more or less erroneous. To ascertain their true import, the scope of the words, and their plain sense, both separately and conjointly, must first be ascertained. Now it is evident that our Lord intended a gentle rebuke to Peter for his curiosity on a subject which did not concern himself, and into which it was not proper for him to pry. And as τί πρὸς σέ was (as appears from the classical illustrations of Wetstein and Rypke) a frequent form of repressing vain curiosity, the chief sense intended seems to be that assigned by Euthymius, "Do thou mind thine own concerns."'—Bloomf.]

It is likely our Lord refers to his personal advent, and thus intimates, that although the beloved disciple were to continue on earth until his Lord's return, neither Peter nor any other pretended vicar of Christ would have any right to interfere with him. He would, like every other beloved disciple, be accountable to his Lord alone, 'to his own Master.'

'This answer of our Lord contains a plain proof of his Divinity. He here intimates that it depends upon his will how long John shall remain alive. But the issues of life and death proceed from God alone, Christ therefore must be God.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

24. We know. That is, it is known: it is universally admitted. In this case, therefore, we have the testimony of a man whose character for nearly a century was that of a man of truth; so much so, that it had become in a manner proverbial, and put beyond a question. It is impossible to believe that such a man would sit down deliberately to impose upon mankind, or to write a book which was false. This gospel contains, in itself, the clearest proof of inspiration. It is a connected, clear, and satisfactory argument, to establish the great truth that Jesus was the Messiah. It contains the record of the Saviour's profoundest discourses, of his most convincing arguments with the Jews, and of his declarations respecting himself and God. It contains the purest and most elevated views of God anywhere expressed. But if John has recorded the words of the Lord Jesus, and preserved the true record of what occurred so many years before, then it shews that he was under a Divine guidance; and he is himself a proof, a standing proof of the fulfilment of the promise, that the Holy Spirit would guide them into all truth, ch. xvi. 13. Of this book, as of all other books of the sacred scriptures, we may, in conclusion, apply the words spoken by John, respecting his vision of the future events of the church—'Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy (book), and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.' Rev. i. 3.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Jno. xxi. 20—2. Peter attempted to shew his love to the Saviour by taking supervision of 'the disciple whom Jesus loved,' whose simplicity he may have thought required the guidance of his superior wisdom in his allotted sphere of action. If so, Peter very soon began to exercise that which the Romish church has claimed for St. Peter, to whom it says our Lord gave the episcopal jurisdiction, over not only the lambs, which they say are the laity, but also over the priests and the bishops, which they say are referred to by the sheep. It is not so, however, that Peter was here given supremacy over his fellow-disciples, else he would have been right in taking an oversight of the beloved disciple of whom our Lord says, 'If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?' So then the beloved disciple was exempted from Peter's control; and as certainly ought all the successors of the beloved disciple to be exempt from the control of the pretended successors of St. Peter. For, be it observed, the exemption is not merely claimed for John during our Lord's sojourn upon earth, and until Peter should come into the full exercise of his vicariare, but also during the whole period of our Lord's absence until his second and glorious appearing. Were Peter himself upon the earth, he would have no right to exercise authority over John. As little right have the pretended successors of St. Peter to lord it over the successors of the beloved disciple.]

24 ver. As in God's sight, speak the truth in Christ.

(G. 14.)—*Jesus appears to James, "the Lord's brother:" which is his ninth appearance. 1 Cor. xv. 7. In Galilee.

[Ver. 6, § 96, p. 502.]

7 After-that, he-was-seen of-James;

SECTION 98.—(G. 15—.7.)—[Lesson 100 embraces Sect. xcviii—c.]—PARTICULARS OF ASCENSION DAY.—Acts i. 4—11. Mark xvi. 15—.9. Luke xxiv. 44—51. 1 Cor. xv. 7.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

Ac. i. 4. Having again met with his disciples after appearing to them in Galilee, Jesus commands them to wait in Jerusalem for the fulfilment of the Father's promise, of which he had before spoken to them.

Lu. xxiv. 44. All concerning Christ contained in the three grand departments of Old Testament scripture must be fulfilled.

— xxiv. 45—.7. Christ opens the understandings of his disciples to understand the scriptures, shewing that they predicted his death and resurrection; 'that repentance and remission of sins . . . in his name' may be preached unto all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

— xxiv. 48. He declares the disciples witnesses of the things thus predicted and fulfilled.

— xxiv. 49. He speaks to them of the promise of the Father, that other Witness whereby their testimony was to be confirmed; and bids them remain in Jerusalem until they be given 'power from on high.'

——— Ac. i. 5. Jesus contrasts John's water baptism with the baptism of the Spirit, with which the disciples are speedily to be favoured.

— — — i. 6. The disciples not distinguishing between the former rain and the latter rain, promised in connexion with the great restoration, ask Jesus whether he will 'at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?'

——— — i. 7, 8. Jesus intimates that it is not at present theirs to know the times or the seasons kept by the Father 'in his own power,' but that they will receive power after the Holy Ghost is come upon them, and that then they shall be his witnesses not only in Jerusalem and in Judæa, but also in Samaria, and to the ends of the earth.

Lu. xxiv. 50. Jesus leads his disciples out to the confines of Bethany.

Mk. xvi. 15. Jesus commands his disciples to go into all the world, and make known to all the glad tidings of salvation.

— xvi. 16. Every one who believes and is cleansed shall be saved; he that believes not shall be condemned.

— xvi. 17, .8. Signs promised to accompany faith in the name of Jesus.

— xvi. 19. Lu. xxiv. 50, .1: Ac. i. 9. Jesus having spoken to his disciples, lifts up his hands and blesses them. While blessing his disciples he is parted from them, and taken up into heaven, a cloud receiving him out of their sight.

— xvi. 19. ——— ——— Jesus is seated on the right hand of God.

——— ——— — i. 10, .1. While the disciples continue looking earnestly after their ascended Lord, two men clothed in white are found standing by, who ask why they thus continue gazing into heaven, assuring them that the same Jesus they have seen go into heaven, will return in the same manner as they have seen him ascend.

No. 98.—(G. 15.)—On the morning of ascension day, or Holy Thursday, Jesus appears to the apostles, assembled in Jerusalem: which is his tenth and last appearance.

LUKE xxiv. 44—.9. [Ver. 43, § 95, p. 499.]

ACTS i. 1—8.

1 COR. xv. 7. then of-all the apostles.

1 'The former treatise have-I-made, O Theophilus of all that Jesus began both to-2 do and to-teach, until the-day in which he-was-taken-up, after-that-he-through the-Holy Ghost-had-given-commandment unto-the apostles whom-he had-3 chosen: To-whom also he-shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being-seen of them forty days, and speaking-of the things per-4 taining-to the kingdom of-God: and, being assembled together-with them, commanded them that-they-should-not depart from Jerusalem, but wait-for the promise of-the Father, which saith he, ye-have-heard of-me.'

Ac. i. 4. not depart from Jerusalem—They had heard him speak of its approaching destruction, Lu. xix. 41—.4, § 82, pp. 264, .5, and of a time when it would be the duty of the disciples to flee out of Judæa, xxi. 20—.4, § 86, pp. 331—.4—He had moreover given them, Mt. x. 23, § 39, p. 300, a general rule, 'When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another:'—and now in their Head they had been persecuted even unto the death, Lu. xxiii. 33, § 91, p. 459—and he had warned them to look for the same treatment as their Lord, Jno. xv. 20, § 87, p. 399—If, therefore, they were now to remain in Jerusalem, it required that they should receive particular instructions to that effect—comp. Lu. xxiv. 47, infra; Ac. i. 8—The apostles did remain in Jerusalem, even when the disciples generally were dispersed therefrom by persecution, viii. 1.

the promise of the Father—see on Lu. xxiv. 49, infra.

ye have heard of me—He had said that the Holy Ghost would empower them to send forth 'rivers of living water.' Jno. vii. 38, .9, § 55, p. 95, in which the nations were to be made clean, and prepared for holy service—comp. xvii. 17—26, § 87, pp. 402—.5; Mt. xxviii. 19, 20, § 96, p. 503—Jesus had said much respecting the promise of the Father, the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, Jno. xiv. 16, .7, § 87, p. 383—the Holy Ghost, who was to teach them all things, and bring to their remembrance all he had taught them, ver. 26, p. 385, who was to testify of Christ, xv. 26, p. 391, and convince the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, xvi. 7—11, pp. 393, .4—guide into all truth, shew them things to come, and glorify the Saviour, ver. 13, .4, pp. 394, .5.

NOTES.

Ac. i. 4. Commanded them that they should not depart, &c. See SCRIP. ILLUS.

The promise. The pouring forth of the Spirit, Joel ii. 28, which also Christ had promised his disciples from the Father, Jno. xiv. 16; xv. 26; xvi. 7, § 87, pp. 383, .91, .3.

* 'Jesus appears to James, by whom St. Paul must be supposed to mean the James then living, and consequently the brother of our Lord and the bishop of Jerusalem. This is the ninth manifestation on record; and probably was to command the apostles to return to Jerusalem; and if so, it would take place in Galilee, some time before the twenty-sixth of the Jewish Zif or Jar, and the sixteenth of the Julian May, which was ascension day; when it is certain they were again in Jerusalem.'—Greswell.

HE THAT KEEPETH HIS COMMANDMENTS DWELLETH IN HIM, AND HE IN HIM. AND HEREBY WE KNOW THAT HE ABIDETH IN US, BY THE SPIRIT WHICH HE HATH GIVEN US.—1 Jno. iii. 24.

LUKE xxiv. 44—7. ACTS.
(Ver. 43, ℓ 95, p. 499.)

44 δ And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, 45 concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might 46 understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:
47 and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 44. all things, &c.—Jno. xvi. 15, p. 396, 'All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shew it unto you.'

Jesus proceeds, ver. 44—8, to give them an example of that ministration of the word which they, through the Holy Ghost, were to give unto others—comp. Ac. i. 2—5.

law of Moses—the first five books of the Bible—see on ver. 27, § 94, p. 495.

the prophets—the seven books: Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel; and the twelve minor prophets, from Hosea to Malachi—Joshua was an eminent type of Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, who leads the Israel of God into the promised inheritance—see Jos. v. 13, 4—In Judges we may see a representation of the marvellous deliverances the Lord effects for us, when we know that other help is vain, and look to him alone—see the battle of Midian, ch. vii.—In Samuel we read of David and his afflictions, the man after God's own heart, truly exhibited in the King of Righteousness, 2 Sa. xxii., xxiii. 1—7—In the history of the kings we read of Solomon, whose kingdom foreshadowed that of THE PRINCE OF PEACE, 1 Ki. iii., iv. 20—34; and in the after parts of the book, in the case both of Israel and of Judah, we see the miserable distraction and ruin that result from not walking in the truth—That ruin we see fully portrayed in Jeremiah, together with promises, clear and express, of the good which God, according to new-covenant mercy, will give his people to enjoy in THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS, Jer. xxxi. 1—4; 14—26—In Ezekiel the glory and blessings of the kingdom of David the Beloved are described; and as well the state of those refusing to be found under the guidance of the good Shepherd, and in reception of his good Spirit, Eze. i., ix., x., xxxiv., xxxvi. 22—38, xxxvii., &c.—and in Isaiah we have most distinctly pointed out both the sufferings of Christ, ch. liii., and the glory that should follow, liv., lx., as well as previously his birth, as being 'God with us,' vii. 14; ix. 6, 7—and his ministry which was now to be carried out by his apostles, xlii. 1—6—see also lxi., &c.

psalms—The first of the twelve books of the Hagiographa, or Holy Scriptures, which were sometimes, as here, named after the first in the list as they stand in the Hebrew: Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Chronicles.

45. opened, &c.—so Ps. cxix. 18, 'Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.'—We are encouraged so to ask, Ja. i. 5—It is in having the scriptures opened to us that our understandings are opened, Lu. xxiv. 32, § 94, p. 496.

46. Thus it is written—Ps. xl. 7, 'In the volume of the book it is written of me,' to suffer—As had been foreshadowed in the sacrifices under the law, He. ix. 24—6—in the typical persons, Ac. vii. 9, 35—7—and by prophecy, Ps. xxii. 1—18; Is. liii. 2—10.

47. repentance—The preaching of it unto the lost house of Israel had been predicted, Jer. iii. 12—4—preached to the Jews first, Ac. ii. 38; iii. 19; v. 31; xi. 18; xiii. 38—41, .6, 'Lo, we turn to the Gentiles.'—Preached at Athens, xvii. 30, .1—before Agrippa, xxvi. 20.

remission of sins—1 Jno. ii. 12, 'For his name's sake.'—Rom. iii. 24, 'Freely by his grace,'—28, 'By faith without the deeds of the law,' to the establishing of the law, ver. 31.

among all nations—see Mt. xxviii. 19, § 96, p. 503.

beginning at Jerusalem—which had been pre-eminent in guilt, Je. xxxii. 31—.5—and was also to be pre-eminent in judgment, Mt. xxiii. 34—9, § 85, pp. 319—21; Lu. xiii. 33—.5, § 66, pp. 179, .80—comp. with Paul's case, 1 Ti. i. 15—.7—In Jerusalem were the most ample means of testing the truth of the apostles' statements, Ac. ii. 22—32, and the case of Jerusalem was to confirm the gospel unto those to whom it was more especially sent, Eze. xiv. 21—.3—see Ho. ii. 14—23; Je. iii. 11—.7; Zec. ii. 8—11—The everlasting gospel was to be preached, Rev. xiv. 6. 'unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,' &c.

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 44. These are the words. 'Behold the realization of the words,' &c.

Which I spake . . . . while, &c. See ch. xviii. 31, [§ 77, p. 235;] xxii. 37, [§ 87, p. 377;] Mt. xxvi. 56, [§ 88, p. 421;] but doubtless he had often said things to them on these matters which have not been recorded for us.

[45. Then opened he their understanding. Διήνοιξεν, he fully opened. They had a measure of light before, so that they discerned the scriptures to be the true word of God, and to speak of the Messiah; but they had not light sufficient to enable them to apply these scriptures to their Lord and Master; but now, by the influence of Christ, they see, not only the prophecies which pointed out the Messiah, but also the Messiah who was pointed out by these prophecies. The book of God may be received in general as a Divine revelation, but the proper meaning, reference, and application of the scriptures can only be discerned by the light of Christ. Even the very plain word of God is a dead letter to those who are not enlightened by the grace of Christ; and why? because this word speaks of spiritual and heavenly things; and the carnal mind of man cannot discern them. They who receive not this inward teaching continue dark and dead while they live.'—A. C.]

46. Thus it behoved Christ to suffer, &c. See on ver. 26, § 94, p. 495.

47. Repentance. See on ch. iii. 3, [§ 7, p. 50.]

Remission of sins. "Αφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, the taking away—removal of sins, in general—everything that relates to the destruction of the power, the pardoning of the guilt, and the purification of the heart from the very nature of sin.

Be preached. Be proclaimed.—See on Mt. iii. 1, § 7, p. 50.

[Beginning at Jerusalem. Ἀρξάμενον. 'A neuter absolute, "it having begun." The substance of the preaching of the gospel literally corresponded to this description.—See Ac. ii. 38.'—Alford.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 45. Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth: that we may know this, let us attentively study both the Old Testament scriptures and the New, and take Christ himself for our Interpreter.

[46, .7 ver. Let us endeavour to give an unreserved declaration of the gospel to those among whom we live, though they should hate us on account of it; and thereafter, as far as is in our power, let us call to repentance, and make known the remission of sins.]

HEAR THE WORD OF THE LORD, O YE NATIONS, AND DECLARE IT IN THE ISLES AFAR OFF, AND SAY, HE THAT SCATTERED ISRAEL WILL GATHER HIM, AS A SHEPHERD DOTH HIS FLOCK.—Jer. xxxi. 10.

LUKE xxiv. 48, 49. ACTS i. 5, 6.

48 And ye are witnesses of these things. 49, And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry καθισατε ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with ενδυσησθε power from on high.

5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be 5 baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. When they therefore were come together, they asked 6 of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lu. xxiv. 48. ye are witnesses—Ac. i. 8—Is. xliii. 10—2, 'Ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, and my servant whom I have chosen: that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he, ... 11, I, even I, am the LORD; and beside me there is no saviour. 12, I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, ... therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, that I am God.'—The apostles had ample opportunity of becoming acquainted with Him of whom they were sent to bear witness, Jno. xv. 27, § 87, p. 391; Ac. x. 39, 41. . . . .—They were witnesses of his resurrection, ii. 32; iii. 15; iv. 33; v. 30—2—x. 39, 'witnesses of all things which he did'—41, 'witnesses chosen before of God, ... who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.' —xiii. 31, 'Witnesses unto the people.'—1 Jno. i. 1—3, 'We have seen . . . and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us,' &c.

49. promise of my Father—Jesus had before said, Jno. vii. 38, 39, § 55, p. 95, 'He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, ... for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)'—And when Jesus prayed, Jno. xii. 28, § 83, p. 267, 'Father, glorify thy name,' the Father answered, by 'a voice from heaven. . . . . I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.'—See Jesus' recognition of the promise, the holy scriptures, De. xxxii. 2, 'My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:'—Ps. i. 23; Is. xii. 1; xliv. 3; lxi. 1; Joel ii. 28—see on Ac. i. 6—see Mt. x. 19, 20, § 39, p. 229—The fulfilment of the promise commenced on the day of Pentecost, Ac. ii. 1, &c.

Ac. i. 5. John . . . . with water, &c.—John had himself borne witness to the superiority of the baptism which Jesus was to minister, Mt. iii. 11, § 7, p. 54; Jno. i. 31—3, § 10, p. 70.

be baptised with the Holy Ghost, &c.—The Comforter was to bring all things to their remembrance that Jesus had said to them, Jno. xiv. 26, § 87, p. 385—He was so to apply the truth as that they should be made 'clean through the word' which Jesus had spoken unto them, xv. 3, § ib., p. 387—so, being made clean, and abiding in Christ, they were to receive the promised power to become fruitful, ver. 4, 5—Baptism with the Holy Ghost had been much spoken of by the prophets as preparatory to the restoration of Israel: the desolations of their land were to continue till then, Is. xxxii. 14—6, 'Because the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude of the city shall be left; the forts and towers shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks; 15, until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest. 16, Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.' —Then were they to be known as being the Lord's people Israel, xliv. 1—5, 'Yet now hear, O Jacob my servant; and Israel, whom I have chosen: 2, thus saith the LORD that made thee, and formed thee from the womb, which will help thee; Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou, Jesurun, whom I have chosen. 3, For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring: 4, and they shall spring up as among the grass, as 'willows by the water courses. 5, One shall say, I am the LORD's; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the LORD, and surname himself by the name of Israel.'—Then are they to inhabit their own land, Eze. xxxvi. 24—8, 'For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. 25, Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. 26, A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. 27, And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. 28, And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.'—After the promised great outpouring of the Spirit, the Lord says, xxxix. 29, 'Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.'—Of this great baptism a pledge was given on the day of Pentecost, Joel ii. 28—32; Ac. ii. 16—21—see these passages given, next page, first column.

6. When they therefore, &c.—Jesus had predicted that Jerusalem should be destroyed, Lu. xix. 41—4, § 82, p. 264, and yet the disciples were now commanded not to depart from Jerusalem, until that which they regarded as connected with the restoration should come, Lu. xxiv. 49, supra; Ac. i. 4—The disciples may not as yet have learned to distinguish between the firstfruits of the Spirit, Rom. viii. 23, to be given in their own time, and of the full bestowment of which the pentecostal effusion was the pledge —comp. Je. xxxiii. 6—9, 'Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 48. And ye are witnesses, &c. Namely, of the events of the life, death, and especially resurrection of Christ, as unequivocal proof of his Divine mission.—See on Lu. i. 2, § 1, p. 1.

49. The promise of my Father ἐπαγγελιαν. That is, the thing promised, the Holy Ghost.—See Ac. i. 5.

Tarry ye. No stress need be laid on this—καθισατε, 'sit,' which appears to imply that the disciples were to remain quiet in Jerusalem, and not to stand forth in public as witnesses to their Lord until 'endued with power from on high.'—Comp. Ac. i. 4, 5, 8.

[Until ye be endued with power. The energy of the Holy Ghost was to be communicated to them for three particular purposes. 1. That he might be in them a sanctifying comforter, fortifying their souls, and bringing to their remembrance whatever Jesus had before spoken to them. 2. That their preaching might be accompanied by his demonstration and power to the hearts of their hearers, so that they might believe and be saved. 3. That they might be able to work miracles to confirm their pretensions to a Divine mission, and to establish the truth of the doctrines they preached.'—A. C.]

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Lu. xxiv. 49. All blessing comes to us from God the Father, through his Son; and the great blessing is the Gift of the Holy Ghost, which leads into the understanding of all truth.]

Ac. i. 5. John was greater than all the prophets, but his baptism with water was only a type of that better baptism which was to follow: of which may we all truly be partakers.

I WILL POUR WATER UPON HIM THAT IS THIRSTY, AND FLOODS UPON THE DRY GROUND: I WILL POUR MY SPIRIT UPON THY SEED, AND MY BLESSING UPON THINE OFFSPRING:—Isa. xliv. 3.

Acts i. 7.

again αποκαθιστανεις the kingdom to Israel? And he 7 said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth. 7, And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first. 8, And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me. 9, And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it.'—Joel ii. 23—32, 'Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month. 24, And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil. 25, And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpiller, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you. 26, And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed. 27, And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed. 28, And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: 29, and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. 30, And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. 31, The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come. 32, And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call.'—Comp. Ac. ii. 16—21.—It was therefore natural that they should ask in surprise, whether the restoration was now to take place, without those long desolations being accomplished, of which Jesus had before spoken, as in Mt. xxiv. § 86, p. 322, and which had been predicted by the prophets, as Eze. vii. &c.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ac. i. 6. the kingdom to Israel—The kingdom had been promised to Jesus as coming of the tribe of Judah, Ge. xlix. 8—10, 'Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee. 9, Judah is a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up? 10, The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come: and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.'—And of the family of David, Is. ix. 6, 7, 'For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this.'—xl. 1—10, &c.—The disciples had, on the holy mount, been given a sample of the kingdom, Mt. xvi. 28, § 50, p. 44; xvii. 1—5, § 51, pp. 51—6—the promise had been given them, xix. 28, § 75, p. 228, 'When the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.'—See Is. xxxii. 1. —Je. xxxiii. 15—7, 'In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. 16, In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord our righteousness. 17, For thus saith the LORD; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel;'—25, 6, Thus saith the LORD; If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them.'—Eze. xxxvii. 24—7, 'And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. 25, And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever. 26, Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. 27, My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people.'—Da. vii. 27, 'And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.'—Ho. iii. 5, 'Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days.'—Joel iii. 16—21, 'The LORD also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the LORD will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. 17, So shall ye know that I am the LORD your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more. 18, And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the LORD, and shall water the valley of Shittim. 19, Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land. 20, But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. 21, For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the LORD dwelleth in Zion.'—Am. ix. 11, 'In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old:'—Mi. v. 2, 'But thou, Beth-lehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.'—Zep. iii. 15—7, 'The LORD hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy: the king of Israel, even the LORD, is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more. 16, In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not: and to Zion, Let not thine hands be slack. 17, The LORD thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing.'

7. It is not for you—Jesus had before said, Jno. xvi. 12, 13, § 87, p. 394, 'I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth:' &c.

the times, &c.—comp. Mt. xxiv. 36, § 86, p. 341; Ac. xvii. 26.

NOTES.

[Ac. i. 6. Restore again the kingdom. 'Αποκαθιστανεις signifies not only to restore, &c., but 'to finish,' 'make an end'—make an end of that commonwealth which opposes thy truth, and set up thy kingdom over all the land.]

7. It is not for you to know. Our Lord's answer may intimate it should at length be restored, though not immediately, or with all the circumstances they imagined.

[Times . . . seasons. χρονους ἢ καιρους. The former denotes time in general; the latter, a point of time, a fair occasion. They are here synonymous.]

LUKE. ACTS i. 8.

the-seasons, which the Father hath-put ἔθετο in his-own-power ἐξουσίᾳ. But ye-shall-receive power, after- 8 that-the Holy Ghost-is-come upon you: and ye-shall-be witnesses unto-me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the-uttermost-part-of-the earth. (Ver. 9, p. 516.)

(G. 16.)—The same day Jesus conducts the apostles unto Bethany, and being about to ascend into heaven, repeats to them the apostolical charge, or command to preach the gospel. Bethany.

MARK xvi. 15—8. (Ver. 14, § 95, p. 501.)

LUKE xxiv. 50.

50 "And he-led them out as-far-as to Bethany,[b]

15 [a]And he-said unto-them, Go-ye into all the world, and-preach the 16 gospel to every creature κτίσει. He that-believeth and is-baptized shall-be-saved; but he that-believeth-not shall-be-damned κατακριθήσεται.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ac. i. 7. which the Father—Mt. xx. 23, [Mk. x. 40,] § 77, p. 238.

8. But ye shall receive power, &c.—The disciples were afterwards given the power to bear such knowledge as they now asked for, Ac. xv. 15—8; 1 Th. v. 1—4; 2 Th. ii. 1—3; 2 Ti. iii. 1—4.

witnesses, &c.—see on Lu. i. 2, § 1, p. 1—appointed, Mt. xxviii. 19, § 96, p. 503; Mk. xvi. 15—8, infra; Lu. xxiv. 45—8, p. 512; Jno. xv. 27, § 87, p. 391—began to be fulfilled, Ac. i. 22.

Jerusalem—The apostles received this testimony from their enemies, Ac. v. 28, 'Behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine,' all Judea, and in Samaria—Ac. viii. 1.

unto the uttermost part—Ps. xxii. 27, 'All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD:'—see also Ps xcviii. 3; Is. xii. 1, 5, 9; xlii. 10—.2; xlv. 22—.5; xlix. 6; lii. 10; Je. xvi. 19—The apostolic preaching continued to progress north-westward to the uttermost part—comp. Rom. x. 18; xv. 15—24—Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills, the blessings of the Prevailer were to go forth, in order that they might fall upon the people of promise, Ge. xlix. 26; De. xxxiii. 16, .7.

Lu. xxiv. 50. Bethany—ch. xix. 29, § 82, p. 260, 'Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives,'

Mk. xvi. 15. Go ye, &c.—see on Mt. xxviii. 19, § 96, p. 503; Lu. xxiv. 47—8, p. 512; Jno. xv. 16, § 87, p. 389; xx. 21, § 95, p. 499.

preach the gospel—Mt. xxviii. 19, § 96, p. 503, 'Teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:'

16. He that believeth, &c.—Jno. iii. 15—21, § 12, pp. 85—.7; vi. 29, 35, 40, § 43, pp. 327—.9; vii. 37, .8, § 55, p. 95; xi. 25, .6, § 58, p. 129; xii. 46, § 85, p. 311; xx. 31, § 100, p. 518; Rom iv. 24; x. 9—17; He. x. 38, .9; 1 Pe. iii. 21; 1 Jno. v. 10—.3.

and is baptized—With the baptism of which Jesus had just before spoken, Ac. i. 5, p. 513; not merely that of which Simon Magus was a partaker, viii. 13, 23, but that which Peter recognised in Cornelius previous to his being baptized with water, xi. 15, .6; without which no man shall see the Lord, He. xii. 14.

believeth not, &c.—Jno. xii. 48, § 85, p. 312; 2 Th. i. 8; ii. 12; Rev. xxi. 8.

NOTES.

[Ac. i. 8. Power. 'δύναμις, here used, means the "energy" communicated to the disciples to work miracles, and differs from the word used in the preceding verse, ἐξουσίᾳ, which means God's infinite "authority" over all times and seasons, &c.'—A. C.]

Lu. xxiv. 50. He led them out as far as to Bethany. Not the town, but the district: to the mount of Olives, Ac. i. 12, which stood within the boundaries of Bethany.—See GEOG. NOTICES, 'Mount of Olives,' § 86, p. 354.

Mk. xvi. 15. And he said unto them. 'We must not suppose that these words were spoken by our Lord at the time of the appearance mentioned in ver. 14, [§ 95, p. 500,] but at some time afterwards—probably not long before his ascension into heaven.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

[And preach the gospel. Proclaim the resurrection from the dead, the free forgiveness of sin, through Him who hath died and risen again, and the joyful hope of the kingdom of heaven; which is the blissful inheritance of all who are willing to be prepared for it, by the regenerating Spirit of God.]

16. He that believeth and is baptized, &c. He that by his actions proves he has been given the Holy Ghost, without which he is none of Christ's.

Our Saviour does not here, of course, refer to the mere typical or ceremonial baptism, but to that baptism of which he had just before been speaking, as contrasting it with the baptism of John. It would have been inconsistent with the whole of our Lord's teaching to have coupled together faith and the observance of a religious ceremony, such as baptism with water, as the terms of salvation: but it was perfectly consistent with all other New Testament teaching to connect with faith, that purification which is effected by faith, that 'holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord,' He. xii. 14.

He that believeth not, &c. By which is meant the rejection of the gospel in heart and life, not weakness or doubt as in ver. 14, [§ 95, p. 501,] shall condemn a man, whether baptized or unbaptized.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Ac. i. 7, 8. See margin. Let us be grateful to God for remembering us in his Divine compassion when we were yet afar off; and for sending so directly the gospel unto us in 'the uttermost part of the earth,' in this, the extreme north-west; whither the word of his grace was so expressly sent, and where he has been so careful to preserve a lamp for his beloved; and whence the light is at length going forth into all the dark corners of the earth.]

May we consider as we ought our privileges and responsibility as the appointed witnesses for Christ unto all men, both near and distant. We should first endeavour to spread the knowledge of the truth at home among our friends; next we are to make known the love of God to our enemies; and then unto all others as God gives us opportunity.

Mk. xvi. 15. The heralds of salvation are to preach the gospel not only to those who come unto them; they are to go everywhere and proclaim the free forgiveness of sins unto every creature, inviting all to partake of eternal life as the gift of God in Christ Jesus.

[16 rev. Salvation is sure to all that put their confidence in the atoning merits of the Son of God, and who are truly willing to be purified through faith in the blessed Jesus; but a fearful looking for of judgment is the reward of those who refuse to obey the gospel.]

O ISRAEL, FEAR NOT: FOR I HAVE REDEEMED THEE, I HAVE CALLED THEE BY THY NAME; THOU ART MINE.—Isa. xliii. 1.
WE MUST WAIT THE FATHER'S TIME TO RECEIVE KNOWLEDGE, AND POWER TO DO HIS WILL: WHICH IS BY THE OPERATION OF THE HOLY GHOST.

MARK xvi. 17, .8.

17 And these signs shall-follow them that-believe; In my name shall-they-cast-out devils; 18 they-shall-speak with-new tongues; they-shall-take-up serpents; and-if they-drink any deadly-thing, it-shall-not-hurt them; they-shall-lay hands on the-sick, and they-shall recover.

(G. 17.)—Jesus blesses the apostles, and in the act of blessing them is taken up into heaven; two angels appear to the apostles, and foretell his coming again in like manner as they had seen him depart. Bethany.

MARK xvi. 19.	LUKE xxiv. 50, .1.	ACTS i. 9—11. (Ver. 8, p. 515.)
19 [a] So then after the Lord had-spoken unto-them, [b]	and	And when-he-had-spoken these-things, 9
[b] he-lifted-up his hands, and-blessed them.
	51 And it-came-to-pass, while he blessed them, he-was-parted [διεστη] from them, and [c]

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mk. xvi. 17. signs, &c.—Jno. xiv. 12, § 87, p. 382; Ac. iv. 29, 30; He. ii. 4.

In my name, &c.—Lu. x. 17, .8, § 60, p. 143; Ac. iii. 6, 16; v. 15, .6; viii. 5—13; ix. 32—.5, 40; xiv. 3.

cast out devils—Ac. xvi. 16—.8; xix. 11, .2—Ja. iv. 7, 'Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.'

speak with new tongues—Zep. iii. 9, 'For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent.'—So that, Zec. viii. 23, 'ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations; even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew,' ['unto him shall the gathering of the people be,' Ge. xlix. 10,] 'saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.'—Tongues were given on the day of Pentecost, Ac. ii. 4—11. 33—so to Cornelius, &c., x. 46—see also 1 Co. xii 10, 28, 30; xiv. 5, 26—28, § 31, p. 237; Ja. i. 26; iii. 1—8.

18. take up serpents—Ex. iv. 4, Moses 'put forth his hand, and caught it (the serpent), and it became a rod in his hand: '—It is promised to the believer, Ps. xci. 13, 'Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet.'—To the scribes and Pharisees the True Witness said, Mt. xxiii. 33, § 85, p. 319, 'Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers.'—Stephen experienced the truth of the promise, Ac. vi. 8—10—and Paul had the promise doubly fulfilled, xiii. 6—12; xxviii. 3—6.

deadly thing—Ja. iii. 8, 'The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.'—The influence of which deadly poison, the true believer, as walking in holiness, is able to resist, Tit. i. 15.

lay hands on the sick—Ja. v. 14, .5, 'Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him,' &c.—Ac. xxviii. 8; 1 Co. xii. 9.

Lu. xxiv. 51. blessed them—A priestly act, Nu. vi. 22—7, 'And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 23, Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, 24, The LORD bless thee, and keep thee: 25, the LORD make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: 26, the LORD lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. 27, And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel; and I will bless them.'

NOTES.

Mk. xvi. 17. These signs shall follow them that believe. 'This promise is generally made without limitation to the first ages of the church. Should occasion arise for its fulfilment, there can be no doubt that it will be made good in our own or any other time. There are credible testimonies of miraculous powers having been exercised in the church considerably after the apostle's times.'—Alford.

And these signs shall follow them that believe. An eminent author subjoins, 'That believe with that very faith mentioned in the preceding verse. (Though it is certain, that a man may work miracles, and not have saving faith, Mt. vii. 22, .3, § 19, p. 141.) It was not one faith, by which St. Paul was saved; another, by which he wrought miracles. Even at this day in every believer, faith has a latent miraculous power (every effect of prayer being really miraculous): although in many, both because of their own littleness of faith, and because the world is unworthy, that power is not exerted.'—Wesley.

[They shall speak with new tongues. 'That this must be understood, in its full sense, of the miraculous communication of the faculty of speaking with tongues never previously learned, we have abundant proof, both from scripture and the testimonies of the earliest fathers. The same may be said of the next two particulars, the "taking up of serpents," and the "drinking of poison without injury." The former was in that age regarded as a decisive test of supernatural protection (though we find that this power, like all others, was sometimes pretended to by impostors); and the latter faculty would (as Doddridge truly observes) be especially necessary in an age when the art of poisoning was brought to such cursed refinement. As to the fifth particular, healing the sick supernaturally, the scriptures and early ecclesiastical writers are full of examples. Upon the whole, there is abundant evidence for the fulfilment of all the promises which the above expressions, in their plain and full sense, imply; and for their chief purposes, namely, of miraculous attestation to the Divine mission of those to whom they were made, and of supernatural protection to them under all the evils which they should have to encounter in the exercise of their ministry.'—Bloomf.]

18 If they drink any deadly thing, &c. We have no instance of this given in the Acts.

The apostles, in fulfilling their ministry, were to be exposed to many dangers, in deserts and in cities, from wild beasts and wicked men. It was therefore kind in their Lord, on their account, as well as that of others, to give them power over serpents, to whose venom they might be exposed; and over the deadly effects of poison which might be given them by those who secretly sought their destruction.

Lu. xxiv. 50. Lifted up his hands. Probably to lay them on their heads, for this was the ordinary way in which the paternal blessing was conveyed.—See Ge. xlviii. 8—20.

51. While he blessed them, &c. While he commanded his benediction to rest upon them; while he assured them of his favour, and commended them to the protection and guidance of God the Father.

PRACTICAL REFLECTION.

Mk. xvi. 17, .8. May those greater blessings, of which the miracles wrought by the first disciples were signs, abundantly follow those that believe in the name of Jesus.

Mark xvi. 19.	Luke xxiv. 51.	Acts i. 10, .1.
[d] he-was-received-up into heaven, and sat on the-right-hand of God.[e] (Ver. 20, § 100, p. 518.)	carried-up into heaven.	[c] while-they-beheld, he-was-taken-up; and a-cloud received him out-of their sight.[d]

[c] And while they-looked-stedfastly ατενιζοντες 10 ην toward heaven as-he-went-up, behold, two men stood-by them in white apparel;
which also said, Ye-men of-Galilee, why 11 stand-ye gazing-up into heaven? this-same Jesus, which is-taken-up from you into heaven, shall-so-come in-like-manner-as ye have-seen him go into heaven.

SECTION 99.—(No. 99.)—[Lesson 100, continued.]—The apostles worship Jesus, and return to Jerusalem, and await there the effusion of the Holy Ghost.—Luke xxiv. 52, .3. Acts i. 12.

Luke xxiv. 52, .3.	Acts i. 12.
52 [a] And they worshipped him, and-returned to Jerusalem with great joy:[b]	Then returned-they unto Jerusalem 12 [b] from the-mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a-sabbath-day's journey.[c]
53 [c] and were continually διαπαντος in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ac. i. 9. taken up—Enoch, Ge. v. 24—Elijah, 2 Ki. ii. 9—11—see Ac. ii. 33; iii. 21; v. 31.

a cloud received him, &c.—His return is to be in a cloud, Lu. xxi. 27, § 86, p. 338.

Mk. xvi. 19. right hand, &c.—Predicted, Ps. cx. 1—see Col. iii. 1; He. i. 3; iv. 14; vi. 20; viii. 1; ix. 24; x. 12; xii. 2; 1 Pe. iii. 22; Rev. iii. 21.

Ac. i. 10. two men, &c.—Mt. xvii. 2, 3, § 51, p. 53; Lu. xxiv. 4—7, § 93, p. 488; Jno. xx. 12, § ib., p. 491.

11. Ye men of Galilee—Mk. xiv. 70, § 89, p. 432.

shall so come—Is. xxv. 9; Da. vii. 13, .4; Zep. iii. 17; Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43; xix. 28, § 75, p. 223; xxiv. 30, § 86, p. 333; xxv. 31, § ib., p. 351; xxvi. 64, § 89, p. 429; Jno. xiv. 3, § 87, p. 381; 1 Th. i. 10; iv. 16; 2 Th. i. 7—10; Rev. i. 7.

Lu. xxiv. 52. worshipped him, &c.—Mt. xxviii. 9, 17, §§ 93, .6, pp. 501, .2; Jno. xx. 28, .9, § 95; He. i. 6.

with great joy—Jno. xiv. 28, § 87, p. 385; xvi. 7, 22, § ib., pp. 393, .6; 1 Pe. i. 8.

Ac. i. 12. from the mount, &c.—Mt. xxi. 1, § 82; xxiv. 3, § 86; xxvi. 30, § 87; Lu. xxi. 37, § 86, p. 357.

Lu. xxiv. 53. in the temple—Ac. ii. 46, .7; v. 41, .2.

Amen—so at the conclusion of each of the gospels, Mt. xxviii. 20, § 96, p. 504; Mk. xvi. 20, § 100, p. 518; Jno. xxi. 25, ib.

NOTES.

Lu. xxiv. 51. Carried up into heaven. ανεφερετο. [a] Into that heaven from which he had descended, Jno. i. 18; iii. 13. This was forty days after his resurrection, Ac. i. 3, during which time he had given the most convincing proofs of that reaurrection, not only to the apostles, but to many others—to upwards of "five hundred brethren at once," 1 Co. xv. 6.

[a] As in his life they had seen the way to the kingdom, and in his death the price of the kingdom, so in his ascension they had the fullest proof of the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the human body, and of his continual intercession at the right hand of God.'—A. C.

Ac. i. 11. Shall so come. In like manner, visible, in a cloud, in his own person, with the same body, and with such majesty and glory.—See Mt. xvi. 27, § 50, p. 43. This is a blessed assurance to comfort all sorrowing disciples, and about which Jesus had so largely discoursed.

Lu. xxiv. 52. They worshipped him. [a] If Jesus had ascended before they rendered this homage, this must have been an act of worship, strictly so called; for how they could do obeisance to one absent without supposing him some way acquainted with what they did, or admitting him to be a Divine person, is difficult to conceive. Nor can it be said that they paid this homage "while he was ascending," for according to Ac. i. 9, 10, they continued to look up to heaven until the angels addressed them.'—Boothr.

προσκυνησαντες αυτον. The term here must denote no less than the performance of religious worship, now first rendered to Christ by the apostles, even though absent and invisible; a decisive proof of their opinion of his divinity, as having now returned to the state of Divine glory which he had with the Father before he 'was made flesh.'—Comp. Jno. xx. 28, [§ 95, p. 501;] and see Jno. i. 14, [§ 7, p. 48;] xvii. 5, [§ 87, p. 399].

Ac. i. 12. Olivet, ... from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey. This was usually computed at about eight furlongs, or a mile. It was the distance between the ark and the camp when they marched, Jos. iii. 4, and probably the same proportion was observed when they rested.—See Geog. Notice, § 86, p. 354, first paragraph, 'Mount Olivet.'

Lu. xxiv. 53. Were continually. Not 'all their time,' daily at the hours of prayer.—See Ac. i. 13; iii. 1.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

[Mk. xvi. 19; Lu. xxiv. 50, .1. Jesus ascended into heaven in the act of blessing his disciples. Nor has he ceased to bless them, now that in our nature he sits upon the Father's throne. May we be ready to receive that which he is able and willing to bestow.]

Ac. i. 10, .1. Let us assuredly believe that the same Jesus who was taken up in a cloud, shall so come in like manner as he went. Let us haste to be prepared for his second and glorious appearing.

Lu. xxiv. 52. See margin.

[53 ver. From the example of the chosen disciples, let us be the more induced to give honour and glory to God, not only apart or in secret, but in the public assemblies of the people. Let us, like the apostles, with praise and thanksgiving to God, wait for the farther fulfilment of his promise; and, as he gives us opportunity, cheerfully devote our all to his service, endeavouring to make his name known upon earth, his saving health among all nations.]

LET US ADORE JESUS. HE IS THE OBJECT OF THAT WORSHIP WHICH CAN RIGHTFULLY BE RENDERED TO NO MERE CREATED BEING.

ANGELS REPROVE FOR WORSHIP GIVEN TO THEMSELVES, BUT THEY SPEAK TO THE JOY OF THOSE WHO ARE THE WORSHIPPERS OF JESUS.

SECTION 100.—(G. 18.)—[Lesson 100, continued.]—CONCLUSION OF THE GOSPELS ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN AND ST. MARK; THE FORMER RELATING TO SUCH PARTICULARS OF THE HISTORY OF THE MINISTRY OF JESUS CHRIST, AS ARE NOT CONTAINED IN THE GOSPELS.—John xx. 30, 1; xxi. 25. Mark xvi. 20.

INTRODUCTION AND ANALYSIS.

John xx. 30; xxi. 25. Very many of the signs wrought by Jesus have not been recorded by the evangelist.

—— 31. The purpose of John is to convince those who read and hear his record, 'that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing' they 'might have life through his name.'

Mk. xvi. 20. The disciples go forth on their mission, 'the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.'

JOHN XX. 30, 1.
(Ver. 29, § 95, p. 501.)

30 And many other signs truly did Jesus in-the-presence of his disciples, which are 31 not written in this book: but these are-written, that ye-might-believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye-might-have life through ἐν his name.

JOHN XXI. 25.
(Ver. 24, § 97, p. 510.)

And there-are also many-other-things 25 which Jesus did, the-which, if they-should-be-written every-one, I-suppose that-even the world itself could-not-contain χωρησαι the books that-should-be-written. Amen.

(G. 19.)—CONCLUSION OF THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MARK; WHICH SUMS UP IN BRIEF THE PROGRESS OF THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL, FROM ITS COMMENCEMENT TO THE TIME OF THE WRITER, WHEN IT HAD BEEN LONG ESTABLISHED, EVEN AT ROME.—Mark xvi. 20.

(Ver. 19, § 98, p. 517.)

20 And they went-forth, and-preached every-where, the Lord working-with them, and confirming βεβαιουντος the word with signs following. Amen.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS.

John xx. 31. these are written, &c.—The gospel according to John is a summary of the evidence for the Messiahship and Divinity of Jesus, of which a still briefer sketch is given in ch. v. § 23, p. 175—see ADDENDA, p. 519, infra.

believing ye might have life, &c.—see John. iii. 15, .6. § 12, p. 85; v. 24, § 23, p. 177—see on Mk. xvi. 16, § 98, p. 515.

through his name—Ac. iv. 12, 'Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.'

xxi. 25. many other things, &c.—Ps. xl. 5, 'Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.'—Jno. i. 3, 'All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.'

Mk. xvi. 20. went forth—see the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles throughout, describing the course of the apostolic preaching from Jerusalem in the direction of the British Isles, whence the glad tidings of salvation are now being sent forth unto all the ends of the earth.

NOTES.

John xx. 30. And many other signs . . . in this book. Meaning, this book must not be supposed to be a complete account.

31. That ye might believe. 'The mere miracle faith, so often reproved by the Lord, is not that intended here. This is faith in himself, as "THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD:" and the evangelist means, that enough is related in the book to be a ground for such a faith, by shewing us his glory manifested forth.—See ch. ii. 11, [§ 11, p. 78].'—Alford.

[xxi. 25. There are also many other things, &c. 'The purpose of this verse seems to be to assert and vindicate the fragmentary character of the gospel; for that the doings of the Lord were so many, his life so rich in matter of record, that in a popular hyperbole we can hardly imagine the world containing them all if written down; thus setting forth the superfluity and cumbrousness of anything like a perfect detail in the strongest terms, and in terms which certainly look as if fault had been found with this gospel for want of completeness by some objectors.'—Alford.]

24, .5. The words οἰδα ὁτι ἀληθης ἐστιν—βιβλια are an oriental and hyperbolical mode of expression (to represent that the miracles, the remarkable actions and discourses of Jesus, were exceedingly numerous); of which many examples are adduced by the commentators from the scriptural and the classical writers.

Mk. xvi. 20. They went forth. 'Not immediately, but after they had received the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost.—Comp. Lu. xxiv. 49; Ac. i. 4, 8.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

The Lord working with them. 'It is clear that by "the Lord" we are here to understand the same Lord Jesus who is mentioned in the verse immediately preceding. His Divine power working with the apostles after his ascension into heaven, and in fulfilling his promise of the miraculous signs by which their preaching should be confirmed, ver. 17, .8, is here plainly asserted.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

PRACTICAL REFLECTIONS.

John xx. 30, .1. Let us attentively consider the general scope and particular bearing of each book of holy scripture: that intended by the gospel according to John was that we should be given herein such a summary of the evidence 'THAT JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD,' as that we through faith in him should be led into the possession of eternal life.

xxi. 25. He who knows most about Jesus knows but little of what he hath done. This book begins with stating that all things were made by him, and ends with intimating that the world itself would be insufficient to contain an account of all his works.

Mk. xvi. 20. Let us go forth and make known in every place the unsearchable riches of Christ, beseeching God to give evidence to the word of his grace. His power is not exhausted; but he waiteth for our prayerful obedience, that he may bless us therein.

'Mark xvi. 20, does not admit of being harmonised with any part of the intervening period: for it contains in brief an account of the propagation of Christianity from the day of Pentecost, when it properly began, down to the time of the writer, when it had long been established even in Rome. Its proper conjunction, then, is with the first sentence at the outset of the gospel.'—Greswell.—Vide Vol. I. p. 121; Vol. III. p. 320.

IF ANY MAN SPEAK, LET HIM SPEAK AS THE ORACLES OF GOD: IF ANY MAN MINISTER, LET HIM DO IT AS OF THE ABILITY WHICH GOD GIVETH: THAT GOD IN ALL THINGS MAY BE GLORIFIED THROUGH JESUS CHRIST, TO WHOM BE PRAISE AND DOMINION FOR EVER AND EVER. AMEN.—1 Pet. iv. 11.

ADDENDA.

'THESE ARE WRITTEN,' &c.—P. 518.

Jno. xx. 31. These are written, that ye, &c. The gospel according to John contains, or rather consists of a statement of the evidence for the Messiahship of Jesus—for his being the only begotten Son of God, of which a summary is given in ch. v.—See INTRODUCTION to § 23, p. 174.

In ch. i. are clearly stated the Divinity and humanity of the Word, the Son of God, the Sent of the Father, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, the promised Messiah, the King of Israel, whose kingdom comprehends the angels of heaven as well as the dwellers upon earth.

In ch. ii. is described his beginning of miracles, at Cana of Galilee; his manifesting forth his glory is spoken of; and the completion of his wonderful personal working upon earth is alluded to; his resurrection from the dead. In the discourse with the Jewish ruler, ch. iii. 1—21, § 12. p. 83, Jesus appears as the Counsellor, who leadeth out of condemnation, into the privileges of the children of God; they are born again of his Word and Spirit, and made to rejoice in coming to the light.

In ch. iii. 22—36, § 13, p. 89, by the greatest of those who had before him been born of women, Jesus is declared to be greatest of all—the Head of the church—from above, and above all—having the Spirit without measure—the possessor of all things—in whom, and through whom alone is eternal life—He is indeed the Mighty One of God.

In ch. iv. § 13, p. 92, the discourse with the woman at Jacob's well, Jesus is shewn to be the free bestower of everlasting life—and by the Samaritans he is acknowledged to be the Saviour of the world. Here also is recorded the exercise of his Divine compassion and power, in answer to the prayer of the sorrowing father, whose son was sick at Capernaum, ver. 46—54, § 14, p. 100.

In ch. v. § 23, p. 174, after healing on the sabbath the impotent man at Bethesda, Jesus himself fully delivers his credentials, as the 'Son of God,' the 'Sent of the Father,' the 'Prince of Life,' the 'Lord of the Sabbath,' who alone hath power to raise up into the enjoyment of everlasting life in his own glorious kingdom. Having declared himself to be the Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, Jesus then, in verses 22—47, pp. 177—.80, proceeds to point out the various kinds of evidence to his Messiahship, which are afterwards in an inverse order dwelt upon by John in the succeeding portions of his gospel.

Our Saviour had in the end of ch. v. alluded to the witness of Moses—This is more particularly the subject of ch. vi. ver. 14, § 41, p. 317; ver. 25—71, § 43, p. 325. Jesus is that Prophet of whom Moses wrote—He is that bread which came down from heaven of which the manna was a type—the paschal Lamb, whose flesh is meat indeed—who hath the words of eternal life.

In ch. vii. §§ 54, .5, pp. 87, 91, the witness not only of the Law, but of the Scriptures generally, is referred to: true knowledge of previous revelation, and obedience thereto, leads into the faith of Christ—into an appreciation of his doctrine, as being from God. To the believer in Christ belongs the scripture promise of being the dispenser of the living word to others—whilst his opposers are left to the blindness of quoting against him those very scriptures that are most plainly fulfilled in his case.

In ch. viii. § 55, p. 98, Jesus directs attention to the witness he had received from the Father, ver. 18, p. 101, at his baptism (Mt. iii. 17, § 8, p. 59), and more recently on the holy mount (Mt. xvii. 5, § 51, p. 55). He is God's beloved Son, who doeth alway those things which please the Father, Jno. viii. 29, p. 103; and of whom the Father hath said, 'Hear ye him.' Having dwelt upon that witness of the Father, he saith, Jno. viii. 54, p. 107, 'If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: it is my Father that honoureth me; of whom ye say, that he is your God:'

In ch. ix., x. 1—38, §§ 55, .6, pp. 109—.23, Jesus produces the works of the Father. Having opened the eyes of the blind, he discourses of his pastoral care over his people; and when required to tell plainly whether he be the Christ, he says, x. 25, p. 121, 'I told you, and ye believed not: the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.'

In ch. x. 39—42, xi. §§ 56—.8, pp. 123—133, the witness of John respecting Jesus is confessed to be true, x. 41, p. 125; of which further evidence is given in his raising Lazarus from the dead, xi. 1—46, § 58, p. 127; and by his being the appointed propitiation for the sins of the people—the Lamb of God—pointed out by the Spirit of God, speaking through the high priest.

FINALLY, the evangelist dwells upon the witness to which Jesus had alluded when he said, Jno. v. 32, 'There is another that beareth witness of me: and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.' This witness of the Spirit seems to have been typified by that anointing, independent of apostolic authority, which was poured upon Jesus by the woman at Bethany. By the anointing at his baptism the Father had glorified his Son, and he was to be still further glorified by the bestowal of the Spirit upon his disciples after his ascension, xii. 28. Upon this promise of the Father respecting the Spirit of truth, who was to bear witness of him, he dwells much in his consolatory address to his disciples, ch. xiii.—xvi. § 87, pp. 365—.97; and in his intercessory prayer, ch. xvii. pp. 398—405.

Jesus not only in all the circumstances of his life, but also by those of his death and resurrection, was himself a witness to the truth, ch. xviii.—xxi., §§ 88—100, p. 412, et seq. Jesus bears witness of himself, but he does not alone bear witness to the truth that he is the Son of God, the promised Messiah, the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. He is witnessed to by another, the Holy Spirit of Promise; by his forerunner John; by the works which the Father had given him to do; by the voice of the Father; by the Scriptures of truth; and also by Moses, to whom, in opposition to Christ, the Jews pretended to adhere.

MAY WE APPRECIATE THE KINDNESS OF OUR GOD IN GRANTING THIS ABUNDANT EVIDENCE TO THE TRUTH THAT JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD! AND MAY WE BE LED MORE AND MORE TO SEE THE IMPORTANCE OF THAT TRUTH WHICH HE HAS SEEN MEET SO TO COMMEND UNTO OUR MOST SERIOUS REGARD!

FINIS.

SING, O YE HEAVENS; FOR THE LORD HATH DONE IT: SHOUT, YE LOWER PARTS OF THE EARTH: BREAK FORTH INTO SINGING, YE MOUNTAINS, O FOREST, AND EVERY TREE THEREIN: FOR THE LORD HATH REDEEMED JACOB, AND GLORIFIED HIMSELF IN ISRAEL.—Isa. xliv. 23.

'THE almost gift price (see ADVERTISEMENT) at which Mr. MIMPRISS generously offers to supply Sabbath School Teachers with 'The Gospel Treasury,' or 'Treasury Harmony of the Four Evangelists,' of which we gave a short notice in our No. for Dec. 27, induces us again to refer to this valuable publication, which, in the words of a contemporary. 'must be seen to be appreciated.' 'It is a work of immense labour, of which the eye and mind must judge, but which the reviewer finds it difficult to describe.'

That our readers may judge of the great advantage this book offers to all concerned in teaching the Gospel History of our blessed Lord, we now proceed to shew its structure where two, three, or four Gospel narratives give the same event; that so one beautifully harmonized history results through the supplemental relation of each to the others.

By a very ingenious contrivance Mr. MIMPRISS has greatly facilitated the reading of this Harmony - which here is a feature per se—not to be found in any other. By an alphabetical principle, the several parts can be read consecutively as though the whole were written by one Evangelist.

We have chosen LESSON 40, of the series of 100, for its exhibition of Four Evangelical histories of the same event in juxta-position: which Lesson consists of seven pages in Mr. M.'s volume. On the first is a minute Introduction, or Analysis of the whole Lesson; and the seventh is a copious argument for the place of the miraculous feeding of the 5,000. Matt. xiv. 13-21; Mk. vi. 30-4; Lu. ix. 10-7; Jn. vi. 1-13. The History commences at Luke ix. 10[a], which, it will be seen, is taken up by Mark, ver. 30,[b] and goes on to 'so much as to eat.'[c] See pp. 17, 8, and pp. 13, 4.

Now supposing a class to be engaged in reading this History, in THE BIBLE SCHOLARS' CLASS BOOK, which is the same Harmony, size demy 18mo, and a marvel of cheapness, price 1s., the several portions would be picked out with much interest—the letters of the alphabet, at the commencement and the end of each portion, being the guide. At Luke ix. 10, the [a] shews the portion first to be read: [a] 'And the apostles when they were returned,' [b]—at returned, the letter [b] intimates the second portion to be taken up by the second scholar is, as seen in Mark, ver. 30, [b] 'gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things both what they had done, & what they had taught.' ver. 31. 'And he said,' &c., which is continued to the word 'eat.'[c]—where [c] finishes that portion in Mark, and serves to intimate that the supplement is to be found in John, vi. ver. 1, [c] 'After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.'[d] — Here, in like manner, the [d] prepares for the change in the historian, and Luke is seen to supplement John's narrative with, [d] 'into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida;'[e]—and Mark amplifies [e] 'by ship privately. 33 v. And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.' [f]—John tells us why, ver. 2, [f] 'because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.'[g]

Thus we see that no single Gospel gives us the complete history of this miracle.—Matthew and Mark together do not complete it;—nor do the first three combined; but the entirety is made up of, and results only in, the combination of the four Evangelical Histories. —Nor is this all that is to be observed in this short portion of this wonderful narrative.

It is Luke who intimates the return of the apostles from their mission, on which they had been despatched by two and two, Lesson 38,—which return—the murder of John the Baptist, [Lesson 39, Matt. xiv. 1-12; Mark vi. 14-29; Luke ix. 7-9] may have hurried. Luke simply says, they 'told him all that they had done'— which is expanded in a very important particular by Mark, who adds 'and what they had taught.' Which words remind us—as in the Scripture Illustrations, on the same page;—'This may be taken to shadow out a more important reckoning'—Rom. xiv. 10-2. 'for we shall all stand &c.;' and suggests the Practical Reflection there given also: Mark vi. 30.

It is Mark alone, who furnishes the particulars of the interruption experienced by Jesus, see ver. 31, 'And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.' Which we may use as a beautiful example left us by the Lord: 'For relaxation from labour is equally the command of Christ as active devotedness.'—See Practical Reflections at the foot of the page. Again—

In the history of Jesus' departure, which all the four Evangelists record, a very important lesson is taught us, of the need of a comprehensive knowledge of the Harmony, as well as of the Chronology and Geography of the separate events of the Gospel History. When the apostles returned, Jesus was probably found at Capernaum. See Matthew (xiv. 13), 'When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart,' &c. From these words it is impossible to know what 'desert place' is meant —but it is clear therefrom that Jesus went by 'sea,' and that the multitude followed him 'on foot,' which might be along the western shore, as Jesus coasted the lake in a 'ship.' Mark (vi. 32) gives us no help in the matter: he simply repeats Matthew's words; 'And they departed into a desert place,' adding, 'by ship privately.' Luke seems to carry us to the spot, ch. ix. 10, 'And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida.' Now—

On looking at Mr. Mimpriss's Chart of The Lord's Life and Ministry, which accompanies this volume, and in which every event in the Gospel History is localized and numbered;—it will be seen that Capernaum is at the N.W. extremity of 'the Sea of Galilee,' and that 'Bethsaida' is somewhat 'aside' of,—a few miles to the S. of Capernaum, on the same shore of the lake; giving it very much the appearance of the place of the miracle, to which Matthew and Mark relate the people followed Jesus 'on foot:'—but if we admit this, we are involved in a contradiction in John's Gospel: for he says as positively as either, ch. vi. 1, that 'Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias;' How then are these apparently conflicting statements of two equally venerated and sufficient authorities to be reconciled? Again if, as according to Luke, Jesus 'went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida,'—which was South of Capernaum, he may have gone there without going on ship-board at all. Luke refers neither to ship nor sea: but this contradicts the equally inspired narrative of John, who says as plainly, that 'Jesus went over the sea of Galilee,' we must therefore further search the Scriptures to unravel the mystery. Now to follow John, independently of Luke's narrative, and without doing any violence to John's history, we might go with Jesus 'over the sea of Galilee,' by sailing the whole of its length, and landing on the eastern shore at the southern extremity; but this creates a dilemma, for there was no 'city of Bethsaida' there. Then how are we to remove the doubt as to the truthfulness of both accounts? There is no contradiction to be reconciled here, any more than in many other portions which appear such in the Gospel narratives; for by an intelligent study of the Evangelical records every apparent difference proves a consistent and beautiful Harmony. —Therefore by reading the narratives in their Chronological and Geographical sequence, the whole in this, as everywhere else, exhibits, as may be expected in all history Divinely inspired, 'what is truth.' In Mark vi. 31; Jesus having invited his disciples into privacy from Capernaum; John ch. vi. ver. 1, says, [c] 'After these things, Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias,' [d] and as supplemented in Luke's Gospel, ch. ix. 10, [d] into a desert plain belonging to the city called Bethsaida,' [e] and which Mark, ch. vi. ver. 33, says was done [e] 'by ship privately.' [f]—There must then have been two places of the same name, 'Bethsaida;' which we know to have been the case: the one on the western shore of the lake, a few miles S. of Capernaum, being a small fishing town, of which one or more of the Lord's apostles were natives; and the more important city of Bethsaida, which was much enlarged and beautified by Philip the tetrarch of Iturea, in honour of Augustus, and named after his daughter Julias; and this city was two or three miles N.E. of the sea of Galilee: to arrive at which, according to John, 'Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias;' and according to Luke, 'into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida,' and Mark, 'by ship privately.'

Thus the intelligent teacher may instrumentally preserve his class from the poison of the infidel who seeks not enlightenment in the truth, but the establishment of his own disbelief in the Inspired Writings, and to undermine the faith of the weak and unlearned.

The beauties of the book are inexhaustible, but our space forbids enlargement. We therefore conclude with a hearty and conscientious recommendation to every teacher of the young to possess it; being assured that, in the words of an eminent living Divinity Tutor, he will find 'every page is full of pearls.'

Mimpriss's Graduated Lessons,

SPECIMEN PAGES of the books used by the classes and teachers in the

THE LESSON chosen is the fortieth in the series of one hundred, Harmonized our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

THE SYSTEM divides the school, however large or however small, into five into as many classes as may be needed for convenient instruction.

THE SAME SUBJECT is taught at the same time in all the classes, from the

THE DIFFERENCE OF TYPE and the increased quantity for the fourth gra for the classes using the three lower grades; a still further extension is made

☞ Teachers are requested to study the In

THE GOSPE

EXPOSITORY HARMONY

COMPILED B

Having the Text in parallel columns, Scripture Illustrations, Expository N order every event in Our Lord's Life and Ministry, and a very copious Ind hundred and fifty octavo pages.

Depot, TRUBSHAW'S PRINTI

S. E. W., in the Sunday-School Times, says:

"* * Will you allow me to call attention to a book which has been of the greates vice to me? It was brought to my notice a year ago, and since then I have had it fi stant use, testing its value, and regret that I had not known of it years ago.

"The book has many excellencies. First is that which its name imports—'The sury Harmony.' The narratives from the Evangelists are placed side by side in pa columns. But as neither of the Evangelists relates all the particulars of any one e the author has by an ingenious alphabetical arrangement, brought these scattered d together, and dovetailed them, if I may be allowed the expression, so that the re reader thus gets at once the whole story.

"I would like to transfer some of the pages to your paper, * * to show how beaut the particulars mentioned by one, but omitted by the others, come in to make up the plete picture of our Saviour's life. It is a great advantage to have this before the important light is thus often thrown upon a point, and one Evangelist brings out point that clearly explains what was obscure in another.

"The remainder of the page is filled with 'Scriptural Illustrations,' bringing Scri to explain itself—the best commentator possible; 'Notes,' in a condensed form, g the results of the study and research of the best Biblical students, particularly thos in the reach of ordinary students—a very marked merit of the book; and 'Practica flections,' terse, practical, and evangelical.

"In addition, there are complete geographical and historical notes, analytical an torical tables, and charts, making this little book more deserving of the title of Co hensive Commentary than any book with which I am acquainted.

"Having been benefitted myself, I cordially commend it."